Juniors Lose Game To Pembroke Team

Wednesday night Pembroke Little Lumber Kings trounced Morrisburg-Iroquois Juniors in a duel held at the Pembroke Arena before a large crowd of hockey fans. Pembroke rang up a count of 8-3 against Morrisburg to take the first game of the best of seven series in the finals for the Citizen Shield.

First Period

At the end of the first period the Little Lumber Kings led 2-1 with Gareau and Godin tallying the Pembroke counters and Stitt for Morrisburg. The first goal was scored just five minutes after the start of the opening frame.

Second Period

The second period saw four goals for Pembroke, against one for Morrisburg as the Little Lumber Kings outplayed their opponents throughout the game. Stitt again counted for Morrisburg, ending the period with a 6-2 count.

Third Period

In the last frame Pembroke again took the lead with two more counters, giving one to Morrisburg's Claxton, ending the game 8-3.

Second Game To-Nite

The second game of the series is scheduled for tonight (Friday) in the Smiths Falls arena. The local executive decided to take the game there, due to uncertain ice conditions at the local arena.

MUSKRAT HUNTERS UNDER FALSE IMPRESSION

Many muskrat trappers in the district are under the impression that they are permitted to set traps on muskrat houses, burrows, and push-ups. The Department of Lands and Forests points out that this is absolutely wrong. The law which governs this is the Game and Fisheries Act, Section 29: "No person shall cut or break or destroy at any time a muskrat house or beaver house, or beaver dam, or set or place a trap closer than five feet from a beaver house, or a muskrat house or push-up".

This law holds for the current year, although amendments may be made which might apply to later years. All overseers are asked to ensure that the law as quoted above is strictly obeyed.

The muskrat season opened on the 20th of March and extends till April 21st in the counties of Stormont, Dundas, Glengarry, Leeds, Grenville and Carleton.

Breaking open houses and trapping in houses is forbidden, despite contrary reports.

Williamsburg W. I.

On Tuesday evening, March 14 there came from the IOOF Hall Williamsburg the sounds of music and dancing; for on that night the ladies of the Women's Institute held their annual open meeting for the husbands and friends of the community.

The hall was artistically decorated in keeping with the celebration for the birthday of St. Patrick and the program carried out the Irish theme

A chorus of Institute ladies led in the singing of O Canada to open the program and later in the evening sang Dear Hearts and Gentle People. Mrs. Donald Hess, the W. I. President welcomed the guests on behalf of the group. The highlight of the evening was a series of lantern slides shown by Mr. George H. Smith of Morrisburg. The beautiful coloured scenes from the gardens of Morrisburg brought a new realization of the natural beauties about us. The appreciation of the gathering for the slides was expressed by the Rev. Mr. Neff.

Several musical and dancing numbers completed an enjoyable evening. Those taking part in the tap dancing were: Carol Wingard, Geraldine Barkley, Myrna and Betty Becksted. Vocal duets by Connie Barkley and Mae Raistrick; Georgia Larsen and Betty Tupper were most pleasing. Mrs. H. Thompson joined Rhea Dell Wert at the piano to present "Drums of Dublin" and "Kerry Dance". Mr. William Beckstead of Elma, closed the program with vocal and instrumental numbers.

A social hour followed the very full evening of entertainment.

Convenors for the program were Mrs. L. Neff, Mrs. H. Thompson and Mrs. G. Fee.

WELL KNOWN HERE, MRS. D. MORONEY DIES IN JERSEY CITY

Requiem High Mass was celebrated in the church of St. Mark the Evangelist, Prescott on Wednesday, Mar. 15 for Mrs. Duff Moroney, a former resident of Prescott, and well known in Morrisburg, where she had spent many visits with her sister, the late Mrs. Fred Sherman of this place. Mrs. Moroney died at her home in Jersey City, N. J., on Sunday March 12th after a lengthy illness.

The remains were brought to Prescott on Tuesday where they rested at the home of her brother, John T. Haggarty, until the funeral service, which was conducted by Rev. Father John Ferguson. Entombment was in Sandy Hill vault to await burial in the parish cemetery in the spring.

Mrs. Moroney was the former Susan Haggarty, daughter of the late Thomas Haggarty and his wife, Sarh Mulloy. She was born in Prescott on May 10, 1893 and resided there until 1921, when she married Duff Moroney of Ogdensburg, N. Y. They resided in that city until twelve years ago, when they took up residence in Jersey City.

Her death is mourned by her husband, a daughter, Miss Marie Moroney, and a son John, both of Jersey City; one sister, Miss Molly Haggarty of Ogdensburg; and a brother, John T. Haggarty, Chairman of the Public Utilities Commission of Prescott.

The funeral was very largely attended and a large number of floral and spiritual offerings were received in tribute to her memory.

Morrisburg Poet Quoted in National Magazine

Readers of The Leader will recall the poem published here by Mr. Carl Madsen, local theatre manager on the occasion of Robert Burns' birthday. It was noticed by others as well, and Carl, who also is the proud possessor or a framed lock of "Bonnie Jean's" (Burns' wife) golden locks, is commented on as follows by Wallace Havelock Robb, well-known writer, in The Canadian Countryman:

(In the issue of March 4)

"Through the door of Abbey Dawn a day or two after Rabbie Burns' birthday, came a poet named Carl Madsen of Morrisburg, Ontario, bearing in his hand a small and securely framed piece of glass, protecting a lock of Bonnie Jean's golden hair! Yes sir! A lock of hair from the head of Burns' wife, Jean Armour.

".....How Mr. Madsen came by this curl of blonde hair is a confidential story which he did not give me permission to tell. The story didn't interest me. I was too moved with many emotions to think of that. All I could do was hold it in my hand and feel waves and waves of feeling tearing my heart all to pieces....."

And in the issue of March 18—

"In the article before this one, I mentioned a poet, Carl Madsen, retired farmer of Morrisburg, who had brought to Abbey Dawn a lock of Bonnie Jean's hair. I spoke too soon, because this week, I received a copy of his poem To Robert Burns, published in The Morrisburg Leader last January. Here it is. The poem is then quoted.

