One of our friends the other day declared that the best reducing exercise consists in moving the head from left to right and back again when asked to have some more. Which brings to our mind another statement we heard many years ago that the hardest word in any language to say is "no."

Smith Falls has now an M. P. all its own. We can see the broad smile of its inhabitents. Just think of how Billy Ferguson will tell how he did it, and Jim Burns will shout how they smashed the machine. Sim Gould will have to be seen and not heard for some time to come in Lanark politics.

This is from the Gananoque Reporter: "Despite the fact that there is a by-law prohibiting the running at large of dogs and that several notices have been inserted in the press to this effect, a number of animals are still roaming the streets at their own sweet will. These animals are doing a great deal of damage to lawns and flower beds, which citizens have gone to considerable expense to construct for the beautification of the town.

What we think of the world depends on that which we know ourselves to be. Do not trust one who proclaims the opinion that every man has his price. He has. Those who only see selfishness and greed in their fellow men, look through selfish eyes. A modern writer states a practical truth when he says: "Keep yourself clean and bright. You are the window through which you must see the world."

In politics, Senator Buchanan said, those newspapers which have the greatest influence in their community are those whose policy is one of independence within the party. The downright party newspaper, he considered did not have much chance of making converts. The most valuable asset a political party could have, he stated, was a newspaper that would criticize it when it was taking some course of action the newspaper considered wrong.

Gas and Oil in Drain

The cleaning of the manhole in front of the Flora Block last week revealed the fact that oil and gas were getting into the drain to an alarming extent. The fumes of gas and strong odor of oil was so distinct that it could not be mistaken, and when Mr. Elnaugh first descended into the manhole to get a sample of the deposit at the botton he was so overcome with the fumes that he nearly fainted on reaching the top. How and where the oil and gas enters the drain is not known, but should be investigated.

Young People Entertained

A number of Baptist young people were entertained by Dr. and Mrs. McKendry at their Cottage a few miles east of Morrisburg, on Thursday night last. The guests arrived late in the afternoon to enjoy a bathe in the St. Lawrence, which delighted all present. Lunch was served later in a picnic style on the lawn which all heartily enjoyed. After lunch the evening was spent in sports and games. The gathering broke up expressing their appreciation to Dr. and Mrs. McKendry for the very enjoyable evening spent by all.

The fall exhibition is an institution that has many commendable features and it should be encouraged in town and townships. The best way in which to do this just now is to speak a word of helpful optimism to the dirnctors.

Fire, caused by lightning during the storm on Sunday last, destroyed a barn, a silo, a cow barn, a horse barn and one wagon, on the farm of Edmund Earl, one mile west of Kemptville. The damage was estimated at about $5,000, partly covered by insurance.

Good Band Concert

The Saturday night band concerts are becoming more and more popular and are well worth listening to. People motor here from many parts to enjoy them and as a result the stores are kept busy until a late hour. The Citizen's Band is certainly giving good service.

Presentation and Address

A pleasing event took place yesterday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Browne, when a committee of ladies met there and presented their daughter, Mayme, now Mrs. Geo. Dillabough of Aultsville, with a beautiful library table and a richly upholstered occasional chair. An address was read appreciative of the willing service so kindly rendered in this community and also conveying the good wishes of many Winchester friends for future happiness and prosperity. Mrs. Dillabough replied in her usual gracious manner thanking the ladies for these tangible evidences of their esteem and inviting them to call on her in her new home.

Reception to Pastor and Bride

On Wednesday evening July 17, the nembers of the Baptist Church of Winchester and South Gower met at the Parsonage here to welcome back the pastor, Mr. Ostrom and his bride. The parsonage was filled, about one hnndred members of the church. Mrs. (Dr.) McKendry received at the door and introduced them to the young bride. Dr. McKendry acted as chairman and on behalf of those present welcomed the pastor and Mrs. Ostrom to their new field of labor. Words of welcome and encouragement were given by Messrs J. Gemerov, H. S. Carkner, Wm. McIntyre and A. Lanoue. The following address was then read by Miss J. Lou Cummings, of the South Gower Charge, and the presentation of the purse made by Miss Della Barkley of Winchester.

Following is the address:—

July 17, 1929,

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Ostrom,

The occasion of our coming here to your home this evening is unique indeed, unique because we come not to see you Mr. Ostrom, although you are pleasant to look upon, but "To behold the Bride", whom you have brought among us to share with you, our joys and our sorrows, to brighten up the parsonage where the weary might turn in the day of adversity to find the human touch for which he or she hungers, where youth might find that kindly sympathy, that gentle guidance, that wholesome advice which will cause them to see "That Life is real and Life is earnest and the grave is not the goal", unique because it is a long day since this parsonage has welcomed a Bride."

Indeed, you have, Mr. Ostrom, since coming among us, steadily and persistently made difficult the path which Mrs. Ostrom must tread. For have you not with that positiveness born of deep conviction led us to believe that this lady of your choice can and will fulfill the intricate, difficult and noble role of minister's wife to our delight and satisfaction? An older, more mature mind would have shuddered to place such confidence in mere human strength. But our short acquaintance has convinced us sir, that you have chosen well and that our highest hopes will in Mrs. Ostrom's kindly sympathy and gentle ways, find ample fruition.

We would therefore ask you to accept this purse as a token of our respect and love for you and with it goes our prayer "God bless you both."

Signed on behalf of the churches:

Winchester—J. J. McKendry.

South Gower—J. Lou Cumming.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Ostrom were greatly touched by the kind expression of friendship and encouragement. Mr. Ostrom made a feelling reply on behalf of himself and Mrs. Ostrom The very pleasant social evening was then spent, and the new pastor and his bride giving every encouragement of a happy and useful sojourne here. Mr. and Mrs. Porter, and Mr. and Mrs. Smith, the latter being a sister of Mrs. Ostrom, of Toronto, were present for the occasion.

Following several weeks' illness, the death of Mr. James Shields, a well known and highly respected citizen of Smiths Falls, occurred at his home at Smiths Falls on Tuesday. The late Mr. Shields was born 77 years ago at Smiths Falls, where he has resided the greater part of his life. His parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. John Shields, of the Shields' settlement.

The Ladies' Aid of the United Church, Winchester Springs, held their annual Lawn Social last evening. Owing to the rain, lunch was served in the Church. The local Citizens Band was present and furnished a good program. Preceding the social a Soft Ball game was played between Winchester Springs and the local All Stars, resulting in a 13-4 score for the Springs. The teams were composed of six boys and three girls each Considering the weather, a good crowd attended both events.

Backing from the platform of the Waddington-Morrisburg automobile ferry, when the craft listed in mid-stream, a large truck owned by Oakdale Farms, Inc., of New York, plunged into the St. Lawrence river a few days ago. The truck was loaded with cream at the time. The ferry, in proceeding across the river, listed considerably as it entered the strong current, and the truck, being improperly blocked, backed through the guards and fell into the river. The water was very deep at the point where the accident took place and recovery of the truck was impossible.

Lighter penalties having failed to have the desired effect, local magistrates have decided to take drastice steps to check an epidemic of drunken and reckless drivers which seems to exist in this district. In Police Court Saturday, Donald Chisholm, Monkland, was sentenced to 30 days in jail and had his license cancelled for three months when he appeared and was convicted on a charge of operating a automobile while intoxicated.

Stole Watch and Money

When Mrs. Jas. Cinnamon, Harmony, left her home on Monday morning with some others to go berry pickings she was careful to see that all the doors were shut and everything apparently safe. When early in the evening Mr. Cinnamon returned home to look after the stock he found the house wide open. He was not suspicious of anything being wrong and although Mrs. Cinnamon was sure she left the house shut up it did not dawn upon her that the place had been visited by theives until she was ready to retire, when she went to get her watch to wind it. The watch was missing. So was her little leather purse out of her hand bag containing some small change. So also was some money out of the pockets of the men of the house. In all it is thought the theives got between five and six dollars, Mrs. Cinnamon's watch and some other trinkets. They have not the slightest clue to the theft outside the fact that two young lads on wheels were seen in the neighborhood and on the highway and they are being traced.

Had Narrow Escape

Rev. Mr. Hughes, of Huntingdon, Que, pastor of the United Church, and brother of Mr. James Hughes, of Harmony district, had a narrow escape from death on Monday last, and is still in much danger. He went to his garage in the morning to look over his car. which had been giving him some trouble, and evidently started the engine. His daughter Margaret went to call him to breakfast, but getting no reply went out and found her father lying unconscious, partly under the running board of the car. With rare presence of mind she pulled him to the open door and then ran for the doctor. Mr. Hughes had been overcome with the gas from the engine, which had evidently stopped before he was discovered. as the ignition switch was still on. Two physicians labored to bring him back to life and their labor was rewarded late in the afternoon when he gave signs of regaining consciousness. Rev. Mr. Waddell, of Winchester, was communicated with and left in the afternoon with Mr. James Hughes for Huntingdon. They returned home yesterday evening with the encouraging news that Rev. Mr. Hughes was making steady improvement, and the doctors had every hope of his recovery. He was to move to Kemptville in a couple of weeks to take charge of the United Church there, Rev. Mr. Miller going to Huntingdon.

