The Recruiting Meeting.

The second big recruiting meeting of the 207th Battalion of Ottawa, held in Chesterville within three weeks took place in the Music Hall Tuesday night, but whether the fact that it was hallowe'en, when all outdoors moveable is believed to require a certain amount of watching, or whether the very short notice was responsible, the crowd present was not up to expectations and instead of the hall being filled to overflowing to hear Capt. S. N. Dancey it was not more than three parts filled. Those who did attend, however, kept up the well-known tradition of Chesterville audiences, and arrived when the meeting should have been half over. Even if the starting was particularly late it lasted long enough and much beyond as it was within but a few minutes of midnight when the last speaker had said his say.

W. B. Lawson, K. C., was the chairman of the evening, and filled the position so efficiently and tactfully that one wonders why he is not oftener seen in that capacity. The entertainment of the evening was opened by a solo from Mr. Pat Flynn and between the addresses Miss Saucier and Mr. Fred Bolster each favored the audience with much appreciated numbers to the accompaniment of Miss McCloskey.

Capt. O'Brien of the 207th Batt. was the first speaker called upon and delivered an address of considerable length, much of which was taken up with facts, figures and fiction in an attempt to prove that the Canadian-born, outside of the ranks of the khaki clad, was an utter and absolute coward, and the attempt was even carried farther than that when it was hinted at that he even did not have sense enough to know that he was a coward. This kind of hot air may exalt the man already in khaki and make the British-born swell with pride, and we acknowledge their title to the exaltation and pride, but does it get recruits and as we understand it, the obtaining of recruits is the object of these speeches. The yoking of a lion and a lamb wont make a good fighting team, and according to the speakers the lions are all now in the ranks. That may or may not be, but the recruiting officers are out after these lambs and a little team-work between the platform men and the recruiters may make some of them think they are lions and induce them to enlist.

Capt. Dancy, as in his last appearance here delivered a good address in a manner that is forcible and clear cut, telling from personal experiences in the retreat from Mons what the lack of men on that occasion meant and making a strong appeal for the completion of the half million force promised by Sir Robert Borden. He, too, could not get away from the lead furnished by the previous speaker, although from the way he appears to jolly a crowd into singing the popular recruiting songs, one cannot help but believe he would get fine results if he blarneyed the prospective recruits along a little more than he does.

Sergt.-Major Bowen stated briefly his mission of signing-up as many men as possible for any branch of the service, in the air, on the earth or under the surface of the sea.

A vote of thanks to the speakers was moved by Rev. H. E. Warren and seconded by Rev. T. B. McCorkindale in short speeches.

A collection taken up for the Red Cross resulted in a trifle over thirty-six dollars being secured.

Raising A Christmas Gift to Red Cross

Chesterville, Oct. 31st, 1916

Dear Mr. Editor:

At the Teachers' Convention held at Chesterville on October 5th and 6th a resolution was made to the effect that the Schools of the County of Dundas would collect money in the various sections and villages to be sent as a gift to Red Cross headquarters from the schools of this County.

After some discussion it was decided that each school should be left free to raise money in the way thought to be best in each section, either by the house-to-house canvas, by holding a social, tea, or concert, by free-will offerings from the children or by grant from the School Board. In some cases, all methods would be employed.

Miss Shannette, Principal of the Chesterville Public School, was appointed Secretary-treasurer, and it was requested that all moneys should be paid in not later than December 2nd. The teachers and pupils hope for, and expect the support and co-operation of School Boards and all residents in the School Section.

This being the first County-wide gift, direct to the Red Cross. we hope to make it a large one. Each school should get a certain sum as the goal; and then work hard enough to double it. We know of one teacher who set $50.00 as the amount to be raised in her section a not large section in Williamsburg. A week ago she had $31.00 of the amount made. Another teacher who set $100.00 as the lowest amount with which she would be satisfied, only started work last week; she has now $33.50, $20.50 proceeds of a tea, the remainder voluntary giving from pupils. And it might be well to note just here, that but two collections were made and the second one was double the first. Early in December a complete list of Schools in the County, name of teacher in each section with amount contributed will be published in the five County papers.

Furthermore, through the Education Department, the Red Cross Society and city papers an account of what the Dundas Schools have done will be made known, and it is believed that many other Counties will follow our example; and while raising the very necessary funds for the use of our wounded soldiers, lessons of helpfulness, self-sacrifice and loyalty will be instilled in the children in the most effective way.

K. M. Shannette,
Sec'y treas. of Schools Fund.

Many Tricks at the Battlefront.

Where the enemy will not obligingly raid us it is often necessary for us to raid them and to capture some prisoners. All sorts of tricks are done by both sides to find who are up against them. For example, when the First Canadian Division went to the front the Germans could not discover for a time where they were stationed. So one night along a big section of the German front English-speaking Germans shouted out taunts to the Canadians across No Man's Land. "Come out and fight us, you blessed Canadians! Why do you hide away in your trenches? We will send you back to Canada soon." And so forth. The trick succeeded! The Canadians in the particular spot where they were placed, nearing these German cries and taunts, replied in kind, slanging the Germans. They gave the enemy the information they required.