"Congraulations, Carl Madsen! especially for those last two lines "As long as men have simple worth". I think one of the troubles of our times is that most people underestimate the simple worth. Most of us don't know what we want to do—except that whatever it is—it's gotta be big! Simple worth doesn't seem to interest us any more Sometimes when I hear singers gargling and strangling, I wish to goodness they'd shut up—permanently. Why they can't bring their talents to simple songs or hymns, I'd like to know. Complicated and ambitious beauty, whether it be n poetry or any other art or talent is no match for simple beauty. Big words and big sounds—ah, phooey".

MARK SILVER WEDDING ANNIVERSARY SATURDAY

Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Duval were happily surprised on Saturday evening last, when a number of their friends gathered at their home in honour of their silver wedding anniversary.

The living room and dining room were prettily decorated with silver wedding bells. On the dining room table was a very lovely wedding cake, suitably decorated for the occasion.

During the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Duval were asked to take their places in the centre of the room. Miss Alice Cameron pinned a corsage of roses on Mrs. Duval and a boutoniere of carnations on Mr. Duval. The flowers were a gift of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Fraser.

Mrs. Craig read a very appropriate address after which Mrs. Cobey presented the couple with a chest of Community Plate silverware on behalf of those present.

Mr. asd Mrs. Duval thanked everyone for the lovely gift and also for the lovely surprise party. Mr. and Mrs. Duval were the recipients of many other beautiful silver gifts.

Refreshments were served during the evening and all left wishing Mr. and Mrs. Duval many, many more years of happiness.

SPORTS &c

by A SIXBIT CRITIC

A lot of color went out of the national Hockey League when big Babe Pratt skidded or was shunted—you pays your money and takes your choice which—to the minors. Babe was born 10 or 15 years too late. He believed that hockey was fun, rather than big business. He thought that discipline was a word in the dictionary, and that home or your hotel room was somewhere to go when every other place was closed.

All of which was quite out of place under present-day conditions. Still, you never were in any doubt as to whether it was the big guy in person, or just a reasonable facsimile, that was out there on the ice; and that's a lot more than we can say for a whole heap of highly publicized modern stars.

So it will be good news to thousands who still have fond memories of The Babe to learn that he is still hockey to a large extent, and not any too badly, at that.

Owner Kenny McKenzie, of New Westminster Royals, decided, at the start of the present season, that he was going to take a chance on Pratt as coach, there was considerable head-shaking, to put it mildly. Even his best friends and sincerest admirers doubted whether the fun-loving Babe would come through. But, up to now, McKenzie hasn't any regrets as it took Pratt just a few weeks to lead his club into first place in the Pacific Coast Hockey League's northern division — and they've been up there ever since.

Not only do the Royals lead the standings by a tidy margin, but according to coast observers, their precision passing is a treat to watch—about as close to that of the New York Rangers, in their balmy days, as you are liable to see anywhere.

Babe was always a bit of a gambler, and right from the start of the season, he has had unusual success in pulling his goalie out of the nets in the closing moments of a tight game. But a couple of his chance-taking stunts in recent contests had the fans really talking to themselves.

For instance, in a game with Portland not so long ago, the New Westminster goal tender was hit by the puck, and had to retire to the dressing room for minor repairs. The final period still had seven minutes to run at the time.

There was the usual "time-out" called to await the return of the goalie—but Pratt couldn't see any reason for such a delay. ("Maybe he had a heavy date and was already late for it," one Eastern observer commented, but that, of course, is merely surmise).

So, out to guard the nets he sent one of his forwards—minus any goal-tending equipment—and what is more, he got away with it, the substitute holding the Portlands off the score sheet for the balance of the period.

More recently still—in Vancouver this time—Pratt pulled an even more incredible stunt. Midway through the final period, Vancouver had a 5-2 lead. When a Vancouver player received a five-minute penalty, Pratt sent his goalie to the bench and brought in an extra forward. New Westminster scored once, and Vancouver didn't get a single shot at the open Royal net.

With two and a half minutes to go, Royals were still behind, 5-3. Once again Pratt told his goalie to go take a sitdown, and Vancouver promptly banged one into the unguarded twine, making it 6-3.

Babe and his pals took the reverse in stride. The goalie stayed off. With only 49 seconds remaining, Royals scored to make it 6-4. With 23 seconds left, they scored again, making it 6-5. And with but five seconds remaining, they notched still another, salvaging a 6-6 tie out of a game which appeared to be hopelessly lost.

In other words, in the space of just 44 seconds, the Royals scored three times against one of the best clubs on the Pacific Coast. More than that, they did it with Pratt himself and Ken Ullyot, one of his star forwards, sitting out misconduct penalties.

Sounds as though the Babe—when he's finally washed up with hockey—might do well to move south and try his hand at directing some of those movie thrillers. And we'd be willing to bet that he'd show those Hollywood folks a lot of swift action—and even speedier fun—even if he never did win an Academy Award.

There was a young girl of Asturias
Whose temper was frantic and furious.
She used to throw eggs
At her grandmother's legs—
A habit unpleasant, but curious.

Artificial price support—that is to say Government support—may be all very well in theory. But everybody with even a few years of practical experience knows very well that, so far as food products are concerned, thing are bound to find their natural level, sooner or later. And if you are in the poultry business, the mark to aim at is keeping your profits up, even when prices fall.

It takes around 200 eggs per hen per year to make fair profits. So the BREEDING STOCK BEHIND YOUR CHICKS SHOULD BE AT LEAST THAT GOOD.

Look at it this way. If good, straight-run chicks cost you only three cents apiece more than ordinary ones, then a good pullet chick costs you only a little over six cents more than a common one. That charges her both for the extra cost of the cockerel that comes with her, and the higher price of chicks that die.

If eggs are selling for only thirty-six cents a dozen — three cents apiece—she needs to lay only three extra eggs to more than cover her extra cost. ALL SHE LAYS BEYOND THE FIRST THREE ARE ALMOST CLEAR PROFIT.

