Worthy causes

It sometimes appears everyone is after our money, with the government usually topping the list.

Another persistent source of revenue reaping comes from charities — many, many charities. But, as it should be, it is difficult to say no to a worthy cause and there are many worthy causes which need our money.

Charities are almost forced to battle for a slice of the public's generosity, to sell their cause as being deserving of a good chunk of our disposable income.

The challenge for all charities is to demonstrate their need for donations and, more importantly, the charities must find a way to best tug at the heart-strings to get to the purse-strings. This may seem somewhat crass, but it is necessary.

For the Canadian Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, May is its month to tug at the public's heart-strings.

With a touching situation like the McLaughlin family of RR3 Chesterville as a model of the struggle CF presents its victims, there is little difficulty in the emotions being tapped and hopefully, the pocket books to follow shortly.

Brian and Janet McLaughlin probably know much more about cystic fibrosis than certainly the majority of our readers. They have been accumulating all the information they can get their hands on about CF, the most common life-threatening hereditary disease of children.

They know one in every 1,800 children born in Canada has cystic fibrosis.

They know the disease is incurable and hope of living past the age of 20 is just that — hope.

They know when both parents have the CF gene, as they do, pregnancy results in a 25 per cent risk of the child being born with the disease.

They also know they are on the wrong end of the one-in-four odds. Twice. Two lovely, playful, warm children, whom one reporter had the moving opportunity to visit last week and watch dance all around the room like children will do.

Anyone walking up to the McLaughlin house may be greeted by two regular children, a two- and a four-year-old sweetie peering through the front window, waving an enthusiastic greeting.

As Brian notes, children with CF don't look any different than children without CF. This, combined with an ignorance of the disease, could leave many unmoved to give to this needy charity.

But a short visit with the McLaughlins or any other family living in the dark shadow of this horrible disease, could not help but move one deeply.

Intertwined with the wonderful giggling noises from the McLaughlins' young girls is the wheezing caused by their respiratory problems. Sandra, who will be four in August, starts sweating quite noticeably. Two-year-old Shelley squirms in her mother's arms then regurgitates on Janet's lap. Brian gets up and matter-of-factly wipes up the mess.

A common occurrence, Janet informs. No big deal.

But there are many big deals in coping day-in, day-out with two cherished daughters infected with a disease which could cut short their lives at any time.

Brian and Janet have a quiet courageous reserve which they are drawing from regularly to make it through their struggle — their daughters' struggle.

The couple plans to make their way out to as many fundraising events in May as possible.

They hope dearly for a cure to CF.

And the Canadian Cystic Fibrosis Foundation hopes dearly for donations.

It's worth the money.

The egg grading station opened here by the Cloverdale Farmers' Club is at present in the charge of Mr. Harry Prusler, a government egg grader from Toronto, and Arthur Porteous and Eldon Stobo are assisting and being prepared for the work. Already the farmers are profiting by the opening of this station here and on Tuesday no less than 24 crates were shipped from here, with only one crate out of the lot marked seconds.

No citizen ever left a community carrying with him greater respect and esteem than did Mr. F.M. Eagleson when he left on Saturday last for Orillia, where in future he will reside with his family. He has been appointed to a position on the Trent River Canal System at that point. As evidence of that respect, about fifty of the leading citizens of Winchester gathered at Hotel Winchester on Thursday night to say goodbye and extend best wishes to one with whom they had for many years been associated.

At the regular meeting of Winchester Township council, held Monday in Morewood's Presbytery Hall, the workmen's compensation insurance policy with Law, Union and Rock Insurance Co. was renewed. The treasurer was authorized to pay the premium of $120. Council adjourned to meet in Chesterville on May 6 at 10:30am.

The Superfest Service Station on St. Lawrence Street, owned by D.F. Blair and operated by George Robinson, had a narrow escape from being destroyed by fire over the noon hour Wednesday. While attendants were pumping water from the bottom of one of the underground gasoline tanks, the fumes of the gas became ignited by the heat of a stove located several feet away. The flames followed the gas vapor and spread through the building, but the attendats responded quickly in extinguishing the blaze.

One of the last two surviving departmental systems of examinations, the entrance class schedule, will be commenced this year on June 27, and continue for two days.

