Mrs. G. C. Reveler and Miss Winonah spent Monday in Ottawa.

Miss Annie Hamilton spent the week-end the guest of Miss Tillie Coons.

The Girl Guides held a very pleasing party in the town hall on Friday evening last.

Miss Lillian McInnis and Eva Gibson were the week end guests of Miss Muriel Robinson.

Mrs. H. P. Allison, Smiths Falls, and Mrs. A. B. Allison, Morewood, were visiting friends in Winchester on Saturday last.

At Vancouver, B. C., on November 22, Mary Carlotta, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Brouse, Iroquois, was married to John Carmichael of Vancouver.

Mrs. Geo. Hoy, Mr. J. S. and Mrs. Robinson, and Willie Robinson motored to Ottawa on Tuesday to visit Mrs. Robinsons brother, Mr. Geo. J. Hoy of Mountain who is ill in St. Luke's Hospital. They found him much improved.

The beautiful church of St. James Morrisburg, was the scene of a quiet wedding on Sunday, November 26th, when Miss Dorothy Carson of that town and Mr. Wm. Hughson of Brockville were united in the Holy Bonds of Matrimony.

The St. Andrew's Concert given in the Town Hall on Thursday night last by the Orpheus Singers of Ottawa was greatly enjoyed by all who were present, and the programme one of high merit. Practically every number was encored and was willingly responded to.

A social dance will be given in the Town Hall, Winchester, Wednesday, Dec. 13 1922. The promoters of the dance hope to make it a real success and the dancing public are cordially invited. Music will be furnished by "Sifty's Melody Boys," and that in itself, assures one and all, of best of music. For those who do not dance card tables will be the order of the evening. Dancing from 9 p.m. until 2 a. m. Tickets $1.00.

Dr. Macdougall and Ken Crerar had an exciting experience and a miraculous escape while motoring on Monday. The snow had made the roads very slippery and it was difficult to keep a car on the road. When about half way between Ormond and Vernon, the car began to slide and before it could be stopped rolled over into the ditch. Both occupants escaped with minor bruises, and after repairs at Vernon the car was able to proceed —Russell Leader.

A reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Nesbitt on Friday evening Dec. 1st 1922, at which sixty-five relatives, friends an neighbours gathered in honour of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Munroe, just returned from their wedding trip. It was a splendid occasion for a good shake hands and visit all round, and the usual congratulations and good wishes were very generously extended. A good number of beautiful and useful presents were brought, which, no boubt will add to the comfort and happiness of Mr. and Mrs. Munroe in their new home. Bountiful refreshments were served by the school mates and lady friends of the bride after which the bride's cake was cut and distributed in such a way that everyone could take a piece home to dream on. Rev. Mr. Hall then expressed the thanks and appreciation of the guests in a most suitable way, for the kindness and hospitality of the host and hostess, and spoke felicitous words to the bride and groom. Mr. Nesbitt and Mr. Munroe responded briefly and all sang "Auld Lang Syne" before leaving for home.

Successful Bazaar

The annual bazaar held by the Ladies Aid Society of St. Paul's Church last Friday afternoon and the annual dinner in the evening was a splendid success both financially and socially. The total receipts amounted to over $350. and the attendance was large. There was offered for sale a large number of very useful and beautiful gifts, the work and contributions of the ladies of the congregation, and these sold readily. The annual dinner was largely attended and as in past years, the service and quality and abundance of provisions could not be excelled. There was a pleasing intellectual entertainment following the dinner. After a couple of musical numbers, Rev. J. K. Curtis of the Methodist Church gave an exceptionally fine address on the subject of "The Church as a social power in the Community" and was followed by Rev. Dr. Houghson, of Vernon, who spoke on "The Church as a power for righteousness in the Community." Both addresses were an intellectual treat and listened to with unusual attention and pleasure, Rev. Mr. White, the new Baptist minister here, was also present and spoke a few words.

W. C. T. U.

The regular monthly meeting was held in the Council Chamber yesterday afternoon with the President, Mrs. Empey, in the chair. In the absence of the Evangelistic Supt., the 24th, Psalm was read by Mrs. Rennick and Mrs Knight led in prayer after which a hymn was sung and business transacted.

