Cupid Busy

Wedding bells have been ringing frequently the past week. On Aug 23rd at Sunnydale Farm Miss Edith Smith was united in marriage to John D. Medcof M. A. of Toronto.

The Methodist Parsonage was the scene of joyful festivi ies when on Aug 29th Orland W. Bogart of Morewood, and Miss Lettie Kenney of Cambridge were married. And where also on Aug 30th John Langwell Belway of Avonmore took one of our most popular young ladies, Miss Hazel Grace Smith, daughter of Ward and Mrs. Smith of the Boyne, to preside over his home. We extend our best wishes to these happy couples but regret that none of them have chosen our vigorous town as a place of residence.

Small Crowd at Races

The threatening weather of last Thursday played havoc with the attendance at Chesterville's Horse Show and Races. Farmers not being through with their crops dared not in face of the threatened rain leave their work, which although it cleared away kept those who would motor from a distance from starting out, resulting in the smallest crowd seen on the local grounds for a race programme in a long time.

The races interested a fair proportion of the number present; others seemed to be interested in the baseball match between Morewood and Chesterville, although it was hardly of big league calibre. The home team after letting the visitors get away with eight runs in the first innings overhauled them and went into the lead, which was again lost with the score 13 to 12 in favor of Morewood, at which juncture the latter team refused to continue the game for some reason not clear to the spectators and left the game unfinished.

Schools Re-open Sept. 5th.

Tuesday morning next the schools of the village Public, High and Separate, will open for the Fall term, with every likelihood of a large enrolment.

In the Public school another room will be opened for the first time, with Miss Marion Casselman the new member of the staff. At the High school an entire new staff will take charge with Mr. F. J. Barlow, B. A. the principal. Mr. Barlow is not entirely unknown to many throughout this district having been principal of the schools at Winchester and Avonmore, and from each place comes very high opinions of his work. The change from Avonmore to Chesterville was influenced through the lack of a suitable residence at the former place. In Chesterville the residence of Mr. F. K. Smith will be occupied by Mr. Barlow and family. The matter of filling out his staff was left with the principal with the result that two highly qualified and recommended assistants have besn secured in Miss Helen F. Mullett, B. A., of Carleton Place, and Miss Lillian Handford, B. A., of Renfrew.

In the matter of equipment in all branches Chesterville is second to none in the county and everything looks bright for a successful year with indications that the attendance will be considerably above that of the past few years.

Let Chesterville's Flower be the Gladiolus

To the Horticultural Society The Record hands out the suggestion that an effort be made to concentrate the efforts of those who love flowers on the cultivation of gladioli. Make Chesterville known through the excellence of this most beautiful flower, as grown by its citizens. We can hardly hope to gain such prominence as the city of St. Thomas has risen to through the gladiolus but we can make our village a very bright spot florally with very little effort if our citizens will work together to that end through this one flower. It has many advantages in its great variety of colors and the ease with which it is grown. There are many handsome specimens in private gardens in town now, bulbs from which might be donated to the Horticultural society for rfee distribution next spring to those who would take care of them. They do particularly well in our soil and the adoption of the gladiolus as Chesterville's flower cannot but bring pleasure to all concerned.

When Clothes Aren't Clothes

Last Friday evening when Mr. E. P. Foster, License Inspector, was about to board the Moccasin train for his home in Morrisburg, he saw at Cornwall a passenger leave the train with a couple of grips which looked somewhat heavier than two grips should, he thought. The carrier went to a taxi and deposited the grips on the running board and was all ready to set sail for down town when Mr. Foster came along and asked what the grips contained. The owner said he had clothes in them. Mr. Foster asked to see them and the man left his seat alongside the driver, presumably to go around the auto to open the grips. But he did not do so, for as soon as he got in the shade of the rear of the car he took French leave and left his grips behind. When Mr. Foster opened the grips he found the alleged wearing apparel consisted of a dozen bottles of very good whiskey, which, of course, he confiscated and will forward to the Commission in Toronto.—Cornwall Standard.

