LAMOUREUX ANNOUNCES OVERPASS ON HIGHWAY 31 AT WINCHESTER

Hon. Lucien Lamoureux, M.P. for Stormont-Dundas in the last Parliament, has released the following statement: ,

The Board of Transport Commissioners have issued an order for the construction of an overpass on Highway 31 in Winchester. This decision was reached following negociations with the Provincial authorities and in response to representations received in Ottawa by the Federal Member on behalf of the Municipal Councils of Winchester and Chesterville Earlier, an Order of the Board authorizing a level crossing on the bypass had been rescinded. The only point at issue left is the apportionment of the cost between the province and the Federal authorities.

The Federal contribution will depend on the extent to which vehicular traffic will be diverted from the present crossing in Winchester to the new overpass. The statutory requirements are that a contribution can be made out of the Federal Railway Crossing Fund for a substantial amount of traffic diverted from the old crossing to the bypass. Preliminary surveys indicate that there will be such a substantial diversion which would result in the approval of a contribution out of the Railway Crossing Fund.

My comment is that I am delighted that, as a result of the joint action between the Provincial Member, Mr. Irvine, the Reeves of Winchester, Chesterville and Williamsburg, and the respective councils and, of course the Federal Member speaking on their behalf in Ottawa this very satisfactory decision has been obtained for the benefit of the citizens of the area.

Thousands of Geese Arriving at Sanctuary

The vanguard of the Fall migration of Canada Geese have arrived at the Commission's Wildfowl Sanctuary. Located off No. 2 Highway, 11 miles east of Morrisburg the Sanctuary is possibly the only place in Eastern Ontario where people can enjoy, at leisure, the full spectacle of Canada's national wildfowl during migration.

During the migration period of about eight weeks an estimated 90,000 Canada Geese stop over at the Sanctuary for rest and food. In addition 5,000 or 6,000 ducks including Blacks, Mallards, Teal and Wood ducks take advantage of the safety and hospitality offered in the Wildfowl haven. The wild ducks seem to be more wary than the Canada Geese and usually come into the feeding area later in the evening when the numbers of Canada Geese, as well as, visitors are much less than in the earlier part of the afternoon.

Each day a ton of corn-on-the cob is distributed at 2:30 p.m. in the feeding area and during the peak migration flow about 2,000 Canada Geese are fed daily. On some days the number will exceed 3,000. Here and there among the Canada Geese visitors will often see two or three Snow Geese and a few Blues.

While peak migration periods are directly influenced by the far northern weather, they usually occur in the second and third week of October.

The summer resident flock of Canada Geese numbers about 1,000 and is maintained by around 400 goslings raised each year in the Sanctuary area. All of these Geese usually go south for the winter however last year there were three Canada Geese that wintered in the feeding area.

These beautiful wild birds, which in their second year average about nine pounds, mate for life and it is interesting to watch through binoculars a flock land and "pair up".

A visit to the Sanctuary is a unique and enjoyable experience for all the family. Don't forget your camera.

GIFT OF BOOKS AIDS PUBLIC LIBRARY HERE

Saturday at Morrisburg Branch of the Seaway Libraries Reeve Carlton F. McInnis formally presented Mrs. Thomas Jones, local library custodian, with a valuable collection of new books, purchased with the 1972 proceeds of the Miss Della J. Snyder estate, which has been held in trust since 1948 and over the years has contributed toward the Morrisburg Library.

That afternoon the Carman Forward Weavers' Guild presented a display and demonstration of weaving and demonstration of weaving and spinning at the Morrisburg library. Most young people availed themselves of the opportunity to learn of these crafts.

Mr. McInnis, in making the presentation, remarked that Miss Snyder, who had been a dressmaker during her lifetime, had divided her small estate between the Anglican Church and the library, and noted how this contribution to local living could have its effect on the people of Morrisburg so many years after she had passed from the scene herself.

Mr. McInnis was assisted in the presentation by councillor and library board member Robert Bright. The library administration was represented by Herman Nyland, head of the Seaway Valley system, and Mrs. Nyland, chief librarian of the City of Cornwall libraries.

The weavers guild, which is based in Iroquois, had as demonstration weavers Miss Ruth Casselman, Mrs. Ross Cassel.

Bert Lawrence at Canadian Club

"Ontario's new structure of government is unique in the British parliamentary world", Honourable Bert Lawrence, Provincial Secretary told Morrisburg and District Canadian Club at a dinner meeting held Thursday in Morrisburg Civic Centre.

He said, "This bold new design of government has successfully placed the various departments in four groups: the policy field of health welfare, education etc; the development field of resources, environment, communications, industry, tourism etc; the justice field and the field of finance and management.

"In the first and second fields of policy, health welfare etc. and of justice and law ministries work in parallel lines and have more or less co-ordinated problems to solve within their areas" he noted. "However in the field of resources development the various ministries has mixed approaches as agriculture vs. highways and environment vs. industry.

