Public meeting April 3 to plan Community arena

Chesterville and district residents are asked to attend a planning meeting next week. On Tuesday, April 3, much public discussion will take place in the matter of building an arena for the community.

Quite a lot of work has been done to date on the matter. Plans of structures are now at hand and preliminary costs are coming to the top.

Present designs indicate a building 240x100 feet with cement and pillar sidewalls and a metal roof. Seating capacity would be in the neighbourhood of 800. The site of the structure has been tentatively shifted from the blacktop to a spot just west in the park, running north and south.

Prices range in the $65,000 bracket.

It is hoped the district and community will turn out in good numbers next Tuesday night. At that time, it is hoped to receive some worthwhile suggestions to further the ambitious project.

Gala evening for 120 boys at Legion hall

Noise was the prime factor as 120 boys gathered at the legion hall on Tuesday night.

A film on hockey distributed by Molson's Brewery and brought here through the efforts of Gary Price and Clarence Hagan was shown to the sound of cheers and shouts that would have done credit to the forum of Maple Leaf Gardens during a Stanley Cup play-off game.

Weiner buns donated by Canada bread and weiners by at least 5 of the local merchants, 194 bottles of pop and five gallons of ice cream donated by Al Kilby, all went their merry way as many of the boys hit the line-up for thirds and fourths, till at last no amount of coaxing would induce another boy to a cone.

During the course of the evening a meeting was held and it was decided that public meeting would be called on Sunday afternoon at 1.30 p.m. in the Community Hall, to form a sports organization to extend the effort of the community in sports of all kinds. Anyone interested is requested to attend.

Assisting at Tuesday nights gathering were, Stewart LeClair, Len Shane, N. LaPrade, Ed Forward, Stewart Allen, F. Beckstead, Al Kilby, Bob Miltimore, Bob Henderson, Gary Price and Dale Jarvis.

Accepts call to Seaforth

Rev Douglas O. Fry, minister of Knox Presbyterian Church, Iroquois, has accepted a call to Seaforth, Ont.

Mr Fry went to Iroquois from Chesterville one and one-half years ago and has built up a wide circle of friends through his active role in that community.

He takes over his new pastoral duties in two weeks.

Liquor store started

Thompson and Wiseman workmen started this week on the new LCBO stor for the district. Digging is well under way for foundations and the material has started to arrive on the site.

No definite word has been received on any plan for an official opening.

Butterfly seen

Spring must be here. Lloyd Merkley spotted a large orange and black butterfly on Tuesday afternoon, March 27. Now if the ice would only move out of the river by the 17th—of April!

CARD OF THANKS

We would like to express our grateful appreciation to everyone who were so kind and thoughtful during our recent bereavement. We will always treasure the memory of your kind expressions of sympathy.

High School News

The call to study for the Easter examinations has brought other student activities to a halt.

The students who have kept abreast of the work during the term seem happy with the examinations, but the students who have desperately tried to catch up at the last minute for wasted time, have a worried expression on their faces after each examination.

The evening classes in adult education continue as usual.

On Monday nights the Emergency Measures Organization class in Communications is progressing nicely. The members have learned a fair amount of the theory of radio receiving and transmitting, and can receive morse code at about 7 words per minute. They hope to attain a speed of 12 words per minute before trying the Department of Transport examination to obtain an Amateur Broadcasting License.

Miss Montcalm is in charge of the Tuesday night classes in English and Citizenship.

The school tape recorder, which was purchased by the Student Council has been put to use in these classes. The new Canadians have had their oral assignments recorded and then have the opportunity of listening to their own voices.

This week they had the topic "If I were a millionaire". They must strive for good pronunciation and good English grammar.

Band practice ahs been cancelled for the past few weeks due to the examinations. Next Wednesday night practice will begin for the Annual Spring Open Air Concert, which is to take place in May. This year the band plans to niclude a number called "The Twist" with the majorettes twirling and twisting.

United Counties expect $804,750 in road subsidies

Ontario financial subsidies for construction and maintenance of roads in the United Counties for the 1962-63 fiscal year will amount to an estimated $804,750.

The figures for building and maintenance costs in the Counties were revealed in a report presented to the Ontario Legislature last week by Highways Minister Goodfellow.

Mr Goodfellow estimated expenditures for all roads, including village, town and township roads, as well as county, suburban, and development roads in the United Counties at $1,609,500. Of this amount the government will subsidize about half.

Estimated cost of construction of new roads in the Counties was listed by Mr Goodfellow at $440,600. Mainteance figure for roads in Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry was given at $1,163,900.

J. G. Cameron, United Counties engineer, placed the total estimate of money to be spent on county, suburban and development roads at $930,000. Of this amount, $310,000 was designated for maintenance costs, while the remaining $620,000 will be devoted to road construction on the United Counties' controlled roads.

Although the figure for construction of suburban, county, and development roads alone in the United Counties exceeds Mr Goodfellow's total estimate for all roads in the three counties, it is believed there may be some difference in classification between construction and maintenance.

It's hard to believe that Ontario's black sheep would indulge in a little gambolling.

CRUMBS from Graham's Loaf

One of the joys of living in a castle complete with moat, is the ability to get away from the rat race occasionally. We slip out into the west keep, bellow for a little service from the varlets, and settle down to a short period of rejuvenation. Last week was a case in point. By the time Friday night rolled around, George was in dire danger of getting her imminent diaper-clad offspring kicked in the little furry bottoms. The v.p. and the S.C. were walking the halls with moderate caution, and Father was really being wrought-up.

It came about this way. For the past 15-odd years we have been building a larger and larger headache on the former site of the old family newspaper. What with one thing and another, even George Robertson, the original blacksmith who owned the land, would never recognize the joint. We bulged at the back in 1956, grew upwards in 1960, added more vital organs continuously, and as of last month had quite a reasonable establishment. We have won a few awards for excellence in the type of family journal you all love, everybody is fond of the editor (sic), and lo, and behold, the subscription list is a joy to contemplate. Even the nasty characters who take issue over our neutral political views sometimes allow we have a salable product.

Suddenly, like magic, we decided we needed another printing process. That is rather laughable. Our premises reek, throb and rumble with devices to set type, saw type, cast type, print type and fold the printed sheets. Another process was like adding to the Marilyn Munroe profile with putty. But the word was getting around that some of our ancient thumpers were protesting the strain. The old Kelly was getting its Irish up over the prospect of another siege at a few tons of letter paper that is coming up.