Another thing to bear in mind is this: it's not only HOW MANY eggs you get, but WHEN you get them, that makes money for you. Here are some marks well worth shooting for:

Month	Eggs per Hen	Eggs per Pullet
September	12	14
October	10	16
November	8	17
December	8	17
January	11	17
February	11	17
March	14	18
April	15	18
May	16	18
June	16	17
July	15	16
August	14	15
Total	150	200

Now, here are some hints you might find worth while. A high death rate can push up your costs of raising laying pullets as much as twenty to forty cents per bird. Aim at saving 98 out of every 100 chicks your brood. Here's how Clarence Moore, for example, holds his mortality down.

First, he cleans his brooder house thoroughly — scrubs it with lye water, and hoses it out with clear water.

He starts his brooder stoves at least 24 hours before the chicks arrive, to make sure the stoves are working right.

Moore uses a sulfa-medicated mash to prevent coccidiosis, feeding it according to directions. If disease does break out, he switches to one of the stronger sulfa preparations (sulfaguanadine, sulfamethazine, Sulfaquinoxline) in the drinking water.

Cutting your fuel and labor costs is a big help too. For 500 chicks, try and do your brooder house chores in one hour per day; in one and a half hours for 1,000 chicks; and in two and a half hours for 2,000.

If you brood only a few chicks, a coal-fired stove will give you the cheapest fuel cost. If you want to save on hired labor, or on your own time, an "automatic" fuel—oil, gas, or electricity—may be worth the higher cost.

If you brood many chicks, hot water heat may be the best for you. It costs the most to install, but it's the cheapest to operate, both in fuel and labor.

Regardless of what fuel you use, an insulated, draft-free brooder house will cut your fuel bill.

You can save labor by brooding in large lots in large pens. The Berry Brothers brood as many as 10,000 chicks in a single hot-water-heated room, using automatic feeders and automatic running water.

Unless they have had an outbreak of disease, they raise three broods of chicks on the same litter. Built-up litter stays dryer. It actually develops some feed value, as the bacteria in it create vitamin B_{12}, or something like it.

The right sorts of feeders really save feed. Aim at raising broilers (up to 12 weeks) on three and a half pounds of feed for each pound of poultry.

It's not the feed your birds eat tthat costs you money. The feed the birds waste is what runs up your feed bill. Leslie Norton cuts down this cost by using four different sized feeders.

He starts out by feeding on egg flats for three or four days. Then he uses a chick-size feeder. At three weeks he switches to a larger size, and to a still larger feeder at six weeks.

George Roche has found that doesn't pay to fill chick feeders more than half full. If you put more in them, the wasted feed will cost you more than the extra labor of filling the feeders oftener.

Aim at cutting your rearing losses. A good mark to shoot for is saving 97 out of every 100 pullets you start on range.

As simple a thing as picking the right day to move your pullets to range can make a lot of difference in death losses. Donald Crooks found he had more coccidosis when he put his birds on wet range. Now he waits for dry weather, and save more birds. He won't vaccinate in rainy weather for laryngotracheitis, bronchitis, or Newcastle disease, either.

When They Opened The Erie Canal

Finally, the Erie Canal . . . astonished the world, for it was an undertaking of such magnitude that the like of it had hitherto been accomplished only by the greatest empires of the Old World and by means of the labor of slaves.

It is but natural, therefore, that the unique spectacle of the celebration of the opening of the great waterway, upon a stage stretching from Buffalo to New York, before an audience composed of a large part of the population of the state, should appeal to English artists in search of American views, and that their sketches should be used to decorate the pottery of Staffordshire. It is with pride, mingled with wonder and no little amusement, that one reviews the story of the opening celebration, as it is recorded in the old china illustrations.

The celebration began at Buffalo, the junction of the canal and Lake Erie, continued at each little hamlet and city along the banks, culminating at last in a blaze of glory and patriotism as the waters from the Great Lakes were mingled with the Atlantic in New York harbor. No resplendent Doge of Venice, standing upon the prow of his gayly bedecked Bucentaur and casting the jewelled ring into the waters of the Adriatic, thereby symbolizing the marriage of Venice to the sea, was ever more proud than was Governor Clinton as, standing upon a primitive canal boat draped with the Stars and Stripes, he poured a barrel of Lake Erie water into the Atlantic Ocean thereby accomplishing the union of our West and East.

The first illustration presents a view of the harbor entrance of the canal at Buffalo, with sail boats in the bay, low warehouses on the dock, and a packet boat upon the canal, which sailors are tying to the wharf . . . With something akin to awe, one listens to the sound of that reverberating cannon shot, which fired at Buffalo and repeated in succession by cannon stationed along the entire length of the canal, proclaims in one hour and 20 minutes to the people of New York City that the little fleet is under way. Four gaily bedecked horses then proudly prance along the tow-path drawing the canal boat, Seneca Chief, which bears Governor Clinton and his associates followed by the canal boats Superior, Commodore Perry and Buffalo. At the end of the procession is Noah's Ark, from the "unbuilt City of Ararat," having on board a bear, two eagles, two fawns, birds and fish, besides two Indian boys in native costume—all taken along to gratify the curiosity of the effete New Yorkers in regard to the wild West.

One smiles at the allegorical picture, painted in honor of the occasion, which hangs in the cabin of the Seneca Chief, for in it may be seen Hercules resting upon his favorite club after his labor of finishing the canal, Governor Clinton in a Roman toga standing by his side, gazing upon the placid water and inviting Neptune and his Naiads, who coyly hang back as if hesitating to approach domains not theirs by right, to enter through the open lock. Upon the deck stand two brightly painted kegs marked "Lake Erie"—the water from the lake which is to be used in the celebration in New York.

He's Laughing Out Loud (At the Drop of a Buck)

Dick Collier, who is probably the world's only professional laugher, started in business with a guffaw and worked his way down to a titter.