Why trouble to ascertain what are the particular regiments opposed to you? For many reasons. In our own army each section has its own methods of fighting. So it is with the enemy. The Germans know the record of the West Kents or the 48th Highlanders of Toronto as well as we do, maybe better. They probably have a card index for each of our colonies as they certainly have a dossier for each of our generals. The Bavarian has different methods from the Saxon, and the regiment from Hanover will not always do the things that the men from Berlin will sink to. When we discover that regiments ye-terday at Verdun are now brought against us, the fact has great significance for both the French at Verdun and ourselves.

Trickery goes on all the time. We do it. They do it. The sniper has the most ingenious devices to deceive the enemy as to his position. The brigadier evolves guile to hide his intentions. Pretenses, traps, and deceits are a necessary part of war.

It might be thought that the prisoners would be the most valuable source of information of any. I doubt if they are. The average prisoner—particularly the average officer—says little or nothing. No one thinks the worse of him for that.

Quebec Children are Under Ban

Disturbed by the epidemic of infantile paralysis in Montreal and other points in Quebec the Provincial Board of Health took drastic action yesterday to prevent the disease being carried into Ontario. The board has barred from the province all Quebec children under sixteen years of age who cannot show a clean bill of health certified to by a physician before their departure.

The official notice sent out by Major J. W. S, McCullough, Provincial Officer of Health to the railway companies says;

"Please take notice that the Provincial Board of Health of Ontario requires that all persons under sixteen years of age coming from points in the Province of Ontario must have a medical certificate dated within 24 hours of the time of the departure, that they are in good health and have not been exposed to infantile paralysis. Please direct your agents to require production of such certificates upon purchase of tickets."

In addition to notifying the railway officials, Dr. McCullough has sent to Montreal, Dr. P. J. Moloney, District Officer of Health, to make an investigaton of conditions. If the situation demands it, it is likely special officers will be appointed to see that the railway companies are observing the order.

Just how extensive the epidemic is cannot be definitely stated. The official records show but 10 cases in the City of Montreal, but unofficial reports indicate that there considerably more cases than the number given. Dr. McCullough does not consider that the situation in Montreal is serious, but feels that in taking precaution it is better to go too far than not far enough.

Rev. W. T. Keough appointed Chaplain

October 27,— Rev. W. T. Keough B.A., pastor of the Methodist Church at Elma has been appointed Protestant chaplain of the 154th Glengarry and Stormont Highlanders, with the rank of captain. Capt. Keough has many friends in Williamsburg who were pleased to hear of his appointment and join in congratulating him on offering his service for King and country. The reverend gentleman's wife, who was Miss Edythe Earle, formerly resided in Cornwall. He was at one time pastor of the Methodist church at Moulinette and was stationed at different places in the Matilda district.

"Have you much of a police force in this village?" asked the city man.

"We certainly have," replied the native: "he weighs 310 pounds."

OVERCOATS
For Fall and Winter

These are a necessity not a luxury.
It's a pretty hard year to make selections when buying a stock of these goods, and I keep clear of the outlandish patterns of some of the material, that has kept my stock right down to the choicest models. Coats a man can wear any place and any time and know people are not wondering where he "found it." There are good many different kinds at different prices and the values are as good as the looks.
There are Boys' coats in the lot, too.

As a reminder—My stock of Rubbers is a big one and they are a lot cheaper than wet feet.

Gives her Son Too

Sergt. Major Bowen, who was recruiting here for the 207th Batt. yesterday is very proud of the following letter which he received here, and feels that Chesterville should be very proud of the auther of it.

To the Recruiting Officer in charge of the 207th Batt. at Chesterville Nov. 1st.

Dear Sir—My son informs me that he is determined to join your regiment, and that he is under age being but 17 years, he must have my consent, I have already given my husband but rather than my boy should go away and join and me not know his whereabouts I give my consent.

Trusting this is satisfactory.
Yours truly, E. HARRADINE

Lieut. Bogart Writes from Shorncliffe.

Dear Mother,

Well I have seen a bit of England and don't thiuk very much of it as yet, everything is strange, of course I may become accustomed to their ways. For instance if you go into a small restaurant it takes about two hours to get a small lunch.

I had a very nice trip over. There were about 3500 on our boat, the Lacona, and there were five more boats with us and a cruiser. When we were a day from Liverpool we were joined by another cruiser and five torpedo boat destroyers. The ocean was something like the St. Lawrence all the way across. I wasn't a bit sick. We were nine days on the way and landed in Liverpool on the 6th, as you noticed by my card, and were shipped to the Canadian Military College, Shorncliffe Camp. We landed here at 2 a.m. Saturday, good and tired. They kept us going all day Saturday and Sunday getting our papers fixed up. We are about three miles from a town by the name of Folkestone. It certainly is a very fine place, the houses are all surrounded by hedges. There is a walk along the ocean called The Leas about three miles long and it is lined with people every night. On a clear day you can see France and hear the guns. You can also see an aeroplane almost any time you want to look up.