The Inkerman Rockets, Ottawa District Junior A hockey champions, concluded their activities for the season last Thursday evening when they played a team of former professionals, the Old Pros, at the Ottawa Auditorium..The Old Pros won the match 11-8.

There was large attendance at all local churches on Sunday when services featured special Easter music and sermons emphasized the importance of the death and resurrection of Christ, and what this means to Christians. During the morning service at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, three babies were christened by Rev. Iver D. MacIver: Marilyn Susan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Presley; Susan Leanne, daughter of Constable and Mrs. J. Wedge of Toronoto.; and Nadire Jen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Derick of Montreal.

With the Nation River flood, the worst in 15 years, now subsiding, one of the happiest farmers is Dutch immigrant Peter Meeraker who owns and operates a farm in the Oak Valley district, four miles south of Inkerman. Last week, 25 head of Holsteins, Meeraker's entire herd, stood in water ranging from two inches to two-and-one-half feet for the better part of four days.

Although the campaign to collect funds for the furnishing of the new hospital wing has just started, more than $12,000 has already been collected, according to fundraising committee chairman Wallace Carkner.

A farm safety council for Dundas County has been established by the Federation of Agriculture and area chapters of the Women's Institutes. Five persons from each township were named as directors of the council. Bryon Martin of Hallville was named provisional county chairman, Mrs. Graham Wells as vice-chairman; district president of the Women's Institute Mrs. John Sutherland, director-at-large; and agricultural representative E.K. Pearson, secretary-treasurer.

Many thought winter had died on March 20 to make way for the approach of spring, but the worst snow storm of the season touched down in the area April 2, clogging country roads and turning highways into skating rinks. One fatal accident occurred near Hallville when Harold David Hoy, 63, was struck by a car during the height of the storm and died of injuries received.

Winchester village council last week signed the initial agreement with the Ontario Water Resources Commission concerning installation of the new sewer system. It is understood new bylaws have not yet been released, but council members expect this information at an early date.

Winchester area residents, and others directly or indirectly associated with the dairy industry across Canada, were saddened to learn of the death last Sunday of J. Kenneth Ault. The highly respected Winchester businessman, who had been associated with the thriving milk products firm since his school days, had been in ailing health for several months.

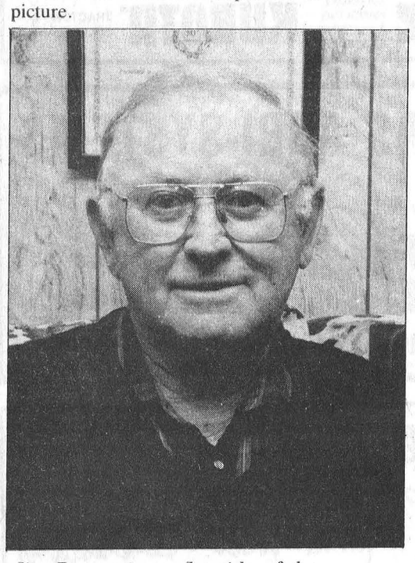
Senior citizens in Osgoode Township have come one step closer to hanging onto their independence a little longer. At its April 1 meeting, township council authorized its lawyer to prepare all the documents needed to form a municipal non-profit housing corporation, to build housing for seniors who are no longer able to live in their own homes.

Reflections: Rowan has snapped his share

by Andy McLeister
Press Staff Reporter

METCALFE — Anyone who attended school in eastern Ontario between 1956 and 1987 would be struck with a sense of deja vu when they meet Jim Rowan for the first time.

We can save you the trouble of wracking your brains trying to remember why the face is so familiar, though. Chances are that Jim was the first professional ever to photograph you, for either an individual snapshot or a class picture.



Jim Rowan is on the side of the camera lens that he probably isn't used to, after three decades spent snapping over three million pictures of Eastern Ontario school children.

Yet, it is unlikely that he would remember you, because you are one of an estimated 3,100,000 subjects from whom he has coaxed a smile for an official school photo. That's right, over three million photographs of students from Kindergarten to Grade 13. Granted, many photos included in Jim's rough calculations are of the same students taken at different times as they advanced through the grades, but the total reckoning gives some idea of the gruelling regimen the Metcalfe shutterbug maintained throughout his career.