Mr. Lawrence said, "I have the fascinating and exciting job of keeping all seven ministries in the resources field working in one direction". He discussed the frequent problems of reaching a decision which then goes to a policy board of which Premier Davis is a member before being presented to the cabinet itself. He added, "In our group the fundamental thing is to look ahead, often as far as 20 or 30 years.

"Right now", Mr. Lawrence said, "in looking ahead we find that land in Ontario is a subject of importance. There are problems of agriculture, preserving land for food and helping to keep the price level and the need of land for high ways and industry. Then environment comes to grips with industry". He summed the situation as "two attitudes must be evaluated that of the owner and the speculator".

"Another challenge facing our resources ministries is energy", the speaker said. "Today it is a loud the size of a man's hand but it is waiting to create problems". He noted, "The costs of energy are rising. There is very little water power left in the province. We can't control the cost of oil. Nuclear power has a great potential but it is expensive and carries terrific poliution problems".

Mr. Lawrence discussed the "need for fundamental new approaches to transportation, especially in cities. He briefly reviewed the "chronic revenue problems of Ontario at the municipal, provincial and federal levels. He said, ' Despite the heavy tax burden we are a progressive province with continuing reform.

He concluded, "I consider it a privilege to be involved with these issues in Canada's finest province".

Following the meeting Mr. Lawrence officially opened Morrisburg's second annual Home and Trade Show at the Community Centre.

A capacity crowd attended the opening festivities when Miss Ottawa Rough Rider, Marlene Shepherd, a college student and Miss Ottawa, Sharron Jordan who is employed at a personal pool agency were present.

Earl Baker, President Morrisburg Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of the show and Reeve Carlton F. McInnis spoke briefly. Rog and Del entertained with skits and music and General Grant of CFRA was M.C. for the occasion.

Among other guests attending the banquet and the Home and Trade Show were Hon. Lucien Lamoureux, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell of Cornwall and Hon. F.M. Cass.

Hon. Bert Lawrence spoke briefly saving, "This type of activity is the life of Ontario. Morrisburg can be proud of this show which in relation to its population outshines many in enthusiasm and effectiveness.

The gaily decorated stadium boasted close to 100 stalls featuring crafts, culture, food, flowers, furnishings, industries, appliances equipment, cars, snowmobiles, industrial products and sport equipment.

It was announced that the juvenile stars of the film Tom Sawyer will be at the show Saturday.

ROAD DESIGNATED

Donald R. Irvine, M.P.P. for Grenville-Dundas is pleased to announce that the Honourable Gordon R. Carton, Q.C., Minister of Transportation and Communications, further to the request by the United Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, has designed parts of County Road No. 1 and No. 5, being the Black Creek Bridge and the Winchester Springs Bridge, as a Development Road.

Another Loss of Local Autonomy

If you are waiting for an announcement of the heretofore usual nomination meeting, — don't hold your breath . . .

There will no longer be any. Elimination of the public meeting when nominations were received from the floor, was among the amendments to the Municipal Elections Act approved by the Legislature this spring. Somehow we missed any publicity on the proposal at the time and we are left wondering if there was any ditorial outcry by newspapermen in the know.

What justification was argued for this change, we wonder? What was wrong with the old system of public nominations and was there any opposition raised in the Legislature against its replacement by this new anonymous method?

As we understand it, under the new legislation, anyone interested in running for municipal office will have a period of six days in which he or she may present properly prepared nom ination papers to the municipal clerk. How or when the voters are informed as to who are contesting the election, we know not; but presumably there will be a proclamation listing the voting day and the names of the canddates for each post. Also, we presume, sufficient time will be allowed for the information to reach non-resident voters.

Our first impression of the new modus operandi is that it tends to place too much responsibility on the municipal clerk for the conduct of the election. If he or she is a conscientious public servant playing no favourites, there may be no grounds for complaint. A municipal clerk who is below par in the performance of his duties, or one who may be intent on holding the balance of power, might conceivably abuse his position of privilege in a manner detrimental to the best interests of the citizenry. No matter how able and fair the municipal clerk, he or she is going to be on the spot, perhaps an object of suspicion by adversaries on both sides of a heated election.

That is only conjecture, of course. Our major criticism of this new system of nominations is that it discourages the public meeting that has been one of the last bastions of voter involvement. Councils may organize "Meet-the-Candidates" gatherings, but in our opinion they will not be such a drawing card when there is no longer a question as to who is in the field. At times there have been very good crowds at our nomination meet ings. That interest may flag when there is prior knowledge of the slate and if incumbent members are not expected to present a review of their conduct in office.

There may be good arguments in favour of this new nomination procedure. We have not heard them and at this point we see it as another move by Queen's Park to downgrade local autonomy in favor of its plans for regional government. The ratepayer has lost almost all his say in area education administrattion. Soon he may feel almost as lost in his choice of a muncipal council.

