Extending Parcels Post.

The extension of the parcels post system so as to provide a means of direct transportation of farm produce between producer and consumer will be considered by officials of the Post Office Department at Ottawa who are planning the system. The handling of such articles as eggs, poultry, butter, etc., by parcel post has been done with success in South Africa and the system is being investigated in Ausernment.

It is considered in Australia, according to a report received by the Trade and Commerce Department, that the farmer would benefit by receiving higher prices for his produce, while the consumer would also be able to obtain his supplies at less cost through the elimination of the distributor's profit.

Street Cars Can Run Over Hose

Mr. J. Picher of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., has an invention which he is about to patent, called a "hose protector". The object is to allow fire hose laid across a street in time of fire, but avoiding blocking street car traffic as is often done at present.

The invention is a kind of portable bridge, about ten feet long and five and a half inches high, which can be laid on the car rails. It is pierced with holes through which the hose can be passed, while being constructed of steel, the street cars can safely pass over it.

Whiskey Detectives at work in Cornwall

On Saturday afternoon towards the beginning of August two detectives of the License Department of Ontario—one an Armenian and the other a foreigner of some other kind—arrived in Cornwall and just before the dead hour of 7 o'clock began their work. One of them entered a licensed hotel near the station and bought a flask of whiskey, the other waiting outside; the operation being repeated at another house near by. They then came down town and worked the racket on another hotel keeper.

Charges were laid against the three bonifaces for selling liquor to be carried off the premises in violation of a recent statute, and on Wednesday the cases came before Police Magistrate Danis. The hotelkeepers were represented by D. B. Maclennan, K.C., while County Crown Attorney Dingwall conducted the prosecution. The proceedings took all afternoon, and as the upshot one of the hotel-keepers was fined $50 and costs—$85 in all, including fares of the detective from Toronto, the others being adjourned, when no doubt the two detectives will come down again, and pile up more expenses.

As the heavenly twins were at the station, intending to take the moccasin train, they were set upon by friends of the aggrieved parties, and given a good licking. They got on the train, when they were pulled off and treated to another lambasting, after which they were allowed to depart.

Kicked His Way Into Theatre And Jail.

In the presence of a number of people, who seemen too much surprised to make any interference, a drunken sailor kicked a pane of glass out of the front of the Bijou theatre at Prescott, on Tuesday night and crawled through the opening into the theatre, Chief Mooney arrested the offender who had been previously ejected from the building, owing to his condition, and the police magistrate imposed a stiff fine on him.

The Winchester Fair.

Tuesday and yesterday were the days set apart at Winchester for the holding of their annual fair. Tuesday proved to be a pleasant day, but the crowd was rather small. Carriage classes were shown on the first day, also two racing events, the 2.40 class and the 2.20 class. Sam Hill, owned by Mr. Coir of Morrisburg, won the 2.40 class and Lord Ermine, owned by Mr. S. W. Boyd of Winchester, won the 2.20 class. In the evening a concert was given before the grand stand to a fair sized audience.

Yesterday was looked forward to for a big day as it was expected the horses "Perfection" and "Red Bars" would come together, and it is a well known fact that hundreds paid their admission for the privilege of seeing the free-for-all race, but to say the least, they were all disappointed. The owners of the free-for-all horses were told that it would be the first class called, and it was, but by some hook or crook, the horses were again sent to the barn and another class called, thus they were not again notified to appear, the weather proving very unfavorable. They were a disappointed people.

The 3-minute and named races were run off and the special classes as also was the judging of all other classes.

The concert in the evening was held in the Music Hall.

Ontario Man Murdered in Lonely Shack

Edmonton, Sept. 3.—Covered with a mattress and bedding and lying upon the floor of a one-roomed shack on the Hudson Bay reserve, James McNulty, realty salesman, was found dead by his partner, Burrard Moher, on the latter's return from work last evening.

McNulty had been killed by a 12-bore shot gun at close range and had been dead six to eight hours when found. No arrests have been made yet. McNulty had been in Edmonton three years, employed generally as a hotel clerk. He comes from Norwood, Ont., where his father is a prominent farmer.

Thaw Must Leave.

Sherbrooke, Sept. 3.—Late this afternoon the writ of habeas corpus against Harry K. Thaw, taken out by John Boudreau, the policeman who arrested him at Coaticook, was sustained by Judge Hutchinson. This liberates Thaw from the jail and places him at the disposal of the immigration authorities, who will deport him. His lawyers are considering whether they will appeal against the decision.

Sawduet Conveyor Burns.

Ottawa, Sept.—A fire at Booth's mill, causing damage in the neighborhood of $15,000, yesterday morning at 3 o'clock, has completely prostrated the lumber business of J. R. Booth. Though the damages of $15,000 is considered slight as fires go, it will be necessary to stop the mill for a week to complete repairs. The fire started in the sawdust conveyor and owing to the highly inflammable nature of the material, was soon in a vicious blaze. An alarm was sent in as soon as the fire was discovered by one of the watchmen, and the brigade, under Deputy Chief Stanford, was soon on the scene.

It will now be necessary to remove the steel girders the steel girders before work can be resumed. This will take considerable time, though it is hoped that the mill will be running within a week. The mill and offices were in complete darkness last night. Wires will be attached to the dynamo at the mill today and this difficulty will be remedied.

The entire damage cannot be even approximately estimated, as the closing down of the mill even for a day means a loss of thousands of dollars.

CRYSLER FARM CELEBRATION.

A Great Gathering on the Scene of the Historic Battle—Speeches by Prime Minister and Others.

(From Cornwall Standard)

The celebration of the hundred years of peace between Canada and the United States and also the centennial of the historic battle of Crysler's Farm on November 11th, 1813, opened on Wednesday under most auspicious circumstances. Gathering from all directions from the first break of dawn, between five and six thousand farmers, with women and children, residents of the three United Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, came to the historic farm. Long before the hour set for the opening of the program the old farm was a moving kaleidoscope of gay colors, with thousands of banners flapping to the breeze and the multi-colored uniforms of the soldiery mingling with the more sombre hues of the civilian visitors. Of the entire crowd perhaps one-half were people whose ancestors fought at Crysler's Farm.

Early on the scene was Mr. Andrew Broder, member of Parliament for Dundas. He was followed shortly afterwards by Hon. Geo. P. Graham, ex-Minisier of Railways. The two politicians were the principal speakers of the day, but a great part in the proceedings was played by the younger generation. One thousand children, coming from all parts of the United Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, were assembled in front of the platform which had been erected at the farm. They sang patriotic songs such as "Rule Britannia," "God Save the King" etc., assisted by the band of the G.G.F.G. of Ottawa. At the conclusion of the choruses the children were given flags which they waved with inspiring vigor, lending a striking note of animation and color to the scene. Many of the youthful demonstators, it should be mentioned are descended from Canadian soldiers who fought for King and country at the battle.

