SERVICE STATION IS ROBBED

Thief Enters Premises of Orton Deeks and Robbs Cash Drawer

Mr. Orton Deeks, who keeps a service station just south of the C.P.R. had his till robbed yesterday afternoon about 1.30 or 2 o'clock of between $17 and $18. There is a strong suspicion as to the thief and the circumstances connected with the disappearance of the money would indicate that the authorities are on the right track. The money was taken when Mrs. Deeks left the station to go into the house to get some change, and when she came back the customer who got his change disappeared very rapidly, almost as rapidly as Mrs. Deeks discovered her loss. Constable Helmer and Provincial Officer Rose are working on the case and hope soon to make an arrest.

WHAT NEXT ?

Some people will bet on anything. In a United States city, a snake crawled through a drain pipe and upon coming out the one end, became tangled in a spider's web. For 24 days the snake, a small garden variety, has been lashing about in an endeavor to extricate itself. The spider is equally determined to hold the intruder and casually but systematically proceeds to lay fresh meshes of web about the reptile, and repair broken strans. The inhabitants are coming in large numbers to witness the battle and even the Mayor has a side bet laid that the spider will eventually kill the snake.

Police Court News

A motorist from London, Ontario, was found guilty by Magistrate John McCormick, on a charge of reckless driving on Highway No. 2, and paid a fine of $10 and costs.

Two residents of Mountain Township appeared this week, charged with operating their motor vehicles without first having them registered. They were convicted and fined $10 and costs.

A Chesterville motorist contributed $10 and costs for operating his car with four persons in the front seat.

Mr. Geo. Kranchuk, of Cornwall, appeared before Magistrate McCormick recently, charged with doing business as a transient trader in the village of Williamsburg. He was convicted and fined $100, which is the amount of the license necessary, as well as the regular fine of $10 and costs.

WINCHESTER'S "WHO IS WHO"

WHO IS SHE?

Did you make the right guess as to who the handsome young couple shown in the picture are. Some guessed right but could not be positive, others had no idea. Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Casselman do not today look like that young couple, yet there is something about the picture that reminds you of them. Alf. with the flowing moustache, the "boiled shirt" and corner tipped collar, and Mrs. Casselman, also with hair and neck dressed so typical of the times—were a good many years gone by. Both are still enjoying good health. Who is the coy maiden whose picture is shown this week and who is a resident of Winchester.

Young Peoples' Societies Meet In Winchester

Presbyteries Of Eastern Ontario Represented. Cardinal Wins Soft Ball Championship, While Winchester Carries Off The Honors In Dramatic Contest.

Winchester was the scene of a very lively gathering on Saturday last, when over three hundred people attended the annual field day of the Eastern Ontario Presbyteries of the United Church, held on the Public School grounds. Grenville, Dundas, Ottawa and Stormont Young People's Societies were all well represented. The crowd began to gather about 1.30 p.m. and at 2 o'clock the sports program was well under way. It opened with a soft ball contest between Van Camp and Cardinal to decide the champions of the Grenville-Dundas districts. A good deal of enthusiasm was shown at this contest with both teams ably backed by many cheering supporters. It was a close battle from start to finish, but Cardinal team had necessary punch left to nose out in front in the seventh inning to win the game 10-9.

In the semi-finals for the championship of the district Parkdale United Church team met the Finch United team. The Ottawa team was a smooth working nine, but the Finch team was a hard nut to crack. For fine innings both teams were on even terms but in the sixth and seventh Parkdale went out into the lead and the game ended 14-7.

The final between Cardinal and Parkdale will be long remembered by those attending, for it was a battle royal. Both teams played air-tight ball and the crowd was in an uproar most of the time. At the end of the sixth the score stood 5-5 and a tension settled over both teams. Cardinal came in to bat and after a stiff bit of batting, they pushed a run across the plate. Parkdale settled down to even it up again but try as they might, the Cardinal team rose to the occasion and although the Parkdale team had two men on bases, they could not squeeze over a run. The game ended 6-5 for the Cardinal team, and the River town grabbed the championship. The line-ups for all teams were as follows :

Van Camp — V. Marcell, R. Marcell, Williams, Guy, McRoberts, Williams, Richardson, Lang, Render.

Finch—McLeod, Swerdfeger, Miss E. Nephew, O. Higgs, C. Droppo, Miss A. McIntosh, C. Jack, W. McLeod, Miss Jean Ouderkirk.

Cardinal — Short, Thompson, St. Louis, Runinng, Lampson, Steinberg, Keeler, Gamble, Armstrong, relief pitcher, Comstock.

Parkdale United — Campbell, Baker, Miss M. Langdon, D. Forward, Miss L. Forward, A. Percival, L. Dunn, Miss M. Patterson, D. McLeod.

In the evening the dramatic contest took place the three winners of the semi-finals being entered for the championship, Winchester, Avonmore and Ottawa First United Churches the competitors. This was a very enjoyable affair and all the actors took their parts exceptionally well. After hearing the three one-act plays, the judges retired to make their decision. While waiting for the outcome Rev. Forsythe, of Montreal, the travelling secretary, gave a brief address on "winning and made the announcement that Winchester United had won the contest with their play entitled "Help Yourself" with the cast as follows: Mac Singleton, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Duncan, Mrs. J. Crawfort and Mr. Will. Rowat. It was under the direction of Mrs. W. J. Cass. This was followed by the presentation of the cups to the champions, Cardinal and Winchester, it being done by Rev. Norman Coll, of Ottawa, who congratulated the winners and registered much enthusiasm over the success of the day's sports. The officers for the coming year were then elected, Merve Peters, of Spencerville, becoming president for the Eastern Presbyteries.

JUST RUMOURS

There are so many rumors, national and international, foreign and domestic that one becomes confused and distracted in trying to get at the truth of events. First of all the rumored loss of the Hutchinson family, who were flying from America to Europe by way of Greenland. There were father, mother, two little children and four of a crew and they were reported all lost off the coast of Greenland. They have since been rescued by a British boat, but their plane is wrecked. Then on Tuesday two men and a woman left the U.S. for Rome, Italy. and while they were reported yesterday, this morning they have been lost sight off, and some anxiety is felt for their safety. Then there is the report that Stalin, dictator of Soviet Russia is deposed, and the country in a very bad shape. That rumor is also denied, but anything is liable to happen in Russia. In the U. S. there are many rumors of trouble and impending trouble. On Monday a mob in Toledo, Ohio, broke into a big grocery store and cleaned it out. In many cities the unemployed are showing signs of becoming unruly and even desperate, and there is no telling what present unrest and unemployment may lead to in that country.

In Canada things are fairly peaceful, Parliament has been called to meet on October 6, but the session will be short, simply to ratify the report of the Economic Conference, and then adjourn till November. Business is reported as picking up in the West and a better feeling prevails throughout the Dominion. There is considerable agitation in Ontario over some reference by Premier Henry allowing hotels to serve beer and wine at their dining tables, but it is better not to speculate too much on such rumors because there is not a better temperance man in Ontario than Premier Henry, and his Cabinet are not of the "Wet" variety.

In British Columbia the Union Government proposition is not being well received, and it looks as though Premier Tolmie has offended both his supporters and his opponents by his proposition. Time will tell.

In Manitoba a thorough investigation has been ordered with the big million dollar steal from the University and church funds by John A. Machray, K.C., who is now in jail. The Manitoba University will lose a

STORM CAUSES MUCH DAMAGE

Property Destroyed In Sections North of Winchester During Electric Storms Yesterday.

Accompanied by occasional heavy rainfalls, two electrical storms swept over the district to the north of Winchester yesterday afternoon and last evening causing considerable damage to buildings and property. At Russell the barn of James Adams was burned to the ground when struck by lightning and at Kars the outbuildings on the farm of E. Fennell were destroyed. Much damage was caused in the this district by hail.

In the second storm which swept over about 7 p.m., heavy loss occurred in Russell, when lightning struck the large barn of Jas. Adams on the outskirts of Russell village and set it on fire, damage estimated at over $8,000 resulted, and for a time the Presbyterian Church and several adjoining buildings were threatened. A high wind carried burning embers from the barn to the roof of the church, but a bucket brigade was formed and kept the brands from setting fire to it.

The barn was of modern construction according to government specifications, and was completely equipped with steel cattle pens and a separate water system. It was also electrically lighted. The entire crop, as well as several swine, a number of chickens and a large quantity of machinery were also destroyed. Some insurance was carried, Mr. Adams stated. Two large chemical engines and a pumper purchased from the city of Ottawa several years ago were called into service to keep the flames from spreading to the church and to extinguish the burning embers that were carried to the church roof by the high wind from the flaming barn. Only slight damage was caused to the church.

At Kars the lightning struck the large barn of Ephraim Fennell and totally destroyed it and the other outbuildings, but the house was saved. The owner was out in the field plowing at the time, and before he could return to the barn it was too far gone to allow him to save several hogs that were inside. His entire crop of grain and a considerable quantity of farm machinery were also destroyed. The loss is estimated at $3,000 covered by insurance.

The late Mrs. Riddell was a well-known resident of Kemptville and since coming here several years ago had made many friends by her cheerful disposition and helping ways. She was born at Bromley, Ont. Her husband predeceased her only last year.

Surviving are four sons, Robert, Kenneth and Harry Riddell, Cornwall; Ross Riddell, Kemptville; one daughter, Mrs. Roswell Cooke, New York City; four sisters and six brothers. The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

AIN'T IT FINE

Sure, this world is full of trouble—
I ain't said it ain't.
My! I've had enough an' double
Reason for complaint.
Rain an' storm have come to fret me
Skies were often grey;
Thorns an' brambles have beset me
On the road—but, say,
Ain't it fine to-day!

What's the use of always weepin',
Makin' trouble last?
Whats' the use of always weepin',
Thinkin' of the past?
Each must have his tribulation,
"Water" with his "wine,"
Life, it ain't a celebration,
Trouble? I've had mine—
But to-day is fine!

It's to-day that I am livin',,
Not a month ago;
Havin', losin', takin', givin',
As time wills it so.
Yesterday a cloud of sorrow
Fell across the way;
It may rain again to-morrow,
It may rain—but say:
Ain't it fine to-day!