More Care To Be Taken

A Toronto despatch says: More rigorous examinations for automobile drivers were intimated today by Hon. George S. Henry, minister of highways, in an effort to eliminate careless, reckless and incompetent drivers. Besides higher standards of examination, Mr. Henry plans to check up on the examiners appointed by the department with a view to finding out their special fitness as examiners. In some instances this checking is said to have revealed the fact that men unsuitable for the post have been given positions.

"Los Angeles!" the sneering preacher cried, as Jonah might have whinnied, "Nineveh!" and with equal scorn. "The Spanish missionaries may have called it the City of Angels; but the moving pictures have changed its name to Los Diablos! For it is the central factory of Satan and his minions, the enemy of our homes, the corrupter of our young men and women—the school of crime. Unless it reforms —and soon!—surely, in God's good time, the ocean will rise and swallow it!"

Though he was two thousand miles or more away—the Reverend Doctor Steddon was so convinced by his own prophetic ire that he would hardly have been surprised to read in the Monday morning's paper that a benevolent earthquake had taken his hint and shrugged the new Babylon off into the Pacific ocean.

But Doctor Steddon, if he could have seen the realm he objurgated, would have confessed that the devil had a certain grace as a gardener and that his minions were a handsome, happy throng. As it was, Doctor Steddon had never seen Los Angeles and had never seen a moving picture. He knew that the world was going to wrack and ruin —as usual—and he laid the blame on the nearest novelty—as usual.

His daughter had heard him lay the blame in previous years on other activities. She wished he wouldn't.

But then she had not escaped blame herself, and she was in a mortal dread now of a vast cloud of obloquy lowering above her and ominous with lightning.

Her father and mother had named her Remember—after one of the Mayflower girls—nearly three hundred years after. Her father often wished that she had been liker to those Puritan maidens. But that was because he did not know how like she was to them, how much they, too, had terrified their parents with their love of finery and romantic experiment.

For it is only the styles, and not the souls, that change. There are chronicles enough to prove that the same quota of the Remembers and the Praisegods of Plymouth and the other colonies suffered the same bitter beatitudes and frantic bewilderments as Remember Steddon and Elwood Farnaby endured when their elbows touched in the choir loft of this mid-Western village.

Miss Steddon felt a sudden tremor in Farnaby's elbow; then it was gone from hers; she saw his thumb nail whiten as it gripped the hymn book hard.

Somehow in the words he chanted seemed to stab him with a sense of guilt. He felt it a terrible thing for her to stand before that congregation and cry aloud words of ecstacy over her redemption from sin.

Their secret, unknown and unconfessed, was concealed by the very clamor of its publication. And it troubled Farnaby mightily to be gaining all the advantage of a lie by singing the truth.

* * * *

When the choir was not singing openly and aboveboard, it was usually busily whispering. Even Elwood Farnaby had to lean over tonight and whisper important news to Remember. He was not permitted to call at her house or to beau her home after the service. Singing beside her in the house of God—that was different. He told her now what he had just learned, that the factory where he was employed would close down the following week because of hard times. Elwood was to have been promoted to superintendent soon.

To Remember Steddon the news that Elwood would have no job in a week and would know no place to look for one had more than a commercial interest. It was the alarum of fate.

She had loved Elwood since they were children—had loved him all the more for the squalor of his home. He was the son of the town's most eminent drunkard, old "Falldown Farnaby."

Among the slipshod children of his family Elwood alone had managed to acquire ambition. He had latterly supported his mother and a pack of brothers and sisters. He had even been able to afford to go to the war and win the guerdon of a wound that made him glorious in Remember Steddon's eyes and a little more lovable than ever.

Her father, however, had been unable to tolerate the thought of his daughter's marrying the son of the town sot. Doctor Steddon felt that he was proving his love, his loving wisdom toward his daughter, by forbidding her even to meet young Farnaby outside the choir loft. He was sure that her love would wear out.

He did not know his daughter. Who ever did?

* * * *

Elwood had expected that the bad news would shock her. But he could not understand the look of ghastly terror she gave him. He forgot it in his own bitter brooding and did not observe the deathly white that blanched her pallor.

Yet he had noted that she was paler of late and had added that worry to his backbreaking load of worries.

She coughed incessantly, too, and kept putting her hand to her chest as if it hurt her there.

On the way home under the wasted magic of the rising moon, Remember did not walk as usual between her father and mother with a hand on the arm of each. Tonight she kept at her mother's left elbow and clung so tight to the fat, warm arm that her mother whispered:

"What's the matter, honey?"

"Nothing, mamma," she faltered. "I'm just a little tired, I guess."

Mem again was coughing violently and the rest of the way home Doctor Steddon was not a preacher anxious about his daughter's soul, but a father afraid of her life. The cough to her parents was an ominous problem. To her it might promise a solution.

* * * *

Next morning at her father's command Mem went to see Doctor Bretherick. She told him that her parents were afraid her cold was more than a cold, and she coughed for him. He asked her many questions, and she grew so confused and apt in blushes that he asked her more. Suddenly he flung her a startled look, gasped, and stared into her eyes as if he would ransack her mind. In the mere shifting of his eyelid muscles she could read amazement, incredulity, conviction, anger, and finally pity.

All he said was, "My child!"

There could be no solemner conference than theirs. Doctor Bretherick had attended Mem's mother when the girl was born. He thought of her still as a child, and now she dazed him and frightened him by her mystic knowledges and her fierce demands that he should help her out of her plight or help her out of the world.

He refused to do either and demanded that she meet her fate with heroism.

In the talk that followed, Dr. Bretherick drew out the fact Elwood Farnaby was "the man" and suggested a plan for their marriage when the telephone rang.

The doctor's welcoming "Hello!" broke through a many-wrinkled smile. It froze to a grimance. As Mem watched he kept saying: "Yes . . . Yes . . .Yes!" and finally, "That's right—bring him here."

He set down the telephone as if it were a drained cup of hemlock.

"It wasn't Elwood?" Mem said.

"No. Yes. Well— O God! what a bitter world this is!"

Mem caught eagerly at grief.

"Tell me! What's happened? What's happened to Elwood? He's hurt. He's killed."

"Yes!"

* * * *

It was Dr. Bretherick who afterward found a solution.

"Your cough will take a long time to cure or kill," he said. "But it may come in very handy. I've got it all thought out. You can't stay in this town now, I suppose. Most of the animals crawl away and hide at such a time; so suppose you just vanish. Let your cough carry you off to—say, Arizona or California."

She was startled at this undreamed-of escape. He went on:

"I'll tell the necessary lies. That's a large part of my practice. And practice makes perfect. You will go to some strange town—and pose as a widow.

"You will marry an imaginary man out there and let him die quietly. Then, if you ever want to come home here, you can come back as Mrs. Somebody-or-other."

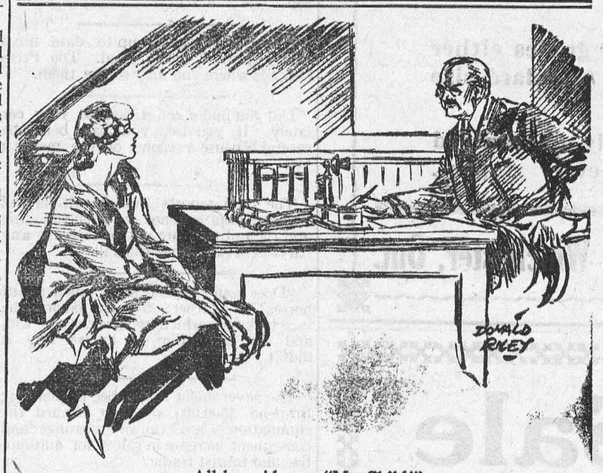
He chose Woodville as the name. Mem was to write of Mr. Woodville's devotion, then to describe a hasty marriage and request that her letters thereafter be addressed to "Mrs. Mrs. Woodville."

After a brief honeymoon she could eliminate Woodville in some way to be decided at leisure. It would be risky, he said, to let Mr. Woodville live too long.

* * * *

A hurricane struck the little town of Caverly on the day of Elwood's funeral. When Mem expressed a wish to sing with the choir at the service over their late fellow-singer, her mother cried, "A girl who's got to be shipped out West has got no right to go out in weather like this."

So she stayed at home and stared through the streaming windows. She saw her poor old father set out to preach the funeral sermon.



. . . All he said was, "My Child!" . . .

He had that valor of the priests which leads them to risk death in order to defeat death; to endure all hardship lest the poorest soul go out of the world without a formal conge. Doctor Steddon clutched his old overcoat about him and plunged into rain that hatched the air in long, slanting lines.

* * * *

Again and again Mem revolted at the outrage of robbing her own parents of their savings—their one shield against old age. She went again and again to Doctor Bretherick and demanded that he release her from her promises not to tell the truth and not to kill herself.

