The Last Long Walk

A message from your Ontario Provincial Police—

The Christmas season is fast approaching. People are bustling about making the usual preparations for enjoyable festivities. The police officer and his family are also picked up by the spirit of Christmas, but for them things will be a little different;—it has to be. The Christmas parties to which the office staff and bowling league have been looking forward to for the past month cause concern for the police officer. How many will enjoy the party and take the safe way home, or how many will take the last long road? Whose family will he have to visit and say, "Daddy won't be home for Christmas". This should'n't bother the police officer because it happens year after year, but it does. If the officer is fortunate enough to be off duty Christmas day his thoughts may drift to a family not as happy as his own due to a senseless accident;—an accident that shouldn't have happened.

Christmas is a time for giving — giving gifts, greeting cards, a warm handshake, a friendly smile; but all too often through carelessness and inattentive driving people give sorrow and heartache to the family of accident victims. They add a black note to the Christmas celebrations in the community.

You can give this Christmas — give your fellow drivers courteous, cautious and careful driving. Who knows, you may even save a life. Remember — "The Last Long Road only goes one way."

The Ontario Provincial Police in your area wish you a safe and happy holiday season.

THREE MORRISBURG GUIDES AWARDED GOLD CORDS

Morrisburg guides, Marianne Coligan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Coligan; Colleen Scully, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Scully; Judy Sheldrick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Sheldrick were presented with their gold cords by Commissioner Patricia Reynolds at a recent guide evening. Guide rings were presented to the girls by Mrs. Valerie Howald for the Parents Committee.

Tenderfoot guides, Michele Harwaid, Valerie Felker, Margot Livester, Noreen McGregor, Anita Keyes, Paula Lee, Phyliss McKinnon, were enrolled by the Captain Mrs. Ken Scott.

The Guide Company held a sing song following which a social hour was spent.

Combines to Give Bike

Combines are planning a gala night when Embrun Panthers play their next league game in the Morrisburg Arena Sunday, December 27th at 7:30 p.m.

Plans are underway to distribute free and numbered tickets to all public school children in the district. To be eligible they must be in attendance and accompanied by an adult.

The bicycle is now on display at Charlie's Sport Shop, Morrisburg.

It is also planned to put on a figure skating display commencing around 6:30. It should be noted that parents should bring their children early to get good seats and avoid last minute rush.

Combine Hockey Players children will not be elibible to win the bicycle. Mel Tomalty has assured us that he will be on deck for this his first appearance this season.

Combines were again selected by the ODHA to participate in the John F. Kennedy games at Lake Placid on February 19th and 20th.

Combines have won distinction for the past two years in this international series by winning both years. Combines feel highly honoured as they have been the only team in Canada that has been allowed to compete outside since Can ada withdrew from the world competition.

Christmas Meeting of Williamsburg Institute

The Christmas meeting of Williamsburg Women's Institute was held Tuesday evening, December 8.

The president, Mrs. Clair Algire, conducted the opening exercises and the business session. Roll call was answered with a gift for a resident of Glen-Stor-Dun Lodge.

Mrs. Hugh Thompson gave a very interesting report on the Area Convention, which had been held at the Skyline Hotel in Ottawa.

Mrs. Guy Strader and Mrs. Hugh Thompson were program convenors. The 4-H Club members entertained with several musical numbers. Mrs. Guy Strader gave a reading entitled: "Christmas Is A Family Day". The 4-H Girls led in a sing-song of Christmas Carols.

Mrs. Thompson conducted two contests: A Christmas Dinner Contest, and What Do You Know About the Meaning of Christmas? The first proved very amusing, and was won by Mrs. Lyle Kehoe; Mrs. C. Algire was the winner of the second contest.

Mrs. Strader and the 4-H Girls distributed gifts among members and each 4-H member was presented with a small gift.

Mrs. Joyce Strader and Mrs. Parker Locke had charge of the social hour. The hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion and a very delicious lunch was served.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

B.C. Writer Seeks Information Here

Rosedale, B.C.
December 11th, 1970

Editor of "The Leader"
Morrisburg, Ont.

Dear Sir:

I am looking for information about a family who lived in the Dundas County area of Ontario around the 1970s, please. Their names were Gilbert and Caroline Munro, and they left Morrisburg to migrate to British Columbia during the Cariboo gold rush era.