The course here lasts three months if they are not too hard up for men in France before then.

I saw Earl McBride yesterday morning and his brother Claude. Claude is a Captain and dentist here and Earl is working for him. I met four fellows on the boat from the O. A. C. and also quite a few fellows I took the class with at Kingston.

We sure have lots of work here. They have us working all the time by what the fellows in the other course have to say.

Well I guess I will wind up as I haven't much more to say and it is time to eat, such as it is. Hoping you are all well,

Yours lovingly,
Howard.

Nearly a Million and Half for Red Cross

The Province of Ontario's response to the appeal of the British Red Cross has resulted in the subscription of $1,400,000 up to date, with a large number of municipalities yet to report.

Dundas County's contributions are as follows:—

Chesterville	$100
Mountain Township	100
Morrisburg	600
Winchester	500

In addition to these amounts it is expected that the municipalities not yet represented will be forthcoming with generous contributions and that the amounts given by the places above mentioned will be supplemented by further contributions from individuals, schools, Red Cross and other patriotic committees.

Unique Celebration at Finch

An interesting ceremony took place in the Presbyterian Church, Finch, when a large congregation assembled to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the ordination of Rev. Donald Stewart, of Finch, and Rev. James Hastie of Moulinette. The moderator of the Glengarry Presbytery, Rev. N. McLaren, of Woodlands, presided, and read many telegrams and letters congratulating the reverend gentlemen on attaining their half-century mark in the ministry.

An address from the Presbytery was read by Rev. Arpad Govan, of Williamstown and addresses were delivered by Rev. Dr. Harkness, of Cornwall, and Rev. W. D. Bell of Finch. Words of congratulation were also heard from Dr. D. O. Alguire, of Cornwall.

Mr. Stewart replied in an energetic speech, reviewing some incidents in his ministry and relating events in Church life, such as the great union in 1875. He spoke of Glengarry Presbytery as it was 50 years ago, and of his intercourse with such men as Anderson of Lancaster; Grant of Vankleek Hill, Gordon of Indian Lands; Burnet of Martintown: and MacNish of Cornwall.

Mr. Hastie has just returned from Blue Vale, Ont., where he had conducted jubilee services in the place where he was ordained 50 years ago as its first pastor. He reviewed the event of October 1866 and October, 1916, and gave many comparisons which proved interesting to all present.

Maple Leaf Condensed Milk Company Limited.

Be it enacted as a By-law of the Company, as follows:

The Head Office of the Company shall be at the Village of Chesterville, in the Province of Ontario, and at such place therein as the Directors may from time to time decide, instead of at the town of Walkerville.

Passed by the Directors this 23rd day of September, 1916.

(SEAL) President.
(Sgd.) H. C. Hooks
Secretary.

I, H. C. Hooks, Secretary-Treasurer of Maple Leaf Condensed Milk Company Limited, do certify that the foregoing is a true copy of By-law No. 6 of the said Company, which was passed by the Directors and confirmed by a vote of shareholders present or represented by proxy at a meeting duly called for considering the same and holding not less than two-thirds of the issued capital stock represented at such meeting.

Given under my hand and the seal of the Company this 3rd day of October, 1916.

(Sgd.) H. C. Hooks
(SEAL) Secretary-Treasurer.

He was Willing. Anyway.

A story has reached Canada from England of a soldier who happened to be on duty around a hospital for a time and one of the nurses ordered him to clean the stove. He was only an ordinary Tommy to her and he promptly got at the job. When finished she did not think it was a remarkable piece of stove cleaning and he could not conscientiously dispute this verdict. The truth was he had not been used to that particular branch of work. He was a bank manager from Canada.

Mike: "Yes?"

Pat: "He says, 'Every rib's gone. I've only one shoulder, and I expect my legs will be gone by the time you get this letter'."

Mike, "Poor fellow! Is he in hospital in France?"

Pat: "No, he is in a butcher's shop."

A Brief Explanation to the Citizens of Chesterville

I desire to draw your attention to some remarks made, at the meeting held in the Music Hall on Tuesday evening, by Captain Dancy, who came to Chesterville without any official authority by the citizens of Chesterville.

Captain Dancy made statements which were not correct and which leaves a false impression on the community.