Looking back this week on three decades with Canadian School Studios, logging up to 40,000 miles and 100,000 photographs a year though, Jim seems none the worse for wear. In fact, he couldn't imagine having dedicated his life to any other work.

Drumming up business and snapping photos of youngsters throughout Ontario's nine easternmost counties has been a fulfilling occupation for Jim. "I certainly did (enjoy the work)," he said. "I guess that's what kept me at it for so long."

His job was also a family affair. Back when he first started working with Canadian School Studios, his wife Joan was his constant companion. Often leaving their Metcalfe home at dawn, they would drive as far as Belleville to the west or north to Deep River for assignments, while Joan's mother came over from Scotland to hold down the home fort.

"She (Joan) took pictures as well as I did," he recalled.

There were solo trips after business grew to the point where Joan had to remain behind in Metcalfe to attend to the mountains of paperwork that prosperity generated.

It seems rather ironic that Jim would pursue a career in photography, after being trained as an RCAF radar technician during World War II when the technology was in its infancy and was opening up new horizons for those who got in on the ground floor. But photography presented "unlimited" opportunities, he explained. "There is such a wide scope for photography," he added.

After the war, Jim returned to Canada with his Scottish bride (they will celebrate their 45th anniversary in September) and took a job selling audio-visual aids and assorted camera equipment for Quality Films. He left that company after a while and worked for another until Canadian School Studios offered him a job. He stayed with that company until two years ago when he resigned as eastern Ontario and western Quebec regional manager and sold the School Studios franchise he held.

The Rowans might be officially retired from the working world, but they definitely haven't retired from their active lifestyle. Jim is still active in the Lions Club to which he has belonged for 29 years - he was president in 1967-68. He has been a member of the Metcalfe Agricultural Society for over 40 years - president in 1973-74.

"I attend the (Ag Society) meetings...but I'm not on the board of directors anymore," he said, adding, "It's a wonderful organization. I really treasured the years I was involved in the Ag Society."

There is also the society's Past Presidents Association, which meets about twice a year for dinner and to offer recommendations to the current directors and executive.

Then there is the St. Catherine's Catholic Parish Council, of which Jim was elected chairman when it was founded in the late 1960s. He is still an active member of the council.

When not involved with a club, society or church activity, the Rowans can be found curling with fellow members of Club 55, a senior citizens group that Jim helped organize. "For the price, I can't think of any sport that beats (curling)," he volunteers.

New challenges are always surfacing for Jim. Shuffleboard has caught his fancy, and if everything goes according to plan, Metcalfe's arena will be put to use during the summer months.

At 71, Jim hasn't slowed down one iota. He has his health, social activities, and a dozen grandchildren from his four offspring to keep him and the missus occupied. The latest addition to the clan arrived within the last week, incidentally, in the person of Cody Michael Rowan, the son of Colin and Kim.

He is rightly proud of his children, who have made their own mark in the world. Son Peter (the eldest) is a Toronto physician, while Bob practises medicine in Metcalfe. Mary, married to Carson McVey, is a registered nursing assistant at the Osgoode Township Health Care Centre. Colin is part owner of the Mariner in Black's Corners near Carleton Place, where he retails boats, snowmobiles, all terrain vehicles and the like.

One might presume that the Rowans are homebodies, but they are not in the true sense of the word. Jim and Joan satisfy both a love of travel and interest in history with trips around North America, stopping in to visit museums and historical sites along the way. They have also traveled to England and Scotland, and have tentative plans to re-visit Joan's Aberdeen family within the next year.

Did a recent road trip to Vancouver Island, where droves of Canadians have retired, cause the Rowans to have second thoughts about where they want to live? Not for a minute, Jim explained. "We have too many family ties to leave here," he said.