But he compelled her to his will, and she was too glad for a will to replace her own panic to resist him. For a necessary stimulant he phophesied that somehow in that land of gold she was seeking she would find such wealth that she could repay her parents their loan with usury, with wealth, perhaps. Who knew?

He spoke of many women who had begun poor and finished rich.

"You might go into the movies, for instance, and make more money than Coal Oil Johnny," he said.

Mem imbibed mysterious tonics at the doctor's office, and always came away buoyed up with the feeling that her tragedy was unimportant, commonplace, and sure to have a happy finish.

But the moment she reached home she entered a demesne where everything was solemn, where jokes were never heard, except pathetic old witticisms more important in intention than in amusement.

And at last, one day, quite unexpectedly, when she was under no apparent tension at all, the girl went into Mrs. Steddon's room and said, in a quiet tone:

"Mamma, I want to tell you something. I'd rather break your heart than deceive you any longer."

"Why, honey! Why, Mem dear, what on earth is it? You can't break this tough old heart of mine. What is it?"

She whispered it so softly that her breath was hardly syllabled.

"Mamma, I—I'm going to have— to have a baby."

The shock of the news was its own ether. Mrs. Steddon whispered back, cowering:

"You? You! My baby! You? A baby?"

Mem nodded and nodded till her knees were on the floor and her brow in her mother's lap. Old hands came gropingly about her cheeks. She felt the drip, drip of tears falling into her hair, each tear a separate pearl from a crown of pride.

Then her mother fumbled at the dreadful question:

"But who—who—"

"Elwood!"

Mrs. Steddon's decision was easy, and she made no difficulty of the gross deceits involved. Her husband must be protected in his illusions and protected from the necessity of wreaking his high moral principles on his own child. His child must be protected from the merciless world and the immediate wrath of the village.

NATION'S

CIVIL SERVICE CABINET

Governments Ri... Real Work of t... fly On—It Is I... of Departments.

When a general ... a change of Govern... er in Answers, a new group of p... cians with different aims and ideas take over the management of the nation's affairs. Even when the Government in power is returned, there is usually a re-shuffle of offices and new men are promoted.

We look upon these leaders as our rulers. In a sense they are. But only in a sense. Parties come into power and go out of power. Policies are introduced, and abandoned.

But the Sivil Service goes its even way, and it is the Civil Service that really rules us.

There are comparatively few prizes in the service of the State, and they are not very glittering ones. Salaries are not high, pensions are exceedingly modest. Yet the Civil Service is composed of some of the most brillian men in the land. They are the masters of the situation in their respective departments, whatever party happens to be in power at the moment.

This efficient and smooth-running machine is the backbone of our political system. Without it the politicians would be as impotent as babes.

The House of Commons could shut down for eleven months out of twelve and the Civil Service could administer the country, but if the Civil Service "downed tools" for a week the result would be chaos.

When a newly-appointed Minister takes over one of the great Departments of State, he enters a realm whose real rulers are the permanent staff. He depends upon them for advice, knowledge of procedure, organization, and help in putting into effect the policy of his Government.

The Civil Servant has no politics—officially. It is his duty to give effect to the policy of the Government of the moment. Privately, he may disagree with the policy, but he is there to carry out his instructions. He does so loyally.

There have been in the past, and there no doubt will be again, Ministers who have leaned very heavily upon their permanent officials. The complicated machinery of high office, the intricate organization of government, and the rules and precedents of their departments were alike unknown to them.

In other words, they were not unlike certain army officers in the old days who had to rely upon their noncommissioned officers to run their commands.

When a Cabinet Minister holding the portfolio of a State department rises in the House of Commons and deals adroitly with an intricate mass of figures and facts, we are impressed with his ability.

What has actually gone before?

There is an awkward question put down on the paper. The Minister must deal with it. He presses a bell in his office and explains the circumstances to the secretary who answers it. Presently there lies before him all the material he requires, prepared by the permanent experts of the department. He can never hope to know so much about any particular affair as those men, whose lives are spent where he will spend at most a few years—and that without intensive training.

Although the burden of administering the country rests really upon the shoulders of the permanent Civil Service, the salaries paid are small compared with those enjoyed by men of equal cleverness in industry or commerce or in some of the professions.

Nowadays, when the prizes of the business world are so huge, it is not surprising to find some of the most brilliant of our Civil Servants turning from Government service to private enterprise. Sir Josiah Stamp, Britain's greatest economist, is one instance; Lord Bradbury is another. Both these men were in the Civil Service. Both, to-day, are earning large incomes outside it.

We talk of the Civil Service as a protected occupation. It is. Civil Servants need not worry about old age. It is assured. But, on the other hand, they have to renounce wealth and, very largely, personal ambition.

These conditions attract men of the highest personal character. Unseen, unknown to fame, they administer our great country. The greatest offices do not go to them, but to men in politics. They are the professionals who serve under amateurs.

What is their compensation? Perhaps the knowledge of power, perhaps the ideal of public service. Whatever it is, it is certain that they are the men who really rule us. And they rule us very efficiently, too.

Couldn't Fool Him.

A Boer backvelder in a remote part of the Transvaal began to have doubt, owing to native depredations, as to the safety of £300 he had stowed away under his bed. A friend advised him to deposit the cash at a bank in the nearest town and they would look after it for him. The farmer did so, and asked the bank manager what would be his charge for keeping it safe and sound. On being told that far from there being any charge, the bank would pay him £15 per annum, he "smelt a rat," and brought the money back to the farm!

Summertime and Accidents

In Ontario, according to the latest figures published, there were 269 deaths among males and 44 among females, due to drowning during the year. The age group claiming the highest number among the men and boys was that from 20 to 24 years, having a total of 42 fatalities. The women and girls who lost their lives in this way numbered 10 in the age group 14 to 24, the highest single number as regards age. So far as our boys are concerned, instruction in swimming might well be given at an early age ,as Ontario loses her boys by accidental drowning in large numbers beginning in the fifth year of life. It goes without saying, of course, that girls also should be taught to swim at the earliest possible age.

Deaths Due to Automobile Accidents

Our death-rate from accidents in Ontario to-day is alarmingly high. Automobiles are an important factor in fatal accidents. "Be careful" is a bit of self-help advice which will help not only yourself but the rest of the world as well.

If you use a motor car—be careful. The driver and his passengers derive just as much protection from his careful driving as do the people he meets on his way.

If you use a bicycle—be careful. There are very dangerous risks to be considered in riding a bicycle; be fair to the motor car and to the pedestrian, but first of all, be fair to yourself.

If you do not use a motor car—be careful. The deaths of children following motor accidents are not always the fault of the driver; they are often due to carelessness on the part of the parents or the children themselves. Old people who are nervous should not cross streets and highways busy with traffic by themselves.

The motor car is a blessing of modern progress—reasonable care will do much to prevent it becoming a curse.

The Vote

New Statesman (London): The fate of elections, it is often said, depends on the "floating vote," which changes sides according to the temporary merits of Governments and Opposition policies and leadership. But this view represents the situation. There is a floating vote of this sort; and it is an important electoral factor. But there is also a floating vote, probably as large, that depends not on considered judgement, but on pure prejudice. There are voters who may vote either way, according a "stunt" which reaches the consciousness of the non-political electors. There are voters who will certainly vote for a political party if they vote at all, but care so little that it needs a successful "stunt" to get them to the booth. And there are even—astonishing thought—quite a number of voters who have been on theregister for many years, and have never even troubled to vote at all, despite all the expensive propaganda which the various parties have lavished upon them. Even the voter who does vote ordinarly regards voting at least as much in the light of duty as a privilege.

Canada and Naval Defence

Toronto Telegram (Ind. Con): The pacifists in the countries are again howling for further cuts in the National Defence estimates. And to pacify the pacifist the minister declares that this young nation spends less per inhabitant for defence than any other nation in the world. And from this distance it looks as if the Minister's statement wasn't anything to boast about. Canada has set up as a nation with embassies at Paris, Washington and Tokio. She insists on the right to make treaties and settle disputes with foreign powers off her own bat. She practically tells the Mother Country to go away back and sit down, that she is running a household of her own. Like the man who is playing a "bob-tail flush," she is all right as long as she isn't "called." But some time the showdown will come. And when it does, what has Canada got to show? Neither will it contain a trace of mockery.

Why should the tax payers of these islands spend money advertising South African products only to be sneered at, given the cold shoulder, have their flag dishonored? Let South Africa be cut off from the benifits of the Empire Marketing Board. If the Empire is acknowledged only in name let it be in name only where benefits are concerned as well as obligations. England is the best customer of the Union. England is the guardian of her trade routes. Without England's support the Union would stand weak and shivering. We cannot withdraw that support for the sake of loyal subjects of the Crown. But we do believe that complacency has gone to far, and that a hint or our power in the withdrawal of the "boosting" and buying of South African products would have a most salutary effect.

"Pine Riders" In "Roller Contest"

High Climbing, Tree Topping and Chopping Races Will Be Other Features of Novel Exhibition Illustrating Woodsmen's Skill in Tasks of Every Day

Longview, Wash.—Riding pines instead of ponies, punching logs instead of cows, scaling trees instead of steeples, lumbermen of the Northwest are preparing for a widely advertised day—or, rather, forest day is to be devoted to competitions according to arrangements now being made.