Hon. G. P. Graham, in his speech, addressed himself particularly to the children, who numbered in all nearly 2,000. He began by saying that it was a proud day for the people of Dundas, who were celebrating an event of such significance in the history of their country. In 1763 Canada had become bart of the British Empire. Since then several attempts to separate it had been made by the United States. as for instance in 1776, when they tried to get the French-Canadians to secede. The French-Canadians, however, had remained loyal, thus earning the undying gratitude of Canada, and the battle of Crysler's Farm in 1813 had showed the United States and the world forever that Canada would remain part of the British Empire for all time.

Mr. Andrew Broder, M. P. who followed, said the danger in Canada to-day was that the people were leaving the land, and he gave immigration figures to prove this He paid a notable tribute to the farming profession, which required a high degree of intelligence, and thanked the people for the hearty support accorded him in organizing the celebration. He concluded by leading three cheers for Mrs. E. C. Whitney of Ottawa, a grand-daughter of John Crysler, whose fame was won in the battle; it was through her kindness that between five and six hundred children from all over the counties were able to be present and take part in the celebration.

The singing of the children was led by Mr. G. W. Fluker of Smith's Falls, musical director of the public schools there, while the arrangements were superintended by Mr. G. D. Ross of Morrisburg, secretary of the reception committee.

A detachment of twenty-five members of the 23rd Battery, under Lieut. A. H. Bick and H. F. Whitley were present from Ottawa. A salute of twenty-one guns was fired by the artillery from the 6-pounder guns captured from the enemy 100 years ago.

In the evening the G.G.F.G. band played on the river front and there was a splendid fireworks display.

RELICS OF THE WAR.

One of the most interesting phases of the celebration was the aggregation of antiques, firearms, old flags, household heirlooms of one hundred years ago, historical military and civil documents, etc., collected by the ladies of the Dundas Women's Institute, and which has been housed in one of the public buildings of the town.

This collection more than any other feature has been the centre of the attraction for visitors and the townspeople alike and the success attending the acquisition of the exhibition led the ladies of the Institute to hope that it may mean the establishment of a permanent historical museum there.

The most comprehensive collection of the exhibit is an aggregation of firearms and flags loaned by Mr. S. S. Rogers, an American, who maintains a country home at Cardinal, Ont., and another on the American side of the river.

Of the documents relating especially to early Canadian history there are on view a receipt for oats, supplied by Major Merkley of the Royal New York Regiment (a British regiment that retained its name after the American Revolution,) dated May 20th, 1813. There are three crown deeds of grants of land near Morrisburg to early settlers, one of which is still owned by the same family; there is an agreement between Major Merkley and neighboring farmers for the supply of white pine masts for use on gunboats on the river and lakes.

Among the many visitors at the celebration are Mr. Edwin M. Chrysler of Brooklyn, N.Y., great grandson of the John Chrysler of "The Farm," and his wife and son. Mr. Chrysler's father has been for years in the newspaper business, having started the New York Sportsman. He left Canada sixty years ago. He brought with him the marriage certificate of John Crysler and Miss Weagant, a century old.

SECOND DAY

Delightful weather again contributed greatly to the success and enjoyment of the celebration on the second day—yesterday. It is estimated that fully ten thousand people were assembled when the program for the afternoon was opened. The scene was an inspiring one when the fifteen hundred volunteers mustered for the occasion, marched past the rugged granite monument erected in memory of the heroic men who fell in the decisive battle which was being commemorated. The troops consisted of detachments from the 59th (Stormont and Glengarry) Regiment, with their Highland Pipe Band; Governor-General's Foot Guards with band, Ottawa; Rifles from Brockville and Ottawa; Fusiliers from Kingston; Infantry from Perth and Lindsay. Lieuts. Raymond and Gray were in command of the Cornwall Company of the 59th.

The speakers of the afternoon were the Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden, Premier of Canada, and the Hon. Mr. Lemeiux, ex-Minister of Marine. Sir James Whitney, Premier of the province of Ontario, was at the last moment ordered by his physicians not to make the trip from Toronto. Sir James has been ill for some time, but a private car was kept in readiness for a couple of days awaiting the word of the doctors, and it was a great disappointment to his fellow-townsmen when he was compelled to forego the trip.

Of the entire crowd present yesterday afternoon, perhaps none was more interesting than a stalwart Indian youth, Johnson Podash of Hiawatha, a great-great-grandson of Bald Eagle, faithful ally of the British, and a great-grandson of George Podash, who fought and died at Crysler's Farm. Podash also had two grand uncles killed in the same battle. This descendent, who is a successful farmer of the district, and who was invited to the platform by the committee, might, except for the piercing Indian black eyes and slightly prominent cheek-bones, pass for any swarthy complexioned son of the soil. Messrs. Borden and Lemieux had a long chat with him, and found him an interested and well-informed spectator of the incidents taking place.

Trooper Mulloy, the blind Victoria Cross hero of the Canadian contingent in South Africa, who held the dying son of the then Canadian Minister of Militia in his arms in the face of a rain of bullets, was there, and not a man in the crowd, the Prime Minister included, was more heartily cheered.

The special correspondent of the Montreal Gazette, in his report of the event, made this reference to two well-known citizens of Cornwall: An old man of upright soldiery bearing, but halting tread, Arch. McNaughton of Cornwall, ninety-two years of age; Mr. Duncan Monroe, one of the most widely known veterans of the Cornwall district, resplendent in plumed bonnet and gaily colored kilt of his clan; Dean Starr of Kingston Cathedral, a military clergyman who retained command of his regiment for some time after he entered the ranks of the Church militant; Hon, Dr. Reid, Minister of Customs, and a product of the neighboring district; Andrew Broder, the genial representative of the county in Parliament, whose cheery smile neither Liberals or Conservatives could withstand—all of these, with dozens of descendants of the brave Col. Morrison, Major Merkley and the no less sturdy yeomen slain on the field of battle, whose names have not come down to us, were on the field, paying their respects to the dead, but at the same time welcoming with hearty handclasps the scores of American farmers and summer holiday-makers who had come across the river for the event, and assuring them that the hundred years of peace would not be broken by provocation from this side.

This was also the principal theme of the address of Premier Borden the first speaker of the afternoon, who declared that he deemed more glorious even than the victory being celebrated and its results, the practically unbroken hundred years of peace that followed, the noblest lesson that had ever been given to the world.