Would you know where I could find a record as to dates of birth and marriage, or other pertinent information about the family?

We understand that they had 5 sons and 1 daughter, and that 3 of the sons came west with their parents. The others followed at a later date, and we can trace their movements quite easily from this point.

Any information you can give me about this family would be greatly appreciated, as we are trying to assemble a family tree for British Columbia Centennial Celebrations in the Spring of '71

These ancestors of mine are a vital part of the local early history, as they homesteaded in the Chilliwack district in the late 1870's, after a period of prospecting in the Barkerville and Soda Creek area. We aren t sure of the year of their arrival in B.C., but we could probably guess near enough to the date if we knew approximately when they left Ontario.

There are 4 generations of the family living in the Fraser Valley at the present time, including a son and daughter of one of the sonss who came west with their parents in the '70s.

Thank you most kindly for any assistance you can give me.

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. Laura Kennedy,
Rosedale, B.C.

Any reader having any information in regard to the above letter is asked to communicate directly with Mrs. Kennedy at Rosedale.

O.P.P. REPORT

The snowmobile season has only been with us for approximately two weeks and already 2 persons have died in the Ottawa Valley as a result of breaking through thin ice and drowning. Since the snowmobile is here to stay, the question arises as to just how many accidents will there be this year and how many persons will die as a result of these accidents.

In Ontario, from November 1969 to April 1970, 185 collisions were reported involving snow vehicles on the highways. With the increased number of snow vehicles this year, over last year, the number of collisions and deaths will, no doubt, be on the increase. The motirized snow vehicle was not designed for highway use, but if you must use the highway, you will be safe if you follow these suggestions:

—Be particularly careful on ice, packed snow or dry roads. Your vehicle's steering and braking systems were designed primarily for operation in deep snow or on surfaces which allow adequate penetration of the track cleats to maintain stability and control.

Your vehicle is smaller than most other vehicles on the highway and is not easily seen by a motorist, especially at night. Even when he does see you, it is a common error to misjudge the distance of a smaller object. Drive defensively.

Make sure you know and obey the rules of the road. They were made for your protection.

Make certain that you know how to handle your vehicle and that you understand its capabilities and limitations.

The Ontario Provincial Police have received numerous inquiries pertaining to the law and motorized snow vehicles, the following dea with the majority of questions directed our way.

Your snow vehicle must be registered with the Ontario Department of Transport before it is driven on or off a highway. The registration plate must be attached to the front, free of dirt and unobscured by any part of the vehicle or its load.

The owner of a motorized snow vehicle who drives or permits the driving of the vehicle on a highway, must produce evidence upon the request of a police officer, that the vehicle or the driver of the vehicle is insured under a motor vehicle liability policy.

A motor vehicle driver's licence is required to operate a motorized snow vehicle on a highway. It is not required for operation off a highway.

You must report to the police any collision on or off a highway which results in injury to any person or in damage to property of any person, other than the owner or driver, apparently exceeding $200.00.

As a motorized snow vehicle is a motor vehicle within the meaning of the Criminal Code of Canada, the breathalyzer law, impaired driving, and other driving offences covered in the Criminal Code are applicable.

Ontario Provincial Police in Dundas County patrolled 11,806 miles while working 1,279 hours. During this time, 35 charges and 68 warnings were issued under the Highway Traffic Act of Ontario.

Officers from Morrisburg and Winchester Detachments investigated 4 theifts, 1 disturbance and 23 miscellaneous complaints. One person was charged with impaired driving while 5 other people were charged under the Liquor Control Act of Ontario.

Officers were kept very busy on area highways investigating 12 property damage accidents.

Provincial Court was quiet with officers spending 20 hours in court while registering 37 convictions.

Warning to Store Owners

Christmas is a time of giving and a time for receiving. It is also the time when area stores are swamped by petty shoplifters and professional thieves. In the past week, Ontario Provincial Police from Morrisburg have been called out to 3 complaints of counterfeit $10.00 bills and 1 complaint of shoplifting. The method used for the shoplifting is that while one person keeps the storeowner busy, one or two associates go around the store stealing various articles. Another method used is that instead of shoplifting, the accomplices may rifle the cash register while the store owner is kept busy.

Due to the large volume of business going on and the great number of people shopping, this time of year is ideal for criminals to carry out their illegal business. In order to prevent your becoming victimized by such practices, keep a sharp look out for groups of strangers that may enter your store. If you become the least bit suspicious, 'phone your local Provincial Police Detachment immediately. Don't wait until it's too late!

