Cardinal Youth Sentenced to Hang

Ronald Reid, 17, of Cardinal was yeserday convicted of murder in the gun and bludgeon slaying last August 23rd of Benjamin Spillerman, 50 year old Cardinal merchant, and was sentenced to be hanged January 10th.

A jury in Ontario Supreme Court at Brockville, deliberated 45 minutes in returning its verdict, it recommended that Reid be shown mercy because of his youth.

The trail judge, Mr. Justice Wilfred Judson, said the jury's reccommendations will be sent on to the proper authorities.

During the three-day trial the Crown called 27 witnesses, one of whom said Ronald laughed as he told of the slaying. No evidence was offered by the defense. Reid, one of the youngest persons ever to be put on trial for murder i n a Canadian court of law, remained calm. He occasionally frowned, but ohterwise his face was expressionless.

Spilledman was found stabbed, shot and bludgeoned in his store near Reid's home Aug. 23. Although the cash register had been rifled, more than $2.000 was found in Spillerman's pockets. Reid was arrested a week after the body was found.

A statement poilce said Reid gave them was admitted in evidence. It quoted the youth as saying he shot, stabbed and beat Spillerman.

It was taken by Inspector R. H. Wannell of the Ontario Provincial Police after Reid's arrest, police said. The statement quoted Reid as saying he entered the store after "thinking of all that money Benny had up there".

Spillerman was standing behind the counter with a pair of scissors in his hand, when he entered, the statement continued.

"I told him to put up his hands", the statement said. "He put them up and started walking back to where the shoes are back there. When we were going back there he turned around quick and he stabbed at me with the scissors.

"I grabbed the scissors away from him. Then he turned around and he tripped, I guess, and the gun went off, and kept going off, I guess.

"I still had the scissors in my hand and I stabbed him with the scissors. Benny picked up a broom that was standing there, and kept hitting me with it, or tried to hit me, but he hit a bunch of shoes and knocked them down. I took the broom away from him, and kept hitting him with it until it broke. Then I went out."

Earlier, three former cell mates of Reid testified the youth told them he "shot and cut up" Spillerman.

John Brugma, 17, of Lyn, said Reid told he had been arrested for murder, and that he "killed Benny Spillerman".

"He said he fired three times and then emptied the gun", Brugma testified. He told me he took the scissors from Spillerman's hand and cut him up as Spillerman cried, "Don't kill me".

Lawrence Bovin, 34 of Kemptville, testified Reid told him he "killed Mr. Spillerman, that he shot him and that he carved him up with a pair of scissors."

He said Reid remained calm while describing the scene.

Donald McDade, 19, of Brockville, testified Reid told him he was in jail for killing a Cardinal merchant.

"He told me the gun went off five times and that the man attacked him with a pair of scissors. After he told me about it he started laughing and he said he'd probably get hung".

45th ANNIVERSARY FOR MR. AND MRS. DURHAM WELLS

On Friday night, Ocvtober 7th, many relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Durham Wells, Williamsburg, gathered at Colquhoun United Church hall to celebrate with them their 45th wedding anniversary. The host and hostess were their two children, Graham Wells of Colquhoun and Mrs. Ed. Lanigan (Madge), of Kingston.

It was on October 12th, 1910$, that Rev. H. S. Osborne of the Methodist Church, Morrisburg, united the couple in marriage. Mrs. Wells, the former Carrie Lane, is the daughter of the late Jacob Lane and his wife, Ellen Becker, and Mr. Wells is the youngst son of the late George Wells and his wife, Amanda Tinkess. They have resided all their life on their farm in Williamsburg Township. Both are members of the United Church at Colquhoun. where Mr. Wells is an elder and Mrs. Wells is a member of the choir and a past vice president of the Dundas-Grenville Presbyterial of the W.M.S.

The bride and groom of 45 years ago entered the hall to the strains of "Here Comes the Bride", played by Wesley Bedingfield, Aultsville. Mrs. Wells wor a black crepe dress with a draped skirt and a corsage of red roses.