Mr. Borden paid a tribute to Mr. Broder, one of his lieutenants in Parliament, and to the Hon. Mr. Lemieux, who, though a member of the Opposition, was a worthy representative of the French-Canadian race that had stood shoulder to shoulder with the English-speaking Canadians in the stirring events of one hundred years ago, a race of chivalry, of courage and uprightness, And to Mr. Lemieux Mr. Borden gave the commission of conveying to the citizens of the Province of Quebec a message of brotherhood from their fellow-citizens of Ontario gathered on the field of Crysler's Farm. The events of Crysler's Farm and Chateaugnay, under Col. Morrison and Col. DeSalaberry, proved the mettle of both races, though these were not the only events in our long history that had given to each race the right to mutual respect and admiration, the right to stand face to face and side by side as free and equal Canadians.

The retrospect of one hundred years was an inspiring one, said the Prime Minister. Long ago it had been proved that no nation ever became great except through the character and achievement of its people, and the soundest of character was built on the trials and difficulties of the past. A time of trial had come in 1812-14, when kindred races in an unhappy war had uselessly shed blood, and finally made peace, forgetting what they had been fighting for. In those days three hundred thousand Canadians had offered themselves and all they had in defence of their homes against the covetous desires of seven and a half million neighbors, and by the dispensation of Providence had come out victorious. Crysler's Farm was one of those single events, numerous in history, which had been the deciding point in a conflict. As in the battle of Marathon of old, in the driving back of the Saracens by the French under Charles Martel, saving Enrope for Christian civilization; in 1066 when the Normans came and saved England from isolation, infusing into the slower witted Saxons a sprightliness of mind and higher sense of culture; in 1863 at Gettsburg, when it was determined that the great American Republic should not be rent in twain; so in 1812-14 the heroic deeds on both sides had their culmination at Crysler's Farm in the battle that gave the death blow to the hopes of the invaders, for if the Americans had accomplished that what they set out to do, with the purpose of capturing the city of Montreal, the history of the whole Dominion, and even the British Empire, might have been different today. It was a matter for rejoicing that the two Canadian races, with their Indian allies, had held the soil for the Empire and the flag that floats, and always will float over the Dominion.

Mr. Borden said he desired not alone to speak of those events of war but of the century that intervened. As an example of what the spirit of this celebration should be, the Prime Minister quoted a poem by an American lady, dedicated to the heroes of both sides in the American Civil War, pleading for honor and reverence to those who rest:

"Under the roses the Blue,
"Under the lilies the Gray."

That spirit, and honor also for the great battle that their ancestors had fought against the wilderness, winning through days of toil and hardships a victory greater even than that of armed strife, and all these victories climaxed by the great victory of 100 years of peace, he wished to impress on the minds of his listeners. In the retrospect of one hundred years of peace the truest and noblest lesson ever given to the world was to be learned. Four thousand miles of unarmed frontier was a condition parelleled nowhere else in the world today than between Canada and the United States. Commercial and social intercourse were carried on over this great frontier with never a thought of jealousy or suspicion. Both countries boasted equally free institutions, based on the same traditions, and looking across that long boundary line Canadians could find inspiration and examples in the solution of many of our common problems that were well worth emulating. Above all should be a spirit of thankfulness for one hundred years of peace, and the determination that so far as in our power lay, many more centuries of peace should follow, with a spirit of friendship forever unbroken.

MR. LEMIEUX.

Mr. Broder, in introducing Hon. Mr. Lemieux, expressed regret that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has been unable to avail himself of the invitation extended him to be present, but considered that the French-Canadian race had an equally worthy representative in Mr. Lemieux.

Mr. Lemieux had a hearty reception from the big audience, and immediately won them completely by some well-timed compliments to their representative in Parliament, Mr. Andrew Broder. He considered it a great compliment to the Province of Quebec to be invited to represent his fellow countrymen in the celebration with the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister of Canada, he said, was not a leader of a party, but the leader of the whole country, and no greater pleasure has ever been given him than to pay his respects to that great Canadian and Imperial statesman, Robert Laird Borden. (Prolonged cheers.)

As for Andrew Broder, he could now understand why the Grits of Dundas had given so poor an account of themselves. He believed that last winter when both parties in Parliament were busy building warships, Andrew Broder was busy building friendships (laughter), and he considered that Mr. Borden would forever label himself as an unfair partizan if he did not soon remove Andrew Broder from the House of Commons and send him to the cool retreat of the Senate, and give the Grits of Dundas a chance.

Mr. Lemieux considered the causes of the ware many, but the effects of the conflict were greater than the causes, for the French and English Canadians were then brought together through mutual tribulations to build with mutual faith and respect the Canada of-today.

Referring to the British victory on the Plains of Abraham, Mr. Lemieux said under the old French regime the colonists had not known what true freedom meant, but between 1763 and 1776, thirteen short years, the lesson had been learned, and was not to be thrown away. Well might Wolfe have died happy on the Plains of Abraham, when he saw the great principles of liberty, justice and tolerance under which he had lived in England established at the gates of Quebec, and well might both Wolfe and Montcalm have died happy if in prophetic vision they could see the present day results of that historic conflict.

No era in the world's history had known statesmen of the calibre of those British leaders of the eighteenth century, but England might have been strong then without being wise and honest. She might have been strong if she had granted the requests of the rebelling American colonists, one of which was to suppress the privileges of language and religion, and could thus have kept the whole American continent under one flag, but at the expense of wisdom and honesty. And if anything could compensate Great Britain today for the great loss she then suffered, surely it should be the sight of a loyal happy and contented race of alien stock under the beneficent folds of the flag.

Winding up an eloquent peroration in tribute to the sterling qualities of Americans, both of one hundred years ago and today. Mr. Lemieux drew a parrallel be tween the the bow set in the clouds as a covenant that the earth should be no more deluged by water, and the situation between the British Empire and the United States to-day, England and America were natural and inevitable friends, and Canada stood between the two as a link, a pledge, or a covenant for the pre servation of peace. Let us here, then, erect a living arch of peace to stand for all time to come.

MILITARY REVIEW.

After the speeches there was a military review and firing of salutes, and in the evening another magnificent display of fireworks.

THE BATTLE.

The following concise account of the Battle of Crysler's Farm is taken from the Montreal Gazette:—

Of the battle little need be written. To say much would be as weary as a twice told tale vexing the chill ear of a drowsy man." In brief the American General Wilkin was preparing to descend the St. Lawrence from Sackett's Harbour, with 10,000 men at his call to effect a junction with Hampton who was advancing on another line and met his fate at Chateauguay. After much feinting and endeavours to mislead his Eastward course was cntinued and he landed at Cook's Point, not far from the battlefield. As fast as practicable Lt.-Col. Morrison, who may be regarded as the hero of the day and a modest hero he was followed in pursuit, but his progress was slow owing to causes which could not be avoided on the eighth day of November his troopers reached Prescott and were reinforced by the Canadian Fencibles under Col. Pearson, while some improvised gun boats, under Capt. Mulcaster, were also in progress East. In the evening of the tenth he heard while at Point Iroquois that the Americans were landing at Cook's. Following to Munroe's Bay, two miles above them, the British advance was attacked, but the assailants were driven in and Crysler's was made their head quarters. The site was well chosen. A road passed from the river to the woods on the North at right angles, and part of the farm was heavily fenced, affording shelter. On the North lay swamp and brush wood. The position was simple but the odds great.

