Loses Part of Arm

Stuart Baker of Winchester, who for some time has been a brakeman on this division of the C P.R. had the misfortune when coming out of Smiths Falls on his regular run, to miss his hold when attempting to board the engine as the train was leaving the yard. He fell in such a way that his left arm was run over just above the wrist and had to be amputated.

Mrs. Duncan McGregor, Harmony

After many months of intense suffering from cancer, Mrs. McGregor, who was formerly Miss Cinnamon of Harmony, passed away in Cornwall General hospital on Friday, Nov. 30th. Her body was brought to the home of her brother Mr. A. B. Cinnamon of Harmony, and on Sunday at 1 30 p. m. it was conveyed to Winchester Methodist Church where Mr. and Mrs. McGregor had been married thirty-five years ago. There the funeral service was conducted by Rev. J. A. Waddell, assisted by Rev. Geo. Robertson of Ormond, after which interment was made in Maple Ridge cemetery. Mr. McGregor survives as well as a number of brothers of the deceased.

Freight Train Hits Auto

Sunday evening last the "skew" crossing west of Chesterville, where two fatalities occurred a little over a year ago, was the scene of a near-tragedy when an automobile was hit by an eastbound freight train. Mr. Herb Clark, of Russell, formerly of Chesterville, with his wife and family was proceeding west as a train approached from the west, apparently there was time to pass over ahead of the train, but in making the turn the driver swung a little too far west and after passing over the westbound tracks the wheels on the right side of the car dropped off the crossing planks between the eastbound rails and headed the car in the direction from which the train was approaching. Fortunately there was time for all the occupants of the car to alight before it was struck by the engine and no one was injured. The automobile as it was struck was mostly clear of the engine with the right hand wheels hugging the south rail, and although the wheels and mud guards were damaged it was not nearly so much injured as might have been expected.

Turkeys Stolen Near Morewood

The Morewood and Cannamore communities were surprised and grieved that a turkey thief was harboured among them. On Saturday morning when Mr. William Countryman went to the barn to do his chores he missed four of his largest turkeys and on investigation found tracks leading across a ploughed field to an automobile in which the birds had apparently been taken farther away. Following the car track the pursuit lead to about a mile south of Cannamore, but the party sought was not to be found. It was shortly learned that a car containing turkeys had passed through Morewood in the direction of Ottawa but nothing further happened until Monday morning when the party suspected turned up at Mr. Countryman's and confessed to the stealing and sale of the birds in Ottawa for nineteen dollars and wanted to settle the matter. Mr. Countryman declined to settle, preferring to take the case before a magistrate, which was done the same afternoon when it was settled before Robert Steven, J. P., and the nineteen dollars paid over to Mr. Countryman.

Entertainment at Grantley

Brother of Dr. E. B. Baker Held Up By Bandits

Quietly entering Percy T. Litster's drug store at 1263 Dundas street west, Toronto, at 8.30 Saturday night two gunners made an unsuccessful attempt to steal the contents of the cash register. They might have got away with what they came after if it had not been for David E. Baker, the drug clerk. Baker refused to open the cash drawer, and when he ran to the dispensary at the back of the store one of the men fired a revolver shot at him. It hit the cash register and the men made a rapid getaway.

Baker was working alone in the dispensary when the two gunmen entered the store. As Baker came toward the counter to wait on them, the man who held the revolver told him to open the cash drawer. Baker states that he did not notice the gun nor could he catch just what the man said. He approached the man with the gun until the latter dug his gun viciously into Baker's stomach with the words; "Money or your life. Open up the till or you'll get it," said the gunman and then Baker acted.

As if he was going to satisfy the the demands of his unwelcome visitors, Baker turned around facing the cash register; darting down below the counter he ran to the dispensary, where he hid in the corner, as his head went down below the level of the counter a shot rang from the black-barreled revolver in the gunman's hand. But while the bullet grazed the cash register, the noise of it did not agitate or appear to worry the two desperadoes. While one of them kept a watch on the street the other walked around the counter and tried to open the cash drawer.

The drawer not responding to his exertions and failing to locate where the clerk had gone, the two men glided out of the front door and departed as quietly as they had come. The men made their way without any difficulty to the corner where an automobile was waiting with a running-engine to make a flying getaway. The police examination revealed the fact that the revolver fired by the gunman was an automatic. The shell was found on the floor of the store.

Cornwall is Scene $50,000 Fire Loss

Damage amounting to $50,000, and occupants forced to flee in scanty night attire, followed an outbreak of fire in a millinery and fur store owned by Miss V. Deschamps, on Pitt street Cornwall, during the early morning hours last Thursday. Before the fire was brought under control buildings extending down Pitt street between the Palace Theatre and Telephone central station, the heart of the business district, were completely wiped out, together with their entire contents. In the hurry to reach safety, occupants of flats over the store, who were in bed at the time, were able to snatch up only light clothing. One woman, Mrs. St. Jean, was slightly burned about the face and hair. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

The fire was discovered by John Keenan, a street railway motorman, and Ernest Bergeron, night watchman at the car barns, who, passing, noticed the flames in one of the windows of Mrs. Deschamp's establishment. Mr. Bergeron tried to break into the house to rescue the Deschamps family, and Mr. Keenan turned in an alarm. The store filled with inflammable material fell an easy prey to the flames, which spread rapidly to the adjoining store of Mrs Wm. Duffy. The store next, a Chinese laundry, also took fire, and was soon a mass of ruins. In the latter store, five Chinamen, one Chinese woman and a child had a very narrow escape. Sam Sing, the proprietor, suffered heavily as he had no insurance, and in addition to losing his equipment, lost a large sum of money. The brick construction of the Palace Theatre and the Bell Telephone office undoubtedly saved them from destruction. Firemen played five streams on the flames.

His Girl's a Dumbdora

"Does your sweet mamma know anything about automobiles?"

"I should say not. She asked me last night if I cooled the engine by stripping the gears."

The Ruling Passion

A Jew and an Irishman were fishing in separate boats some distance apart. The Irishman got a bite but, in pulling in, tripped and fell backward out of the boat.

He sank twice, and as he came up the second time, Isaac rowed over and called out:

Mister, can I have your boat if you don't come up again?"

Some Towns' Extravagant Stories

There's a contest on between Elmira, Chatham and Milton over the antics of natural phenomena. At Elmira the cottontail rabbits are so thick they block traffic on the roads. Milton adds squirrels to the bunnies, and Chatham beats them both in exaggeration. Now comes along a story from Cargill that some fine dairy cows found a bootleggers' still, somewhere in the pasture lot, and came home with a joyful jag on, and the neighbors from far and near hurried to witness the extraordinary spectacle. There must have been a great demand for milk punches that day at Cargill.—Elora Express.

