IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our beloved son and brother, John Lobb, who departed this life August 26th, 1935.
Through all pain at times he'd smile,
A smile of heavenly birth;
And when the angels called him home,
He smiled farewell to earth.
One precious to our heart is gone,
A voice we loved is still;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
Sadly missed by Parents, Brothers and Sisters. 17c

Automobile Accident Here This Morning

TWO CARS PARKED IN FRONT OF HOTEL HIT BY MORRISBURG MOTORIST. NO PERSONS INJURED. ALL CARS INSURED.

A peculiar accident occurred this morning at the intersection of Main and St. Lawrence Streets involving three automobiles, two of which were parked in front of Hotel Winchester.

According to the report of the incident given to Constable Herbert Helmer, the car, owned by Mr. Lee Deeks, of Morrisburg, circled th light standard at the intersection, crossed the street to the left curb, swung across the highway once more, in front of the hotel and crashed into the parked car of Mr. Earle Lewis, of the White Packing Company, Brockville. Mr. Lewis' car was tossed up on the curb by the impact, the left front fender being crumpled against a pillar of the hotel balcony. The rear end of his car was forced against a Willys-Knight coupe owned by Mr. J. R. Finlater, of Toronto, which was also parked in front of the hotel.

No one was injured in the accident although Mr. Lewis' car was badly damaged about the fenders and right running board. Mr. Deeks' car suffered a crumpled left fender and radiator. The Finlater car was slightly damaged, the right rear fender being crushed.

Constable Herbert Helmer was called to the scene and took a report of the accident from those involved.

Mrs. McIntosh accompanied Mrs. Probert on the long journey. and although in her 86th year, seemed undaunted by the prospects of such a long trip.

Farewell Party Held

Members of the United church choir held a delightful farewell party on Tuesday evening last at the home of Mrs. A. W. Sherwood, in honour of Miss Agnes Parker. A social time was enjoyed, during which an address was read by Mr. J. D. Stewart and a beautiful overnight bag presented by Mrs. W. J. L. Boyd.

Candy was then passed by Mesdames Arnold Sherwood and Percy Durant, after which all joined in singing "For shes a jolly good fellow."

Following is the address:

Dear Agnes:—

For some weeks past we have heard rumors and murmurings that indicated some event of more than ordinary portend was about to take place.

We have noted with some apprehension the depressed and downcast expression on the faces of our young men and the general air of dejection, that has caused us no small degree of worry and alarm. Not being in their confidence, we, of course failed to trace the causes which brought about this "lowness of spirit" and "loss of morale." But just recently it has gradually dawned upon us that all this has been the outcome of the knowledge that a certain young lady of willowy grace and alluring presence, is about to remove from the place of her birth and lifelong domicile, to that interesting and attractive city—the Capital of our fair Dominion.

Not only will that young lady be missed by the youth of our village, but by many others of more mature age and experience.

That young lady, Dear Agnes, is yourself.

Our Choir will miss your regular attendance and great and appreciated help. And not only in our musical efforts will we feel the lack of your presence, but the general attractiveness of our Choir as a physical unit, will be greatly reduced, for your "Tete au rouge" with not one hair displaced, was the one bright spot in an otherwise fairly drab assemblage.

We would ask you to accept of this "Overnight Bag" as a small remembrance of our pleasant and profitable time together.

With all good wishes for yourself and your mother in your new home and environment.

Signed on behalf of the United Church Choir, Winchester, Ont., E. M. Shaver, President; Caroline L. Carr, Organist.

DELIGHTFUL SURPRISE PARTY HELD

Miss Jean Scott, who left this week for Montreal where she will enter the General Hospital as a nurse-in-training, was the guest of honour at a delightfully arranged surprise party at her home on Wednesday afternoon of last week. About 50 guests were present for the happy occasion.

Expressing regret at her departure and best wishes for future success, an appropriate address was read by Miss Laura Dukelow, while Misses Helen McVey and Beulah Kinkaid made the presentation of a leather purse, desk lamp and pen and pencil set. Miss Scott, in a few words, expressed her appreciation of the kindness of all her friends.

A social time was enjoyed after which refreshments were served by the hostesses who were: Misses Luella Allison, orma Summers, Laura Dukelow, Beulah Kinkaid and Helen McVey.

Prior to their departure, the guests registered in a beautiful remembrance book which was designed by Miss Allison and presented to Miss Scott at the close.

Ottawa Boys' Band At Metcalfe Fair.

Among the many special features to be presented at the eightieth annual exhibition of the Metcalfe Agricultural Society on September 15th and 16th will be the band concert given by the Ottawa Boys' Band.

This outstanding organization under the direction of Captain J. T. Brown, has made many warm friends among music lovers in this section, through the radio broadcasts, and a real treat is in store for all at the fair on Sept. 16 when they will both see and hear this famous band, on their first appearance in this district.

NEW SYSTEM FOR COLLECTING FEES

According to Stanley L. Joss, secretary of the Ontario Cheese Patrons' Association, a new system of collecting tolls from factories has been inaugurated. Heretofore the association has been collecting a fee of five cents per hundred pounds of cheese from the buyers, but the recent findings from the Supreme Court regarding the legislation necessitated the new system.

Starting Monday, it has been decided to collect the money from the factories by deducting the fee from the pay cheques each week.

Mr. Joss stated that the association had held meetings over the entire province and in almost every instance the new scheme met with unqualified approval.

To date, the association has the endorsation of Peterboro, Northumberland Hastings, Leeds, Dundas,, Glengarry Frontenac, Lennox and Addington.

The plan will be ready to be put in operation at once. The question of fee collecting for the Cheese Patrons' Association has been a topic of discussion to farmers of the district for the past few weeks, and considerable interest has been aroused in the matter, according to Mr. Joss.

Rev W. S. Atchison will be in charge of the services in the United church next Sunday after enjoying a month's holidays.