HAVE FAITH IN ONE ANOTHER

Have faith in one another
When you meet in friendship's name
For a true friend is a brother,
And his heart shall throb the same;
Though your paths in life may differ,
Since the hour when first you met,
Have faith in one another—
You may need that friendship yet.

Have faith in one another,
When ye whisper faith's fond vow;
It may not be always summer,
Nor always bright as now;
And when winter time comes o'er ye,
If some kindred heart ye share,
Have faith in one another,
And let honor be your guide,

Let the truth alone be spoken,
What ever may betide;
The false may reign a season,
And we doubt not but it will,
But have faith in one another,
And the truth will triumph still.

STARTING SCHOOL

God bless a little boy who goes to school,
His shiny Primer hugged against his breast,
With cheeks scrubbed clean and in his rounded eyes
A baby wonder of the strange, new quest!
September, take him gently. He is small,
Whose sturdy form must battle with the blow
Of morning. Make the red-gold leaves
A carpet where such little feet may go
In safety. Sun, shine tenderly upon
The forehead where his mother laid her kiss;
It was a consecration; see that books
May never rob her little son of this.
Birds, sing him softly; he has only known
A lullaby; and, little brook run clear
When he is watching; never let him know
A stagnant secret, he is young and dear.
Pray that he find within the strange four walls
And understanding heart, a mind grown wise
In the love of simple things, a hand that shields,
And laughter, laughter in the waiting eyes!
He was a baby yesterday. He lived
By just my simple rote and easy rule;
There—he is gone around the curve of road—
Oh! God bless little boys who go to school!

—Anne Sutherland

Have you ever stopped to wonder how it is so very queer
That when you're all discouraged, and the last hope is near,
That right then something happens
which you wanted all along,
Then the world begins to brighten and you sing another song.

Wise Cracks In Short Sentences—A Rural Man Who Knows Rural Sentiment

The Farm, Sept. 10, 1932.

Dear Mr. Editor :—

I don't know whether you have ever had much experience with Investigators or not, but if you have, you'll know as I do, since becoming one myself, that they can be helped or hindered in their pursuit of Information, just like ordinary folk. For instance a pat on the back is a whole lot more encouraging than a push in the face. Having had that help and assuming we've learned this and that from past efforts, I will now tell you what I've learned since I wrote you last.

You may remember, I said in concluding my last letter, that we weren't very well fixed now. True indeed, if we're only looking at things from a monetary standpoint; but if we add up all our other assets we'll find we're not so bad off after all. We've been thinking so much about money and the things money has done to us, we've still got spots in our line of vision. Then we're still subject to dizziness, the outcome of looking round too many corners to see when prosperity is coming back. We can cut that out, for when, and if prosperity does come back, we'll be able to see her coming down the highway, in lots of time to get the children out of the way of the rush.

Optimism is a mighty fine medicine for a jaundiced outloo, if we don't take too many doses and get so blamed optimistic, we kid ourselves that, after all Providence did take pity on the frog and send him a fly. We might just as well open up our eyes, get rid of these corkscrew minds we've acquired by thinking around the hard spots and realize, we haven't been pushed or even dragged, we're here because we came ourselves.

We havn't got much money left, but we've had a lot of experience and should have learned some lessons. History has taught us that through every era of our past civilization, we have achieved greatness by building on the simple things. Experience, sad experience has shown us that as soon as we turn away from these simple things we leave our greatness also. I believe the most of us have realized this, have stopped crying, and are beginning to build again, using the very ideas we discarded when we became prosperous.

Yes sir! we're actually anxious to work, because we've found out there isn't any such a thing as easy money. We've found, every single thing we get in this world or any other must be paid for in some kind of coin. Seems like we must have been foolish to forget a simple thing like that, when its one of the first laws of life. We're getting sociable too. Why we go over to the neighbors just to talk a while, our time isn't so valuable as it used to be, and you'l be surprised to know how much we're learning by exchanging ideas. Neighbor says he gusses he'll start going to church regular again, because he figures that one of the reasons why the church hasn't the influence it used to have, is because so many people stay at home. He may be right at that, so let's all go to church on Sunday and shock the minister. We can play ball or go joy riding some other day.

Sure! we've taken to playing ball, since we can't go touring to some resort, or to the city to our clubs, and finding that its doing us a mighty lot of good too. Young people are having the time of their lives teaching the old ones how to play softball, and we old ones are doing our best to justify the tall stories we've told the kids about how we used to play. Sons are beginning to find out dad is a pretty good sport and can think about something besides work and money. Then after the ball game we sort of get into a huddle and just talk about the times. Someone may say. I see by the Press so and so has sugar for such and such a price, or someone else might remark, the Press seems to be getting better than it usd to be. Maybe it is. I guess though, its just keeping up with the times and giving the same faithful service, while we are only coming back to the stage where we appreciate the fact, that those who know us best, whose interests are linked most closely with ours, are best qualified to advise and less likely to deceive us. Then we're just wondering whether too much City Editorial opinion has been good for us, When we see on some Editorial pages expressions such as, "The Intellectual Limitations of the Villagers," "Curiosity such as shown on a rural line," we wonder do they really mean the nice things they some times say about us.

When we're ill now, we remember the case of the man who went to the city to a specialist, was operated on, improved, then got worse and finally died. The specialist then decided he'd like to hold a post mortem, and as we haven't been able to find out whether he wished to discover the reason for death, or the reason for the operation, we're going to the old family doctor for advice, after this, before we let any surgeon cut holes in our diaphragms, Anyhow, operations are not talked about, in the best circles, since we've contracted these "frozen assets."

We've cut our overhead and underfoot, and tightened up our belts as those capitalists have told us to do, but we still have to buy a lot of stuff, and we're buying more and more from our own merchants, in hopes that some of our money will come home again. We think these merchants, should also buy from us, tell us what they require in the line of garden or farm produce and not get it from the city or wholesale houses. We believe there's room for closer co-operation along these lines and the local paper is a mighty good medium to advertise such intentions.

We're also beginning to realize that we're responsible for our politicans and if they are to represent our views in Parliament, some of them should get in closer touch with their constituents, so they'll know what those views are. Someone told me, he thought it no more than right,, that any member should, between sessions, let us know to what ends he had been devoting his time, while conducting the business of the public.

You can see Mr. Editor that we're getting back to simple things, and simple food too. Doesn't cost so much either except some work in the garden and the trouble of killing a hog once in a while. Wish you'd drop in some day to help us eat our way through some of this simple fare, salt pork too, believe it would cure that Hay Fever, and once you've surrounded one of our home grown dinners you'll forget all about vitamins.

Writing about eating is my favorite pastime, but it reminds me, there are many people who are not fortunate as we are and who actually, haven't enough to eat. That doesn't seem right does it? Far as I can figure out, there'll be enough eatables wasted in this country to feed these people. Why doesn't some nationwide organization take on the job of saving this waste in preparation for this winter. We put in whole cellars full for oruselves. Why not some for those less fortunate? Governmental relief has always proved to be expensive, unsatisfactory and choatic. If the common people don't take hold of this problem we're faced with more borrowing, more debt, more taxes, and less buying power. The Premier of this Dominion said, a few days ago, that, "serious evidences of what he might call duplication and excessive prices," had been discovered in the manipulation of last year's relief money. Mere words fail to express our feelings when we realize that we have in Canada, men who have dug down so low, that they cheat hungry children; and when we think of it we must admit, the snake in the Garden of Eden was only a piker. Here's what we folks think should be done with relief money. It's evident, all that money, millions of it, is too great a temptation to be handled between any Governments. Let us advice that it be divorced entirely from such leaky channels.

We have still in Canada, one of the finest organizations ever built. Founded on service to mankind, in times of stress, it served its purpose by looking after the welfare of hundreds of thousands of soldiers, without fuss or flurry. Quiet now, it only awaits the call to duty, to become once more the most vital agency for administering to the needy. Whom are better equipped, by every day experience than the wives and daughters of this country, to cope with this business of feeding the hungry? Politicians and party men, may be all right to make laws or speeches, but they make mighty poor housewives Take the blank cheque away from the Government and let the women do the job right. Let us give this most important problem to the Red Cross or the Women's Institute, and don't tie any strings to it. They can do it, and we won't need any commsision to find out where the money went. We believe that this organization could feed our hungry people on what is wasted or will be unless something is done. Think of the tons of tomates, that could be canned which will rot on the vines, cabbage, potatoes, beans, so on and so forth, waiting for some one to say give me, I know what to do with them. Think of the waste in cities, soup bones, trimmings of meat, bread a few days old, routed to the dump.

Undoubtedly, to carry out such a plan of relief means work without pay, but many of us need to give to be happy, while others graciously receive. If we could help discouraged people to regain their faith in themselves, we would benefit the most.

So, Mr. Editor in concluding this third report, I would say that I find some signs of improvement in conditions, some upward curves, as it were, not charts, but on the faces of the people.

Your obedient servant,
JUST ME

Lamb Hash and Peas

Monday is usually a busy day, and while the Monday dinner should be just as appetizing, it is wise to make that particular meal an easy one to prepare.

If the Sunday roast has been lamb, trim the fat from the meat and discard, put through the food grinder and add a half of green pepper finely ground or chopped, a few drops of onion juice (if the family like the taste of onion), and mix and soften with left-over gravy, or stock. If one has no stock, a beef extract cube dissolved in a cupful of hot water will answer the purpose.

After mixing the meat, green pepper and onion juice and seasoning, heat the mixture until very hot, sprinkle a little flour over the dish, and stir well, reheat, and serve on toast and add peas as a vegetable.

If your family likes boiled onions and your only reason for not serving them is that they make you "cry" when you peel them, try peeling them under cold running water. Turn the tap on slowly and hold the onion under the water as you peel.

Velvet, said to be quite the vogue for winter, may be made like new when wrinkled by placing the garment carefully on a hanger, suspend over the bath tub, turn on the hot water and allow the steam to remove the wrinkles.