$100 for Nest of Young Coons

The American Museum of Natural History offered a prize of $25 for a nest which would show how the mole lives, and several were forth coming. Dr. F. A. Lucas, director of the museum, said accurate information hitherto not available to scientists, had been obtained. This is the first authentic information about a mole's nesting habits I know of," he said, "and as far as I know the groups which we can make out of our specimens will be the first in any American museum. I have been unable to find anyone who knew anything about the family life of a mole until I received the accurate information of the finders of the nest we now have." Dr. Lucas plans to use the newspapers in further hunts for unusual specimens of animal life. He said that for three years he had been trying to get hold of a family of young racoons under a month old. In spite of a reward of $100 for such a family he has never been able to get one. He is also after a family of young wolves.—Scientific American.

Two microbes sat on a pantry shelf

The milk maid's stunts,
And both said at once.
"Our relations are going to be strained."

Treasure

Dumley—"I met a fellow to-day who was simply crazy about a buried treasure; couldn't talk of anything else."

Peckham—"That reminds me of my wife."

Dumley—"Oh, does she talk about one?"

Peckham—"Yes, her first husband; I'm her second, you know."

Prohibition And Savings.

Savings deposits in the banks of the United States, June 30 this year totaled $17,300,000,000 compared with $16,620,000,000 on the same date the previous year again of $680,000,000 in 12 months, 4.1 per cent The average balance in all savings, state and national banks and trust companies, approximate $500.00. The savings aggregate the highest ever known—and this in dry United States which wets predicted a few years ago would be ruined by prohibition. It was prophesied that business would be prostrated if saloons were closed and men would be out of employment The country has had three and a half years of prohibition and today there is a job at good wages for every msn and savings banks reflect such prosperity as was never before known. Over in wet England a million unemployed men want work and cannot get it.

Winter Feeding And Care of Poultry

Good Feed and care are necessary in order to procure maximum egg production during the winter months. Stock should be comfortably housed and not overcrowded. Allow about four square feet of floor space per bird, and see that all cracks and openings at the rear and sides of the house are closed to prevent draughts, otherwise colds are likely to develop which not only retard production, but often cause the loss of birds. A little permanganate of potash used in the drinking water (enough to give a deep wine color) will help to prevent the spreading of catarrhal colds, but in more serious cases, birds should be isolated, and treated by washing the eyes, nostrils and throat with a solution of baracic acid,

Cotton used in the open front houses should be kept brushed off, and should be opened up on fine days to facilitate ventilation, this will also prevent the accumilation of moisture, which is more injurious to the health of the birds than cold. Plenty of clean litter should be provided for scratching purposes. Lice, which are usually present in certain numbers, should be kept in control. This may be done by dusting the birds with insect powder or by smearing the skin around the vent with blue ointment about the size of a pea. Care should be taken not to smear the feathers with this ointment.

A grain mixture should be fed in the litter morning and evening. Feed at the rate of about one quart per day to ten birds. A mixture consisting of equal parts cracked corn, wheat and oats has given splendid satisfaction at this Station. Buckwheat or barley may be used to replace the corn, but in such case, only the best oats available should be used in order to reduce the amount of fibre.

A dry mash should be kept in hoppers before the birds at all times. A mash consisting of 100 pounds wheat bran, 100 pounds middlings, 100 pounds corn meal, 75 pounds ground oats, 15 pounds linseed meal, 3 pounds charcoal and 100 pounds beef scraps will give good results. If skim milk, buttermilk or meat is available the beefscrap may be omitted. A portion of the above mash may be moistened with skim milk or water and fed to the birds at noon. Give them what they will eat up clean in a few minutes.

Commercial ready mixed scratch feed and mashes may be fed if so desired, but slightly greater gains have been obtained at this Station by feeding the home-mixed feed.

Grit, oyster shell and fresh water should be provided at all times. Green feed, such as cabbage, mangels, beets, turnips, clover, sprouted oats and alfalfa should also be provided daily. The latter two may be steamed and fed in the mash, or the leaves may be fed dry in racks or boxes. A dose of Epsom salts at the rate of one pound per hundred birds, given at intervals of two or three weeks, will help to keep the birds healthy and prevent intestinal disorders.

Profit from hens depends very largely upon winter egg production. Breeding plays an important part in winter production, but in order that the result from breeding may be obtained good food and care are necessary.

One step won't take you very far,
You've got to keep on walking;
One word won't tell folks who you are,
You've got to keep on talking;
One inch won't make you very tall,
You've got to keep on growing;
One little ad won't do it all,
You've got to keep them going.

The Record sent for a year to distant members of the family is an appreciated gift for Christmas.

Animals In Fire

Most animals are afraid of fire, and will fly from it in terror. To others there is a fascination about a flame, and they will walk into it, even though tortured by the heat.

A horse in a burning stable goes mad with fear, but a dog is as cool in a fire as at any time. He keeps his nose down to the floor, where the air is purest, and sets himself camly to finding his way out. Cats in fire cry piteously. They hide their faces from the light and crouch in corners. When their rescuer lifts them they are, as a rule, quite docile and subdued, never biting or scratching.

Birds seem to be hypnotized by fire, and keep perfectly still; even the loquacious parrot in a fire has nothing to say. Cows, like dogs, do not show alarm. They are easy to lead forth and often find their way out themselves.

"Three o'clock in the morning" and that Lumbago starting to ache or Neuraligia nearly driving you wild. Just rub in a little Williams' Camphorated Mustard Cream, the pain disappears, you drop off to sleep. Get a jar at your druggist's 35c. Great too for kiddies.

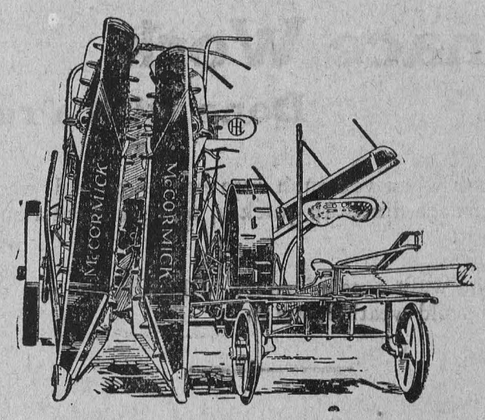
McCormick and Deering

CORN BINDERS



Cutting corn by hand is very hard work, as all men know who have tried it. In fact it is out of the question to fill a silo with hand cut corn. Yet corn stalks either green for the silo or stacked dry for fodder are the best food for cattle and horses.

The use of the McCormick or Deering Corn Binder will solve this problem You can cut and bind seven acres a day and do it much easier than by the hand method.

BOOST YOUR TOWN

(Contributed by Wos. Inst.)

How To Treat Your Town.

Praise it.
Improve it.
Talk of it.
Trade at home.
Be public spirited.
Take home pride in it.
Remember it is your home.
Tell of its natural advantages.
Trade and induce others to trade.
Don't call your best citizens frauds and imposters.
Support your local institutions and benefit your town.
Look ahead of self when all the town is to be considered.
Help your public officers do the most for the most people.
Don't forget you live off the people here, and you should help others as they help you.
Don't advertise in the local paper "to help the editor," but advertise to help yourself.

It Isn't Your Town; It's You

If you want to live in the kind of a town.
Like the kind of a town you like.
You musn't slip your clothes in a grip
And start on a long, long hike,
You'll only find what you left behind.
For there's nothing that's really new,
It's a knock at yourself when you knock your town
It isn't the town—its you.