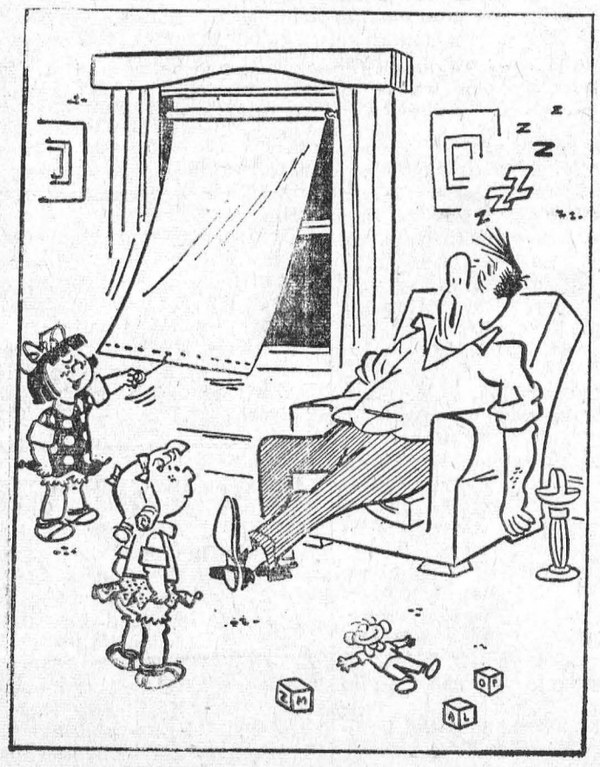
In the meantime, we have the dubious satisfaction of knowing that Big Daddy at Queen's Park, with a third of a century's experience in handling the peasants, knows what is best for us, and is determined to see that we have it, whether we want it or not.

The above editorial was adapted, with a few changes from a similar one in The Glengarry News

For a very long time to come, you are going to be hearing of that wondrous hockey man, Phil Esposito, his exploits and his leadership with the so-called "Team Canada" in last month's series against the Russians. To us Phil's finest hour was when he got off the plane on his return home and apologized to the Canadian fans, for remarks he made in Vancouver prior to the team's departure. This gesture raised his stock as much as his complete mastery of the games.

It is, we believe the ardent hope of all fans in Canada, that by the time the next series with Russia rolls around, ALL of THE BEST Canadians will be allowed to represent their country, regardless of their league affiliation.

Sweetie Pie



"Watch Pop take off when I let go!"

Sincerely . . . Yours

BY MRS. WELLWOOD ADAM

One thing, I think, is common to all, everywhere . . . we are living in anxious times, the world over. In Canadian life alone, many feel things will become worse, and quite a few are really fearful. I recollect learning in my English history books for nearly a hundred years from 1801 to 1892, various well known leaders in pub lic life gave their very pessimistic opinions and reactions to the times they lived in.

For example, Wilberforce: "I dare not marry, the future is so unsettled."

William Pitt: "There is hardly anything around us but ruin and despair."

Lord Shaftesbury: "Nothing can save the British Empire f r o m shipwreck."

Disraeli: "In industry, commerce, and agriculture, there is no hope."

The dying Duke of Wellington: "I thank God I shall be spared from seeing the consummation of ruin that is gathering around us."

It would appear, then, that life in the work-a-day world has been alarming before, for both leaders and those with them.

I attended the Morrisburg Trade Show on Thursday, Sept. 28th and quite a crowd was at this opening night. The booths representing the Morrisburg merchants, Banks etc., were extremely attractive to the general public. I was personally impressed with the quality and distinctiveness of the various types and brands of merchandise sold, and I felt that they could stand up well to anything sold in the cities. Probably better, in some ways, because both buyers and sellers are usually well-known to eachother in a small town and its environs.

Again, too, the Chamber of Commerce appears to have men and women on its board who have vision and drive, as well as trust for Morrisburg's future, as well as for their own, of course. This is not a one-way street, as the public is sure to do its part, always providing it receives fair and satisfactory catering to its very definite needs. If what can happen in Morrisburg, then, in this matter of leaving many with a feeling of general satisfaction judging by the results of the Trade Show . . . then I wonder why the same does not apply country-wide, world-wide? I suppose we just have to be very sure and mature in the way we choose our leadership, regarding every phase of our lives, whether in church, community, or state. There are quite a few who choose by personalities, and this never really works if on its own, and if you have had this kind of experience. You will have learned quite a lot, as I have done down the years.

Two small boys were talking very seriously over an apple. "She said we must share it" said one. "Yes" agreed the other, "share and share alike." So now was the time to decide, the big rosy apple was on the table, and both boys looked at eachother. "Go on," said one, "You cut, and I'll divide."

"Now, that's a great way of seeing that an apple is equally shared — one cuts, the other chooses. It's fair and it's swift, and it gives the honest boy his reward . . . half an apple. It stops the dishonest boy cutting the apple unfairly.