During the evening, a sing-song was led by Oscar Lane, Aultsville, with Wesley Bedingfield at the piano Piano solos were played by Mrs. Lillie Dafoe, Aultsville and duets by Mrs. Merle Wells and Wes Bedingfield. Duets were sung by Mrs. Geo. Geo. Marcellus and Ruth and Martha Sharon and little Carson Wells. Congratulations and greetings were given by Frank Dafoe and Grant Black, nd a reading by Mervyn Wells.

A beautifully worded address was read by Thorold Lane, Aultsville, and Ernest Wells, Aultsville, made the presentation. Little Mary Ellen Lonigan presened her grandmother with a lovely bride's book designed bp Mrs. G. Wells. Boh Mr. and Mrs. Wells made fitting replies.

They were the recipients of many beautiful and useful gifts, among them being a chest of silver from the family. They also received messages of congratulations and a sheaf off roses from Dr. and Mrs. Duncan Boucher, Kingst n and Mrs. Edward Wells, Belleville, who were unable to be present.

The hall was tastefully decorated for the occasion with baskets of autumn flowers and blue and white streamers.

The tea table was adorned with a lace cloth centered with a bowl of American Beauty roses and a three-tier wedding cake.

Tea was poured by Mrs. A. Prunner, Morrisburg, Mrs. Fay Droppo, Finch, Mrs. Thorold Lane, Aultsville and Mrs. Cecil McConnell, Massena, N.Y. Three nieces assisted in serving Mrs. Charles McConnell and Mrs. Floyd Anderson, Aultsville and Mrs. Colbourne Hess, Morrisburg.

Mr. Cecil McConnell, Massena, proposed a toast to the bride and groom and all joined in singing "Blessed Be the Tie that Binds".

Jogging Around

By the Editor

We, who live in and enjoy all the freedoms of the Western World are perhaps too inclined to become smug and to look down our nose at some of the unenlightened practise in the other parts of the world. We are perhaps too prone to become self-righteous about our way of living. In one of the most prominent men's magazines, in a recent issue, there appeared an article undre the by-line of Mayor Clough (pronounced Kluff) of Galveston Texas. Mayor Clough recently attained his high office on a single slogan, and by an overwhelming majority, with his slogan being broadcast over his own radio station KLUF, Galveston (population 75,-000). His slogan was this: I favor a clean and open town. And by that I mean I favor regulated gambling and prostitution.

While we have those in public office in our own midst who think in this manner, it will be of little use to try to reform those who inhabit the other parts of the world, which we may sometimes think of as "godless".

Several delegates attending the recent CWNA convention in Vancouver expressed surprise when they learned that the television network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation had refused advertising submitted by a sister media, radio station CKNW of New Westminster. They pointed out that this was hardly consistent in view of the network accepting paid advertising to publicize the adantages of using the Yellow Pages of the telephone directory.

William Wrea, director-owner of Radio Station CKNW offered a contract to CBC under which Mr. Rea would purchase television time to bring his story of radio in general, and CKNW in particular, to the attention of TV viewrs.

He was refused time. He was told that his service was not the type acceptable to CBC. In other words, he was not merchandising a product such as soap, coffee or automobiles.

Mr. Rea, under the impression that this would apply to all television outlets, took his problem to the United States. After an interview with KING TV and KOMO TV in Seattle, Mr. Rea was assured that his contract would be acceptable to them.

As a Canadian Mr. Rea would prefer to spend his money in Canada, assisting what he understands is a Canadian Institution. But, he points out, it is apparent that "CBC is getting sufficient funds from the taxpayers and does not need the advertising revenue which I am willing to provide". He claims that this type of aition is not healthy for the economy. It smacks too much " a bureaucracy and should not be permitted".

"I hope", he said, "to arouse the Canadian public to a recognition of the dictatoria' methods employed by CBC and erhaps som echanges may be made which will enable advertisers in similar situations as mine to obtain time over the CBC television network".

ANNE HIRST
Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: How long shall a girl wait to marry the man she loves? My fiance and I are 23 and we've dated over a year, but his circumstances make marriage something we must wait years for. I simply cannot bear to keep on seeing him, knowing I'll be nearly 30 before he is able to support a wife.