Always Borrowing

I need a scythe to trim my beard, but can't afford to buy it, so my alfalfa seems quite weird to those who chance to spy it. I will not to the neighbors go to borrow this or t'other; I'd rather let my whiskers grow until in them I smother. The borrower is lacking friends, whatever town may lodge him, and wearily his way he wends, while moral people dodge him. I used to borrow Maltese eats and howitzers and sabbers, revolving churns and Sunday hats, from my afflicted neighbors. And thought I had a heart of gold, and manners frank and pleasing, the atmosphere soon grew so cold I felt that I was freezing. Men couldn't see my sterling worth; they said, "The gent is silly who borrows everything on earth nor fears a welcome chilly." Man can't be happy when he's shunned, by all his friends forsaken; so I organized a fund to buy my beans and bacon. I ceased to ask my wearied friends to lend me shirts and mittens; I bought my wigs and Grecian bends, my grindstones and my kittens. One rule of life I have today. I'll have the same tomorrow. I'd rather do without my hay than go around and borrow.

Be a Booster

If you think your Town the best,
Tell 'em so;
If you'd have it lead the rest,
Help it grow;
When there's anything to do,
Let the others count on you;
You'll feel bully when it's through,
Don't you know.

If you're used to giving knocks,
Change your style,
Throw bouquets instead of rocks
For a while.
Let the other fellow roast;
Shun him as you would a ghost,
Meet his manner with a boast
And a smile.

When a man from afar
Comes along,
Tell him where and what you are
Make it strong;
Never flatter, never bluff,
Tell the truth, tor that's enough;
Be a booster—that's the stuff
Just belong.

Canadian Prosperity

In the steady advance of Canadian exchange to parity, which it reached last week, is reflected the growth of the Dominion towards settled conditions. As we look about upon the countries of the world, we shall be compelled to admit that Canada has returned more nearly to a state of steady work and steady business operations than any other. She has no strikes of importance to mar the picture. Her people, farmers, men in industrial occupations, miners, all were working as men were accustomed to work before the war. Her losses in manhood have not yet been entirely repaired, but progress towards recovery in this respect has been made, while recovery iu bussness has gone on steadily, if slowly, and she is exporting and importing on a nearly even basis which is the cause of the exchange to parity with our currency. Good crops will reward the efforts of her farmers this year, while the rapid resumption of work in her gold mining districts and the discovery of new gold bearing areas will bring her wealth of which she never dreamed. She is one of our best customers and we are her best. Her growth to prosperity, therefore, should bring much pleasure to us.—Rochester Post-Express.

Plank Causes Motor Wreck

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Hurley and three children, Lillian, Edna, and Wiliard; Mrs. M. Myron, and two daughters, Evelyn and Margaret, all of Cornwall received injuries in the nature of cuts and bruises when a sedan in which they were travelling turned turtle a short distance west of Prescott Monday afternoon.

Shortly after leavlng Prescott, enroute to Brockville, the car ran over two planks which were lying across the road, and it is thought one o, the planks, catching in the rear wheels of the car, caused it to capsize, with eight persons imprisoned in it.

All were more or less cut and bruised, but Lillian Hurley seemed to be the worst injured, suffering lacerations to her hands, which may cause the loss of one or more fingers.

Ford To Close All His Plants

One hundred and five thousand employes of the Ford Motor Company throughout the country will be without jobs after Sept 16.

In addition, several hundred thousand other workers employed in industries furnishing materials for the Ford Plants will be affected.

Henry Ford gave these figures on Saturday in announcing that his three big motor plants located in Detroit suburbs and his assembling plants throughout the country would be closed on that date because of the coal shortage.

Long Skirts to End Reign of King Jazz

Dame Fashion has scored another goal as it were, for with the return of the long gracefully draped gowns the flapper and jazz which have held such sway in the past year will likely disappear.