You will agree with me, I feel sure, that perhops our world of today, near and far, could do with less conferences and arguments, and more of the simpler techniques which have been laid down in the Book of Life and the Golden Rule. They do work if applied, as we all know, whether we are leaders or otherwise. Maybe I will be considered a bit old-fashioned and not with the "in", or "with it" groups when I start thinking my thoughts aloud or even writing them down! What do you think?

one seat unlike all others

By Maurice Western

Of the 264 constituencies into which the country is divided, one is a seat unlike the others. This is Stormont-Dundas, fronting on the St. Lawrence and centring on the city of Cornwall.

Elsewhere the question of primary public interest on Oct. 30 will be: Who wins what? Stormont-Dundas will be different because more is at stake there than the fortunes of one party or another. In the last Parliament it was represented by Lucien Lamoureux, first continuing Speaker of the House of Commons, and on the outcome in Stormont may well depend the future of a brave, but still uncertain, experiment.

The situation at the moment is somewhat unclear. Mr. Lamoureux will stand again as an independent. An official Conservative candidate has been in the field for some time. The NDP have been expected to enter but may be having second thoughts. The Liberals will not nominate, a sound decision even though it has been publicly supported with some odd reasons, including the announced discovery that Mr. Lamoureux is "unbeatable".

In their professions, all the parties are for a continuing, independent Speakership. We have already seen its benefits. The impartiality of Mr. Lamoureux was never questioned. He presided over the House of Commons with an authority owing a good deal to his personal qualities, but primarily to his independence in fact as well as in theory.

Why then should he be confronted with officially sponsored opponents? Why, in particular, should the Conservatives reverse course when they gained so much credit in 1968 by standing aside?

The political temptation is plain enough. Cornwall has suffered a good deal from unemployment and may thus appear to party managers an inviting target. But what is the case for intervention and what is it worth? a case has in fact been made but it is not worth much.

It was the pipeline debate which convinced many people of the need for a continuing, independent Speakership. One of those so persuaded was a former Conservative member briefly a Minister, Frank McGee. To avoid the sort of difficulty which has now arisen, he proposed an ingenious scheme which would require no party to sacrifice anything for the common gain. The future continuing Speaker would represent an artificial constituency "Parliament Hill".

The Government has taken no initiative calculated to implement this particular scheme or anything like it. By this omission, the argument runs, other parties have been freed of responsibility. As the experiment, although highly successful, was not carried to completion; not safeguarded by institutional arrangements, they are within their rights in wrecking it.

This may strike many people as a shabby argument. It requires a mantle of apparent respectability and has been given one. The pretence is that a constituency represented by Mr. Speaker is not represented. Intervention is presented as the means of rescuing the poor, disfranchised citizens of Stormont-Dundas.

Sucker-bait

Such presentations are commonly described as sucker-bait. There is nothing respectable about them. The inference is that Mr. Lamoureux cannot make appropriate representations on behalf of his people — or if he does, will not be heard — because he cannot attend caucus, pull wires, or please ministers by making partisan speeches.

What blithering nonsense! An independent speaker is the most influential member of the entire House. Any government which chose to ignore him would be out of its mind.

Even among partisans, access to caucus is not everything. No one torments Ministers more than the arch-Oppositionist John Diefenbaker. But if they are wise, they accord him discriminating attention (often he enjoys more attention than government private members) because of his great experience in and out of government and the well known fact that many resort to him as a former prime minister.

Mr. Lamoureux is not a partisan. But he is the servant of the whole House and it is thus the plain duty of the House to defend him. No one could occupy a stronger position. To pretend otherwise is to insult the intelligence of voters.

Mr. McGee's approach, whatever its merits, is not the only one; nor is it the one taken in Britain, which pioneered in this respect. They began as we did in 1968. Their system does not require that Mr. Speaker be unopposed. But there is a strong convention that candidates standing against Mr. Speaker should not be endorsed by political parties, with their great organizations and massive resources.

It would be absurd to suppose that this convention took root because of the superior morality of British political parties. The credit belongs to British voters, who are jealous of their institutions and who recognize that irresponsible parties must occasionally be brought to heel. Their method deserves attention here, especially — unless the situation changes — in Stormont-Dundas. When British candidates opposing Mr. Speaker attempt to array themselves in national party colors, they are merely treated by voters in that particular constituency as the representatives of splinter groups, bound for nowhere.

It is a remarkably uncomplicated method and the results have been admirable. For proof of this, see any speech on the workings of the representatives of splinter British Parliament by leading Canadian thinkers of the deceased House — especially those of Conservatives.

Farm Safety Assoc. is Reality

The Farm Safety Association has become a reality as part of the family of accident prevention associations supported by The Ontario Workmen's Compensation Board, it was announced today by B.J. Legge, Q.C., Chairman of the Board.

The new association will assume the responsibilities formerly held by the Farm Safety Council of Ontario, Mr. Legge explained. Since 1966, the Workmen's Compensation Board has been actively engaged in safety education in the farming industry of Ontario. In April of this year, the Workmen's Compensation Bard undertook the financing and administration of the Farm Safety Council for the balance of 1972.