"His father died recently, leaving little but responsibilities, which my fiance has inherited He has a younger brother and sister who are still in school: he feels his first obligation is to them and his mother, and he must keep her from worrying. I know them all and they are grand people, awfully sweet to me. He makes a good income but it takes nearly all of it to support the family.

"We have talked things over. He thinks we should break the engagement (in fairness to me) but still date each other

"If th engagement is ended it will be the end for me. I am too deeply in love to be with him often with marriage so far off; the emotional strain is too much . . . I have a good position and wouldn't mind keeping it, but we both want a family.

"I think he is fine to be so loyal, but when I think of my own future I wonder whether I should wait indefinitely, not seeing him at all?

DESOLATION"

Two courses are open: marry your fiance and move in with his family, contributing part of your salary to the general expenses.

Or break the engagement definitely, and resume the social life you had before you met him.

I never advise living with in-laws unless there is no other way open. In this instance, there would be compensations: his people like you, and you are intelligent enough to leave the running of the home in his mother's capable hands. You will not have the privacy you prefer but at least you two will be man and wife, sharing joys and problems, growing to understand and love each other more.

It is a pity you seem so emotionally adolescent that you cannot enjoy being with your fiance once the engagement is broken. Many a girl would welcome this solution, learn to control her impulses, and use her energies to encourage the man and inspire him to the greater success that will bring the wedding date nearer. However, you know yourself and if the idea is beyond your acceptance, that is that.

If you are left alone, don't sit back and resign yourself to maidenhood. Cultivate your former friends; dating them will divert you and keep your social life active. You have gone with this young man only about a year, and it is not unforseeable that another will attract you.

When the youngsters learn their brother's engagement is broken, it may spur the boy to fresh ambitions so he can begin helping out earlier than he planned. At least it will be a start toward relieving the man of the entire responsibility.

You feel you are at an impasse, but it is my opinion it exists mainly in your own mind. Your fiance will need your moral support more than ever during the coming few years; and perhaps you will feel, after all, that your place is by his side either in his home or encouraging him as you fill the role of fiancee-in-waiting.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

Gwendoline D Clarke

Lovely, beautiful weather . . . just right for local fall fairs and other end of season activities. How nice it would be if one could visit all the small fairs that are held from now to the end of October. Perhaps some people might say—"Why bother—one fair is much like another." With that I don't agree. True, every fair has more or less the same classes for competition and exhibits. There are cattle, pigs, poultry and horses; baking, sewing and fancy-work; trotting races and the midway. But yet there is an individuality about each fair that makes it a little different from any other fair. And of course each fair draws its main crowd from a different locality besides the regular attendants who make a practice of visiting each fair within easy driving distance.

Well, there was a show last Saturday that Partner and I would like to have gone to but we just couldn't as we had visitors that afternoon. However, we did have one good treat over the week-end—by putting in an appearance at the Military Massed Band Concert at the Exhibition Grandstand Sunday night. We all went—Dee and Art, Bob and Joy—yes, and even Dave. Bob drove us down and brought us back home

This is the eighth consecutive year the Massed Band Concert has been held. Partner and I have always wanted to go but other years it did not seem worth the effort because there were always so many chores to do before we could get away. This year it is very different.

What is there about Service bands that makes such a strong appeal to the imagination? How could anyone listen to the skirl of the bagpipes; watch the rhythmic swing of the kilts of the Scottish regiments and remain unmoved. Other bands too—bugle, trumpet and massed brass bands—all had a special appeal. Without a doubt military music is the best recruiting agent that ever existed

