A YEAR AGO

It is just a year ago that Winchester was gaily decorated, and making ready to receive the hundreds of visitors to the "Old Home Reunion." What a happy event it was, and what pleasant recollections it has left. Even to-day complimentary references are made to the splendid programme provided, and so well carried out, to the cheerful spirit of helpfulness and desire to show courtesy on the part of our citizens. It was in every respect a very happy and joyous reunion, home coming, co-mingling of citizens, and where everyone seemed to enter fully into the festivities. There was no rowdyism, no one intoxicated and making an exhibition of themselves on the streets. In fact, the utmost harmony prevailed, and our citizens seemed to go to extra trouble in their hospitality to visitors. It is a pleasant memory, and let us hope that before the holidays are over Winchester may again "demonstrate" in some way that will leave as pleasant a memory.

Administration Of Relief Turned Back To Municipalities

Cutting relief costs a million dollars a month and throwing the administration of relief back on the municipalities in a surprise shake-up which sees the demobilization of the Department of Public Welfare, Premier Hepburn has laid down a new relief policy which, effective to-day, will restrict the province's relief responsibility to cash payments on a basis of $5 per unemployed person per month to all solvent municipalities.

To further promote economy and efficiency, 164 employees of the Department of Welfare have been dismissed, this to effect an administration saving of $240,000 per year, according to Queen Park figures.

No more than $7.50 per person on relief per month will be paid out in the supervised centres which have been receiving 100 per cent. relief from the Ontario Government. Provincial supplies of funds devoted to carrying the heavy end of the relief load are realigned and definite maximums will drastically cut this total of relief in many cities.

Relief clothing stores in 17 supervised municipalities were also announced to be closed.

Back To Taxpayer

"Here's the alimony and you raise the children," the Premier phrased the new relationship between his government and the municipalities. The man closest to the taxes is the man who is most careful about spending the money, he said, as he explained why he was transferring administration back to the cities. The Premier lashed at excessive paternalism, with the statement that paternalism could reach a point where it damaged the people.

The steps were also necessary to maintain provincial solvency, the Premier said, as he announced realignment of the grants. Three-fifths of the provincial revenues, the Premier figures, are now going back in relief. The provincial treasury, he said, cannot stand its ordinary expenses, it's interest on $17,000,000 and the relief drain of $37,000;000 a year.

Under the present system, the Premier estimated that relief would cost the province about $36,000,000 a year. By the new plan, it is expected that a saving of more than $750,000 monthly can be effected. There would be an immediate saving of about $240,000 annually in administrative costs alone.

Pays Two-Third Minimum

Under the present system, the province pays the full cost of relief in insolvent municipalities and assumes the whole responsibility for administration collecting, however, 10 per cent. of relief costs for that service. In all other municipalities with the exception of Northern Ontario, the province pays a minimum of two-thirds of relief costs.

The Premier emphasized that the reversal of policy was no reflection on his Minister of Welfare, stating that it was a treasury matter entirely in order to effect economies.

Continuation of the "cash relief for work" program inaugurated by Mr. Croll in many municipalities would be a matter to be decided by the municipalities but their expenditures for such enterprises would have to be guided by the Government's maximum contribution, the Premier said.

STEVENS NAMED AS CANDIDATE FOR EAST KOOTENAY

Hon. H. H. Stevens, leader of the Reconstruction Party, was given the unanimous nomination of a convention attended by about 120 delegates from various parts of East Kootenay riding, on Tuesday. No other name was mentioned for nomination.

His nomination was moved by H. C. Oliver, of Creston, B. C.,and seconded by Alan Graham, of Cranbrook.

In accepting the nomination, Stevens said that by virtue of it he was being officially launched as the leader of a new movement in Canada.

Hy. Bessin Not A Stevens' Candidate

In a letter dated Saturday, July 27th, to the Stevens' organizer for Grenville-Dundas, Rev. A. W. R. MacKenzie, of Spencerville, Councillor Hy. Bessin, whose name had appeared in Friday's edition of the Ottawa newspapers, as a possible Stevens' candidate for Grenville-Dundas, asked that his name be dropped from the list of those being considered as possible candidates.

In his letter to Rev. A. W. R. MacKenzie, Hy. Bessin stated that he was greatly disappointed at Mr. Stevens' approach towards the solution of the agricultural problem in this country. Especially at Mr. Stevens' recently announced policy of bettering the butter market, by buying up surplus stocks of butter and gradually disposing of it in the open market, was a facsimile copy of the Bennett system of purchasing surplus wheat and would have the same results. Mr. Bessin felt that a complete change in the system of distribution of farm produce had to be effected before any permanent improvement in the prices that the farmer receives for his produce could be hoped for.

Councillor Bessin, who is quite ill and who has been under the care of Dr. Harrison Gross, Dr. Sam Mirsky of Ottawa, and Miss Jean Cummings, R.N., could not be interviewed by the Press, however, his mother, Mrs. R. Bessin, of Ottawa, announced that while her son had neither attended any meetings nor affiliated himself with the Stevens' Club of Grenville-Dundas, that he had appreciated being considered by them as a possible candidate. Mrs. Bessin said, however, that if Hy. took an active part in the coming election, that it would be in support of Preston Elliot, the Liberal candidate.

Harmony Church 50th Anniversary

REV. JOHN MacKAY WAS SPECIAL SPEAKER ON SUNDAY AFTERNOON

The fiftieth annniversary of the Harmony United Church was observed at a special service, held on Sunday afternoon. The special speaker for the occasion was Rev. John MacKay, of MacKay United Church, Ottawa, who was assisted by the pastor, Rev. W. S. Atchison, of Winchester. There was a large congregation present and the church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with flowers and foliage. During the service a vocal trio was rendered by Messrs. Robert Carkner, George Goodman and Thos. Reid. The organist was Mrs. Henry W. Cinnamon.

On Monday evening an anniversary program was presented under the chairmanship of Rev. W. S. Atchison. One of the features of the evening was a brief history of the church, presented by Mr. Aaron Sweet, recording-steward of Winchester United Church. This revealed that fifty years ago the land, on which the church now stands, was donated by the late Alex Woods. The first trustee board was composed of the following men: Messrs. Henry Wyatt, John Bowman, Fred Merkley, Henry Cinnamon, Alfred Bertrand, Nelson Docksteader and John Lough.

Since the congregation was organized, there have been 15 ministers in charge. Of these only five survive and are well-know in this district. They are: Rev. J. H. Miller, Rev. J. K. Curtis, Rev. J. A. Waddell, Rev John MacKay and Rev. W. S. Atchison. The first minister to preach in the church after its completion in 1885 was Rev. J. M. Hagar. The church and settlement was named "Harmony" at that time because of the good-will and co-operation which existed between the members of all religious denominations, in erecting and financing the church edifice.

Mr. Robert Carkner, one of the members at the time the congregation was formed, was present on Monday night and gave an address, during which he outlined the progress made by the church in the past fifty years and what it meant to the community today.

During the program musical selections were rendered by a male quartette from Winchester, composed of Messrs. Edward M. Shaver, Chester B. Timmins, J. D. Stewart and George Goodman. They were accompanied by Miss Helen Timmins, pianist.

Following the program, lunch was served by the ladies of the church.

BORN

At Winchester, Ont., on Wednesday, July 24th, 1935, to Mr. and Mrs. Clare Summers, a daughter.

Theft At Keyes' Store

Merchandise to the value of over $50.00 was stolen from the frame booth on the south side of T. O. Keyes' store some time during Tuesday night or early Wednesday morning. The trespassers gained admittance to the building by breaking the lock on the door. The building, which was formerly a refreshment booth, had been used as a storage room lately and no doubt the thief or thieves were acquainted with this fact.

The merchandise stolen included several pairs of overalls, shirts, underwear and a large bunch of bananas.

From markings on the roadway it would indicate that a car or truck was employed in the robbery.

The local constable, Herbert Helmer, and Provincial Officer Frank Rose are conducting an investigation.

SUMMER GRIPPE

There is an epidemic of what is termed "summer grippe" going about, and many citizens have been and are its victims. It starts with pains in the head and shoulders, and a sore throat, with temperature. Some of the cases have been very severe and the victims have been confined to their beds for several days. Many of the young people are victims, but as yet it does not seem to have affected the children. When you feel it coming on the best thing to do is to go to bed and consult your doctor.

TABERNACLE MEETINGS CLOSE

With large congregations present at all services on Sunday last, the annual series of tabernacle meetings, held under the auspices of the local Wesleyan Methodist Church, were brought to a close after being in progress for three weeks.

The campain was regarded as one of the most successful ever held in this district. Large crowds were present at every meeting and much spiritual benefit was derived from the messages presented by the evangelists, Revs. Robb and Wm. French, as well as the local pastor, Rev. D. W. Summers, and other ministers of the Conference. The gospel in song was directed by Mrs. Robb French, while Mrs. Wm. French acted as pianist.

Special meetings were held each afternoon for the children. These were in charge of Mrs. Eileen Tuttle, of Iroquois.

For those who were present from a distance, an excellent camp was located on the grounds, under the supervision of Messrs. A. G. Summers, Clarence Deeks and Clarence Holmes. Meals were served at 15 cents each, the cooking being in charge of Misses Eva Gibson, Beulah Summers and Mary Ann Holmes.

WEDDING

AGNEW-BRECKENRIDGE

St. Andrew's Church, Peterborough, was the scene of a charming and most interesting wedding ceremony on Saturday evening last at six o'clock, when Miss Elizabeth Irene Breckenridge, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew T. Breckenridge, Peterborough, was united in marriage to Mr. William H. Agnew, only son of Mrs. James H. Ross, of Winchester, and the late Dr. William E. Agnew, of Albany, N. Y. Rev. Dr. C. B. McLean, pastor of the church, officiated.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with a banking of ferns, interspersed with clusters of hydrangeas, galardias, brown-eyed susans and baby's breath at the altar, before which the bridal party stood.

As the bride entered the sacred edifice, Lohengrin's wedding march was played by Mr. Martin Chenhall, who presided at the organ, and during the signing of the register, a solo was rendered by Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a beautiful gown of white imported lace, the grace and length of line giving a classic design; the high neckline was fashioned with a slight fullness in front, with a row of buttons extending down the back; the flowing skirt ended in a short train. Her veil of tulle was held in place by a cap of old lace and circlet of orange blossoms which had been worn by the groom's mother and two sisters. She carried a shower bouquet of lily-of-the-valley.

She was attended by her sister-in-law, Mrs. R .A. Breckenridge, of Akron, Ohio, as Matron of Honour, and two bridesmaids, Miss E. Margaret Denne, of Peterborough, and Miss Helen Babcock, of Kingston. Dr. John R. Emery, of White Plains, N.Y., attended as groomsman, while Dr R. A. Breckenridge, of Akron, Ohio, and Mr. W. Grant Brackenridge, of Peterborough, brothers of the bride, acted as ushers.

The matron of honour was charming in a gown of pale yellow mousseline de soie, trimmed with brown grosgrain ribbon, complemented by a matching starched lace hats and carried a bouquet of delphiniums, brown-eyed susans and shasta daisies.

The bridesmaids were similarly attired in white mousseline de soie with white bakue hats handed with brown ribbon. Their bouquets were of delphiniums, brown-eyed susans and shasta daisies.

Mrs. Breckenridge, mother of the bride, was becomingly attired in a Marina blue lace gown with a pastel pink picture hat of lace straw and wore a corsage of dresden shaded sweet peas.

Mrs. Ross, the groom's mother, looked attractive in a powder blue gown of lace with a Paris model hat of black bakue and wore a corsage of Madam Butterfly roses.

Mrs. John R. Emery, of White Plains, N. Y., sister of the groom, wore pale green chiffon with wide brimmed linen stantung hat and corsage of Johanna Hill roses.

Mrs. Donald R. Roughton, of Kingston, the groom's sister, wore a gown of pink sheer silk crepe and large pink straw hat with Dubonnet Red velvet trimming.