LEARNING TO WALK AGAIN

Leonora who is from Chatham, Ontario, will soon be able to walk normally again. Her problem was a congenital dislocation of both hips and without a special operation developed by Dr. Robert Salter at THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN, Toronto, Leonora would have been crippled for life. Now, after the operation she has to learn to walk all over again. Helping her is one of the Hospital's physiotherapists, Dawn Harcourt. The Hospital has a staff of nearly 3,000 people — doctors, nurses, dietitians, recreationists, speech therapists, pharmacists, X-ray and lab technicians, working together to help children like Leonora lead normal, happy lives. Help them help the children. Support the Hospital's annual Christmas campaign with your contribution. Write: THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN, BOX 440, STATION "Q", TORONTO, ONTARIO.

Tories to Get New Leader

It is now official. Hon. John Robarts is on the way out as Ontario's Premier, and as leader of the Progressive-Conservative Party in this Province. As soon as, and even before his position was officially declared, potential successors to Mr. Robarts' job had begun their campaigns to win friends influence people — the people who will be choosing his successor early in 1971.

Education Minister Davis is said to have the best chance to succeed Mr. Robarts, and if this is not good news to the other potential leaders, it is the best news ever to members of opposition parties, who will also be busy gearing for the provincial election which will certainly be held following the choice of the new Tory leader. There is no one person in the Party whom they would rathr have for a target, no better issue on which they would choose to fight an election, than education in Ontario today. We honestly believe that the Progressive-Conservative Government of Ontario, in power far too long to be in touch with the thinking of the common people, has grossly underestimated the enormity of the backlash thinking against its recent policy on education. This backlash, we have found, is spread across the entire province. People everywhere, and in all political parties, are thoroughly disgusted. They expect education to be more sophisticated and more costly. To a point, they are quite willing to pay for needed reforms. But they are not willing, and they have proved this undeniably just in the last year, to continue on a blind rush with an educational policy which is supposed to be better only because it is more expensive.

Let's not kid ourselves any longer. A kid who can operate or program a computer but who can't spell or can't read, is just not going to get the benefit of the knowledge that mankind has been able to accumulate since he came down out of the trees, and started walking on his hind legs — and that is axiomatic, no matter how big or how fancy they make the school buildings, no matter how much money they pay the teachers or the trustees, or that other great innovation, the administrators.

And Mr. Davis, seeking the party leadership, the premier's chair, and seeking to form the next government of Ontario, will find this province's recent policy on education the biggest stumbling block probably to all three positions and certainly to the last one — head of the next Ontario government.

How much of your Christmas shopping have you done in your own home town? By spending your money at home, you will be helping your local businessmen, who desperately need all the help they can get — and in so doing, you will be helping yourself and your community.

NAUGHTY! NAUGHTY! This officer isn't writing a ticket out. He's removing Playboy magazine's Miss November fold-out from the left hand of a 20-foot statue at Queen's Park in Toronto, Ontario's seat of government. The magazine's monthly beauty was displayed by the statue for about an hour before the constable came to the rescue. (TTS)

TOMMY HUNTER AND HIS FRIENDS

Our roving cameraman caught a smil'n' Tommy Hunter on the knees of a jolly Santa Claus, flanked by a pair of spritely elves . . . (Did you notice a strange resemblance to the Rhythm Pals? . . . . . Could it be?).

NOW HEAR THIS

Soprano Joan Sutherland will sing the role she made famous, Norma, in Bellini's opera of the same name, on the Met Opera broadcast on Dec. 19. Her husband, Richard Bonynge, conducts the orchestra.

Paul Hiebert was a professor of chemistry at the University of Manitoba when he created the mythical Sweet Songstress of Saskatchewan, Sarah Binks. That sly dig at literary pretentiousness won for him the Leacock Medal for Humor. The sequel, Willows Revisited, was not published until 20 years later, in 1967. A radio version, adapted by writer-actor and friend of Hiebert's Tommy Tweed, will be heard on CBC Stage, Dec. 19, directed and produced by Andrew Allan. Willows is "an enquiry into the fragile art of poesy as it has developed on the praisies since the death of Sarah", whom, you may remember, died when she accidentally bit into a horse thermometer.