On seven different occasions I have given the Music Hall free, for patriotic and recruiting meetings, but never did I receive "thank you"—for the same. Some people seem to think they should have control of my private property. Captain Dancy appears to be one of them. Not British Fair Play but Militarism. Now Sir, I distinctly state that I am willing to do my "Bit" as a loyal British Subject but I am not willing to be dictated to by Captain Dancy as to what I ought to do with my own property. The Town Hall was offered them, free on this occasion, which they did not accept. I believe I am voicing the sentiments of all the citizens, when I say that, we are willing to give the Town Hall free at any time for patriotic or recruiting meetings but do not think that any one person should bear the expense of heating, lighting, cleaning and etc., of a building for public meetings. What would any citizen hink if an announcement was made to told a meeting in their home, or office, without consulting them. That was done in this case, not-with-standing that the hall had been engaged for that evening by other parties. I intend to reply more fully to Captain Dancy's uncalled for remarks at the first opportuuity at a public meeting in the Music Hall. Your obedient Servant, W. HAMILTON

HELP YOUR NEIGHBOUR WITH HIS FIELD WORK

Special care of the stock should be taken with the intention of having the cattle in such good shape by Spring that they can go out early and rustle for themselves without taking any harm: and the horses so well fitted that they can stand the Spring's work without let-up. Dairy men might do a lot to make themselves popular by increasing the flow of milk this Winter and arranging for a larger number than usual of their cows to freshen in the Fall of next year.

The proper care of farm machinery should be given consideration at this time of year because if a new shed happens to be needed it should be started before heavy frost sets in; smooth running and absence of break-down in the field are more than ever desirable when labor is scarce. Among the relatively new ideas in farm machinery that have proved successful is the low down manure spreader; this is a great labor saver and can be used to advantage during a good part of the Winter season. Another great time and labor-saver is the milking machine and though dairy farmers are being put to much expense in procuring feed this year they might find one of these a paying investment at just such a time as the present. It is not worth while to withhold from buying labor-saving machinery now with the hope of a greater supply of help, or cheaper help, in the future, because although there will be more men available for farm work after the war, these men will be widely distributed and many of them will be their own masters on either rented or purchased farms in the newer districts.

A good living from farming can never again be made through the work of a lot of men at low wages, nor will it be possible to get along fairly well by hoarding one's cash receipts. The farmer of to-day and of the future in this country, will have to reinvest his money in his farm and keep increasing his business or he lose what he has. For the present, in order that farming in general may pull through the hard times, it is desirable that all shall co-operate as in the early days. Such co-operation need not entail a great deal of management or extra expense for officials. All that is needed is the old spirit of help your neighbors, and more work will be accomplished with benefit to everybody than is now the rule.

The way the rain is holding off this Fall is going to make plowing a hard job for those farmers who have clay soil on their farm. The few showers that have fallen have made lighter soils fit to work in some districts, and where this is the case neighbors should turn in and help where it is possible to do a day's work, with the understanding that the man benefited will repay them in kind as soon as their land is fit for the plow. even if they have to wait until Spring for favorable conditions. Of course there are men in every district who are more or less independent of their neighbors as regards getting their farm work done, but none is entirely so, and those that have the strongest force of men and horses at their command should do all they can toward getting the Fall plowing done in their district, for patriotic purposes as well as for selfish ones. The acreage in Fall-planted crop is not nearly so large as is desirable this year, and all the grain that can be put in next Spring will be needed to keep things going.

Growers have, this year two reasonable excuses for their poor crop; a poor season for weather, and lack of help, and though nobody can arrange the weather to suit him, much can be done to overcome the help shortage, by taking time by the forelock. For one thing, the farmer must make up his mind to stick to farming all winter, which means devoting more than ever of his time to care of his live stock and the drawing out of the manure during the winter months. With regard to the care of the manure, it is not wisdom to put it on the land when there is a heavy covering of snow, either broadcast which retards work in the Spring, or in small piles, which produce spottiness in the crop, but the leakage from big piles made in the field cannot be more wasted there than in the average barnyard, provided the piles are made on the higher spots. This making of big piles in the field also helps quick distribution with the spreader, when the ground is in fit condition for the work.

Cost of Drainage Repaid in one year

(From the Peterborough "Examiner")

We have before cited the advantages of under-draining, in Otonabee. This year, in spite of wet and drought, farmers with undrained lands have excellent crops, while on other lands there are inferior crops—mere apologies— or no crops at all, the wet weather of spring preventing seeding altogether. A North Monaghan farmer who, in addition to his annual tale of tile, last year, put in $700 worth of field tile, this year had a bumper crop and declared that the expenditure he made last year was paid for by the increased crop yield. But we have official, documentary, evidence of the benefits of underdraining farm lands in the Ontario Government's Public Service Bulletin. This report states that in two of the farms attached to public institutions, 55 miles of tiles had been laid under 750 acres. The results are astonishing. At Whitby, this year, there is a splendid crop of corn growing on a field that has never been broken since it was cleared—being too water-soaked to cultivate. In spite of this wet spring the land was planted in good time. The garden at Whitby, of similiar character, underdrained gave similiar good results. Last year, a field of 21 acres, underdrained, yielded in net profit—with all material, labour, manure, etc., charged—of $595.52 a sum which more than paid in one year the cost of drainage, the average cost of underdraining being $22.50 an acre. At Brockville a field of 36 acres, whose previous crop was ox-eye daisies and other weeds, yielded crops of the value of $1,176 a profit of $852.00 after all expenses were charged. Another field on the same farm, absolutely useless and growing water reeds, man-high, before it was undrained, last year produced 56 bushels of oats to the acre. At Orillia 200 acres in a past mill-pond and waste ground, is underdrained and yielding good crops. The conclusion of the Government, according to the report, is that the expenditure put on tile draining is abundantly justified by the truest touch-stone, results. Drain tiles laid under ground, form the foundation of profitable farm production.