Among the guests were the following from out-of-town: Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Roughton, Miss A. Baillie, Miss Emma Sharp, Miss Mary Wheller, Miss E. Freeman, Miss M. Blair, Miss E .Duncan, Miss B. Houston, Miss L. Acton, Miss E. A .Hunter, Miss M. Bonter and Miss O. Wilson, all of Kingston; Dr. and Mrs. Arnold Sherwood, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Johnston, Misses Ida and Emm Gardner and Mrs. Jas. H. Ross, of Winchester; Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Barlow, Morrisburg; Dr. and Mrs J. R. Emery, of White Plains, N. Y.; Mrs. W. W. Horsborough, of Montreal; Mr and Mrs. A. L. Scott, of Hamilton; Miss A Potter, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall F. Kelly, and Miss K. Hassard, of Toronto.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Agnew left on a motor trip through Quebec and the Maritime Provinces. The bride's travelling costume was a navy blue crepe frock with tuches of white and matching coat; her hat was a Rose Valois model of navy white straw with white ribbon crown. She wore navy blue accessories.

Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Agnew will reside at Winchester, Ont.

Impulse!

By W. HUMPHRYES

The detective and the criminal sat opposite each other. Rudd did not look a detective, but then neither did Dandall look a criminal. By their dress and manner Rudd might have been a stockbroker, and Dandall his junior partner. They were the only occupants of the railway compartment, and as the train entered the country, Dandall leaned forward and spoke with real appreciation:—

"You're not at all a bad fellow."

"Some of us aren't," rejoined Rudd, and for the first time yielded a hint of the detective. The hint was in his voice, which was authoriative, but otherwise colourless and unemotional—akin to the voice of the wheels that raced beneath them.

"In fact, you're a good sort," asserted Dandall. "When you arrested me you could easily have humiliated me; but you didn't. You did your job with some regard for a fellow's self-respect, and I thank you."

Detective George Rudd said nothing, but lowered the carriage window to the second hole in the strap. The man's character was in that simple act. Had he lowered the window to the third hole he would have had the wind in his face, but by lowering it two holes he ventilated the compartment and at the same time preserved his comfort—and he found the right hole first time. He did not have to experiment, because he thought before he acted. George Rudd always thought before he acted. That was why his colleagues named him "Careful George."

"And because you seem a decent fellow," resumed Dandall, as the train rattled over points, "I'm going to tell you about it."

Careful George brought his gaze from the luggage rack to the face of his prisoner.

"Remember I've warned you that anything you say may be used as evidence."

"That's all right," nodded Dandall, and then burst out, "I must tell someone or it'll choke me! It's like something here"—he slapped his chest—"that's pressing down on my lungs and threatening to stifle me. If I can speak of it I believe I shall lose it. Well, then," he continued, frowning, "I killed Hawkins. That's right enough; but don't call it murder, for in my way I was just as much an officer of justice as you are."

The noise of the train deepened to a full-throated roar as a bridge flashed past. Fields, cattles, a huddle of larches, a farm, and a labourer leading his team, were all snatched from sight by the magic of speed. Careful George Rudd said nothing.

"Hawkins was a dirty tyke!" A tremor crept into Dandall's voice. "He was after my wife, and had he got her she wouldn't have been the first. Ask around my district, they'll tell you of many a home he's broken up. Well, he was getting my wife. I've no blame for her. You know his type, flashy good looks, oily mannered, and oily mouthed—got a way with him. The thought that my Letty was falling for that bounder pretty near drove me crazy." Dandall's sensitive nostrils quivered, and he chafed his hands together as though he were cold.

"Then the day came when he had trouble with his car in my garage. From my room I could see through the garage window. The car was running and suddenly Hawkins raised his hands to his head, took a funny little step or two, and then collapsed. half in the car and half out. The exhaust gases had bowled him over. I rushed downstairs to drag him into the open. When I reached the garage I found the door was ajar, and the fumes were pouring out, so probably nothing more than unconsciousness would have happened to him, but it was obviously better to fetch him into the open, so I seized the door to fling it wide and bring him out. But——"

He paused and glanced at the fleeing countryside. Careful George Rudd said nothing.

"But," resumed Dandall, in a dry, thin voice, "I thought of my Letty . . . and I closed the door instead! Simple, wasn't it?" A wintry smile crept over his face, and he shrugged with a sense of the irrevocable.

Among the wires beside the railway was a new one of copper. The last rays of the sun made it a thread of fiery orange, and Detective George Rudd eyed it as if in meditiation.

"I didn't know I was seen to close the door," amended Dandall. "That damns me, of course. I suppose I I should have thought of chance observers, but I acted on the impulse of the moment."

"Ah!" said Rudd. He never did anything on the impulse of the moment.

With his eyes still on the new telegraph wire, Rudd thought of his own wife, and he knew that had he been placed in Dandall's position, he too might have closed that garage door. But not on the impulse of the moment. Oh, no; Careful George would have planned the affair down to the last detail, weighed every possibility, and prepared himself for all mischances. A man was a fool who acted on the impulse of the moment, and the poor devid opposite him was a living proof of that fact. He was a prisoner who would soon be on trial for his life, and he would be lucky if he escaped a Murder verdict, simply because he had acted on the impulse of the moment. But had he planned, had he calculated, he might have kept his freedom, and achieved the same result!

The detective sighed at the supreme folly of acting on the impulse of the moment, and was astonished to see the shining telegraph wire become a spinning disc of fire, shoot up, and disappear with a sombre echo in the clouds above!

He was in satin depths that were sinking past him, smoothly and without noise. The colour was of so beautiful a mauve that he gazed at it enchanted, and was annoyed when it changed to the greyness of smoke as he came drifting back to consciousness.

He was lying on his back where the railway lines should have been but were not. They were clenched in a jumble of wood, seats, doors, and all the shattered litter of a once first-class railway carriage. The heap was outlined with surprising clearness against the night sky, where the first stars shone so calmly. Rudd followed the outline with his eyes, to the right, to the left. Chaos on both sides.

"A smash up!" he thought, and marvelled that he could think with such detachment. Presently, "Well, what's the use of lying here like a fool? Better get out."

But he could not get out. He was caught beneath the debris as surely as a mouse under the iron heel of a boot. Thud, thud went his temples, and thud, thud again. Lord, had he been struggling as much as that? And he hadn't moved an inch.

He had an eerie sensation of retreating from his heart-beats as he thought he saw his own soul passing overhead. But it was only smoke. Only smoke? Where there's smoke there's fire! Fear with its chilly sickness clutched him, and he turned his head. Yes, there were flames gambolling towards him! Their banner of smoke stung his eyes, and he could hear the roar of their furning advance. God help him, he'd be roasted like a chicken!

A rabble of disconnected thoughts trooped through his mind. His wife, with her winsome ways. His peonies which he ought to have planted out. The way his Chief Inspector did his hair. What came after death? A fuller and more wonderful life where a man had the chance to retrieve his lost opportunities? Yes, had she been concerned he'd have shut the door on that fellow Hawkins, just as that other chap had done. But planned it first, of course. No sense in acting on the impulse of the moment. His son, little Jim, who always said he was going to be a criminal and made faces at his detective father — the young rascal! The gilt Justice on the Old Bailey, were the scales even? Roasted like a chicken!

Something was kicking his shoulder.

"Hi!" he muttered drowsily. "That hurts!"

A lifting of the pressure that crushed him, and a phantom scream in his ears:—

"Come out! It's tearing my arms from their sockets. Come out!"

Reason had fled, but instinct, which was old before reason was born, was with him yet and made him wriggle from the debris, like a silkworm from its cocoon. He glimpsed a dusky figure straining at a railway sleeper which it used as a lever, and then he staggered to his feet and came face to face with the man who had saved his life. It was his prisoner, Dandall. There should have been heartfelt words of thanks, an iron grip of hands, and perhaps a moistening of eyes. Instead, Rudd looked at his trousers and in a dull tone said:—

"That's made a nasty mess of them, and I've had 'em only a week. Pity."

"You're right," laughed the other. "They're hardly respectable."

Then the reaction set in, and Careful George Rudd sat down on the embankment and was violently sick.

"I say," he said, when the nausea had passed, "how long were you getting me out of that?" And he pointed to what was now a furnace.

"About half an hour," was the reply. "It was using the sleeper as a lever that did the trick."

"Half an hour," repeated the detective, musingly. "You could have escaped in that time. Instead, you stayed to save my life. Why?"

"Oh," said Rudd, and rose to his feet.

They were alone on the embankment. Officials, passengers, and a breakdown gang were busy among the wreckage.

Rudd thrust his heavy face to Dandal's, and seized him by the arm.

"If I were you and I got away," he said, with weighty distinctness, "do you know what I'd do?

"No," answered the other, tremulously.

"I'd make for a big town, take lodgings in a busy. street, and lie low!"

They looked each other in the face. There was a clammy pause.

"The last I saw of you," said the detective, pointing to the carriage now reduced to ashes, "And I'm going to report to that effect."

It took Dandall ten seconds to be out of sight over the embankment as the detective turned and giddily sat down realizing that for once in his life, even he, Careful George Rudd, had acted on the impulse of the moment. —London Tit-Bits.

More Couples are Getting Married; Confidence Returns

Government Figures Reveal 73,023 Weddings Performed in 1934 — Largest in Five Years.

Ottawa — The fact that more young couples are now getting married and setting up house indicates, possibly better than any carefully prepared index, returning public confidence and improving economic conditions in Canada. Government statistics show that 73,023 marriages were performed in 1934 or, in other words, 146,046 persons were confident of their economic future. The number of marriages solemnized in 1934 was the largest in the past five years and represents an increase of 9,158 or 14.3 per cent. over 1933 figures. Of this total, 33,261 or less than half took place in cities and other large urban centres of 10,000 population or over.

More recent figures, covering such urban centres alone show that the marriage rate this year will be even higher than in 1934. For the first five months of 1935, January to May inclusive, 21,230 Canadians stepped up to the altar as compared with 20,798 in 1933. During the first five months of this year the province of Ontario led all other sections of the Dominion with approximately 4,667 weddings. The province of Quebec came second with 2,234, the Prairie Provinces third with 2,084, British Columbia fourth with 880 and the Maritime Provinces last with 635. By cities, Toronto led with 1,990 weddings as compared with Montreal's 1,688, although the latter city showed a more marked increase over last year than did the former. Winnipeg came third with 775 weddings and Vancouver fourth with 697.

The purchases of household furniture and equipment by the newly married couples and the number of wedding presents showered on them greatly accelerates the machinery of industrial production and retail trade. This is reflected in the increases registered in the Dominion Bureau of Statistics' report on the changes in the value of retail sales during the popular wedding months, particularly in the furniture store reports.

Relief Costs in Winnipeg Increased Half - Million

Winnipeg — Winnipeg was faced last week with mounting relief costs. At the present rate of expenditure, said City Treasurer Harry C. Thompson, Winnipeg's share of relief this year would be $2,000,000—$500,000 more than last year.

Lion Cub's Travels India to London Zoo

London Times Weekly

Singh was born in the Zoological Gardens at Jamnagar towards the end of March, but there was nothing to indicate that he would soon be fated to travel as far as to Regent's Park.

The chain of events was started by a letter from a small boy in England, in which he asked his mother, then staying as a guest of His Highness the Mahaajah Jam Sahib, to bring him a lion or a tiger from India. One night at dinner in the palace the request was laughingly mentioned. It met with an immediate reponse. Singh, the only male in a litter of three, was then and there presented to the small boy, whose mother charged herself with the transport of the gift.

Singh was then barely a fortnight old—an odd little bundle of rough fur, the size of a large kitten. Plainly, he must be gradually weaned. Accordingly, he was separated from his mother for some hours every day until he became accustomed to human beings. A strong and amply big enough travelling cage of hardwood was constructed and fitted on the outside with opaque blinds which could be pulled in order to give him the darkness which he loved.

When the time came for his final separation from his mother he was still to young to lap, and was fed at two-hourly intervals by having milk poured down his throat. He put on weight steadily, was safely transported to Bombay, given a day or two's rest there, and then placed in a sheltered nook in the liner which was to convey him to the West.

As soon as he was strong enough to walk a small collar and chain were provided for him; the sight of Singh at his daily exercise on the boat deck of the liner soon became an event of the day. He proved an affectionate and playful as a kitten, early learning to recognize friends and to keep his already formidable claws carefully sheathed in playing with them.

It was found that he flourished best on a widely-advertised infant food to which raw eggs were added. He was brushed and groomed every day as carefully as a prize Pekingese; his coat became sleek and glossy and he remained entirely free from any trace of "zoo smell." Travelling in the suite of His Highness the Maharajah Jam Sahib, Singh quickly became in every sense the lion of the party.