Ottawa Exhibition Being Well Attended

GOLDMAN AND HIS BAND, NEW MIDWAY, FOUR-STAR REVUE AND SCORES OF OTHER FACTORS.

With record entries, every available space in the buildings taken up with attractive displays, the renowned Goldman and his band, a larger and better midway with the latest in rides and the most unusual in shows, a four-star revue, The Fascinations of 1936, with a scintillating cast, mostly girls; the pick of high class vaudeville, horse races, live stock, poultry and pets and scores of other factors, the Ottawa exhibition opened on Monday, August 24th. There will be one full week as the show will be intact until the closing hour on Saturday night, August 29th, and the complete program of entertainment will be presented.

Little need be said of Goldman, who is known as the King of Bandmasters. He and his band are known to all radio listeners and to those who read about the leading bands of the continent. He has selected wonderful programs for his twelve concerts to be given each day at 4 and 6.15 p.m. Dividing honors with the band will be the cornet soloists.

The Goldman band has a new cornet soloist who will alternate with Frank Elsass, who has been the soloist for the past two years. The new soloist is Leonard B. Smith, who was born in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Mr. Smith is 19 years of age and has had unusual training, having studied at the Ernest Williams School of Music in Brooklyn.

Both Leonard Smith and Frank Elsass will bring to the Goldman band concerts an entire new repertoire of solos. Dr. Goldman has been personally coaching them throughout the season in some of the famous operatic arias as well as classic and standard songs. Dr. Goldman said of Leonard Smith recently, "I believe that in young Smith I am to have the greatest cornet talent I have ever known. He has absolutely everything in his favor—a fine tone, brilliant technique and a most artistic style. I am sure our audiences will get a great thrill from his performance."

Entries received assure the best display of livestock for years. The evening horse show in the Coliseum will eclipse any show since pre-war days. The grandstand program, with the high class vaudeville, the four star revue, and the spectacular fireworks is announced as the best ever assembled for the exhibition.

MAY OPEN COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT

According to members of the High School Board, it is possible that a commercial department will be established this year at the local institution. Indications are that a large number of students are desirous of taking commercial work and the Board has decided that a commercial teacher will be engaged if the number of students enrolled in the course is sufficient to warrant the additional expenditure. Those desiring to take commercial work should enroll on Tuesday next without fail.

WEDDING

St. George's Chapel, Ottawa, was the scene of a very interesting wedding ceremony on Thursday afternoon last when at half-past three o'clock the marriage took place of Miss Gladys Jane, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Lewis, to Mr. Harold Whitney Baker, of Winchester, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mildren Baker. Rev. W. H. Bradley officiated and for the occasion the chancel was adorned with gladioli.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and was attended by her sister, Mrs. R. T. Chapman, as matron of honor. A lovely gown of turquois blue chiffon sheer, made on long, graceful lines, was worn by the bride. It was fashioned with flowing sleeves and had a high neckline and was styled in semi-tunic effect. THE QUESTION OF WAR

Considerable controversy has raged in some circles over the remarks of Viscount Elibank, with reference to another great war and its possible effect on Canada. Great indignation was registered by some of our government officials, when the English speaker pointed out the need for more adequate measures of defence in this country.

We may rant and rave all we please, but certain facts continue to face the citizens of the Dominion of Canada with respect to our position in the British Commonwealth of Nations and the world at large.

Let us glance for a moment at the Mother Country. Her financial and industrial interests are of such wide extent that it would be next to impossible for that country to remain neutral in case of another conflict. Thus it is that British statesmen are directing their time and energies towards building adequate armaments and means of defence.

Canada, as a vital part of the British Empire, faces certain responsibilities that come automatically. The nations of the world look upon this Dominion as being closely allied with the Mother Country, and it would be extremely difficult for foreign powers to imagine Great Britain engaged in war and Canada neutral. In fact, we might go so far as to say that the same thing would be equally difficult for many Canadians to imagine.

We point with pride to the place among nations which Canada has enjoyed since the Great War. We have come to feel that we are capable of handling our own affairs and making all necessary decisions with reference to our external relationships. All of which is as it should be, but we must be prepared to meet such a situation as armed conflict—when we, as a nation, might easily be dragged into the catastrophic struggle regardless of our decisions to the contrary. War is often forced upon a nation due to external forces over which that nation has no control—such, in our opinion, is Canada's position to-day.

Viscount Elibank spoke truthfully when he said:

"We in the Motherland will have to be in the conflict which faces Europe. Canada can stay out of it for the time being if she so wishes. That is up to her."

The words "for the time being," have a very sinister meaning, which should bring one point to the minds of all thinking Canadians with considerable force—Canada may not have to declare war the next time—War may be forced upon Canada by belligerent nations.

The Toronto Globe, in discussing the question editorially, sums up the situation with great clarity:—

"But what Canada particularly has to bear in mind is the fact already stated. that "the Motherland will have to be in the conflict." That being so, it follows that some other nation or nations will be at war with Britain, and, whether or not Canada realizes it, it or they will be at war with her also.

"Canada may, in such case, consider herself a neutral if she likes; but she will find it hard to pursuade a nation at war with Britain that, while part of the British Empire, she is to be treated as a non-combatant.

Regardless of Canada's opinion, if Britain is at war, the whole Empire, in the opinion of the country or countries she is fighting, is at war also, and neither Conservative, Liberal or Labor Government could alter that opinion—except by seceding and going over to the enemy.

"Canada is free to stay out of war if she will—until she is forced into it in self-defence—but it will be as well for her not to imagine that, merely because she asserts such neutrality, a nation or group of nations intent on the overthrow of Britain, will regard her with a friendly, or even an indifferent, eye."