Sometimes a family moves into a small town, readily makes new friends; eagerly accepts the opportunity to become part of community-betterment programs and church organizations and willingly volunteers to share both time and talent. Peter Griffin, his wife and their three children (Bruce, Kim and Judy) arrived in Metcalfe 20 years ago (1970), and it is virtually impossible to measure the magnitude of that family's contribution in terms of volunteer efforts. One might say they almost immediately recognized the spirit of goodwill and typical rural hospitality that existed. Peter, endowed with a wealth of experience, was quick to note the lack of up-to-date fire protection measures, and the glaring shortage of firefighting equipment and manpower. Fortunately, he was not only willing but eager to share his in-depth training and vast experience. Thanks to this "new man in town," the municipality (Osgoode) can now proudly boast of a highly efficient three-unit Fire Department that is the envy of rural municipalities all across the province. Why are we drawing this to the attention of readers this week? It occurred to us many may not be aware that, when a moving van moves down Dow Street and out of the village later this month, Chief Peter and his wife Jean will be on their way to Maberly and well-earned retirement years.

Several weeks ago, when Osgoode municipal council unveiled plans for the new 'City Hall' (administrative office), Mayor Albert (Bouwers) had kind words of praise for the Fire Chief, and proudly advised those present that few Canadians could boast of having been honored by four Governors-General: St. John's Ambulance Appreciation Medal from Lord Alexander; Order of St. John from Georges P. Vanier; Fire Service Exemplary Service Medal from Jean Sauve; and the 40-year bar to the Exemplary Service Medal from the present Governor-General Ray Hnatyshyn. Because rumors were circulating that inability to reach a satisfactory salary agreement with council was the prime reason for the chief's early retirement, we spent an enjoyable hour with our long-time friend last week. It was obvious that leaving the ultra-modern combination four-bay station, training quarters, 400 emergency dispatch unit, and administrative office was proving a painful experience. But, on the other hand, he was quick to point out that recent health problems were factors that had to be considered. He assured us that, contrary to what some might believe, absolutely no ill-will exists between himself and council. "Oh I have to admit being a little disappointed," he smiled, "but bitterness - definitely no." What are the most cherished memories he will take with him. "Easy," he muses, "the firm handshake of a man thanking firefighters for arriving in time - the appreciative tears of a woman whose emergency call was promptly answered saving the life of her dear one - the warmth of a baby in his arms following the child's rescue from a burning home." Please rest assured Peter, your unselfish dedication to the community will always be remembered.

Following our pleasant chat with the chief, we visited the mayor's office and it was good to learn plans are already under way to honor the Griffin family for two decades of unselfish dedication to the municipality. Curiosity got the best of us and we enquired who would be occupying the chief's office. "Peter leaves a very big pair of boots to fill," agreed the mayor, "but I assure you that, too, is being very carefully considered at the present time." Sure pleased to learn there is no trace of animosity and we have a hunch that, in the years to come, municipalities in the Maberly district will benefit from Chief Peter's vast font of wisdom and knowledge in the realm of fire prevention. Bon Voyage friends.

We allow ourselves one mistake a year. Usually it doesn't happen until, perhaps, late autumn. Not this time...we blew it already...on March 28th. Wouldn't be at all surprised if Morrisburg skip Gerry Adams never speaks to us again. The wily ice general, competing in the 'Over 55' 'spiel at Metcalfe, swept aside all opposition...and we reported (complete with photo) that he had lost a game. Hang it all, we should have known old Gerry never loses. Please accept our humble apologies and you too Margaret (Reynolds) and Muriel (Foggo) and Bill (Grenkie).

Farm update

Economics of herbicide use on corn and soybeans studied

Corn and soybeans are the most valuable field crops produced in Ontario. In 1988, corn was grown on approximately 858,000 ha and soybeans on 518,000 ha. The farm cash receipts for corn and soybean were an estimated $650 million and $354 million, respectively.

Herbicides have been used widely to control weeds in corn and soybeans, thereby increasing yields. However, despite weed control efforts, it has been estimated that crop losses in corn averaged from 4% in Canada to 12% in the United States. A similar trend was observed in soybeans where losses ranged from 9% in Canada to 17% in the United States. These losses are estimated to cost the American farmer an average $1.5 and $1.6 billion, for corn and soybeans respectively. No similar cost estimates are available for Canada.