The Italian and the French Governments gave him special facilities for crossing their frontier, but in England as a lion he would fall within the four corners of stringent anti-rabies regulations; and for a while his owners were in despair.

But interest in the journey of an Indian lion cub so young to England, and the ready acceptance by the Zoological Society of London of all responsibility for his future as soon as he became too massive for a country house jointly evoked the sympathy and helf of the officials in the Ministry of Agriculture.

The visit of an inspector of the Ministry to the country house which was to be Singh's temporary abiding place resulted in the declaration that, within a few necessary precautions, a large conservatory and a walled rose garden would be suitable quarantine.

To these quarters Singh was transported from Dover in his own car; in them he quickly settled down, becoming, if possible, even more good-tempered and more tractable than he had been before. But, alas! he has grown so much in health and strength that, while his manners are perfect, the responsibility of keeping him has become too great for any but the skilled attendants of the Zoological Society's Gardens.

In his splendid quarters there his friends feel sure that he will not disdain to take notice of the children whom he has come to regard as playmates.

Your Handwriting Reveals Your Character!

All Rights Reserved

Geoffrey St. Clair
Graphologist

Recently, several correspondents have asked questions about the status of Graphology, posing certain objections against it, and in this article I will deal briefly with some of these angles:

"How can handwriting show one's character, when we are taught how to write from the same copybook in school?" The answer to this objection proves how strongly handwriting DOES show character. Because, if you will study the writing of a single class of students who have learned writing from the same copybook, a few years afterwards, you will NOT FIND TWO WHO WRITE ALIKE.

Each one writes differently—a different slant, a different pressure, and differing conformation of letters. This is so, despite the training they have had in a standardized writing hand, and proves that, as one grows, one's character changes or strengthens, and one's handwriting changes, too.

"Does handwriting show the sex of the writer?" This question has been asked me quite frequently of late, and my answer is that while it is possible for the trained graphologist to make certain guesses of the sex of the writer at times, there is really no definite scientific foundation for this.

We all know men who write in a feminine hand, and vice versa, women who write a markedly masculine hand—the reason is simply that these people typify these same traits in their characters. Some men are almost feminine in their habits, and there are women who act in an almost masculine way. These characteristics are shown in their handwriting.

Recently, a colleague of mine picked out a dozen specimens of writing from my files, and, hiding the names of the writers, asked me to state which were written by men and which were the work of women. This test revealed that I chose nine out of the twelve correctly. I might add that my friend had purposely chosen specimens that he thought would prove puzzling. It all goes to show that it is sometimes difficult to specify the sex of the writer, and as there is very little to be gained by this, not very much particular research has been expended on this angle. However, it is probable that before very long, as a result of the various researches that are being carried on in handwriting, some definite scientific evaluation will be possible to determine the writer's sex.

"Can disease be revealed by one's handwriting?" This is an angle of graphology that is exercising the experts continually. I might say that information is being obtained continually concerning this very important angle of the science, and it is true that, even now, certain diseases can be indicated by handwriting. But to say that there is any "cut and dried" scale to determine these scientifically is to go beyond the facts.

Now and again it is possible to help a writer to know a little more about his or her health as a result of a scrutiny of handwriting, but as yet there is no accurate and permanent means of determining ailments or disease, in all cases.

Would YOU like to know what YOUR handwriting reveals about you? The truth, not as you might like it, but as it really is? And have you friends about whom you are anxious to know something of their characters? Send specimens of the handwriting you want analyzed, stating birthdate in each case. Enclose 10c coin for each specimen and enclose with 3c stamped addressed envelope, to: Geoffrey St. Clair, Room 421, 73 Adelaide Street West, Toronto, Ont. All letters will be treated in strict confidence.

Wild Turkey Makes Come-back in West

(Medicine Hat News)

On the Prairies the sandhill crane is known as the "wild turkey" of Canada, but though edible it is a very different bird indeed from the genuine wild turkey of the Southern States which is the progenitor of the domestic turkey.

In this connection it is interesting to note that the Wild Animal Park Society at Moosejaw has been experimenting with the wild turkey of the South and from young birds imported now boasts the possession of a flock of 150, the largest in captivity in Canada.

"In 1929 there wasn't a wild turkey in Canada, and our society imported three birds at a cost of $100 in order that we might show the public the difference between sandhill cranes (so often called wild turkeys) and wild turkeys. The only similarity they have is the noise they make while in the air. The birds themselves are about as different as birds could be. We have since imported several more turkeys and have raised and sold turkeys to various parts of Canada, and last Fall had a flock of over 150 birds.

"The wild turkey, known in the U. S. as America's grandest game bird, is the finest eating there is in the bird line. There is more white meat in proportion than a domestic turkey and the meat is of a finer texture, sweeter and not so dry. Many of the most successful domestic turkey breeders in the United States are buying wild turkey gobblers and crossing them with the domestic turkey to improve the quality of the domestic birds that, through time, have become too coarse and larger than the market calls for.

"We have over 70 breeding stock The largest flock in Canada. In fact, more than all the rest of Canada put together, and have been the means of starting the other parts to propagate them, and supplied the breeding stock for most of them. When raised under the ordinary hen they become as tame as domestic turkeys, whereas they are otherwise very wild."

British Railways Kill 1 in 96,000,000

London—Only one passenger in 96,000,000 carried on British railways last year was killed, according to Ministry of Transport figures published recently. The proportion of injured was one in 3,000,000.

In accidents other than train accidents 68 persons were killed, mainly through misadventure or carelessness by the victims themselves.

Montreal—First import of it kind through Montreal, anthracite from French Indo-China—a load of 8,000 tons carried in the Norwegian motorship Bonneville—arrived here recently to be sold on the Canadian market.

The shipment is the first of a series to be brought here before the close of navigation next Autumn. It has been bought by Elias Rogers and Company, Limited, of Toronto, and will be transhipped by lake boats to that city for distribution. A part of future shipments will be sold here, James T. MANY B.C. ROADS END IN WILDERNESS

(Vancouver Province)

As the story comes to us, the Publicity Bureau in Victoria believes that Vancouver Island possesses the highest waterfall in the world. It is the Della Falls, thirteen miles northwest of Great Central Lake, reputed to be 1,580 feet high.

The gazeteers do not support the claim that this is the highest waterfall, but certainly it should rank among the first half dozen known falls in the world.

If the other information about the Della Falls, as given out by the bureau, is true, then we agree that they should be better known. We are told that it is not very large in volume of water, but a genuine waterfall, nevertheless, and a beautiful sight, the noisy music of it to be heard for miles away through the Island forest.

It is inaccessible by road, and to reach it you must go by boat to the head of Great Central Lake, and then by a forest trail for thirteen miles, until you come to Della Lake and glacier.

A genuine waterfall, 1,580 feet high, even if the volume of it is not great (ten times as high as Niagara), is indeed a wonderful sight. We do not doubbt that the Publicity Bureau is right in thinking that it would be a great tourist attraction if it could be made accessible.

But when it comes to talking about the inaccessible natural beauties of British Columbia, where shall we begin and end? That very country of the Della Falls, which is to all intents and purposes still a terra incognita, is less than halfway up the Island. Nearly all the north end of the Island, too, is that sort of country.

The Island Highway ends at Menzies Bay, north of Campbell River, and there is a 150-mile stretch of country beyond, practically unknown, with the little coast settlements, of Port Alice and Port Hardy cut off from communication except by sea and air. The occasional explorer—timber cruiser, government surveyor or airman—brings us back word of this country from time to time, agreeing that it is a beautiful wilderness, but nobody else ever gets into it. It is an hour by air from this city, and it is beautiful country unknown.

We speak of all this just by way of reminder. It is useful, it seems to us, that we should get such reminders from time to time. We know that such reminders are little likely to eventuate, for a long time to come, in the project of opening up our unknown British Columbia.

We suppose it is not much use to expatiate upon all these highways of ours that end in the wilderness—we have got to get them made passable before we can extend them—but we ought to remind ourselves about them every little while. Do you realize that the straight road between Vancouver and Calgary is cut off by an eighty-mile gap between Revelstoke and Golden, and that you must make a 500-mile detour in our own territory in order to complete that journey by road,

There is no road through to Prince Rupert. The road up the North Thompson out of Kamloops, reaching up towards Jasper, ends in the wilderness. A 200-mile trail continues the east-west road from the Cariboo through the Chilcotin to Bella Coola on the coast.

Most of our great inland empire of British Columbia—do you realize it?—after seventy years of discovery and settlement—is still wilderness, still almost the country of the unknown.

Appointment Honor To Farming People Says Mrs. Fallis

Peterborough, Ont. — Unperturbed by her appointment, Canada's second lady Senator, Mrs. Howard T. Fallis, carries on her household hold duties as usual.

"I consider the appointment as an honor to the farming people of the country," he declares. "I am going to Ottawa to present them."

Mrs. Fallis states politics are in her blood. "Even when I was a little girl I used to stay away from school to attend political meetings. My father was considered the best impromptu speaker in the dirtict, and perhaps I inherit some of my ability from him."

The woman Senator has made a wide survey of political history, and in addition to studying Hansard when the House is in session, she has read every biography of famous men and women she could get her hands on.

Mrs. Fallis says she hopes the day will come when women would have a fair numerical representation both in the House of Commons and the Senate.

"There is a place for them. They present a different viewpoint, which is vital today."

Prince Of Wales Gets New Biplane

The Prince of Wales has just taken delivery of his new biplane, which will come in for constant use this summer on a long and busy round of engagements. It is a streamlined machine fitted with radio and capable of doing 160 miles an hour.

Inside are six comfortable armchairs, a cocktail cabinet and a little desk, at which the Prince will, no doubt, read. He is rarely without a book when travelling.

"We Are Going To Have Sticky Time," Says Colonial Secretary

London—Sparse population of Empire countries was thrust recently before the British public as a question involving future predominance in the world of British concepts of democracy, individual liberty and ordered international peace.

The question was raised by the Colonial Secretary, Malcolm MacDonald, son of Ramsay MacDonald, Lord President of the Council and former Prime Minister, in a report of his recent visit to Australia as a delegate of the United Kingdom branch of the Empire Parliamentary Association.

Mr. MacDonald, forecasting that "We are going to have a very sticky time" with the Dominions during the next few years, said: "One realizes that British countries on the other side of the world are half empty."

The Colonial Secretary held that: "the future authority and power of the British peoples depends on whether we are able to increase steadily on a fairly large scale over a long period the population of the Dominions."

He said of the populations that it was "not simply that at present those half-populated countries are weak links in our chain of Imperial defence," but that it was a case of the "fateful clash of ideas proceeding in the world—one advocating a return to the jungle law of international affairs, another advocating class war as a prelude to international communism, another advocating dictatorships.

"Each of these ideas," he said, "is gaining converts daily, and pitted against them are British ideas of democratic Government, individual liberty and ordered international peace.

"If Britain, in the course of years, was surrounded by a group of loyal, also powerful, Dominions whose statesmen spoke for large populations settled throughout the earth, then the causes for which the British people stood would bid fair not only to hold their own but to dominate again the affairs of the world."

Range Of Knowledge

(Baltimore Sun)

Nothing is to wonderful as the range of human interests, I suppose, unless it is the public expression of those interests. Look through any comprehensive list of new books — even the books of a month — and you will understand.

I have just looked at such a list, and it includes, indeed, only a week's issue of new books in England. Yet, along with the usual run of fiction, poetry, books for children, literary essays and works on history and politics, there are the following: "Some Agricultural Enterprises in Malaya," "Tales Told in Church Stones: Symbolism and Legend in Mediaeval Architecture and Handicrafts," "A Coptic Dictionary," a translation of Celsus' "De Medicina,' "Russian Orders, Decorations and Medals Under the Monarchy," "Practical Applications of the Punched Card Methods in Colleges and Universities," "The Birds of Midlothian," "A Greek Fragment of Tatian's Diatessaron, From Dura." "Fine Structure in Line Spectra and Nuclear Spin."

I can imagine some one being interested in Russian decorations under the monarchy; I cannot imagine enough persons being interested in the subject to warrant the publication of a carefully written book. But undoubtedly there are.

VIOLENT DEATHS

It will perhaps come as somewhat of a surprise to the majority of Canadians to be told that the total number of deaths in Canada during 1934 from violent causes was 6,448. That is an astounding statement, and one that should cause considerable thought. If a town with a population of between six and seven thousand persons were completely wiped out by some sudden catastrophe it would shock the whole country. Because the deaths are widely scattered all over the Dominion the realization of the calamity is less vivid.