Mr. Legge reported that the major agriculture trade associations in concert with the Farm Safety Council of Ontario gave unanimous approval for the formation of the new organization. An application has been made to the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario for incorporation of the Farm Safety Association by Letters Patent, which was submitted by the newly elected Directors: Ernie Skrow Georgetown; Mildred Reeds, Reaboro; William Irvine, Emo, Ontario; Arnold Kuhl, Desboro, and W.W. Bilderbach, Putnam, Ont.

Mr. Legge explained that the objectives of the new association are to provide education in accident prevention throughout the province's agricultural community, and to promote safe practices in farm work as well as safe handling and design of farm equipment.

In making the announcement, Mr. Legge, who is also president of the Canada Safety Council, said:

"We are pleased to welcome the Farm Safety Association into the Compensation Board's family of accident prevention groups. Farming is a hazardous occupation, resulting last year in more than 1,500 disabling accidents and eight deaths in Ontario alone. On a national basis, farming has the third highest accident frequency, exceeded only by the mining and construction industries. All of the Board's facilities for safety education will be at the disposal of the new association."

The first General Meeting of the Farm Safety Association is planned for January, 1973 in conjunction with the Annual Meeting of the Farm Safety Council of Ontario, at which time the future plans of the new accident prevention organization will be fully discussed during a two day meeting.

"At a time when many of our public libraries face serious financial problems, we hope everyone will visit their local public library in October to see the varied services it has to offer and support efforts for improved public libraries in Eastern Ontario," said Mrs. Betty Butterill, chairman of the development month committee.

Hon. George A. Kerr, minister responsible for Ontario's public libraries will officially open the month at A Citizens' Forum to be held Monday, October 2nd, 7:30 p.m., Nepean Public Library, 1541 Merivale Road.

TODAY'S CHILD

BY HELEN ALLEN

THE TORONTO SUN SYNDICATE

This has been a difficult year for Ronny.

He has seen a younger brother go to adopting parents. Then two girls whom he knew as foster children like himself were also adopted.

But so far an adoption home has not been found for Ronny.

No wonder this nine-year-old is worried about his future and is constantly asking: "What about me?"

Ronny is an attractive youngster with a pleasant shy manner, very eager to be friends. Canadian-Indian in descent, he is in good health, perhaps a little small for his age, with dark eyes, dark hair and medium complexion. His glasses are for near-sightedness.

Ronny is pictured outdoors where he spends his happiest times. He would like to live on a farm. He loves baseball, camping and hockey. Fishing — summer or winter is his delight.

Ronny is not a great student and had some difficulties in Grade three, but he was promoted and is now in Grade four. His special problem is with reading. However, he is an interesting boy who expresses himself well.

This lovable youngster needs a mother and father to love him and take an interest in him and his doings. They should be warm, affectionate people who understand he has memories of his past life and who will not pressure him for academic achievement. It will be best if he is the youngest in the family or at least if there are no children close to him in age.

To inquire about adopting Ronny, please write to Today's Child, Box 888, Station K, Toronto. For general adoption information, ask your Children's Aid Society.

WEEKLY REPORT

DON'T TALK TO ME ABOUT EDISON

by Wayne Mutton, B.J.

When it comes to inventing, apparently the Edison's and Alexander Graham Bell's have pretty heavy reputations. But let me tell you, they don't weigh much down around Larose Forest.

They've got men like Ernest Hurtubise.

Those other fellows had all the breaks — laboratories, scads of helpers, money, the best material and tools and all the time in the world. They didn't have to work eight hours in the bush for the Ministry of Natural Resources then come home, milk cows and shovel manure before they could start to tinker. They began right after breakfast and kept bankers' hours.

Fellows like Ernest are in another league. Give them a real problem, some nuts, bolts, scrap iron, a few tools and some paper to scribble on and despite any formal training in engineering, mechanics or electricity they'll figure and tinker and come up with something that works, and works well.

How about Arcus Labelle and Lou Cotterchio? Never heard of them either, I'll bet. Which probably means you also haven't heard about The Plough.

Preparing certain areas for tree planting in the 26,000-acre Larose Forest in Prescott and Russell Counties can be a special headache, particularly when the grou is low, poorly drained heavy sand covered with a rat's nest of weed shrubs like willow and alder which can choke out the healthy young seedlings being planted.

Arcus, Lou and Ernest had an idea for a special plough. It probably wouldn't have even crossed Thomas Alva's mind.

They came up with a monstrous homemade plough with a 40-inch cutting disc suspended under a five foot high steel A-frame which was weighted down with 500 lbs. of steel and cement.

Hitched behind a snorting bulldozer or a Tree Farmer, a huge four-wheeled tractor used for skidding logs up north, the 3,000-pound plough can rip a 14-inch trench a quarter of a mile through the bush in 15 minutes. Shrubs and roots are torn up and covered with a furrow.