Studies have been conducted to estimate the benefit/cost ratio of herbicide use in corn and soybeans. The benefit/cost ratio describes the degree of benefit (usually dollars generated) resulting from each dollar expenditure or cost. In 1977, researchers in the U.S. determined that for each dollar expended for herbicides in a corn-soybean rotation in Illinois from 1966 to 1975, the returns ranged from $3.30 to $4.89. Another study in Indiana showed an even greater return of $8.78 for every dollar spent on corn herbicides.

However, other researchers using data from 10 major corn-producing states in 1980 on non-irrigated fields determined that for each dollar spent on herbicides and insecticides, a return of only $1.05 and $1.03, respectively was generated. In these cases the marginal value of production roughly equaled the cost of the treatment.

Variability of the benefit/cost ratio reported in these studies may be due to the data base upon which efficacy and yield results were extracted, the geographical location and environmental conditions under which the crops were grown.

A study at the Agriculture Canada Experimental Farm at Woodslee and at the Ridgetown College of Agricultural Technology from 1969 to 1985 examined the yield differences between herbicide treated and untreated plots of corn and soybeans. The data generated were used to determine the benefit/cost ratios of the herbicide treatments.

Weed control experiments at Woodslee were conducted on a Brookston clay soil and at Ridgetown on a Brookston clay loam, sandy spot phase soil. The soil at both locations was moldboard plowed each fall. Seedbed preparation consisted of two diskings. Soybean cultivar and corn hybrid selections, fertility recommendations, and cultural management procedures used were common to the standard farming practices of the local area. Corn and soybeans were grown in rotation with either alfalfa or winter wheat. As a result of the crop rotation, the weed flora did not change appreciably over the duration of the study.

Herbicide treatments selected for analysis in this study represented the major market share of the herbicides used in corn or soybeans throughout southwestern Ontario. Soybean and corn yields were calculated each year based on 14.5% and 15.5% moisture content, respectively.

Yield Response of Corn and Soybeans to Herbicide Treatments

All herbicide treatments applied either preplant incorporated (PPI) or preemergence (PRE) resulted in a positive yield increase for both corn and soybeans. The percent yield increase ranged from 17 (±10) to 134 (±80) for corn and 45 (±13) to 140 (±58) for soybeans. The numbers in the brackets represent a 95% confidence range. This means that 95% of the time the yield increase will fall within this range.

The average yield increase from the herbicide treatments varied greatly between locations, herbicide combinations, and application methods. For example, in corn a PPI treatment of atrazine plus alachlor increased the average percent yield 134 (±80) at Harrow compared to 48 (±30) at Ridgetown. In soybeans at Ridgetown, metribuzin plus alachlor PPI increased the average percent yield 45 (±13) compared to 82 (±31) for the same herbicide combination applied PRE.

Net Benefits

The use of herbicides to control weeds in corn and soybeans generally resulted in a positive net benefit to the producer. The net returns to producers for corn selling at an estimated price of $132/1000 kg ranged from $49/ha (±35) to $379/ha (±137). For soybeans, the net benefit calculations ranged from $87/ha (±43) to $275/ha (±85) at a market price of $275/1000 kg. The relative size of the net benefit differed with market price of corn and soybeans. For example, the net benefit calculated for the PPI treatment of metribuzin plus metolachlor applied to soybeans ranged from $232/ha (±75) to $374/ha (±107) at a market price of $245/1000 kg and $343/1000 kg, respectively.

Expected crop prices are an important factor in these calculations. As crop prices increase, the value of potential crop loss, i.e., quantity of potential crop loss x crop price, increases as well. At high crop prices, farmers have more incentive to generate as much crop as possible. Conversely, at low crop prices, farmers could become indifferent about herbicide applications, particularly if the value of crop sales only equals the cost of herbicides and their application, i.e., net returns equal zero.

For herbicide combinations analyzed in either corn or soybeans from 1969 to 1985, only four herbicide treatments used in corn had a 95% confidence range, larger than the calculated net benefit. In this situation, a 95% confidence range would indicate the potential for a loss of net returns from herbicide use. However, the potential loss of a net return from herbicide use was calculated only for corn and only at the lowest market price of $110/1000 kg.