Morrisburg, Ont., Returns To Navigation Circles

Like Leamington, Wallaceburg, Picton, Oshawa and many other aggressive smaller Ontario communities where there has been a revival of shipping during the past few seasons, Morrisburg, Ont., now becomes a port in every sense of the word. Throngs of people from all parts of the world still crowd into the district attracted by the reputation of Dr. Locke and now regular daily passenger service on the Toronto-Rochester-Thousand Islands-Montreal route has been inaugurated by Canada Steamship Lines. The Mayors of Morrisburg and Waddington, N.Y., delegates from the Chambers of Commerce and other public bodies as well as throngs of citizens, were all on hand for the event.

350 Whales

Member of a marine family which brings the British Columbia fishing industry a tidy sum every year but is not exploited commercially on Canada's Atlantic coast, an 82-foot whale, with its mouth measuring 30 feet in circumference, was trapped in an ice jam off Richmond county, Nova Scotia, in early May and cast up on the shore. It thrashed and struggled, flailing about with its great tail, but Nature which gave it power ahd given the ice pack more and the big mammal's struggles were unavailing.

On the Dominion's Pacific coast the whaling industry is of substantial importance, the catch being used in manufacturing whale oil, meal and fertilizer.

Last year the British Columbia whaling steamers captured 350 of these big fellows, a total which was above the annual average for the preceding 10 years of Whaling, and the two stations in the Queen Charlotte Islands where the yearly catch is processed turned out more than 813,700 gallons of oil. That quantity was 304,000 gallons greater than the 1933 output, and it is necessary to dig back to 1918 in the records of the Dominion Department of Fisheries to find a year when the '34 production figures were exceeded.

Half dozen different species of whales are taken off the Queen Charlottes but nowadays much the greater part of the catch is made up of Sperms.

Editor Called On To Settle A Bet Refers Inquirer To Genesis 5-5

(From the Stratford Beacon-Herald)

It must be the custom of people to bet on anything and everything.

Not long ago a young man called this office and explained he lived in a boarding house and there was an argument at the table regarding the size of the family of Adam and Eve. The young man on the phone said he had bet a quarter there were two, Cain and Abel, and Cain had killed Abel. Another boarder in the house had bet there were three sons, but he did not know the name of the third.

This office was to settle the dispute and say which one should collect the money. The other point in dispute was whether the family had lived in the Garden of Eden.

When it was suggested to him he might read the first few chapters of Genesis and get the matter straight for himself he replied he had no time for that. When he was told it would hardly do to leave Seth out of the family circle of Adam and Eve, he said he had never heard of Seth, which is, of course, rather hard on poor Seth.

Our inquirer asked if it were true the family consisted of three sons, and the answer to that was we did not know how many sons and daughters there were in the family of Adam and Eve. If the man with the inquiring mind cared to do so he could have turned to Genesis 5-5 and found this reference to Adam after the birth of Cain, Abel and Seth ". . . and he begat sons and daughters."

The man from the boarding house, it seems, had also included in his bet that Adam and Eve and their family lived in the Garden of Eden. The printed record is all against such a belief. It was after Adam and Eve were driven from the Garden of Eden that their children were born.

It seems the tendency is to get into an argument about something and then to back one's opinion with a wager. In most cases it would be much better to have some knowledge in the first place with which to back the belief.

The Antics Of Lightning

Hamilton.—William Alderson, of Carlisle, was one of several persons in this district, who will remember the recent display of lightning which played a series of strange pranks.

A bolt struck the Alderson home, entering by the chimney and shattering a brick wall, then circled the home after ripping a hole several feet wide. The eaves and walls were scorched. Inside, as Mr. Alderson was sitting with his wife, the bolt ripped the plaster from the wall between them in the dining-room and romped away across the lawn to no one knows where.

In Dundas, Ernest Dring, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Dring, dropped his shovel while working in the garden as the lightning descended splitting the shovel in two and wrenching a pick from his hand. It burned his right leg, blackening his right foot and threw him to the ground with a severe jolt.

A hole was burned in the examination paper which Sam and John McGrath were looking at when lightning leaped between them. Across the street, Leo Sullivan, of Hamilton was shocked while fixing a wire on a clothes line.

HIGHWAY SAFETY

Additional Constables Detailed to Traffic Patrol — Car Inspection and Advertising Campaign.

Toronto.—To cope with the rising tide of deaths from automobile accidents in Ontario, Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways and acting Attorny-General, has announced 12 constables had been added to the provincial force, most of them detailed to the highway traffic patrol.

Provision for additional traffic police marked the latest step in Mr. McQuesten's campaign to promote highway safety. Possession of a driver's license has been made the basis for enforcing the traffic laws, said the minister, and he listed two other features of his safety campaign—police inspection of motor vehicles and equipment and an advertising campaign.

Departmental records showed 202 persons had been killed in automobile accidents during the first six months of this year, compared with 164 in the corresponding period of 1934. The June death toll was 44, an increase of 12 above the May total.

"A small fine does not quite meet the situation," said Mr. McQuesten. "We will get more attention to the law if we exercise freely the cancellation of the driver's license for a term."

An act passed by the last session of the Legislature gave police power to order into a garage for inspection any motor vehicle they believed a menace to highway safety, the minister recalled.

Necessity for such inspection was stressed in a circular Mr. McQuesten and Attorney-General Roebuck sent Ontario police heads several weeks ago. This was followed by a circular to magistrates and Crown attorneys urging suspensin of drivers' icenses where such a course was believed necessary.

In the first six months of this year 1,753 drivers had their licenses suspended, compared with 1,271 suspensions in the same period in 1933. Of this year's total, reckless driving accounted for 783 cancellations. Intoxication brought 204 suspensions, and drivers were barred from the roads without a license.

Ocean Passenger Traffic From Canada Increasing

Quebec.—From the opening of navigation in the St. Lawrence river April 20 until June 30 a total of 7,745 passengers left Montreal and Quebec for Europe, it was announced recently. In the same time, 7,627 passengers arrived from European points. Both figures showed a slight increase over last year. Navigation opened a week earlier this year.

CANADA LEADS IN PLATINUM OUTPUT

Over 200,000 Ounces Production For Last Year — 55,755 Ounces in 1933

Toronto, Ont. — Canada has emerged within the last few months as the world's leading producer in platinum, following a remarkable and steady increase in the Dominion's output of this precious metal till, in 1934, the world consumption and Canadian production were almost the same.

Figures on Canadian production were discussed last week by John C. Nicholls, assistant to the president, International Nickel Company of Canada.

"We believe from a comparison of all the world production figures available, that Canada is now definitely in first place," Mr. Nicholls said. "Hitherto, Russia, with mines in the Ural mountains, has been the chief source of platinum. Reliable figures on Russian production last year cannot be secured but a study of all data on production and consumption which is to be secured, indicates that Canada has definitely taken the lead."

In 1934, Mr. Nicholls said, Canada produced slightly over 200,000 ounces of the metals of the platinum group. He thought that 1935 production would also be high.

"Platinum is a by-product of nickel production," he explained. "There is approximately one ounce troy of platinum in each 20 tons of copper-nickel ore from the Frood mine and the efficiency of modern milling and refining methods now makes practical the collection of the minute particles of platinum present in each ton of platinum-bearing ore."

Though platinum has been found in the nine provinces and was observed as long ago as 1862, there are no official statistics on production before 1920 and during the next 12 years, the total for the platinum group was only 419,000 ounces or slightly more than double the production during the last 12 months. For 1933, it was 55,755 ounces but the remarkable increase in copper nickel ore mined in the Sudbury basin brought the total over 200,000 ounces for last year.

"Canada is now producing on a commercial scale, five of the six precious metals in the platinum group," Mr. Nicholls says. "These are platinum, palladium, iridium, rhodium and ruthenium. All are found in the nickel-copper ores of the Sudbury basin and Canada is also the world's chief source of palladium. Osmium is the remaining metal not produced in this country.

"In addition to its use in jewelery and as a setting for gems and precious stones, platinum is widely used in industry. It also acts as a variety of chemical ringmaster, causing other elements to react while being unaffected itself."

Was First Canadian Soldier To Set Foot In France In 1914

The first Canadian soldier to land in France in the Great War was a visitor in Stratford recently. He is Capt. H. E. Law, director of physical education in Verdun High School.

Capt. Law enlisted in the medical corps at Kingston, and was a sergeant-major in No. 2 Canadian Stationary Hospital Unit, which sailed from Southampton on November 8, 1914, while the members of the First Canadian Contingent were still floundering in the mud of Salisbury Plains, and wondering who would have the distinction of being the first to land in France.

The depature of the hospital unit was carried out with great secrecy, and the Canadians landed at Le Havre on the morning of November 9. About 11 o'clock that morning Sergt.-Major Law of Kingston, Ontario, was marching down the gangplank. He was the first Canadian soldier exclusive of reservists who had been living in Canada and recalled to their units, to land in France. He was closely followed by Staff Sergeant McDonald of Sarnia, who was the second man ashore.

Although reluctant to discuss his war service, Capt. Law recalled the events of that morning when interviewed today.

"I recall the thing that impressed me most as we landed," he reminisced. "The kits of British officers who had been killed were piled in heaps in the shed, to be sent back to England. Most of them had bloodstains on them. That reminded us forcibly that we were going to war."

The first order which he read in camp, he recalled, was that of a member of a Wiltshire regiment had been court-martialed, and ordered shot on a charge of attempted desertion.

"The order was duly carried out at seven o'clock this morning," he recalled reading to the Canadian unit—further reminder of the grim business of war.

There was no welcome and no ceremony in connection with the landing of the first Canadian unit. The troops were met by a British R.T.O. and escorted to camp. The Canadians were under the command of Col. A. T. Shillington of Ottawa.

THE TORONTO GLOBE TRUE TO COLOR

One must admire the consistent and fearless attitude of the Toronto Globe on the question of Temperance. The Globe is Liberal, of that there is no doubt. It fought the late Conservative Government in Ontario, and it is a common saying that "The Toronto Globe and Hepburn" were responsible for the sweeping Liberal victory in Ontario. The Globe has supported the Hepburn Administration since it came into power, and sometimes "stretches a point" in its favor. But when it comes to interference with the rights of the people, and forcing on a community beer parlours, and liquor sale stores against their will, the Globe does not hesitate to stand firm in the cause of temperance. In its issue of Saturday last, the Globe says:—

> The decision of Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn to appeal to the Privy Council against the Supreme Court decision which held the Canada Temperance Act to be operative in the Counties of Perth. Peel and Huron continues to raise a justifiable resentment in many sections of this Province. His action has not been satisfactorily supported by any explanation he has give thus far. It has not been requested by the public he represents and is responsible to, and it is brashly anomalous with the office he holds.

That there is some powerful force behind Premier Hepburn in trying to force his will to open the above counties to the liquor traffic against their repeated, expressed desire to remain in the prohibition ranks, there can be no doubt, and as the Globe intimates, the majority of the people of those counties is against the introduction of the new liquor act, and their wish should have some weight. In deciding to appeal against the decision of the Supreme Court,the Globe put it thus:—

> "The Prime Minister considered the verdict of the Supreme Court for three weeks before arriving at his decision. For that reason it is all the more difficult to understand what motives could force him to ignore so definite and long established a majority., That he has seen fit to do so will be regarded as high-handed meddling in an unequalified effort to appease the interests concerned in beverage-room operation and beer distribution."

Premier Hepburn has gone far in forcing his will on the people since the election, and some of his reforms are commendable, but when he tries to force on a county a liquor system they detest, and have repeatedly refused to adopt, he assumes the role of a dictator, and Ontario will soon give evidence that it can be ruled without a dictator.