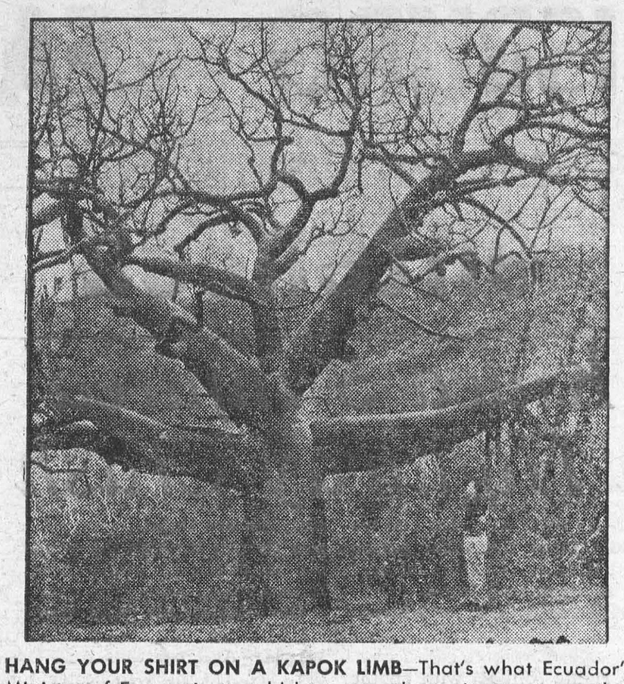
One selection played last night by the Trumpet Bands was "Unto the Hills". It was beautiful. I would have been quite happy had they played it over and over again. And then just before the "Last Post" the massed Military and Brass Bands played "Abide With Me." while a white cross mounted at the back of the platform was shown up in relief by the beam of a mauve-tinted spotlight. Simultaneously the Union Jack was lowered from the Flag Staff. It must have been a proud but sorrowful moment for those who had lost a husband, sons, brothers or sweetheart in either of the two World Wars.

We had wonderful seats half way up the grandstand. From that distance you wouldn't think it possible to recognize any one person. But we did. As the Massed Pipe Band marched to the front of the Grandstand - Partner exclaimed —"Look, isn't that Finlay out front?" Sure enough, it was one of our neighbour boys from over on the next concession, who belongs to the Lorne Scots Regiment. We knew him by his bearing and since he was one of the Drum Majors he was easy enough to spot—especially as I believe he is over six feet in height.

Well, it was a most enjoyable evening, even for Dave. For at least half of the programme he was all eyes and ears, listening entranced to the music —and when everyone else clapped, he clapped too. Eventually the sandman was all-powerful and Dave stretched out full length across his mother's and daddy's knees and went to sleep as peacefully as if he were at home in his cot. But when we got to Dee's place he was wide awake again and joined our midnight snack party. Our babies were never allowed such privileges but present-day children seem to get away with it without apparently suffering any adverse consequences. I don't know how they do it.

It is ridiculously warm again today—the "probs" are for 85—and it was 90 yesterday. But you can't fool the birds. They know that the fall season is just around the corner. This morning there were four blue-jays in the apple tree just outside our bedroom window. We have hardly seen or heard one all summer. And then I looked at the hydro wires down the lane. They were black for quite a distance because of the large number of starlings perched there. When it gets to near sundown I notice other birds congregate in large numbers before going to roost—a sure sign that fall is in the air.

Another sign is well-filled fruit shelves in the basement. So help me, I don't want to see another pear for quite awhile. Why they have to ripen a few at a time I'll never know. I had a bushel of Bartletts — and I was doing pears every day for a week. Oh well, I expect they will taste pretty good when the time comes to eat them—and after all that is the main thing.



HANG YOUR SHIRT ON A KAPOK LIMB—That's what Ecuador's Ministry of Economics would have you do, as it announces that it is making large tracts of land available to those who would cultivate the living "general store," hitherto harvested only from wild growth. Bark is used in manufacture of twine, sacks, nets, hammocks and cloth. Hairlike fruit fibre, lighter than cotton, is used for stuffing floats, life preservers, cushions. Seed fiber, very elastic, far exceeds cork in floatation qualities and is used in lifesaving devices, clothing and upholstery. Seed also yields oil for soap making and feed cake for livestock. The Kapok tree is said to be both rain and drought resistant.

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

• A common question during the heat of the world's baseball series is this: when did the series start? And the common answer is 1930.

Probably that was the first year in which it was termed the "world series" but facts are that an inter-league series dates away back into the 80's

Modern baseball record books don't use the term "world series" in connection with inter-league series earlier than 1884. In that year Old Hoss Radbourne, pitching his most famous brand of baseball, helped the National League champ, Providence, mow down the Metropolitans of the American Association in a 3-0 series. These were the days of three strikes and six balls.