We are just like a farmer with a full barn of cows. Come Spring, every morning finds another four-legged addition to the already full space, and what to do? He builds stalls on the barn floor and we called in Albert Bowman. Albert took the matter in hand and suddenly after a week our wandering calves of piles of this and that that projected isthmuses of confusion out into working areas disappeared into a 15-foot row of cupboards and counter. That looked so fine and so much old and dirty floor came into view, we had only one thing left to do. A frantic call went out to the inside man in the floor-laying works at Cumming Furniture emporium. We opened the middle of the week to a solid roar of hammers and power saws, to a most interesting discussion of salves for hammered thumbs, and finally on Sunday afternoon, 52 years of oil-soaked floor had disappeared under the new red tile of the bent-over Mr Cumming and his helpers.

Monday afternoon the new offset press arrived. And a company of piano miovers brought it carefully in and parked it on the new tile floor. We have had machinery moved in by a lot of people, but this is the first time piano movers ever invaded the "Record" office. They were nice and gentle and quite calm about the whole thing. One would think they had marched into a newspaper office every day laden with platinum plated printing machinery. Now the outfit sits waiting to be used. It has a nasty supercilious air, surrounded as it is, by all the work-worn familiars of the place. Even the editor nods carefully as he passes it.

Next week we plan on having a front page story about the press in action, with a photo alongside. Some small explanation will then be made about the method of printing called offset. In the meantime, we plan to sit off in a corner. Surrounded by a medley of tranquilizers, glasses of cough syrup and slippers, we await the flood of drafts, bills and plain dunning letters asking for money. It is just possible we will have to pay for the additions, and right now, the only things unmortgaged at Crumb Castle are the cat's kittens. We have a kitten appraiser coming in in the morning to make a cursory offer.

OPINIONS . . .
OURS AND OTHERS

What about a new public school?

A new public school is something badly needed in the community. Our growing population is slowly crowding the rooms to a dangerous limit. Makeshift additional space has gone about as far as it can go within the present walls.

One of the primary costs of any up and coming community is to pay for public education, at least the share left over after the various grants come in from the provincial Department of Education. And with an even more increasing emphasis on semi-technical training in the early grades of the secondary schools, more older students of the 16-year-old bracket will be occupying seats in Grades Seven and Eight waiting their turn at the trade classes of the composite school.

Chesterville village can ill afford a further burden of more school taxation. But this is one physical disability that must be remedied and soon, and the old public school has long passed the peak of its efficiency. A crying need is felt in the village for a school with adequate kindergarten classes as well as fireproof, commodious classrooms. While we all feel sometimes the frills overshadow the solid matter in modern classes, the need is still a crying one in this town to provide more adequate classrooms for the 150-odd students of the public school system.

St. Mary's Separate School took the bull by the horns a couple of years ago. For about $65,000 they erected a fine new building that has much to commend it. Proportionately their tax bite from the town is very small compared to the p.s. supporters. They did go to the township for additional assessment, but to offset some of that, it has been necessary to provide bus service for the children.

The thought of using the old high school as a public school is one of no merit whatsoever. The place would be a potential firetrap for lower grade students, and any gains in money would be shortlived in the upkeep of a 50-year-old building. The same applies to building an addition to the rear of the present public school. New wine in old bottles is sure to cause considerable stir and ferment and end up with a poor variety of vinegarish opinions.

The public school board has wrestled these problems for many a moon. Being an elected body, they must make their own decisions. It would be interesting, though, if Chesterville council had some idea of the latest in plans. Budget time is coming up again, and some thought of the future building plans of the board might influence present spending programs.

Those Cuban rockets—made in USSR

It is understandable the government of the United States is perturbed over the increasing armament build-up in Cuba. Especially when every indication is that Mr K would dearly love to set up a mess of rocket installations so close to the doorstep of North America.

The piercing screams sometimes seem a mite shrill, to us 'way up here in the hinterland. And there are some good reasons for the questioning attitude on our part.

Publicity releases from the Washington scene stress the nasty proximity of nuclear bombs and the evident glee that dictator Castro displays when he boasts about his Red friends' lethal machinery.

But is there not another side to the slate, before we accept the warnings of dire fate from Cuban bases?

For quite a number of years the Western Alliance has made no bones about the ring of nuclear bases that surround Russia. Turkey, a NATO member and an old friend of a lot of people, is separated from Russia by a line on a map. How far away are the Honest John artillery rockets supplied by the American government from Soviet soil? France, Germany, and a nuclear stronghold in Great Britain are but little farther away than the 90-mile strip of sea over to Cuba. Russia has bellowed for years she was threatened, cajoled and worried about the overseas bases of the Western powers.

Cuba may be a threat to our common good. She may be a centre for a swarm of burgeoning spear points, all aimed at the continental United States. But the United States could squash Cuba with a backward slap of one small mailed fist, if the occasion arose. Her nuclear capability will only be as much as the Soviets feel they can trust in the hands of the mouthy man in the beard. And that will be precious little. With H-bombs ringing the homeland on the Asiatic continent, manned by a determined and welltrained NATO Alliance, Mr K will think long and hard before he commits his country's life to a small handful of technicians and cigar-chewing Cuban quasi-communists.

It seems to us the American upset is just slightly overdone.

Doukhobors, those sons of - - - -x!

Some people say the Sons of Freedom, the unruly sect of Doukhobors in British Columbia, should be weeded out with an iron fist. It is an opinion that they are a menace to Canada's society in the Kootenay district.

We have never, to our knowledge, laid eyes on a real live Douk. We have goggled at Mennonites in Pennsylvania, quaked with Quakers, and scuffled sawdust with Holy Rollers. But the Russian expatriates who decided long ago to make Canada their second home, next to Heaven, come to mind only through newspapers and photographs.

In the days when the women and men of the extremist sect took to the open air in their pelts, clothed only in religious fervour, to protest any and all laws they did not like, then the matter was just another dopey demonstration. But of late years, dynamite and fires have taken the place of unclad protests. And that is too much of a good thing.

The laws of Canada are made for all people; they are an amalgam of the good, bad and indifferent, buttressed with rights in court of appeal and various councils. The Doukhobors have no more moral rights than the neighbour across the road; they demand all the security benefits of a give-away Canadian society, but refuse to register births, deaths and marriages, unless it is to their immediate economic benefit. They refuse to obey elemental laws of behaviour, even though they live in a society that appealed to them because of its offering of national stability. Russia offered hardly any of the above when the first Douks trekked into our western lands.

The government of British Columbia is to be commended for the stern action it is taking. Acts of terrorism that in one roaring explosion put a small city of men out of work for months, are hardly to be condoned. It seems to us a small war has suddenly sprung up between 3,000 fanatics and a few million law-abiding citizens. This is just about the time that the backbone of Canada's lawmakers should stiffen. It is nearly time to stop the pampering and patting of an irritating minority and clean their clock rather fast.

Laws are made to be obeyed and observed. Canadians as a whole know this. Why should special considerations be offered to third generation Canadians who have little else than selfish fanatical interests to serve?