Called a "rolleo"—because it offers many similar tests of skill with none of the objections of the rodeo—the days is to be devoted to competitions in sports and practices common to lumbermen in the Northwest.

As the name implies, the contest will center about the rolling logs which lumbermen "herd," ride and drive through the great mill ponds to the slips of the head mills.

Some of the other competitions which are being arranged are high climbing, tree topping, log bucking and chopping races.

High climbing and tree topping are spectacular and necessary parts of the Northwest woodsman's job. Every woods camp has at least one high climber whose job it is to mount the giant Douglas firs to a height varying from 150 to 225 feet, using a belt and spurs similar to a telephone lineman's equipment.

At the highest feasible point, he cuts off, with axe and saw, the top of the tree, and clings to his precarious perch as the top, frequently 50 feet high itself, thunders to the ground. He then rigs the tree with pulleys and cables, and it is used as a spar tree for a "log setting" to haul in the logs and load them aboard logging cars.

Other lumbering communities in the Northwest are being asked by the Longview Chamber of Commerce, which is sponsoring the event, to co-operate, and the competition, which will last two days, is being billed as the world's championship.

The "rolleo" will be held in Lake Sacajawea Park within the city limits. Twelve hundred dollars in cash and prizes are offered, and the event is advertised especially as a tourist attraction.

Airplane or Aeroplane?

Truth (London): Having expressed a preference for the American word "aeroplane," I was a trifle disconcerted to read in the Times last week a letter from a gentleman who dogmatically declared that "airplane" was "not English—only journalese." Next day, however, I was relieved by a crushing report in the Times to the effect that "airplanes" was advocated by Professor Skeat about 1913, on the grounds that it was more English than "aeroplanes." Evidently you pays your money and takes your choice.

Winnipeg Tribune (Ind. Desirable as it is, the United States market for farm products is a will-o'-the wisp, and the farmers who have pursued it politically for many years will have to adjust their economic reasoning accordingly.

DO NOT NEGLECT YOUR LITTLE ONES

At no time of life is delay or neglect more serious than at childhood. The ills of little ones come quickly and unless the mother is prompt in administering treatment a precious little life may be snuffed out almost before the mother realizes the baby is ill. The prudent mother always keeps something in the medicine chest as a safeguard against the sudden illness of her little ones. Thousands, of mothers have found, through experience, that there is no other medicine to equal Baby's Own Tablets and that is why they always keep a box of the Tablets on hand—why they always feel safe with the Tablets.

Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which by regulating the bowels and stomach banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and promote healthy, natural sleep. Concerning them, Mrs. Isaac Sonia, St. Eugene, Ont., writes.—"I have been using Baby's Own Tablets ever since baby was a month old and have found that they reach the spot and do more good than any other medicine I have ever tried. I always keep the Tablets in the house and would advise all other mothers to do so." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. William's Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Talkies to Shakespeare

Modern producers of plays have long ago given up the idea of rendering Shakespeare in his entirety, and although the modern playgoer would shrink from allowing the greatest of all the playwrights to be manhandled in the unscrupulous way of the Restoration or even the early Victorian stage, well-meaning suggestions are, from time to time, thrown out for bringing Shakespeare up to date. No less a person than the English dramatist, Ashley Dukes, himself a playwright of rare charm of style and invention, has even gone so far as to suggest recently that, while Shakespeare should not be acted in modern clothes, he should be rewritten in modern English.

The advent of the talkies will, perhaps, make the realization of this seemingly inconoclastic suggestion inevitable, for the technique of the talkies being even more remote from that of the Elizabethan stage tradition than the modern theatre, with its still surviving traces of the Tudor inn-yard, the transition to modernized speech could hardly be resented. Miss Mary Pickford, in her enthusiasm for her newly found speech, has perhaps anticipated the wish of the most fervent reformers when she disclosed her ambition to tackle Shakespeare "in a real setting' by a talkie version of the "Taming of the Shrew." And who, indeed, will not delight to see and hear Doug taming Mary in that rollicking way which is all his own?

Those, however, who may still desire to see their Shakespeare in his traditional, though hardly real, setting will be grateful to Dr. Harley Granville-Barker, who has just issued a solemn warning to the governors of the Stratford Memorial Theatre against making the new home of Shakespearean drama a place of grandiose and startling productions, against, that is, that "real" setting for which the talkies can be depended on so much better than any theatre.

"In Stratford," Dr. Granville-Barker writes in a letter to the London Times, "the object must be the creating and sustaining of a sober, sensitive and intelligent tradition of the acting of Shakespeare, and the interpreting of his plays for their own sake, the whole canon of them."

The West and the ast

John S. Holyland in the Nineteenth Century (London): It is common to hear reference made in the West to the disillusionment which followed the War, especially in regard to political affairs. However bitter this disillusionmentmay be the west, it was probably much greater in the East. Before the War India was immensely interested in many aspects of Western life and had a great belief that the Westmight bring to her many very valuable benefits. This feeling has now all but disappeared—at any rate amongst the vast majority of nationalistically minded Indians.. Few are now found (apart from a very small bory of moderates, headed by Tagore) who are willing to admit that the West has really anything to teach India. On the contrary, the majority are deeply concerned lest India be corrupted beyond repair by the prevasive forces of Western civilization. As a great living Indian phisolopher has expressed it: "There are men in the East who spend sleepless nights in cursing God because He has allowed these civilizers to get into their lands."

Syrian Women In America

By TERESE ROSE NAGEL

What the women of the eastern countries who have lead a secluded life do when they reach the United States? Do they enter the field of politics, business and commercial activity or are they content to lead a sheltered life as has been their custom for generations past in the Orient? This and many other questions relative to Syrian women in America were answered recently by Saloom A. Mokarsel, editor of the Syrian World, who has written and lectured extensively on this subject.

"It is only during the last 40 years that even Syrian men have come to America," said Mr. Mokarsel to a representative of The Christian Science Monitor. "As the immigration of women is considerably more recent, they have as yet not developed the American point of view. I am happy to say ,however, that through the establishment of many distinctive organizations, such as the recently formed Syrian Junior League of New York City and other associations throughout the country, our women are gradually coming to partake of the customs and manners of our adopted country. They are more used to home life, however, than to outside interests. They are excellent cooks and if you have ever tasted our 'warak anab wa malfoof,' which is a combination of grape leaves. meat and rice, you will readily understand why the men prefer that their wives remain domestic.

"The girls who come from Syrian families, although they have grown Americanized, are brought up to observe a strict moral code. They are taught never to talk to strangers. Of course, the young Syrian-American woman who goes to business has more liberty, but those not engaged in business seldom go about unchaperoned before marriage.

"The very few of our native women who do go into business," he continued, "usually enter into the jewelry or embroidery lines. There are Emma Maloof and Maria El Khoury, who have proven their worth in the merchandising world, and Louise Yazbeck of Shreveport, La., who is very active in the Music Week activities of that city.

"We of the East are proud of the fact that although at first we were only pedlars in this country, we have prospered greatly, and are able to express with our American-made dollars, the hospitality of the East. We are a law-abiding people and are seldom found in the courts or jails. The filial respect and devotion which characterize the Syrian home are the ultimate reason for Syrian good citizenship. This brings us to the marriage problem. Our traditions lean heavily to the side of restricting women in their personal liberties. Women throughout the East are in general rigorously secluded in their homes, forbidden to meet strangers of the other sex, and among Moslems, when compelled to appear in public, to be heavily veiled. It is only in these latter years that a movement has been inaugurated for the emancipation of women in the East.

"We are passing through a transitional stage at the present time, when it is perhaps a little bit difficult for our Syrian parents of the old order to adjust themselves to the American liberties of their children, who associating in the schools and colleges to which they are sent with children of all nationalities, are bound to seek the freedom of their new-found country. They are urged by their social leaders not to forget the traditions of their fathers, nor to adopt too strenuusly the license which some young people mistake for liberty, and to adhere to the finer things that they have been taught from childhood up."

Mr. Mokarsel, who leaves the early part of July for a two months' tour of the Holy Land, expects to make a complete study of the feminist question there.

Disarmament and Security

Professor H. A. Smith in the Spectator (London): In the actual order of things disarmament is not the parent of security, but rather the offspring. In civilized countries the average man walks about unarmed, not because the carrying of arms is illegal. but because he is practically certain that nobody is going to attack him. If he believed himself to be in danger he would go armed in spite of the law, since no man values the law above his own life. So it is with nations. They will disarm when they feel safe, and not till then. Until this feeling of security is established a general treaty of disarmament is as impossible as would be a statue prosibiting the carry ing of rifles in Afghanistan.