To save innumerable steps, purchase a "service wagon". These wagons may be had with two or three shelves, and may be rolled from kitchen to dining room or pantry filled with dishes, either clean or soiled. After the meat course is on the table, the salad or dessert may be served from the service wagon, and the soiled dishes placed on the empty shelves, saving trips to the kitchen and back.

Strips of bacon placed on the breast of a fowl when roasting give a delightful flavor.

I have found it most satisfactory to add a small pinch of salt to egg whites before beginning to beat them, as they seem to beat more quickly, and keep a "shape" more readily.

Many cooks always line cake pans. Try using the heavy sort of commercial waxed paper cut to fit the bottom of the pans only. Grease the pans well first, sides and bottom, then place the paper in the bottom.

WARNINGS AGAINST

I heard a blithering charlatan the other night, hawking a well-known nostrum, and for every imaginable, trumped-up reason, urging the simple listener to buy it. You have heard this ballyhoo many times, delivered in a solemn, almost ministerial voice. I imagine they sell millions of bottles of the stuff—nothing certain about it but the pay for it.

This nostrum, you are assured, is good for everything from snake bite to gangrene! It was being exploited as a cure for ivy poisoning, common at this season. Somebody in despair had "swabbed the infected area—it acted like magic." The exploiting dramatist said the victim had accidentally touched "poison oak." That name is as ancient as the nostrum racket. Poison oak indeed!

Absolute ignorance was shown in the reference to "the infected" area. Ivy poisoning is not an "infection." No more than a burn by fire is an infection. It is simply an intense acid irritation—no infection-germs involved in the process. I have an idea that ivy acid would destroy many infecting micro-organisms. There is no "infected area" in rhus poisoning.

Carbolic acid is one of the deadliest poisons on earth; it needs no "germs" to aid it in killing folks.

The commercialized huckster that tells you his stuff will make wholesale slaughter of "germs" in so many seconds—is good to be wary of; he probably never saw a germ in his life; he is simply out to do a million dollars worth of business, and, you pay the freight, dear reader. Ask your family physician, who has been trained by the best methods known.

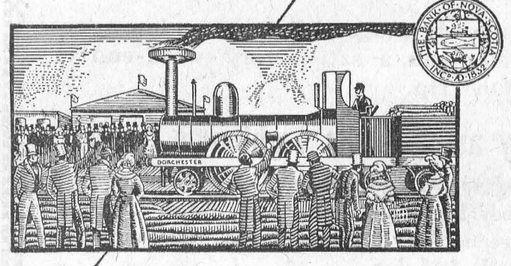
THE LEADING FIRM IN THE BULB-INDUSTRY

1832-1932

This advertisement is one of a series commemorating the hundredth anniversary of The Bank of Nova Scotia

In 1836, four years after the establishment of The Bank of Nova Scotia in Halifax, N.S., the first steam train ran in Canada.



When Trains were still Dreams of the Future

Today transportation facilities of all kinds have developed to an extent far beyond the dreams of the promoters of the first steam railroad. The facilities of The Bank of Nova Scotia have developed correspondingly. A small local bank one hundred years ago it now serves industry and enterprise with a Coast to Coast system of Branches in Canada, world-wide old established banking connections and ample resources to meet the needs of modern business.

PRINCIPLES IN 1932 WORLD'S SERIES

Here are four of the outstanding players in this year's series for the baseball supremacy of the world, which will be battled for by the New York Yankees and the Chicago Cubs of the National League. ABOVE is Charlie Grimm, manager of the Cubs, and Joe McCarthy, manager of the Yankees. BELOW (left) Babe Ruth, home-run slugger of the Yanks, who will undoubtedly be the outstanding player of the series. It will be his tenth world's series. RIGHT is Vernon Gomez, sensational young pitcher with the Yanks, who will probably get the pitching assignment in the first game. It is expected that this year's series will create a new attendance record.

IN LITTLE OLD NEW YORK

by CARL H. GETZ

There is a shop in New York which maintains what is known as a perfume bar where scents are mixed to meet individual desire. Bottles of perfume are sold with the name of the owner on the label and a number. The contents are kept secret.

Some New York apartment house residents have windows looking out upon unpleasant surroundings. So they have pretty pictures painted on the windows.

In New York if you hunt long enough you can find a store which will sell you a pair of high stilts and a suit of clothes to go with it. The combination is usually used for advertising purposes.

A New York department store serves afternoon tea free to its customers.

There are more men and women in New York who make a living by writing than in an other city in the world.

When a certain New York radio star—a woman singer—appeared at a local vaudeville house for a week's appearance, she received $7,500 for seven days' work.

Lowell Thomas, author, world-traveler and radio lecturer, has a 15 room apartment in New York and 200-acre farm at Pawling, seventy miles from New York. Thomas is an expert badminton player and built a gymnasium on his farm for that game exclusively.

When a certain advertising agency in New York wanted to equip a dining room in its skyscraper quarters, it bought a hundred-year old New England farm house and transported the dining room and kitchen to the city, fireplace and all.

There is an executive in New York who has a buzzer under his desk which he can reach with his foot and by touching it can make one of the telephones on his desk ring. The bell rings and he says: "It's important. I'll see him right away." The visitor leaves. That, of course, is the purpose of it all.

BRUCE BARTON

...writes of "THE MASTER EXECUTIVE"

Supplying a week-to-week inspiration for the heavy-burdened who will find every human trial paralleled in the experiences of "The Man Nobody Knows."

A LEADER OF MEN

In any crowd and under any circumstances the leader stands out. By the power of his faith in himself he commands, and men instinctively obey.

Bruce Barton

This blazing conviction was the first and greatest element in the success of Jesus. The second was his wonderful power to pick men, and to recognize hidden capacities in them. It must have amazed Nicodemus when he learned the names of the twelve whom the young teacher had chosen to be his associates. What a list! Not a single well-known person on it. Nobody who had ever made a success of anything. A haphazard collection of fishermen and smalltown business men and one tax collector—a member of the most hated element in the community. What a crowd!

Nowhere is there such a startling example of executive success as the way in which that organization was brought together. Take the tax collector, Matthew, as the most striking instance. His occupation carried a heavy weight of social ostracism, but it was profitable. He was probably well-to-do according to the simple standards of the neighborhood; certainly he was a busy man and not subject to impulsive action. His addition to the group of disciples is told in a single sentence:

"And as Jesus passed by, he called Matthew."

Amazing. No argument; no pleading. A smaller leader would have been compelled to set up the advantages of the opportunity. "Of course you are doing well where you are and making money," he might have said. "I can't offer you as much as you are getting; in fact you may have some difficulty in making ends meet. But I think we are going to have an interesting time and shall probably accomplish a big work." Such a conversation would have been met with Matthew's reply that he would "have to think it over," and the world would never have heard his name.

Jesus had the born leader's gift for seeing powers in men of which they themselves were often almost unconscious. One day as he was coming into a certain town a tremendous crowd pressed around him. There was a rich man named Zacchæus in town; small in stature, but with such keen business ability that he had got himself generally disliked. Being curious to see the distinguished visitor he had climbed up into a tree. Imagine his surprise when Jesus stopped under the tree and commanded him to come down saying, "To-day I intend to eat at your house."

The crowd was stunned. Some of the bolder spirits took it upon themselves to tell Jesus of his social blunder. He couldn't afford to make the mistake of visiting Zacchæus, they said. Their protests were without avail. They saw in Zacchæus merely a dishonest Jew; Jesus saw in him a man of unusual generosity and a fine sense of justice, who needed only to have those qualities revealed by some one who understood.

So with Matthew—the crowd saw only a despised tax-gatherer. Jesus saw the potential writer of a book which will live forever.

HISTORY OF THE INKERMAN UNITED CHURCH

In observing the Golden Jubilee, the Inkerman United Church is looking back its history. We of that church find it fitting to honour the memory of the founders of Methodism who came among the U. E. Loyalists to the banks of the St. Lawrence in the last quarter of the 18th century. We recall the names of the Hecks whose tomb may be seen near the little Blue Church near Prescott. The name of the first minister of the Methodist Church in this part of Canada was Wm. Losee, who was sent by the New York Conference as a missionary to Canada in the year 1778. The first circuit was called Oswegetchie and it extended from Cornwall to Kingston. We can catch glimpses of the splendid spirit of these early preachers as they hunted for the hidden gold of human personality. We can imagine too, something of the hardships of these "saddle bag" ministers as they covered the almost impossible trails through the forests. Joseph Sawyer who arrived in 1800 is another name that stands out in the heroic record. It seems that Methodist ministers had no legal right to preform the ceremony of marriage at this time for this man was sentenced to banishment for this offence. His pardon was secured, however, by John Rose, who rode from his home at Dixon's Corners to Toronto on horseback to carry a petition. In 1795 the Matilda Circuit was formed while yet worship was conducted only in private homes, barns, and school houses. The first church was built on Point Irouqois, where some quarter of a century later, a camp meeting was conducted by Wm. H. Wiliams that was remembered vividly for over fifty years.

The Matilda circuit lost the Morrisburg section in 1857, and in 1864 it lost the North part of Dundas by the formation of the South Mountain charge. In the books of this charge we have in the first entry the date August 20th, 1864. Those presont were the Rev. H. M. McLean and, "Br. Wm. Camp, Br. Grant, Br. Robertson, Br. Shaver, Br. Ira Shaver, Br. John Van Richardson, Br. Knapp, Br. R. Van Camp, and Br. E. Van Camp." The first motion was an appeal "to the Contingent Fund for the sum of $25 to aid meeting the expenses of the Circuit." The second minute in the appointment of stewards which include the names of Pater Suffel, Wm. Marshel, R. Shaver and Simon Johnston. The third minute concerns the minister's salary which beside the salary itself included the items $12 for moving expenses; $10 for travelling expenses; and $103 for the support of the minister's children. Towards this amount for the first quarter of the year, the following men had collected from the classes over which they were the spiritual guides: Wm. Shaver $9.75; Ira Shaver $2.00; Knapp $2.50; A. Grant $5.25; Robertson $16.10, Jno Van Camp $14.50; and R. Van Camp $4.00. At this time the minister was called the Superintendant of the circuit and he had as his assistants local preachers, and exorters.