The challenge of cancer

Chairman Frank Cox, of Dundas county and district unit of the Cancer Society, is getting things underway for the big blitz in April. He is looking forward to another successful canvass and in the course of conversation with him he expressed himself as follows:

"Cancer presents one of the greatest medical challenges of this century and the attack on it is the greatest single undertaking in medical history. In the words of the Hon. J. Waldo Monteith, Minister of National Health and Welfare, 'Its conquest will require an equally massive effort on the part of every segment of our health team. By responding generously to its appeal, we can ensure that the Canadian Cancer Society will continue to throw its full weight against this age-old enemy of human health and well-being.'

"The Canadian Cancer Society is the only national voluntary health agency fighting cancer through research, education and service to patients. Its sole source of funds is voluntary gifts from the public, collected during the annual April campaign. This year the campaign objective is $3,519,000. Ontario's objective is $1,700,000.

"Locally our Dundas County and District Unit have an objective of $6,000 which can only be reached by each one of us making his or her donation when the Canadian Cancer Society canvasser calls. April 9 is the day that the local unit has chosen to have their blitz in Winchester, Finch and Chesterville.

"One of the most important and largest local service provided by the Society is the supplying of Cancer dressings, free of charge, to cancer patients. During 1961 our unit distributed more than 20,100 dressings to 18 cancer patients within our unit area. Most of these dressings were made by local volunteers. From October 1, 1961, to January 31, 1962, more than $700 was spent by our unit in its welfare program. Actually, 42c of every dollar you donate is spent right here in your community on dressings. certain drugs, home nursing, housekeeper services, transportation, education, and many other services designed for the need and comfort of cancer patients.

"Last year more than half the money donated by the people of Ontario was used to finance cancer research. It will cost the Otario Division slightly more than $3 per minute to continue its work. Won't you help?"

"Teaching Grammar Don't Do No Good." Well I just had to read the article under that headline in the paper the other day.

It seems there was an experiment carried out in two Toronto schools. Two groups of Grade VIII students of equal intelligence and background were chosen. One was taught English Grammer in the conventional way by a good teacher. The other was taught by a teaching machine. At the end of six months both groups were given the same test in Grammar and asked to write a composition.

The class that had been taught by the teaching machine had a higher mark on the grammar questions. But when it came to the composition they made the same mistakes and as many mistakes as the students in the other class. The conclusion was that "teaching grammar don't do no good."

Well if it doesn't how in creation are we to improve the speaking and writing habits of the younger generation?

When I started to teach in a little country school a few years ago there was a brand new course of study. Grammar had disappeared as a subject. Instead we had English. That included Literature, Composition and a considerable amount of instruction in writing and speaking English correctly. We were not to teach nouns, verbs, adverbs, etc., as such.

The youngsters did miles of sentences for practice. "The boy ran — (slow, slowly)." "She writes — (good, well)." It was good practice of course. But how was the teacher to explain which choice was the right one when the child didn't know an adverb from an adjective?

And how could she teach the proper was to spell practice or practise when the pupil didn't know a noun from a verb?

Now it seems from the experiment with teaching grammar that it really doesn't matter. Even if the pupil does know the parts of speech and their uses he doesn't use this information in writing a composition anyway.

A teacher can teach him about negatives until he's old and grey yet he'll write, "I haven't got none." She can teach pronouns and plurals, etc. until the cowsly enter. come home and he'll write, Each man carried their own lunch," and "Everyone has their own pencil."

Somehow teachers have failed to connect in the child's mind grammar or proper English usage with the actual using of it in speaking and writing. Grammar, he concludes, is a subject studied in school not an instrument to help him experss himself. So he continues to express himself entirely by ear.

I was born with a small gift which at an early age enabled me to play the piano. Later I took a few music lessons. With painstaking care I practised each week to get the right finger on the right key and play the little piece for the teacher exactly as the book said. But when I didn't have to do it that way I really let myself go playing the tunes I had heard in my own way.

Even yet I can play back the tunes I know so that a listener can recognize them but I shall never be a church organist. A church organist must play the notes perfectly.

Most of the students these days can talk or write by ear well enough to be understood. The ones who come from homes where good English is spoken naturally speak and write a better redition than those less fortunate. But the student who wishes to further his education and continue on past Grade IX or X must somehow learn the rules of grammar. He must learn to speak and write as nearly perfectly as possible if he hopes to succeed.

Two of the best ways I know to improve one's English is to listen to the better programmes on radio and TV and to read good books. People who do this become familiar with correct forms of speech and realize that "Him and I went to school" doesn't sound right but "Mary invited him and me" does. The person who reads a great deal hears his own mistakes and corrects them.

Maybe "teaching grammar doesn't do no good." I'm not sure. What I am sure of is this: Students who cannot write or speak their own language will have a tremendous handicap in whatever vocation they eventual-

Ontario Legislature Report

By Hon. F. M. Cass, Q.C.

The ninth week of the present Session was a week devoted to Departmental estimates marked by determined efforts on the part of both Opposition Parties to discredit government policies and Ministers and to obtain a maximium of publicity of any kind. As a result there were several very long and noisy and unruly sessions which, in the opinion of many, added very little to the accomplishments and record of any of the Parties. However, even such matters must come to an end and so to the estimates of Highways, Energy Resources and Reform Institutions were duly completed and aproved.

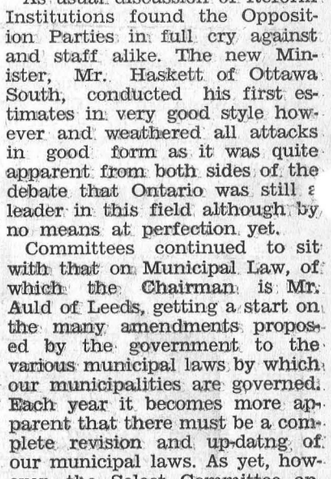
The new Minister of Highways, Mr Goodfellow, introduced another quarter of a billion dollar programme and provided the Members and the press with very full particulars of the province wide road programme of his Department. Once again it was noted that road work on King's Highways was well spread across the whole of Ontario and that the Trans-Canada Highway and the freeway system Highways No.'s 401, 403 and 405 accounted for a large share of construction for the year. and again the amount of money provided for subsidy and other payments to municipalities was increased. With the apparent severity of the spring road breakup this year, most municipalities will have little difficulty in making use of all the provincial money made available to them.

The Energy Resources estimates went rather quickly until matters affecting Ontario Hydro came up for consideration. As both Opposition Parties took the stand that the provincial government should control Ontario Hydro rather than the municipalities who own it, the debate was long and acrimonious but really settled nothing.