In 1882 Cincinnati, having been barred from the National League previously, joined the American Association and won the title. But, on the authority of George Moreland in his book, "Balldom," and also of the late Al Spink, uncle of J G. Taylor Spink of the Sporting News and author of "The National Game," world championship series did not begin until 1884.

Both authorities credit Anson's Chicago team with playing its first "world series" with the St. Louis Browns in 1885 and its second series in 1886. These two sets of games really launched baseball on its "world championhip" career which has led to such immense popularity and to many "million dollar gates."

In 1887, when St. Louis Browns played the Detroit team for the "world" championship, spectators witnessed for the first and only time an unusual batting spectacle The batsman was allowed FOUR strikes. This was done away with the next year.

In 1886, the "world series" was bitterly fought for the very good reason that it was a winner-take-all affair, unlike the winner-loser split that prevails in more modern times

THEIR NIGHTMARE ENDS—Dr. and Mrs. Sanford Marcus are joyfully reunited at Stockton, Calif., with their 11-day-old infant son, Robert, who was kidnapped when two days old from a San Francisco hospital. The self-confessed kidnapper, Mrs. Betty Jean Benedicto, turned the baby over to a priest.

Don't Start Packing For Trip to Mars

Earthlings had better forget about making reservations for rocket trips to the moon or Mars, according to a prominent Greek natural scientist. Prof. P. Santorinis of the Polytechnic School of Athens maintains that space travel at present is an "impossibility."

"Would-be space travelers should unpack their baggage for, under present circumstances, there is no possibility of interplanetary journeys," says the professor of physics.

What human beings cannot combat, according to Professor Santorinis, is the danger of "meteorites" and 'cosmic dust," as well as cosmic "radiation."

The meteorites and the cosmic dust, which fill the space between the various planets, would act as bombshells against the space ship used for the interplanetary journey. "There is no shield which could protect the space ship from cosmic dust and meteorites," he said.

On the other hand, "cosmic radiation" cannot be adequately faced or estimated, he states.

The problem of "gravity" of the human body, once it comes out of the earth's atmosphere and gravity, can be solved only if the space ship revolved round its axis, thus causing an "artificial" field of gravity.

What Professor Santorinis however, considers as possible is the sending of an unmanned rocket into the stratosphere, and even as far as the moon, "without it being completely destroyed" before reaching the other planet.

In connection with the question of launching small unmanned earth-circling satellites, Professor Santorinis says that this is feasible, but that such satellites would be "absolutely valueless" for military purposes.

Modern Etiquette

Q. How should a woman be governed about rising from her chair to show respect to an older woman?

A. In most cases, she should rise for a woman more than double her own age. Much depends, of course, upon the "older woman." Older women who are trying to appear very young might resent any obvious show of deference. Old-fashioned, comfortably older women, on the other hand, would probably like it very much.

Q. When setting the table for dinner guests, where should the napkins be placed, if not directly on the plates?

A. At the left of the plates.

Q. Should a man use his right or left hand when tipping his hat to a woman?

A. Either hand.

Q. When a woman's escort holds a door open for her, is it necessary for her to thank him?

A. No; this courtesy should be taken for granted. However, if a stranger were to do this for her, she must, of course, say, "thank you."

Land of Quietness Up The Saguenay

"Remember, it is not to be played with, this river," said our outfitter in Tadoussac.

"Thank you," I replied for Tam McCulloch and myself. "One must be as cautious with the Saguenay as with a lion."

So we pointed our canoe upstream into the silent reaches of the untamed river on that morning of late summer.

"What is this, another Hudson?" Tam exclaimed as the headlands closed off civilization behind us.

"You'll see. It has the nobility of the Hudson as the Dutch explorers saw it, but for wildness the Hudson no more resembles it than a cat resembles a lynx."

When the world was young, travel was discovery. The better part of travel is discovery still, the coming upon things which are essentially our own. So it was with us on that day of freedom when each stroke of the paddle sped us where space once more became dominant in the mind.