10,000 Bottles a Day

Every day 10,000 women buy a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. They know that there is no better remedy for their troublesome ailments with their accompanying nervousness, backache, headache, "blue" spells, and rundown condition.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

When Food Sours

About two hours after eating many people suffer from sour stomachs. They call it indigestion. It means that the stomach nerves have been overstimulated. There is excess acid. The way to correct it is with an alkali, which neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

The right way is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia—just a tasteless dose in water. It is pleasant, efficient and harmless. It has remained the standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

It is the quick method. Results come almost instantly. It is the approved method. You will never use another when you know.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drug store.

PARENTS AND CHILDREN

The story of the poor mother, near Toronto, who trusted a mealy-mouth hypocrit who came to her to secure her little 10 year old daughter, as he told the mother, to go as a companion to his own little girl to a summer camp for a couple of weeks, and then taking the little girl away with him to most brutally and inhumanly abuse, returning her to her home covered with scars and giving evidence ot the foulest abuse, should warn parents against allowing their daughters to go out of their sight with any stranger, no matter how attractive their manner or appearance. This man, aged 40 years, is now under arrest, and it is hoped, if the facts are as related, he will be given all he deserves for his crime. The story told by the mother was "he appeared so nice, so fatherly and sympathetic, that I did not think of his credentials until it was too late." A wolf in sheeps clothing.

THE LANARK ELECTION

The result of the Lanark Election is another illustration of the growing independence of the electorate, and the dwindling power of the political machine. There was a time in Lanark, and not many years ago, when the political machine, especially the Conservative machine, was all powerful, and to fight against it seemed hopeless. But evidently the machine has worn itself out, its day is done, and the "Free and Independent" electors intend hereafter voting as they please. The Conservative Convention called to select a candidate was evidently "packed." It is not the first time that the Conservative machine in Lanark has "packed" a convention. But the day of machine politics is over, and hereafter a candidate will have to depend on his reputation and his ability more than the machine behind him. It is a happy day for the country as well as the people.

THE GLOBE'S OPEN MINDEDNESS

The Toronto Globe in its anxiety to be "fair, open-minded, and unprejudiced" is showing signs of somewhat overdoing it, and not maintaining a well blamed poise politically. For instance, while it rails at its own party at Ottawa because of bootleggers and rum-running orgies at Windsor and other points, it fails to point out the ever growing evils and the orgies caused by the L. C. Act in Ontario. While the Globe is quick to point out any weakness or imperfection in Premier King, it never fails to magnify any little act of merit on the part of the Premier of Ontario. The Globe is wielding a powerful infiuence on the public mind of Canada, but it is in danger of greatly lessening its influence by indulging in some of its pet theories, or overdoing its Liberalism.

A CANADIAN FLAG

If Canada wants a flag of her own, distinctive and outstanding, let Canada earn or acquire the right to such a flag. At present Canada is a part of the British Empire, the "Good Old Union Jack." It is our protection at present. It is the flag that stands for all that Canada stands for, has fought for, and is willing, to fight again for. The Press is pleased to note that the resolution passed at the recent meeting at London of the Canada Weekly Newspaper Assn. endorsing the movement for a distinctive Canadian Flag, is not meeting with the approval of the more influential weekly newspaper editors and the Alliston Herald states that it was passed when many of the representatives of the better weekly newspapers were absent. The C. W. N. A. had better stick to its knitting and not attempt to raise any flag issue.

HOW DOES IT APPLY TO-DAY

The following piece of advice appeared in a newspaper printed 25 years ago, and no doubt was good advice at that time. The question is, how does it apply to the young ladies of to-day?

"Young woman, do you ever expect to get a husband who will work for you, live for you and you alone, who will devote all his energy towards making you happy and comfortable? If you do, then keep off the streets at night. Don't put your pocket money into ribbons and laces. tan shoes and chewing gum. Don't gad about the streets from morning until night and let your old mother do all the housework. Good men don't want such girls. A sensible man wants a girl who is likely to make a good woman, one who is a comfort and a joy through life."

NO MORE PARTY VOTE

The day is coming, and fast coming, when the "Stand pat" party man will be the lonely fellow. Independence in political thought is now here, and here to stay. No longer will electors boast that their grandfathers before them were Conservatives or Liberals, and they are the same. In fact the man who so boasts today displays a lamentable lack of common understanding or intelligence.

POPULAR BILLY WILSON

Even if Billy Wilson, Mayor of Gananoque, never reaches the position of Prime Minister or Governor General of Canada, he is already known in the United States better than any other Canadian, and his popularity in his native land is equal to that of any Prime Minister. Last week, according to the Gananoque Reporter, Billy was asked to locate a tourist from Harrisburg, Pa., and he had him located in three hours after he received the message. He received a letter from Utica, N. Y., written by a lady who wanted to know when Gananoque's Mayor intend running another excursion among the 1000 Islands. He receives letters of inquiry from all parts, and he never neglects to answer all requests. Mayor Wilson is not only a great man for Gananoque, but for all Canada.

CHILDREN PLAYING ON STREETS

Warning have evidently failed to stir up parents to the responsibility of keeping their children from playing on the streets. Accidents have become so frequent in Cornwall of children being struck and run over by cars when playing on the streets, that the City Council intend prosecuting the parents of children they find playing on the streets. We have witnessed right here at home so many narrow escapes of children being crushed to death when playing on the streets, that one wonders if parents really know of their danger. Particularly dangerous is it when they are playing with a ball. While blame is being heaped on careless motorists, we think many parents are even more deserving of censure for their carelessness in allowing their children to play on the public streets.

THE SAFETY CAMPAIGN

The "Highway Safety" Campaign being conducted by the Honorable, the Minister of Public Highways of Ontario, is intended to reach and include the special safety of those who are supporters of the Ferguson Government only, and those who are not, might as well be exposed to all the dangers of the highways, and killed off. Anyway that seems to be the attitude the Minister of Highways, for he refuses to place any of his "Warning" Advts in any of those weekly newspapers that supported the greatest safety movement of the age, "Prohibition," at the last election. All other weekly newspapers are favored. It is certainly a novel way of promoting a 'Safety First' campaign by a government that is supposed to be big enough to forget party in the interests of public safety.

Over one hundred Ontario and Quebec newspaper publishers attended the first annual meeting of the Ontario and Quebec division of the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association held in Toronto February 8th. This association was formed last October, and the large attendance at the first meeting more than warrants the importance and necessity of this division.

An important feature of the business transacted was the adoption of a suggestion to hold meetings once a year, the meeting places to alternate in Ontario and Quebec. Two-day sessions will be held, and the next meeting will take place in Quebec, probably at Montreal, in February, 1930. Officers of the association were re-elected as follows: President, David Williams, Collingwood; vice-president, George Legge, Granby, Que.; secretary-treasurer, Geo. W. James, Bowmanville. Directors: A. W. Marsh, Amherstburg; C. V. Charters, Brampton; Adam Sellar, Huntingdon, Que.; G. M. Goodfellow, Whitby; C. E. LaBranche, Three Rivers, Que.

Life's Lesson

When you've worked your very hardest,
And you find your task undone,
When you've seen another person
Step in and take your fun,

When success that you have planned for
Turns failure most complete,
When you feel your whole world totter
Beneath your tired feet,

When you KNOW that you've been foolish
And are reaping what you sowed,
It is THEN you'd best start singing
Along the rough old road.

You may find that tears are flowing,
But just keep straight along,
And sing a little louder,
Or try another song!

You'll find some laughter somewhere,
Where you least expect it, too!
Maybe, as you go onwards,
You'll learn to laugh at YOU!

$100 Worth Free

A Toronto dispatch, dated July 18th says:—

"United States customs officials at Detroit have ceased to admit free of duty the usual $100 of merchandis purchased in Canada by a tourist, according to a complaint received from the Essex County Motor Club by the Ontario Motor League here. Customs officials are contending that the rule has been abrogated, the complaint says, and one instance is cited of a woman who was obliged to pay duty on a set of dishes valued at $100. Gilbert Robertson, secretary of the Motor League immediately communicated with United States customs authorities in Washington regarding the complaint. A letter was received to-day from the Commissioner of Customs, who said the rule is unchanged, and is still in effect. The Essex club has been informed of the Washington reply.

No longer forward nor behind
I look in hope or fear;
But grateful, take the good I find,
The best of now and here,

Symbols In Rugs

Montreal.—Interpretations of drawings on Oriental carpets were exemplified by D. W. Thomas, president of St. David's Society, in an address on "The Influence of the Orient over American and European Countries."

Various industrial contributions of the Orient to other nations of the world and a short history of the Orient opened the speaker's remarks. In early days, Oriental rugs were not marketed. They were given to relatives or friends as tokens of remembrance or friendship. But to-day, the Orient, like all other countries, has commercialized all its products and its arts. Nevertheless, the same art as that of preceeding centuries still prevails in all exported carpets.

To the majority of possessors of Oriental rugs, the speaker stated, the designs are without meaning. But such is not always the case for every design such as the eight pointed star, the sun, the flowers, the four cardinal points and the bird, is the symbol of an actual thing. Imitation of the style existing in pilars erected in Persia has also prevailed throughout the centuries.