On the British side were some eight hundred odd, but they were for the most part at least, seasoned troops. A battalion of the 49th, which had fought with Brock at Queenston, was there under Lt.-Col. Harvey of Stoney Creek fame. Col. Morrison, with the 89th, was one of those who had served his apprenticeship on the Continent of Europe. He was aided by Lieut. DeLorimier of the Fencibles; Captain Frayer of the Provincial Dragoons, and Major Heriot of the Voltigeurs. Without hesitation Col. Morrison determined to confront a foe who had many thousands not far away, and double his own force immediately in his front. His right, resting on the high road, consisted of the 49th under Lt.-Col. Pearson, his left of the 89th Regiment, with some Indians on the flank. The plan of the battle in Bouchette's "Topography" shows both regiments in column, with a detached corps on the right of the 49th, and the gunboats off Crysler's farm house. A double formation in the lead of the 89th Regiment indicates a subsequent change in position, mentioned in Morrison's report. The Americans were drawn across Cook's farm under General Boyd, in the absence of General Wilkinson, who was sick for some variously explained cause. After some preliminary movements the Americans were drawn on to where Morrison wanted them, and repeated attacks of calvary and infantry defeated, though they gained the level ground in front of the position, Here it was that Capt. Nairn, the seigneur of Murray Bay, fell, as also did Clance of the 49th, and Capt. DeLorimier. An attempt was made at this juncture to turn the left flank of the 89th, but Morrison made a change of position and, the attack failing, many prisoners were taken. At this period of the engagement the American General Covington was killed. A heavy fire from the gunboats contributed to the confusion of the Americans and the successor of Covington fell. Now it was that Morrison saw that a crisis had arrived. The enemy was shaken and amazed at the results of the battle, and a general advance was ordered. Morrison's and Pearson's troops advanced simultaneously and the retreat, which became a rout, commenced. The Americans stood not on the order of their going but went without delay, leaving a gun on the field, a number of calvary horses and a stand of colors. Col. Morrison was not able to follow up the victory, knowing the large forces at the disposal of the enemy, and still on his front, but the enemy had difficulty in getting away for their box boats were stranded, and the retreat, a kind of sauve qui peut. Arms and ammunition were scattered in all directions, and after two and a half hours' hard fighting the battle of Crysler's Farm was won and the end of the campaign in sight Wilkinson heard of the defeat at Chateauguay and was astute enough to see that union with Hampton was now hopeless, and returned to Salmon River to winter quarters. The losses on the British side are given as three officers killed and 21 rank and file; 8 officers and 137 rank and file wounded. On the United States side 3 officers killed and 90 men; 16 officers and 221 men wounded. It is needless to add that Wilkinson claimed the victory as virtually one for the Americans. It is only fair to the marine part of the British forces to note that their services were very great. Though the "gunboats" appear to have been merely clumsy vessels propelled by oars in the style of the galleys of old days, they seem to have done good service, the fire of the Nelson's 32-pounder proving most destructive to the American troops at a critical moment of the day.

Star Boarder and Landlady

Arnprior, Aug. 29—Arnprior has had a real elopement to liven things up.

About three years ago Mr. and Mrs. Skwaski were wedded in Austria, their nativeland. They came to Arnprior about a year ago and Mrs. Skwaski has been keeping boarders to swell the family purse. Three weeks ago a fine specimen of manhood took up his residence with them. He apparently had plenty of money and fairly showered his landlady with presents.

One evening recently when Mr. Skwaski returned home from work, he found his wife was non est; the star boarder as well was missing and Skwaski's two children, the one about a year old and the other only a few months had accom anied he two.

The deserted husband traced the couple as far as Renfrew, where they had their "faces taken," but from there all trace was lost. Skwaski is mourning the loss of his two children but apparently has no regrets for his wife's sudden departure.

All He Wore Was A Happy Smile.

Smith's Falls, Aug. 29.—Consternation was caused in the home of Mr. Alex. Clark a recent morning. On answering an early call at the door, he was confronted by a stoutly built man five feet six or seven in height, and whose entire wearing apparel consisted of a red pocket handkerchief tied around his neck.

Mr. Clark lives near the Rideau river, and the man said he had swam from the other side, his appearance showing that he had done so. Mr. Clark supplied him with clothes and he was given a lift to town by a neighboring farmers.

He was a strange looking and peculiar acting person, and the chief, thinking he might be one of the men who escaped from the Brockville asylum, has made every effort to locate the man since he was left in town. All trace of him has disappeared.

Grandpa Bought Some Fireworks

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Their Fireworks Were Ahead Of Time.

FIRECRACKERS are out of style, so daddy told Jack and Evelyn when they begged for some with which to make lively the Fourth of July.

"We may have a few," daddy said, "but we don't want to scare the neighbors too much."

"I don't see how they could be scared," Jack urged. "They know we would be very careful."

"Ah, do they?" daddy answered, smiling. "That is very nice. Little Sammie Simpson was one of the very careful boys.

"Firecrackers were not the fashion in the town in which he lived. So the summer he went to visit his grandfather and grandmother he begged so hard to be allowed plenty of them that the old folks at last agreed.

"They had a large place, with no neighbors very close to them, and so when grandpa went to town he got some of the very largest firecrackers he could get. He also bought plenty of rockets and roman candles and colored fire for the evening.

"Grandma did not want them in the house, so grandpa put them in the shed, which was used for the storing of rubbish. Grandma felt uneasy about having them there, although it was quite a distance from the house.

"Sammie could hardly wait for the Fourth to come. He teased and teased just to be allowed to try one little cracker. So the evening before the Fourth grandpa said, 'Well, as tomorrow is the Fourth, I suppose we might try one of those rockets.'

"Grandma groaned. 'You'll be very, very careful,' she warned. 'You know it's a good while since you've sent up any rockets.'

"Grandpa laughed boyishly. 'As if I could ever forget how to send up rockets!' he answered.