This was decreed at the recent twenty-ninth annual convention in New York of the International Association of Masters of Dancing. The modified tango and the old-time waltz have come into favor. The familiar positions which have been seen on the various dancing floors have been abolished, and the more dignified dancing poses have found first place The thumb on the gentlemen's shoulder is to be the correct thing. No more cuddling in each other's arms. Dignity and grace are the order of the day.

The Wood Supply

No one knows what the outcome will be. Even if the mines open again soon it may be difficult or impossible for the mines and the railroads to fill the demand for a long time. How this will affect outlying farm territory we cannot say.

On almost every farm is sufficient wood to supply urgent needs, if this wood is picked up before snow falls. It would seem wise to make sure of sufficient wood fuel rather than to take chances in getting coal. Any green wood should be cut so it can dry out. It does not pay to burn green wood. Most of the sap has to be driven out before it will burn. Let the sun do that.

Perhaps the woodlot needs thinning anyway. Cut out the trees that will allow best growth to trees remaining. Do a little logging of your own and be free from worry over the outcome of the coal strike.

Coal strikes, like the poor, are forever with us. We ought to learn some time to develop our hydro electric energy and reduce the need for a coal to such an extent a nation need not suffer every time the operators and miners have a quarrel over wages. Some day we will discover a better way to secure energy than the small percentage we secure from burning coal. In the meantime develop your own fuel supply in the woodlot.

Good Interest and Absolute Security

A liberal rate of interest with absolute security is the attractive offer made by the Minister of Finance to holders of the Canadian Government war loan bonds maturing December 1, 1922. The offer is not made to investors generally, but only to the holders of the bonds soon to mature. The bonds to be retired, bearing interest at five and one half per cent, will be exchanged for new bonds bearing the same rate of interest. See the advertisement of the Minister of Finance.

Prominent Farmer Killed When Thrown From Buggy

While driving to his house at Paragon north of Glen Walter, about eight o'clock Monday. after visiting his grandmother. Mr. Wallace Dyer, of Jotown, Alex. Fraser, of Paragon, and his nephew, Earl Kinnear, were thrown out of the buggy when the horse bolted as they were decending a hill and Mr. Fraser's neck was broken and he was dead when his nephew went to help him up. Kinnear was only shaken up. Dr. C. J. Hamilton, Coroner of Cornwall, was notified but after learning the circumstances decided that an inquest was unnecessary. Mr. Fraser was a well known farmer. He is survived by his wife and two sons, John and Simon, both young.

Woman Pays $2,400 For Box of Tacks

Mrs. Jacob Richman, of Dovercourt Road, Toronto, was swindled out of $2,400 on Saturday by strangers who called at her home and represented themselves as mining men. They showed her a box of ore which they told her was almost pure gold and the mines, they declared would make the promoters fabulously wealthy. Mrs Richman was interested and drew a cheque for $2,400 all she had in the bank to purchase an interest in the mine. She did this on the under-standing that the box of ore, said to be worth $5,000 would be left in her possession. After the strangers had departed she opened the box and found it contained 25 cents worth of brass tacks Mrs. Richman hurriedly notified the bank but the cheque had already been cashed. No arrests have been made.

Asks Slice of Canada in Lieu British Debt

Still another United States legislator is after a slice of the Dominion of Canada.

Cession to the United States of that portion of Canada embracing the whole of the Great Lakes and connecting waters in payment of Great Britain's war debt was proposed by Representative MacGregor of New York, in the House Friday.

Representative MacGregor is not at all selfish in making this proposal. On the contrary, he is altruistic. The shift of territory, he holds, is not designed to benefit Uncle Sam, but is for the purpose of assisting the slice of Canada that he purposes to remove to the southern side of the border.

He told the House that "it would be a great blessing to that portion of Canada to be a part of our great Country."

Furthermore he seeks not only to benefit Canada, but also would benefit the world—all humanity, in fact.

Two-Faced

Flora sat gazing fixedly at a lady who was calling on her mother.

"What is it?" asked the lady plesantly, "Do you like my new hat?"