Once the ground has weathered and the buried shrubs have died off, trees are planted on the furrow tops. Here, the roots will have two layers of humus in which to feed. The trenches effectively lower the water table and handle drainage. The prepared site is not as neat as a pin but the seedlings have a good chance at survival and preparation has been done quickly and inexpensively. Ingenious.

Of all the "novateurs" or innovators who come from the farm country around Larose Forest, Ernest Hurtubise is probably the most respected.

There's hardly a soul, for instance, who hasn't heard the one about how the first electric lights came to the area. The nearby community of Bourget was just about to get electricity when World War II broke out. After the war the community still hadn't been plugged in. But things were humming around Ernest's farm — things like Ernest's radio, Madame Hurtubise's washing machine and the light bulbs in the house.

A bit impatient because the war held things up and because he couldn't listen to ball games on his radio, Ernest hooked up an old windmille used to pump water to the differential of a scrapped car. This, in turn, was attached to a generator and a series of batteries. The voltage was 32 amps, the current direct and the lights bright.

After joining Natural Resources, Ernest's first innovation was a tree planter. He still refuses to take most of the credit. When the department couldn't afford a fancy new tree planter, Ernest devised a simple version of the planters now being used. To build it, the men even had to teach themselves welding.

Meanwhile, in his spare time, Ernest was collecting mounds of mixed seed being discarded by farm supply outlets who didn't have the time or ambition to separate the mixtures. This led to aErnest's next innovation, popularly held to be this "piece de resistance", and for him, the cause for some disappointment. After months of tinkering Ernest had a screening machine that could separate the most complex jumble of seed varieties. Armed with a two-year patent he began trying to sell it. Representatives from one of the biggest seed companies in North America came out to the farm, looked, talked money, hummed and hahed, and hesitated. By the time Ernest's patent ran out the same company had their own screening machine. It bore more than a striking ressemblance to Ernest's original.

Ernest, now retired and spending most of his time around his son's farm, still doesn't like to think about that one.

But it's still discussed around the machine shop at Larose Forest where Arcus Labelle is now overseeing the latest innovations —converting a meat saw, discarded by the Ministry of Government Services, into a wood saw and devising a boom sprayer to work off the Tree Farmer, so one more man will be freed for other jobs.

And, as always, Forest Manager Ron Cleroux has only one strict rule when he encourages his men to innovate: the lesser the number of moving parts, the better.

How fortunate to have handymen like these — and they can be found in every job area. When money is slim, supplies short and problems tall, these "inventors" are priceless, not only to employers, but taxpayers as well. It's also very pleasant to watch men who aren't afraid to use their native intelligence, whatever their "expertise".

And there's another thing. As a group, these men tend also to be fairly well-rounded individuals.— Now take your big time inventors. From all accounts, they're not the kind you'd like to be snowed in with all winter. Ernest, on the other hand, can still probably rip off a couple of good Gregorian Chants, something not everybody can sing. In Bourget when he was a boy, the young men in town used to do that kind of thing in a slow night down at the Catholic church. Of course, you've already heard he's a baseball fan par excellence. And what about the other men who help with the inventions around places like Larose? Could Edison have even hoped for someone with the entertainment stature of say, Louis Pasztor of Larose, the undisputed local master when it comes to picking and playing a guitar while holding it behind his head.

Nope, Edison and that crowd could never have held a light to people like that.

FALL RALLY HELD BY KNOX CHURCH WMS

The W.M.S. of Knox Presbyterian Church, held their first Fall meeting in the Church Hall. A good attendance present. The president, Mrs. Robert Mott welcomed all, and conducted the business part of the meeting.

Minutes of last meetin were read. The Treasurer's report was very gratifying. Devotions were conducted by Mrs. Charlie Farlinger, the Theme was Fall and Thanksgiving, followed with prayer. Mrs. George Forrell gave a very interesting talk on Missions of today and in the past years. She spoke of her mother, how devoted she had been to Missionary work and how she had remembered her saveing so much out of her weekly income for Misions, and as a young girl she had never forgot the necessity of giving to Missions. In memory of her mother she gave a very generous donation to our Missionary work. That night. Mrs. Ivan Donley sang a lovely solo "It is Quiet D o w n Here".

Mrs. Kinkaid gave a few thoughts on four different kinds of "Love" taken from 1st Corinthians, Chapter 13, Verse one "Thus I Speak with the Tongues of Men and of Angles, and have not (love) I am become as sounding Brass or a Tinkling Cymbol.

These four brief statements can tell you how to make it sing praises. First Love is slow to expose; Learn to endure for endurance is a valuable asset.

Second Love is always eager to believe the Best.

Third, Love is always helpful, it uses tact in working with others.

Fourth, Love is always patient. It has a way of understanding so that all conflict passes.

The meeting closed with Hymn 463 and followed with prayer.

Refreshments were served by the committee in charge.