CRIME NEVER PAYS

We saw the suggestion somewhere that it would pay to have the Government employ an ex-convict, such as "Red" Ryan, to travel from coast to coast giving talks to the youth of the land on the inevitable result of crime, and that no matter how clever or bold the criminal, the law will get him in the end, and he will suffer for his crimes. "Red" Ryan, who was sentenced to serve a life term for his many crimes, has been liberated, and is, according to his own story, not only thoroughly convinced that crime does not pay, but that the criminal is sure to be caught and punished. He was a young lad of 15 years, of a good family, and evidently bubbling over with energy, ambition and a desire to be a leader. There is no telling to what position he might have attained had he been more carefully guided in youth, and had the magistrate who gave him his first sentence to serve three years in penitentiary, because he was caught with two other boys stealing candy out of a pool room, been a wise man. He should not have been sent to a penitentiary at that age. According to his own story, it was in the penitentiary that he graduated into a criminal, and no sooner was he at liberty than he believed with his cunning, and knowledge of the ways of criminals as learned in the penitentiary, he could get away with his next exploits in crime. He found it was not so, however, and most of his life has been spent behind prison walls. He tells how he has advised youths coming into the "Pen" that crime never pays, and urged them to go straight when they were again at liberty. The story of "Red" Ryan is the story told of many boys who, in ignorance of what crime really means, are led into unlawful acts. If they get away with one or two, they are encouraged to go on. If detected, and given a fair chance, they generally turn out to be good. And it shows the responsibility of parents, and records show that where parents have been faithful to the trust in looking after their boys very few have adopted a life of crime.

HOW FEW ARE LEADERS

In casting about for a suitable and promising candidate to represent a riding for any political party, it is not an easy matter to make a good selection, or the right selection. Of course, there are many who are "willing," but the men who are best qualified are not among them, and, in fact, it is hard to induce the really worthwhile men to allow their names to go before a political convention. Last week in discussing the matter of possible "Stevens'" candidates of Grenville-Dundas, the remark was made "if we could only get a good man who was financially well fixed, we might do something." There is no denying that finances enter largely into a political contest, and the liberal hand will often gain more votes than the eloquent tongue. Rev. R. W. Armstrong, of the United Church, Merrickville, issues a statement that he wished to deny the report that he was to be a candidate for the new Reconstruction party in Canada because "he had a more important job to do." Rev. Mr. Armstrong, with some other clergymen, have been very busy in connection with the organization of the Reconstruction party in Grenville-Dundas, but like others, he does not care to take upon himself the responsibility of leadership, or become a candidate. Every man can offer a good excuse why he should not be a candidate, but as for real leaders, they are hard to find.

TERRIBLE HOUSING CONDITIONS—THE POOR AND FILTHY

According to articles published in the Ottawa papers the "Slum" condition of that city is almost unbelievable. Yet there are places, called homes, not only in Ottawa, but all through the country, where, individually, conditions are just as bad as they are in Ottawa, and no one seems to care. It is hard to train people in the way of cleanliness, and while we know there is no excuse for homes being infested with bed-bugs and other vermin, such conditions do exist all through the country. In the city the filthy are the improvident and they hive in the slum sections. It is a case of "misery liking company.". One cannot help but feel the greatest sympathy for the poor children, but to look at them and see how they evidently take naturally to their surroundings, perhaps they do not really suffer more than others. Nevertheless, such conditions should not be allowed to exist, either in Ottawa or in any other community, or even in the rural districts. The problem is how to deal with them. Our governments have become parental in many ways, why not appoint a commission to look after the poor and filthy, and see if their conditions could not be improved. The provincial nursing system under the late Ontario Government, was a good one, and should be re-established.

INHUMAN FATHERS

The story published in Saturday's papers, that a father at Colorado Springs, aged 31 years, had his eleven year old son insured for $1,000, and then attempted to murder that little boy so that he could collect the insurance, sounds almost unbelievable. There must be something mentally wrong with such a man, and he will, no doubt, be put where he will not be able to do any harm.

Last week we heard of a father who compelled his little boy to go out and get a stick with which he was to thrash him, because, as the father claimed, the boy disobeyed him. We do not know the particulars, but someone said he sent the boy out to catch a hen, and the boy failed in his mission, and thus the thrashing.

We do not think that such a father would actually murder his boy for money, but his mentality is not much different from that of the man who attempted to kill his son to collect $1,000.

ABOUT LEADERSHIP

The Pembroke Standard-Observer points out the fact that those who say that Harry Stevens may be a clever and sincere man, but will never make a leader, should remember that the same was said of Sir James Whtiney, of Sir Robert Borden, and in England of Sir Ramsay MacDonald. In fact, even Premier Hepburn is surprising many who considered him impossible as a leader. Harry Stevens has given more evidence of real leadership than any other member of the House of Commons, not excluding the Prime Minister and leader of the Opposition. If he lacks the financial backing of the two latter it is because he has been fighting for the people and not for big financial interests.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King gave the people the "air" last evening.

Who rocked the Conservative boat? Was it Harry or was it Richard.

It is said that "Reds" in Canada are on the increase. That is because Canada has discarded prohibition.

There will be considerable 'political' static in the air during the next few weeks, and radio owners will get their ears full.

To-morrow will decide who will be the Stevens Candidate (if any) in Grenville-Dundas. Stevens candidates are now almost as numerous as Conservatives.

Premier Hepburn is shifting the "Relief" burden from the government to the municipalities. Well, what difference does it make, the people who work have to pay for those who won't, and it all comes out of the same pockets whether administered by government or municipality.

How times and values have changed was illustrated in the purchase of a pleasure steam yacht at Clayton last week for $1,000, that cost $80,000 to build. The yacht was practically as good as the day it was launched. We expect that in a few years $5,000 automobiles will be selling for less than $100.

There will be general approval of Premier Hepburn's ultimatum to those on relief, that any able-bodied young man over 21 years, who refuses to go to work on a farm or anywhere else, will be cut off the relief list. The general public will agree with Premier Hepburn that it is time there was a show-down on this Relief Business. It is about time men were made to earn what they get.

"He who laughs last, laughs best," and Harry Stevens says that the big politicians at Ottawa who laughed at his "Reconstruction" party, when it was announced have now a very different expression on their faces. The fact that neither Premier Bennett nor Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King have, so far, not made any comment is an indication that perhaps the grin on their faces has become frozen.

WESLEYAN METHODIST SERVICES

Rev. Robb French spoke on Sunday morning on the New Testament Church. The early church had a vision of the great need of mankind and also a consciousness of the sin of the age, and how to tell men of the cure. The early church knew how to pray the prayer of faith and this always brings results. On the day of Pentecost when the disciples were in the Upper Room, the Holy Ghost was outpoured and their hearts were purified by faith and they were filled with the Holy Spirit. This is God's requirement for every one that belongs to the church.

The afternoon service, conducted by Rev. Will French, was from "God is not mocked. Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." In the world we know this is a fact, only that we reap more than we sow. Just so with our deeds. If we sow to the wind we reap the whirlwind. If we break God's Holy Day we will reap it a hundred fold. If we disregard God's laws we will surely be held accountable at the day of Judgment. May God help us to so live each moment in the place where we have the assurance that we please Him. We cannot play fast and loose with God and expect Him to say "well done" some day. Our mansion in Heaven will just be built with the material we send up.

The evening and closing service of the Tabernacle meetings was conducted by Rev. Robb French from "They all began to make excuses." What flimsy excuses some people will make and think perhaps they will get off with it. But the Lord said "not one of these would taste of the supper." We look up an excuse for not going to prayer meeting perhaps because it rains a little but if there was a two dollar bill at the meeting house for us we would all be there. God help usto put something into the Christian life that will commend us to God and give us the confidence of our fellow men. The all important thing is to prepare to met our God. For we must face the Judgment and our record unless it is covered by the Blood of Jesus. We will have to give account for every vain and idle thought and every word we say.

The camp meeting closed bringing to an end one of the best ever held on these grounds. The results were far-reaching as many came from outside places, and many prayed through to victory. Eternity alone will reveal results from these services. We stand for real definite work of the old Methodist type of two works of grace—Justification, in which our actual sins are pardoned and we are made Children of God. Then sanctified wholly by the mighty Baptism of the Holy Ghost. God gave His son for the world, but Jesus gave Himself for the church that He might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the Word. We always have an open door where weary sinners can find rest and a sin-pardoning Saviour. May God help us to make preparation for the life beyond the grave.

Is anyone else in the world glad that you are in it? Then your life is worth living. If not, you can make it so.

A BAD HITCH-HIKER

The chance that a motorist takes in giving a lift to a hitch-hiker has been painfully realized by a Toronto business man. Mr. William S. Cameron picked up a thumbing stranger who climbed into the rear of the sedan. Shortly, the passenger seized Mr. Cameron by the throat, forcing him to stop the car abruptly. As the driver climbed from the car, key in hand, the thug struck him in the right eye, then over the head, seized the key and drove smartly away.

Hundreds of kindly motorists like to play the role of Good Samaritan by assisting hitch-hikers. Usually, all is well; yet this one case case proves that the practice is dangerous.—Exchange.

Canada, the United States and France are the only countries allowed to ship flour into Belgium. The flour from France is employed solely in making certain kinds of biscuits for re-export and the Canadian and U .S. flour must be used only for making "biscottes" (a variety of toasted bread,) or for re-sale to ship's stores.

UNION SERVICES

Last Sunday's messages given by Rev. W. S. Atchison in the United Church were full of inspiration. He spoke from Psalm 121:1 in the morning, saying that what we are determines what we see, and what is within us determines what we get out of life. He visualized three mountain peaks from which we can look into the love of God and have our faith strengthened—Sinai, where God met Moses and revealed to him the ten commandments; the Mount where Jesus preached His wonderful sermon; and Calvary where Jesus was lifted up to draw all men to Him. In God's own way there comes strength, encouragement and forgiveness through the blood of Jesus.

The evening message being the last before the holidays of Mr. Atchison, he left some beautiful thoughts with the congregation taking for a text the apostolic benediction as found in II Cor. 13:14. He spoke of the significance of the wonderful Trinity as found throughout the Bible, especially of the Trinity for God's workers—Come, tarry, go; also of the remission of sins, the gift of the Holy Ghost and eternal life. The choir sang "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," at the evening service. Next Sunday the services will be in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church with Rev. W. D. Turner in charge.

DR. CONNELL BEGINS CANCER TREATMENT

Dr. Henry C. Connell, discoverer of biological products known as 'ensol' for cancer treatment, has organized his Kingston clinic and has begun treatment of all patients who seek help. Dr. Connell said he is satisfied with the results of his discovery.

Dr. Connell said clinics in other places will be arranged as soon as he has consulted with other physicians and explained the method of treatment whereby the 'ensol' solution is injected into the blood stream.

Dr. Connell said his discovery in no way will be exploited or put on a financial basis and persons treated may be seen by interested physicians.

DIED AT IROQUOIS

After more than a year's illness, there passed away a highly respected citizen of Iroquois in the person of George William Armstrong. In his 85th year, the late Mr.Armstrong was in possession of all his faculties to the very end. Born in Iroquois in 1851, some of his youth was spent in Valleyfield, where he was employed in the cotton mills. Later he returned to Iroquois and took up farming, at which he was very successful. He served on the school board for many years.

CORNWALL TOWNSHIP APPEALS ASSESSMENT

Claiming that the assessment for that township is high in proportion to that of 14 other municipalities in Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry counties, officers of the Cornwall township last week entered an appeal before County Judge F. T .Costello against the equalized assessment fixed by counties council at its June session. Cornwall township's assessment was raised by $826,000 to a total of $6,866,725. Judge Costello heard argument of counsel for Cornwall township, Cornwall town and United Counties, during which there was some suggestion of a possible settlement, but this did not develop. The hearing was adjourned until September 10 when Judge Costello said he would examine assessors of four Dundas county municipalities. The contention of counties' council is that the addition to Cornwall township's assessment was just, in that it represented a fixed assessment of $790,000 on the plant of Courtaulds (Canada) Ltd., plus $36,000 for new buildings in 1933.

MOREWOOD W. A. ENTERTAINS SISTER SOCIETIES

The Women's Association of Morewood United Church entertained sister societies from Russell, Chesterville and Berwick at a special meeting and program held in the church on Friday last, which was followed by a supper served in the dining hall.

The many guests were received by Mrs. Orrin Dillabough and Mrs. A. W. Reveler, while the opening devotional exercises, conducted by the president of the Morewood society, assisted by Miss Ellice Smith, commemorated the anniversary of ten years of union.