Real towns are not made by men afraid
Lest somebody else gets ahead,
When everybody works and nobody shirks
You can raise a town from the dead.
And if while you make your personal stake
Your neighbors can make one too.
Your town will be what you want to see
It isn't the town—its you.

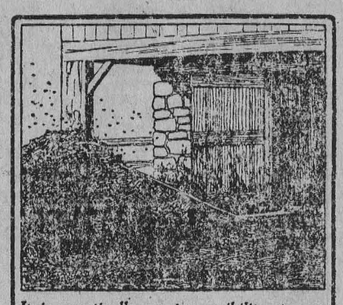
December Price

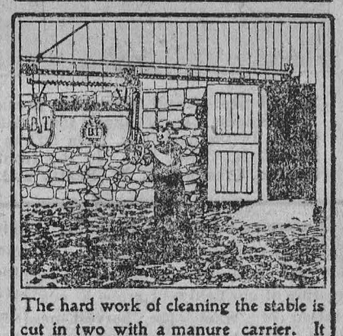
$35.00

Day in and day out, the hard work of cleaning the stable has to be done. Stable cleaning with a wheelbarrow is a monotonous, hard, disagreeable chore. It is hard to wheel a heavy wheelbarrow load through a muddy yard and up a slippery plank. And the worst of it is, this hard, disagreeable chore has to be done every day.



It is practically an impossibility to get the manure far enough away from the stable. The conditions in the yard make it impossible. Manure piles right up close to the stable give off ammonia fumes that spoil paint and woodwork, rot harness and at the first opportunity breed flies.

A wheelbarrow does not hold much at a load, which means many trips before the work is done. The BT Carrier holds three times as much as a wheelbarrow. It will tackle 800 lbs. in one load.



The hard work of cleaning the stable is cut in two with a manure carrier. It runs on overhead track so it does not matter about the state of the yard. No planks to lay; no snow to shovel; no more pushing to the top of the pile with a wheelbarrow.

The regular selling price Beatty Litter Carriers has been $47.00. For the month of December only, we will accept orders at $35.00, a clear saving of $12.00 to you. On January 1st the higher price will again rule.

Concerning Field Root Varieties

(Experimental Farms Note).

Now that the season is past for the harvesting of our field root crops a consideration of what the harvest has brought us should be profitable. At the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa we have for the past few years been considering not only the total yield of green weight obtained but the amount of dry matter and the genuiness of the variety as well. The consideration of genuiness is what we wish to consider briefly at the present time.

In our attempts to classify field root varieties we have met with some very peculiar mixtures that were sold under special, sometimes fancy, variety names. A year ago we received a package of seed supposed to be of a Yellow Intermediate variety but which produced at least one half small round garden beets. This year we had a variety which gave us one half Swiss Chard. In both of these cases the mixtures were obviously due to the mechanical mixing of varieties in some warehouse, due very likely to carelessness on the part of those handling the seed. Whatever the cause of the mixing the fact remains that a farmer buying such seed would suffer a considerable loss—and it would seem only fair that there should be some means by which growers who receive such seed could get recompensed for the loss sustained because of sowing it.

A much more general condition than the one previously mentioned is the occurrence of off types in any established variety. Just how serious such a mixture is from the standpoint of yield of the resulting crop is dependent on the character of the off type individuals present. Plants which are off type in color only do not usually mean a reduction in yield, but plants off shape very frequently do. A single example will serve to illustrate this point. In a lot of half sugar mangels grown at the Central Experimental Farm this summer there occurred about thirty per cent. of off shapes and sizes. The half sugar types and the off types were weighed separately and the decrease in yield due to the off types figured on an acre basis, amounted to a little over five tons. There is a special adaptation of type of root to soil and climatic conditions, as for example the Globe or Tankard types of mangels for shallow soils, the half long or long types for very deep open soils, etc. The presence of tpyes, not suited to the soil type in which they are grown, in a variety suited to the soil in question will almost always result in an appreciable loss due to decreased yield.

We may have however, a lot of roots true to variety name and type, and still giving us a very inferior yield because of weak germination of the seed from which they grow. In common with animals a poor start very often means an ultimate development much below normal. It is very essential therefore to have vigour of germination as well as purity of the resulting crop if we are to obtain maximum yields.

What we wish to emphasize is that some root seed sold to the farmers of Canada at the present time is a disgrace to the seed trade, and a serious loss to the growers unfortunate enough to buy it. We wish at the same time to call attention to the fact that there is reasonably good root seed available and being sold by some of our seedsmen. Some way of regulating our root seed trade so that all of our seedsmen would sell only good seed would seem to be in order.

When Pa Begins To Shave.

When Sunday mornin' comes around
My pa hangs up his strop,
And takes his razor out an' makes
It go kerflop, kerflop.
An' then he gets his mug an' brush
An' yells to me "Behave!"
I tell you things is mighty still
When pa begins to shave!

Then pa he stirs his brush around
An' makes the soapsuds fly
An' sometimes, when he stirs too hard
He gits some in his eye.
I tell you, but it's funny then
To see pa stamp an' rave,
But you musn't git ketched laffin'
When pa begins to shave!

The hired man, he dassent talk,
An' even ma's afeard.
An' you can hear the razor click
A-cuttin' through his beard.
An' then my Uncle Bill, he laffs
An' says "Why John, you're brave!"
An' pa he swears, an' ma just smiles
When pa begins to shave!

When pa gets done a-shaving of
His face, he turns around.
And Uncle Bill says, "Why, John,
Your chin looks like plowed ground!"
A' then he laffs an' laffs an' laffs.
But I got to behave,
'Cos things is apt to happen quick
When pa begins to shave!

Economy That Does Not Pay

Some people are as economical in their expressions of appreciation as if they cost a dollar a word. John thinks their is nobody like his mother. He has the utmost admiration for the way she manages their little home on a modest income. He knows that her pie crust is unsurpassed, and in his heart, he is profoundly grateful for the love which has blessed him all his life. But he never says any of these things. He leaves his mother to get them by intuition, and he would be surprised if he knew how little she really does guess.

Some of us are economizing on cheerfulness. We save our smiles for some special occasion, as we save our best frocks or point-lace handkerchief. Some folks seem to think that an overcast sulky face is quite good enough for every day, and a fretful, complaining voice suffices for saying ordinary things. The fact of the matter is that cheerfulness can be worn daily and is only brighter and stronger for the next day. A cheerfulness that is reserved for special occasions, is a flimsy variety. It is the most mistaken economy in the world to economize on cheerfulness.

Some of you are too economical with sympathy. You say it for those of your friends who are in trouble, but you economize by failing to sympathize with the happy. How often the joy is taken out of life's little successes and triumphs because there is no one to be glad with them. The command to weep with those who weep, is coupled with the counsel to rejoice with those who rejoice.