In 1878 the appointments on this charge were Heckston, South Mountain,, Van Camp, Inkerman North Mountain, Orange Hall, Hallville and Oxford. As was natural the union of the Methodist churches caused considerable discussion at the Official Board meetings. In 1883 we find the minute that Rev. Wm. Philip read the Basis of Union, that Mr. Andrew Rose moved its acceptance, and that the motion was carried with 20 in favour and 3 against. In the same year Heckston section became a separate charge, South Mountain keeping the minister, Rev. John Stewart, who was the superintendant at the time. The present Inkerman charge came into being with the Union in 1884. The Rev. A. C. Chambers was the first minister and Mr. C. Durant the first secretary of the Board. The following is a very interesting minute of this date:—"Moved by Bro. Andrew Rose, seconded by Bro. Ruben Shaver and resolved that as a Quarterly Board we embrace the opportunity of recording our heartfelt gratitude to Almighty God for His manifest presence with us and the directing influence of His Holy Spirit in this our first meeting as a United brotherhood, and for the harmony and brotherly love which have prevailed during the discussion of the important questions which have come before us for consideration and adjustment as a New Circuit of "The Methodist Church."

The first church in Inkerman was built in 1855 of wood. Mrs. George Suffel carried eggs and butter on her arm as she walked the long miles to Iroquois and back to sell farm produce and to secure paint for this building. Again when money was not available for seats, a Suffel cow was sacrificed to the buyers to help in this good cause.

The church of which we are celebrating the Golden Jubilee is mentioned in a minute of the Board of trustees in 1879 under the ministery of Rev. W. Relance. The minister was to approach Mr. Wm. Higginson to see if he would sell a bit of land for a church site. We can imagine the pleasure of this good man and his Board when Mr. Higginson offered the land as a free will offering to the cause. Mr. A. Corrigan and Mr. C. Durant wanted the church to be of stone, while Mr. Peter Suffel and Mr. R. Suffel wanted it of brick, and since the latter was more easily secured the will of the latter gentlemen prevailed. The brick came from South Mountain from the bank of the Nation. Mr. G. E. Suffel remembers having drawn material with a team in the early spring and suffering a spill with his brick on the icy roads. Mr. Ed. Burleigh remembers many a hard day's work carrying materials up the ladders to the masons. A Christmas Tree in the year 1882 brought in $52 towards various expenses. The church cost $4200, but the full amount was not raised for some considerable time. Dr Carmen was present in 1887 to give counsel as to ways and means of securing the last $1,000. The bell weighing over 1,000 pounds was secured by special subscription to which all denominations contributed, and this bell besides ringing the call to worship through the 50 years has tolled at the death of any resident, Protestant or Catholic. In the year 1925, a basement was put under the church and other repairs effected. Mr. W. H. Armstrong gave the fine electric lighting in memory of his wife; Mrs. A Bowman, the Communion Table in memory of her husband, and Mrs. Jas. Keyes, the present pulpit Bible as a memorial of her husband.

On this jubilee occasion, letters of remembrance are being sent to all former members and adherents that can be traced. For the Sunday services on Sept. 25th, the Rev. F. S. Milliken, B.A., B.D., of the Stewarton United Church, Ottawa, is to be the guest speaker. He will give part of his message in the form of song. A large choir will lead the service of praise. At the reunion supper on Monday night former ministers will be present and letters read from friends too distant to attend.

WORLD'S CHAMPION

Pretty Maurine Hamann, 18, of Pomona, Cal., is world's champion farmerette, having won the title recently in a contest held in California. The title was awarded on her proficiency at milking, churning, hay raking, etc. So far as is known, no Canadian girls competed in the contest.

HENRY'S SHORTHAND SCHOOL, OTTAWA.

No school in Canada offers a better training, or ensures a more successful future. Henry's leads all others, and ranks among employers as "THE SCHOOL OF HIGHER EFFICIENCY"—a fact borne out by more than 600 pupils who have, since January, 1913, left other Ottawa Schools to come to it.

Therefore, it is not surprising that business men, in advertising for stenographers should specially say: "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

UNION GOVERNMENT

The Premier of British Columbia, S. F. Tolmie, has come forward with a proposal to establish union government in that province. The scheme has received the hearty endorsement of Premier J. T. M. Anderson of Saskatchewan. The surprising thing is that something concrete has not been attempted in that line before this.

It is all well and good to talk of the "grand old party"; to stand firmly behind the ideals of our own particular group, and make bold statements concerning the glaring mistakes of the Government. At the same time we loudly lament the fact that the party in opposition is not in power. Such has been the idea behind politics ever since the establishment of the party system—but it fails dismally in cases of emergency. The reason is that during times of stress we realize that co-operation is all-essential; that there is no time to be spent in criticizing the efforts of those who are endeavouring to handle the situation that has arisen. The result is that we unite forces and eventually get somewhere.

In 1914 Canada was faced with an acute problem—War! Almost the first action of our political leaders was to join forces and form a United Government with one set of aims, and one task confronting that Government, the administration of Canadian affairs in the mos efficient manner possible, for the general good. The leaders of our country forgot for the time being, such terms as Conservative and Liberal. Their attention was directed to greater things, and during those days they learned to look for support and copoeration among the political groups, and they were not disappointed.

The destiny of England at the present time is being guided by a National Government, supported ably and enthusiastically, by all the leading statesmen of that country, and we might add, with a large measure of success.

The statesmen of Canada are faced with conditions similar to those of Great Britain, although on a smaller scale. If the leaders of the British Nation find that a Coalition Government serves the purpose more adequately during these days than the party system, and they apparently do; if Canada found by uniting forces in 1914 greater things were accomplished, which seems to be the case, then the proposal of Premier Tolmie of British Columbia is very much in order and should be adopted with speed and despatch by all the other provinces, to say nothing of the Federal Government. There is a whole lot of truth to be found in the old adage that—"A mule cannot pull when it kicks, or kick when it pulls—and neither can any of us."

THE INDIFFERENT STUDENT

The Collegiate Institute Board of Kitchener, Ont., has taken a step which might will be followed by other boards that are faced with a similar problem. The committee is empowered to exclude any student from the school who is a regular and persistent failure and who is merely putting in time."

In partically every school a certain number of these nuisances are to be found. They do not attend classes with the intention of concentrating on the subjects being taught, but rather, to see how much annoyance they can cause the teacher. They take the attention of diligent students from their work; they deliberaely sit and plan means of disrupting the class, and boldly check-mate the instructor when reprimanded. In due time, the report becomes circulated that certain teachers are poor disciplinarians, as their classes are usually in an uproar. The trouble may usually be traced to two or three smart Alexs who are not there to learn, but to create a disturbance.

The school board of Kitchener Collegiate has taken the proper move to terminate such proceedings, and it would be the proper thing if the local school board adopted the same method in some cases. The progress of the entire class should not be retarded for the sake of a few who will never pay attention in class.

GETTING DESPERATE

What might be called desperate salesmanship is being practiced especially in rural communities, this fall, and in some cases has led to unpleasantness. But these are desperate times, and the young men who go out with a determination to "put it over" as the modern way of expressing it is, feel that they must make good. Instead, in their anxiety and efforts to make good, they often make bad, and instead of selling their wares, or receiving orders, they are told to "Get out and stay out." Canvassers for all kinds of magazines, for daily papers, for other publications, are not only numerous, persistent, but to often impudent, and we doubt if any publication profits by sending out canvassers who are not first trained in how to approach a customer and in politeness. Just now salesmen and canvassers for almost everything under the sun are scouring the smaller towns and countryside, and in some instances, where they have only women to deal with, they become a great annoyance and nuisance. We do not know that anything can be done to alleviate the situation as these are "desperate" times, and one is inclined more to pity than to censure those who are compelled to undertake a kind of work they are so unfitted for. The best thing to do is to politely but firmly refuse to talk to those house-to-house canvassers.

EXAMINE THAT CHIMNEY

Let us all do our share towards keeping down fire loss this fall and winter. Each year defective chimneys, old stovepipes, and other neglected parts in the heating systems of homes, cause innumerable fires, particularly in the fall months. The vast majority of people, in the early fall, take it for granted that the furnace or stove in their home is in good shape and proceed to build a brisk fire. In some cases the sequel is sad indeed. There is a hurried call for the fire apparatus, and the newspapers conclude the article with, "The loss was partly covered by insurance."

Such fires may be attributed to absolute carelessness, for it takes but a few minutes to reassure oneself that the heating equipment of the home, is in such a condition that it can be used with safety. Old sections of stovepipe should be replaced by new ones, and loose bricks of the chimney re-set. Let there be no fires in this district from the above causes, now that cool nights and chilly winds are again with us.

The Harmsworth Trophy and the America Cup, seem doomed to remain in possession of the United States. The late Sir Thos. Lipton and Kay Don, however, remain the very finest type of sportsmen in the world, and have brought more admiration and glory to England than the winning of the Cup and Trophy.

According to the Orillia papers they had a hail storm up there last week that piled the hail in some places over a foot deep, and it remained on the ground for three days. Orillia does not seem so very far away, but such a storm in this section at this season would make one shiver.

THE JOHNSTONS IN IT

This story concerns mainly the Johnstons.

Mrs. J. R. Johnston, 67 Ross avenue, Ottawa, lost a trunk of clothing while motoring on the Renfrew-Arnprior highway recently. She reported it to Constable Wm. Johnston, of the Ontario Provincial Police at Ottawa, formerly of Cornwall. The trunk has been returned to its owner, having been found by J. Johnston, a farmer living on R.R. No. 5, Eganville.

What about paging John Hix for another Strange As It Seems item?

ASSISTANT UNDERGOES OPERATION

On Saturday morning, September 3, Miss Orlean Weegar, who has bent the limbs of thousands of Dr. Locke's patients at Williamsburg, became violently ill. Dr. Locke gave her immediate attention and her case was pronounced appendicitis. She was rushed to the General Hospital, Brockville, where a successful operation was performed. She made a splendid recovery and is doing well. Her thousands of friends will indeed regret she has been laid aside for a time, but will be pleased to learn that she is now on the high road to recovery.

UNITED CHURCH W. M. S.