After the president's address of welcome, a program of instrumental and vocal numbers was presented, a feature of which was a solo sung by Mrs. Simeon Hutt, of Berwick, the oldest guest present. The following other ladies took part in the program: Mrs. Wesley N. Fulton, Mrs. Percy G. Hewitt, Miss Addie Campdeross, Mrs. Duncan McElheron and Mrs. A. B. Clayton, all of Chesterville; Mrs. Emerson Kyle, Mrs. Henry Tweed and Miss Ella Yorke, all of Russell; Mrs. Henry Steen, Morewood; Mrs. Aden Casselman, and a ladies' quartet, of Berwick.

For supper tables were arranged in a circle, while in the centre was a table on which was a birthday cake with ten lighted candles. The cake was cut by Mrs. Dillabough, after which Mrs. A. B. Allison, of Morewood, proposed a toast to the United Church of Canada. Thanks to the Morewood Society for their hospitality was voiced by Mrs. H. Shepherd, of Russell, and Mrs. W. O. Dixon, of Chesterville.

AN IRISHMAN'S WILL

In the name of God, Amen! I, Timothy Doolan, of Barrydowndery, in the County of Clare, farmer. Being sick and weak in my legs, but of sound head and warm heart—glory to God—make the first and last will, and old and new testament. First, I give myself to God, when it pleases Him to take it. Sure no thanks to me for I can't help it then; and my body to be buried in the ground at Barrydowndery chapel, where all my kith and kin that have gone before me, and those that live after, belonging to me, are buried. Peace to their ashes, and may the sod rest lightly over their bones. Bury me near by godfather, Felix O'Kaherty, betwixt and between him and my father and mother, who lie separated altogether at the other side of the chapel yard. I leave this bit of ground containing ten acres—rare old Irish acres—to my eldest son, Tim, after the death of his mother if she lives to survive him. My daughter, Mary, and her husband, Pat O'Reagan, are to get the white sow. Teddy, me second boy, might have got the pick of all the poultry, but he's gone. I bequeath to all mankind, fresh air of heaven, all the birds of the air they can shoot—I leave them all the sun, the moon and stars. I leave to Patrick Rafferty a pint of potheen I can't finish, and may God be merciful to his soul.

Thanksgiving is to be marked on Monday, October 14, and by that time we will probably know what sort of a government we are going to have.

CONTROL THE EXTERNAL PARASITES OF POULTRY.

Lice and mites are often the cause of poor egg production during hot weather. Body lice can be controlled by the use of blue ointment applied beneath the wings and around the vent. Mites feeding off birds at night, and living in cracks and crevices during the day, have to be treated differently. Ordinary coal oil will kill the mites, but as it evaporates quickly the killing effects are not lasting. An excellent "paint" to apply to the roosts and nest boxes is composed of one part crude carbolic or, possibly better still, nicotine sulphate, to three or four parts of coal oil or a mixture of coal oil and crank case oil.

Thrill Seekers To Have Their Inning

Thrill seekers will have their innings at the Ottawa exhibition from August 19 to August 24, inclusive. For the last two afternoons of the week, Hankinson Speedways of New York will present a six-event automobile racing program under the sanction of the contest board of the American Automobile Association.

Twenty or more drivers, representing the cream of the crop of foremost speed talent, will figure in the program which has been definitely linked with two championship circuit 1935 contests. The first titular honors will be awarded for the eastern district by the A.A.A., while the second, the Hankinson circuit championship, involves a much wider territory and brings to the winning driver the most coveted of all diadem awards annually.

The Hankinson organization, headed by Ralph A. Hankinson, silver thatched veteran, is the oldest and largest promotional company in America sponsoring recognized automobile races, and this year is observing its silver anniversary. Hankinson activities this year extend from Ottawa to Florida, and from the Atlantic seaboard to the Mississippi river. The wide scope of activities makes possible the securing of the best drivers in the country and brings assurance of keen rivalry in every event Last year's races showed that the Ottawa track is safe and fast, and several improvements have been made to enhance the races for this year.

For the first four days of the week there will be horse races in addition to the program of high-class vaudeville offerings, replete with thrills and novelty.

A hundred and one other attractions simply scream their invitation to the Capital for a memorable week. Creatore and his band in two free concerts daily, one of the most elaborate out-of-door song and dance revues topping the evening program, elaborate fireworks a new and better midway with fun and surprises for young and old, government displays, dog show, automobile show, free horse show, livestock, poultry and pets, and scores of other factors will combine to make the 1935 Ottawa exhibition the best ever assembled. Prize lists and literature are available on application.

TIGER EYE

by B. M. Bower

Eleventh Installment

Bob Reeves, the Kid, was nicknamed Tiger Eye by his friends down in the Brazos country because his "gun-eye" was yellow. When his father, "Killer Reeves," died the Kid left Texas to avoid continuing his father's feuds. Reaching Montana he is forced to draw on Nate Wheeler, an irate nester. In the exchange of shots Wheeler drops dead, the Kid later learning that Bob Garner who had also shot at the same time, really killed Wheeler.

Garner gets the Kid to join the Poole outfit as a rim rider. The Kid succors Wheeler's widow and is interrupted by Pete Gorham and some other nesters. He shoots Gorham through both ears for coupling his name with Wheeler's widow. Later he rescues a girl, Nellie, and her dad from Gorham, wounding Pete again. The girl, in spite of her belief the Kid is an imported Texas killer, warns him the nesters will kill him. The Kid warns Garner the nesters are planning an attack on the Poole outfit. He meets Jess Markel, a Texan who is boss of the Poole wagon crew and shoots him through both hands.

Nellie's dad is shot from ambush and suspects Babe against his wish. The latter thinks another nester killed the old man. Babe is wounded by hidden enemies, who also shoot at Tiger Eye but miss. The Kid pulls Babe back into the cabin and wounds one of the attackers.

Nellie comes to the cabin secretly and aids Tiger Eye to escape with the wounded Babe. While they are riding off, Babe becomes delirious and accuses the Kid of trying to cheat him out of the pay for killing Nellie's brother. Nellie, outraged at being betrayed in her faith in the Kid, slashes him across the face and rides away. After turning Babe over to the Poole outfit, Tiger Eye finds a deserted cabin and determines to wage independent war on the killers of both factions.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

His grub was getting low. He wanted more money than he had in his pocket. Wouldn't be working for wages now for awhile, and grub costs money.

So he sat one night in a poker game with three cowboys from over toward the Rosebud and a lucky prospector just in from the Black Hills. Walked out at daylight with his pants bulging at the sides like a pocket gopher packing grass to its burrow. Honest player, though. Never caught him in any funny business. Plain lucky, that kid with the one yellow eye.

He rode out of town at noon, Barney taking careful, nippy steps to balance the big and bulging pack on his back. Pecos, too, carried more than his master that day. Tobacco and five pounds of candy and a songbook and two cartons of cartridges wrapped in the kid's slicker and tied behind the cantle. The kid's pockets sagged with six new mouth organs, keys C and D, in bright red pasteboard boxes.

The kid was almost ready now to show Nellie Murray he was neither a killer nor a cur to take a licking and crawl off under the brush and whimper over his hurts. He was just about ready to start in taming the killers. Right soon, now, the name of Tiger Eye would send men's glances back over their shoulders and make a prickle go up into the roots of their hair. The range tiger was going on the prowl.

It was hot down in that willow growth through which the kid was riding. They came out finally against a barbed-wire fence, built straight across through the thicket. Good stout posts that looked solid as the teeth in the kid's mouth. Four wires strung so tight they hummed like a tuning fork when the kid leaned over and gave one a jerk. No fooling with that fence. Cattle proof and storm proof, like the fences the railroads built along their right-of-way.

Plumb strange to find a fence like that over in this part of the country. This wasn't Poole land, and he never heard of any nesters over in this direction. No trails coming up this way, no nothing. Shoah was mysterious.

They followed the fence for half an hour of steady plodding along the narrow lane cut by the fence builders. They came slap up against a sandstone ledge where the last post stood in a hole drilled into solid rock and was set there with cement. And that was plumb strange too. Nothing to do about it, though. Couldn't even ride back along the edge of the willows because it was just a mess of broken rock and rubble from the steep slope that evidently stood above the ledge.

Once more the kid turned Pecos short around, and rode back along the fence. He crossed a creek bed covered with hot sun-bleached cobblestones with stagnant pools in the hollows. There the fence became a brush and wire barrier higher than the kid's head. No animal bigger than a rabbit could wriggle through there. He rode another half mile or two before he came to the edge of the fence and found it anchored to the other arm of the sandstone ledge.

An hour or more later Pecos stopped on the crest of a long ridge and stood with braced legs, completely winded after the steep climb, though the kid had been considerate enough to come up on his own feet.

He had plenty of time to rest and doze while the wind pleasantly dried his sweaty hide, for the kid sat down with his knees hunched up to brace his elbows, and through the glasses very carefully examined this strange conglomeration of hills and hollows and wild crooked canyons.

The kid moved his glasses a little and saw a horseman just riding out of sight behind a chokecherry thicket. He seemed to be coming down the canyon.

The kid rode slowly along the canyon bottom, playing his mouth organ as he went, and letting his long legs sway to the rhythm of the tune. The kid's eyes lightened with a peculiar gleam but the tune he was playing never missed a note, until a black horse and rider came into view. The kid gave one startled look and the music ceased with a squawk.

Nellie Murray, dressed in her dead brother's overalls and blue gingham shirt, with her thick braid of yellow hair sweeping the cantle of her saddle as she rode! She carried her dad's rifle in the crook of her arm, as if she meant to meet danger a little more than halfway, and as the two horses stopped of their own accord, she lifted the rifle midway to her shoulder, then let it down again.

"Well! I've found you. Where are the cattle?" she demanded.

The kid looked at her with that curious, steady stare of his yellow right eye, and his face had the expressionless look of a trained gambler. Cold and hostile and ready for war he looked, but he didn't feel that way. Hot crimples went chasing up his spine, and the back of his neck had a queer tightened feeling, as he stared at her.

"Well! I've found one of you, anyway!" she exclaimed, in a tone that was worse than another cut of the quirt. "Where are the cattle?"

"What cattle?"

"Our cattle that you Poole men stole out of our pasture last night. Every hoof we own! I'm going to get them back, if I have to fight every Texas killer in the country."

"I'm a Texas man, all right, but I'm no killah. Told yo'all that befo'."

"Well, that remains to be seen. You're a Poole man, anyway. You must know where our cattle are."

"Shoah wish I did. The Poole's fighting nestahs, I know that. But they don't steal cattle, Miss Murray."

"Oh, don't they? Walter Bell ought to raise your wages for saying that!"

"He kain't. I'm not working for the Poole."

"No? How long since?"

"Since that night we got Babe outa Cold Spring cabin."

"I suppose the Poole fired you for poor shooting!"

Her short scornful laugh turned the kid's ears red as if she had slapped them, but he made no answer to the taunt. What was the use?

He wrapped the bridle reins around the saddle horn and began to roll a cigarette, taking plenty of time. A man could do a heap of thinking over a cigarette without giving himself away.

"You must know the Poole ran off with our cattle!"

"No, kain't say I do."

"Well, they did."

"You'all right shoah it was the Poole?"

"I wouldn't say it if I wasn't sure," she retorted sharply. "None of our neighbors would do it, and besides, I trailed them up on the Bench and over this way. The Poole wants to run us out of the country. You know why, don't you?"

"Kain't say I do, lessen it's because yoah a nestah."

"Oh, of course all the nesters are being made the goats for Walter Bell! He's got to lay the blame somewhere for his stealings. But he's scared to death of us Murrays and he means to drive us out. He's got Ed and father out of the way, but he's afraid of Mother and me too. You know why, don't you?"

"Kain't blame 'em for that," he said drily."

Nellie flushed and looked down at the rifle sagging in her grasp.

"It's because old Walt Bell is afraid Mother and I know what Ed found out about the Poole. Ed caught the Poole cowboys stealing Poole cattle, that's why! Some of them—that stand in close with Walter Bell. Joe Hale for one, and Jess Markel for another. He caught them running a wildcat brand on Poole calves, over this way somewhere. He found out a lot, and then he wrote back to the head moguls in New York and told them what was going on." She bit her lip. "That was away last March, and they haven't done a thing about it, though Mother says Ed sent enough proof to put the whole outfit in the pen."

"Shoah had nerve, that boy." The cigarette was lighted but the kid forgot to smoke it. His mind went shuttling back and forth, weaving Nellie's story into certain puzzling fragments of information he had never been able to make anything of.