ADELAIDE DANIELS SAYS

BE FOR A SPORT

Having fun is one of the best ways to step up the quality of your looks and personality. Also one of the best ways to have fun is to be enthusiastically "for" a sport — group, team or solo. If you get out and do something, you're more likely to be somebody. And you'll also be a slimmer, trimmer somebody!

No matter how inactive you may have been in the past or in recent years, you'll find that you'll enjoy activity, exercise, and sports very much once you make them a natural part of your living pattern.

Instead of going everywhere by car, try to make it a habit to walk to your destination. Don't saunter: walk briskly with shoulders back and head high. Take strides that require some energy which uses up more calories than strolling. Breathe deeply.

For instance, instead of hopping into the car to go shopping or to mail a letter, walk if it's not more than 15 minutes or so away. While sitting and chatting with a neighbour, why not suggest that you talk while taking a brisk walk?

As for sports, you don't have to be an athlete to get lots of good from them. As you slim down, you'll find you'll get a lift mentally as well as further health benefits from bicycling, swimming, walking and other physical activity.

There are many side effects (and good ones) to enjoy from exercising. For one thing, it gets to being fun — yes, even if you thought you didn't care for it in the beginning. It helps burn up calories and gives you a feeling of vitality.

And also, it's a wonderful way to make new friends. And you can always use some new friends, especially if you've moved to a new neighbourhood or are starting in a new school.

You'll be surprised too at the self confidence and poise you'll gain from performing reasonably well at a sport.

To a properly nourished body, exercise is a pleasure. Gloomy moods disappear and you forget about overeating. One's mind cannot remain low or depressed when the body is in motion.

My feeling towards exercising (I'm a walker myself) is that it is most helpful while you're losing weight. It gets you into the world of "thin".

Your questions are invited.

The 2nd FORTY

Confidence Gone

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

I'm 47 years old. My children are grown and I would like to find a job. But I find my confidence is gone. The ads in the newspapers seem to want young girls. As far as I can tell, there's not much demand for an older person. S.E.

Dear S.E.:

The way to answer one letter is not usually with another, but the following might well have been written with you — and others like you — in mind. It reads: "I'm 53 years of age. Half my family is grown, and away from home. The other half, ages 11 and 15, are still in school. Last year, I decided I wanted to get back into the business world so I applied to several companies. Luckily, the place nearest my home called me. I've been there 10 months now and am so happy this company gave me a chance." To begin with the writer of that letter placed her application with a number of companies; she had a positive outlook and it produced positive results for her. She discovered, as many of her contemporaries have, that companies like to hire mature women because they're usually more conscientious and reliable. So, instead of sitting home and believing no employer wants you, why not start to job-hunt actively and positively. You may find out there's a job in your future.

Can't Forget Him

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

My daughter won't listen to me. Maybe she'll listen to you. She has been involved for more than two years with this man and now has a baby boy. After the baby was born, he still came around to see her, but recently stopped. She thinks it's because he found someone else. The man has a bad reputation and all he friends told her to quit associating with him. But even though she knew he was a real drinker, she continued seeing him. When she finally decided to forget him, he phoned one of her friends, told her he was going into the hospital for an operation and asked her to tell my daughter about this. Now my daughter is saying, "Why doesn't he just step out of my life and let me get over him completely? As long as he keeps stepping in and out of my life, I don't want anyone else." My daughter, who's very good looking, can have any man she wants. But she loves the baby, who looks just like his father. That's why she's having so much trouble trying to forget. She says dating other men doesn't help. I keep telling my daughter to wipe that man out of her mind, but she says she can't. She needs help desperately. G.S.

Dear G.S.:

There will always be women who get involved with men who obviously aren't good for them. They seem willing to throw their lives away on such men, who apparently are unwilling to make any commitments in return. As for your daughter, you might ask what she thinks her life will be like in five years or in ten. You might suggest that she might give some thought to her son's future. Since the child's father has not shown himself in any way to be responsible for or concerned about his son, ask her what kind of man will the little boy turn out to be when he grows up — if she continues to be involved with his father in the same way she has been.

Conceptions & Misconceptions

A woman in her 40's may sometimes think she's pregnant when she's not. The changing pattern of her monthly cycle can cause that confusion. Yet, her chances of conceiving at age 40 are about half those of a woman 35 or under, according to Dr. Shepard Aronson of the New York University Medical Center.

"Anatomically and physically speaking," Dr. Aronson says, "the mature woman produces either no more eggs, or essentially infertile ones." After 45, he declares, the chances of conceiving are very low indeed. "The oldest woman I know was about 47 when she bore a living child," he states.

According to Dr. George Ryan, who teaches obstetrics and gynecology at the Harvard Medical School, mature women "have fewer unplanned pregnancies, because they're much more informed now about contraception." Doctors don't see as many "menapausal babies" as they once did, he notes. "If a woman thinks she might have conceived, however," he says, "she no longer need spend time in fear and trepidation that she might be pregnant." Excellent tests are available, he points out, to indicate within two weeks of the missed period, whether the woman is pregnant or not.