Perhaps our first discovery, or rediscovery, was the satisfaction of simplicity. Our world was horizontal water and perpendicular cliff beneath the arc of sky. Yet of these three lines and a little color, nature composed variations of infinite number and subtlety. Throughout the trip, planned for a week and stretched into a fortnight, this simplicity gained in richness, the inconceivable richness that hides itself from those who gulp and run, writes T. Morris Longstreth in The Chirstian Science Monitor.

One of the pleasantest discoveries on my part was finding how surely Tam had affianced himself to the people who had become a part, a sort of natural resource, of this noble region. I had forseen that my friend, who has never been naturalized to haste, would appreciate the descendants of New France in the habitant households on the green shores. I knew that the Scots had ever felt an affinity with the Franks. But these French Canadians not only were Normans old style, in the remoter places; they had been purified of the superfluities of Europe by centuries of wilderness living Tam found himself quietly responsive and at home whenever we beached our canoe to seek provision.

We rediscovered stability at the same time. The fluidity of life at home sweeps everything into its current and threatens to wash us into space. Anyone caught living where he was born is deemed hopelessly backward, an unawakened van Winkle. The habitant, on the contrary, cherishes and clings to his hard-won acres. One of the little noted miracles is the quiet transformation of labor into love. The necessary deed is remembered with affection. The habitant's woodpile and garden, his dwelling and the road to it, become a part of him. A white church, a handful of neighbors housed in stone-solid homes instead of a contractor's speculation, are his treasure. They served a prior instinct in my friend, reminding him of his boyhood security backed by the earth itself.

True, the families overflowed. The young men sought work in the cities, and some were lost to mammon. But many carried memories of fishing and hunting and singing together and the rare freedom of that life which ran hand in hand with the impulse of the heart. Best of all, tney had known a close-knit family life that was at once a discipline and a contentment.

One afternoon of thunder Tam and I were taken under the wing of the family Duchesneau. After a brief taste of Madame Duchesneau's sovereignty, Tam whispered to me, "Now I understand matriarchy. It's monarchy with the democratic touch."

Certainly Madame Duchesneau's subjects — husband and eleven children—revolved about the enthroned head with the neatness and assurance of the solar system. Her accents, when she wished something done, and at once, might have echoed le Roi Soleil. Her disposition supplied the sunlight of this arrangement, while her determination provided the power. She delegated duties to every graduate of the cradle, yet I have never seen children happier or more cheerfully obedient. Willingness was the orbit in which they moved. Astonishingly they were handsome, as the young who have the run of woods and waters tend to be. I doubt if all the agencies of reform could find a delinquent juvenile in a day's travel along that austere river.

When the sun emerged, I noticed the older boys putting their heads together. The question that came shyly was this: Would my friend and I like to go fishing?

"The gentlemen will not enjoy the flies," Madame Duchesneau said definitely. The look of breathless anticipation in the young eyes faded, but I had to agree with her.

For another thing, we rediscovered quiet. This heavenly realization had begun the first evening under canvas. We had pitched the tent near the darkening river. At our backs rose the twofold night of the forest, and farther back the cliffs.

"The final luxury," Tam sighed. "To be safe from noise."

Actually the air was busy carrying sounds — the lap and splash of the tidal waters, the crackle of sparks from our fire, the flow of wind in the trees, and at intervals the night cry of some bird or thud of falling boulder. I knew what Tam meant. At home our daily life had been more and more invaded by the noise of contraptions; in my case, to the saturation point.

"What makes it hard to bear," Tam went on, "is that you and I remember a life when quiet was the normal thing and noise was occasional. Now it's nearly continuous from one quarter or another, and more airplanes blast the quiet overhead every year."