HOW TO CURB MOTOR ACCIDENTS

In spite of the efforts of the Ontario Department of Highways to curb the number of motor accidents, and to instil into the minds of all drivers the principles of "Courtesy," the death toll continues to mount at an appalling rate. Recklessness and lack of common sense constitute the primary causes of most highway fatalities, all of which leads up to one major question: "How can the motoring public be taught to drive safely?"

Let us stop and consider the methods used in England to curb reckless and dangerous driving. The following item from an English newspaper, republished by the Montreal Star, tells a complete story in a very few words:—

"Vivian Stacey Saunders, aged 30, dairy farmer, of Lane End, High Wycombe, Bucks, was convicted at High Wycombe on two charges of driving a goods motor-van while under the influence of drink. He was suspended from driving for life and fined 10 pounds."

There are certain classes of drivers who will protest most vehemently that the suspension of a drving license for life is too severe, but it must also be borne in mind that driving on the public highways in such a manner as to endanger human life is a very serious offence, calling for drastic action on the part of the authorities.

The suspension of driving licenses for lengthy periods would seem to be the most effective means of forcing some motorists to drive sanely. A few suspensions for life would serve as a lesson to others who would then appreciate the necessity of exercising Care, Courtesy and Common Ssense when behind the wheel of a motor car.

THE RE-OPENING OF SCHOOL

During recent years, it has proved increasingly difficult for the average young man or woman to find gainful employment. The years of depression have been a severe lesson to many, in that the opportunities of employment were few and far between, and only those with exceptional qualifications were successful in the struggle for existence.

With the revival of business in industrial and commercial fields, opportunities are becoming more plentiful, and the time has come when the young man or woman will be given a chance to prove his or her worth. In this connection it should be pointed out that a good education is essential to success, and no effort should be spared, on the part of the present day students, to reap the benefits to be found at school.

With the re-opening of school only a few days off, we would emphasize one point, and that is, the necessity of settling down to work from the first day. Attending school is a business and should be treated as such by those students who would make something of themselves. The young man or woman who take school work seriously will be amply rewarded in the years which lie ahead.

In our altered economic system, brains occupy a much more prominent place than brawn, and the individual who has been trained at school to think and reason clearly and accurately will find his or her services in demand.

MERCHANTS ARE RESPONSIBLE

According to a recent editorial in the Brockville Recorder & Times, strict regulations regarding the grade of butter sold by retailers are to be put into force next month. The editorial says:—

"On and after September 1st of this year it become compulsory for all creamery butter sold to consumers in the province of Ontario to be marked so as to show the purchaser the grade of butter he is buying. Retailers who sell butter by means of cutting the customer's requirements direct from bulk 56-pound blocks at the counter, will be responsible for placing the grade marks on the wrapper used. Those merchants who cut and wrap their own butter at the counter must have the wrappers used by them stamped so as to show the grade of the butter they are selling.

"The grade marks referred to are the words "First Grade," "Second Grade," "Third Grade," or "No Grade," as the case may be, and these words must be printed in letters at least one-quarter of an inch square so as to be clearly visible to consumers when purchasing butter."

EDITORIAL NOTES

According to all reports, this particular section is very fortunate this year. While other parts of the province have experienced severe heat, drought, and loss of crops, local farmers have reaped a bountiful harvest, with prices of many products on the rise.

Those citizens who complain that the local tax rate of 44 mills is too high, should learn to count their blessings. The town council up in Alliston met recently and struck a rate of 60 mills, which all goes to prove the old saying: "Things are never so bad but they might be worse."

The Middle and Upper School results of the Winchester High School indicate that the students have maintained that high degree of proficiency which has become a characteristic of the local institution during the past few years.

The results reflect much credit upon the capable staff of teachers as well as the students, and we trust that the school will achieve even greater academic honours in the year which lies ahead.

THE UNITED CHURCH

Mesages that will be long remembered were given last Sunday by Rev. H. E. Warren of Ottawa. He spoke from Ezek. 37:10 in the morning showing that Ezekiel had first hand knowledge of Nebuchadnezzar's army having been in exile for 5 years. The armies of God, he said, are always recruited by preaching in times of spiritual declension, and they use unique weapons, with the Holy Spirit as leader. An interesting sketch of armies at the time of Ezekiel and of Christ was given. The Bible is a mighty agent in these armies. Our goal is a might Christian army to carry out God's purposes. Are we slackers or are we volunteers in this great army of God?

"These sayings of mine," was the evening text, taken from the application of our Lord of His Sermon on the Mount, found in Matt. 7:24. This sermon which teaches us how to live is the greatest classic in the world to-day.

It means a lot to measure up to the standards set here by our Lord. He warned against criticism, against following the crowd and praying formal prayers. He said to be careful about hearing and doing. Christians, he said, must be the salt of the earth and the light of the world. They must not act contrary to these sayings of our Lord.

Mrs. Percy Durant was soloist for the day, singing "Beneath the Cross of Jesus," and "Abide With Me," with Mrs. Lumsdale Carr at the organ.

The pastor, Rev. W. S. Atchison, expects to resume his work next Sunday.

POLL TAX RULES ARE CLARIFIED AT TORONTO FRIDAY

Clarification of the poll tax regulations imposed under the Statute Labor Act amendment was given at the Parliament Buildings, Toronto, recently, when it was stated that this provincial enactment authorizes the councils of cities, towns, villages and townships to pass by-laws for levying and collecting a poll tax of not less than $1 and not more than $10, from every male inhabitant of the municipality who (1) is 21 or over and under 60; (2) is not exempt from performing statute labor by reason of military or naval service; (3) is not otherwise assessed in the municipality. Returned soldiers are exempt from payments of poll tax under an amendment to the Assessment Act, it was learned. In a township which has not abolished statute labor or passed a by-law for the levying of a poll tax, all males not otherwise assessed are liable to one day of statute labor on township roads.