CBC radio is now getting into a Christmas mood, building up to a grand climax during the week of the 21st. Among the highlights for listening enjoyment are: Wind in the Willows, a five-part special of Kenneth Graham's beloved fable (Dec. 21-25).

The Mennonite Children's Choir of Winnipeg and the 22nd annual radio presentation of Handel's Messiah (Christmas Eve).

And on the Big Day itself, good listening all day long, with Christmas International, a program of music reflecting the Christmas traditions of many lands, hosted by Pat Patterson and Bill Paul.

The Festival Singers of Canada in a performance of The Christmas Story Op. 10 by Hugo Distler.

Showtime in Cyprus, excerpts from the show put on by a troupe of CBC entertainers for Canadian servicemen in Cyprus.

The Cantabury Christmas Singers from St. John's.

SCHOOL CHECKUPS BRIDGE THE GAP

At times, Johnny and Joan may bring home a dental slip from school, which requests your permission for their teeth to be check ed and cleaned.

Because your children visit the family dentist regularly and haven't complained about toothaches, you may wonder about the checkup's worth. When a dental health team visits a school, it wants to provide a dental check for as many children as possible.

Many mothers forget how time flies and that it's close to checkup time. Aside from serving as a good reminder, school checkups often allow for detection of cavities when they are just beginning. The usual six months between visits provides enough time for decay to set in, especially in children's teeth.

You may decide after the schol checkup that you'd better get your child to the dentist even before the six-month visit comse due to catch the decay while its j u s t beginning. This would save much time, expense and give less discomfort to the child.

The school health team can often spot if your child's teeth and jaws are not developing properly and you may want to get your dentist's views. After the examination, the dental team may clean and paint your child's teeth with fluoride to help prevent decay. The team may also give classroom talks, show films on dental health and teach the proper brushing technique. — Sometimes the children are given a dental colouring book or a free toothbrush.

After the school checkup, if your child comes home shouting "Look ma, no cavities!" don't be deluded into thinking you can delay his appointment with your regular dentist. The school dental team does not use x-rays and cannot give a thorough checkup.

The school team alerts you that treatment may be needed, but it is your dentist who establishes what type and how much treatment is needed.

PROCTICAL CHRISTIANITY

Christmastide is essentially a festival of goodwill. It almost seems as though people have waited all year long to give vent to their feelings of generosity and brotherly love.

All around the country this spirit of giving is obvious. There are more special church services held at this time than any other part of the year. The press, radio and TV programs devote space to Christmas messages where everyday topics once were used. Christmas cards, another annual affair, carry sentiments of peace, love and hope for the new year.

This Christmas, The Salvation Army, in its spirit of practical Christianity, will continue its tradition of helping the less fortunate through the distribution of toys and clothing, the provision of Christmas dinners, friendly visits to the shut-in, and concern for the special needs of young and old.

Liquid for Benson fans

OTTAWA — For 10 years the Ward family has been probing into the constructive hobby of home wine-making.

It all started when my wife and I (on our newspaper budget) began to notice that there wasn't enough money left for the groceries if we indulged ourselves with a couple of bottles a week.

But the master of the house had been to Europe (on an expense account) a time or two by then, and picked up some continental tastes. So we had to have wine.

The first batch, as I remember, came from bulk grape juice bought in a Toronto raw material wholesale house. It tasted more than a little like vinegar, but the hydrometer that went with the equipment said it was alcoholic — and that was good enough for us.

From there we went on to bigger and better things. We discovered a string of do-it-yourself wine-makin' stores called the Wine Art.

I recall that another guy and I formed the Telegram Wine-Making Club, just so we could get the 10 per cent club discount the stores offered.

The stuff we made got better and better. By the time the Wards left Toronto for Ottawa, we had it down pat.

We could produce a dry red that was better than anything the old Ontario Liquor emporium had to offer, and we were doing it for about 30 cents a bottle.

We weren't saving much money from the old store-bought days, but we were sure drinking a lot more.

We dabbled in white wine, played with making sherry, and toyed with building saki. That was a dangerous brew . . . it livened up quite a few parties.

I remember one weekend when the white wine that had been bottled a month earlier began to show signs of throwing a deposit. There were some 24 bottles sitting in the rack, and a deposit could be trouble.

I picked up one bottle to test the top, and it started to fizz. The darn stuff hadn't fermented all the sugar out before we bottled it, and we had champagne. Trouble was, it was in ordinary bottles, liable to explode at any minute.