The September meeting of the Winchester United Church Woman's Missionary Society was held in the Sunday school rooms with a good attendance. After the opening of the meeting by singing hymn "Speed away on your mission of light" the president read the scripture lesson taken from the 6th chapter of Galations. A season of prayer followed, Mrs. Earl, Mrs. Beach, Mrs. C. Annable and Mrs. Keyes taking part. The minutes were then read and approved and the various reports given.

Plans were discussed about the thank-offering meeting and the president requested the members to tythe themselves on the money handled from that date and to offer same as a thank offering at our W.M.S. thank-offering meeting to be held the first Sunday of October.

Mrs. George Earl announced that our sectional meeting this year was to be held at the White Church near Iroquois, Sept. 23rd, with a morning and afternoon session and urged all members to make a special effort to attend these sessions. The program show the names of many prominent ministers and speakers.

Mrs. Preston read an interesting article entitled "The Sunday Eggs." Mrs. Mills, the supply secretary reported having sent the mission bale, valued at $58.50 and read a letter that was received from the board of real appreciation and mention was made of the great supply of mitts that was packed in the bale.

Mrs. N. W. Beach and Mrs. M. Fennel, convenors of the program then took charge of the meeting. Hymn "God bless our native land" was sung. Mrs. Potter read the devotional leaflet, "God's World." A solo entitled, "Recessional" sung by Mrs. Cass was very much enjoyed. A study of Canadian Missions, character of the work in the home, land, was taken up in the following way: Mrs. Duncan, the community; Mrs. Fennel, Indian work; Mrs. E. Beach, Orientals; Mrs. Suffell, strangers' secretary in Canada, and Mrs. N. W. Beach, supply work.

Hymn "Jesus Shall Reign" was sung and the repeating of the Mizpah benediction brought this meeting to a close.

WILLIAMSBURG'S NEW HOTEL

The new hotel at Williamsburg is making fast headway. It is being built by an Ottawa man, and the Beach Mfg. Co. of Winchester, are supplying the material. There will be no basement, only a place for the heating outfit, and the building will be erected mostly on posts. It is to have every convenience of a modern hotel and will take care of as many patients of Dr. Locke as it can secure. It is being built west of the highway and will be of frame. In the meantime small cottages are being erected as by magic in all directions, and the crowds that come to seek relief from the now famous doctor Locke are increasing. A field has been set apart for parking cars, but the two streets of the village are literally lined with cars on either side.

NEIL McINTOSH

The district of Avonmore was shocked on Sunday morning to hear of the sudden death of Mr. Neil McIntosh. He took sick suddenly on Saturday evening and was quickly rushed to Cornwall hospital where he died shortly after admittance. He leaves to mourn his loss his aged mother at home, Janie and Vernora at home, Hughena and Jessie of Ottawa; Mrs. Chas Ketes of Cornwall; Mrs. J. McLennan, Avonmore; also two brothers, Angus, of Avonmore, and Duncan now living in the West.

BONES DISCOVERED

Bones found in the debris of a burned barn on the farm of John Ross, Tolmie's Corners, Roxborough Township recently, are being carefully examined by Dr. Frankish, medico-legal expert connected with the provincial police department at Toronto. He is endeavoring to acertain whether the charred bone fragments are those of a human being. The bits of charred bones were discovered when Ross and a farm hand were clearing away the wreckage of the fire. As they were certain that no animals were in the barn at the time of the fire, they notified the police at Cornwall, who have shipped the bones to Toronto for examination. It is thought that the bones might be those of a transient who sought a night's lodging in the barn and was trapped by the fire.

HAY FEVER CAUSES MURDER

A despatch from Milwaukee, Wis., of Sept. 12th tells the following:

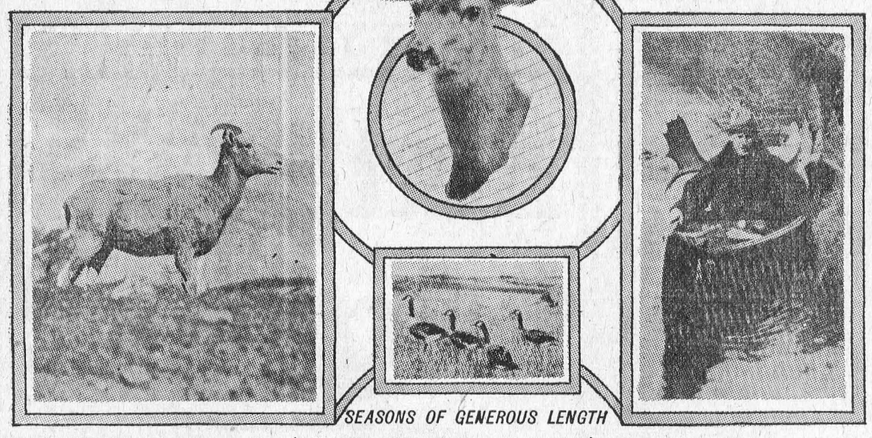
Because her two small sons suffered from hay fever, Mrs. Edwin A. Jones, 40, shot them to death and then killed herself at her home in suburban Whitefish Bay. The children were Edwin, jr., 10, and James, 8.

A note addressed to "Daddy" read in part:

"I hope you will understand this is the only solution of our problem with Sonny and Jimmy and don't feel badly about it. As you see, the treatment they have had is having less effect all the time and there doesn't seem to be anything else worth trying. You know how I wanted them and now that I know there is nothing but suffering and heartaches ahead of them, this is the only way I can square it."

HUNTING IN CANADA

WIDE VARIETY OF BIG AND SMALL GAME — HUNTING GROUNDS EASILY REACHED



SEASONS OF GENEROUS LENGTH

DURING recent years there has been an exceptional increase in the number of people of this country who enjoy the sport of hunting and many thousands go afield yearly, with rifle or shotgun. No other section of the world can offer to the sportsman the same favourable conditions as prevail in Canada with its immense areas of virgin territory within rapid and comfortable means of access.

Vast Hunting Areas

This country possesses over 1,000,000 square miles of forest, which shelters game animals ranging from the timid rabbit to the huge and dangerous grizzly bear. Moose, caribou, elk, deer, bighorn sheep, mountain goat, timber wolf and bear are plentiful and may be hunted during open seasons of generous length.

Wild Fowl Abundant

The numerous lakes and ponds of northern Canada are the breeding places of the main waterfowl population of the American continent, consequently ducks, geese and other waterfowl are plentiful, in normal years. The ruffled grouse or partridge is the most important upland bird and is common to every province, while woodcock, prairie chicken, Hungarian partridge and ptarmigan provide good sport, in certain districts.

Hunting Grounds Easy of Access

Accessibility is an outstanding feature of much of Canada's hunting territory. The country is well served by roads, railways and steamboat lines, over which the sportsman may travel in comfort, to the "going in" point. Areas previously inaccessible may also now be reached by airplane in a few hours' flight. Detraining or "going in" points are numerous throughout game areas and at these will be found reliable outfitters and qualified guides, who are prepared to look after the sportsman's every need and guidance while in the hunting territory. In several of the provinces it is compulsory for the hunter to be accompanied by a guide but, even in those provinces where it is not compulsory, it is often advisable to engage guides. These men, being familiar with the territory in which they operate, are able to add greatly to the enjoyment and success of the trip.

Conservation of Game

In Canada a practical form of conservation is found in the setting aside of tracts of public lands, as game reserves, and in the rigid protection of game in its extensive national and provincial parks. In these areas the game multiplies rapidly, under protection, and spreads over into the surrounding country. This favourable condition, coupled with sound protective legislation regulating the open seasons, bag limits, issuing of licences, etc., assures continuance of a supply of game animals and birds in their native habitat. Canada is thus able to offer the hunter exceptional opportunities for sport in season.

Hunting with Camera

To the camera-hunter and the student of wild life, the Canadian Provinces offer unusual opportunities for interesting experiences and records. There is no closed season on game, to the camera-hunter and, throughout the year, he will find favourable conditions to study the habits of game animals and birds and to photograph them in their natural surroundings.

Game Laws of the Provinces

The game laws of the different provinces are drafted by the provincial Governments with a view to meeting local conditions; consequently there is no uniform game law for the Dominion as a whole. As these game laws are subject to revision from year to year, persons contemplating a hunting trip are advised to obtain copies of the current game laws and regulations of the province in which they intend to hunt.

The National Development Bureau of the Department of the Interior at Ottawa will gladly supply information on hunting in Canada, by either complying with requests, or referring same to other sources from which the particulars desired may be obtained.

"The Sacred Eye"

By BRUCE E. BRIGGS

READ THIS FIRST:

Five young Chicago people, Ione Adams, Pilly Lightner, Tom Barry, Larry Holmes, and Jay Bruce, who tells the story, decided to go on a cruise to the South Seas, inspired by the finding of an old ship's log which describes a trading voyage by a Captain Whitney in the ship Western Wave in the year 1834. Captain Whitney was seeking pearls, especially one, a great black specimen, said to have been imbedded in the eye of the South Seas island god, Nu. Much of the log is in code. Ione, Larry and Jay give up their jobs on a Chicago newspaper. Tom marries Pilly and Jay weds Ione before the trip. Meanwhile a girl who introduces herself as Miss Whitney tries to obtain possession of the log. She takes the same ship with them toPapeete, Tahiti, and during the voyage Jay' cabin is ransacked by someone apparently in search of the log. At Papeete they discovered Miss Whitney is called Pauo, princess of a group of islands. She invites them to cruise the islands. They accept and go with her to Moatonga, her island home. It is there that Tom, who knows wireless code, makes friends with Utato, in charge of the island radio, and hears several interesting messages from a man named Livingston, who is said to be a friend of Pauo, inquiring about the log. Tom tells Pilly, Ione and Jay about Livingston's messages. They keep the news from Larry, who has become infatuated with the princess. Pauo takes them all to watch the native method of fishing. The next day while cruising about the island they all witness a battle between sharks and a mother whale. On their return Jay talks with an old native who warns him against visiting one of the nearby islands, Tarea, because of the ghosts.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 15

BARRY WAS SITTING on the porch as I came up the walk. He got up, followed me inside, and with a brief nod continued on to the room where the girls were working on the code copy. Closing the door he sat down and lit a cigaret.