"No," replied Flora, "I'm waiting to see your other face. Mamma said you were two-faced, but I've only seen one."

Two Men Drowned in River Collision

Colliding with the steamer Rapids King, a skiff was capsized and two of its occupants drowned in the St Lawrence river near Cornwall opposite Stanley Island Monday evening at 9 o'clock, Ralph Bourdeau and John Bowen, both employes of Shields Bros., Bombay, N. Y., were drowned, and Fred Barlow, garage owner, of Bombay, was only rescued after much difficulty. Every warning was given by the steamer, but the skiff ran squarely into its side about 50 feet from the bow. Search for the bodies is still proceeding.

The party consisting of the three men were said to be expert swimmers, and John Bowen was an old river guide and well acquainted with the district. Immediately after the capsizing of the skiff the Rapids King was stopped, and both passengers and crew assisted in the rescue work. Major F. J. Cameron, one of the passengers, rescued Fred Barlow and conveyed him to Stanley island. Blankets, cushions and luuch baskets were found floating on the water by the searchers but no signs of the drowned men.

Quicker Than Lightning

Speed "records" are broken every now and then, but, if the correspondent of a Lynn daily newspaper sent in a veracious account, the best "record" of the sort was made in Saugus, Massach usetts. Here's the item as he sent it in:

During the thunderstorm of Friday afternoon. lightning struck in several parts of the town, but the narrowest escape from death was that of William Milton, driver of an express wagon. He saw a flash of lightning coming toward his wagon, but he backed his team into the gutter and thus escaped being killed or badly injured.

Welsh Fuel at Lower Rate Than Hard Coal

Ottawa Journal—That the coal dealers ot Ontario are misleading the public as to the fuel situation, is the contention of Capt. F, C. Wright and Capt. W. D. Powell, of Ottawa, who are prepared to sell to local dealers or to the municipality all or any part of 50,000 tons of "Welsh dry anthracitic coal," with delivery a few weeks after the placing of the order with them. They suggest that American influences are discouraging the purchase of coal other than from the regular United States sources.

These men have the agency for 50,000 tons of this coal from a well known and reputable firm of coal miners in Wales. They have offered the coal to Ottawa coal merchants and to the city at a price of $12 a ton f. o. b. Montreal, which with a commission of $1 a ton for local dealers, would permit of its being retailed at $15 a ton in Ottawa. Ottawa merchants have declined however, to buy from them, and the city has not yet seen the necessity of going into the coal business.

The Movie and The Rockies

WHILE acting as special investigator for the Canadian Government, James Oliver Curwood became enamoured of Nature's wonderland in the Canadian Rocky mountains and made it the scene of many of his stories. "The Valley of Silent Men," that little Eden of the North, over which three snow-clad sentinel mountains keep perpetual ward, was no myth. Mr. Curwood simply claimed it by romancer's right, and blazed the way to it over the trail taken by his heroine, the little Canadienne, Marette, and the gallant Corporal James Kent of the Royal Mounted Police.

But with all his skill as a word-painter, Mr. Curwood could only indicate the natural beauties of this Paradise. Even the "still" camera and the painter's canvas can capture only isolated bits of natural beauty which seem so remote that the spectator can hardly realize their truth. But now the motion pictures have followed Mr. Curwood's trail, and in filming "The Valley of Silent Men" amidst the very scenes which the author described in his thrilling romance, will bring home to millions of screen devotees the natural wonders of the Canadian Pacific Rockies.

Cosmopolitan Productions on acquiring the motion-picture rights to "The Valley of Silent Men", sent a company up into the mountains early last spring. For twelve weeks they camped and took pictures about Banff and Lake Louise, and the camera caught that miracle of nature,—the coming of spring in the snowy wilderness. Frank Borzage, celebrated as the director of "Humoresque" and other successful Cosmopolitan productions, captained the company,—which was headed by Miss Alma Rubens, as the heroine, Marette, and Lew Cody, as the gallant corporal of the Royal Mounted. Edward Fezu, the veteran guide, piloted the daring picture people through dangerous passes, while Indians of the Stoney tribe under Chief John Powderface, were enlisted by the company; both as guides and characters in the picture.