Don't Run Into Debt

"If all the tears that have been shed on account of debt could be gathered in one place it would form a Niagara Falls," says the Kincardine Reporter. We were talking with one of our merchants the other day about collections. He admitted that the money was not coming in as he had expected. The amount of money on his books owed by good people is something that should not be. Many people have money in the bank and do not think it wrong to enter a store and charge goods. Why should your money lay in the bank and draw 3 per cent. interest while the merchant has to borrow from the bank at the rate of seven per cent. to make payment on the goods he sold you. Do you imagine you are saving anything by charging goods? If you do you are mistaken. The merchant has to charge it to someone. That some one is not the cash customer. It is the customer that lets the bills run. There are two mighty bad habits to get into. One is not paying your debts when you can. The other is running into debt. The latter causes more worry, suffering, heart ache, insanity and premature death than any other cause. If you would carry on happily and successfully avoid debt and have your creditors chasing you up. We know homes that have been broken up because of the running into debt. If you want a beautiful hell on earth go into debt and have your creditors chasing you up. You may become use to it but it never leaves you. When you meet those you owe it is the first thing that recurs to your mind. The only way to avoid it is to be fair to yourself and do without that which you cannot pay for. It may seem hard not to have those things others have and seem to enjoy. Yet you will be the happier of the two, for many have the worry of which we speak.

The Call of Arcady

By LILLIACE MITCHELL

©, 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Esther had always lived in institutions—and she was deathly tired of them. She sometimes thought that if ever again she heard a gong sound she would curl up on the floor and die. But she didn't. Instead, the moment that the first jangle sounded she was on her feet hurrying to breakfast in the morning or putting out the lights at 10:30 at night. Just the same, she always hoped stolidly that something some day would happen to take her away from institutional life. Yet she really did not anticipate it greatly.

Then, one day, going home from work on the street car she found a volume of success articles. Esther liked stories, but past that she seldom read anything unless it was a newspaper. This book, however, had a red cover and the name of it was stamped on it in startling golden letters. She glanced inside and became interested. She found that she had sunk into a rut—although had it not been for the book she never would have thought of it. She read on, for it seemed to give some idea that if one chose she could climb out of the rut no matter how deep and rough a rut it might be.

And that night, when the 10:30 bell—the "lights out" bell—sounded, she put her lights out with the rest of them, listened to her roommate's regular breathing, and then made gay plans for herself.

After all, life was only a pattern, and it need not necessarily be a stencil pattern—just the same old thing day after day. True, she had been left an orphan in an orphan asylum, and at fourteen, when she was considered too old to be any longer an orphan to be supported by "the authorities," she was permitted to go to the home of Mrs. Ayleshire, where she was general helper in the kitchen.

There was nothing very inspiring about the kitchen work of the largest cafeteria in the world. It was always a case of just getting a thing done. For instance, peeling enough potatoes to odd sizes that would not go through the machine and then finding that the bin was again filled with odd sizes.

She often wondered as she did these odd jobs what Johnny Johns had done when he became fourteen and was automatically released from the orphan asylum. She and Johnny had used to play together, and she always looked with rare admiration upon his shock of red hair that stood upright.

To the other orphans that hair had been a source of amusement and Johnny had been called Red by the others. She could recall three separate occasions when people of the city who had automobiles had lent them to the orphan asylum for the day and they had all piled in and had gone to the zoo. Those days to Esther and Johnny Johns had been red-letter days—days of Arcady life.

And they used to plan to go every day to the zoo just the minute they were old enough to get out of the asylum. And with dismayed eyes that stared into the darkness of the girls' boarding club that was her present institutional home, Esther realized that, although it had been almost six years since she had left Johnny and the other children, she had never once gone to Arcady, as they had called the zoo.

"Tomorrow," she said aloud, "I'm going."

"What?" asked her roommate, sitting straight up in her narrow bed of white iron that was so durable in the dormitory.

"Im going to Arcady," said Esther firmly.

Her roommate lay down again. "You must 'a eaten plum pudding for your dinner tonight," she said sulkily.

And Esther giggled at the thought of plum pudding in an institution.

The next day she stopped to tell the commissary that she probably would not be back for tea—it was Sunday—and if the girls notified the commissary in time they were allowed 25 cents on their weekly bill.

"Going out to the zoo?" said that plump lady behind the desk. "Well, wait a bit and we'll go together. I always take my little boy out Sunday afternoons, and we always meet my nephew there. I always kid him and tell him he must be going to meet a girl there—he goes so regular-like. But he takes the teasing well—ah," she stretched her arms out ahead of her as a gong sounded, "now I'm through and can go."

Esther felt a little shock to think that Mrs. Spears was glad to be free for the afternoon. Somehow she had always thought that people who ran institutions did so because they loved the authority. But there was little time to con over this thought, for they were on their way, and Esther felt very cozy and homey somehow, as little Tommy Spears clutched her hand confidently as he trotted along between his mother and her.

Once in the zoo, where every one had peanuts and where almost every one was laughing and jolly, Esther wondered why it was she had never come here before. But Tommy had loosened his grasp and was running rapidly toward a tall young man whose eyes were laughing, although his lips were not. And Mrs. Spears was saying:

"Esther, I want you to know my nephew, Johnny Johns—we call him Red, though. He's—"

And Red calmly took her arm and nodded toward his aunt. "I already know her, you see. She's the girl I've been looking for all this time. I knew she'd come finally, for we said once when we both lived in the orphan asylum that we'd come here every day when we grew up. And so—but I'll tell you—you and Tommy meet us at the refectory at six and we'll all have supper here. Phone the girls' club that you dropped dead or broke your ankle or something. This is a red-letter day. And we have lots to talk about, Esther and I."

"And you've come every Sunday?" asked Esther, wonderingly, as they strolled down the path, for all the world like every other young couple strolling along arm in arm.

He nodded. "And to think that you have been right there where my aunt works all the time—I suppose you are at the club, aren't you?"

She nodded much as had he.

"How did you happen to come today?" he asked after there had been a long silence.

"I guess," she said softly, "it must have been the call of Arcady," and her shining eyes met his.

Does The Small Town Offer Opportunities For Success

(Walkerton Telescope)