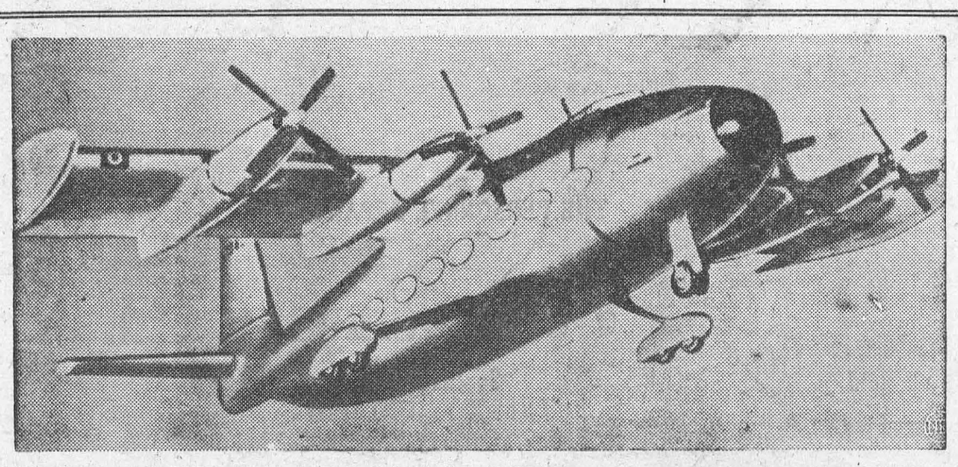
"With me it's not only the noise but the outrage," I agreed. "If a thief invades my privacy and steals something, the police do what they can. But when nobody else's racket occupies my home, the law throws up its hands. Yet it is a thief, too. This situation violates my sense of justice."

Tam knew what concerned me, for quiet is a pool in whose calm, elusive thoughts can rise to the top. Quiet is the arena of future deeds. There is immensely more in us than we are aware, and quiet is the invitation for it to appear.

"Madame Duchesneau would know how to handle it," Tam said. "Perhaps you and I are children all over again in this life of machines and must be disciplined. By ourselves, I suppose."

"Meanwhile there is this," I said.

Tam made no rejoinder and we let the quiet flow about us.



FUTURE TRANSPORT?—This is a model of the Frye F-1 cargo and passenger plane which may someday replace the DC-3. The plane, a prototype of one scheduled to fly next year, will have a 50-passenger capacity and will operate from airports half the size required by DC-3's.

Pay For Silence

Why hasn't someone thought of it before?

Jukeboxes are fun, but there are times when frequenters of inns and cafes wish they did not have to take their refreshment to the accompaniment of a blaring rendering of the tunes of the moment.

Now Bavarian jukebox manufacturers have got the answer. They can please both types of customers — and suffer no loss of revenue. In other words, you can now place 30 pfennigs (about fourpence) in the jukebox and buy — three minutes of silence.

"The more tranquil - minded deserve a break, just as much as music fans," says an official of one company, "so each machine now has, in addition to its quota of popular tunes, an 'intermission record' which runs off noiselessly."

People who dislike music with their meal can be seen hurrying to the jukebox to insert their money and secure a short spell of silence before someone else causes the air to be filled with the wails of their favourite crooner.

So, both ways, business is good for the Bavarian jukebox boys.

SOMETHING NEW UNDER THE SUN

In response to the demand for a more comprehensive form of children's insurance, the Sun Life of Canada announces the new Junior Adjustable Assurance, a policy which:

1. Permits regular small payments which will be greatly to the child's advantage when he reaches 21.
2. Starts assurance coverage at the early ages when the premium is lowest. Premium never increases.
3. Provides a death benefit prior to age 21 in keeping with the protection usually required at such younger ages.
4. Is flexible, permits a wide choice of valuable options and a considerable increase in face value (actually to five times the original amount) at age 21, without medical examination.
5. Ensures protection should the child later become uninsurable.

Let me show you what this plan can do for your son.