One especially thrilling and dangerous scene was filmed when Miss Rubens slipped into a crevasse in a glacier,—(according to directions of the scenario)—but the hero's frantic search for her gave occasion for filming the icy depths of that vast frozen river. Dog sledges bore the lovers into a veritable "Valley of Silent Men", where their romance ended happily beneath the benediction of the three white sentinels of this snowy Eden of the Northland.

No trail was too long or dangerous for Director Borzage and his courageous company, and the results as seen upon the silver screen achieve not only a perfect picturization of Mr. Curwood's romance, but an excellent moving-picture of the Canadian Rockies.

It took a long time to find just the right place in which to film this thrilling story. In the first place the scenery had to conform to the author's description, and after that it had to be far and away out of the run of ordinary mountain scenery. It had to be on a scale of grandeur and interest that would help make the film remarkable. Then too, it had to be accessible. The Canadian Pacific Rockies in the vicinity of Banff and Lake Louise filled all these requirements, and further provided the very best possible accommodation for the members of the company at the Banff Springs Hotel, and the Lake Louise Chateau, both in very easy distance of the wonderful scenes photographed in the making of this film.

The upper picture is Alma Rubens, who plays the part of "Marette" in "The Valley of Silent Men," and a dog team in the Canadian Rockies at Banff, Alberta, last spring. The lower picture is a glimpse of the encampment of Stoney Indians near Banff, Alberta.

The Cost of Goods Is Reduced by Advertising

J. G. Hubbard, of the St. Thomas Metal Signs, Limited, sends The Times-Journal of that city, the following very pointed article. It was called forth by an editorial in that paper recently on the statement of Sir Charles Highan, M. P. of England, that advertising really reduces manufacturing costs;

There is still a feeling on the part of some people that advertising causes a higher cost of merchandise to the consumer. This is not the case. In fact just the opposite is true. Advertising enables manufacturers to produce their commodities in larger volume, thu sre ducing the price to the cousumer, Positive proof that advertising does lower the price to the consumer may be found in a study of the price tendencies of the commodities produced by Canada's largest manufacturers. who are also large advertisers. One hears frequently of the millions of dollars annually spent in advertising by the great manufacturers of the country. The usual conception is that the vast expenditure is paid for indirectly by the consumer. But one does not see the contractions at the other end of the manufacturing business made possible by this great advertising outlay. The following illustration will I believe make this clear.

Suppose you are a shoemaker, $4 every day will provide for your needs to purchase your food, your clothing, your coal pay your rent, light, heat, and take care of the other many necessities. Just an even $4 will do it exactly, but you will have nothing left. The shoes you make cost you $4 a pair to produce. Suppose you are selling one pair of these shoes a day. You must have $4 a day to live, and this amount you add to the cost of making the shoes, bringing the selling price to $8. You decide to write some letters to a number of people every day telling them they can buy good shoes from you. You send out fifty letters a day at a cost of $1.50. As a result of these letters, which is your method of advertising, you will sell two pair of your shoes a day, or $16 worth with a profit of eight dollars, less your advertising cost (the letters) of $1.50, leaving a net profit of $2.50 after you take out the $4 you require each day. You then increase the number of letters, until you are spending $10 a day for this kind of advertising. You are now able to sell eight pairs of shoes every day, which is all you can make in your shop.

Your operating expense has now risen to $14 daily on the sale of eight pairs of shoes, or $1.75 a pair; which must be added to the material cost of the shoes of $4, thus making each pair of shoes cost you $5.75 to make and sell. You need some profit, however, for surplus, and you decide a $1 25 a pair is fair. So by selling eight pairs a day instead of one pair, as formerly, you are able to reduce the selling price to $7 and after paying all the overhead expense, bank $1.25 on each sale. Time goes on. You spend more for your advertising is not added to the price which the good as ever even though selling for a dollar a pair less. Your customers increase. You employ more help, buy in larger quantities, save money by paying cash, and are making more profit at a decreased cost to the consumer. In just this way many of our larger concerns, our national advertisers, have built up their volume and are satisfied with a profit comparatively small on their enormous production.