These carpets are found chiefly in Persia. There is a notable difference between the style of Northern Persia and that of Southern Persia. The latter differs from the first in the abundance of curves rather than the geometrical and symmetrical forms of Northern Persia. Various examples of these differences were illustrated by the speaker.

The Cost of Crashing

New York Herald-Tribune: There is discussion among jurists as to whether airplanes should be liable only for damages they inflict through negligence or absolutely liable, and a strong argument for the latter view is the extreme difficulty of proving that the pilot (who is likely to be dead) was negligent. The Connecticut law makes the plane liable only when there has been negligence, but the law, already adopted in twelve States, which has been drafted by the Committee on Uniform State Laws makes it absolutely liable.

Therefore, it is not surprising that business men, in advertising for stenographers should specially say, "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

Debunking Debunkers

New York Sun: There are two kinds of biography which are equally bad. The one errs on the side of adulation; the other on that of defamation. The one makes imitation angels of all its subjects; the ther makes of them limbs of Satan. Debunkers are entitled at least to this much credit: they have made sticky sentimentality unfashionable in biographical writing. But the debunkers themselves need debunking when they permit their method to degenerate into slander for profit.

In Waterton Lakes Park

Waterton lakes in Waterton Lakes National Park, Alberta, were named by Lieut. T. Blakiston, R.A., who visited the territory with the Palliser Expedition, sent out in 1857, to find a feasible route across the mountains. Lieut. Blakiston visited these beautiful sheets of water on the way to explore the Kootenay Pass. He named them after Charles Waterton, the English naturalist and traveller.

What British Think of Radio "Adverts"

There is a spirited reply in the "Radio Times" to the suggestion that British "listeners in" might like programmes provided by advertising firms as in America. The writer says:

"The British Broadcasting corporation, because of its privileged position in holding a monopoly of broadcasting in this country, is inevitably the target for a steady fire of criticism. We accept that as right, and as evidence that the work the B.B.C. is doing, essentially concerned as it is with matters of individual taste and preference, excites the right kind of interest in the public mind. The B.B.C. has always welcomed criticism, in the hope that something could be learned from it by which th actual work of those who provide the programmes could be tested and proved.

"The result however, has hitherto been disappointing; now and then an individual letter contains some really helpful criticism or suggestion; when it does, it is always most gratefully accepted and acted on. But, the amount of constructive criticism from the outside is extremely small. There is more constructive criticism expreseed within the B.B.C. organization in one month than is received from the whole of the public in a year.

There is always a number of grumblers at any public service; and the B.B.C. is not without its share. In spite of the fact that people who find fault are always more prone to write letters than those who are pleased and satisfied, the number of complaints or criticisms received by the B.B.C. is very small in comparison with letters of praise and appreciation. Their programmes are admitted by those who conduct broadcasting in other countries (not excluding America) to be, in breadth, quality and variety, unrivalled by the work of any other broadcasting organization.

"By these experts the cause of this is almost universally attributed to the fact that the B.B.C. has a monopoly and that it is wisely used. Yet this monopoly, of course, is made possible by the license system whereby every proprietor of a receiving set pays ten shillings per annum, of which, on present license figures, roughly seven shillings is passed on by the Post Office to the Corporation to provide, not the programmes which some capricious advertiser may think desirable, but which are considered independently and for their own sake to be the best possible programmes obtainable.

"In America the ether is racked and torn with competing broadcasting stations filling the air with advertising matter, the sorting out of which involves very expensive and selective receiving sets; in England it is sufficiently peaceful for its alternative programmes to be employed by the humblest listener with the cheapest receiving set.

"In America, even the wireless reception of a Beethoven Symphony cannot be free from association with someone's chewing gum or pills. In England, the tired worker who has been all day shouted at and advertised to in his newspaper, on the hoardings, in train or omnibus, may settle down to his evening's wireless entertainment with the feeling that at last he is free from the necessity to listen to someone who has something to sell.

Farm Notes

The well arraned herbaceous border is a charming feature of the well-kept home grounds If the plants have been well selected there is assured a continuous flower display from early spring until the autumn frosts arrive. The perennial border may be started either by the purchase of plants in the fall or spring of the year ,or by raising the plants from seed. The latter way is much more economical and this is the season of the year when the seeds should be planted for next year's border. In a new bulletin on "Herbaceous Perennials" by Miss Isabella Preston of the Horicultural Division of the Dominion Experimental Farms, it is recommended to establish the seed bed in a shady position though not under trees The soil need not be rich, but if it is very heavy it is recommended to lighten it was sand. For good germination the surface soil must be very fine. Miss Preston recommends a width of four feet for the bed and a length limited only by the available garden space and the quantity of plants desired to be grown. This bulletin, which contains a wealth of horticultural information, the result of many years' experience and observation, is now ready for distribution at the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa. The perennials best suited for Canadian gardens in all parts of Canada are enumerated and described and their culture carefully dealt with.

Grades for Strawberries

The marketing of all kinds of produce is materially helped when properly graded. The Fruit Commissioner of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa has offered recommended grades for strawberries. First of all it is recommended that the fruit be divided into Number 1, Number 1 Canning, and Number 1 for jam. The specifications for Number 1 strawberries calls for fruit with the calyx and a short stem attached ,which are well former, of good color, firm but not over-ripe, free from surface moisture, bruises, bird pecks, mould, and from damage caused by sand, disease or other means. The minimum diameter for this grade is three-quarters of an inch, measured from side to side.

Number 1 canning strawberries are recommended to consist of field run fruit, clean, sound, ripe, firm, and of uniform size, of good color and free frm malformed or monkeyfaced berries.

The specifications for Number 1 jam strawberries call for field run fruit, clean, ripe, and of good color, free from malformed or monkeyfaced berries.

In order to allow for variations incident to careful commercial grading and handling, an allowance of five per cent. under the prescribed size and five per cent. by volume may fall below the remaining requirements of the grade.

The New Woman Minister of Labor

Miss Bondfield the First Woman to Hold Highest Position in the Labour Administration

It will be remembered that in the last Labour Government that Miss Margaret Bondfield, M.P., held the post of Under-Secretary of State at the Home Office, and as Mr. Ramsay MacDonald is to be Premier Miss Bondfield is likely to get an important post. The "Socialist Christian" reprints an address of hers which was not widely reported at the time in the newspapers, and it dealt largely with the question of teaching the rising generation how the mind can be trained towards the right use of leisure. Miss Bondfield said:—

"It is brought home to us in this mass of unemployment in a most terrible way. Here are our young people condemned to most terrible idleness—I am aware that many people cannot see as I see about this question, but I am profoundly convinced that we must set up as part of the machinery of this country, training centres, or adult educational establishments—I personally do not much care what is taught in those centres, as long as they are places where young people may demand to go whenever the industrial world does not need their labour, to go there and learn those things they want to learn—dancing, Spanish, engineering, or whatever it is, not because they want to make money out of it, but because they have a mind, and it is the duty of society to give them every opportunity."

"WHEN I GO INTO FACTORIES"

"When I go into mass production factories, and I see the nature of the work that these children are sent to when they leave school— these children have been taken out of that social environment which has brought out all that is fine in them if you have anything like a decent school and a decent staff of teachers—these children are surrounded by everything that will help them to expand and when they leave school at fourteen, they are surrounded by an invironment that shuts them up absolutely, as far as giving them any encouragement to learn anything more or try to do anything bigger; their transition is so sudden, so drastic, so terrible that we have to-day to recognise from many quarters that by the time the girls or boys have reached sixteen they have lost all desire to write or read, and what they have learned at school has been wiped out as though a sponge had ben passed across a slate.

"It is not merely economic waste, but it is a national disaster when that kind of thing happens. In the papr the other day, a paragraph occured about the men recruited for the police force and it was stated that a very large number of them—young men, of any age from eighteen upwards—turned out to be illiterate.

"That is one of the awful consequences of the war period, when the children were sacrificed during the war, and it is not merely those who were at school during the war, but now, even at the present time, children who left school two years ago, when you met them to-day after two years in a mass production factory, they are practically uninterested in the things of the mind, uninterested in following up anything like a scholastic development.

RIGHT KIND OF LEISURE AS WELL AS WORK

"And so, in order that we may not lose ground, in order that the personality and the character of our people may be maintained, it is sovitally necessary to recognise the importance of not merely providing work in the first instance, but owing to its monotonous character, of so reducing the hours of work that there shall be leisure for the development of creative power, and that shall encourage them to use this leisure.

"I had the great bood fortune to be born in the country— and to me the country seems to be the natural place for all young things to be born in. It seems to me so dreadful when a little baby's first view of the world is some drab, sordid street, where they don't even get a glimpse of the sky because of the smoke-laden atmosphere.

"Life in the country may be poor, but it gives memories to the child that nothing else can ever quite efface —they at least hear the singing of the birds, they at least see the flowers coming in the spring, they at least see the green grass grow— and if we can do anything to beautify our towns, it is well worth while. I am convinced of the power of beauty in our young life. There is that movement the City Gardens Movement— I think anyone who has been down to Bermondsey at some time of the year, and contrasts Bermondsey with the kind of conditions that existed twenty years ago, will see how much of beauty has been introduced inte that sordid part of London.