"Of course he had nerve! Too much. He wanted to get the goods on that bunch without dragging the neighbors into it. He never told them what he was doing, but he told Father."

"Plumb strange yo'all nevah mentioned it, when we talked these things ovah at the cabin. 'Peahs like I wasn't trusted at no time."

"I didn't know it then. Mother knew, but they were afraid to talk about it, much. She only told me early this morning, when we found out our cattle were gone. I rode down to the pasture to bring up the cows and there wasn't a hoof in sight. I saw where they'd been driven off, and then when I went to tell Mother, she told me the whole story."

"Shoah would like to know what yoh mothah said," he observed, in what would have been a cold and formal tone, except that the kid's soft Texas voice made a pleasing melody whenever he spoke.

"Mother told me Ed was always trying to figure out why the Poole had it in for the nesters, after letting them settle in the valley without making a fuss. Ed did a lot of riding outside the valley. The Poole claimed he was rustling calves, but that's a lie. I know how we got every hoof we owned. We only had forty-two head. Now we haven't got any."

"If yoh brothah got proof—"

"He got enough to put the fear of the Lord into Walter Bell," she declared bitterly. "We don't know whether they saw Ed watching them, or whether the Eastern owners wrote back and told Walt what Ed said about him and his outfit. The Poole certainly must have found out somehow, and it wasn't from any of the valley folks, for they don't know it. The Poole started in—dry-gulching, if you know what that means, and I suppose you do, all right." She sent him a quick glance and looked away again when the kid failed to meet her eyes. "Before, it was just mean range tricks—hogging the range and accusing the nesters of rustling calves and killing beef and all that. But all at once they started killing. Ed was one of the first—"

"If yoh'd give me the brands so I'd know yoh mothah's cattle when I find 'em—"

"Well, it's Reverse E. But I couldn't think of troubling you, Mr. Reeves. I intend to get those cattle myself."

"It's a man's job," the kid said gruffly.

"Well, I'm the man of the family now, so it's my job. So long, Mr. Reeves!" She gathered up the reins and tapped her horse lightly with the quirt—just as if it never had been put to a more sinister use—and rode on past the kid with her chin tilted upward and her gaze bent ostentatiously upon a straggling, small herd of cattle feeding over on the farther slope.

"Adios, Miss Murray!" The kid kicked Pecos into a trot and rode on into the rocky pass, playing his mouth organ so loudly he cracked a reed so that the note buzzed like a bee in a bottle.

He rode on ahead of her. Didn't act like she was going home. Didn't try to catch up with him, either. The kid got to worrying about what she meant to do, and finally he pulled in behind a ledge and waited for her to come along, so he could give her another piece of his mind. Yet when she rode up she didn't give him a chance.

"If you're bound to hunt our cattle, I guess we better work together," she said cheerfully. "This is awful rough country."

"Go awn home like I told yo'all."

"Oh, forget it!" she snapped. "I'm not going, and that settles it. If you want to get rid of me so bad, hurry up and find our cattle."

"If it wasn't foh yoah mothah, I wouldn't tuhn my hand ovah foh yo'all!" the kid blurted fiercely.

THE MAN WHO FORGOT

He wears a long and solemn face
And drives the children from his place,
He doesn't like to hear them shout
Or race and run and romp about.
And if they chance to climb a tree,
He is as ugly as can be;
If in his yard they drive a ball,
Which near his pretty flowers should fall
He hides the leather sphere away,
Hoping to thus prevent their play.

The youngsters worry him a lot,
The sorry, man, who has forgot
That once upon a time he, too,
The self-same mischief used to do.
The boyhood he has left behind
Has strangely vanished from his mind.
And he is old and gray and cross
For having suffered such a loss,
That is the birthright of a boy,
He thinks he never had the joy.

He has forgotten how he ran
Tied to a poor dog's tail a can,
Broke the window panes, and loved to swipe,
Some neighbour's appes, red and ripe,
He thinks that always, day or night,
His conduct was exactly right.
In boys to-day he cannot see
The youngster that he used to be.
Forgotten is that by-gone day
He was as michievous as they.

Poor man! I'm sorry for your lot;
The best of life have you forgot.
Could you remember what you were,
Unharnessed and untouched by spur,
Would be your comrades here to-day.
These youngsters that you drive away
Among them you would galy walk
And share their laughter and their talk.
You could be young and blithe as they Could you recall your yesterday.

Honey produced in Canada in 1934 amounted to 24,269,760 pounds valued at $2,244,814, as compared with 22,915,794 pounds, valued at $2,009,969 in 1933. This represents an increase in production of 1,353,966 pounds or 5.9 per cent. over 1933, and an increase in value of $234,845, or 11.7 per cent.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS—By JOHN HIX

The wars of Napoleon, his master strokes of military strategy, the campaigns that once seemed so important—these today are little more than memories. The very things for which he fought have long since ceased to be, and Napoleon himself saw the futility of war when, puttering away his life at St. Helena, he said: "War is the business of barbarians."

The one lasting monument to Napoleon's reign, strange as it seems, was a product of peace. It was his Code Napoleon, a compilation of laws completely restating the law of France, and so well compiled that it not only still serves France, but is the basis for law of numerous other nations.

The Code Napoleon is the most celebrated of modern codes. It is in force in Belgium, Holland, several Swiss cantons, and Italy, either as a whole or as a basis for their codes. On this continent the laws of Quebec and of Louisiana are based on the Code Napoleon, as are the laws of many Central and South American countries.

This monumental work was compiled in four months by the outstanding legal minds of France under the direction of Napoleon who, strange as it seems, predicted that it would be looked upon by future generations as his crowning glory.

Men suffer in summer more than necessary from wearing clothes which generate and hold the heat. During the torrid summers we sweltered in a coat in Montreal. There a man must wear a coat to preserve his dignity, and he goes about with perspiration running down his cheeks, while the women who have sense enough to dress to the weather, are cool and comfortable. One advantage of living in a small town is, that the men are sensible enough to discard their coats. Common practice makes shirt-sleeves the prevailing mode. It's just another indication that the small town people show glimmers of wisdom not granted to the city-dweller.

ITEMS THAT INFORM, INSTRUCT, MAKE YOU LAUGH AND MAKE YOU WISE.

MOST IMPORTANT

"What is the most difficult thing to learn in caring for a baby?" asked the young mother.

"To keep from talking about it all the time," replied the guest.

DIFFICULTY FOR THRESHERS

Threshing machine owners throughout the country are not finding it easy now to move from farm to farm. The new law says that they must clean their machines before setting them up on another farmer's property. The threshing machines have been accused of being carriers of the seeds of noxious weeds and to prevent the spread of such weeds the owners must clean them before moving on.

WHY NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING PAYS

Did you ever see a man carrying a billboard under his arm? No. Did you ever see a handbill on a reading table? No. Did you ever see a picture of the new hat you want come into the house via radio? No. Did you ever see a live newspaper thrown into the waste-basket without being read. No. That's why advertising in The Winchester Press brings results.

VIOLENT DEATHS

It will perhaps come as somewhat of a surprise to the majority of Canadians to be told that the total number of deaths in Canada during 1934 from violent causes was 6,448. That is an astounding statement, and one that should cause considerable thought. If a town with a population of between six and seven thousand persons were completely wiped out by some catastrophe it would shock the whole country. Because the deaths are widely scattered all over the Dominion the realization of the calamity is less vivid.

MINUS TAX TICKETS

It will undoubtedly come as a shock to many persons in Ontario that, under the Amusement Tax Regulations now in force, failure on the part of a patron at any place of amusement to retain his stub of the Amusements Tax ticket is punishable by a fine of from $10 to $200 under the Summary Convictions Act. The actual requirement in the regulations is that the person admitted must produce his portion of the Tax ticket on demand by any Inspector of the Amusements Revenue Branch or police officer. Lack of such "tax receipt" is regarded as prima facie evidence that the act has been evaded.

GOOD THINGS TO KNOW

When baking apples, prick the skin of the apples and they will cook without bursting.

When peeling tomatoes scrape the skin slightly with the back of the knife in the usual way. It will be found that the skins will slip off easily.

Before scraping new potatoes, soak them for half an hour in cold water which has been salted. Not only do the skins peel off easily,but the hands are not stained.

The yolk of eggs, left over when baking requires the whites only, if dropped into a pan of boiling and salted water will cook and be ready for your noon salad.

OVER 800 CAR CRASHES IN ONTARIO DURING MAY

zThere were 828 motor accidents in Ontario during May, an increase of 20 per cent. over the same month of last year, according to the latest release of the department of highways. Fatalities from crashes, however, numbered 32, which is a decrease of about 27 per cent.

Property damage was estimated at $75,705, also an increase.

The bulletin points out that "results of accidents are largely in the hands of the Providence," and while some may claim that a minor mishap in which no one is seriously injured is not of much importance, it is generally by a stroke of fate only that some more serious consequence did not develop.

HIGH COST OF GOVERNMENT

The amazing thing about this whole so-called depression is that during the past six years during which governments have been furiously scratching their heads to invent new taxes our slothful system of over-government has remained intact. For example the comic opera government of Prince Edward Island, where an election was held on Tuesday of last, may be cited. There, to serve 90,000 people, not as many as there are in Windsor, they have all the machinery of government we have in Ontario: Prime Minister and his cabinet the Honourables This, That and the Other; the Minister of Highways, Minister of Education, Minister of Health, etc., a Supreme Court, a Minister of Justice, 30 members of Parliament and representation in the Senate. Was there ever anything more silly or wasteful, when one government could quite easily serve the Maritimes? Sooner or later the people will demand these changes and will include a sharply curtailed representation. Throwing money collected for taxes out the back door should stop.—Almonte Gazette.

SOMETHING TO IT

Recently, while motoring through a densely wooded section in the province of Quebec, we noticed a large signboard which was located near a clubhouse on the shore of a small lake. It read: "This Is God's country! Do not burn the trees down and make it look like hell."

BILLIONS ARE PAID FOR INSURANCE

If insurance payments for 1934 had been distributed equally every person in the country would have received $4,380, an article in the National Underwriter revealed.

The total paid in the United States and Canada was $3,101,525,930, with the largest policy that of Percy A. Rockefeller, nephew of John D. Rockefeller, Sr.,—$3,124,773.

FATHER OF TWENTY-NINE APPLIES FOR PENSION

Sixty-five-year-old John Perkins, negro, father of twenty-nine children, including seven sets of twins, had filed application for an old-age pension with the Arkansas Welfare Department. Perkins has been married four times, was thrice a widower and twenty-five of his twenty-nine children are still living, the oldest being 49. His first marriage was at the age of 13.

"THE INS," AND "THE OUTS" IN POLITICS

"The Outs,"—The Hon. Arthur Roebuck speaking to the unemployed "Go back home and organize and become so strong that you will be in a position to force your demands on the governments

"The Outs"—The Hon. Peter Heenan speaking to those in the relief camps at Petawawa, called them "slave camps."

"The Ins"—Premier Hepburn "No work, no relief."—Pembroke Standard-Observer.

SHE DIDN'T

Mr. Jones was airing his views at the dinner table about the iconsistencies of women.

"These modern girls who protest that they are never going to marry," he said, venomously, "why, everybody knows they will belie their own words at the first opportunity."

His wife kept a discreet silence.

"Why Martha," he said, "I once heard you say that you'd never marry the best man alive."

"Well—I didn't," said Mrs. Jones.

HELPING OUT

The mother of an outstanding American was asked some questions about the boyhood of her famous son. She replied, "When there was anything to do, he helped out, whether it was his choice or somebody's else."

Now this is a very different attitude from that of most young people. How careful some of you are not to assume any responsibility that does not belong to you, to draw a line between your task and the other fellow's. The idea of pitching in and doing work just because it is waiting to be done, is a novel one to you.

It is true that the people who do their own work are rated rather high in these days when the shirk is so much in evidence; but merely doing your share will not put you at the top. The worker who is ready to help out, who feels the responsibility for unfinished or neglected work, whether his or another's is the one for whom the world is waiting.