"You are going to find the lock on your trunk smashed, my good man," he told me softly.

"Ten thousand imps, as well as my grandmother's black cat's ear! Would-not fool a country boy would you?"

"Bet dollars to doughnuts," Tom offered.

"Utato and the radio again?"

"Correct!"

"What did he send?"

"It was short and to the point. 'Log book not in trunk, but here on Moatonga somewhere. Will keep after it. We have to move carefully."

"What's the meaning of that 'we' there," I queried.

"Maybe Pauo. Maybe not. You know as much about it as I do."

"Did he get in through the bars on the window," Ione wanted to know.

"No," Tom said. "I was just out and looked at them."

"Looks like he got the key from Pauo," I said.

"I have an idea," I offered. "I'll get Pauo to open the store room on some pretext and watch her reaction."

"Let's get out in the living room before they come back," Pilly suggested.

"I could stand lemonade before lunch," I announced. "Volunteers? That makes it unanimous!" and I clapped my hands sharply to summon Paki the pretty little native house maid.

Just then Pauo and Larry came up the wide stone steps to the porch.

"We're just on the verge of drinking some lemonade before lunch," I told them. Paki departed to fill the orders.

"We are all invited up to the south village for an island dinner in honor of your arrival," Pauo informed us as we sat toying with the tall, cold glasses on the outside of which beads of moisture gathered. "Would you like to go?"

"I take it that's a rhetorical question," Tom said.

"I want to watch them cook," Pilly declared.

"Pilly is a culinary artist," I informed Pauo. "Many's the hour I have roosted in her kitchen watching her concoct new dishes."

"We'll have her get dinner here sometime," Pauo laughed.

With lunch and siesta over, I suggested a swim. The memory of the morning fight between the sharks and the whales seemed still fresh in mind for a hesitancy was marked.

"I came down here to get a coat of tan an inch thick, and I'm going to get it," I declared forcefully, heading for the room and bathing clothes. The others followed.

As we started for the village a little later, Holmes, I noticed, was sartorical perfection as usual. Being an "occasion" we were all more or less dressed. Even Tom, to whom clothes are a matter of vast indifference, had on fresh white drill The women were splashes of color in flaming prints.

This was the first time the rest of us had been to the village, and as we walked along we drank in the delicious perfume and feasted our eyes on the lush foliage.

The afternoon sunlight made intricate designs and studies in light and shadow on the warm, rich earth. Twisted limbs of gnarled old banion trees threw their branches fifty feet above us, while the varnished fronds of some of the taller palms towered to nearly twice that height. From the branches of smaller trees, hundreds of delicate orchids hung like jewels. Vines swung in garlands. Flowers of every hue spread a brilliant carpet.

"What about snakes?" I called to Pauo.

"Eden hasn't been invaded yet. There isn't a snake on any of these islands. They are not part of the natural fauna here."

So we came finally to the village with its score of thatched dwellings. Ling Fat's store, was the only frame building.

A native house is delightfully simple to construct. Are a newly mated couple in need of a dwelling? Then the village turns out and makes its building a holiday. A framework of stout poles is laced together with cocoanut fibre, and the uprights planted in the ground. All that remains before the couple move in is the tieing on of the thatch.

Life among the natives in Polynesia is probably the closest approach to perfect communism.

A picture we shall always remember is one which greeted our eyes as we looked down the clearing toward the beach, where the fifty or sixty adults were gathered. Girls in flaming pareus, old women in mother hubbards, boys and men for the most part in simple loin cloth. Youngsters naked. All were flower decked, even the kids. To one side fires glowed where the stones of the native ovens were heating.

"No great damage done," I told her.

A guitar began strumming and voices joined in a native chant, one of the "himenes" which the natives love. That word "himenes" is the Polynesian rendering of "hymn" brought by the missionaries. As young girls were draping us with garlands of tiare Tahiti, frangipani and hibiscus blossoms, Pauo joined us.

"Here is where you have to put on your part of the show," she announced with what I shall always be pleased to remember as a malicious grin. "Each of you has to sing a song and put on a dance."

Looking at the startled expression on Ione's face I promptly became convulsed with laughter. In all the time I had known her I had never heard her sing a note. Neither Melba's nor Pavlowa's talents are hers. However, she was willing to die game.

I shall never forget Ione's act. It offered the comedy relief. Shortly the savages, ever quick to see the funny side, caught the humor of it and the island rang with shrieks of laughter. Tom, with a smooth, natural voice, was the star of the troupe. Larry, Pilly and I simply performed.

Then Pilly was watching, fascinated, while fires were cleared away from the oven stones. The various foods were then wrapped in green tare leaves and packed in layer on layer. Over this a top covering of leaves was spread, and the earth packed firm over all. That is the world's oldest fireless cooker.

When the savages throw a banquet, they go all the way. The tables consisted of great leaves spread on the ground around which everyone sat cross-legged. There is no conversation. every attending strictly to the business at hand. Pauo had "tipped" us to the niceties of native custom—men always eat first. We followed custom. Everything is eaten with the fingers even to stricky poi, that supposedly romantic island dish.

On the menu were chicken, pork, numerous kinds of fish, including salted sword fish, raw fish dipped in a mixture of lime juice and sea water, octoput tentacles (as delicious as fried automobile tires) lobsters, crayfish. Then there were baked breadfruit, rice with chicken, rice with pork, taro, hams, as well as maniota, that staple island food which tastes like a big parsnip. Dessert was a salad made from the heart of a young cocoanut tree, tasting rather like fresh, tender, salted almonds.

Watching the savages we came to respect both appetite and capacity. Their hospitality is an easy gracious thing that makes no demands on either host or guest. Finally the singing broke out.

It was a hilarious sextette that wended its way back to the palace later that night.

"I'l check that trunk business in the morning," I confided to Tom, who was bringing up the rear with me.

"Check," he announced briefly. just as he burst into the melody of "Moonlight Bay." In self protection we joined in.

CHAPTER 16.

"MORNIN' MORPHEUS!" Pilly twitted me as I came through the living room the following morning in a bath suit headed for the cool, refreshing waters of the lagoon.

"Had to stay and finish a dream I was working on," I told her as, I headed on through. It was late and the sun was high.

"I could get a powerful cardiac reaction if I were invited to come along," she offered.

"Get into a bathing suit, then," I told her. "Make it snappy. There are a lot of those actinic rays going to waste out there and I have a yearning to darken my tan down about one-half of one shade." None of the others seemed to crave a bath, so together we headed for the water.

Back at the palace we changed and I routed Pakai out to the kitchen for an alligator pear, toast and coffee. Pilly took a tall glass of chilled fruit juice.

When we came into the living room where the others were lounging about, Larry was discussing photography and the difference in the timing because of the strength of the light here on the equator.

"I have some of that new fast film in my trunk," I said. Out of the tail of my eye I saw Tom was getting the play. "I'll get it. Have you the key to the store room?" I asked Pauo.

"I'll bring it," she replied. I got up, and at a signal Tom came along. In a moment Pauo came with the key and unlocked the door. As I bent over, then, to unlock the trunk I discovered that Tom would have won his bet. The lock was smashed.

"Well, ten thousand darns," I said surprised. "This lock is busted." I looked up at Pauo.

"That's strange," she said, examining it. "I don't see how that could have possibly happened. This room has been locked all the time. The cook is the only one who ever has the key."

"No great damage done," I told her philosophically. "You needn't wait. I'll be sure to see that the door locks."

"Well?" I asked Tom after she had gone.

"Either she is a good actress, or she didn't know anything about it," he decided.

"Perhaps Utato got the key from the cook."

"Possibly."

I took a roll of film and we went back to rejoin the others. "I have to get my daily tanning," I announced. Then we went swimming. Shortly after we finished our siesta Havia appeared.

"Want to watch Havia's shark catching act?" Pauo asked us.

"Do you mean to tell me he'll actually do down and catch one of those horrible things with nothing but a rope," Pilly answered.

Then we were cruising along near where a high rocky point lifted above deep water, Pinga, the mate of the schooner, was with us in the big outrigger canoe.

Through the water glasses we were studying the coral caves and grottos at the base. In the clear sunlight the delicate shades of mauve, lemon yellow and pink showed with starting beauty in those underwater coral beds. There is an ethereal quality about them that is stunning. In the crystal water brilliantly colored fish flashed about.

"Doesn't that lovely picture down there take you back to childhood dreams of fairyland," Ione asked "See those castles, forests and dark caves."

We had been cruising for possibly two hours when suddenly Potii shouted in broken English that he had found a shark. He directed our eyes. and there in the black mouth of a cave we saw the ugly creature, his great head protruding a few feet into the sunlit water.

"That one will do," Havia told Pauo and translated for us. "He says that shark is full of fish and resting."

Carefully the cane was laid against the shore and Pinga and Potii climbed out, makin fast one end of the rope with a half-hitch around a stout tree. Tom and Larry took the paddles and worked the canoe out over the cave and the shark.

"OOOooo! Havia, you'll get killed," Pilly shuddered. We were all remembering the ferocious attack of the loath some monsters on the whales. Tucked in the pareus of each of the natives I saw long, wicked looking sheath knives.

Then Tavia grinned at us, filled his lungs and slipped overside with the ease of a seal. Through the water glasses we watched him sink straight down through some 25 feet of water—"four fathoms," Pauo guessed it. With him he carried the rope end with the running-noose in it.

Here was an exhibition of daring, which for high tension thrill, had anything stopped that any of us had ever witnessed—man meeting the monster of the deep, whose only natural enemy was another shark, in his own element bent on besting him. Failure on Havia's part meant death in one of its wickedest forms, or at least the loss of a limb.

Now the man was standng beside the monster. For a moment I don't think any of us breathed. We watched, powerless to tear our eyes away from the underwater drama. Then Havia struck the evil-looking snout sharply, and in the split second as the shark turned to see what creature had the audacity to tease him, the noose was slipped over the flukes. With a spring from the bottom the man was up and away.