And today, at the drop of a buck, he's ready to titter, giggle, snicker, guffaw, shriek, howl, snort, chuckle, gurgle and otherwise convulse himself for all comers. He'll laugh any place, any time, anywhere, if the pay is right.

Collier's vocal talents alone are sufficient, since he has a truly infectious laugh and has proved same through appearances on the radio and on records. But when you throw in his physical appearance (which is a big job, because he's well over 200 pounds) you've really got something.

Dick Collier looks like a laugh. In fact, he looks like a walking belly-laugh, with a built-in chortle. As such, he's an up-and-coming television performer and has his laughing eyes focused avidly on the fertile fields of Hollywood.

He laughs for a living for two reasons. First, he's a down-to-earth, commercially-minded guy and, as he says. "Take a look at my puss. Doesn't it make you laugh? Sure, it does. So why shouldn't I cash in on it?"

Secondly, he's a happy character. He traces his happiness to the war, when he was badly hurt. For a time, there was some question of his coming out of it all right. But he did.

"I found out that just being alive," he says, "is the most wonderful thing. So now I get a kick out of a rainy day."

During the war, he'd been a one-man show for Army special services. He spent 17 months in Persia, giving shows at remote camps. He'd play the piano, sing songs, tell jokes and look funny. The GI's liked him.

When he was discharged, he decided to give show business a whirl, despite the fact that he had spent five years at Boston College, studying psychology. He built his act around his laugh, a piercing shriek that had been a big hit with the boys in service.

Dick Collier—He laughed the best paid laugh ever laughed.

He studied laughter, and developed a routine that encompasses (he says) more than 200 different kinds ranging from the timid laugh (used "when the little woman issues her orders for the day") to the shaking laugh ("peculiar to pleasingly plump people").

A Broadway producer hired him to sit in the audience of a new musical comedy and laugh in the right places. His laughter made others laugh, and the play became a hit. Then comedians took up the idea, and Collier made a nice living laughing in radio studios, night clubs and theaters.

But his code of ethics makes him refuse to laugh unless something is funny.

On one television program, Collier got paid $100 for laughing for five seconds. He says that's the best-paid laugh ever laughed. That one helped him develop what he calls his crowning achievement—the last laugh.

Machine Solves Chess Problems

Chess players will either be delighted or furious—it all depends on how they feel about the game—by the invention of Mr. T. Nemes, Chief Engineer of the Hungarian Posts Research Station. It's a chess-problem-solving machine, an ingenious, fearsome looking contrivance of thermionic valves, photo-electric cells and cathode-ray tubes amid a mass of wires, lights, dynamos and other intricate gadgets.

All the player has to do is to feed his problem into the machine, which works at lightning speed through all the possible combinations of three legal moves—one by Black and two by White. After a brief space, out comes the solution. If there is no solution the machine tells the player so!

Mr. Nemes is not content with producing a problem-solving machine. He is now at work on another more intricate affair which will play a game of chess and which, he says, "may surpass the schemes of thought of the great masters." What a jolly evening the chess player can have by letting the machine play—and win—his games for him while he gets on with something more urgent!

His roses allowed to decay.
His wife, more alert,
Bought a powerful squirt
And said to her spouse, "Let us spray."

Cigarette Lighters—A Milestone In History of Conquest of Darkness

Most people don't realize what a wonderful thing the modern cigarette lighter is. It is almost a magical trick, when you come to think of it. You whip out a little metal gadget, press the top, and a flame appears for your cigarette. This familiar, everyday gadget, which we casually use and take for granted, represents an interesting milestone in the long history of the conquest of darkness by Man.

Strangely enough, the most primitive methods of illumination were still in use 150 years ago, and the tremendous acceleration in the discoveries which led to the modern forms of gas and electric lighting corresponded with the Industrial Revolution. Even the Eddystone Lighthouse was maintained by candles at the beginning of the nineteenth century.

Oil lamps of various kinds appear to have been used, roughly, from the year 2,500 B.C.; lamps of hollow stone or sea-shells have been found in many parts of the world. The Greeks and Romans knew almost as much about lighting as was known in the eighteenth century.

We know how primitive Man produced fire by rubbing flints and sticks together. An ancient Persian legend describes its discovery. "A great hero named Hushenk hurled a mighty stone at a snake. The snake escaped, but the stone struck a rock. Light shone through the dark pebble, the heart of the rock flashed out in the quarry, and fire was seen for the first time in the world."

Inventive processes in the mind of early Man are difficult to trace, but it is easy to imagine a cave-dweller watching a twig or fibre burning in fat dropped from a roasting carcass and proceeding from that observation to build a primitive lamp. The production of fire by striking a flint in such things as the tinder-box and flintlock rifle came very much later.

Various kinds of oil lamps have been used in the intervening years, but the first recorded use of illumination by gas dates back to 1765, when a man named Spedding, who loved near Lord Lonsdale's coal-mines at Whitehaven, piped coal gas to his offices, where he used it for illumination. He tried to obtain permission to build gas reservoirs to light the streets of his village, but this was refused by the local magistrate.

Early experiments in gas illumination were extremely primitive, of course; the burners themselves were simply iron tubes with holes pierced in them, and the slightest obstruction or rust resulted in a dim, overcooled flame. The discovery fell into hands of a financial "tycoon," as we should now call him, named Winsor.

He was not particularly scrupulous about the claims he made for his discovery. When a newspaper man asked him whether it would be dangerous to take a lighted candle into a room full of coal gas, he replied that the gas would not ignite because "it is intermixed with the air of the room."

Asked whether it was harmful to the lungs, he replied, "Not in the least! On the contrary, it is more congenial to our lungs than vital air (oxygen), which proves too strong a medicine, because it only exists from one-fifth to one-fourth in the atmosphere, whereas inflammable air exists above two-thirds in the animal and vegetable kingdoms, in all our drink and victuals. It forms a part of ourselves."

Despite these shady beginnings, the Pall Mall was illuminated by gas five years later, and, by 1811, several large cotton mills were lit by this method.