"Grandpa and Sammie went out to the little shed in which the fireworks were stored, and grandpa picked up a rocket. He took it out into the yard and set it up. Now, you know, a rocket must be set into the ground very straight if you want it to sail up to the sky. perhaps grandma was right. Grandpa was a little out of practice. At any rate, when lighted that rocket sizzed and sputtered and with a sideway dive curved over and went straight into the door of the shed where the fireworks were. The floor was covered with shavings, and in a minute there was a display of fireworks such as had never been seen around there before. The fire company came to put out the fire, and there was a lively time for a little while. The shed was burned down, but no one was hurt except grandpa, who blistered his hands and face.

"The next day was the Fourth, and Sammie had no fireworks. 'And I guess I don't mind any,' he confided to grandma. 'We had plenty of fireworks last night.'"

Western Fair Loses Five of its Buildings

London, Ont., Aug. 29.—Exactly one week before the opening day of London's big Exhibition, the Western Fair, fire destroyed five buildings. But before the smouldering embers were all extinguished, workmen were clearing away the debris, and timber was on the ground for the new buildings that will be rushed to completion during the next few days and nights. The five buildings destroyed were the Cement Products buildings, the Machinery hall, Transportation building horse shed, and the W.C. T.U. dining hall. The swine shed and boiler house were also damaged. The total loss will be about $50,000, with insurance of nearly $30,000.

It was one of the most spectacular fires witnessed in London in a long time. Despite the heavy rains of the previous day, the wooden structures gave forth a blaze that could be seen for ten or fifteen miles, and although it was 3 o'clock in the morning when the fire department was called out, a great many citizens were attracted to the Fair grounds.

ORIGINAL FROCKS.

Individuality the Slogan of Juvenile Styles.

TWO PRETTY FROCKS FOR GIRLS.

The craze for originality that is rampant in grown up modes has invaded the realm of children's clothes to such an extent this season that many mothers who have insisted upon their children wearing nothing save "sensible" garments are departing from this rule and adopting "Parisian fashions for the kiddies."

The frocks pictured are two French models that even the conservative mother will not hesitate to copy.

To Renew Curl In Feathers.

The present fashionable ostrich feather, although it is not so tightly curled as the old fashioned plume, looks even more bedraggled and forlorn when it is out of curl than the old one did. Yet fogs and mists or rains are as frequent as ever, and ostrich feathers are now worn at all times of the day and night regardless of the weather. Plumetis feathers were put forward to fill the role of a feather which moisture would not change, but they do not take the place of the regulation ostrich feather.

There is only one thing to do if you wear ostrich feathers, and that is to learn how to curl them. It is as good as impossible to send a feather to the prosessional cleaner to be curled every time there is a summer shower.

When the moist hat with feather trimming is removed put it, if possible, near a fire. Heat often restores a good deal of the lost curl. When this is not possible let the feather dry thoroughly and then recurl it with a nail file, the blunt edge of a knife or some other steel or silver blade which is not sharp.

Work with one or two of the fronds of the feather at a time. Catch them between the thumb and the blade near the stem of the feather and slowly and firmly draw the thumb and the blade along the fronds to the edge. If necessary go over some of the feathers twice.

Afternoon Gowns Have Transparent Waists.

Afternoon gowns are following in the footsteps of smart evening creations in their waist developments. Navy blue chiffon cloth is used for the skirt drapery of this model, with the under portion of silk in Roman stripes of dull red and black.

The transparent waist is of navy blue lace dyed to match the cloth and applied over white chiffon. The deep girdle is of the Roman silk.

Good Form

Personal Remarks.

The habit of making personal remarks grows upon people, and many are surprised when informed that there can be no greater breach of etiquette.

In any place where a conversation can be overheard mischief beyond repairing is often done by remarks concerning the personal affairs of either the speaker or her friends. Usually it is women that make these remarks. Men have to be more careful, for the reason that they may reap the just reward of a knockdown from some one overhearing.

Ofter these remarks are made from an overwhelming sense of curiosity. An incident relates a story of a very young girl who, attending a large reception, noticed a most peculiar looking woman standing near and as soon as conventional greetings were over eagerly inquired of her hostess, "Dear Mrs. X., who is that dreadful woman standing over there by the door?" Imagine her horror when the reply came in cold tones, "That is my mother." She fled to a near friend to tell her tale of woe and received then and there a lecture that lasted through life on the importance of keeping her remarks confined to other things than personal matters.

It is bad taste, which means a breach of etiquette, to ask anything about anybody in a crowd, whether it be at a reception, on the street, in a public conveyance or in any case excepting perhaps the name of a person.

Ofter the very person for whom the curiosity is felt is really of importance, in a way, may be a celebrity, eccentric in dress and bearing, so it is well to steer clear of personal remarks unless in the nature of a compliment. The woman who is invited to spend any time with friends will do well to remember this law, for it is a law of etiquette, before making any sort of remark about one guest to another or to her hostess about any guest present. She may find herself in very deep water and never be invited again.

People are prone to talk about people, not about things, and that is why one woman got the reputation of being "the best talker about the weather" ever heard. She had found it a safe topic and kept herself out of trouble by using all her powers to make it her one pet subject.

Our Courtesy.

"There is nothing which so exalts and graces a man in the opinion of others as his politeness and consideration for his wife. Instead of being, as some unfortunately feel it, unmanly and weak, it is the highest type of manliness, and to such service of love and respect the woman will invariably respond with all the tenderness and affection of her nature," says an authority on etiquette.

What a splendid thing it would be if every married man would take that paragraph into his heart and model his manner to his wife upon it!

One of the awkward moments a guest sometimes experiences is being a witness of a man's rudeness to his wife. Sympathy for the woman, wrath at the man and indignation on her own behalf—for rudeness to his wife indicates the man would be discourteous to all women if he dared—make her contemptuous of one so lacking in true manliness. Fault finding about food, criticism over small oversights, impatience over errors at cards—all trivial matters that a man should regard as the accidents of the moment and rise above—make the spectator wonder how the wife fares in the privacy of home.

Such things wound and humiliate the wife and lessen her love. Yes, they do. How can she believe in a man's love who will not regard her feelings in public at least? She laughs them off—it is the only thing she can do—or she passes them over in silence, but she knows how other women regard them, and she knows her husband's stock is going below par in their estimation, and that hurts her pride in him.

Rules For the Well Bred.

It is not proper to tuck one's handkerchief inside the open neck of one's gown, making use of this opening as a place of safety for the mouchoir, and no person who desires to be thought well bred will do it. To pull out even a handkerchief from inside one's waist is unrefined. The handkerchief should be kept up the sleeve, which fashion still countenances, or in a fancy bag to match the gown, which is one of the fads of the summer.

Either through thoughtlessness or ignorance some women have a trick of continually fussing at the neck of a low cut waist. They give it little pulls, as if it did not fit comfortably, or hitch it with their shoulders as if they felt out of place in it. Such a movement is most unpleasant, for it not only makes the person who does it conspicuous, but it calls attention to probable defects which were better concealed.