As usual discussion of Reform Institutions found the Opposition Parties in full cry against and staff alike. The new Minister, Mr. Haskett of Ottawa South, conducted his first estimates in very good style however and weathered all attacks in good form as it was quite apparent from both sides of the debate that Ontario was still a leader in this field although by no means at perfection yet.

Committees continued to sit with that on Municipal Law, of which the Chairman is Mr. Auld of Leeds, getting a start on the many amendments proposed by the government to the various municipal laws by which our municipalities are governed. Each year it becomes more apparent that there must be a complete revision and up-datng of our municipal laws. As yet, however, the Select Committee appointed last year for this purpose has not been able to make any recommendations and so a very unsatisfactory condition continues. There is, nevertheless, the very strong feeling that this task will be properly undertaken in the very near future. Certainly when completed such a revision will be a tremendous boon to municipal officials, elected and appointed alike.

Federal Government Report



By Mrs Jean Casselman, M.P.

Figures recently compiled show that 36.1% of total Federal Government revenues (budgetary revenues plus old age security tax revenue) were expended on health and welfare.

In 1924 the annual expenditures on public welfare services including health and most forms of institutional care, amounted in all of Canada to some 85 million dollars annually.

Twenty-five years later it amounted to 850 million dollars. Ten years later in 9158-59 the sum of $2,850,000,000 was spent on health and welfare at all levels of Government.

Last year he was First 3-year-old at the Royal, and then went on to be Grand Champion Hackney Pony Stallion. He was also named Champion of the Eastern States Exposition at Springfield, Massachusetts. Now Rambler has just been named All-American 3-year-old.

HOW "AURORA" ALSIKE BECAME A VARIETY

Efforts to improve both the quality of the seed and the field performance of Canadian-grown alsike have resulted in the licensing of the variety "Aurora."

The drive for improvement was spearheaded by the need to preserve the identity of a hardy type grown in the northern parts of Canada and by the desire to offer a superior quality alsike on the export market.

Most Canadian alsike is exported to Europe and in recent years there have been requsts for seed of more uniform quality and performance.

A variety is usually the result of plant breeders employing various methods of crossing and selection - a process requiring considerable time.

However, nature had already laid the ground work in the development of a distinctive type of northern-grown Canadian alsike. Introduced to the northern region by early settlers, it spread so rapidly that no further alsike had to be brought in. Tests of this almost idigenous alsike at Beaver-lodge and Lacombe, Alberta, showed it was more winter hardy than the only other Canadian variety, Alon, and the available European varieties. It was also equal or superior to any of them in forage yield.

Since this particular alsike had no variety name, it was impossible to produce and sell registered and certified seed, therefore, it was logical to select a number of uniform seed lines from this valuable crop and establish the variety now known as "Aurora."

To select Breeder seed, Aurora is now being put to an even more rigid test at various locations in Northern Canada. Nine large seed lots each from a different district were selected. Part of each is being field tested and the remaining portion of the best selection will be designated as Breeder seed. In future, all Foundation and Registered seed will be derived from this superior lot, which will be maintained at the Canada Department of Agriculture's experimental farm at Beaverlodge.

While the development of Aurora is unique in Canada, it does not set a precedent. A similar pattern has been followed by Denmark and other European countries and in the United States where many brome grass varieties have originated in this manner.

Last year 834 acres in the Peace River District were field inspected, of which 800 passed the inspection. It was estimated that about 250,000 pounds of seed were eligible for certification. First shipments of Aurora to Europe met with favourable reaction. Officials here are encouraged by overseas reports which term the quality "excellent."

There were numerous requests from seed growers, the seed trade and provincial authorities in Alberta for protection of our export market for alsike and preservation of this hardy strain was licensed under the Seeds Act upon the recommendations of plant breeders in the Canada Department of Agriculture and the University of Alberta.

PATCH MASONRY CRACKS

An important part of home maintenance is a regular check-up. Examine all masonry for cracks and make repairs to prevent serious damage which may result if the cracks spread.

A standard mixture for patching masonry cracks is made with one part cement, three parts sand, and enough water to make the mixture workable. Ready-mixed mortars which only require the addition of water are available at hardware stores and building supply firms.

Elma Tip-Tops hold fourth meeting

The fourth meeting of the Elma Tip-Tops was held at the home of Beverley McIntosh on Saturday, March 24th.

The girls were given a few notes on stay-stitching darts and facings for the pop-tops. They were also shown how to make their facings and how stay-stitching was done.

The fifth meeting will be held on Saturday, April 7 at 2 p.m., at the home of Mrs Donald Dillabough, when the Home Economist, Miss Reid will be present.

STAGGERING TOTAL ACCIDENTS AND DEATH ON HIGHWAYS

Take a walk, in the Spring sunshine! You'll probably enjoy it – once you have overcome the reluctance most of us feel at thought of using our legs as they were intended to be used.

But this isn't a suggestion merely to give you healthy exercise. This is a special sort of walk, for a special purpose, suggested by the Ontario Safety League.

Start from some landmark and walk at a good pace for half an hour, so that you cover about 1½ miles. Then look back to the starting point, and imagine a row of wooden boxes end to end right over the route you travelled. Not ordinary boxes – coffins.

You will then have a clear mental picture of the amout of wood required to bury the people killed by Ontario drivers each year. One and a half miles of coffins: ordered, in the main, by drivers in a hurry.

Then turn around and look ahead, to picture the number of people injured in a year by Ontario traffic. Imagine a hospital bed for each non-fatal casualty, and set them end to end along the shoulder of the highway. You couldn't pace out this imaginary line that marks the year's total of traffic mutilations. Get in your car and drive for 50 miles on the highway, and you will reach the end of the line of beds.

Dry statistics convey a poor picture of the total suffering and economic loss involved in the Province's annual traffic accident toll (1961 - 1,268 dead, 37,146 injured). A mental image of the 51½ miles of coffins and hospital beds helps to get the grim picture into perspective.

It requires quite an effort to visualize the extent of this 51½ mile line of suffering. It only requires a moment of inattention or recklessness at the wheel to make the line a little longer.

THOSE BIG, EXPENSIVE SNOWPILES

Canadians living in cities could save themselves upwards of $12 milion a year if they took to travelling in winter by skis or dog sled. That's the annual cost to only a dozen major Canadian cities of clearing streets of snow, writes The Financial Post's Jack Schneider for a-round up report from Post correspondents. Total snow removal costs for all Canadian cities might be in the $20-million-a-year range.

Great chunks of it may be spent in blitzkrieg campaigns during and after major snow storms. There have been nights in Montreal in the past winter when as many as 1,500 men and at least half as many machines have been at work at one time removing snow. City councils, in voting snow removal budgets, are guided by average snowfalls and previous year's expenditures. Yet no city budget can be more variable.