A common subject of complaint among small town merchants everywhere is that a large part of the trade of their community goes to exclusive city shops and catalogue houses. These merchants will tell you that the departmental traders could do better by buying at home and this is in most cases true. The truth that applies here is that the average man is blind to the opportunities that surround him. The merchant who sees trade that should be his, going to the city, neglects the means at his disposal of combating that opposition. In making this statement we will take the precaution to stick to facts that we know first hand. Every publisher of an average rural newspaper has had the offer at some time or other of large advertising contracts from the big city stores. The departmental moguls see the value of the weekly press as advertising media and would be glad to use them if they could. How many small town merchants take full advantage of the opportunity that is denied the department store? Some do not advertise at all. Others seldom change their ads, the same announcement running month after month in the local press,—a sort of monument to the non-progressiveness of the advertiser. Others change their copy every week but give it only superficial attention. Every weekly man knows the class of non-advertiser who never invests any money in local newspapers of proved worth but is always ready to throw away $5 or $10 in directory or programme publicity of negligible value. The local merchants who give time and attention to their newspaper space, get results that are not equalled through any other class of media but such merchants are not always in the majority. How often we hear it said, and still oftener feel it in the attitude of small town folks, that there is no chance to do anything worth while in the rural community. If you think so, Mr. Man, it is true so far as you yourself are concerned. The statement is usually made from the standpoint of dollars and cents. From a financial standpoint then, are money-making opportunities lacking in the country town? We have in mind a couple of brothers who graduated from Toronto University at the same time, one in Law and the other in Engineering. They were bright and far-seeing chaps. decided to embark in business and took what appeared to be the suicidal step of going back to their old home town, a place only half the size of Walkerton to make a humble start. In less than twenty years they have developed step by step one of the largest industries in the Dominion of Canada, employing many hundreds of men. They are the makers of the famous B. T. products. Is this case an exception? Well, statistics show that the average millionaire in the United States today lives in a town about the size of Walkerton. The country also furnishes many conspicuous examples of small town merchants who with seemingly small opportunities, have been able, in spite of the department store bogey, to win substantial success by measuring up in some degree to their opportunities. The same truth holds good in other lines of endeavor where success cannot be guaged by money-making standards. In fact we could point out a few examples in the town of Walkerton. A man who would make the most of himself can find opportunities anywhere. Russell H. Conwell, the great lecturer, drives this point home well in his book "Acres of Diamonds." aptly illustrating it from the experience of the Arab farmer who became obsessed with the ambition to acquire diamonds. In order to raise money to start a world-wide search for the precious stones, he sold his fine farm. The day after he had given possession, the new owner was attracted by a brilliant stone he found in the bed of the creek where the cattle watered. It proved to be a valuable diamond and this led to the opening of the world-famous Galconda mine. The lesson we need to learn is that our mine of opportunities lies at home.

ONE 50c BOX BROUGHT HEALTH

Years of Constipation Ended By "Fruit-a-tives"

The Wonderful Fruit Medicine

Anyone who suffers with miserable health; who is tortured with Headaches; and who is unable to get any real pleasure out of life; will be interested in this letter of Mrs. Martha de Wolfe of East Ship Harbor, N.S.

Mrs. de Wolfe says, "For years I was a dreadful sufferer from Constipation and Headaches and I was miserable in every way. Nothing in the way of medicine seemed to help me. Then I tried "Fruit-a-tives" and the effect was splendid; and after taking only one box, I was completely relieved and now feel like a new person".

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa, Ont.

Our pot of gold is in our own back yard, not at the end of the rainbow. If we dig, we will win success. A similar truth was uttered by a successful farmer when he said: "There is a better farm under every farm."

What One Drink Cost

In New York City there is a man who once paid six thousand dollars for a cocktail. He did not know it then, and he never will know it unless he happens to read this story.

A certain prosperous manufacturing company needed a new departmental manager. The salary was six thousand dollars a year. The officers of the company considered a great many candidates and at last decided to offer the position to a clever young man of unusual business ability. He seemed to be exactly the man for that particular place. The president and general manager invited the young man to lunch with them at a down-town club, stensibly to talk over a less important business matter. They wanted to "look him over" just once more.

The man met them at the appointed hour, and the president, anxious to make the occasion a pleasant one, ordered an elaborate luncheon. The waiter was a long time in bringing the first course, and the guest began to feel ill at ease. He seemed absentminded and uninterested in the conversation. He twisted about in his chair and tapped his fingers nervously upon the table. Finally, he turned toward the president and said, a most desperately, "Would you mind very much if I ordered a cocktail?" Then he flushed a little, and offered a laughing apology for making the request.

The other men exchanged surprised and significant glances, but they called the waiter and ordered the cocktail. When it came, the guest drank it eagerly. In a few moments he had become another man—the man of keen vision and quick mind who could be so useful in their great business. There was no more preoccupation in his manner, no shifting about in his chair. He was alert, eager, clear-headed.

But as the luncheon went on, neither the president nor manager mentioned the real object of the interview. Each was thinking the matter over seriously, and neither could be sure of the others secretely formed opinion. The situation became awkward. Finally, the president excused himself on the pretence of going into the library to speak to a friend who had just entered. But after speaking to his friend, he went straight to the desk and wrote a message on a telegraph blank. He gave the message to a uniformed attendant, and went back to the dining room.

In a few minutes a page brought a telegram to the manager, who read it hurriedly, while the president finished telling their guest about a shooting trip in Maine. This is what the telegram said:

"The job is too big for a boozer. We can't run our business by cocktail power."

Mother Had to Be Parted From Baby Boy

Little Jack is in a distant city. His mother is many miles away, and true to the old saying about distance making the heart grow fonder, Jackie's mother longs and longs for a sight of her little man Now if it were only a case of miles and dollars she might somehow or other come home occasionally, but it's more than that. She has consumption.

When she thinks of the once happy triangle—mother, father and child—its mighty hard to keep from tears. She won't let Daddy bring Jack down to see her, despite the tug at the heart strings. "No," she says, "Jackie must not come, he might get consumption, too." So Jack lives with his grandmother, Daddy works in a machine shop, and mother is faithfully obeying doctor's and nurse's orders at the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives. She hopes to be home for Christmas—healthy and happy.

Contributions to aid Muskoka Hospital in its work may be sent to Hon. W. A. Charlton, 223 College Street, Toronto.

A Pioneer Pension System

The Canadian Pacific Railway is this year celebrating the twentieth anniversary of the foundation of the Company's system of pensions for the employees.

It was in 1902 that the Board of Directors, under the Presidency of Lord Shaughnessy, looked into the future for the benefit of those who were laying the foundations of the service that was to take so large a part in the up-building of Canada.

In December, 1902, the directors passed a resolution stating that a time had come when provision should be made for officers and permanent employees who, after long years of faithful service, had reached an age when they were unequal to the further performance of their duties, and announcing that a plan of superannuation had been determined upon.

The plan was a generous one. The Company provided all the money necessary, and the employees were not called upon to contribute to it in any way whatever. In 1903 when it was first put into effect Canadian Pacific employees numbered about 40,000. To-day they approximate 90,000, and every one of them, from the humblest stenographer, office boy, or "track walker" or even the minor employee at some far-off outpost in China or in Europe, has old-age sustenance guaranteed so long as he or she stays with the Company.

Some Statistics

The Company's first contribution to the pension fund was $250,000 which was supplemented by annual grants starting at $80,000 which have, from time to time, been increased, until for some years past it has been $500,000 annually. To the end of 1922 the Company had contributed a total of $4,715,000 to the fund while payments on pensions had amounted to $3,857,802, leaving a balance to the credit of the fund of $1,640,103. In 1922 the total payments made amounted to $508,051, and at October 1st of this year the total number of the Company's pensioners was 1,182, each of whom was drawing an average of $35.92 per month. It is of interest to note that since the pension fund became operative, 877 pensions have become inoperative through the death of the beneficiaries.

Having in view conditions of increased living costs which then prevailed the world over, the Company in 1919 allowed the pensioners an additional bonus of twenty-five per cent. of their regular allowance. This went into effect on May 1st of that year, and continued until the end of 1922. In view of the modification of the condition that made it necessary, that bonus is this year set at twenty per cent.