Rev. J. K. Curtis brought an interesting report from the recent Convention in Toronto in which the W. C. T. U. work was so outstanding. Its representatives were there from all parts of the world. One of the speakers said that women never hesitated or grew tired in their fight for probition, while men so often did. An incident was told of how 65 women in 1873 went through Hillsboro and prayed the 24 saloons out of business. They kept at it and then went to other towns, where they were just as successful. Some of the prominent lady speakers heard there were:—Miss Agnes Slack and Mrs. Mary J. Campbell of Lucknow, W. C. T. U. organizer for India. The latter's appeals were wonderfully passionate, pleading that liquor be not sent to India, that we cease to debauch those lands with strong drink. Liquor is not made in India but is being sent from Christian lands. She plead for a day of fasting for the suppression of the liquor traffic. Dr. Margaret Patterson, police magistrate of Toronto had a wealth of information that stirred the audience profoundly. Miss Norville, Argentina, made a very remarkable appeal, saying that the South American countries are the most alcoholic in the world. There are so many breweries and distilleries. She said law is not much good unless we have an educated people behind it. The Japanese representative made a splendid appeal, as also did Mrs. Knox Livingstone, an American.

It was moved by Mrs. Ritchie seconded by Mrs. Moffat that Mr. Curtis be given a standing vote of thanks and a hearty clap. A committee of five ladies was appointed to wait on the Town Council with an appeal to clean up our town from the liquor brought in.

LOCAL AND GENERAL NOTES

After a short illness, Mrs. Ellen Reid, whose maiden, name was Miss Ellen Pruner daughter of the late Nelson Pruner, Nudel Bush, passed away at the resident of her son, Mr. Meredith Reid, on Wednsday morning November 29th, at the age of 67 years. With the exception of the last four years spent practically all her life in Morrisburg.

Law is a queer propisition, and some times it seems as if law and justice are not of the same family.

The law says a dog must wear a tag, and must not run at large, but a Kenmore man took a pot shot at a dog running at large around his henyard, and the law says $10 and costs.

Mr. Edward Summers, graduate of Guelph Agricultural College, son of Mr and Mrs. Edward Summers, Winchester, was awarded second prize in the Fat Cattle Judging Contest at the Royal Fat Stock Fair at Toronto. He is now in Chicago attending a similiar fair. He is competing against 21 teams.

Searching for her infant son, aged one year and ten months, Mrs. J. K. Clark, of Reid's Mills, Grenville County, found him in a tank in the yard underneath the ice which covered it. A small pail was found in the tank beside him and it is thought that he lost his balance and fell in while endeavoring to dip out the water. A physician who was summoned worked over the child but was unable to restore him to life.

Santa Claus had a somewhat strenuous time of it last Saturday afternoon, when he visited the Big Store. The children were looking for him, and long before the time of his arrival the boys and girls were there in great numbers. The fathers and mothers were also present, many from the Country, and they had their babes in arms to see old Santa.

The old chap with the northern outfit and grey whiskers came in modern style in an automobile gaily decorated. About 600 packages were distributed to the children, and pandemoium reigned in and about the Big Store. Poor old Santa Claus was badly mauled by some of the bigger boys before he regained his car and was speeded away. It was a delightful afternoon and the event caused much merriment.

The Cassbridge Christmas Entertainment will be held in the School House, Wednesday evening, Dec. 20th

Come one, Come all.

At last Sunday's services in the Methodist Church, Rev. J. K. Curtis gave very interesting reports of the International Convention of the World League against Alcohol, which he had attended during the previous week in Toronto. Over 1100 delegates were in attendance, representing 63 nationalities. He told of a wonderful message given by a lady from Japan, and of the admirable address of Premier Drury, in which he promised a further tightening up of the Probition policy. Dr. Margaret Patterson pleaded for the use of milk instead of beer. Other outstanding speakers were Dr. Salesby a noted scientist, Dr. Gordon of Australia, and father Minehan of Toronto. The latter was once a modern ationist but found out that even one glass always affected the atmosphere and conversation of a gathering. Sir George Foster spoke for 15 minutes with tremendous effect. A wonderful tableau and pageant on the closing night pictured the dethroning of King Alcohol in which there were sixty performers.

In closing the evening address Mr. Curtis referred strongly to local conditions, saying that publicity should be given to what is now going on in Winchester, that we must now allow booze to be brought in to destroy our men and boys. He said "Let us report and expose those who break the law," He admired the attitude of the Press" Editor in this respect. He expressed his appreciation of having been sent to this Convention and those who listened to his stirring addresses felt that no mistake had been made in the choice of a delegate.