In the interests of safety and a tidy basement, I convinced Jane that we should open and drink a couple of bottles.

By the end of the weekend there wasn't a neighbor on the street that hadn't sampled some of the Ward bubbly.

We were a hung-over neighborhood that Monday, but we'd saved the full two dozen bottles from vandalistic explosion.

Anyway, what brought all this to mind was something that happened just 20 minutes ago.

The master of the house broke away from the seat of government early tonight, and after dinner proceeded to the basement where there are by actual count 13 gallons of red, five gallons of white, and five gallons of beer a-brewing.

It was time for the white to be racked out of primary fermentation (see how easy us experts throw the technical suff about?) and into a clear bottle.

I hoisted the tub full of bubbling grape to the workbench and completed the syphon job with professional ease, showing off for the kids who had come downstairs to watch.

The five-gallon glass jug then had to be lifted up to the bench, where the pleasant bubble of the airlock could be easily seen from the basement steps.

The neck of the bottle was wet. It slipped, and next thing I knew there was a river of half-done wine dancing about the basement in the broken glass.

My but the kids were impressed.

I tried to find some way to blame it on one of them, but there was no head worthy of the dunce cap but my own. That bottle was the one we first started with, too. Sort of an old friend.

Jane came downstairs soothingly to bandage a finger and make sure the children didn't learn any new words. She was a gem over the river in the basement, but it's going to be awfully sticky tomorrow.

"Why don't you go up and write your column, dear?" she asked. And that's exactly what I did — so we can buy another batch of raw material. Gee but the air from the heat register smells good.

Mr. Robinson is survived by a large family of brothers and sisters, all of them well known in this district, where they resided for many years.

A GOOD JOB WELL DONE!

How often do you say "Thanks" to the men who pick up your garbage, plow your roads and shovel the sidewalks?

In the worst storm to hit this area in some time, early on Thursday, conditions became so bad that sections of 401 highway had to be closed.

The Morrisburg snow plow was out through the night, and early in the morning, although the roads were not ideal, they were passable, which was considerably better than in some other municipalities.

These boys have had a real work out in the past couple of weeks attempting to cope with the unusually heavy early season snowfall, and to date they have done an admirable job.

POWER DAM DRIVE OFFICIALLY OPENED AT CORNWALL

The Chairman and members of the Cornwall Suburban Roads Commission are pleased to announce the completion of the contract for the construction of Power Dam Dr. from Highway 401 to Cornwall Centre.

This 0.72 mile project was carried out by Cornwall Gravel Company Limited, at a cost of approximately $76,000. The work included grading, drainage, granular base and hot mix paving, as well as the erection of right-of-way fences and the installation of a large structural plate culvert over the south branch of the Raisin River.

In order to improve the alignment of Power Dam Drive, the jog which existed at Cornwall Centre Road was eliminated by diverting the road behind the Harold Kehoe property and extending the project south of the City limits.

The width of the right-of-way is 100 feet and the pavement width is 24 feet.

Since this is a Suburban Road project, the City of Cornwall and the United Counties each contributes approximately 25 percent towards its cost; the Department of Highways, Ontario contributes the remaining fifty percent.

The Question of Age

Dear Miss Brookfield:

I am a 58-year-old widow with a nice figure, working to support myself. I have been going out with a 38-year-old man who is very kind to me in different ways and who tells me he loves me very much. He says he'd like to marry me and take care of me as I get older. He can't be after my money because I haven't any. Because of the difference in our ages though, I hesitate about marriage. I would like your advice about this.

P.S. He has a temper. M.B.

Dear M.B.:

Although we readily accept marriage between older men and younger women, we tend to be skittish about those situations where the wife is the older of the two. Fortunately, all this is changing. Psychiatrists say that age difference needn't be a problem, unless the couple make it one. They consider age an artificial way to categorize people and are optimistic about the chances for happiness in a marriage between an older woman and a younger man. In your own case, perhaps you'd better decide if his temper might be more of a problem than his age.

Looking Alike

Looking Alike

Dear Miss Brookfield:

I'm very disturbed by a tendency I've notice lately among boy and girl teen-agers, particularly the way they dress allike and look alike. You can hardly tell some of them apart. What do you think about this? K. C.

Dear K.C.