Kept in Canada

By far the greater part of this money is of course distributed in Canada, just as is the case with the Company's vast payroll of over $100,000,000 annually, and the many millions it yearly spends on the purchase of supplies under the policy of distributing as much of its expenditure as is possible in the country it exists to serve.

The operation of the fund is simplicity itself. Upon reaching the age of 65 every employee who has joined the staff before reaching the age of forty is entitled to retirement if the Company so desires and can claim a pension of one per cent. of the average monthly pay received for the ten years preceding retirement for every year in which he has been in the Company's service. This is as the system was first devised twenty years ago, and there has been but one amendment to its provisions. In 1908 it was found that in some cases the amount of the pension so calculated was insufficient to protect the recipient against want as was intended, and it was provided that from thenceforth the minimum amount of pension paid would be $20 per month.

Fosters Efficiency

That this system has been a big factor in fostering the efficiency so largely identified with Canadian Pacific operation is undeniable. Mr. E. W. Beatty, President of the Company, speaks of it not only as a prime necessity in these days of sociological progress, and as an inherent right of those who give lives of faithful work to Canadian Pacific service, but also as one of the things that has helped to bring into existence the high standard of co-operation that exists between all branches of the Company's service. "It is helping to make contented employees," says Mr. Beatty, "and that is the first requisite of faithful, efficient service."

BONDS

Are Mortgages on Fixed Assets

When a township issues debentures (or bonds) it gives a mortgage on the whole township for security to the buyers of the bonds for the loan of their money for a definite number of years at a satisfactory rate of interest.

If the amount required is large it is divided into small mortgages, (that is, bonds or debentures) of $500 or $1,000 each, with the same security behind each, so that investors with small sums may take advantage it.

Bonds or debentures are rated the safest kind of an investment.

Man Who Started Fire With Coal Oil Lost His Life

One of the most disastrous and shocking fires ever witnessed in Prescott occured Tuesday Morning when the frame residence situated on the corner Park and George streets, owned by C. J. French, K. C., and occupied by Ezra McLean, was completely gutted by fire. Mr. McLean was attempting to ignite the fire with coal oil when a terrific explosion occurred. Immediately Mr. McLean was enveloped in flames, which spread rapidly, the room in a moment being a seething mass.

Mr. McLean calling to the other members of the family who were just arising, rushed to the street. They hurried out in their night clothes, and, in endeavoring to assist him, Mrs. McLean and two of the children were badly burned about the arms and hands. Mr. McLean was carried into the residence of Dr. W. C. Brown, next door, terribly burned, and first aid rendered. He was then removed to the Hepburn Hospital, Ogdensburg, where he died at 1.30

The Literary Society held its monthly election of officers on Friday, resulting as follows: President, Ralph Dillabough; Vice-President, Margaret Carlyle; Secretary Treasurer, Pearle Swerdfeger; Executive Committee, Effie MacGregor, Gladys Swerdfeger and Lorne Marcellus. A speech contest was of more than ordinary interest. Mildred Dillabough spoke on "Sir John A. MacDonald; Effie MacGregor on "Andrew Bonar Law;" Arthur Casselman on "The Value of Good Roads;" Lorne Marcellus on "Modern Improvements in Farming." The speeches were carefully prepared and creditably delivered. The judges, Ralph Dillabough, Gladys Swerdfeger, and Orland Kyle, after due deliberation, decided that Mildred Dillabough had won first place. The meeting was favored with a number of musical selections from the orchestra which consisted of Arthur Casselman, Earle Gordon and Lorne Marcellus.

At the public meeting addressed by Mrs. W. H. Becker, Secretary of the Home and School Associations, the High School students sang "The Midshipmite" and responded to the call for an encore with "The Mosquito's Serenade."

On Saturday Miss H. J. Starr attended the annual luncheon of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation at the Chateau Laurier, Ottawa.

The ninth regular meeting of the Chesterville Peptimists was held in Room "A" on Friday November 30th. The secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting which were afterwards adopted. The Auxiliary then sang "Pack up your Troubles."

Mabel Henderson showed that cleanliness of the food we eat helped prevention of disease. Eldridge Perault explained that wisdom in choosing one's food might result in better health and longer life. Edith Hornby gave a number of good food habits. Harry Henderson called our attention to some very valuable points about food. Rose Allison read an excellent paper on "How to eat to be Healthy." Irene Hamilton also read a very interesting paper on "Eating to Reach Normal Weight." Then four of the girls gave a quartette entitled "Foods." Gladys Alford told us what our Daily Menu should be, and Bruce Harper told us a few points about "Our Daily Bread." By the use of a blackboard diagram, Kieth Graham listed the many good Foods for children of school age. He emphasized the fact of "less meats more fruits and vegetables and no fried foods." Arthur Haley gave a talk on "The contents of the School Lunch" and touched briefly on the value of the Hot Lunch. Ralph Durant gave some valuable hints in his talk on "Lots to Eat but Not Well Fed." He showed how, in many cases, parents thought that if their children were being satisfied at the table that they were being well nourished whereas the foods they were serving to the children were of little or no value in building up bone. muscle and making of good blood. Hence the children were undernourished and often pale and sickly.

Those taking part in this programme showed a great improvement in the way they delivered their parts. Four received Merit Badges for a week for giving their parts without the help of any notes whatever.

After dinner Mr. Boyd gave a few remarks on, "A Diet for a School Child."

Tne visiting Committee reported that Jimmie Cramer and Crawford Barkley were ill.

The treasurer reported 19c in the mite box. The meeting closed at 3 o'clock bv singing the National Anthem.

Shopbreakers Busy In Perth Stores

Shopbreakers Saturday night entered the premises of Mr. L. Lapoint, who conducts a tobacco, billiard and barbering business in Perth. The burglars entered a rear cellar window, but could not gain the store above. Although there was a quantity of tobacco stored in the cellar, nothing was taken. This is the second store entry in Perth in two successive nights, the dry goods store of J. T. Conway being entered the night before, and goods to the value of $400 taken.

Identify Prisoner As Escaped Man

Edward Marsden, who is being held in Cornwall on a charge of stealing an automobile owned by Joseph Lawn and two robes from the Cornwall Electric Service Garage some time ago, has been identified as the man who escaped from the Montreal police while being taken across Victoria bridge in an automobile on Tuesday. Identification was made comp ete by a belt and some buttons which was jerked from the coat of the Montreal fugitive by the officer at the time of his escape. The belt was found to match the coat which Marsden was wearing at the time of his arrest by the Cornwall police. The identification was made by Provincial Officer Arthur Martin and Mr. Bert Murchinson, one of the owners of the garage, who went to Montreal for that purpose. So far all efforts to trace Mr. Lawn's car have failed.