The Government's Sheep-raising Plan

The counties of Peel, Durham, Glengarry, Dundas and Grenville are to be once more stocked with sheep, if a plan proposed by the Ontario Department of Agriculture shall work out as anticipated by its framers. In each of the counties named applications for pure-bred sheep will be received from farmers' sons and others who have taken one of the short courses under district representatives of the O. D. A., and who shall make a good showing in sheep-judging competitions soon to be held. To each successful applicant a flock of six ewes will be given. Those receiving them are to keep records of the cost, together with other data. For two years the ewes are to remain the property of those receiving them. At the end of two years from the time that they take them over they turn back to the Live Stock Branch two shearling ewes: at the end of the third year two more and at the end of the fourth year another two. By this period the boys will have given back six shearling ewes—the same number that they received. In addition the Government will supply pure-bred rams.

Relation of Investment to Farm Profits in Dairy Farms.

Statistical data, collected from the owners of 80 dairy farms in Wisconsin have given the following results: Distinguishing the farms according to size, the first group of 36 farms averaged 136 acres and had on the average a total investment of $18,500. The average profit on these farms, after all farm bills were paid, was $1,261 a year.

The second group of 44 farms averaged 204 acres in size and these had an average investment of $33,200. The net profit on these farms was but $805 a year. The difference in investment in these two groups of farms is due, mainly, to more acres and to larger and more elaborate buildings. These comparisons showed that the too large farm does not pay as well as the smaller and better managed place. Neither does it pay to build larger and better buildings than are required for necessary comfort and convenience. Financial records, secured from 300 farms with silos and 141 farms without silos, have shown the yearly net profit on the first to be $875 a farm, and on the second $535 a farm. The difference in favour of farms with silos is $340 a farm, which is enough to pay for a good silo once a year.

Distinguishing the first 89 dairy farms mentioned according to invested capital a first group of 55 have an average of $3,515 invested in operating or working capital, or 15.5 per cent of the total capital. These farms made a profit of $418 a farm a year.

The second group of 25 farms had an average of $10,475 invested in operating capital, or 29.5 per cent of the total capital. These farms made a profit of $2,312 a farm a year.

The writer therefore believes that to obtain good results the working capital of a dairy farm in Wisconsin should not be less than 25 per cent of the total capital.

Distinguishing the 80 farms according to the quantity and quality of live stock, the results were as follows: Twenty-seven farms with grade bulls and grade cows, valued at $744 a farm, made a profit of $439 a farm a year. Twenty-eight farms with pure-bred bulls and grade cows valued at $1,350 a farm, made a profit of $398 a farm a year. Eleven farms with pure-bred bulls and both grade and pure-bred cows valued at $4,521 a farm, made a profit of $1,266 a farm a year. Finally, fourteen farms with pure-bred bulls and pure-bred cows valued at $8,960 a farm, made a profit of $3,135 a farm a year.

With the exception of the second group the net profit is therefore closely related to the capital invested in cows, and increase in proportion to the increase both in number and in value of the cows.

Planting Bulbs.

(Youths Companion)

For those who like to have blooming bulbs in the house during the late fall and winter months, there is a simple method that requires little time and no skill. Paper-white narcissuses. Dutch-Roman hyacinths and daffodils are most easily grown, although tulips, crocuses and other bulbs that are capable of being forced can be grown without difficulty.

Use shallow six or eight-inch pots and any loose, sandy soil that you can get. Do the planting any time in October. If you do it later than that the results are not likely to be so satisfactory. Fill the pots partly full of soil and place the bulbs so that there shall be some space between them; then cover them with soil to the depth of perhaps an inch, water them freely, bury the pots in the ground outside, and cover them with soil to the depth of three inches. Mark the spot so that you will know where each variety of bulbs is buried. When the top of the ground begins to freeze, cover the buried bulbs with leaves to keep them from freezing. The buried bulbs will at once begin to grow, and will need no attention until they are ready to bring into the house.