It can be cheap to remove 50 in. of snow over a winter, if it comes at the rate of 2in. to 4 in. a week. But if it flops down 10 in. at a time, and forces a crash removal program, the same 50 in. can be very expensive. But if a good snowstorm is a headache to the city, it generally means some work for casual laborers and cartage business for a number of truckers, whose units may sit idle in winter.

FOR ALL TO SEE

A small car drove through the streets of Copenhagen with a large dent in the end. Above the bulge the owner had chalked in big letters: "It was my wife who did it."

Osnabruck Centre W.I. holds March meeting

The March meeting of Osnabruck Centre Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs Carl Crawford with 25 members and guests present.

Seventy-nine articles, sweaters, toques, caps, mittens, skirts, aprons, boys pants and baby wear, were handed in to be forwarded to the Save the Children fund.

Pardon our omissions!

This week we started the printing of the "Record" in good time and everything went along swimmingly. Then suddenly Wednesday morning a sharp crack brought the big press to a sudden halt. A small but vital part had decided to break and our whole pattern of production became a cropper.

We are more than a little grateful to M. E. Johnston, owner of Roads Resurfacing. He offered us the facilities of his machine shop and in two hours had a new part manufactured and we were back in production.

Because of the lost time there are some news stories we will have to leave out this week. One that needs short mention though, is the Sunday charity game of the St. Lawrence League at Brockville. Kemptville champions will play an all-star team there made up of selection of local teams of the league. Ralph Hurley, managing the affair, hopes to have Leo Boivin of the Boston Bruins on hand as well as other notables.

Harry M. Fairbrass, 76

A familiar figure of the Chesterville scene, Harry M. Fairbrass, passed away at the first of last week. He had been ill for the past year, but his passing came as a shock to his many friends and family.

He was born in Canterbury, Kent, England, 76 years ago but for the past 50 years has lived in Chesterville. His wife, the former Bertha Collard, has been dead for some years. Mr Fairbrass was the son of the late Mr and Mrs Arthur Fairbrass.

Two daughters survive their father. They are Mrs William Hummel (Gladys), Chesterville, and Mrs Rossie Rupert (Amy), of Northfield Station. One brother survives in England. There are several nephews and nieces.

He was a member of the local I.O.O.F. and A.F. and A.M. lodges and for 25 years a warden of Holy Trinity Anglican Church. He served a number of years on town council and the public school boards. He was a valued member of one of the large stores of the village until he retired some years ago.

Funeral services were held from his home to Holy Trinity Church last Friday where service was conducted at 2 p.m. by the Rev W. L. Thomas. Interment followed in Maple Ridge Cemetery. Pall bearers were Sydney Morris, Eric Casselman, Alf. Jarvis, Allan Moran, Haldane Durant and Harold Marriner.

GRIM WAR ON MOTHS

Scientists are using sex appeal in their battle against gypsy moths.

A synthetic scent of the female moth is being used to lure the unwary males into traps.

The scent, developed by the United States agriculture department, was used in Canada for the first time last year and will be repeated this year. L. L. Reed, chief of plant inspection of the federal agricultural department, said in an article in the department's weekly publication of farm news:

Last year, aircraft sprayed 12,000 acres in Quebec near the Vermont border as part of a campaign to prevent infiltration by gypsy moths from the U.S.

The scent can attract male gypsy moths for half a mile and was developed as an answer to the rising cost of collecting female moths and extracting the normal scent. Since only the males fly, trapping them helps pinpoint infested areas.

The moths were brought to Massachusetts from Europe in 1869 by a scientist for experiments in silk production. A few escaped and in the absence of natural enemies, multiplied rapidly.

The first Canadian outbreak south of Montreal in 1924 and subsequent outbreaks were wiped out.

PROFITS UP, GAIN MODEST

Profits of many Canadian companies in 1961 were better than in 1960, although the over-all year-to-year gain may be only modest, says Patrick Durrant in The Financial Post.

This indicated by early reports on earnings by 68 firms, which show that 56 bettered their 1960 results, while only 12 had lower earnings. These results may not be typical of Canadian business as a whole, as they include 19 firms in the financial field (mainly trust and finance companies), which have maintained a steady growth in year-to-year earnings through most post-war business swings. But even excluding this group, 37 out of 49 firms report improved earnings.

Over-all profit results for 1961, when they became available, should be higher than in 1960, based on fourth-quarter operations. DBS figures of Jan.-Sept. 1961, showed corporate profits down slightly from a year earlier. Earnings, however, in third quarter 1961 were at a new high (on a secondary adjusted basis) and were 10% ahead of both the previous three months and the same 1960 quarter.

BEACHES TO ORDER

If you haven't got a beach at your summer cottage, build one. You can do it for about $1,040 an acre, reports The Financial Post's Vancouver correspondent.

One dredging operator says he can raise an acre of land 1 ft., real sand guaranteed, for 65c a yd. His biggest cost is transporting and setting up his equipment. Cost may vary from Province to province. In B. C., for example, a 10c yd. royalty goes to the Department of Lands & Forests for moving sand.

POWERFUL CAMERA

The RCAF now has a satellite tracking camera whose manufacturer claims it can photograph a single snowflake at a range of 300 miles, says Wing Cmdr. R. P. St. John of the RCAF base at Cold Lake, Alta.

It's a dandy camera, he said, but the RCAF hasn't been able to find a lone snowflake 300 miles away to check the claim.

GRUMBLING IN MORTGAGE CIRCLES

Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. is putting an $18.5 million block of NHA mortgages up for tender as part of the government's effort to encourage development of a secondary mortgage market. At the same time, reports The Financial Post, there are still rumblings of discontent over the extent of this effort.

The initial step of offering small blocks of CMHC-owned NHA mortgages to investors is welcomed, but several members of the financial community feel a lot more remains to be done to develop a real secondary market in them. This tender is the fourth CMHC offering since the first block was sold last summer. If the limit of $15 million is sold, this will bring total sales to $56 million – out of an eligible portfolio of $850 million. Complaints are much the same as those made last year: requests for changes in NHA legislation and a broadening of the present policy of sales of mortgages from the CMHC portfolio, described by some as a "nominal amount."

WHAT SPENDING PLANS REVEAL

The trade and Commerce announcement that industry and government plan to spend an estimated $8.6 billion on new capital projects guarantees continued business expansion through 1962. But for a number of reasons, says The Financial Post, a capital spending program only $487 million larger than last year's rules out once and for all the possibility that this upturn in the economy could turn into a boom of major proportions.