Benefit to Cost Ratio from Herbicide Use on Corn and Soybeans

The objective of this study was to sum all benefits attributed to herbicides and to subtract all quantifiable costs associated with their use, either directly or indirectly. The benefit/cost ratio exceeded a one-to-one ratio for all herbicide treatments applied to corn or soybeans. (Tables 1 and 2). Prevailing market price strongly influenced the benefit/cost ratio. For example, the benefit/cost ratio of cyanizine plus atrazine applied PRE on corn at Harrow ranged from 2.9 (±0.6) to 4.1 (±0.9) at prices of $110/1000 kg and $158/1000 kg of corn (Table 1). At a mean price of $132/1000 kg for corn, the average benefit/cost ratio for all herbicide treatments was 2.8/1.0 (Table 1). This means, that for every dollar invested in a corn herbicide, $2.80 was returned to the grower. The average benefit/cost ratio for all herbicide treatments used on soybeans was 2.6/1.0 at a mean market price of $275/1000 kg (Table 2). These results were similar to those of other researchers who reported that changes in crop or herbicide costs directly influenced the financial return to the farmer.

Studies based on one year's data may not reflect a true assessment of the economic returns to herbicide use. The present analyses, based on 16 years of data, indicate that in any given year the benefit/cost ratio can vary substantially depending upon location, method of herbicide application, and prevailing market price. The analysis from year-to-year is not as important as one that encompasses yearly averages based on long-term studies.

The assessment of error analysis provided by the 95% confidence range indicated for both corn and soybeans that the use of herbicides will generate positive net returns with a high degree of probability. On average, these benefits were apparent even at low market prices for both corn and soybeans. This is an important consideration for growers because this inplies there is a high probability that herbicide applications will generate higher returns (benefits) compared to costs.

It should be recognized that the data generated in this study have limitations. For example, it would be incorrect to conclude from these that certain herbicide treatments, methods of application, and/or test locations controlled weeds more effectively than others. Research testing protocols, weed populations, soil types and weather patterns varied between locations and from year to year, making comparisons of herbicide efficacy impossible. Also, not all herbicides were available throughout the analysis period. For example, metolachlor was tested first in Canada in 1977 while alachlor had been tested since 1969. These results represent only herbicide use on corn and soybeans with no inter-row cultivation to control weeds at Harrow and Ridgetown. The integration of inter-row cultivation for weed control may reduce the estimated value of the benefit/cost ration.

Egg Board calling for change

MISSISSAUGA — Changes and strong leadership are needed if Canada's egg marketing system is to survive, says the Ontario Egg Producers' Marketing Board chairman.

Speaking on the occasion of the board's 25th anniversary, newly re-elected, Gerald Morden stated that "shifting demand from the table market to the processing market, international trade pressures, and continued financial difficulties within the CEMA, threaten not only the stability, but the very existence of our supply management system.

According to the board, which represents 40 per cent of the country's egg producers, not only must these changes increase market responsiveness and efficiency, but must also be financially sustainable.

Actions already taken by CEMA over the past year include a five per cent reduction in Ontario quota, a lowering of producer prices and an increase in levies to a new high of 16.5 cents a dozen.

Foul weather has farmers asking questions

April's snowy weather and cold temperatures will probably keep farmers off the land for another couple of weeks. Dundas' ag rep says some land in the area was already worked by the middle of April last year. Press Photo—Fetterly

WINCHESTER — Farmers questioning the effects of recent snowstorms on their crops shouldn't be concerned yet, says Dundas County's agricultural representative.

Bob Humphries says he has had a number of calls from area farmers worried about planting delays and damage to alfalfa and spring cereal crops.

"It's not uncommon," said Humphries of the late snowfalls. In fact "from a cropping standpoint it's better."

Humphries explained that the needed moisture is better in snow form rather than heavy rains at this time of year because the snow will seep into the ground gradually and is less likely to cause runoff and soil erosion than a heavy rainfall.

He also mentioned that the snow protects alfalfa crops from the cold by providing an insulating blanket.

According to Humphries, last year some loam-type soils were already worked by April 15, but "if farmers can get on the land by the last week in April they're doing well."

Local dealers report some fertilizer has already been broadcast on frozen pastures and a few soil tests have been taken.