A year earlier, Sir Humphrey Davy demonstrated the electric arc between two carbons to the Royal Institution in London. Electric lighting developed at a slower pace than gas. New kinds of improved gas-burners were introduced, and in 1885—after an interval of over a hundred years—Carl Van Welsbach invented the incandescent gas mantle.

It was he, too, who discovered that cerium and iron fused together resulted in a hard substance which emitted a brilliant spark on being struck with a wheel. He thus produced the first "flint" But it is important to remember that this att... ette lig... tow enclose... cylinder (som... case). This was s... fine-toothed wheel a...

Easy Money

An American had an invitation to a private shoot. Addressing the old gamekeeper, he said: "I'm one of the crack shots in the States. Tomorrow you will be loading for me, and for every bird I miss I'll give you a shilling."

The following evening the gamekeeper met a friend and told him the story.

"If I'd had another blank cartridge," he said, "I'd have made just a pound."

ONTARIO MOTOR VEHICLE ACCIDENT TOLL RECORDED ALL-TIME HIGH IN 1949

URGENT APPEAL IS MADE FOR WHOLE-HEARTED PUBLIC AND PERSONAL CO-OPERATION TO CUT TRAFFIC LOSSES IN 1950

In deaths and injuries on Ontario streets and highways, 1949 proved to be the worst year in the history of the Province. Despite the fact that the intensive and maintained campaign for safety by the Department received generous support and co-operation of the press, the radio, the schools, the police, many service clubs, safety organizations, the operators and drivers of commercial vehicles and many thousands of citizens, the toll of tragedy reached an all-time high.

HERE IS THE 1949 RECORD

Motor vehicles registered in Ontario 969,368
Tourist vehicles recorded 4,500,000
Persons killed 830
Persons injured 17,469
Property damage $9,531,659

THE PICTURE IN 1950

In 1950 there will be in operation on Ontario highways one million motor vehicles owned by Ontario residents. There will be more tourist vehicles in the Province than ever before. Traffic will be much heavier, and more chances of accidents will exist.

Estimated motor vehicles in 1950, 1,050,000
Estimated drivers licenses in 1950, 1,350,000
Estimated tourist vehicles in 1950, 5,000,000

Unless the Ontario public takes this problem of highway safety seriously to heart and everyone sets out to cut down this mounting scale of accidents, it is possible that in 1950 the death toll may reach a new shocking figure, with the number of persons injured keeping pace.

With these facts in view, it behooves every man and woman, young and old, to make it a personal objective to establish and maintain safety, and to preach it at all times to schools, families, drivers and acquaintances.

The Department of Highways is devoting all its energies to a continuous planned attack on accidents. The earnest teamwork of all citizens and organizations is requested.

It is a common cause that all of us can aid for the general good.

Minister of Highways

ANNE HIRST
Your Family Counselor

"DEAR ANNE HIRST: I've been going with a young man for nine months, and everything was fine.

We went everywhere together. We never even argued. Neither of our parents objected — until lately.

"Now my parents have told me tales about him which I know are not true. And they don't seem even to trust me!

"His mother and mine got together. They decided we were seeing too much of each other, and that it is best for us to break up. His parents went on vacation a month ago, and he had to go along. I believe they did this so he would forget me. He didn't.

"We love each other. Please tell me what to do. I am sick worrying over it.

"WORRIED."

* WHEN two people are in love, it is maddening to find that others object to it. Our personal happiness is so supreme that our minds are blinded to reason, and we feel that any opposition is unfounded and actually wicked.

Why can't parents let us alone?

One reason is that parents have a duty to their children. If they see them falling in love before they are old enough to realize the meaning, parents are bound to recommend that they take time out to think objectively. That isn't possible when the two are constantly together, dating only each other.

Perhaps this boy has been neglecting his studies, or his job. Perhaps you have been forgetting your friends, failing in your other responsibilities. Perhaps you two are in the remote and passionate mood where you feel that the world's well lost for love. You tell me so little!

Why don't you show your parents that you are both more mature than they think? Co-operate with them, instead of rebelling. Admit they may be right, but you are so sure that you are, that you are willing to date this boy often, and go around with other young men too. If you consent to this, pleasantly, I think your parents will not insist that you give him up entirely.

I don't entirely agree with the tactics which your parents have employed to change your feeling toward the lad, but maybe they see that you are too emotionally involved to respond to any others.

If they insist that you give him up entirely, even do that, for, say, a year. If your love and his are as deeply rooted as you believe, you will not change, and your parents will finally have to be convinced.

Meanwhile you will be wise to play along with them—not resentfully, but cheerfully. More than anything else, this attitude will show them that you are wiser than they thought, better able to control your emotions, and worthy of their complete trust and affection.

Whatever comes later, this of confusion must not alienate you from your family. Guide yourself accordingly.

Parents may seem objectionable people occasionally, but in the long run, they are usually right. Play along with them, even when it hurts. Anne Hirst will help you see why, if you write her at Box 1, 123 Eighteenth Street, New Toronto, Ont.

Why Protect These Harmful Pests?

Farmers, gardeners, fruit growers and tree planters will not be very happy about the proposal of the Ontario Government to limit the game bag on cottontails. To the hundreds of thousands of people who come in any of the classes mentioned, rabbits are regarded as a serious pest, about in the same category as field mice. They do enormous damage and if not kept down by continuous hunting they will do still more.

Almost every winter literally millions of young trees and shrubs are destroyed by these pests despite considerable money and time spent on special measures. Even on the outskirts of our large cities they do a lot of damage.

No exhaustive and expensive survey is necessary to determine the destructiveness of the common wild rabbit. All that the game authorities will have to do is to consult their colleagues in those branches of the government service which are interested in reforestation, fruit growing, agriculture or gardening.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM
by Gwendoline D Clarke

Last week we were colder in the house than we had been in years. Day after day icy winds battered themselves against our doors and windows, penetrating the house even against storm doors and window protections. What it would have been like without them, dear only knows. It is at such times that I wonder how people in pioneer days ever came through the winters. It isn't much good trying to describe it—only experience can make anyone realize what a stormy day in the country is really like. Even at that memory is short-lived. For instance, one of our neighbours was in town looking after an ailing sister. It was a day when visibility was reduced to 100 feet, and this neighbour, although she knew it was storming, had no idea what it was really like until she got home at supper time and found her way blocked from the garage to the house by huge drifts across the lawn.