HONOR NEWLYWEDS

A very interesting marriage was solemnized by Rev. Wm. Merrilees at the Manse, Iroquois, recently, when Miss Mae Bell, R.N., youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Bell, Brinston, became the bride of Mr. Stanley Waddell, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Waddell, Brinston, and principal of Dixons Corners public school. The happy couple spent their honeymoon in Chicago, at the home of the bride's sister.

Upon their return they were given a rousing reception, when members of the Presbyterian church, Dixons Corners, and the ratepayers of S. S. No. 11, assembled at the home of the bride's father. Rev. Mr. Merilees addressed the gathering and expressed his good wishes to the newlyweds. On behalf of the congregation, Mrs. Howard Boyd read an address, and Mr. John Thompson presented a silver tea service. Mrs. Waddell made a suitable reply. On behalf of the ratepayers, Mr. Bert Johnston read an address and Messrs. Lawrence Bell and J. Johnston made a presentation of a spinet desk and a desk lamp. Mr. Waddell made a suitable reply. Messrs. Wilf. Cooper and Jas. Barton had charge of affairs. The ladies of the congregation served lunch.

THE LATE THOS. JOHNSTON

Thomas Johnston, well known retired hotel keeper, of Iroquois, died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. George Bouck, on Monday last. He was 85 years of age.

A son of the late John Johnston and Jane Deans, he was born in Augusta township, where he farmed during his early years. In 1897, he moved to Iroquois, and operated the Grand Central Hotel.

Mr. Johnston married Mahala Berry, of Mountain, who predeceased him in 1918, leaving three children, of whom Mrs. George A. Bouck, a daughter, survives. He later married Ella Ferguson, who survives, in addition to a son, John, of Iroquois. He is mourned also by three sisters, Jane of Mountain, Mrs. Cleland of Mountain, and Mrs. McGee of Kemptville, and a half-brother, William Johnston, of Mountain.

HIGHWAY WORK BEING RUSHED

The work of paving that stretch of highway 31, between Winchester Springs and Williamsburg is progressing rapidly and by the end of this week, one-half of the pavement will, no doubt, be completed.

As on previous occasions, one side is being paved, while the other side of the highway is left open to traffic, so that there is no detour. Motor cars are now being diverted along the newly-constructed stretch through the woods south of the Springs, while the culverts are being widened so as to comply with requirements.

When the highway is completed it will be one of the finest in Ontario, and a credit to the Harvey Construction Company.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

The engagement is announced of Muriel Isabel, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Steinburg, to Carman Ray, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Swerdfeger, of Morewood. The marriage to take place the latter part of August.

USE YOUR DIMMERS

The fact has been repeatedly brought to our attention that the modern type of headlight is a hard thing to face on a dark night. The powerful beams must light the road for a much greater distance ahead than the older types because of the greater speed of traffic movement.

SEVERELY BURNED

While attending to duties about her home recently, Mrs. Clarence McMullen of Dixon's Corners was severely burned about the face and arms when a gasoline stove she was using to cook berries, exploded, setting fire to the home. Only prompt action by volunteer firefighters saved the McMullen home. The interior of the kitchen was badly damaged and the flames spread to other parts of the house before being checked. Mrs. McMullen was attended by Dr. T. A. Hamilton.

SIGNALS UNDER THE SEA

A sounder that transmits code signals beneath the waves enables ships to talk together over moderate distances.

An electric resonator that hurls its sound in all directions is lowered through a well in the centre of the vessel.

All craft possessing the apparatus carry two sensitive receiver diaphragms on their hulls below the water line, and through these the signals are detected. When wireless communication is also available, the distance between two ships is readily ascertained, radio and undersea signals are transmitted simultaneously, and the difference of time in their reception due to their different speeds indicates the distance of their sender.

Texas Guns

by L. P. HOLMES

Third Instalment

SYNOPSIS . . . Silas Spelle, high-handed, low-principled cattle baron, is out to smash the local bank and force foreclosure on the small ranchers of the Kanab desert country so that he can seize their range lands. He is opposed by Ed. Starbuck, president of the Cattlemen's Bank and by San Juan Delevan, prominent rancher who has been crippled by a fall from his horse. Tex Whipple and his partner, Johnny Clehoe, are cowpunchers employed by San Juan Delevan to fight the rustlers and protect his interests.

"Better make the most of it lil' skates," cautioned Tex. "Gosh knows when yuh'll get any more."

As soon as it was light enough to read sign Tex got busy. First he rode in a wide circle about the Springs, peering closely at the dust and sand of the desert floor. Johnny followed closely at his heels. They completed a circle of about a mile when Tex pulled up and while rolling a smoke peered with keen eyes out to the northwest.

"Delevan had the right hunch," he drawled. "Wade an' the rest of those coyotes double-crossed their own boss."

Johnny, who had learned a lot about reading sign from Tex, nodded.

"Yep. They jest cut out ninety or a hundred haid an' headed 'em northwest with two men on the drag. The rest they took on to the Box D. They cooked up that yarn about rustlers as a blind an' figgered the wind would wipe out the tracks before anybody could prove 'em a liar."

"Shore, yuh're learnin', son. Lemme see, Wade an' his gang musta left Skelton Springs about noon yesterday. The tracks show that's about right. That gives 'em about seventeen, eighteen hours start. They cain't drive them cattle any too fast 'cause that long drive in to the Springs musta had 'em pretty well fagged. I gotta hunch we can ketch 'em. C'mon."

At noon Tex halted enough to loosen the saddle girths for a moment while he poured a mouthful or two of water from a canteen into the crown of his hat and let the thirsty broncos wash the dust from their throats and nostrils. Then the cinches were taken up again and the steady grind resumed. At about three in the afternoon Tex rose in his stirrups and pointed ahead. There, maybe five miles distant, lay a drifting cloud of dust.

Tex increased the pace perceptibly and an hour later he and Johnny came to the edge of a wide dry lake, across the middle of which weary, thirsty lines of Hereford cattle slowly filed. In the rear, hazing the cattle onward, two men were riding, swinging the ends of lariats across the backs of laggards, fighting the inevitable slowing down of the herd.