Despite this year's probable increase, total capital spending will still be apreciably below record year 1957's $8.7 billion. With today's higher level of national output, this means that Canada's 1962 spending program represents only about 22% of GNP as against 27% in 1957 and 26% in 1956 — or about the proportion it was in the years between 1949 and 1952. Outlays on this relatively modest scale are unlikely to put much, if any, pressure on supplies of materials, on credit resources — or scale down unemployment by any substantial amount.

To put this year's 6% spending increase in perspective, compare it with these substantial year-to-year in the early years of the 1950's: 1951, up 20%; 1952, up 16%; 1953, up close to 29%; 1957, up almost 9%. This confirms the view that current economic expansion will be milder and shorter than those of the first decade or so after World War II, barring a sudden increase in international tensions.

Nearly one-third of Finland's total area of 117,000 square miles lies north of the Arctic Circle.

HOVERCRAFT SERVICE

Plans for Britain's first hovercraft service this Summer across the Dee estuary were announced by British United Airways.

The company expects to offer regular daily trips, using a 24-seat Vickers-Armstrong III supermarine hovercraft.

The craft, which moves over water on a cushion of air, would travel at 60 miles an hour, making the journey in about 20 minutes. It now takes travellers two hours.

Meat juice spots on linen should be sponged with cool water and a liquid detergent before the cloth is washed.

Mr and Mrs John Sutherland, London, Ont., Mr Arthur Robertson, Carleton Place, relatives and friends of Northfield Station attended the funeral of the late W. H. Fairbrass.

TRACTORS PULL BALL AND CHAIN TO CLEAR PARKBELT BRUSH

One of the problems facing many farmers in the parkbelt region of the Prairies concerns use of that portion of their land still covered with brush.

Their dilemma stems from the fact that a large percentage of this bush land is of marginal quality and uneconomical to clear by conventional methods, even though it would provide additional acreage for grazing.

The answer to their problem may be the "ball and chain" method of clearing land used by the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Administration in developing some of its more northerly pastures. The technique has enabled PFRA to slash the cost of clearing large tracts of land to about $3 per acre from $20 or $25.

Manitoba has offered this service to farmers, using equipment leased from PFRA.

Preliminary reports there indicate that the per-acre cost of clearing smaller farm areas with the ball and chain method is slightly more than the cost of clearing large areas, such as PFRA pastures. This is attributed to additional transportation costs and to the extra time involved in manoeuvring the equipment in more confined areas. Despite this, however, the operation is reported as economically practical.

The first attempts by PFRA to use this technique were made in the winter of 1956 using a length of ship's anchor chain pulled at each end by track-type tractors. In operation, the two tractors push through the bush, dragging the chain which forms the shape of a "V".

Early operations showed that the chain had a tendency to "climb in denser growth. To remedy this, a metal ball weighing four tons was added in 1958 and has been used since.

Success of the ball and chain techniques is due to its two-in-one operation: knocking down trees and piling them in a windrow. Previously, this required two separate operations.

Several factors have a bearing on the cost of using this technique.

In summer, there is a tendency for the ball and chain as compared with the winter when there is more of a shearing action, resulting in a cleaner job of clearing.

However, deep snow can be an obstacle and a depth of more than two feet can make the operation bog down.

Owing to the rather high cost of the equipment—the steel ball alone costs $2,000—it is believed that widespread use of the technique in the future will depend on private contractors entering this field, or the equipment being purchased and operated on a co-operative basis.

On land cleared by ball and chain, recovery of natural grass cover has been swift, reaching full productive capacity within two years.

Yields on such land, in terms of pounds of beef produced, have consistently ranged between 40 and 45 pounds per acre. Calculating this productivity in terms of dollars and cents, this amounts to a return of approximately $3 per acre using 15 cents per pound as the quoted price for beef.

Barring unusual circumstances a farmer who grazes livestock may expect to recover the cost of clearing the land within two years.

Similarly, the additional expense of burning the felled trees and of chemical spraying to control regrowth can be recovered after another year or two of grazing.

JUST LIKE HOME

The mayor of Darlington, Eng., welcoming a group of Tanganyika police officers to a council meeting there, said "they have come to see how we conduct ourselves."

Minutes later, when councillors refused to accept a mayoral ruling, there were shouts and desk thumping and the meeting was abandoned.

IN MONEY POLICY

It looks as though Canadian provinces, municipalities and other large borrowers will be getting encouragement from Ottawa from now on to raise their money requirements in the U.S., writes Neville Nankivell in The Financial Post. The big drop in Canada's holdings of foreign exchange is the tip-off to the need for a change in attitude. Street sources say official hints already have been dropped that borrowers should go to New York where possible.

When the government decided to encourage a lower exchange rate for the Canadian dollar, it spoke out strongly against the large-scale provincial and municipal borrowing in New York. By helping interest rates in Canada to fall closer to those in the U.S., it also reduced the attractiveness of borrowing outside Canada. Now, however, the government finds itself walking a tricky tightrope. It apparently wants to keep the exchange rate from going below 95c in terms of U.S. funds, yet it doesn't want to deplete its exchange reserves unduly. More borrowing in the U.S. would help bolster the demand for Canadian dollars when borrowers convert their U.S. funds into Canadian dollars.

HARDWOOD CUTTINGS

If you intend taking hardwood cuttings of such plants as Privright away advise horticulturists with the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Hardwood cuttings should be taken in the late fall or winter while the plant is dormant.

Make the cuttings 6 to 8 inches long from wood about as thick as a pencil. Tie them in bundles of 25 to 50 and place them in perlite, sawdust, or a mixture of sand and peat that is sufficiently moist to prevent the cuttings drying out.

Store them like this as close to 40 degrees F. as possible. This will allow the cuts to callous over, but is cool enough to keep the buds dormant.

As soon as the ground is workable in the spring, take the cuttings out of storage and plant them. It is important to get root growth before top growth starts.

Glacial ice believed 2,500 years old was found under mountain rock and soil in Norway in 1961.

USE OLD PAINT BRUSH

An old paint brush comes in handy when patching plaster or filling holes or cracks in wood.

Apply spackling material with spatula or knife and while it is still wet lightly brush out rough spots with the brush which has been dipped into clean water. This cuts down the amount of sanding needed before finishing coat is applied.

Iodine is essential for the prevention of goiter and hairlessness in newborn pigs, remind veterinarians with the Ontario Department of Agriculture. That's why a brood sow requires more iodine than a growing market hog. Guard against iodine deficiency by feeding iodized salt in which the added iodine has been stabilized. If a trace mineral premix containing stabilized iodine is being used, plain salt may be fed.

This puts Canada only 1% below Great Britain in percentage of net national income expended for health and welfare, and considerably above the United States.

Accordingly it would seem that Canada is fulfilling as far as possible her obligations to her citizens in this regard.