But now the weather has changed—a warm wind has been blowing all day. Snow is packing and little rivulets are running under and through the snow. The house is draughty but reasonably warm, so we can forget all about the stormy weather until the next big blow. Except that I can't forget it quite so easily—not with a batch of chilblains that are just about driving me crazy! And I haven't got enough courage to try the Spartan cure which some folk advocate—to run barefoot through the snow.

Every time we get a cold spell I wonder why so many farm houses are built with main door opening directly into the diningroom or kitchen. Of course there is generally a front door opening on to a hall but in the country no one uses the front door anyway. Even so, the hall eventually leads to one of the main rooms. Now why couldn't the hallway lead right through from the front door to the back door, with rooms opening out from either side of the hall? That way direct draughts would be eliminated as it would not be necessary to have one room lead into another as they do now. (We have six doors in our diningroom!) Imagine rooms with only one door——no draughts blowing through at all. For conveniece there could be an extra outlet from the kitchen, and maybe French windows from the living-room on to a sunporch; and an outlet from the back of the hall to a back porch. Several outlets have to be considered as fire escapes.

Well, there you are—there's my dream house. How do you like it? Partner says my plan requires too much ground space. Maybe, so, but on a farm we at least have plenty of ground space.

Now I think of it, that type of house is the exact opposite to a new bungalow I was in the other day. This house had a small front entry which led to the living-room on one side and the dining-room on the other. They in turn opened on to the kitchen, bedrooms and bathroom. There were archways, but no doors to the living or dining room. It was very nice, but it seems to me there is very little privacy in modern homes. As for instance, a girl I know who took her steady boy friend home to her parents' new bungalow. So that she and her boy might have a little time to themselves the rest of the family went to bed early every night! Even at that privacy would be difficult if the living-room had one of these large picture windows. Picture windows look very nice, but without blinds I always think of them as on a par with these two-piece bathing suits—so revealing that they leave little to the imagination.

Let's see, I had a quilting story to tell you, left over from last week, didn't I? Well, you see it was a sort of winter-week special. I set up the quilt all right and two neighbours were coming in to help me, but the weatherman decreed otherwise. So there was I with a whole quilt all to myself. However, quite often Partner would say—"If you want to get on with your quilt, go ahead—I'll do the dishes." So you see why I refer to my better-half as "Partner." And I did get my quilt finished. It was very thick so the stitches were none too small, but the quilting was fairly close so I don't think I did too bad to get it out of the frames by the end of the fourth day.

Well, I have just come up from the barn. Today Bob was away at chore time for the first time since we got the milking machine so Partner had the fun of trying it out for ourselves. We got along fine but Partner says it takes a strong man to handle the thing because everything about it is so heavy. Perhaps the day will come when someone will put a milker on the market made of light weight metal that anyone can handle—like the feather-weight chairs that seem so strong and durable.

Canada Now In Midst of Great Oil Developments

WITH an estimated oil reserve of 1,100 million barrels and reserves 6,000 billion cubic feet of natural gas in the Province of Alberta, Canada is in the midst of the greatest oil and natural gas development in her history, according to S. W. Fairweather, vice president of research and development of the Canadian National Railways.

The Alberta district, Mr. Fairweather says, is today one of the most active areas of oil exploration in the western hemisphere, with Edmonton the "oil capital" of northwestern North America.

A concise, chronological report on the Canadian oil development, complete with maps and charts has just been issued by the Canadian National Railways. In "The Geography of Oil and Gas in Western Canada," Mr. Fairweather traces the development from the first oil discovery in the Turner Valley in 1914 up to the present unprecedented activities.

Mr. Fairweather fixes the beginning of the present Canadian oil "boom", to the discovery of light oil near Leduc, 18 miles south of Edmonton, in 1947. In less than a year, developments proved the presence of a major oil field extending from Leduc across the North Saskatchewan River to the Woodbend district. Up to the end of 1949, drilling in this field alone has indicated a reserve of 250 million barrels of oil and 500 billion cubic feet of natural gas.

Since the Leduc discovery, the railway economist declares, oil of a similar quality has been found "almost all around Edmonton"; at Joseph Lake, Whitemud, Golden Spike, Barrhead, Bon Accord and Redwater. The Golden Spike discovery well is remarkable for a thickness of oil-bearing formation that exceeds 500 feet. The Redwater field, with an indicated reserve of 500 million barrels, is the largest oil pool yet discovered in Canada.

Pincher Creek, south of Calgary, has the deepest successful well ever drilled in Canada. It was recently brought into production at 12,500 feet with a record potential of 83 million cubic feet of wet gas per day.

The Lloydminster field, situated astride the Alberta-Saskatchewan boundary, which came into production in 1943, still constitutes the largest known reserves of heavy oil in Canada.

Exploration is now spreading into the sedimentary areas of British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, and northern Alberta, Mr. Fairweather says. Oil in quantity was recently discovered by Imperial Oil, Ltd. at Normandville, 30 miles south of Peace River and 210 miles north of Edmonton.

The oil developments of the past three years have saturated the oil market of western Canada and outlets must now be found farther afield, Mr. Fairweather declares. To this end, he says, a pipe line is being built laid from Edmonton to Regina and this line will be extended to Superior, Wisc., at the head of the Great Lakes.

The SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Rev. R. Barclay Warren

THE CHURCH IN ROME

Romans I:1, 7-12; Acts 28:14b-15, 30-31.

Golden Text: I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek.

—Rom. 1:16.