The definitions of "Masculine" and "feminine" are certainly in a state of flux. Charles Winick, Professor of Anthropology at the City University of New York, calls this look-alike trend "unisex" and he deplores it. He believes that if people don't have a clear idea of their own sex, they're not able to cope with other realities. On the other hand, Diana Trilling of Columbia University welcomes this development. She says that "man and not God" designed the styles of hair and dress for men and women, and that if we get rid of some of these differences, this might bring people closer together. Now you know the two schools of thought. Take your choice.

On Christmas Eve, Thursday, December 24th at 8:00 p.m. there will be a Candlelight Carol Service in Williamsburg United Church. On this occasion Rev. John De Pater, pastor of the Christian Reformed Church, Williamsburg, will preach the sermon. Mr. Gerald Adams, soloist, will render "O Holy Night". Everyone will be made very cordially welcome at all these services.

Masculine Tastes are Changing Rapidly

Wives who take their husbands for granted not only demonstrate their "built-in opinions" on the subject, but also make Christmas shopping more difficult. This is the view of Edward Marcus, a department store executive here. Mr. Marcus asserts that when a wife thinks she "knows her husband too well," she believes there's nothing he wants and therefore "there's nothing she can get him as a gift". Yet when women begin to acknowledge that masculine tastes are changing he adds, they'll find their Christmas shopping will "go much easier"

New Plumage

"Years ago," Mr. Marcus declares, "it was an awful lot harder to shop for men," but today they're beginning to acquire "new plumage."— This doesn't necessarily mean, he says, that a man will want to "go way out", but that he does like to have "something that's a little bit different." In his choice of clothing, for example, he may want colors that are a little brighter, and look for fabrics with much more pattern.

Mr. Marcus illustrates that change in masculine taste by pointing out that once a man "had one paid of cuff links left to him by his grandfather, or maybe given to him by his mother . . . and he never wanted another pair." This kind of sentimentality has declined somewhat, he notes, and men today "want a little more dash . . . a little more novelty."

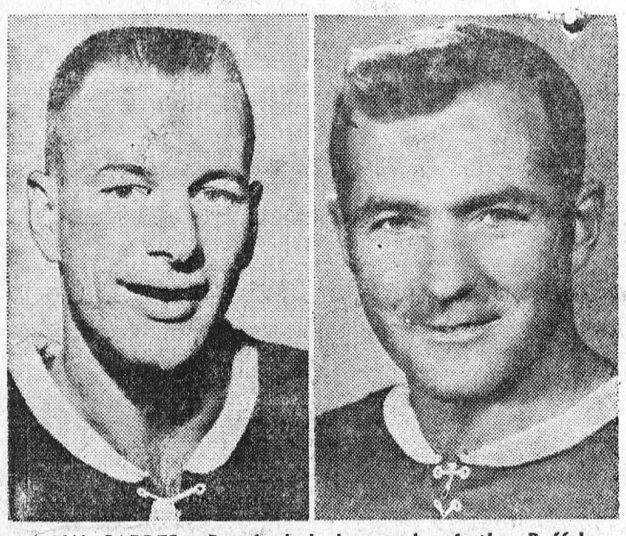
Another significant change is the fact that men are now using cosmetics such as cologne and skin firmers — and even wigs. "When I was a young man," Edward Marcus recalls, "you were a sissy to wear any kind of cologne. But cologne is something that almost every man wears today."

A Touch of Color

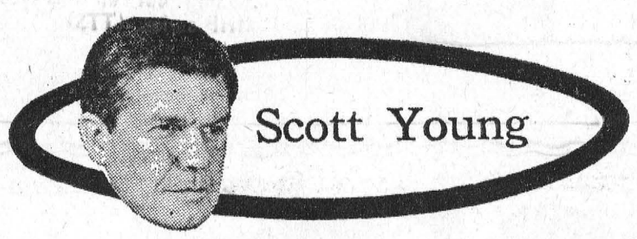
According to Mr. Marcus, his own wife doesn't seem to have a "built-in opinion" about his preferences. When he recently gave her a list of gift ideas for his birthday, he says, "she didn't happen to agree about any of them and bought me something completely different." For one thing, she gave him a "darkish bright-red" robe, which he explains he would never have thought of getting for himself. He'd been wearing a blue silk robe for several years, and although he had never considered a red one, he declares, "I like it. I'm crazy about it." The unusual things a man likes now, Mr. Marcus concludes, "May sometimes just come in a different color."