"I am just throwing out these fragmentary efforts because I do want to commend that one idea to you not merely a greater distinction of the worlds wealth, nor merely security for those things needful for the body, so that anxiety shall be completely removed from the minds of the people, but that we have also to realise that we are in an era when there ought to be more leisure for everybody, and probably the most important thing we have to learn is the right use of that leisure."

No Doctors Soon If Disease Dies

Hygiene Council Told Profession Seeks to Eliminate Itself

Instead of seeking further fields for profit by encouraging periodical examinations, inoculations and vaccinations, the medical profession is actually tending to eliminate itself, Dr. T. C. Routley, of Toronto, secretary of the Canadian Medical Association, stated at the luncheon preceding the annual meeting of the Canadian Social Hygiene Council in Montreal recently. People were apt to resent legally imposed medical attention, Dr. Routley stated, and frequently accused the medical profession of ulterior motives in having it passed, while, on the contrary, preventive medicine had wiped out national scourges which had not long ago been one of the practioner's outstanding sources of business.

In bringing greetings to the council from his association he also brought its congratulations on the work the council had been accomplishing in creating a public opinion which welcomed good health measures. Other speakers at the luncheon were the Hon. P. R. DuTremblay, who presided, Dr. Gordon Bates, secretary-general of the council, Dr. N. McL. Harris, president of the Canadian Public Health Association, Dr. C. F. Martin, dean of the medical faculty of McGill University, and J. C. Callaghan, president of the Hamilton Chamber of Commerce.

The educational programme of the council had resulted in a striking decrease in the death rate of babies in the province, Mr. Du Tremblay stated. It would, he felt, be impossible for the city and province to lag behind with assistance when the council had created such an effective public opinion on the matter. The other visiting speakers also had warm commendation to offer the work of the council.

In replying to the guests, Dr. Gordon Bates stated that the council was most encouraged by such support, particularly that coming from the lay organizations, because through them the scientific work of the professional was brought in touch with the wide public which it was designed to assist.

Heart to Heart Talk

By Dr. John Joseph Haines

"OPEN BOOKS"

It has often been said of a good man that, "His life was an open book." I believe it is generally accepted as a very high compliment.

I read yesterday where a newspaper writer said, "The man who declares his life to be an open book is a half-brother to Ananias." I have heard many candidates for substantial official honors say, "My record is an open book; any man is welcome to read it."

More sober thought convinces me that no man's record is fully spread out for public scrutiny, neither should it be. In every life there is something to which the general public has absolutely no right. A man's official record may be read by his supporters or enemies alike, provided the same be of record; but the spirit behind those official acts may be known by no man.

Very few men have the time or inclination to waste several days perusing a book that is wholly personal to its author; a book lying open on a table may have a chapter or pages exposed to view that are of no earthly interest to nine readers out of ten; the volume is of no more interest open than it would be closed.

So, no man's life is an open book, whatever his position in society or in life. It is proper to be so.

Men have fought and killed other men over disputed views of existing records. Seldom do two men hold the very same view of a neighbor, a public servant, a nation beyond seas; what does it matter that the "books" are open?

My life is not an open book; neither is yours. I do not invite inspection of all my deeds by my fellows; I do not wish to pry into things not my business; and, the world is neither worse nor better, by our leaving each other's private affairs alone. There are a great many extravagant things said that would be quite as well passed over in silence.

He that still may see your cheeks,
Where all rareness still reposes,
Is a fool if e'er he seeks
Other lilies, other roses.
—WM BROWNE

In the winter your powder may be a cosmetic, nothing more. But in the summer it is the comfort of warm days, the freshness of humid ones, the one soothing, cooling touch all through the season that nothing else can furnish.

Probably in the first month of summer more bath talcum is used than during all the rest of the year together. It should not be, of course. Talcum powder is a useful, dainty feminine accessory all through the year. But it is especially important in the summer.

After a warm bath, or after a cool, refreshing shower, bath powder applied generously with the big, soft puffs which come in the large, open-mouthed boxes will add immeasurably to your sense of personal comfort and daintiness. And to your security, as well, for most of these bath talcums have deodorizing properties that effectively neutralize the odors of perspiration.

Face Powder is another important summertime consideration. A shiny nose is such an annoying feature—it can do more to upset one's self confidence than any other defect of good grooming. And shiny noses are so common in warm weather.

Before I discuss the ways of selecting a summertime face powder I am going to advise you to use a "shine" corrective during these warm, sultry months before you apply your makeup. A special lotion or a liquid astringent skin tonic which corrects "shine" will preserve your makeup longer and also normalize the function of those over-active pores.

In choosing your powder be sure to get one dark enough—it should be at least as dark as your skin, and to be fashionable, one or two shades darker. A powder with a cream base, specially created to "stay put" is much to be preferred in warm weather. Such a powder, in addition to being an attractive and convenient cosmetic, actually provides a certain desirable amount of protection for your skin against detrimental, weathering effects.

PORTRAIT OF FIRST GOVERNOR OF NOVA SCOTIA UNVEILED

Above is the recently secured portrait of Hon. Edward Cornwallis, founder of Halifax in 1749, and the first Governor of Nova Scotia, which was unveiled in the old Legislative Council Chamber of the Province at Halifax. This portrait was painted in 1755 by Sir George Chalmers, and it was purchased in London, England, through efforts of Premier Rhodes and others. It is thought to be the only existing portrait of Cornwallis.

A Song For To-day

These things for all are sure to be
Things each shall own and never see
Things man and woman, young or gray,
Shall have and keep and take away;
Yet owning them, ne'er young nor old
These last possessions shall behold.
No eye shall see the roses red
Sent in love's name when life has fled
Nor view the casket, cushioned deep,
Wherein the body long must sleep.

These words no ear shall ever hear:
The praises spoken at the bier;
The prayer, the litany that's said
And all the ritual for the dead.
Vain then is beauty to the eye;
Vain then the softly uttered sigh
If love from foolish pride or fear
Witheld the praise the friend could hear;
Then vain are all the praises said
Within the presence of the dead.

If but the dead could talk once more
To us who seek the crepe-trimmed door
I fancy they would smile and say:
"We have no need of pomp today.
Give to the living all your care,
Befriend the ones who need you there,
And let your love wide-opened be
To those who still can hear and see,
Beautify life for those who live:
God to the dead His care will give."

Ruts

The world is full o' ruts, my boy,
Some shaller and some deep;
An' every rut is full of folks as
High as they can heap.

Each one that's growlin' in the ditch
Is growlin' at his fate,
An' wishin' he had got his chance
Before it was too late.

They lay it all on somene else, or
Say 'twas just their luck—
They never one consider that 'twas
Caused by lack o'pluck.
But here's the word o' one that's lived
Clean through, from soup to nuts;
The Lord don't send no derricks round
T' hist folks out o'ruts.

For Today

Give me this day the heart of a child!
A simple heart, and filled with trust
In man and God. May I be just
And merciful; may I be kind,
So that my eyes at times are blind.
To others' faults, and may my own,
By me unseen, be overthrown.
Give me this day the heart of a child!
A bouyant heart, and filled with joy;
May gladsome tasks be my employ.
From my soul remove the stain of tears;
Lift from my heart the weight of years.
he joy of life, in work, in play,
Be mine—and yours—from day to day.
A heart that loves a heart that sings,
From blight of greed yet undefield;
A heart in which a pacan rings—
Give me this day the heart of a child!

The Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaelis

Ah, Treasure Now

Life flaunts such wealth of loveliness today
That Youth, the prodigal,
Would pluck it with both hands to fling away
In mood of carnival.

Can one bid Youth to clutch with eager grasp
At laughter, song and mirth,
To hold them captive in a miser's clasp,
For coming days of dearth?

Yet it were well to keep some petals still
A kiss, a smile, a tear—
In memory secure against the chill
Of some far wintry year,

Ah, treasure now the fragrance and the bloom
That breathe on every side!
Keep them like rose leaves for times scentless room,
When lovely Spring has died.

A Record

A record should be kept always
Of what we lose or gain,
A record of triumphant days
And sunless hours of pain.

And we must pay but little heed
To darker entries there;
But, ah! how often we should read
Of joyous times and fair.

For all the failures we may make,
We never need despair;
But we can seek in each mistake
To find the reason there.

Then on dark days, what joy to turn
To some glad hour again,
And from its memories to learn
How little power has pain.

Left Widow $15,000

A few weeks ago a farmer entered a branch bank at Hamilton, presented a gun at the teller and got away with $1,000. He was followed by the police and cornered in a small house in which he took refuge in the cellar. During the exchange of shots Detective Clark was hit and died shortly after. The farmer, whose name was Charles Long, was also shot, and died. Financial difficulties influenced Long to visit the bank, it was explained at the time. He had $200 cash and $5,715 personal property, chiefly insurance Real estate holdings were valued at $15,000, against which there was a $7,000 mortgage. In addition to being the sole beneficiary, Mrs. Melva Long is the sole executrix of the will which gives her about $15,000.