Concrete is the best building material

A BROAD statement—Yet literally true. The aim of man from the beginning has been to make his building materials as nearly like natural stone as possible. The great labor required to quarry stone led him to seek various manufactured substitutes. The only reason he ever used wood was that it was easiest to get and most convenient to use.
Wood is no longer easy to get. Like most building material, its cost is increasing at an alarming rate.
The cost of concrete is decreasing. So, from the standpoint of either service or economy, Concrete is the best building material.
Canada's farmers are using more concrete, in proportion to their numbers, than the farmers of any other country. Why?
Because they are being supplied with a cement of the highest possible quality, which insures the success of their concrete work.

Canada Cement—

The secret of concrete's popularity in Canada lies in the fact that while we have been advertising the use of concrete, we have also been producing, by scientific methods, a cement so uniformly high in quality that the concrete made with it gives the complete satisfaction our advertisements promised.
Concrete would not have been in such universal use today, had an inferior grade of cement been supplied. Insist upon getting Canada Cement. It is your best assurance of thoroughly satisfactory results from your concrete work. There is a Canada Cement dealer in your neighborhood.

Without this label it is not "Canada" Cement.

New Farmer's Bank In Saskatchewan.

Regina, Sask., Aug. 31.—Following investigations by the Provincial Government into the question of agricultural credits both by the commission sent to Europe and the commission taking evidence in the province, it is possible that at no far distant date the first agricultural bank in Canada will be formed in Saskatchewan. The bank proposed is modeled alter the Landschaften of Germany, which, instead of being composed of lenders, is constituted of borrowers, working on a co-operative basis. The bank's assets are the credits of each individual bank by his own possessions. The fudamental principle is joint borrowing for individual needs. The bank will obtain its funds in Europe at the lowest rate of interest possible, and will reloan money to its members at a slightly higher rate, the difference, being sufficient to cover the actual operating expenses.

The modus operandi calls for the issue of coupon bonds, say, at $1,000, Interest coupons are detached by the holder on maturity and cashed at the bank headquarters or by its London representatives. Money for the bonds is then placed at the disposal of the farmers, who borrow sufficient for their needs, giving personal guarantees. As they pay interest due on their individual loan, money becomes available for payment of the bond coupons on maturity.

Bonds, which bear interest at five per cent. are redeemable on six month's notice European experience has proven that such bonds are first-class security, rank ing with Governmental bonds.

Carried out in detail, the plans call for the establishment of local credit associations, each merged into the provincincial whole, each member of which pledges himself for the credit of the association. Little outside help will be asked, the bank being self-sustaining. It is likely that if ths plan comes to fruition, as many prominent farmers expect, the Provincial Government will be asked to pass legislation asking for the establishment of associations and probably for a small sum of money for organization purposes. The provincial authorities will also be asked to supervise the issuing of bonds, and perhaps at first to guarantee them until the bank is well established.

Five freight cars were wrecked on the M.C.R. thirty miles west of St. James. No one was killed or injured.

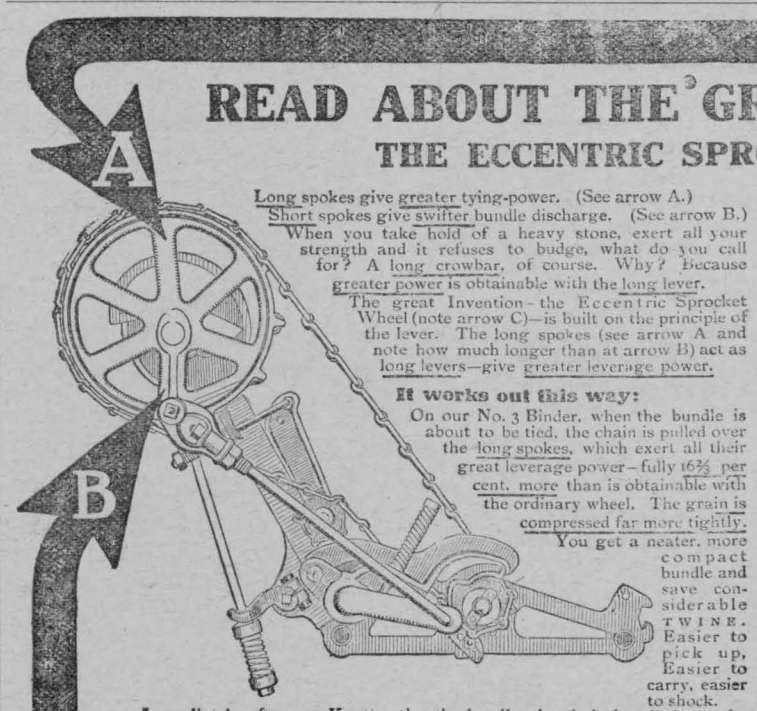
READ ABOUT THE GREAT INVENTION

THE ECCENTRIC SPROCKET WHEEL



Long spokes give greater tying-power. (See arrow A.)
Short spokes give swifter bundle discharge. (See arrow B.)
When you take hold of a heavy stone, exert all your strength and it refuses to budge, what do you call for? A long crowbar, of course. Why? Because greater power is obtainable with the long lever.
The great Invention—the Eccentric Sprocket Wheel (note arrow C)—is built on the principle of the lever. The long spokes (see arrow A and note how much longer than at arrow B) act as long levers—give greater leverage power.

It works out this way:

On our No. 3 Binder, when the bundle is about to be tied, the chain is pulled over the long spokes, which exert all their great leverage power—fully 16⅔ per cent. more than is obtainable with the ordinary wheel. The grain is compressed far more tightly. You get a neater, more compact bundle and save considerable TWINE. Easier to pick up, Easier to carry, easier to shock.

Immediately after our Knotter ties the bundle, the chain is pulled over the short spokes (see arrow B and note difference in length of spoke as compared with arrow A). The shorter spokes greatly increase the speed of the chain. The bundle is given a swifter discharge than with ordinary wheel, and the needle is speedily brought back, out of the way of the downcoming grain, into position for the next sheaf.

The Eccentric Sprocket does this, too—it prevents that "jar" or "jerk" always noticed on other machines when a bundle is being tied and discharged. You will not feel it on the No. 3; neither will your horses be annoyed by it, nor "the life" of the machine be shortened. Frost & Wood No. 3 runs along and does its work without even a suggestion of that "jerk."

Now, you see why every maker would put the Eccentric Sprocket Wheel on his binder if we did not control the patents for Canada. You see why it's wise to invest a post card and get our Binder Booklet so as to become thoroughly posted on the peer of them all—the Frost & Wood No. 3.