Paul was commissioned of God to carry the light of the Gospel to the Gentiles. His first headquarters was Antioch, the hub of Syria. Then it was Ephesus, the center of operations in Asia Minor and eastern Europe; and finally, Rome, the metropolis of the world. Rome was capital of the last great world empire. Its mighty armies even conquered Briton. But the power of Rome did not daunt Paul for the message of the Gospel of Christ was more powerful yet. It would not destroy but save everyone who would trust in Christ. Paul was unashamed of such a Gospel. He longed for the opportunity of placing its banner at the heart of the empire.

Paul did not know that he would go to Rome as a prisoner. When a group of Christians learned of his coming, they went down the road about forty miles to meet him: "Whom when Paul saw, he thanked God, and took courage." The thoughtfulness on the part of the little band in Rome did much to help Paul. If we would just remember that little acts of kindness can have great significance, we would do more of them.

Paul had written in his letter to the Romans, "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God". 8:28. Now he had a chance to prove it. He was allowed his own hired house where he could receive all who came. He preached the Gospel. Later he wrote from prison to the Church at Philippi, "I would ye should understand, brethern, that the things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the gospel; so that my bonds are manifest in all the palace, and in all other places; and many of the brethern in the Lord, waxing confident by my bonds, are much more bold to speak the word without fear."

You can't lose, being a Christian.

Hen Adopts Guinea Pigs—Betty Jane Robb kneels down to feed her motherly pet hen who is a busy biddy these days. The hen has adopted 20 full-grown guinea pigs and treats them as she would her own brood of chicks.

A Railway Line Run By Childen

One of the world's most popular railroads doesn't connect any cities, has only a single track, and runs little more than two miles.

Yet, despite these disadvantages which would bankrupt any other line, hundreds of persons, including visitors from all over the world, flock every day to its main terminal on Szechenyihegy hilltop above Budapest to take a ride. On the Hungarian railroad called Uttoro Vasut, Pioneers' Railroad, in English, the employees, rather than the right-of-way, account for its popularity.

Prospective passengers buy their tickets, which cost one forint (about 10 cents), from a young lady who still counts sums higher than five on her fingers. While waiting for the next train, they peer through the windows of the dispatcher's office to watch a freckle-faced lad wearing his first pair of long trousers, part of a spruce blue-gray uniform, tap out messages on a telegrapher's key. On the platform, the stationmaster, a pigtailed blonde, signals the train to start.

Budapest's children's railroad, which opened in 1947, is run entirely by youngsters between the ages of nine and 14. Boys and girls alike, they handle every job—selling tickets, working as conductors, telegraphers, and stationmasters, operating signal towers, coupling and uncoupling locomotives and cars, and even selling candy and souvenir post cards aboard the train.

The only adults besides the passengers, are the men who drive the two blue and-white Diesel-pow[ered] locomotives and a patie[nt] spoken man named Ferenc Nemeth, who keeps a fatherly eye on the "employees." A veteran of 14 years on the Hungarian railways, Nemeth says the children are the best workers he's ever seen.

The locomotives and cars, roughly two-thirds of standard size, are exact replicas of full-sized trains, right down to baggage racks and high-pitched whistles. There's a picnic ground at the end of the wooded, scenic, two-mile route.

Burapest children try out for jobs on the railroad by attending two weeks of classroom training during which they learn all the fundamentals of railroading—telegraphy, signals, mechanics and ticket selling. There's also a post office at each of the three stations along the line, so the children are also taught how to sell stamps and direct letters.

Only the best students get jobs on the railroad. They work six hours every day for a month, getting their lunches free. Their jobs change every day, so that each child gets all-round knowledge of the line's operations. They also learn how to use and respect authority; today's stationmaster may be tomorrow's candy merchant.

Cow Towels

Progressive dairymen wash the udders and teats of their cows with warm water before milking. A sterilized cloth towel is used to dry the udders. Despite this precaution bacteria are carried from cow to another. Individual paper cow towels used once only reduce this chance of spreading infection. The cellulose cow towel is made from wood pulps and chemicals.

Bees Great Part In Flower Pollination

Flowers did not appear till some 150,000,000 years ago. At that time beetles were the only pollinating insects.

The modern descendants of these original flowering plants—the magnolias and their relatives—are still pollinated by beetles. The magnolas are composed of numerous, spirally arranged, colorless petals, stamens and seed-bearing organs.

Unlike bees, beetles do not stick to one variety of plant. Probably the earliest flowering plants were insufficiently pollinated and probably they did not reproduce abundantly.

All this changed when bees appeared at the beginning of the Tertiary period, about 60,000,000 years ago. Bee pollination is more efficient than beetle pollination.

With bees doing the pollating, flowers tended to develop petals in the form of a deep tube or cup, with nectar stored at the base. This relieved the plant of the burden of producing excess pollen and numerous stamens, the flower's pollen-bearing organs. Since bees habitually land on flowers when they suck nectar or gather pollen, the flowers tend to form the lower petals into a long lip to serve as a "landing platform."

The color of the flowers was affected too. Bees can see blue or yellow, but they are color-blind for red. Most flowers that attract bees, therefore, are some shade of blue or yellow or a mixture of these two colors.

So the appearance of many flowers today (color, shape and symmetry of petals and number of stamens) is an evolutionary adaptation. Plants developed tubular flowers, reduced the number of stamens and concealed nectar at the base, where it is available to the long-tongued bees but not to the beetles. The tubular petals carried out a screening process which gradually eliminated the visits of beetles to many flowers and favored the visits of bees.

Use Live Steam As A Cooler

Use of live steam to cool fresh vegetables seems a paradox, but the method, based on well known physical laws ingeniously applied, has been used commercially by California lettuce shippers for more than a year and tested by the Department of Agriculture. Vegetables can be cooled even after they have been packed in plastic bags. Bulk containers of vegetables are placed in an airtight metal chamber and the loading opening is a sealed High-pressure steam creates a vacuum and sucks the air out of the cooling chamber. Water evaporates from the surface and tissues of the vegetables. Changing the water from the liquid to the vapor form requires heat. This is drawn from the vegetables within the chamber and results in their quick cooling.