"Caught 'em," rasped Tex through cracked, dust-caked lips. "Reckon mebbe we're in for a fight, son. O' course they may run for it, but I don't think so. Well, get yore hawg-laig loose in the leather."

Tex and Johnny lifted their broncos into a gallop and pounded down across the quarter mile which separated them from the rustlers and the cattle. So absorbed were the rustlers in their work they did not guess at their pursuers' proximity until hardly fifty yards separated them. Then one of them happened to turn and look back. He shouted to his companion, jerked out a gun and wheeled his horse to one side.

"Watch yoreself, kid," yelled Tex. "I'll take the one on the right."

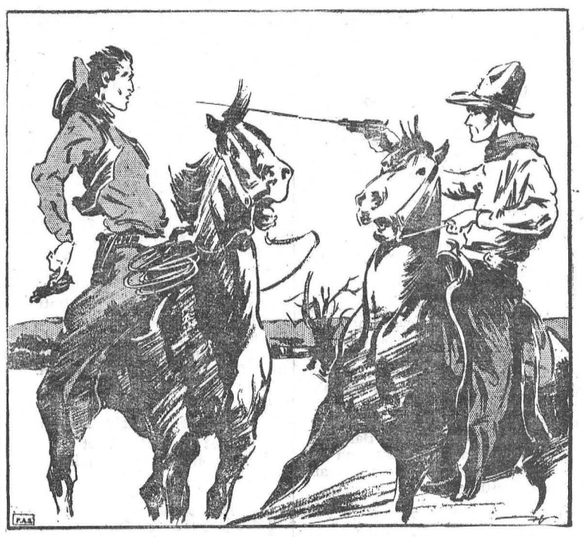
Both the rustlers were shooting now. They were desperate, tired men, their nerves on edge from weariness and bodily discomfort and faced with the knowledge that they were caught cold with the stolen cattle in front of them. To surrender was to put their necks in a noose. They would fight it out.

Johnny picked his man and went at him on a run, leaning low over his bronco's neck. He heard the whisper of flying lead above him, but he held his own fire until not twenty yards separated him from the rustler. Then he reined his horse to a sudden stop, sat up straight and loosed two careful, deliberate shots. In the interval between his first and second shot something lifted his sombrero from his head. But he did not flinch, determined to make the most of his careful shooting. Harum-scarum as the plan was it worked. With the second report of Johnny's Colt the rustler stiffened and pitched headlong from his saddle.

Then Johnny turned to see how Tex was making it. A gulp of fear rose in his throat. Tex's horse was down and kicking. Tex himself lay, half sat to one side, but shooting deliberately. The second outlaw was backing his horse away, holding the rearing animal's head and neck before his body as a shield. Johnny gave a yell and dug in the spurs, racing in on the rustler at an angle. Johnny was shooting now, trying to draw the outlaw's attention from Tex. He succeeded but found himself suddenly clicking the hammer of his gun on empty cylinders.

Realizing his predicament Johnny kneed his horse away, snicking back the loading gate and punching out the empty shells as he rode. Quick to grasp his opportunity the rustler poised himself for a careful shot at the fleeing Johnny. For a split second the rustler was stationary and Tex, now on his knees and aiming carefully over his left forearm, pulled trigger on the last loaded chamber in his gun. Close on the heels of Tex's shot came another. But the rustler's bullet went wild for he was already falling from the saddle, shot in the temple.

Johnny whirled his horse about and galloped back relieved to see



He reined to a sudden stop and loosed two careful, deliberate shots.

Tex rise to his feet and come limping forward.

"Yuh dang fool kid," barked Tex wrathfully, though he knew the wrath was merely a cloak to deepest emotions. "What's the idee o' yore chargin' in thataway with an empty gun? Wanta get yoreself salivated?"

"Shucks," muttered Johnny. "How'd I know yuh wa'nt hit? Yuh was down wa'nt yuh? An' him afannin' at yuh all the time? What did yuh want me to do, sit back an' lead the cheerin' section?"

"Well," growled Tex. "Yuh might have some respect for my feelin's. If I'd o' missed him he'd o' got yuh shore."

"Mebbe—mebbe," grinned Johnny. "But believe me I was skedaddlin' to beat hell."

"Where's yore hat?" demanded Tex irrelevantly. "I suppose yuh rode right up to that other jasper an' slapped him in the face with it?"

"Nope," retorted Johnny. "He lifted it off with a .45 jest before I plugged him. Well, it looks like we done got a herd o' cattle an' two daid rustler's on our hands, Tex. An' they's two broncs for yuh to take yore pick of. I'll round 'em up for yuh."

While Johnny was busy with this errand Tex rolled a cigarette with shaking, fumbling fingers. He was blinking his eyes rapidly to keep back the moisture.

"Yuh dang, helter-skelter, loyal, gutty young cub," he muttered. "What would I do without yuh?"

Then he blew his nose loudly and set to getting his saddle off his dead bronco.

Tom Burney, book-keeper of the Cattleman's Bank in Carillion, stared in a stunned, horrified, apathetic sort of a way at the doorway leading into Ed Starbuck's private office. Sprawled on his face across the sill was Ed Starbuck. His one arm was out-stretched before him and a few inches in front of his extended fingers lay the heavy revolver the old man had not been swift enough to use. A little pool of crimson was beginning to spread on the floor near one shoulder of the still figure.

Almost at Starbuck's feet lay another body, that of Al Stinson, the Cashier of the bank. He also had made the mistake of reaching for a gun. Tom Burney wrenched his eyes from the dead men and stared through his window at the two masked figures beyond. The round, unwinking muzzle of the frontier model Colt which was trained just at his waistline, seemed to possess some hypnotic quality. It had the same cold, malignant suggestion which lies in the upraised head of a rattlesnake about to strike. A thread of pale smoke was trickling above it. Two shots and two men dead! A muscle twisting shudder rippled through Burney's body. He could feel the great blobs of sweat gather on his forehead. In a purely mechanical manner he started to lower his right hand to brush the moisture away.