You are on the right track when you start investigating our No. 3—the binder that is built by a purelyCanadian Company, who thoroughly understands Canadian conditions. We would like you to read a few of the hundreds of testimonials we have received from Canadian farmers, which back up our claims to the letter.

ADVANCED MODES.

In the Fall We'll Wear Silk Suits.

IN DEEP PURPLE BENGALINE.

Slouchy styles are to hold over this fall and all the advanced models are just as "sloppy" as ever.

Silk suits, too, are to be popular, and the illustration shows a charming affair in deep purple bengaline, a silk that is to be very much worn this autumn.

Cord of the same color is used to outline seams and for the ornaments. A stunning waistcoat is of dull cloth of gold.

At the Wrist.

A very pretty finish for the end of the sleeve is in the shape of a fan. The entire sleeve is cut over a plain pattern, but when it nears the wrist the material is drawn in, so that the edge falls over the hand in fan shape. A piping of black velvet and a frill of lace peeping beneath add to the daintiness.

The sleeves slashed at the wrist are a fine accompaniment for slashed skirts. If the sides of the slash in the skirt are curved the same effect is seen in the sleeves. If they are cut off square they are treated so in the sleeves.

Deep cuffs are prominent on many long sleeves. Some are only three inches wide, while others reach the elbow.

Form Versus Food.

A famous humorist says that a new rich family in Cleveland, who were beginning to put on a lot of airs, hired a colored girl just arrived from the south to act as their serving maid. Her new mistress insisted that all meals should be served in courses. Even when there wasn't very much to eat it was brought to the table in courses.

At the end of the week the girl threw up her job. Being pressed for a reason for quitting so suddenly, she said:

"I'll tell you, lady. In dis yere house dere's too much shiftin' of de dishes fur de fewness of de vittles."

Harvard Women's Club.

Mothers, sisters, daughters and wives of men holding degrees from Harvard university are eligible to membership in the new Harvard Women's club. This is an outgrowth of the Harvard Dames, wives of the members of the faculty, organized in 1896. One of the past presidents of the Dames, Mrs. R. E. Hellman, will go with her husband to Iowa, he having been called to the university of that state, and many other members of the Dames are in other parts of the country; hence the establishing of the new club.

Farming For Women.

Mrs. Kate Trimble Woolsey of New York has a plan for women farmers. She says that intensive farming made it possible for 350 persons to be supported for a year on the proceeds of an acre in Japan. Mrs. Woolsey's idea is to have a central community house from which are to radiate little farms in all directions. These farms are to be run by women who would thus be saved from loneliness.

Wants All to Work.

Mrs. John Sharp Williams is doing much to interest the wives of senators without reference to political affiliation in the new congressional women's welfare branch of the National Civic federation. Mrs. Wilson and other Democrats will probably be the officials, but Mrs. Sharp wants all wives of senators to take an interest in the work proposed.

True Courtesy.

Well bred people are always willing to retire into the background, while those who are not polite demand the foreground. True courtesy is the refraining from hurting the feelings of any one as well as the striving to make those we meet glad that they have had the pleasure.

Cookery Points

For the Picnic Lunch.

Puff pastry is a delicious little dainty to include in the picnic luncheon menu. To make puff paste take a pound of flour and sift it well and stir in a pinch of salt, the beaten yolk of an egg and sufficient ice cold water to make a stiff paste. As flour varies so much in the quantity of water that it will take up, it is almost impossible to tell how much will be required Consequently a little should be added at a time till the dough is mixed Take some good fresh butter and wash it in water and then wrap in a cloth and lay it in the ice chest, if there is one handy; if not, place on the floor of the pantry for an hour. Roll out the dough and place the butter in a lump in the center of the dough and fold the sides over it. Set away in a cold place for another hour. Then roll it out into a long strip. Fold this into three by turning in the ends. Keep the dough quite cold and continue this process six times. Between the third and fifth rollings out lay the dough in a cold place for an hour before proceeding. Then it is ready to bake. Before placing in the oven the top of the pastry should be brushed over either with milk or the beaten yolk of an egg. The latter gives the pastry a rich yellow tint, which, however, is not always liked. Bake in a quick oven and take out as soon as cooked and nicely browned. Pastry should be cooled in a hot or warm room, as it keeps its crispness better.

To make sweet fillings for any of the molds either stew the fruit until quite thick, using only just sufficient water, or else mash or slice the fresh fruit, sweeten to taste and fill the molds. Mash with whipped cream or serve plain. These pies are delicious, and as they are served cold are so easy to prepare once the cases are made. The smaller cases can be filled with sweets or savories as liked. Vegetables served in cases is a nice way of using up cold vegetables. They may be used either hot or cold.

These cases are delightfully easy things to take to a picnic. Store the cases in a tin box and take the filling in jars. There will be no appalling mixture of sweets and meats, for until the cases are filled their contents are reposing in tightly corked or stoppered wide necked jars. A delicious filling for the cases and much liked at river lunches is made with a tin of lobster and cream. Whip a teacupful of cream to a stiff froth and cut open the lobster tin and mince all the flesh finely Squeeze a few drops of lemon juice over and sprinkle with paprika pepper and any flavoring liked. Just before filling the cases stir the cream and lobster together and fill the cases Stand on some fresh lettuce leaves and there you are!

Any nice cream filling may be made of meat finely minced and nicely flavored and placed in a pan with a sprinkle of flour and a tablespoonful of good gravy. Simmer till stiff, take off the fire and add two tablespoonfuls of cream when the meat is almost cold.

A Simple Sunday Supper.

Some jellied meat or salad, with bread and butter, is quite sufficient. If a salad is preferred as a piece de resistance in place of meat it may be a little heavier than the bit of green served at dinner Nuts, fish, cheese or egg mixtures may be used in it For variety's sake the fruit and salad may be combined as in a Waldorf salad or in a banana salad with nuts. If one desires to simplify the menu still further, buns or German coffee cake may take the place of both the cake and the bread Some people find chocolate too heavy a beverage, while others desire nothing for Sunday supper but chocolate with whipped cream and a sandwich with a bit of green—like mint lettuce, nasturtium or watercress—in the filling.

Five Lives Lost In Fatal Crash.

Peterboro, Aug. 29 —A revised list of the dead who were victims of the store collapse tragedy here yesterday afternoon brings the total death list up to five. One or two who were put down as among the dead yesterday escaped safely, but other bodies have been found that keeps the total from being unchanged. With no more warning than a few ominous cracks that were immediately followed by a rending of timbers and a crashing of bricks and mortar, a big section of the largest departmental store in Peterboro collapsed.

Miss Dorothy Verena Sisson, aged 25, 287 Park street, Peterboro, sales-lady in store.

Miss Lily A. Boddison, aged 23, 274 William street, Peterboro, sales-lady in store.