Paper-white narcissuses develop most rapidly, but should be allowed to remain buried for at least five weeks. If you plant them about the 1st of October, you may dig them up about the 10th of November. When dug up, they should be watered and left in the cellar or some dark, cool place for a few days before they are brought into the full light. If placed in a cool, sunshiny window and watered freely, they will bloom by Thanksgiving. Other pots of narcissus may be brought in at intervals of a few days, to replace those that have finished blooming.

Dutch-Roman hyacinths will be ready to bring in by the middle of December, and other kinds of hyacinths later. Daffodils, crocuses and tulips should remain in the ground until about the 1st of February, and should be brought in at intervals until the 1st of March.

In that way, with little trouble and experience, one can have bulbs in bloom from November to April. There need be no fear of failure if, after the bulbs have been brought into the house, they get plenty of sunshine and water.

"What are you goin' to make out o' Josh?" inquired Farmer Perkins of Farmer Bates. "A lawyer, I guess," said the father, doubtedly. "He's goin' to be a professional man, and Ma wants him to be a doctor. But we'd want to show our confidence in him, and I figger that it 'ud be safer to take Josh's law than his medicine."

Must Have a License

For answer to an inquiry, the Game and Fisheries Department states that a license is required to take fur-bearing animals by any means, whether shot or trapped. This decision will put a crimp in the activities of the fox hunters in this section the coming winter.

BRITISH UP TO THE WAIST IN MUD AS THEY CHARGED

With the British Army on the Somme, Saturday, October 28.—There is no rest for the fifteenth Bavarians. Today again for the sixth time since Monday they have to fight for that string of shell craters whose lips, crumbling together make some sort of line which is what remains of Hazy trench. As related previously, this is the position opposite the British lines west of Lesboeufs. The lines have been already considerably straightened and simplified as a result of last week's fighting and five times already they have been bombed and bayonetted and rongh-and-tumbled out of it, and five times they have come desperately back.

Dewdrop trench, a little to the north of Hazy, is also attacked and already news has leaked out through the shell curtain that British troops have gained a footing in its northern end after a frightful struggle with that tenacious German ally, the mud of these fields. There was a trench between the British and Dewdrop. Rainy was the name of it on the trench map, but that troubles the British no longer. A constelation of machines guns lived there, and they, too are troublesome no longer. Rainy trench throughout its 180 yards of length has ceased to exist, and its wasps' nests have been gouged out of the ground by a week of cannonading.

The men wounded in this week of white-hot fighting in the blasted fields between Lesboeufs and Le Transloy speak chiefly of mud. They are to be found in the casualty clearing station between the battle lines. Great tents lead into other long, shadowy halls, where the wounded lie to each side. Such tents I have seen hundreds of times in Russia, but never such wounded. The Russian wounded man has always a childlike side of him, most developed when he brings his hurt back to be nursed. Then it is;

"Well, where have you got it?"

"In the leg, sir, and, God help me, it hurts a lot."

But here: "Got a puncture, sir; machine gun bullet, while we was going over the top. Yes, sir: rest was all I wanted. No, it don't hurt, nothin' to speak of."

One of them showed his face, on which the invalid's beard had grown like stiff fur, and his teeth smiled through it. The nose of a shrapnel had taken him upon the forward curve of his steel helmet, denting it and confusing his head, glancing thence and breaking his right arm. His tale was triumphant:

"Yes, Zenith trench, that was the name. We got in all right and then the Germans had just got their mail. We found it there. Letters they 'ad, and parcels. No, I don't know what was in the letters. Somebody took charge o' them, all right. But the parcels, there was bread and sossidge and little bottles that long"—he spanned five inches, with graphic splay-fingered hand—"of rum."

The grin again, and grins from neighboring patients. The shadows of the big marquee were aglint with grins.

"Good rum it was, too, sir," he added, sincerely.

Most of them spoke of the mud, which is the last ally to join Germany, the awful mud, which is the fourth element of war, as some squarehead truly commented. A child, who lay between two hairy men of war, told me about that. He looked like a pretty girl, with high roses on his thin cheeks, and his tumbled hair and his blankets drawn to his chin. He thrust them back to rise on his elbow and show himself a bony boy of 19.

"I was up to my waist, when we started to go across," he said. "I'd never have got out at all, but two chaps gave me a hand, and just hauled me out of the mud, and then my rifle was clogged and wouldn't fire. I did not get five yards."

"Whereabouts were you hit?" I asked him. He smiled. Mark that! he smiled.

"Neck, right arm, back and both legs." he replied, still smiling. He hesitated. "I've only been out six weeks," he added like one who makes excuses.

Then there was the mighty man with an accent as English as roast beef, who had, besides a bullet in the chest, a bayonet through his left upper arm. That was the gun pits, when they fought man to man in front of Hazy trench, and man to man covered the ground with dead Germans and took the pits. It is from those pits as the British have developed them that they are today attacking Hazy.

"Big beggar he was," he reminiscenced. "I saw him afterwards where 'e was lying on the ground. Red 'air 'e 'ad, too."

"Bayonetted you, did he? What did you do to him?"