Marsden appearing in police court gave his age as 20, but he is thought to be much older. Through his finger prints, he is found to have a long criminal record, having been convicted in Hamilton on November 21, 1916, on a charge of house-breaking and theft. In the same city on April 10, 1917, he was convicted for theft. On April 25, 1919, he was released on parole, the same being revoked on August 7 of the same year. On May 20, 1919, he again at Hamilton was convicted on a charge of stealing an automobile. On September 15, 1919, at London, Ont., he was sentenced to three years at Portsmouth on a charge of theft. In all escapades he went under the name of Howard Patterson. Marsden's claim that he is only 20 years of age is not supported by his criminal record.

All Lit Up

Bjones (badly intoxicated and holding affectionately to a lamp post, which he kicks vigorously, making a ringing noise which disturbs peace of quiet street): Wake up , ole woman! wake up an' let me in!"

Cop (running up and shaking Bjones vigorously): "What's all this racket about? Stop kicking that lamp-post and making such a din. And get home or I'll run you in."

Bjones: "But I'm home. Can't wake the ole woman."

Cop: "Why, man, this is a lamp-post. You're not at home."

Bjones: "I'm home, I tell you. Ole woman must be deaf. But," (looking up and pointing to light in the lamp above him), "she's home all right. Light's burning in her room."

A Modern Elegy

The cowbell tolls the knell of parting day, as homeward hikes the herd of lowly kin; the plowman homeward plods his weary way, to milk eleven cows and feed his swine. He strips the harness off his sweaty steeds and plants a row or two of early spuds, sows fourteen kinds of summer garden seeds, and water hawks to wash the family duds. Up in the loft where first the hay was stored, he stalks the old Minorca questioning eggs, sets foot upon a loosely fastened board, and falls eleven miles and breaks both legs. When he goes forth to feed the mulley calf and eke the one that later wid have horns, they rudely bunt him in the latter half, and rally round and stand upon his corns. Anon he grasps the family axe and deftly smites the fuel a heap, behind the stove the kindling stacks, then goes and grabs a little sleep; and while upon the hay he pounds his ear, like Viking bold of battle trappings shorn, his dreams are not of home and loved one dear, for his subconscious self keeps on a shucking corn. Eft-soon Big Ben upon the shelf his morning hate hymn renders, and bids the plowman hump himself and gird on his suspenders. And so it is, from day to day, in sunshine and in rain, the plowman spits on his hands and hits it up again. Why doth the husbandman his life work pattern on such vigorous plan? 'Tis not that he may boost the income tax, but gather kale to pay the hired man.

Doctors Take Tooth From Woman's Lung

Resorting to the princip'e a sword swallower employs, surgeons of St. Marv's Hospital, St. Mark's Avenue, Brooklyn, recovered a tooth that had been swallowed by Mrs. Helena Petersberger, 30 years old

Several months ago Mrs. Petersberger had the tooth pulled. She gulped and it fell back in her throat and down into one of her lungs. She coughed constantly and Dr. John G. Williams, of Brooklyn, planned the tooth's recovery.

Mrs. Petersberger was not given an anaesthetic but was placed on the operating table with her head and neck in a position so that the throat larnyx and lung were in a straight line. A thin metal tube which surgeons call a bronchoscope was inserted. A surgeon directed it through an X-ray machine until the end of the tube was directly over the tooth. Then a pair of specially made forcips was slipped through the tube and the tooth withdrawn. Mrs. Petersberger was at her home at night finally rid of the bothersome molar.

Who Pays For The Advertising?

A page advertisement in colors on the back cover of the Ladies' Home Journal for just one issue costs $15,000.

Who pays it in the end?

Nobody!

Jones Brothers were printing small forms on a Gordon Press, hand-fed which turns out about 1000 impressions per hour.

They bought a Kelly automatic which turns out about 3000 per hour. Running on a cost-plus basis, the patrons get their work on the Kelly done for much less, and the printer, turning out more work, makes more money.

Who pays for the Kelly? Nobody!

Advertising creates an instant demand and stimulates the sale of a product till it can be produced in large quantities—like a Ford car every six seconds—and that means the lowest possible cost of production.

If, by advertising, a man can speed up the sale of an article till he can make and distribute it cheaper than any competitor; and the consumer can buy it for less than he used to pay, and the manufacturer is making more money on the article than he ever made—who pays for the advertising?

Nobody!

The Foolish Virgins

Ethel—"When it comes to marrying, I wouldn't give a thought to how much a man was making."

Maud—"Neither would I, dear. What would interest me most would be how much he had already made, It's foolish to take chances."

Lumbago, Sciatica, Rheumatism, and all other similar muscular ailments vanish under applications of Williams' Camphorated Mustard Cream. Quick, Clean, no burning—no blistering. 35c at all druggist's.

Value Received

A young man, having found the wallet of a business executive, was ushered into his private office, Said the latter: "Well, young man, say what you have to say and say it quickly. My time is worth a dollar a minute.

"And so is mine. Here is a wallet you lost yesterday, less pay for an hour's time which I used in waiting to see you,' the voung man replied as he extracted sixty dollars from the wallet.

SCOTCH LASSIES FIND NEW HOMES AWAITING THEM IN CANADA

SHOULD the "hired girl" or the "maid of all work" of times gone by take a look into the present day situation, the shock would be severe and possibly fatal.

Signs of the times show conditions to be improved in relation to the "domestic." When the above group of girls from the British Isles arrived at Dorchester House, Montreal, after crossing to Quebec by the Canadian Pacific S.S. Montcalm, to take up domestic service in Canada, the street was literally lined with limousines and smart touring cars.

After the formalities of interviewing and the signing of papers, the authorities of Dorchester House might easily say "Yes! we have no maids," as all of the group of excellent Old Country lassies found immediate employment. There were approximately fifty in the consignment and there were well over fifty waiting homes for them. The Rev. John Chisholm, who is seen in the illustration is a prominent factor in bringing to Canada an excellent type of domestic servant and he follows his work up by seeing that the individual girl is placed in a house congenial to her. These girls are from all parts of the Old Country and are representative of all religious bodies. It is invariably arranged that girls are placed in homes of their own religious denominations.

Every Shot a Bull's Eye

Illicit hooch may not kill you, but you'll never look the same.

Sawing Wood

(Experimental Farms Note.)

The buck-saw, like the grain cradle, is practically an institution of the past. A necessary evil once, it should now be regarded as an antiquated invention for driving boys off the farm, and relegated to the museum for curiosities.

The one-man cross-cut is a little better, while the two-man cross-cut is a distinct step in the evolution of sociability. It has its place in the bush, of course, and even the other instruments of torture aforementioned find occasional employment, just as the old grain cradle is resurrected now and then for some special purpose.

As a regular means of working up the winter wood pile, however, these are only to be advocated for one who absolutely has not and cannot get the cash to hire a buzz-saw outfit. Modern life is too busy and full of interest to spend unnecessarily in back-testing mechanical routine which machinery enables us to dispense with. Most of us can find enough manual-labor jobs after we have substituted as much gasoline for muscle as we have wit to use.

We have heard arguments that buzz-sawing wood is more expensive than buck-sawing. But these calculations are generally based on old time conditions. As it works out in these times, most of us find that gasoline beats elbow grease by a substantial margin. There is this, too, that buzz-sawing is a more or less sociable job which goes with a vim and men quite properly prefer it to the tedium of hand-sawing.