Mrs. Elizabeth Brown, widow, aged about 40, 264 Hunter street. Peterboro, customer.

Mrs. John Kelly, aged about 50, wife of John Kelly, farmer near Norwood.

Alfred Cuff, aged 35, bricklayer, married, Braidwood avenue, Peterboro.

Miss J. A. Findlay of Norwood, back and legs seriously injured, still in critical condition; Henry J. Manley, carpenter, 175 Edinburgh street, Peterboro, both legs broken and badly bruised and shaken up, critical; Mrs. Sidney Middleton of Smith, badly bruised and suffering from shock; Mrs. Agnes Tucker, formerly of Norwood, sales-lady in store, head and face badly bruised and cut.

George Shearer, carpenter, Edward Shrimpton, carpenter and George Curtis, bricklayer, were slightly injured but are able to be around.

The store which is the millinery and drygoods establishment of J. C. Turnbull & Company was being altered and extended. The adjoining store formerly occupied by Barry & Company, Ltd., was being made part of the Turnbull store. The dividing brick wall had been torn down on the inside and steel girders and pillars had been erected. Mr. John Belcher was the architect of the alterations and Alderman Wm. Johnston of Peterboro. was the contractor.

All those who were killed were working either on the first storey or the third, the roof of which was open to the sky. Over and over again wonder has been expressed that with upwards of fifty people in the store including customers and employees the list of dead and injured was not much longer than it is.

Mrs. Geo. Tacheur was on the ground floor with her baby and baby carriage. On the first sound she seized the baby and escaped out of the front door just in time. The baby carriage is still in the ruins.

During the whole day upwards of one hundred people worked in the ruins, first rescuing the living and later removing the bodies of the dead. Even after the last body, that of Miss Sissen, had been uncovered. the working party did not cease for it was feared that there might be others. By eight o'clock last night it was learned that several whom it was feared had been killed were safe, and then only work ceased.

The theory advanced as to the cause of the accident is that the steel supports and girders had not been placed in the right position and that the outer wall on the corner buckled. It was a very old building, having been erected in 1862. It was owned by the Toronto Loan and Savings Company.

Hydro-Electric's Surplus.

London, Ont., Sept. 3.—The Hydro-Electric department will show a surplus of $40,000 by the end of November, the close of the fiscal year. For the first half it was $20,000, and the last part of the year has seen a great increase of business. The consumers now number nearly six thousand, and the amount of power sold is nearly 6,000 horsepower.

As a result of this sulprus power rates will be reduced next year. It is the intention of the commissioners to supply energy at a price as near cast as it can be furnished. "I am confident that we will have a sulprus of forty thousand dollars," said Chairman Pocock.

Local and District News.

Mr. T. Labre has moved into his residence on Albert street.

Mr. F. H. Dillon has moved his family to town, and rented a residence on Mill street.

The soil of Ceylon is of volcanic origin, containing phosphorus and minerals in a large degree. This imparts to "Salada" (the well-known packet Ceylon Tea), a delicacy and fragrance that is incomparable.

Three prisoners in the Clinton county jail at Plattsburg sawed their way to liberty on Monday and made a clear getaway. One of those who escaped was Ezra Montana, a federal prisoner, charged with violating the immigration law by bringing a woman from Canada for immoral purposes.

Whitteker, the Optician, will be at Chesterville on Tuesday, Sept. 16th; Russell, Thursday, Sept. 18th; Finch, Friday, Sept. 19th.

Elected for 77th Time.

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 1.—At the closing session of the sixteenth general convention of the Catholic Mutual Benefit Association of Canada Hon. M. F. Hackett, K.C., of Stanstead, Que., was re-elected as president for the seventh successive time.

As soon as the last ballot was taken the convention was declared closed and the members left for their homes in widely separated parts of the Dominion.

As a mark of confidence in the present administration the convention re-elected to office for the next three years the entire grand council of the association.

The election of officers resulted as follows: Spiritual Adviser, Most Rev. C. H. Gauthier, Archbishop of Ottawa, Ont.; Chancellor O. K. Fraser, Brockville, Ont; President, Hon. F. M. Hackett, K.C., Stanstead, Que., First Vice-pres. Hon. A. D. Richard, Dorchester, N. B.; 2nd Vice pres. Barnard O'Connell, Dublin, Ont.; Secretary, J. J. Beehan, Kingston; Treasurer, W. J. McKee, Windsor, Ont.; Marshall, J. J. Costigan, Montreal; Guard, J. J. Weinert, Neustadt, Ont.; Committee on laws, John A. Murphy, Cayuga, Ont.; Frank J. Curran, Montreal; J. E. Faribault, L'Assompton; Supervising Medical Examiner, Edward Ryan, M.D., Kingston; Solicitor, Geo. Lynch Staunton, K. C,, Hamilton; Assistant Sec'y, J. E. H. Howison, Kingston; Auditors, P.C. Shannon, Montreal; Geo. Edwards, Toronto.

All the above were re-elected, the only contest being for that of the board of trustees. This resulted as follows: Hon. John Morrisey, Newcastle, N.B.; J. W. Mailon, K. C., Toronto; Sir Alex. Germain, Montreal; J. T. Hallisey, Truro, N. S. and the Rev. Father Fisher, London, Ont.

The Grand President, Hon. M. F. Hackett, announced that he had received an intimation from the government insurance department that the rates would have to be increased, and Geo. S. Lynch Staunton, K.C., explained the situation to the delegates.

There was some opposition to the proposed increase but in the end a resolution was passed giving the trustees the power to increase the rates from time to time provided that the increases did not come into effect until Jan. 1, 1916. Trustees were also empowered to secure any nec essary legislation and to employ the best actuarial advice.

Acting on the recommendation of one of the French-speaking delegates it was resolved to respect the rights of the French language in the conventions in the branch meetings and in the Catholic schools. A large part of the deliberations of the congress were carried on in the French tongue.

The next convention will be held in Quebec in 1916.

Escaped From Window With His Bride.

Cobalt, Ont., Sept. 3.—Fire last night gutted an old frame building in which several people were living at the rear of J. B. Miner's lodging house on Argentine street, and in the debris the remains of Thomas Cooley, a mill hand, and Rectave Forget, a lumberman, 62 years of age, were found.

A miner named Quigley, who is employed at the O'Brien mine, was badly burned about the arms and body. A Finlander is dying in the mine's hospital from burns, and Frederick Roy, a young Frenchman and his bride of but two months, had a thrilling escape from death. Taking his wife in his arms he kicked through a pane of glass with his bare feet and jumped with her in his arms from a balcony to the ground, 12 feet below. Both escaped uninjured.

Geo. A. Kiltz, brakesman, of Palmerston, was run over and killed in the Galt yards.