Any national advertiser will positively state that spending money for advertising does not increase the price to the consumer, but decreases it. The price which is paid for advertising is not added to the price which the consumer must pay. Advertising increases distribution, creates new markets, decreases manufacturing costs and enables manufacturers to reduce their prices to a level which could not have been reached without advertising.

A manufacture of spark plugs relates in a nationally-circulated magazine that he has reduced his selling cost through advertising 90 per cent. in four years and here is the proof. In 1905 his spark plugs sold for from $1.50 to $2.50 with a continual decrease until the price in 1918 was 75c to $1.25, and this in the face of high raw material cost.

A well known motor company credits advertising for a consistently reduced price. It spends but one per cent.of its sales receipts for advertising, but see how the prices have fallen. In 1905 its car sold for $1,250. In 1915 the price had fallen to $7,050, and in 1917 the price of $875 was established, and in 1920 a low mark of under $408. There are instances of this kind; they all tell the same story—a story of volume built by advertising that decreased the price to consumer. There can be no question as to the benefit the consumer derives from advertising. Only theorists who know nothing of manufacturing—nothing about what the wonderful leverage of volume does toward price reduction, prate about advertising increasiug the cost to the consumer. A firm may know its business in refusing to advertise, but no one else will know about it.

Ths Age Most Dangerons to Youth 16 to 20

A striking illustration of the rise and wane of the propensities of mankind toward evil doing is found in a table in the recently issued annual report of the Ottawa Police Department. This table, which gives the ages of those arrested during the year for various offences, shows that of the 1,316 persons arrested in 1921, 50 were under 16 years of age, 200 between 16 and 50, 461 between 21 and 30, 286 between 31 and 40. Then, between the ages of 41 to 50, the number dropped to 193, while between the ages of 51 and 60 the number lessened to 86.

Between the ages of 61 to 70 the figures fell to 32. Of prisoners over 71 were only 8.

These figures practically tell their own story, and it is a story of human nature on its seamy side. These figures show that in early youth the tendency in the average human being is towards fear and respect of the law. Then comes the period of breaking into manhood, and the restraints of youth are being loosened. Between the ages of 21 and 30 comes the period when man is in his most strenuous phase—his most dangerous phase if the proper influences are not at work. It is between these ages that man's life is largely sealed either for good or bad. It is between these ages that man either starts himself towards a respectable citizenship or the reverse. It is between these ages that the business world looks for its virile forces of accomplishment—its driving force. Between these ages al so, is the period of wild oat sowing—and the worst forms of lawlessness.

Then, between the ages of 31 and 40, man enters into his period of maturity and for the first time he begins to do some serious thinking. The police figures show that between these ages a considerable per cent of men who had started wrong have gone back to the paths of safety—at least. But it is in the next period, 41 to 50, the slump away from law breaking sets in earnest. The figures drop to 193 as against 286 in the previous period.

The moral of all this is that the forces of morality and-well doing should make their big fight with the under 20 element. As the twig is bent, so the tree grows.

Just Like Him

A young man had to go abroad, and before he went he was saying good-bye to his sweetheart. "Darling," he said, "when I am far away will you gaze to that star every night and think of me?" "Dearest, I will," she answered. "That star is so full of your nature that it will always remind me of you." "Why is that?" asked the young man. "Because it is out so very late at night and looks so pale in the morning."

His Thirsty Visitors.

Vancouver Sun.

Another sad result of prohibition is impressed upon me by a hurried visit of several thirsty Seattle friends—hot weather down across the line seems to make one's friends recall one's existence in an otherwise desolute and arid world.