"Clouted 'im over the 'ead with the butt, sir, and done 'im in proper. Reg'lar frightened me, it did, the way I went down on 'is back."

The ward grinned. Each man there knew that, feeling probably the fear of seeing your man go down, the man that you have hurt. That is the way they were taught to feel when they fought honest fighters and the habit sticks.

Fought a Battle Three Miles in Air.

Rome, Oct. 27.—A fight between an Italian dirigible and an Austrian aeroplane at a height of more than three miles over the Albanian coast, resulting in the aeroplane being shot down and the dirigible afterward being destroyed by its own officer inside the Austrian lines, was told today when King Victor Emmanuel conferred medals for valor on three members of the Italian Air Corps.

On the morning of October 12, while off the Albanian coast, an Italian dirigible piloted by Captain Ercote, with Captain Corbelli and Captain Albino as observers, was surprised and attacked at a height of 16,000 feet by Austrian aeroplane.

The aeroplane on obtaining a favorable position turned its machine gun on the dirigible, mortaly wounding the observers and disabling Captain Ercole's left arm, Ercole, however, according to the official account, succeeded in overcoming the aeroplane and in killing the pilot, but the dirigible was obliged to land thirty miles within the enemy lines.

Captain Ercole destroyed the dirigible and after two days of wandering and suffering from cold and hunger, managed to elude the mountains, finally reached the Italian camp on the River Voyusa.

King Victor Emmanuel to-day conferred a gold medal for valor on Captain Ercole and silver medals on Captains Corbelli and Albino.

FOGHORN M'DONALD JOY OF THE CANADIAN ARMY

London, Oct. 2?—"Foghorn" McDonald admits he's as "Scotch as oatmeal," but what he doesn't have to admit is that he is beyond doubt the best known man in the wonderful big army Canada has sent over to fight for the mother country. General Sir Sam Hughes, Canadian Minister of Militia and Defence, is not jealous of "Foghorn's" distinction. The rawest rookie in the rearmost ranks of the Dominion forces proclaims it on the fighting line, and looks up to this world-wandering scion of the clan McDonald as a shining example of what a lowly buck can do in trying times like these.

For "Foghorn" came over as a Private himself just two short years ago. Some of his homefolks told him he was an "old fool" to enlist at fifty-three. But "Foghorn" had been a miner all his days. He had hit the western trail from sunbaked Batopilus in the wilds of Mexico to the snow-shrouded valleys of the Yukon, and he knew what perseverance and pluck and courage and sacrifice could do.

"Foghorn" was born Neil Roderick McDonald, but there are comparatively few who know him by that distinguished name. It's just plain "Foghorn" nowadays from one end of the trenches to the other, and one earful of that low, rumbling, window-shattering, rock-shivering voice explodes all possible doubt as to the derivation of the nickname.

There are plenty of Germans who know "Foghorn." too. In the days of the deathly deadlock, when trenches crept closer and closer together, he was one of those who burrowed beneath the earth and set off great mines under the enemy. He had not been a mining engineer in vain. Often his voice would go booming across "No Man's Land" hurling picturesque invective at the Germans.

No. to know "Foghorn" McDonald is to miss one of the big human personalities of this war. It is not difficult to realize what a tower of encouragement and strength he is to the soldiers at the front.

"He is a sort of officer whose men would follow him anywhere and walk in laughing," declared Major "Eddie" Holland, a long-time friend, and a V. C. of the South African War.

"Foghorn" has been serving for some time as transport officer of the "Black Devils," and has been riding about the front lines on what he describes himself as "a mighty fine hoss." Where he got the horse he will not tell you. "It wouldn't be passed by the censor," he says.

A transport officer tries to keep his losses at a minimum and to make the deficiencies good as quickly as he can. "Foghorn" had his men trained to the minute in that respect.

"One night," he said, "we were taking some loads of ammunition away up in front. It was blacker than the ace of spades, and if you struck a match you'd get your eye shot out. But in the midst of all this blackness and the shelling we were getting I heard one of my men say to his partner; Keep your eye out for a good hoss, Bill, this ought to be a good night to get one."

A day or two ago a Staff Colonel fresh from Canada, walked into the Savoy "Club," where Foghorn, who was on furlough, was making a short call.

"Hello, Foghorn," he called out; I heard you a couple of blocks down the street and came in to see you. Do you remember me?"

"Remember you?" repeated "Fog," "why, bless your brass-hatted old soul, I'd know your hide in a tanyard."

A "brass-hat" is the army name for all Staff officers, and it comes. of course from the abundance of gold braid they wear on their caps.

Someone asked how things were going at the front.

"Going!" said "Fog," "why, the boys are getting so gay out there one of our battalions came parading up to the front line trench the other day with a brass band playing for all it was worth. They were right where you could get killed any minute, too, and even my old hoss thought they were crazy.