EVERYBODY'S APPETITE

On an average a woman eats one-fifth less than a man. People who eat highly-seasoned foods regularly are usually irritable. Those who never touch cruets are frequently lacking in "pep." Fish and fruit are gradually ousting beef. Mr. Bernard Shaw has said that in beef we get nourishment second-hand; the beast first enjoys the vitamins of the pasture. There's all the wealth of the sea in fish. Fruit eaters usually have sweet tempers and sunny dispositions—since their food is largely concentrated sunshine. If it were not for the old-age customs of feasting we should find two good meals a day ample sustenance. A normal man of fifty has in his life consumed twenty-five tons of food and a hearty eater between fifty and sixty tons; but the former has the better expectation of life. As a nation, the Romans were the biggest eaters. They made gluttony a pastime. That was one cause of the collapse of the Roman Empire.

SUNSHINE AND RAIN

Perhaps it is not strange that most young people feel agrieved when a bit of hard luck comes their way. It is natural to assume that one is entitled to have conditions about as wanted, blue skies for every picnic, favoring winds for every sail, opportunity waiting just when desired. Since that is the instinctive attitude, it naturally "riles" one to have it rain on the wrong day, to have a wind in the wrong direction, or to find when applying for a job that the position wanted was filled last week. Perhaps it would help a little to realize that one is entitled to one's share of hardships, the struggles, and the disappointments. You cannot grow roses on undiluted sunshine. Clouds, showers, and storms must do their part; besides, uninterrupted good fortune does not develop the best in human character. When the hard knocks come our way, do not act surprised and certainly do not grumble. We are entitled to a few hard knocks.

A clergyman calls attention to another advantage of the new smaller Canadian bills—they fold and fit very nicely into duplex envelopes.

Anyone who travels across Canada must realize that one thing this country needs is a good coat of paint, says the Regina Leader-Post. The state of buildings pretty well across the Dominion suggests that a million pounds of paint could be used in Canada with good effect within the next year or so. Perhaps it should be a half-million pounds, perhaps two million pounds. At any rate, the country could make use of a tremendous amount of paint.

ASK FOR Kellogg's

The world's most popular BREAKFAST

Kellogg's Corn Flakes are the largest-selling ready-to-eat cereal in the world. The reason for this is threefold: They're oven-fresh, they're flavor-perfect, and they're made from the finest ingredients obtainable.

When the Kellogg Company started making Corn Flakes 20 years ago, it changed breakfast habits the world over. People everywhere eat Kellogg's Corn Flakes — because no imitation can equal their delicious flavor and crispness.

When you buy Kellogg's, you get true value. Refuse a substitute. The original Corn Flakes are made only by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Our Column

Notices are posted in Montreal calling upon colored people in good health and over 21 years of age to join up and fight for Ethiopia. It is well we believe for a soldier to enjoy good health at the outset.

Man in Spokane has invented a new style of safety pin which springs in rather than out. Too bad, but the little folk who should benefit most from such an invention are too young to say "Thank you, mister."

There are men in Winchester who know that "he who does not mind his own business soon gets to the place where he has no business to mind." They see the good in others and let someone else weasel around in a sour search for human faults.

A man in Montreal stole funds from a taxi company. He said he had been working two years for $6 a week and a promise to increase his pay to $15 had not been kept. It looks as though some of the money belonged to him, but he went the wrong way to get it.

According to instructions sent out to Provincial Police this week, in future cattle will not be allowed to graze along provincial highways, either loose or tied. Owners of cattle found grazing in such places are liable to a heavy fine, according to information received.

"Ethiopia for us!" was the cry raised in Rome by one hundred thousand Fascists in what is described as one of of the greatest demonstrations in that capital's history. In a way this seems an answer to the old question: "Who, then, makes war?" Sometimes it is the people.

A Philadelphia youth advised his grandfather to withdraw $42,000 from a bank, saying he had "inside information" that it was going to "fold up." The aged man accepted his advice, brought the money home, and next morning missed both the grandson and his money.

There are men in this town who are good citizens, working for community welfare and who guard the reputation of their town, its organizations and their friends as they would that of their own more intimate family circle. If there are men here of the opposite kind,—let someone else list them.

Motorists will do well to observe the markings on the pavement at the intersection of Main and St. Lawrence streets. They indicate how to turn the corner in a safe manner, and thus avoid the danger of a collision. When approaching the corner watch for the yellow arrows, they were placed there for a purpose.

A fellow has got to be a contortionist to get by these days, comments an exchange. First of all, he's got to keep his back to the wall and his ear to the ground. He's expected to put his shoulder to the wheel, his nose to the grindstone, keep a level head, and both feet on the ground; and, at the same time, look for the silver lining with his head in the clouds.

STORING WET HAY

This is the season for barn fires, caused either by lightning or spontaneous combustion. There is nothing very much the farmer can do about the lightning hazard, other than to equip his buildings with approved rods or similar devices, but there is a good deal he can do about spontaneous combustion if he wants to.

A bulletin from the office of the Ontario Fire Marshall states that more than two-thirds of all barn fires are caused by spontaneous combustion, and many of these could be prevented. Ignition never occurs in dry, well-cured hay or grain, but wet or damp pockets in a mow are very dangerous.

HOLD ANNIVERSARY

Rev. Russell C. Archer, of Cardinal, was the special speaker at the anniversary service of Morewood Presbyterian Church held Sunday. More than $260 was contributed by the congregation, while members of the United Church worshieped with them. At the evening service Rev. Alex Nimmo, minister of the church, and Rev. G. H. Smith, of the United, assisted in the service. Special music was contributed by the choir under the direction of Miss Belle Moffatt. The Morewood congregation is regretting the coming departure of Rev. Alex Nimmo, who has been in charge of the pastorate for the past eight years, and who accepted a call to a church in the province of Quebec.

FINAL NOTICE!

Respectfully,

And I hereby call upon all voters to take immediate proceedings to have any errors or omissions corrected according to law, the last day for appeal being the 5th day of September, 1935.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL NEWS

Mrs. Joseph Boyd is visiting at the home of Mrs. Chas. Annable this week.

There will be a celebration of Holy Communion in St. Matthias' Church next Sunday morning at 10.30 a.m.

There will be a celebration of Holy Communion in St. Peter's Church, S. Mountain, next Sunnday morning at 9 a.m.

Miss Hazel Jackson, of Cornwall, and Miss Beatrice Jackson, of Winchester, left on Monday to spend a couple of weeks with friends at Rochester, N. Y.

Congratulations are ertended to Miss Mary A. Holmes, who was successful in her Normal School Examinations, and received her First Class Certificate.

After experiencing great difficulty in getting the hay off the meadows owing to frequent falls of rain, local farmers are now starting to harvest the grain which is ripening fast.

The Press is pleased to note that Mr. Finlay Coons, of the "Big Store," who has been on the sick list for a couple of weeks, is again able to be about and expects to be behind the counter at A. Sweet & Co. next week.

Sunday, August 4th, service in St. Andrew's Church, South Mountain, at 11 a. m., and at Knox Church, Mountain Station, at 3p. m. will be conducted by Rev. A. W. R. MacKenzie, of Spencerville. Mrs. (Rev.) Wm. MacLean, of Montreal, will sing at both services.

The Ottawa-Morrisburg highway has been temporarily repaired between Winchester Springs and Williamsburg, and while an improvement may be noticed, the road is still far from being in good condition. What a shame that section couldn't be paved this year. It would be money well spent in the long run.

The Ever-Ready Mission Band of Mountain United Church, entertained Mrs. Barriger and her Sunday school class of Mountain, to a picnic supper, on Wednesday afternoon last, in Mountain community park.

A lengthy program of races and a very pleasant day was enjoyed by all guests. Delightful refreshments were served by the Mountain Mission hostesses.

STORE OPENED AT STATION

Mr. J. L. Brown has opened up a Grocery Store, Lunch Room and Restaurant in the building previously occupied by C. A. Coons, near the C. P. R. Station. Recently the store has been remodelled inside and out, and Mr. Brown hopes to have one of the most up-to-date business stands in the district. Read his advertisement in this week's Press.

MADE A SCATTERING

The sudden and heavy shower of rain on Sunday night caught many unaware, especially many of those who had gone to the tabernacle meeting and found no room for shelter. There was a scattering, hither and thither, for shelter, and we fear that many a new dress and new hat got its initial baptism. It rained several times during the night, and quite heavy, but the bright sun of Monday morning made one soon forget all the discomforts caused by the rain.

SALE OF HOLSTEINS

Three shipments of pure bred Holstein cattle have recently been made by breeders in Grenville, Dundas and Stormont Counties to American buyers. The buyers were Wray E. Henry, Lisbon, N.Y., I. H. Chitoff, Fitchburg, Mass., and Henry R. Freeman, Gouverneur, N. Y.

The Chitoff shipment, consisting of twelve head, was picked up from the following breeders: Jas. R. Blain, Avonmore, E. W. Cameron, Mountain, and Wm. Link, Winchester, two head each; J. T. Mulloy, Inkerman, Arnold Hutt, Winchester, Wm. M. Morrow, Maxville, D. H. Kennedy, Maxville, Clarence E. Holmes, Winchester, D. J. McLean, Maxville, Russell Blaney, Inkerman, and A. D. McRae, Moose Creek, one each.

The largest of the three shipments was that to Wray E. Henry and consisted of twenty-four head. Fifteen of these were purchased from the herd of Dalton E. Timmins, Inkerman, Ont., and the remainder were bought from Robert Armstrong, Cardinal, Ont.

The shipment to Mr. Freeman consisted of seven head which were purchased from Wm. A. Cameron, Mountain, Ont. The majority of these were young heifers.

FAREWELL PARTY

On Monday afternoon a delightful outdoor party was held at the home of Mrs. Gemeroy, when seventeen of the neighbors gathered to do honor to Mrs. Neoma Bowman, before leaving her home to reside in Chesterville. She was taken completely by surprise when the party was called to attention, and a little address read, with the gift of a travelling Hat Box.

A very satisfying tea was served by the Misses Sally Gemeroy, Eleanor Hitsman, Beulah Kinkaid and Norma Hitsman, and the shower ended with all good wishes to the honored guest. The following is the address:

Dear Friend:

We want you to know the homes on Gladstone street are going to miss you among our members.

In the past you have been ready at any time of the day or night to answer a call for help. Wherever you go you will always find good neighbours for a good friend always makes more, and you can live without your relatives but you cannot live without neighbours.

We shall always count it a joy to see you back and if your fortune is as bright as we wish it, you will be blessed indeed.

Just as a slight token of our love and esteem, we wish you to accept this little gift.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Glyden Smith, who died August 2nd, 1933.

In tears we saw you sinking,
And watched you fade away;
God knows how much we miss you,
As it dawns two years to-day;
We often stand by your grave,
With hearts still sad and sore,
And think we of those loving words:
"Not dead, just gone before."
Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Smith and brother, Colin. 14p.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of Mr. Andrew Redmond, South Mountain, who passed away on Friday, July 12th, 1935.

We shall miss you in the dawning,
We shall miss you at the noon,
We shall miss you when the evening shadows fall,
We shall miss you in the springtime when the earth is full of bloom,
We shall miss you in the drowsy summer days—
And in the golden Autumn,
And in white-robed Winter's stay,
The Home folks will not forget you
Since you have gone away.
Mrs. M. Carroll, Davenport, Iowa..

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of our dear sister, Mrs. George Bolton, who departed this life on July 27th, 1934.

* * *

Just one year has passed, dear sister,
Since you from us have gone,
But the time seems far longer
Since that sad day on us did dawn.
But we trust and know, dear sister,
That you're free from mortal care—
Resting safe on Jesus' bosom
Where no foe can ever harm.

When troubles sore oppressed you
And your path was sorrow strewn,
God sought to give you refuge,
And gently called you Home.
"God loved His own and called them home"
He called you to a world of happiness,
Where heartaches ever cease,
There to rest with Jesus,
In everlasting peace.

Safe within the arms of Jesus
Safe upon His loving breast,
There from earthly worries sheltered
Sweetly now your soul doth rest:
There to wait a little longer,
Sister dear, we too shall come,
Where we trust to share your glory
In your eternal home.
Where trouble and strife
And the care of this life
Can never again oppress,
Where cares never come—
Never darkness nor woe,
And nothing shall ever grow old.

Just a little every day,
Trusting through a stormy way
Trusting Him whate'er befall,
Trusting Jesus—that is all.

We loved you, yes, we loved you
But Jesus loved you more,
And He has sweetly called you
To yonder shining shore.
The golden gates were opened:
A gentle voice said 'Come,"
And with farewells unspoken,
You calmly entered Home.
Oh where shall rest be found—
Rest for the weary soul?
In God we trust. He knows.