I received peremptory and detailed orders about the entertainment I was to provide and, after faithfully carrying out instructions, met the party at the boat -despite the fact that they had traversed the whole of Puget Sound and the Gulf of Georgia, spending the entire day on water, all carried a parched look and there was an eager enquiry in their appealing eyes as I greeted them at the gangplank.

We hustled out to the room without undue delay, bestowing on Stanley park a brief survey from a motor bus—a visitor from Denver was in the party and she entertained us with the usual comparisons in which it appeared that Pike's Peak is considerably higher than Grouse Mountain.

Then came the refreshments and it was there that I saw the devastating effects of prohibition in the States—those friends of mine, who have been living for years in a so-called "bone-dry" atmosphere, had it all over me in the matter of consumption and storage capacity.

There were just a dozen pints of beer, nicely tucked away in a pan of ice and my friend Bill got away with eight of them without blinking an eye and was gasping when the last bottle was emptied.

I managed to snatch two glassfuls of the liquid in the rush and was beginning to feel that old familiar urge to go out into the world and lick a policeman—there was I, a resident of a free country where refreshments are to be had for the asking and yet I was a mere amateur beside those prohibitionists.

Bill said the eight pints barely laid the dust in his throat—while I had a dark brown taste in my mouth the next day, on two glassfuls.

His Secret Terror

A gentleman was negotiatlng with a horse dealer. "I am not so particular about speed," he said, "but I must have a gentle horse for my wife to ride. Will you guarantee this horse to be safe?"

"Certainly," said the dealer. "He's a regular lady's horse."

"You are sure he's not afraid of anything?" asked the gentleman anxiously.

Whereupon the dealer assumed an air of reflection. "Well there is one thing that he has always appeared to be afraid of," he admitted conscientiously. "It seems as if he's scared to death for fear some one might say, "Whoa!" and he not hear it."

Dissipated Creature

Passenger—I say, driver, what is the average life of a locomotive?

Driver—Oh, about 30 years, sir.

Passenger—I should think such a tough-looking thing would last longer than that.

Driver—Well, Perhaps it would, sir, if it didn't smoke so much.—

Harvesting Bananas

At the fruit store you will notice that the big bunch of bananas is usually hung with the fruit bending downward. That position, we learn from Mr. Philip K. Reynolds, who writes in the bulletin of Pan-American Union, is not the natural position of the growing fruit. As the single flower bud of the individual banana plant increases in size it bends downward; then the covering bracts drop off and disclose the young bananas, which point outward. As they become larger they point upward toward the sun.

Each banana plant—popularly but incorrectly called a tree—bears only a single bunch of bananas, which is made up of so called "hands," or clusters. The "hands" grow separately in spirals, and each contains from ten to twenty-five bananas, or "fingers." Commercially bananas are classed accordingly to "hands." A bunch that has less than six is not readily marketable; the standard bunch has nine, and all bunches with nine or more clusters are classed as nine hand fruit. A nine hand bunch varies in weight according to the variety of the fruit and to the soil and the climatic conditions under which it is grown; the average weight is from fifty to seventy-five pounds. Occasionally you see a bunch that has as many as twenty-two "hands" and more than three hundred bananas; a bunch as large as that might weigh approximately one hundred and fifty pounds.

When a bunch of bananas is cut the individual plant is destroyed, but the root is still able to send up shoots After the first crop of fruit from two to five of the most promising shoots are left to grow and supply fruit later. Cutting out the extra shoots is called pruning. As the season of harvest is drawing near, young plants are coming to maturity to replace those that will have to be cut down. There are areas where as a result of a single planting the plants have continued to produce bananas for twenty years.

Air Swallowing

Most persons who have ever had anything to do with horses know how much trouble often results from the bad habit of wind sucking, or "cribbing." That the same condition may exist in a person is seldom realized.