The ideal planting date for corn in Eastern Ontario is May 10, while spring cereals and alfalfa should be planted around the last week in April. Planting time for soybeans is a little later, around May 24.

Humphries concluded that last week's winter weather will probably only keep farmers off the land for a few more days.

Matching government funding means $1 billion for farmers

OTTAWA — A recently announced federal government assistance plan could provide as much as $1 billion to Canadian farmers provided the provinces can match the federal $500 million contribution.

According to Tom Van Dusen, press secretary to the minister of agriculture, the 50/50 cost-sharing measures will provide most of the aid to western producers, with 90 per cent of the funds designated for grain and oilseed producers and the other 10 per cent for producers of other commodities.

He also said Ontario has agreed to some form of cost-sharing, but is unsure of the details, since it is up to provincial governments to design the programs to "help farmers in need."

Dundas Federation of Agriculture president, Alvin Runnalls says he is skeptical about a cost-sharing deal.

He said it sounds good if the provinces are able to come up with their share. He cited Saskatchewan as an example, where farmers are facing the biggest financial difficulty, and "the money's not there."

Also with all the cuts the Ontario government has been making to agriculture programs over the past while, Runnall wonders how it would be able to afford its share of the deal. The Ontario government is also expected to come down with an election-style budget shortly which may be easy on the taxpayer but difficult for agriculture and other groups because of cutbacks.

Instead of large dollars pouring into the industry all at once, Runnalls suggests a longer-term ongoing future plan.

Other initiatives announced by the federal government, March 30 were:

- An increase in the flexibility of the Farm Debt Review Fund, to make it more adaptable to current circumstances, so that arrangements which farmers have worked out with the Farm Credit Corp. through the Farm Debt Review process can be extended. This could mean, for example, extending lease-back arrangements so that farmers can stay on the land. Farmers will also be able to build up funds for down payments on the farm through an equity fund.
- The Canadian Wheat Board will implement procedures under the Prairie Grain Advance Payments Act which should encourage creditors to extend needed operating credit to producers.
- The Farm Debt Review process and the Canadian Rural Transition Program will be modified to allow more farm families to diversify their operations, explore new agricultural opportunities and enhance their viability.
- The $150 million federal-provincial National Soil Conservation Program will be extended. The additional $10 million the federal government is willing to commit is contingent on provincial participation, and would be part of the additional income support initiative.

1% milk hits shelves in May

by Dianne Fetterly
Press Staff Reporter

WINCHESTER — A recent decision by the Farm Products Marketing Commission not to establish a separate pricing classification for one per cent milk, will have a dramatic effect on dairy farmers, says an Ontario Milk Marketing Board spokesman.

Ken Smith, with the board/industry relations division, said the decision, announced March 28, limits producers' options in recovering added costs of the industry.

The OMMB had hoped for a slightly higher price for one per cent and skimmed milk because of the farm income loss associated with the smaller market for overall milk requirements.

"It's (shrinking market) difficult for farmers to accept," said Smith.

He said he's unsure how much of the market share the one per cent milk will take, but since it's considered to be a substitute for two per cent milk, it could be fairly large.

Although Smith admitted "the decision is already made," the OMMB is still seeking an audience with the commission to have the reasons clarified for its choice.

"The request is still being made," he said, "We (the board) are having trouble dealing with their reasons."

Smith also said that although the OMMB has been criticized in the past for not being responsive to consumer needs, its decision to market the new product proves otherwise.

The introduction of one per cent milk is "a way that an orderly supply-marketing system responds to consumer demands," he said.

Dundas Federation of Agriculture vice-president and dairy farmer, Gordon Garlough said the implementation of one per cent milk is something the market wants and will require changes being made to the marketing structure.

He said a multiple component pricing system, like the one recently announced by the OMMB and slated for August 1991, will be a necessity and should have been implemented a year or two ago.

The multiple component pricing system will mean producers are paid not only for the fat content of their milk but also for protein and other solids.

One per cent milk will enter the marketplace May 1. It has been available in most other Canadian provinces and the U.S. for quite some time.

Putting their best foot forward

More than 100 4-Hers pass the etiquette test at Achievement Night

MAPLE RIDGE — Dundas County 4-Hers put their 'Best Foot Forward' last Tuesday evening as a wrap-up to the project on proper etiquette.