"Guess I'll be getting back to the front soon myself," he concluded, with a sigh: "this quiet life of London is getting on my nerves."

Three Drowned In North Hastings

Belleville, Oct, 27.—Deer Lake, in the Township of Cashel, in the northern part of Hastings County, was on Tuesday the scene of a triple tragedy. Mr. John Loveless, a farmer; Mr. R. Taylor. cheesemaker at Gunter, and a neighbor, a boy were conveying in a boat camp supplies for the opening of the deer season when the craft upset. On Wednesday the boat was found floating on the lake, as were also some of the supplies. A search of the lake for the bodies has so far proved futile.

Cheese Markets

(Monday's Gazette)

A stronger feeling has prevailed in the cheese situation during the week and the tendency of prices upward, which was attributed to the renewed demand from English importers for supplies, the steady buying for Government account, and the fact that some round lots were purchased on spot by a local buyer for export account, consequently the market on the whole has been more active, with a larger volume of business doing. At the boards throughout the country the advance in prices ranged from ⅛c. to 1 1-16c per lb., as compared with last week, the highest figures paid being 22¼c, at Sterling and Picton, and the lowest 21⅞c, at St. Paschal and Mont Joli. The receipts for the week show an increase owing to the fact that 7,839 boxes were received from the United States. According to advices received here some factories in certain sections of the country have already stopped making cheese and gone on to butter for the balance of the season.

Storms and Rough Weather Looked For

Washington, D. C. Oct. 28—Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross continent Oct. 31 to Nov. 4, warm wave Oct. 30 to Nov. 3, cool wave Nov. 2 to 6. A great fall in temperature will occur from Oct. 28 to Nov. 5, and near later date frosts will penetrate to cotton belt, putting a stop to top growth of much cotton. About date of this bulletin storms of great force are expected on the continent and the Atlantic, including a hurricane in the Caribbean Sea. Central America and parts of the southern states will get heavy rains from these storms, while more moderate rains will be general farther north.

Next warm wave will reach Vancouver about Nov. 6 and temperatures will rise on all the Pacific slope. It will cross ridge of Rockies by close of Nov. 7. Plains sections 8, Great Lakes and Ohio Valleys 9, eastern sections 10, reaching Newfoundland about Nov. 11. Storm wave will follow about one day behind warm wave and cool wave about one day behind storm wave.

Preceding this storm the temperatures will be unusually low but will rapidly rise to high degrees just before the storm breaks the quiet. This storm will be fully equal to the preceding and, while it is a little late for hurricanes, one may organize to the east of the Caribbean Sea about Nov. 9. Most rains of this storm will fall in Central America and Mexico, less rains in the cotton states and moderate rains farther north. Just preceding this storm a cool wave is expected but the cool wave following the storm is not expected be a cold wave. To constitute a cold wave the temperature must fall as much as twenty degrees within twenty-four hours and go as low as 32 or freezing,

We are advising farmers and planters to sell their grain and cotton now. They might get better prices by holding till next year but the risks are too great. Of course every farmer could hold enough grain to last till the next crop is assured. Farmers and planters are in the hadit of holding their products while prices are rising and then selling while they are falling. That is a bad policy and they often lose by it.

Some grass producing sections will not get good grass crops next year. As their is no abundance of hay this year those who have a surplus should determine whether to hold over. We are not sure as to the best methods of keeping old hay, but in many respects baled hay would be an economical method.

Northern parts of Argentina crops have been damaged by drouth but the best crop producing section lies near latitude 30 and their crop season for November is about same as ours for May in vicinities of New Orleans, Houston and Galveston. Therefore crops that would be benefitted in those gulf coast vicinities by good rains beginning near April 26 are expected to be similarly benefitted in the best sectious of Argentina by good rains beginning near Oct. 26 this year.

Strictly In It.

A very sensitive curate was undertaking to preach on Jonah and the whale.

"And for three days and three nights," he began, "Jonah was in the—"

He blushed, stammered, stopped, and then started again. "For three days and three nights Jonah was in the—"

Once more he was covered with confusion, and once more he stopped and mopped his face, from which the perspiration was literally pouring, with his handkerchief.

Then he gathered his courage in both hands, and with a mighty effort he finished triumphantly; "And for three days and three nights Jonah was in the society of the whale!"

WHY I should select a Mutual Policy!

FIRST -Because in a mutual company the assets are the sole property of the Policy-holders

2—Because in a mutual company ALL of the profits go to the policy-holders.

3—Because in a mutual company the executive is directly responsible to the policy-holders: ALL the directors are policy-holders' directors.

4—Because mutual companies hold the record for stability.

5—Because mutual companies have all the "safety first" features of stock companies with mutuality thrown in.

6—Because the largest American companies are already mutual or seriously considering mutualization, and already more than one-half of legal reserve insurance is mutual.

7—Because mutual companies are not built up in the interest of the FEW, but of the MANY.

Therefore I will take for mine