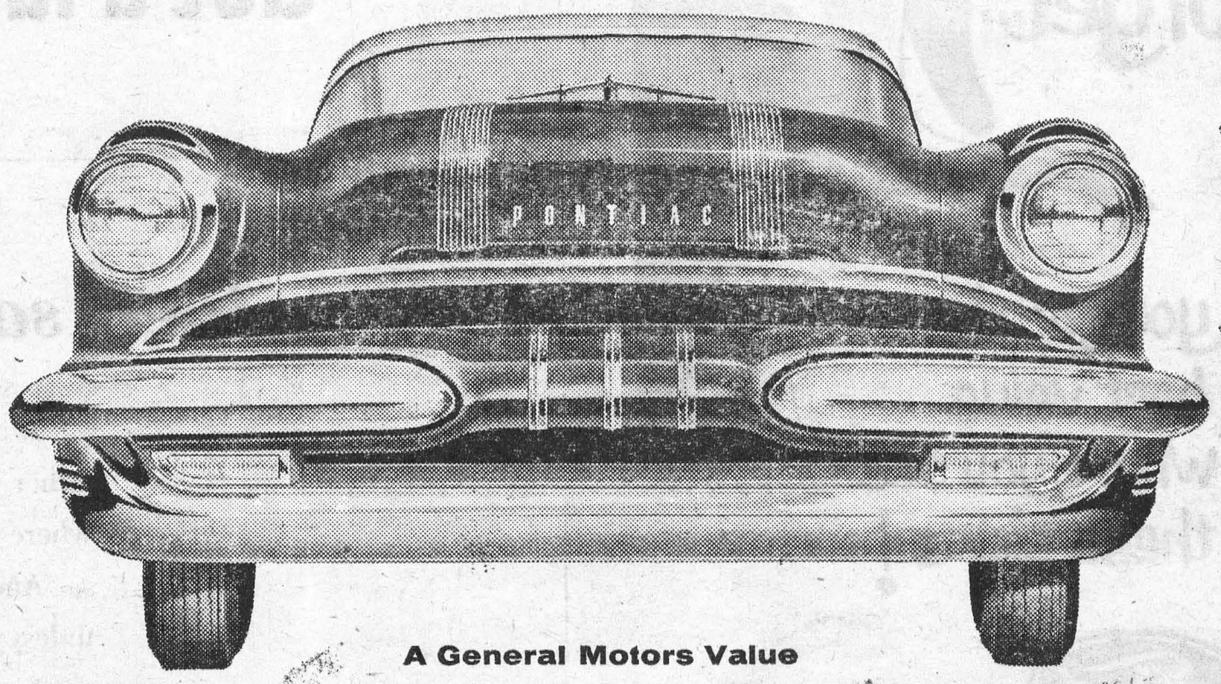
We blush modestly...



A General Motors Value

After all, it really isn't considered good form to toot one's horn too loudly . . . HOWEVER . . . since the early months of this year, an unparalleled situation has existed and we can't contain ourselves any longer.

Pontiac—we've got to say it—is now up in the TOP 2 in automotive sales in Canada . . . second only to another General Motors product!

This isn't just a claim . . . it's a fact. Against the toughest competition, Pontiac has plain outsold every other manufacturer's cars.

It's a hats-off tribute to Canadian motorists, too, for their instant recognition of Pontiac's sterling worth. No doubt about it, they buy shrewdly and well where value counts.

Well, there it is! Pity, we had to be the ones to tell the story but that's the automotive industry for you.

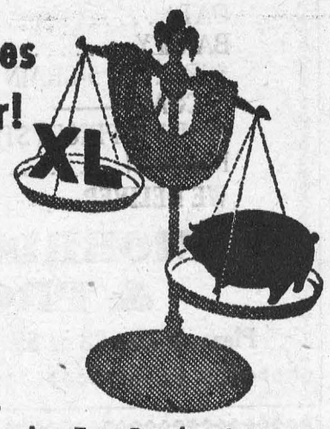
Tip the Profit Scales -in your own favour!



Sure, you make money by marketing your own grains. They're good for your livestock, too. But grains alone won't do the job you want from your livestock. Give your livestock the necessary balanced nutrients, contained in XL (EXCEL) Concentrates—the proteins, minerals, and vitamins that make profits grow! You can't afford to feed grain alone.

Good Health - Fast Growth - Top Production

Have us mix your grains with XL (EXCEL) Concentrates this ways—

For Dairy Cows in Production: 1 Bag XL (EXCEL) 24% Milkmaker Concentrate to 4 bags of your own grain.

or 1 Bag XL (EXCEL) 32% Dairy Concentrate to 6 Bags of your own grain.

For Growing Hogs:
1 Bag XL (EXCEL) 35% Hogmaker Concentrate to 4 Bags of your own grain.
OR 1 Bag XL (EXCEL) 40% Hog Concentrate to 5 Bags of your own grain.
There's a full line of XL (EXCEL) Concentrates for every feeding need of your livestock and poultry.