Many persons suffer for years from flatulent dyspepsia that persists in spite of all they can do and that baffles the skill of the family doctor if he does not recognize the cause. One article of food after another is suspected of being the cause of the "dyspepsia" and is dropped from the dietary until finally the sufferer is almost on starvation rations and yet has obtained no relief. In cases of the kind it is well to consider whether air swallowing may not be the cause.

Air swallowing may occur only at mealtime, or it may occur at any time. When air is swallowed at meals the trouble will begin very soon, sometimes even before the meal is finished or indeed scarcely begun. The sufferer will feel "full" and perhaps will accuse himself of having overeaten when really he has eaten very little. The feeling of distension is most uncomfortable; yet it hardly amounts to pain, and soon after the meal the sufferer belches a large volume of gas and at once feels great relief. Persons who swallow air continuously suffer with abdominl distention and with a more or less dull pain almost without intermission.

The condition that air swallowing causes may be distinguished from true flatulent dyspepsia or from ulcer of the stomach by its occurring immediately after or during the meal; whereas real indigestion, whether from ulcer or some other cause comes at an appreciable interval after eating. In addition to the distress of the stomach air swallowing may cause serious heart disturbances such as an irregular pulse, pain over the heart, palpitation and even false angina pectoris. The cure rests on recognizing the cause and then breaking the habit.

How to Cut Stove Pipes

It is often necessary to cut into shorter pieces lengths of stovepipe or conductor pipe. When a cold chisel is used it is difficult to get a square cut and impossible to get smooth edges. Tinner's snips cramp in cutting around the pipe, leaving a rough bent, irregular cut and making impossible the kind of job you like to do. To insure a square cut and smooth, straight edges when cutting stovepipe of either round or corrugated sheet-iron pipe, punch with a cold chisel or scratch awl a small hole where the cut is to be made, insert the point of an ordinary can opener and operate as in opening a can from the grocery store.

He Knew

A lusty-lunged auctioneer was holding forth in the market-place of a small town. Taking up a box of cigars, he shouted;

"You can't get better, gentlemen! I don't care where you go, you can't get better!"

"No," replied a cynical voice from the crowd, "you can't. I smoked one last week, and I'm not better yet!"

Plan As You Earn

In all the arrangements of life there is a certain appropriateness that is well to observe out of respect for our selves as well as out of consideration for others. The extremes of inadvertence in this regard are obvious and ridiculous to everyone. Only the foolish buy fur coats on a salary of fifteen dollars a week or order a talking machine or a new car on the instalment plan when they are not able to pay their doctor's bills. If your children have to earn their living, as you have earned yours, it is absurd for you and cruel to them to bring them up as if they were to inherit a fortune. They and you will suffer for it in the end, and the worst part of your suffering will be that they blame you.

The way to achieve a wise and reasonable proportion between means and ends, to see what you and your family have in one line conforms to what you have in another, that there is no startling contrast between your expenditure of one year and that of the next, is to use forethought and system. The most damaging, the most destructive of all forms of human financing is to spend because you have. Your pay comes in, your mining stock yields an unexpected dividend: you go out in a whirlwind of glee, step round the corner, see a bargain, something you always knew you needed but never thought of buying, and the whirlwind has swept away that pocketful of cash, and there is still a little more to pay, and you have no idea where it is coming from. Your glee has vanished with a pop, like a burst balloon.

Plan for your pay what you will do with it. Plan to put unexpected dividends into the bank, and let the wonderful bargains go. You won't live in quite such whirlwinds of either kind, but your life will be sane and well regulated, and there will be a pleasing completness about it such as is unknown to those who spend by fits and starts.

At the same time there is a slavery to the scale of living that is as much to be avoided as the neglect of it. Independence is the secret of happin ss, perhaps more in matters of money than anything else. Do not let anyone on earth dictate how you shall spend. Have the things you really enjoy; go without those you don't, no matter who criticizes. The scale, of living is set by the artificial requirements of society. It is well to recognize it, but not to be a martyr to it.

The measure of happiness is the adjustment of real wants to actual means; any scale that does not allow for that is false and disastrous.