There are those who would say that we have already gone too far, but generally those of us who are concerned and in need of health and welfare assistance appreciate it, and those of us who are young and strong do not begrudge it. I do feel very strongly however, that Canadians should be well aware of the amounts being spent in each Department of Government, and their percentage of the national income. There are indeed some who criticize the Government for not spending enough, but these people rarely have an answer as to where more taxes will come from. They usually recommend deficit financing. This can and is being done on a temporary basis, but cannot go on forever, anymore than an individual can go on forever increasing his standard of living on borrowed money. Somebody will have to pay. Much as we would wish to concentrate more and more on health assistance, the costly research to eradicate cancer, the highly trained and expert surgeons for every hospital, further research on brain disorders and the vast area of mental health with its long and costly treatment, that would be an Utopia not yet reached. Such a Utopia is closely related to our success in Disarmament negotiations. No Canadian would recommend discarding all our defence while the Communists so blatantly threaten us.

We have many other unavoidable expenses such as roads and justice and probably most vital of all, education. It is estimated that due to the high rate of population growth, Canada will have to expand present University facilities by 73% to meet the expected enrollment in 1970-71.

We are very fortunate in this country. Few have known hunger as the majority of people in other countries know it even today. We have never been bombed. We have one of the richest, most productive countries in the world.

It would be easy to trust our good fortune too far, to ignore or neglect serious problems facing us, to fight amongst ourselves. It is all too human to lay blame on someone else, religions, races, management and labour, each blaming the other. Unless someone accepts the challenge, this laying of blame is only time wasting. Happily I find a growing effort these last few months, in small groups and large, to thing about and talk about what we really want and need in all these essentials, to try to balance the costs and the results.

Mistakes have been made and will be made, but should not be continued once they the recognized. It is hoped that we Canadians can maintain the fine balance of idealism and common sense we inherited and which makes us distinctive.

The BIBLE TODAY . . .

In Guatamala the need for translations in local dialects as well as in Spanish has been partially met by the issuing of the New Testament in Kekchi and two Gospel portions in Mam of Huchuetenango as well as a revision of a Quiche Gospel. This brings to ten the number of dialects into which some part of the Scriptures has been translated. Missionary translators are thus providing the tools to bring the story of the Saviour to the very mixed population of the country.

In Peru during the first half of 1961 the circulation of Scriptures totalled 202,364 volumes. First copies of the New Testament in Piro were received and distributed to the Indians along the banks of the Urubamba River in Eastern Peru. Since many of these people scarcely ever handle money and therefore cannot pay even the subsidized price of 74 cents (publication price of the New Testament: $3.24), copies are presented to all those who can recite, without mistake, fifty verses from memory.

CHECK YOUR ORCHARD FOR MICE

Fruit growers would be wise to check their trees for signs of mouse injury under the deep snow, says an Ontario Department of Agriculture botanist.

"Deep snow provides good cover for mice to move into the orchard. They may feed on the trunk as high as the crust on the snow, as well as below ground level," says Professor C. B. Kelly of the Ontario Agricultural College.

If fresh signs of mice are found, drop a teaspoonful of zinc phosphide - cracked corn bait, or strychnine - oat bait, about the base of each tree.

Tramping the snow down hard about young trees will discourage mice if the snow and the ground beneath freezes hard says Prof. Kelly.

He suggests giving trees first aid treatment as soon as possible. Coat the wound with an asphalt wound dressing or grafting compound. Do not use roofing cement, creosote, coal tar, or paints containing turpentine; all may injure the bark.

If the injury is serious, Professor Kelly suggests scions for bridge-grafting later, or securing some tall one-year apple whips to supply new roots for the tree.

William Conybeare, noted English geologist, was also a noted clergyman.

When indoor tulips and daffodils have finished blooming, they tend to become a bit of an eyesore. However, don't just throw them out. If you do, you are robing your garden of possible bloom next year. Horticulturists with the Ontario Department of Agriculture suggest that you keep them healthy until they have dried down, and then plant them again in the fall. They will bloom the following spring. Here's what to do.

When the bloom dies, cut off the flower stalk. This prevents the plant exhausting itself developing seed. The trick now is to get a strong, healthy bulb. Food is manufactured by the leaves, and transferred to the bulb for storage. For the plant to be able to do this, it must manufacture more food than it needs. You must therefore keep it growing well.

Place the plants in a cool, sunny window at a temperature of 45 to 65 degrees F. Water regularly and give a soluble fertilizer every 3 to 4 weeks. After 3 to 10 weeks the foliage will die down.

Now, to get ready to "harvest" the bulb. Stop watering, and let the pot dry out completely. Leave for several weeks in a cool, dry place that is free from frost, and then harvest and clean the bulbs. Store them over the summer in a place where they will be cool and dry.

Next fall when you are planting your other bulbs, examine the ones that you have saved, and plant those that are firm and plump.

PRUNING ROSES

Roses of the hybrid tea type should be pruned each spring before the bushes leaf out, say horticulturists with the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Start by cutting back all the dead wood. Then remove the weak twiggy growths that are usually found near the base of the bush. Finally, cut out all crossing growths.

This should leave 5 or 6 strong growths which may be shortened to give a balanced bush of the desired height. When cutting back these growths, be sure that all the cuts are made so that the top buds are on the outside of the plants.

Hybrid perpetuals may be pruned similarly to hybrid teas. However, they are more vigorous growers, so you can leave more stems and longer growths.

Prune floribundas lightly, so as to obtain an many blooms as possible.

Dwarf polyantha do not require much pruning in the spring apart from the removal of growths that have been winterkilled. During the summer and fall, remove the old flower clusters.

Climbers, ramblers, and pillars vary greatly according to variety. Most of the climbers grown in Ontario flower on wood of the previous season's growth. Old flowering wood should be removed in August or September.

Some of the large-flowered climbers, however, produce their flowers on laterals borne on older wood. With this type, restrict your pruning to a shortening of the laterals in the spring.

EGG SUPPORT ON CLAIM BASIS

Egg deficiency payments will be put on a claim basis after March 31.

Registered egg producers are accordingly advised to retain all grading statements after that date—they will form the basis of any claim for deficiency payment and must accompany such claim.

Registered egg producers will be notified of details of the new system by mail.

Should a deficiency payment be made at the conclusion of the egg-support year, September 30, a claim form will be mailed to producers.

The Agricultural Stabilization Board will also supply producers with statements covering shipments to egg grading stations for the first half, ending March 31, of the current egg-support year. Statements from egg grading stations for the second half of the year must accompany any claim. Producers-graders may use the statements issued by their retail outlet.

Only one deficiency payment will be made to each farm enterprise, so it is important to make sure that all eggs marketed are under the name of the enterprise shown on the egg registration certificate.