Must Bid As A Creditor

Whether a creditor attending a public auction sale, at which the debtor has advertised his farm and impliments to be sold according to certain terms, set out in the advertisement, and who has instructed the auctioneer how to deal with the purchase money, can defeat the debtor's intention by buying in the goods at the sale, and then claiming the right to set off his debt against the amount of his purchase, was the question which His Honor Judge Sutherland was called upon to decide in a case tried at Hanover last month.

The facts were that one, Stade, had instructed auctioneer R. H. Fortune, of Ayton, to sell his farm stock and implements in the Township of Normanby, and out of the proceeds to pay the rent and taxes, etc., and hand over the surplus to him. At the sale Steinhagen, an uncle of Stade, to whom Stade owed $200, bought goods to the extent of $171, and removed the goods and refused to pay for them upon the ground that Stade owed him over $200. The plaintiff, the autioneer, sued Steinhagen for $171, the value of the goods sold, and recovered judgment for the amount, with costs, the Judge finding that as Steinhagen had not communicated to the auctioneer the fact that he was bidding as a creditor, he could not defeat the arrangements already made.

Softball

On Monday night the All Stars lost their winning streak when they were defeated by the Business Men, 14-9 in a closely contested game of softball. On Tuesday night the Clerks defeated the C. P. R. by the small margin of 18-16. The standing is as follows:

	Won	Lost	To Play
All Stars	5	2	1
Business Men	3	2	3
Clerks	3	3	2
C. P. R.	2	3	3
Ramblers	1	4	3

Baseball

On Friday night last Morewood defeated Winchester 5-4 in a closely contested game of baseball. Owing to darkness, the game was called at the end of the sixth inning. This gives Morewood the top wrung of the league ladder, but Winchester is in second place and still has a chance to win out in the end. Chesterville has dropped out of the league owing to some difficulties derived from a couple of protested games, therefore Morrisburg stands third.

Refreshing Shower

Last Sunday morning, and until about four in the afternoon the oppressive heat made life uncomfortable for every one. It was anything but a day of rest. The people sought relief by motoring and the stream of cars through Winchester was continuous. About four o'clock the clouds began to bank at the north, east and west and there were rumblings of thunder and flashes of lightning. Then the rain came, gently at first, then in torrents, and it lasted for nearly two hours. Oh, the relief. Everything seemed to feel the relief of the depression. Even the birds seemed in a more cheerful mood. The earth, the trees, all vegetation was refreshed, The atmosphere became cooler, so that when 9 o'clock came, one had to resort to a light coat instead of a fan. How wonderful are the ways of Nature.

Auto Jumps into St. Lawrence

An automobile driven by John St. Louis, lockman on the canal near Cornwall, jumped over a precipice into the Longue Sault Rapids on Wednesday. No one saw the accident but the car was found in the rapids but its driver had not been found.

Did You Ever Stop To Think

THAT failure to advertise kills many a profitable business.

THAT advertising is essential to business success.

THAT to "ask 'em to buy" makes selling easier.

THAT progressive dealers don't waste time trying to sell unadvertised, unasked for merchandise.

THAT the busiest, most helpful thing in any business is advertising.

THAT a live business concern can't afford to mark time.

THAT the only business that can afford to mark time is dead.

THAT the ones who get the bustnes are the ones who go after it in a vigorous way.

THAT a going business should be a growing business.

THAT business men to-day are building their business on a basis of truthful advertising.

Modern business men know that that persistent advertising makes new customers and keeps old ones satisfied.

The United Church

A good congregation was in attendance Sunday a. m. to commemorate the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper administered by the Pastor, Rev. J. A. Waddell assisted by four elders. Two members were received into the church on confession of faith and two by letter.

An appropriate message was given from 1 Corinthians, 11:25 in which the pastor showed that in this service we seek to know more of God's love. It is a memorial to the Church of one of the greatest acts of our Lord. It confirms man's faith in God and God's love to man in giving His Son to be a sacrifice for us. It demands from us a pledge of fidelity to our Lord. Many heard with pleasure at the evening service, Rev. J. H. Miller, a former beloved pastor. He spoke from 1. Kings, 20:40. By reading this chapter he gave the historic setting of the text. Each of us have entrusted to us time and talents, he said and asked, "How faithful have we been in the use of these?" Are we accomplishing the thing God put us on earth to do?" We are perhaps too busy for the worth while things of life, too busy for our devotions. Life for every one of us is a trust. Some day we will have to give an account. We were urged to be faithful to the trust God has given us.

420 Hours in Air

Two young men, Jackson and O'Brian, of St. Louis, air pilots, made an endurance stop in the air over St. Louis City of 420 hours and 21 minutes, beating the worlds record by over a week. The mileage of the plane was estimated at 25,200 miles on a consumption of approximately 3,590 gallons of a high test fuel. Oil used totalled 158 gallons and 48 contacts were made for refuelling out of a total of 77. Each of the young men will receive over $20,000 for their wonderful endurance test.

Father Shot Son

On a farm near Renfrew on Saturday last, a farmer named John Regan, shot his son, and the son died in the Renfrew hospital the same night. The story is that the son, who was helping in the hay field, was abusing the horses The father rebuked him, and told him to stop. The son replied by pelting the father with stones. The father went to the house and brough out the shot gun, whereupon the son began to again throw stones at him. The gun went off, and a part of the shot charge entered the boy's abdomen and he died later. The father was placed under arrest.

In Memoriam

In sweetest memory of our dear sister, Catherine Blackman, who was called home August 9th. 1928.

Remembered always.

Inserted by sisters, Minnie and Annie.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our darling Dorothy Sarah May Wright, who died at Winchester, on July 31st, 1927.

We do not forget her nor do we intend,
We think of her dearly and will to the end,
In silence she suffered and patiently bore,
Till God called her home to suffer no more,
Never forgotten by her sorrowing Father, Mother and brothers, Lowell and Gerald.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear father Neh. Rodney who passed away Aug 2, 1928.

Only a thought of you dear father
Only a memory fond and true
Only a token of deep affection
From those who thought the world of you.
Many and sad have been the days
Since you have passed away
But father dear 'tis sweet to know
That we shall meet some day
Where farewells never need be said
And partings are no more
By that great band of loving ones
Upon the heavenly shore.
Friends may think we have forgotten
When at times they see us smile
But little do they know the heartache
That our smile hides all the while
We think of father in silence
Though they may not see us weep
But many silent tears are shed
While others are asleep
When days are dark and friends are few
Is then dear father we long for you.

Sadly missed by
Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Rodney.

Straight Railway Lines.

The longest straight stretch of railway line in the world is doubtless that in Australia, from Kalgoorlie to Port Augusta, where in one section the track runs for 300 miles in length, does not cross a single permanent stream of water.

Hints for the Home
by Nancy Hart

It is just common sense to use package foods wherever possible. Dust and personal handling, germs and whatnot are kept from these foods where it is impossible to give bulk foods the same protection. This is one of the so-called "food fads" that one may indulge in without fear of contradiction from any source, for in helping to keep foods fresh it contributes as much to economy as it does to health.

Another so-called fad that is acknowledged to be good practice is the habit of choosing foods that are not over-refined. This applies chiefly to cereals, corn meal, flours and rice, where the most beneficial substance is found close to the outer hull of the product, and is lost through over-bleaching, bolting and polishing.

Curried Halibut

Melt 1 tbl. butter and soften in it 1 tsp. minced onion. Add 1 tsp. curry powder mixed with 1 tbl. flour; stir in 1 cup milk and ½ cup cream. When creamy, add 2 cups cold boiled or baked halibut, season and serve very hot.

String Bean and Egg Salad

To 1 pint cooked string beans add ½ cup chopped celery, ½ cup chopped nuts, 1 tbl. chopped onion. Make a paste of the yolks of 3 hard boiled eggs, add to French dressing, mix well with the beans and set away to become thoroughly chilled.

Raspberry Squash

In a saucepan mash 4 cups red raspberries, add 1 cup sugar and cook together 15 minutes. Then sift over the berries ¼ cup of flour. Cook for an additional half hour, stirring frequently. When stiff, pour the mixture into molds and when cool set in refrigerator to become very cold. Remove from molds and serve with whipped cream.

Canton Punch

Boil 4 cups water with 1 cup sugar and ½ cup Canton ginger cut fine. Let cook about 20 minutes; strain and add ½ cup lemon juice and 1 cup orange juice. Chill and when ready to serve, add charged water. Pour over crushed ice in tall glasses.

Protects Wardrobes from Dust

Mount curtains on a rod just inside the closet door, being sure to have them adjusted to pull easily. Not only do the curtains protect clothing from dust, but the appearance of the closet is much improved by their use.

Keeps Doughnuts Fresh

If doughnuts are put into a covered dish while still warm they will keep fresh for some time.

Removes Water Stains from Floors

Apply with a brush to water stains on hard wood a bleach made of 1 oz. oxalic acid (poison) in 1 pint water. Let stand over night; in the morning wash with a weak solution of vinegar and soda.