Again, it wid be noticed that the farmer who buzzes his supply gets his job overwith and goes on to something else, while the buck-saw adherent is hardly ever out of a job. The wood pile stares him in the face until he hates to go past it.

What a comfort there is in looking at a big heap of sawed fire-wood in the yard when a cold snap comes on and the snow piles deep around the buildings.

Gets Coal Oil for Vinegar and the Pickles Blow Up

There was an explosion in the home of Walter Truman, 116 Rideau street, Kingston, when coal oil which had been purchased as vinegar was put on the stove to boil for pickling purposes. The stove was shattered, and there were lively doings in the kitchen, but fortunately those in it escaped injury.

Kills Six Foot Wild Cat Not Far From These Parts

George Nance, Chisholm Mills, near Tweed, killed an enormous wild cat. It measured six feet long, had teeth one and a half inches long, and its claws measured the same as the teeth. When first seen by Mr. Vance it was eating a rabbit.

New Cars de Luxe Made in Canada

OF the best of modern improvements to railway service in Canada are the Canadian Pacific combination dining and parlor cars. The new all-steel cars, six in number, will operate on the more important short runs, affording every convenience and luxury, where full size dining and parlor cars are not required. They are the only Cafe Parlor Cars existant which are fitted with a smoking room, and the revolving slumber-back chairs are another distinctive feature.

Interior decoration has been given special consideration by the Company, and the new cars are an extremely well finished product. Inlaid mahogany has been used with good effect, the ceilings have a light brown finish, and the lighting has been arranged to permit reading in any part of the car without strain or glare. Lamps are arranged along the centre of the ceiling, and bracket lamps over each table and chair, all with truscan shades, diffuse a warm glow. The new cars are different from any others doing service in Canada in that they are practically divided into four separate compartments. The kitchen, fully equipped, takes up nearly 16 feet of one end, and in this are found a huge range with ovens and steam tables attached. A charcoal burning grill is placed next the range, and on the other side are the separate refrigerators for meats, fish, fruits, milk, cream and ice cream. Every available inch of flooring seems to be utilized, but there is room enough for three men to work and for the carving tables, sink, dish washer and innumerable lockers for groceries, chinaware, glass, silver, etc. A tank overhead supplies fresh and filtered water for use in the dining room and kitchen.

Leaving the kitchen one comes upon a small vestibule which opens into the dining room. Handsome china and silver cabinets can be seen here, and stowed snugly into the corner is a "bar" which will hold a surprisingly large number of bottles, and keep them cool too, because ice may be let into a chamber at the rear, through the roof.

The dining room is 19 feet long and seats 18 people. Three tables each accommodate four diners, and three tables, two. Particularly when lighted, the dining room is most beautiful. The general effect is very rich and soft.

The parlor, over 21 feet long, contains twelve chairs with swivel base and reclining back. There is a good distribution of light for reading, and the compartment is absolutely the last word in comfort.

The smoking room is reached through a short corridor, off which are the wash rooms. This is somewhat smaller, but decidedly more comfortable than the smoking rooms of the standard sleeper or first class coaches. It is over 7 feet long and the two leather sofas accommodate six people with ease.

The new Canadian Pacific cafe parlor cars have their own heating units which is another advantage. They are fitted with cooling fans and the ventilating system has been so arranged as to ensure a complete change of air every few minutes without causing draughts.

These cars are a credit to the Canadian workmanship that has gone into their makeup, and will do much to encourage travel in this part of the continent.

Reception at The Springs

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Bolton of Winchester Springs, gave a grand reception on Tuesday evening Nov. 27th, in their home, in honor of their son John Moore, who had just arrived with his bride from their honey-moon which had been spent for the past two weeks in Detroit, Mich., and other western points. Guests began to arrive at half after eight o'clock and were received by Mrs. Orton Webb and Mrs. Edgar Summers in their usual charming manner, which made everybody feel at home. The number of guests present was about one hundred and thirty-five

The bride and groom arrived at the appointed time and were also cheerfully received and at a later hour were introduced to the guests present, from whom the young couple received many congratulatulations. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and costly gifts which showed the high esteem in which she is held by her many friends. After a couple of hours had been spent in various games and music, it then being about 10.30, a dainty lap lunch was served, after which all returned to their former past time which was merrily indulged in for sometime, until all were called to order by Mr. Howard Nesbitt, who acted as toast-master for the occasion. Rev. Edwin Smythe was called upon and gave a toast in honor of King George, and various other subjects which created much laughter; Mr. Joseph Webb was next called, who asked that the bride and groom be brought forward, this being done, he gave some great matrimonial advice, with regard to the bride, and brides-to-be, which was enjoyed by all. Mr. Howard Nesbitt then gave advice to the groom with regards to the duty of husband, through married life, in the creating of home happiness. He gave this in his jocular manner which caused rounds of applause. Mr. Preston McIntosh then gave a few well chosen remarks in regard to the older married folk. which being known by experience caused many to think of their matrimonial days. Mr. Nehemiah Summers then gave a few able remarks in regard to widows and widowers, in regards to whom he advised neither party to live alone, as God had not intended it so.

After all joining hands and circling round the bride and groom all sang cheerily "For they are jolly good fellows." It then reaching the hour of one o'clock, the older folks began to take their departure. The younger folk still remaining, amusements consisting of games and dancing for the balance of the evening. Violin selections were rendered by Mr. Heber McIntosh, a few comic songs with variations of step dancing were given by Morten Bolton, which caused rounds of laughter and applause.

The young folk tripped the light fantastic to the wee small hours of three, after all reporting that they had spent an enjoyable evening they retired to their respective homes, after wishing the bride and groom many years of happy married life.

Mr. J. J. Gardiuer's Illustrated Lecture Mnch Appreciated

With a view to the more intelligent use of the Telephone and a better understanding between the Company and its subscribers District Manager, Mr. J. J. Gardiner, under the auspices of Trinity Methodist S. S. delivered in a most interesting and forceful way, his lecture on the birth and developement of the telephone.

The lecture was accompanied by unusually good moving pictures. The picture machine was ably managed by Mr. C. W. Currie, also of the Bell staff. Although the weather was unfavorable the crowd was large and showed great interest.

The comments were such as—"I had no idea that the telephone service was so intricate," "extra well told and illustrated," "very fine indeed," "The most instructive movies ever shown in Chesterville."

Mr. Wes. Fulton very fittingly moved a vote of thanks, which Rev. Mr. Brown put before the meeting and received a most hearty response.

Before showing the last picture of the evening Mr. Gardiner expressed his appreciation of the large turn out under such unfavorable weather conditions, and thanked Manager Hunt of the Bell Telephone Co., for his invitation to come to Chesterville and give his illustrated lecture and for the very satisfactory arrangements he had been able to complete. Mr. Gardiner also expressed his thanks to the Rev. Brown who acted as chairman, and to the S. S. Orchestra for their very able and delightful assistance during the evening.