"Keep 'em up!" came the harsh command. "Ain't there anything but damn fools in this place? Move over to that cage door and unlock it. Keep yore hands in plain sight. One phoney move an' there'll be three dead men instead o' two. Hurry up!"

Moving with the mechanical stiffness of an automaton Burney walked jerkily to the cage door. Burney was a mild little man, totally unused to scenes of violence; supremely contented with his position amid his endless columns of figures. What had just taken place had filled him with dread and horror and had stunned all thought and initiative

Beyond the barrier the bandit who had done the shooting kept step with him. When Burney lowered his hands to the lock the bandit jabbed his gun through the bars until the muzzle nearly touched Burney's throat. The latter retched slightly. The stink of powder gas was strong in his nostrils. His fingers fumbled at the lock. The door swung back.

Lithe as a weasel the bandit was inside, his gun buried deep against Burney's side. The second bandit crowded in at their heels.

"Now the vault," ordered the killer. "Don't tell me yuh don't know the combination."

"I—I know it," mumbled Burney.

"Get busy then."

Burney bent over the combination. His fingers, fumbling and clumsy, twirled the dial. Once he overshot a number and spoiled the set up. The alert bandit snarled. "Don't stall for time. If anybody comes before yuh get the vault open yuh get a slug, savvy?"

Burney nodded mechanically and ran a furry tongue over his dry lips. He began again. This time he went through the numbers without a mistake. The final tumbler clicked. He twisted the handle and set himself against the weight of the vault door. The massive portal swung back. The next instant something crashed against the back of his head with terrific force and he felt himself falling—falling—!

The robbery was discovered the next morning when the bank failed to open its doors at the regular time. Burney was still alive but when Doc McMurdo, a hard-bitten, dour, silent old Scotchman examined him, he shook his head. He had Burney carried to his home where he did the best he could for the stricken man. Burney died just before four o'clock that afternoon from a concussion of the brain. Before he went he had a brief spell of delirium and throughout the broken jumble was a single phrase that he reiterated again and again. Doc McMurdo was alone with Burney at the time and as he listened a queer, calculating expression crossed his hard-bitten features.

The sheriff, Gorman, made a hasty investigation in a very imposing, mysterious manner, then wired for a bank examiner to handle the bank's affairs. Two days later he had vanished, taking the trail back to Westhaven. The bank examiner made some hasty calculations and pronounced the bank insolvent. The day after this was announced Silas Spelle rode into Carillion and was closeted for several hours with the examiner. When he left, Spelle's face was twisted in a smirk of triumph. He had won again.

MODERN WOMEN

by CHARL ORMOND WILLIAMS

President of National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc.

The Duchess of Hamilton, wife of one of Scotland's peers, has succeeded in taming two score wild horses. The animals were a part of a rodeo outfit and were bought by the Dumb Friends' League. Because no one could break the horses and they were about to be destroyed, the Duchess, who is a famous horsewoman, asked to have them sent to her estate where she had succeeded in making them as docile as her own horses. Some haul carts and plows. Others have been broken to the saddle.

The women of Jamaica, B. W. She accompanied the president of the General Federation of Woman's Clubs on a good will tour of some of the West Indian islands. Mrs. Sporborg is chairman of legislation of the Federation. The average wage of the women rock breakers is about fifty cents a day.

The Family DOCTOR

HANDLE SUMMER FOODS WITH CARE

Disease germs have three avenues of entrance into the human system They may be inhaled, swallowed, or may get in through scratched or incised wounds of the skin.

In warm weather, when most of our houses are wide open, the danger of inhaled germs is practically nil. Pure air is a wonderful disinfectant, capable, except against the tuberculosis germ, which should be guarded against at all seasons.

Most acquired infections in summer, are of the digestive tract; the bacteria are swallowed with food or water. We should, therefore, be discriminative at this season. Edibles taken raw, must be scrupulously clean, and thoroughly masticated. Fruits should be ripe, fresh, and free from punctures by twigs or specks of decay. Don't give the child a banana that is green, or part-ripened, or punctured through the skin. Potato salad that is carried over from meal to meal—better throw it away, or do without the mixure entirely.

See that all cooked food is thoroughly done, especially meats. It is not good policy to eat the boiled ham that you had left over from the picnic, especially if it reposed in the basket on the ground for a few hours. The same is true of cake, wrapped in newspaper and kept in the same basket. Flies haunt outdoor picnics. They love to crawl over deviled eggs, potato salads and the like. It is not pleasant to think of what they may shake off from their filthy feet and bodies.

It goes without saying that all drinking-water these days should be attested in purity, by a capable rather than a political official. A stitch in time saves more than nine. Put nothing of doubtful purity into your stomach, and be careful not to overload.

IT'S TIME TO SOW GRASS SEED, MAKE LAWN REPAIRS

The best time to sow lawn seed is the middle of August or a short time thereafter. There are very good reasons for this choice of time, and the lawnmaker will do well to heed them, if he wants to ovoid trouble later. By planting a lawn now, the seeds will get a chance to germinate early, and make a considerable growth during the cool days of fall, thus providing a healthy mat of well advanced turf to start with in the spring.

An even better reason for planting in the late summer or fall is that it will eliminate many weeds which would normally take root with lawn seeds planted in the spring. Most weed seed germinate in the spring, in spite of the fact that they have matured and found sanctuaries in your lawn bed in summer and fall. By giving the lawn seed a chance to form an early turf, which will wake up early in the spring and renew its growth vigorously, you will choke out many of the weeds which must wait until spring to germinate.