Producers will no longer be required to provide their registration number with each shipment, but it must be shown on the claim for deficiency payment.

The move to put egg deficiency payments on a claim basis follows a similar innovation in the hog price support program.

HOW TO BUY MEAT AND POULTRY (Part II)

LAST WEEK I gave you information from the Consumer's Association of Canada bulletin on buying meat. Today I will continue with information on buying poultry from the same reliable source.

Inspection: As with meat, inspection applies to wholesomeness and freedom from disease. Inspection of poultry is only compulsory when poultry moves inter-provincially or is imported or exported. But a number of plants operating within a province also apply for and have Federal - Government inspection of their poultry. The CANADA APPROVED health inspection stamp appears only on poultry which has been slaughtered and eviscerated in federally-inspected plants.

Grading: Grading applies only to quality.

Poultry grading is compulsory in most cities and large towns in Canada. The grade mark appears on the breast of the bird, either on a metal tag or on a transparent, lithographed bag. Each grade mark has a different colour. If the poultry has been Government inspected, the CANADA APPROVED stamp is printed with the grade mark. Poultry is graded for the amount of flesh on the bird, the shape and structure, amount of fat, amount of discolouration, tears and pinfeathers.

Note: Some poultry which has not been Federally-inspected is graded by poultry plants, operating within provincial boundaries. These plants use the same grade marks as the plants which have federal inspection. Therefore, to be sure you are buying a healthy bird ,always look for the stamps or metal tag—the Canada Approved stamp and the Grade Mark stamped on the plastic bag, or the metal tag with the Canada Approved stamp and the Grade Mark on it.

Here is a brief description of Federal Poultry Grades:

Canada Grade Special (Purple) —Perfect birds, finest quality produced. Not generally available in retail stores.

Canada Grade A (Red)—The best quality available in quantity on the retail market. Moderately fleshed, reasonably well-covered with fat. Few small tears, pinfeathers and discolouration allowed.

Canada Grade B (Blue)—Not as well-fleshed and fattened as Grade A. A minor amount of tears, discolouration and pinfeathers is allowed.

Canada Grade Utility (Blue), Canada Grade C (Yellow), and Canada Grade D (Brown) are not normaly on sale on the retail market.

The information contained in the above was secured from the Canada Agricultural Products Standards Act and Regulations, regarding beef and veal, lamb, mutton and hogs, dressed and eviscerated poultry, and from "Food Gradings in Canada" and "Buy By Grade" published by the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture in Ottawa.

CHECK HAY QUALITY NOW

Now's the time to take a close look at your hay. "It's a good way to pick up last year's mistakes," says Ontario Agricultural College's crops extension specialist, Stan Young.

The reason for poor woody hay is that it was far too late when it was cut. Another common loss of hay quality is leaf shatter. The biggest single reason for leaf breakage and loss is bad timing of hay operations, or simply baling too dry. Seed on the grasses or legumes is another sign that the hay was cut too late.

"The right time to cut hay is when the most feed value per acre is obtained," says Young. "And that is when the alfalfa or clover is just beginning to bloom."

PRESS FOR ALBERTA DAM

The pressure is on in southwestern Alberta for another multimillion dollar dam, reports the Lethbridge correspondent of The Financial Post. A group to gather moral and financial support has been headed up by three Fort MacLeod business men. They hope to conduct their campaign along the lines of the successful South Saskatchewan River Development Association, which kept driving until the Outlook, Sask., project was approved. The MacLeod plan is to erect a dam to be called the Livingstone, at the north fork of the Oldman River, near the Crowsnext Pass entrance. Estimated cost of the project $12 million - $15 million.

Daniel A. McDonald, 78

The community was saddened to learn last Sunday of the death of Daniel "Dan" Archie McDonald. He had been ill during the winter but had made a good recovery. But suddenly on Sunday he was stricken and passed away shortly after at his home on Main South. He was 78.

He was the son of the late Angus A. McDoanld and the late Mary Ann Driscoll. He married the former Pencie Barkley and to the union were born two daughters and one son. One daughter, Mrs Wilfred Viens (Anne) lives at Rouses Point, N.Y. The other, Mary, Mrs Eugene Dunn, is an Ottawa resident. Arthur McDonald, an only son, also lives in Ottawa. Mrs McDonald also survives her husband. One brother, Fred, lives in Florida. There are three grandchildren.

A member of St. Mary's Catholic Church, Mr McDonald's funeral was held on Tuesday, March 27, with the Rev J. J. Collins officiating. Interment followed in the Upper Cemetery. Pall bearers were Eric Casselman, Garnet McLean, Charles Bouck, Bernard Hall, Russell Froats and Gordon Lannin.

CRASHES IN

Some locomotives are invited into museums after retirement. This one tried to crash in.

An ancient steam engine that makes the run around Lake Como, Italy, was hauling four coaches the other day at the lake station of San Giovanni. Its brakes failed as it approached the end of the line.

The four coaches stayed behind. But the engine continued across a sand embankment and down into the garden of a museum dedicated to Alessandro Volta, the Italian electrical wizard.

Trees stopped the intruder a few feet from the museum building. Workmen built a rail extension and the old engine chugged back to where it belonged.

Primitive jewellery was worn at the neck as a magical charm, and precious stones have long held legendary qualities.

DIED

BARBER—At his home at Chesterville, Ont., Howard Barber, aged 84 years. Son of the late Mr and Mrs Charles Barber, Templeton, Que. Survivors include his wife, the former Mabel Joncon, of Shawville; one son, William H. Barber, Chesterville. The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. on Friday, March 30, at the W. B. Rowe Funeral Home where service will be conducted by the Rev E. B. Bugden. Interment will follow in Maple Ridge Cemetery.

IN MEMORIAM

McLAUGHLIN—In memory of our grandparents, Mr and Mrs William McLaughlin, who passed away March 23, 1949, and December 23, 1945.
Too dearly loved to be forgotten.
Lovingly remembered by Doris, Jerry, Margie Ann Dain. 27-1

IN MEMORIAM

ALLISON—In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Hilda E. Allison, who passed away April 3, 1960.
Till memory fades and life departs
You will live forever in my heart.

Husband Robert and son Malcolm.

IN MEMORIAM

DROPPO—In memory of my father, William F. Droppo, who passed away April 4, 1959.
So many things have happened, Dad,
Since you were called away,
So many things to share with you
If you were only here today.
I cannot buy the old days back,
Your hands I cannot touch;
But God has given me wonderful memories
Of the one I loved so much.
Each time I look at your photo
You seem to smile and say,
"Don't cry, I'm only sleeping,
We'll meet again some day."

Ever remembered by daughter Myrtle (Mrs Roy J. Hodgson).