Normal Female

Should the pregnancy test be negative, notes Dr. Ryan, he gives his patients a complete physical examination to establish that her periods are ending because of the menopause. "If this is the case, we can reassure her that she's normal," he explains.

Even though the patient may not have symptoms "judged to be menopausal," Dr. Ryan asserts, "we will follow her with tests at six-month intervals to see if she might be getting low on estrogen" Should she show such a deficiency he will prescribe estrogen therapy. he says "to replace the hormone her ovaries have stopped producing.

Women going through the menopause, Dr. Ryan points out, can also become concerned about the aging processes which might follow it. These, he explains, include such physiologic changes as the drying of the skin and other tissues, and changes in the bone as well. "Now we can assure such women," he declares, "that we have the replacement therapy to help prevent some of these changes."

Serious Problem

The mature woman who finds herself pregnant would be well-advised, Dr. Ryan suggests, to discuss the implications of this with her physician. She should know, for example, he points out, that the incidence of abnormal babies increases about ten-fold for mothers in the over-35 age group. "It's really a serious problem," he notes, "and when you get up in the 40-and-over age range, the increase is probably even greater." However, it's now possible, he points out, to do genetic studies — by sampling the fluid around the fetus — which indicate whether or not the child will be normal at birth.

While the woman in menopause may have these various problems, she's also concerned the prospects for continuing her sexual activity, Dr. Ryan observes. "We try to convince her there should be no change," he says. "We would like to keep her a functional woman as long as she lives."

NOW HEAR THIS

Satanism, withchcraft and illicit sex are the key ingredients in the suspenseful drama Madeleine, by W.H. Rockett, on CBC Radio's CBC Stage series, Saturday, Oct. 7. The drama is based on the true story of Madeleine de Demandolx, a nun from an aristocratic family in 17th century France, who supposedly became possessed by the devil — in the form of a handsome priest said to be her lover. The impressive cast in this tormented tale of the supernatural includes Barry Morse, Gillie Fenwick, Jon Granik and Diana LeBlanc. It's guaranteed to send chills down the spines of listeners.

The recent hockey broadcasts on radio of the Team Canada games from the Soviet Union and Europe attracted thousands of new radio listeners across the country. Many of the games were unavailable on television and others were broadcast live during the daytime hours when a radio was more easily available. The games were called by sportscasters Bob Cole from Newfoundland and Fred Sgambati from Toronto. Listeners are also reminded that NHL hockey returns to CBC Radio Sunday, Oct. 8 with a game between the New York Rangers and the Chicago Black Hawks.

The Beatles Story, a special 13-week series tracing the professional and private lives of the world famous Liverpool foursome begins Sunday, Oct. 8 on CBC Radio. Produced by the BBC, the programs follow the fantastic career of John, Paul, George and Ringo from their humble beginnings in the late '50's to the height of their popularity when Beatlemania swept the world of pop music. It features the singers in words and music and includes some material never heard before.

Further things British on CBC Radio this week include a special two hour salute to the BBC on The Entertainers Friday, Oct. 13. The programs includes The Last Goon Show of All which reunites the zany of Peter Sellers, Spike Milligan and Harry Secombe, who kept listeners laughing for nearly a decade with their famous Goon Show. The show was recorded live before members of the Royal Family — Prince Philip, Princess Anne, Princess Margaret and Lord Snowdon.

Health for All

Enemies In The Dust

Invisible fibers and dust in the air can cause permanent lung damage. Although coal miners and cotton mill workers have special occupational hazards, all of us run an unknown risk.

Take asbestos, for example. In a recent study at Mt. Sinai Hospital in New York, researchers were astonished to find traces of asbestos in every single lung they examined from randomly selected autopsies. Last year the Mayor signed into law an air pollution control code that now prohibits spraying fireproofing materials containing asbestos on buildings under construction. Such sprayings spew out 15 percent of the asbestos directly into the air.

Although the new law helps protect people, it is no cure-all because asbestos dust is dumped into the air when old buildings that have been sprayed years ago are torn down. And every time anyone puts a foot on a car brake, some asbestos escapes. No expert is yet sure how much asbestos is too much, but every fiber that is inhaled lodges in the lungs — permanently. Some experts predict that in future decades, asbestos fibers in the lungs of city dwellers will, in fact, overtake cigarettes as the major cause of lung cancer.

Asbestos workers are at special peril, and men who mine materials like silica and quartz not long ago had high rates of another respiratory disease, tuberculosis. Drugs can now treat and prevent TB, but the suspicious TB rates among these mineral miners first caused the investigation into the harmful effects of breathing in mineral dust. Inhaling the dust weakens the lungs and makes infection more possible. People who cut granite and those who make pottery and china may also be exposed to dusty dangers.

To find out more about enemies in the air and how we can better defend ourselves, contact your local tuberculosis and respiratory disease association. It's a matter of life and breath.