Rural Organization Specialist, Keith McGrisken in charge of organizing 4-H events for the county, said he was pleased with the participation generated from the project, both from the 119 young people completing the course and from the 18 club leaders.

He also mentioned feedback from parents on the project was very favorable. ''Parents told me if they (children) enjoy learning valuable skills, then it's a good project.''

The club focused on proper restaurant etiquette, travel manners, making proper introductions, table manners, proper entertaining as well as etiquette at funerals.

Special achievement awards presented were: pre 4-Hers — a 'Grow with us' pin to Amy Berends, Meghan Shane and Amanda Walker.

Leader pins were presented to first year leaders, Susan Johnstone, Lynn Ouellette and Jill Wicks.

Dawna Hoy and Nancy Rodger received five-year leader certificates and Rina Groniger received a certificate for 10 years leadership.

Awards for completion of six projects were presented to: Heather Blaine, Marc Dion, Tonia Foley, Tammy Henderson, Terry Hoy, Korrine Hutt and Angela Young.

Helen Casselman, Lili Dietrich, Martha Link and Stephanie vanGilst were presented with a desk pen set for completion of 12 projects.

A travel alarm was presented to Linda Vanderlaan for 18 completed projects and Pamela Giles received a print for completing 24.

4-H achievers

At the Dundas County 4-H Achievement Night held last Tuesday, special awards were presented to members completing six, 12, 18 and 24 projects. Receiving a desk pen set for completion of 12 projects were: (back row, left to right) Lilli Dietrich, Helen Casselman, Martha Link and Stephanie vanGilst. Farm income projections

OTTAWA — Farm income projections for 1990 are more favorable than December 1989 forecasts, say Agriculture Canada economists.

At $2.77 billion, the forecast for 1990 realized net income is $138 million higher than earlier predicted. While still 33 per cent below the 1989 level, it is almost identical to the 1981-85 average. This decline follows record high levels in '87 and '88, and a 13 per cent drop in 1989.

The updated projections are part of Agriculture Canada's market commentary for the 1990 first-quarter, and the outlook for the months ahead.

In Memoriam

BELANGER — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Eugene, who passed away April 23, 1987.
In our hearts your memory lingers,
Always tender, fond and true,
There is not a day, dear Dad,
We do not think of you.
—Loved and sadly missed by Edna, Jack and Louise Eldridge 2

SHIELDS — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Kaye Shields, who passed away April 19, 1975.
Time passes on, months have passed,
Since death, its gloomy shadow cast;
Upon our home, when all was bright,
And took from us a shining light.
We miss that light and ever will,
Her vacant place there's none to fill;
Down here, we mourn, but not in vain,
For up in heaven, we'll meet again.
—Always remembered, Andy Shields and family 2

CINNAMON — In loving memory of a dear wife, mother, grandmother and great grandmother, Gladys, who passed away on April 19, 1986.
You had a smile for everyone,
You had a heart of gold,
To us you were so special,
What more is there to say,
Except to wish with all our hearts,
That you were here today.
We like to think when life is done,
Wherever heaven may be,
That you'll be standing at the door,
To welcome us so tenderly.
—Always remembered and loved by Kenneth and family 2

BELANGER — In loving memory of my dear husband, Eugene, who passed away April 23, 1987.
Gone are the days we used to share,
But in my heart you are always there,
The gates of memory will never close,
I miss you more than anyone knows.
—Greatly loved and missed, wife Rose 2

HESS — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Harold, who passed away April 23, 1988.
Remembering you is easy,
I do it every day,
Missing you is the heartache,
That never goes away.
I try to hide the tears that often start,
But I cannot hide the longing,
That lies within my heart.
—Always remembered, wife Pauline and family 2

HALL — In loving memory of a dear "Poppa", William J., who passed away April 16, 1988.

In Memoriam

CINNAMON — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Gladys Cinnamon, who passed away April 19, 1986.
We did not see you close your eyes,
Or hear your last faint sigh,
We only heard that you were gone,
Too late to say goodbye.

You lived your life for those you loved,
You will always be remembered and Missed by those who loved you.