Starting early and maintaining a vigorous growth is the secret of lawn making. To assist in this, the gardener will do well to provide his lawn with applications of plant food to spur on this growth. When the lawn is made an application of 4 pounds for 100 square feet of area is recommended. Work the plant food into the top soil, wait a day, and then sow seed, rolling the bed lightly, and watering with a fine spray. In the spring an additional 2 pounds of plant food should be applied, and in many cases a second application is recommended especially on bare spots.

HINTS FOR THE HOME

APPETITE TEASERS FOR TOTS

(By Betty Barclay)

The last hand of bridge had been played. The last crumb of chocolate cake had been devoured. A group of young matrons found it quite natural to talk about their children.

"My children will eat anything," proudly proclaimed Mrs. Blair.

"Mine refuse everything," exaggerated plump Minnie Ferguson.

"George and Grace dislike so many of the dishes I serve," bemoaned a third.

"Henry tires of things so quickly...."

"Bob has the mealtime blues....."

"Pearl lives on ice cream and sweets ....."

Mrs. Blair found herself in a class by herself. The others mothered children who failed to meet with their approval so far as eating was concerned.

"There are dozens of reasons why children will not eat," remarked the only woman physician in the group. A few may have physical trouble which accounts for loss of appetite, but my own candid opinion is that we mothers are to blame in most cases."

"How?" chorused a dozen voices.

"Oh; We prepare food poorly, always serve it in the same way, serve monotonous meals, talk about our likes and dislikes before the children, serve meals at irregular hours, have too much excitement at the table, do too much scolding—we fail to realize that children are sensitive little creatures that must be carefully taught to eat the proper foods. If we will be fair, we will admit that many of our present favorites were once disliked. So why expect children to rave over spinach, tomatoes and carrots —just because they are good for them?

"Serve something like a Bo-Peep Party Pudding. The name will intrigue them. In this and other rennet-custard desserts you can include such healthful foods as milk, bread, eggs, butter, raisins, honey and cocoa—in fact, any of the rennet-custard desserts come close to being a 'four star food.' I'll give you a trio of recipes if you want them."

They did want them. You may want them, too. If so, here they are:

Bo-Peep's Party Pudding

1 Rennet Dessert Tablet
1 teaspoon vanilla flavoring
3 tablespoons honey
1 pint milk
1 tablespoon cocoa
1-2 cup heavy cream
Crisp rice, corn or wheat flakes.

Dissolve Rennet Dessert Tablet in 1 tablespoon cold water. Mix honey and cocoa to a smooth paste in a sauce pan. Heat slowly to boiling, stirring constantly. Let boil 1 minute, continuing to stir. Add 1 pint fresh milk. Warm mixture to lukewarm. Remove from stove. Add vanilla flavoring to lukewarm mixture. Add dissolved Rennet Dessert Tablet. Stir quickly for a few seconds. Pour at once into dessert glasses. Let stand until rennet-custard is firm, then chill in refrigerator. Serve in same glasses topped with honeyed whipped cream and cereal flakes.*

* To make: Allow 1 1-2 tablespoons strained honey to each cup of whipped cream. Add one cup crisp cereal flakes and mix well. Top rennet-custard with flakes also. The cereal should not be added until serving time.

Orange Rennet-Custard Charlotte

1 package Orange Rennet Powder
4 tablespoons sugar
1 egg white
1 pint milk
Lady fingers
Raspberry jam.

Line side of dessert glasses with lady fingers. Dissolve Orange Rennet Powder in lukewarm milk. Stir and pour into dessert glasses; let stand in warm room until rennet-custard is firm. Chill in refrigerator. Serve with topping of meringue made by beating egg white until stiff and adding sugar. Put a little raspberry jam on top of the meringue.

Lemon Rennet-Custard Bread Pudding

1 package Lemon Rennet Powder
1 pint milk
4 slices bread
Butter
Raisins

Remove crusts from bread, butter lightly and cut in small cubes. Divide the cubed bread among 6 dessert dishes and add a few seeded raisins. Warm the milk to lukewarm—NOT HOT. Remove from stove. Add Lemon Rennet Powder. Stir immediately and briskly until dissolved—not more than one minute, and pour at once over bread. Let set until rennet-custard is firm—about 10 minutes. Chill in refrigerator. Sprinkle with a mixture of sugar and cinnamon before serving.

NUTRITIONAL VALUE OF ALFALFA

Experiments in the feeding of sheep for the correction of nutritional deficiencies common to breeding ewes, fed under range conditions and on farms in Western Canada, have resulted in findings which are likely to prove of great value to sheep ranchers and farmers. The University of Alberta, in co-operation with the National Research Council, has been carrying on experiments aimed to improve rations for breeding ewes in years when winters are long and grazing is difficult, or when as a result of drought the variety of feeds produced on farms is restricted.

Experiments covering a period of years show that alfalfa hay contains ingredients which approximate quite closely those contained in natural pastures. Ewes receiving alfalfa hay as part of the ration retained their thriftiness, reproductive capacity and general health over a period of eighteen months, even though kept on dry feed summer and winter.

The value of this information to ranchers and farmers is that it suggests the importance of feeding alfalfa hay at all times. When ,due to adverse climatic conditions, feed has to be bought or made available on the range or on farms, first consideration should be given to the purchase of alfalfa hay, especially if required for breeding stock.

The findings of the experiments are of special significance in view of the greater volume of alfalfa now being produced in the prairie provinces and throughout Canada.

It was decided to hold the annual pie-social on the grounds of the United church, Brinston, and the following committees were appointed: refreshment Mrs. Chas. Hanson and Mrs. A. Music was furnished throughout the evening by Miss Jean Smith. The balance of the evening was spent in games.

DUNCAN McARTHUR DIES IN 82nd YEAR

One of the best known former residents of the county of Russell, Duncan McArthur, of 45 Ossington avenue, Ottawa, died recently. at an Ottawa hospital, after a lengthy illness. He was in his 82nd year.