TABLE TALKS

by Jane Andrews

Back in 1907 a man went to Washington as Senator from Minnesota. His name was Knute Nelson, and his favorite eating was bean soup. He liked bean soup every weekday and Sundays as wel; and when he found that the Senate Restaurant didn't serve this delicacy, he made a terrific squawk.

So before long it appeared on the Menu. What's more, it has been appearing there every single day for almost 34 years, just because thousands of others, besides Mr. Nelson, went for it in a big way. "Famous Senate Restaurant Bean Soup" is the way it's always listed; and it has probably been eaten by more noted people than any other single dish.

Perhaps you'd like to know how to make it. Here is the recipe as handed out by Paul Johnson, the restaurant's head waiter for half a century.

FAMOUS BEAN SOUP

3 lbs. small navy pea beans
1½ lbs. smoked ham hocks
1 onion
4 quarts water
A little butter
Salt and pepper

METHOD: Take three pounds of small navy beans, wash and run through hot water until the beans are white again. Put on fire with four quarts of hot water. Add 1½ lbs. smoked ham hocks. Boil for 2½ hours. Braise one onion, chopped small, in a little butter and when light brown, put in the soup. Season with salt and pepper, then serve. Do not add salt till ready to serve. (Serves eight.)

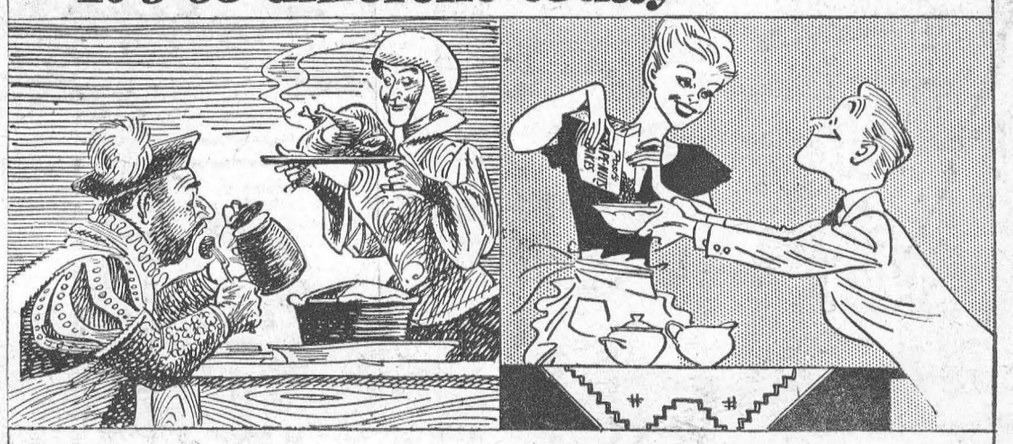
Folks sure favor a MAGIC cake!

SELF-ICED SPICE CAKE

Mix and sift 3 times, 2¼ c. once-sifted pastry flour (or 2 c. once-sifted hard-wheat flour), 2½ tsps. Magic Baking Powder, ½ tsp. salt, 1½ tsps. ground cinnamon, ¼ tsp. each of ground cloves, ginger, allspice, nutmeg and mace; mix in ½ c. washed and dried seedless raisins and ¼ c. chopped walnuts. Cream ⅔ c. butter or margarine and blend in 1¼ c. lightly-packed brown sugar; beat in 3 well-beaten egg yolks and ½ tsp. vanilla. Add dry ingredients to creamed mixture alternately with ⅔ c. milk and spread batter in 9" square pan, which has been greased and the bottom lined with greased paper. Beat stiff, not dry, 3 egg whites and a few grains salt; gradually beat in 1 c. lightly-packed brown sugar and spread over cake; sprinkle with ½ c. chopped walnuts and bake in a rather slow oven, 325°, 1¼ to 1½ hours; cover lightly with brown paper for last half hour.

It's so different today



In olden times they started the day with a juicy steak and a tankard of foaming ale! Today the ace-high breakfast dish is Post's Grape-Nuts Flakes . . . ready-to-eat; easy-to-digest . . . made not from one but TWO grains — sun-ripened wheat and malted barley.

That famous Grape-Nuts flavor in the form of delicious, honey-golden flakes is scrumptious. Post's Grape-Nuts Flakes are nourishing, too . . . provide useful quantities of carbohydrates and proteins for energy and muscle; phosphorus for teeth, bones; iron for the blood. So tasty — so good — so convenient. Ask your grocer.

GOOD CITIZENSHIP — A LOT OF LITTLE THINGS

GOOD CITIZENSHIP is a lot of little things

KEEP CHIMNEYS AND STOVE PIPES CLEAN

Dirty chimneys cut the proper flow of draft and increase fuel consumption. Sooty stove pipes are sure to rust and will have to be replaced. More important still, such conditions increase the fire hazard in your home! So to get the utmost in performance, safety and economy from your heating system, have chimney flues and stove pipes regularly cleaned and inspected. Such forethought is one of the little things that make up "Good Citizenship".

THE OLD TOWN PAPER

Pa says the old Town Paper
That comes along each week —
It really isn't worth a darn;
That editor's half asleep.

There's so much junk in it, he says,
It really is a shame.
Because he gives him solid cash
To send it in his name.

Pa says he's not an editor
But really thinks he could
Put up a better paper
And make it sound real good.

So Pa, he keeps on saying—
It's a wonder he don't try,
As he watches out the window,
And he heaves a heavy sigh.

Soon the mail man drives along,
He leaves a bunch today.
The old Town Paper isn't in
It must have gone astray.

So Pa he wiggles in the chair,
And grunts, and rubs his thumbs.
He says it's a mighty funny thing
That the paper didn't come.

He's feel awfully blue today,
As he lights his pipe and sighs.
We won't know a thing around about
Or if someone ups and dies.

Or if a sale is gonna be,
Or a fire takes a life,
If the mumps has broken out again
Or if a man has taken a wife.

When the mailman comes along next day,
Pa meets him on the fly,
With a great big smile behind a frown
Just to know the reason why.