Unusual Catalogue

The Neiman-Marcus department store in Dallas, which Edward Marcus heads, is known for its unusual Christmas gift catalogue. This year's version features — for the hedonist — a 24 hour pleasure cruise on the blue Caribbean that can accommodate some 600 people. It costs $3,500. For the pessimist it offers — for more than half-a-million dollars — a completely fitted out Noah's Ark including a French chef, Swedish masseur and German hair stylist, n[illegible]ention a wide variety of animals. The ark will require a four-year waiting period to be built and stocked. And for the optimist, Neiman-Marcus can provide a live oak tree, two feet high and ready for immediate delivery, at $10. According to the catalogue, with proper care the tree "could grow to 30 feet or more and make a wonderful treehouse for one's great grandchildren.



NEW SABRES. Punch Imlach, coach of the Buffalo Sabres in the NHL, couldn't be happier these days. He's just acquired Dick Duff, 34, and Eddie Shack, 33, from the Los Angeles Kings. Both players have helped Imlach to win Stanley Cups in the past. (TTS)



Waterboy sinks on first job

I keep on trying to impress upon you how much use I am around the house. The big trouble is, every time I think I am on the brink of some really convincing evidence, the case blows up in my face. But never more so — a truly superior blowup—than this time.

When our house was built nearly 40 years ago, all the radiators were set into the walls behind slotted metal panels that let the heat out. This is great and saves a lot of dusting, except that my wife is a nut on letting the air out of radiators.

At a time when another woman might sit down and relax with a fashion magazine, my wife finds it very restful to take the little key that fits the radiators, take an empty coffee can, and make her rounds.

Each radiator has a little valve. When she turns the key, and holds the coffee can under a little spout, there's a rush of air and then she lets a few ounces of water out.

In this way, she states, "I eliminate all the air locks, which prevent the hot water from circulating."

So far so good. but in one bedroom the pipe that has the valve on the end somehow long ago snapped back in behind the protective grill. She could get the key in all right, but had to put a towel on the floor to catch any water that escaped. I guess she told me about this thing 1,000 times before the day when I finally decided to do something about it.

"What I'll do," I said manfully, "is unscrew the panel and take it off. Then I'll get the valve and pull it out a little so that it will stick through the slot in the panel, like the others."

Of course, taking this panel off didn't do the paint job on the wall any good. But I got it off. She drained the radiator. There was a pipe about a foot long sticking straight up. It was screwed into what I believe is called an elbow. I grasped it firmly and began to pull. It wouldn't bend. I pulled harder.

"Don't break it!" she warned suddenly.

"No danger of that," I grunted, just as I broke the pipe off and a jet of boiling hot water shot skyward with all the pressure of the entire hot water heating system behind it.

"Grab it," I shouted. I don't know what she was supposed to grab.

I tried to shove the pipe back on. The water sprayed all over me, a nearby bed, the rug on the floor.

She ran downstairs to shut something off. I'm glad she went. I wouldn't have known what to shut off.

While she ran to the basement I ran to the linen closet and grabbed an armful of clean towels and ran back and flung them into the middle of the flood. The water was still running. It covered the entire floor about half an inch deep before it slowly subsided, because she had turned off the water at the main.

We got it mopped up by using every towel in the house. For a while I couldn't look her in the eye. Finally I did. She was puffing like a steam engine from her run downstairs and back.

"Hmmmm," I said. "Well, that's another thing I'm not, I guess — a plumber."

So we had no water in the house. It was washday, too.

I called a plumber and he sent out his heating man. About the best I can say for myself in the situation was that I did not shilly-shally when the heating man came. I didn't say it had been an accident, or anything.

"I was trying to bend it," I said. "Pretty stupid of me." He could have said: "Oh, I didn't know. It was a natural enough mistake." That would have got me off the hook gently.

But he didn't. He just looked at me, "Yep," he said.

The best Christmas ever!

Have you ever noticed how, at Christmas time, it's easier to stir up even the worst old stick-in-the-mud? A married daughter tried times without number to get her widowed father, living alone, to come and see her — a matter of a 300-mile trip. "It's too far," he would say. Or: "It costs too much. You come here." He wasn't really hard up at all, but she let him say it and did make the trip as often as she could.