The entire thing had taken possibly a little over a minute from the time Havia had slipped into the water. Now as he reached the surface, we gave him a hand over the side. Then the fight to land "mako," as the natives call the shark, began.

Steadily Pinga and Potii snubbed the slack in the rope, checking the furious lunges of the great fish. Judiciously we moved the canoe a few feet from the scene of battle, watching all the time. Little by little, then, the rope shortened and the shark was gradually being drawn in.

"You wouldn't want that rope fastened to a boat like this," Pauo declared. "Those big fellows will pull a 40-foot boat along at a good clip."

Finally the ugly snout broke the water, and the lashing of the powerful beast became frantic as he began to drown in the air. As the thrashing continued the line was snubbed tighter until now the shark was partly out of the water. Gradually then it subsided. Finally Pinga picked up a stout club and bashed it heavily on the front of its head.

"Sharks are not hard to kill if you hit them right in the front of the head," Pauo informed us. "Their brain is there and also the end of their spinal column."

Havia accepted our compliments for his daring feat with a satisfied grin. Pauo was talking to him in a rapid patois of French and Polynesian.

Then we were inspecting our first shark at close range.

"What will that weigh," Tom asked Pinga.

"Let me see," and the mate studied the great fish for a moment. "It's a little over 12 feet long—Oh, I should guess somewhere in the neighborhood of half-a-ton."

As we studied the ugly jaws of that "hammer-head" we shuddered, and there came to us a new appreciation of Havia's courage.

Back at the palace once more we held a "post-mortem" on what we had seen. The English language seemed short on adjectives for Pilly's use in expressing her "amazement."

We were all clear on one point—that Moatonga offered a rare assortment of unique entertainment.

After a time the girls left us. I knew they were going to do a little more copying of that log's code. Tom went up to the tower to "practice" at his key and talk to Utato.

Lazily I sat resting. Time flowed sweetly there in that wild garden of the Pacific. Deeply I breathed the perfume of those soft, exotic, tropical airs. The trade had died down and the lagoon slumbered blue, while the sea creamed softly on the outer reef.

Looking back on it, I have often wondered if fate wasn't giving us rest and peace now to strengthen us for the harrowing strain of days that lay ahead. But those days were not yet, an so for the next couple of weeks we just loafed, thankful that telephones and alarm clocks had no part in our present scheme of things.

Tribute To Canadian War Dead

NEW WAR MEMORIAL FOR OTTAWA

In tribute to the 64,000 Canadian soldiers who lost their lives in the Great War, the memorial shown here is to be erected permanently at Ottawa. It will be on exhibition for the first time in Hyde Park, London, before being shipped to Canada. The memorial is the work of the famous sculptor family of March of Farningham, Kent. The picture here shows one of the figures of the memorial being placed in position.

WHO'S WHO In Ottawa

HON. EDGAR NELSON RHODES

When Premier Bennett needed a man to take his place as minister of finance early this year he chose an eminent Nova Scotian, Hon. Edgar Rhodes, to steer the dominion through the troublous waters of a great depression. The choice did not surprise political thinkers in any part of Canada, for the former Nova Scotia premier had more than once been heralded as a likely candidate for leadership of the federal Conservatives some years ago.

Essentially a man of destiny, his career has been a succession of political triumphs. Reversing the procedure of the majority of his contemporaries, he began public life in the Dominion House, providing himself with 13 years' background at Ottawa, including four years in the Speaker's chair, before entering provincial politics. In 1925 he gained the distinction of becoming the first Conservative premier the Nova Scotia electorate had returned in 43 years. He was elected again in 1928 but returned to federal politics in 1930 when he accepted the portfolio of fisheries in the Bennett government. With his long parliamentary experience, his fine debating ability and his capacity for administration, Mr. Rhodes soon became a pillar of strength in the new ministry, and after serving 18 months at his new post, was appointed finance minister on February 4 last. His appointment was a natural one for many reasons. One of them was that he was the author of a famous statement: "I would rather be Canada's greatest angler than Canada's first commoner."

If any one of his personal characteristics has contributed to his success more than another it is perhaps his calm reserve. It has alway been said of Mr. Rhodes that he refuses to be hurried. When, after the election of 1928, his govrnment was returned with a reduced majority, and he granted one of the shortest interviews on record, he was queried as to his intended reorganization for his shattered cabinet. "I intend to keep my own counsel and take my own time," he replied crisply, though preserving an almost suave pose.

This was typical of the frankness which he displays alike toward the electors and his fellow parliamentarjans. Mr. Rhodes was born at Amherst, N.S., Jan. 5th, 1877, and was educated at Acadia and Dalhousie Universities. Called to the bar in 1902, he was from 1905 to 1909 a partner of Ho n.W. T. Pipes, then attorney-general. He married Miss Grace Pipes, a daughter of his legal partner. in 1905. He is a member of the Ottawa and Chaudiere Golf Clubs, the New York Club and the Saraguay Club.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

by Charles E. Dunn

Lesson for September 18:
The Reports of the Spies
Numbers 13 and 14
Golden Text: Psalm 27:1

Rev. Chas. E. Dunn

The Israelites were now in the wilderness of Paran, when Moses is commanded by the Lord to select twelve men, one from each tribe, to make a tour of inspection of the promised land. Thus was inaugurated one of the earliest geographical expeditions in history. These scouts made a thorough, investigation of both the land's fertile areas and its barren wastes. Their report was comprehensive, but not unanimous.

Ten of the spies, while admitting that the land was very rich, nevertheless counseled against attempted conquest. "All the people we saw there," they insisted, "were men of huge size. They made us feel like grasshoppers." (Moffatt's version.)

But Caleb and Joshua, who gave the minority report, were made of sterner stuff. "We ought to march up at once," they cried, "and seize the land."

Note the grit of this sturdy pair. They had plenty of nerve to oppose a verdict of comrades who greatly outnumbered them. Never was such courage more needed. We are all tempted to follow the crowd like silly sheep. How few will think through for themselves the profound issues at stake in the coming election, and vote accordingly! Most voters will flock to the band-wagon of that candidate whom they think is most likely to win.

Secondly, consider the exploring spirit of Caleb and his companion, their penchant for adventure. The Jews were a great exploring people. Now opportunities for travel are very limited for most of us. But we can cultivate our minds. We can develop a hobby.

Finally, these men had the confidence of victory. They knew that they were right, that time was on their side. The people, in despair, scorned their advice, and yearned for Egypt. But Caleb and Joshua stuck to their guns, and lived to see their judgment vindicated. Under Joshua the children of God did enter Canaan.

You and I desperately need, in this time of fear and doubt, such confidence in the future triumph of the right. When disheartened let us say, with Gladstone, "I appeal to time."

Charged with an infrigement of the Amusement Tax Act, in that he collected admissions for a barn dance held at his farm near Williamstown recently, without imposing the necessary tax, Thomas Chretien was fined $5 and costs in Alexandria Police Court last week.

THE UNITED CHURCH

Rev. John McKay imparted inspiration on Sunday to his hearers as he spoke from the book of Nehemiah at both services, the text of the morning being Neh. 4:15.

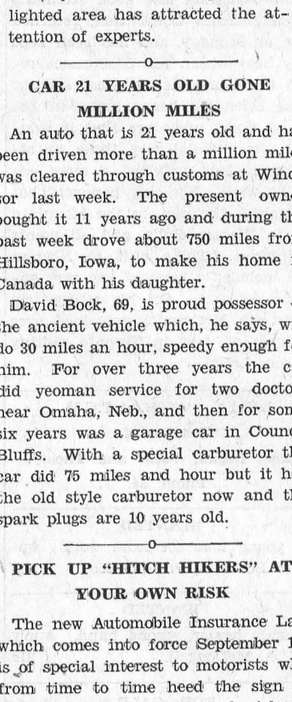
Nehemiah and his workers were beset on every side of enemies but they were persistent and determined, hence victorious. In our Christian life, too, said the pastor, there may be great enthusiasm at first but in time this wanes and we need this same determination to keep on. This is a necessary spirit just now after trouble and sorrow. We should turn to our tasks and go on as if nothing had happened. In spite of the difficulties of life we should strive to our best, and God will be our guide. Let us not give up. Be instant in prayer that there may be an ingathering of souls. Let us work hand in hand with God and give Him the praise.

Neh. 2:17 was the evening text from which the pastor asked us to notice several things—Nehemiah and his followers were inspired by their fathers and the things their fathers had done; the activities of their enemies only gave fresh impetus to their efforts, each person was allotted a share in the building of the wall, and there was a chance for family co-operation; there was no weariness in well-doing; they received help from unexpected sources, and above all they were dependent upon God. In making present day application of these, the pastor said we should do the work of the church in a manner worthy of our fathers, there is a place for everyone in the tasks of the church, and we should not become so absorbed in the tasks of our local church that we are not interested in world-wide enterprises. In closing he urged that we seek for the real presence of God with us in all we do.

A solo "Closer to Jesus" sung by Mr. Wallace was much appreciated. Miss Mabel Waddell, a former member of the choir was present and assisted in the music at both services.

The anniversary services will be held on Sunday, October 23rd with Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown, of Toronto, as the special preacher.

Rev. J. A. and Mrs. Waddell were welcome visitors in town on Saturday. They were accompanied by their daughters, Mabel and Jean, who stayed over the week-end with friends here.



AN UNUSUAL PHOTOGRAPH

Astronomical departments of Toronto and McGill universities have displayed considerable interest in this unusual photograph of the eclipse, according to J. C. Coulson, Unionville, who made the picture in the area of totality at Actonville, Que. The shaded spot in the lighted area has attracted the attention of experts.

CAR 21 YEARS OLD GONE MILLION MILES

An auto that is 21 years old and has been driven more than a million miles was cleared through customs at Windsor last week. The present owner bought it 11 years ago and during the past week drove about 750 miles from Hillsboro, Iowa, to make his home in Canada with his daughter.

David Bock, 69, is proud possessor of the ancient vehicle which, he says, will do 30 miles an hour, speedy enough for him. For over three years the car did yeoman service for two doctors near Omaha, Neb., and then for some six years was a garage car in Council Bluffs. With a special carburetor the car did 75 miles and hour but it has the old style carburetor now and the spark plugs are 10 years old.