A son of the late Donald McArthur and his wife, Catherine Fraser, of Kenmore, Ont., he was born in Perthshire, Scotland, and came to Canada at an early age with his parents, settling in Kenmore. He received his education at the old "York's Corner" school, and the Metcalfe Grammar School.

For many years he manufactured the farm implement known as McArthur Plough, of which his father was the inventor. Later, with his family, he moved to Ottawa and for several years he was connected with the government annuities branch, following which he became proprietor of the "Russell Leader." Owing to illness, however, he had led a retired life for the past few years.

Always interested in the welfare of the community, he served for many years as magistrate and one term as county councillor in Russell. He was a prominent Liberal and was for more than fifty years a member of the Russell County Liberal Association, serving in the capacity of secretary-treasurer for 15 years, and later as president for 16 years. Mr. McArthur was a Baptist in religion.

Predeceased by his wife, Jane Fisher, he is survived by three daughters, Miss Maude, at home, Miss Gertrude of the Ottawa public school staff, and Miss Christina, of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, and two brothers, Hugh F. McArthur in Colorado, and C. F. McArthur of Russell.

The funeral was held on Saturday from his late residence to Springhill cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to take this opportunity to thank our friends and neighbors for the many acts of kindness shown us during the illness of our son, Gerald. Such kindness will ever be remembered.

17c Mr. and Mrs. Percy Ellis.

BRUCE BARTON Says:

★ . . . . . Ordinary folks important

Every year a certain executive delivers a speech to the members of his organization, which contains this standard paragraph: "The most important people in this office are not my partners or myself; they are the young people who sit in the reception halls. My partners and I see only a few people; they see everybody. They create the impression about our office that is carried by thousands of visitors into all sorts of places, and may bob up at the most unexpected times to do us good or harm.

"If these young people are going to insult anybody, I hope it will not be the young messenger boys who deliver telegrams and packages. Be careful never to insult them. You never can tell how soon they will grow up to be executives in positions where they may have a big influence on our affairs."

An automobile dealer mistreated a certain difficult customer, who forthwith acquired a permanent grouch and devoted much of his spare time to airing his grievance. Nobody knows how many sales he killed in the course of the year, probably hundreds. A meter-reader for a public utility company was rude to a housewife. Her husband was subsequently elected to the state legislature and became a thorn in the company's side.

Every business, big or little, is dependent for its good will on the humdrum activities of very ordinary men and women. These people are unimportant on the pay-roll, but they may be mightily important in the balance sheet.

★ . . . . . Then they got married

The campus of a certain university was picketed by fiery-eyed youngsters carrying banners of violent protest. Just what the object of their indignation may have been, I can't for the moment remember. It was a lively spectacle; a couple of windows were broken in a recitation hall, and the president's study was assailed with high-pitched demands that he come forth and declare himself.

I met him on a golf course a week later and referred to the rumpus. "You look pretty serene for a man who has lived through so many uprisings," I remarked. He laughed. "They are a regular part of the job," he said, "Every once in a while the young man's thoughts turn to parade and denunciations. I have watched the phenomenon for twenty-five years. Also, I have kept a list of the principal riot leaders. I know what happens to them."

"That's interesting," I said. "What does happen to them?"

"They get jobs, and then they get married, and then they have youngsters, and then they get better jobs. And by that time they are no longer interested in over-turning things. They are too busy playing the game."

It will be a sad day for the world if youth ever ceases to have its period of protest. Youth ought to be dissatisfied and impatient; it ought to look critically at the messy fashion in which its elders have run the world. The sharp point of its protest pricks old age and causes some grudging forward movement.

But Nature seldom allows the movement to develop into a runaway. Almost before Youth is aware of what is happening, she has married him, and put him to work, and transferred him to the ranks of good citizens.

NEW SAFETY DEVICE

They will show the width of automobiles and trucks on which they are installed for a distance of 200 feet.

The Round Square

A square foot can be triangular, round or of any other shape so long as the area covered includes 144 square inches. The inches in turn do not have to be "square" as long as they contain the area equivalent of a square inch.

Strange as it seems, a foot square and a square foot are the same area. Yet two feet square takes in twice as much area as two square feet. Likewise, an area three feet square is three times as large as one containing three square feet.

Bible Reader

John S. Fiddler, retired missionary to China who now lives in Chicago, Ill. possibly holds an all-time record for Bible reading.

Starting at he age of 22, he can today, at the age of 70, look back on a total of 84 complete readings of the Book. In 1934, his outstanding year, he read the Bible eleven times while in a kneeling position, averaging about two and a half hours per day. Since then he has been forced to do his reading sitting erect because of severe back trouble.

Aut-Railroad Bridge

Trains are actually forced to wait for automobiles to pass before crossing the bridge over the Canadian River between Stinett and Sanford, Texas, on the Rock Island Lline between Liberal, Kansas, and Amarillo, Texas.

A watchman operates siganls to notify locomotive engineers when all automobiles are off the bridge so the train may proceed.

Palladium is being suggested by some of the leading jewelers and precious metal smiths as a substitute for its sister metal, platinum, in designing cigarette cases, compacts and other large pieces. Palladium, they explain, possesses the appearance and nearly all of the other attributes which make platinum the most highly esteemed material for jewelry. It is, however, much lighter than platinum and hence is more suitable for the larger creations of the jeweler's art.

"Don't try to remove freckles," advises a prominent beauty expert. "Freckles aren't formations on the skin like whiteheads or minor eruptions. They are in the skin. The use of bleaches and other preparations for removing freckles may be very dangerous and should not be attempted. You can prevent freckles by staying out of the sun entirely; by wearing large hats, parasols; or by using a heavy type cream and a heavy textured powder. This will mean no freckles and no tan—unless you want the simulated tan that comes in bottled form."