Then, last Christmas, she decided not to listen. She had a plane ticket delivered by special messenger to his front door, along with a Christmas card from her. "This is your present," it read. "Don't disappoint us."

That did it. Anyone so schooled in frugality couldn't waste that ticket. Father went for a visit, and had the time of his life. Played cribbage with one of his grandsons at all kinds of odd times; and he went along to a big community party. On Christmas day he attended church with the family. "The best Christmas I ever had!" he boasted to his cronies at home later.

DEAR DORIS—I am a diabetic. My doctor says there are ways of substituting one kind of food for another, if I know the actual content of each food in terms of sugar and starches.

Where could I get help with this?

Have To Watch It

DEAR HAVE TO—Write to the Canadian Diabetic Association, 1491 Yonge Street, Toronto 7, Ontario. Ask for the Exchange Lists for Meal Planning for Diabetics in Canada, and enclose 35 cents.

DEAR DORIS—What is your opinion about thumb sucking?

Not Sure About This

DEAR NOT SURE — Baby needs to suck, one baby more than another. If he is breast-fed, and held and cuddled plenty, he is less likely to resort to his thumb for comfort. If he's bottle-fed, replacing old, worn nipples from time to time makes the sucking more satisfying.

"A baby who feels left out or who doesn't get enough food to nourish his spirit is probably going to suck his thumb in an effort to make up for these shortcomings." I quote from "Infant Care."

Don't resort to mittens or stiff cuffs, which only provide a damaging frustration. If you do, the child will have to work out his need some other way. Give him fondling, affectionate love — and regulated care to keep his world in order. The thumb-sucking will pass.

DEAR DORIS—We live in a small one-bedroom apartment. Have a little girl three years old, and I'm upset that she is with me all day and has no other children to play with. I started to take her to the playground in the summer and after she played with other children she hated coming home.

If we're ever going to move I'll have to get a job because we don't make ends meet with my husband's pay cheque. How will I go about getting someone I can trust to look after my little girl?

She is terribly shy. She really cries around someone strange and it breaks my heart to leave her in that condition.

Mother Of One

DEAR MOTHER—Start right now to catch up on giving your child independence. Obviously she needs those children she played with. Did any of them have mothers you know?

Your resource might be a day nursery near you or the pages of this newspaper, to find a suitable baby-sitter. Your church, your child-care agency, your recreation department, might help.

Introduce a sitter gently, with a visit when you are there. Or if you leave her with a day nursery, make the first stay short and come back when you promised to. Nursery workers are skilled at capturing the interest of the charges

Weekly Report

"AN OLD FRIEND"

Out beyond the back porch again st the shed with its big sliding door lay the wood pile. Being near the path to the barn it was passed many times a day by young and old alike without a glance or care.

It first made its appearance in the form of long twisted, tree length pieces which were cut from the woodlot at the back of the farm and hauled by sleigh and team when the snow was crisp and sledding was easy.

As the days began to lengthen, and the big banks of snow softened at the edge of the yard, several neighbours appeared and the air was filled with good natured chatter as the whirr of the buzzsaw transformed the long tree lengths into a confusion of smaller pieces. These were then thrown haphazardly into a large muddled pile.

Today on many farms the wood stove has given way to the sleek automatic range, and the large wood burning furnace has been replaced by oil or gas. As a result our old friend, the wood pile, is disappearing.

And friend it was, even though it lay as a disorderly pile in the back yard and a sigh of relief was expressed when it was finally stacked in the shed out of the weather.

It had the soothing effect of an old friend as you sat and watched the chipmunks and small birds scamper over it. Also as a boy, when you went to gather chips for your mother in preparation for supper, you could smell the aroma of wood and bark heated by the sun.

Like a friend it had many qualities which you remember with fondness, such as the light brown, aromatic cedar blocks which split easily for kindling to start a stubborn early morning fire; the smooth barked, soft creamy pine pieces which were easy prey to a small boy's splitting axe, as well as the cross grained hemlock and knotty pine chunks which were always splintery problems. You were also fascinated by the contrasting colours of the heartwood and sapwood of the hard maple and the chalky white papery bark of the birch.

It is sad to lose our old friend the wood pile, but I don't think many of us would like to give up today's many comforts in exchange for the rigours of times gone by. However, it is very comforting to know that the wood pile of yesterday is making an important contribution to the giant pulpwood industry of today, by providing some of the raw material for the many paper products we now take for granted.