PICK UP "HITCH HIKERS" AT YOUR OWN RISK

The new Automobile Insurance Law which comes into force September 1st is of special interest to motorists who from time to time heed the sign of the "beckoning thumb" and pick up "hitch hikers."

The act provides that the insurer shall not be liable under an owner's policy, or a driver's policy, "for any loss or damage resulting from bodily injury to, or the death of, any person being carried in or upon, or entering or getting on to, or alighting from the automobile" unless the policy is specially endorsed to this effect and an extra premium collected.

In other words, the owner and driver of a motor car are not insured against accidents to passengers in the car, nor protected against claims which passengers may make upon them as a result of accidents, except an addition has been made to the policy to cover this contingency. When such an addition is made, an extra premium must be charged.

BOWLING CLUB NEWS

Two scheduled games of doubles took place on the local bowling greens on Thursday evening last when T. O. Vanbridger and Alf. Casselman met Carl Rice and Rev. Turner. It was a good match all the way through, but Carl and his partner gradually forged out in front. The final score stood at 19-7.

In the second match Will Johnston and R. Crowder met J. Gibson with Lockie Goodfellow as partner. This was a tight one from start to finish and was a real good battle. Both sides were laying deadly bowls around the kitty. The score see-sawed back and forth but the final end found Will one shot up—14-13.

BARNS ARE DESTROYED

William Ault, of Irena, Dundas county, lost his large barns by fire on Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Ault was having his threshing done and the fire was caused by sparks from the blower of the machine. The loss is very heavy as the barns were commondious and were filled with this year's crop of hay and grain. The buildings and crops were only partially covered by insurance. Fortunately the large stock of cattle were still at large in pasture.

FAMILY REUNION

A most interesting event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Brownell, of Monckland, recently, the occasion being a reunion of the Mattice family as well as a gathering in honour of Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Taggart, of Leroy, N.Y., who were renewing old acquaintances in that district. Nearly 100 guests assembled for the sumptuous dinner, during which Mr. Harry Mattice furnished selections on the bagpipes. n all probability this will become an annual event.

RECORDS SHOW DRIVERS OF MOTOR VEHICLES DESERVE SEVERE CRITICISM

Civilized nations engaged in war protect children as non-combatants. But apparently the drivers of automobiles in Ontario are less considerate. In this province last year, a total of 1,827 children were injured by motor vehicles. Of this number 884 were playing in the street. True some of these accidents were unavoidable; true, also that parents should be made to accept some of the responsibility, but none the less the record is a shameful one.

The trust of children in grown-up persons is proverbial. Apparently this trust is being violated more than a hundred times a month.

BEES STING HORSES TO DEATH

One fine matched team of horses belonging to Mr. Robert Pringle, resident of Tyendinaga, two miles north of Shannonville, are dead, and one other horse of another team is not expected to live as the result of honey bee stings suffered while the helpless animals were cultivating in a field last week near forty hives owned by Mr. Pringle. The driver of the team, Mr. Carman Lloyd, who was cultivating in the field in the absence of the Pringle family during the afternoon, escaped with only one sting from the infuriated bees which swarmed on the horses when they approached too close to the fence of the field containing the hives. So massed was the attack by the insects that little chance was given the horses to run, before the poison of the stings numbed the animals causing their death soon after.

The only horse of the four-horse team to escape the full fury of the bees managed to be unhitchd in time to gain shelter comparatively unhurt.

SEVERELY BURNED

Miss Gladys Ouderkirk was severely burned with boiling fat at the home of Mr. H. J. Hamilton, Chesterville, last Thursday. While preparing French-fried potatoes on the electric range, she found it necessary to turn the current off, and in so doing received an electric shock which caused her to jerk her hand away, striking the pan of hot fat and spilling it on her body and hands.

QUEEN OF MEXICO PAGEANT

Miss Johnetta Woods of Monte y was chosen queen of the pageant at the Mexico City Country club.

THEY RAIDED HIM

Mr. Arthur Fetterly, Kenmore, had a cow shot in the pasture one day last week. The same night his hens were stolen and his dog was poisoned. The thieves must have forgotten to fire the buildings, but whether the whole thing was the work of one gang no one knows.

Hush, little corner lot,
Don't you cry.
You'll be a filling station

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Williscraft, Oxford Mills, Ont., announce the engagement of their elder daughter, Evelyn Caroline, of Ottawa, to Charles J. W., only son of Mr. and Mrs. James McMaster, of Kemptville, Ont. Marriage to take place quietly the middle of October.

DEATH OF AGED MAN

Robert Michael, aged 76 years, who came from Ireland many years ago, died at the House of Industry, Cornwall, Monday. He had no relatives in this country. Rev. Frank Coop, pastor of St. Paul's United Church, conducted the service at the House of Industry, prior to burial being made on Tuesday afternoon.

A PROBABILITY

If the health and fame of Dr. Locke of Williamsburg, continues, the people there will soon have to provide a field for a landing place, for aeroplanes, Cars of every description and make, including the bantam Austin, have visited Williamsburg this summer, but by summer airships will be so common that cars will hardly be noticed.

INTERESTING CASE

An interesting case was tried at Kingston this week. J. D. Lyness, of Ottawa, was a free passenger in a car driven by Michael Stopeck, of Toronto. The car was forced into the ditch by a truck and Lyness was injured. He sued the friend who gave him accommodation for $10,000, but the jury gave him no damages and the judge dismissed the case. This is often how one is rewarded for being friendly with a car.

NO SATURDAY CONCERT

There was no band concert on Saturday evening last, the program being withdrawn owing to the contest taking place in Lannin's Hall under the auspices of the United Church. The program is also withdrawn for this coming Saturday evening as the Citizens Band has been engaged to render the music for Metcalfe Fair and also because on Sunday evening next at 8.45 the band will render a sacred concert from the balcony of Hotel Winchester, under Bandmaster J. Latimer.

MISSION CIRCLE MEETING

The Mizpah Mission Circle of the United Church met yesterday afternoon in the Sunday School Rooms. Miss Annie Walker presided.

The first part of the meeting was devoted to a Worship Service followby the reading of minutes.

Miss Evelyn Fennell gave a reading entitled "God's Word." It was decided at this meeting to make plans for the putting on of a play in the near future. Mrs. Ault gave an interesting talk on "The Mission Fields in Canada," dealing principally with those in Ontario and Quebec.

At the close of the meeting a social half hour was enjoyed under the direction of Miss Eva Donaldson and her group which was greatly enjoyed.

The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

MR. F. McCLOSKEY SERIOUSLY ILL

The Press is very sorry to learn of the serious illness of Mr. Frank McCloskey of Chesterville. For many years Mr. McCloskey has been in the hotel business in that place and is well known and highly respected throughout Eastern Ontario. Owing to his advanced age, little hope is held for his recovery.

THEY WERE GOOD

Reg. Barnard, a former member of the Press staff, who is now residing in Sarnia, sent his parents some of the pears grown in that district. He requested that a few of them be sent to the boys at the office for sampling. They were sampled alright and proved to be luscious and appetizing in every respect. Our only regret is that Reg. didn't send down a larger quantity.

LOOKING BACKWARD

What remarkable changes have taken place in Winchester in the past twenty years. Scarcely any of the business places are occupied by the same merchants as twenty years ago. Our streets have been paved, many new buildings erected, and not a few destroyed by fire. The Cornwall Freeholder carried the following item in its issue of Sept. 6th, 1912—"The Winchester Town Council sent a request to the Hydro Electric Commission for an estimate of the cost of 150 horsepower for that municipality, supplied at Winchester from Morrisburg, ready to be distributed."

Our Column

There's the tang of autumn in the air these mornings.

Dreaming while driving is a good way to stay asleep forever.

Gifts and alms are expressions, not the essence, of this virtue.

Being everlastingly on the job beats carrying a rabbit's foot for luck.

It is good to see in the misfortunes of others what we should avoid.

A good citizen is one who gives back to the world some of the good things he has taken from it.

An object in possesion seldom retains the same charms which it had when it was longed for.

This country was all right while we only tried to keep up with the Joneses—the depression came when we tried to pass them.

Only three and a half months until Christmas. It will take that long to figure out how to make the old bank account cover the territory.

What has become of the old-fashioned boy who thought he had had a succesful summer if father gave him a dollar to spend at the county fair along about the last week in August?

Don't feel abused if you are compelled to wash your own floors. Beauticians tell us much benefit is derived from the exercise of scrubbing on your hands and knees.

The Cornwall Freeholder tells that a "Luscious Peach" was grown in a garden in that city. The boys of Winchester say we have gorgeous peaches here, but of a different kind.

The St. Mary's Journal-Argus offered prizes for a slogan in a Buy-At-Home Campaign. The winning one was, "It's my town, It's your town. Let's buy in our town." This is a good slogan for any town, including Winchester. Help build your town by trading at home.

BACK TO THE LAND

For the purpose of placing United States farmers on Canadian soil, a United States firm has purchased 10,000 acres of land near Elm Creek, 35 miles southwest of Winnipeg. A further purchase of 25,000 acres in an undisclosed district is being negotiated according to W. J. Whiddon ,representing a United States corporation bearing his name.

JUST RUMORS

cool million, and the Anglican church nearly as much. Other trust funds are being looked into, and more revelations are expected.

Canada's High Commissioner to London, Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, who is as much in Canada as in London, and who seems to enjoy the transatlantic trips, is making very optimistic speeches at fair openings at which he is asked to preside, and predicts an immediate return to prosperity and plenty. It is always easy to be optimistic when you have a big salary, a full pocket, safe investments, and no one to call you at 7 a.m. to your daily task. We who live in the rural sections are bearing our burdens, learing contentment, and keep plugging away from 7 a.m. till 8 p.m. always hoping, and trying to keep others in the same state of mind. It is nice to read of the optimism of the men who have no cause for pessimism. We wonder how they would like to hear of the hard times and depression stories of some the rural folk and some of the unemployed in the city.

Well so much for rumors. There many otners, but we cannot now mention them. Just keep in mind that Winchester is to have a big day on Sept. 30th and make a mark on your calendar so you won't forget it.