Conservative Rally

There was an old time rally of Conservatives at Winchester Springs last Thursday afternoon, and some of the old time enthusiasm too. It was intended as a "Rally" meeting. Its promoters were not disappointed. The hall was filled to overflowing, and there was practically as many on the outside, unable to get in as there were inside the hall. Dr. Collison the County President presided. The meeting was thoroughly representative, every corner of the riding being well represented. One striking feature of the gathering was the unusual number of ladies present—more than was ever seen at a similar gathering in this County. There was only two speakers, Mr. O. D. Casselman, former Federal member for the County, and Hon. G. H. Ferguson, Conservative Leader in Ontario. Those who heard him, say that Mr. Casselman was never heard to better advantage. Mr. Casselman is at all times a very interesting and very pleasing speaker, but his address on Thursday last had a fighting ring in it, an aggressiveness and a sureness that inspired confidence and enlisted sympathy. Hon. Mr. Ferguson spoke at considerable length, reviewing the work and the misdeeds of the Drury Government, and predicting a sweeping victory for the Conservative party at the next election.

Some idea of the wealth accruing to the people of Ontario from their timber resources is gained from the high prices now being paid for timber rights. In sales made by the Ontario Government on November 1, disposing of the timber rights on 187 square miles of land, prices as high as $12.50 per thousand feet were obtained for pine timber, and as high as $9 50 per thousand feet for spruce timber. Ontario is still one of the great timber reserves of the continent and the royalties from the sale of timber are the an important part of the provincial revenue.

To all Patrons Supplying Milk at Ellis No. 1 Factory

Whereas I believe that rumors have been circulated among patrons supplying milk to my Factory, to the effect that my method of payment for milk for the month of November and December is ilegal, and I have been, as it were, held up to public ridicule for the offering of prices such as I have offered, and am paying to the farmers of this locality for their hard earned produce, I wish, in this connection, to take strong exception to all such stories which might be in circulation among my patrons, and to inform them that I never had, or have I to-day, any intention whatever of conducting an illegal business of any kind, and any information handed out with the above mentioned meaning is surely information coming from some source or sources, not in harmony with my personal welfare or with the success of my business among the farmers of this part of the country. I further desire to state that I fully intend to carry on my business in the future as I have carried it on in the past, and any person or persons need not hesitate in supplying milk to my plant in any amount as their interest shall, at all times, be most carefully attended to. In conclusion please allow me to announce that our price for the month of January shall be $2.50 per cwt., as determined as usual by the Butter Fat Basis.

For the Boys and Girls

Playing Host to the Birds.

There are nooks and corners on all country estates where much could be done by the boys and girls, as well as adults, in sustaining and increasing bird life. The orchards, groves and hedges offer plenty of good sites for the location of bird-houses, feeding stations and storm protectors, and the facilities for constructing and setting up bird snuggeries and feederies are never lacking.

During the season when the natural food supply of the birds is at its lowest point, the birds respond most readily to human hospitality. Winter feeding has become very popular and the result has been to bring about a better understanding between the birds and their human friends.

Birds live principally on weed seeds and insects and do the farmers and gardeners an incalculable service by reducing the weed crop and the number of insect enemies. But there are times during the winter season when the ground is frozen or covered with snow, so that it is impossible for even hardy birds to get a sufficiency of food from the great storehouse of nature. Many of them die of starvation. A few cents worth of wheat or other small grain and a little time during spells of severe weather will add materially in sustaining and encouraging bird life. One of the best examples of this kind may be gained from the people of Denmark. The traveler in passing through that cold country during the winter does not fail to notice sheaves of grain placed on the roofs or buildings or in trees for the birds to feed on. During the Christmas holidays every good Dane is expected to put out a sheaf of grain to give the birds a Christmas dinner.

There are many tyes of bird-houses suitable for nesting and rearing the young. A tin can, a hollow log, a gourd with a hole cut in one side of it, or a box nailed up in a tree or suspended from a limb, all make good homes in which the birds will build their nests and rear their broods.

A bird feedery which at the same time combines protection from the driving winds and storms is one of the best structures that can be set up for the use of birds. It needs only a brief description and may be suspended from a tree or placed so as to move on a pivot.

Get or make a box in shape about twice as long as it is wide; take two wide shingles and round off the thin ends; nail the thick end on each end of the box; nail a narow strip across the lower front of the box; attach a wire to the top of the box and suspend from the branch of a tree so that the box balances evenly. The protruding shingles will keep the box in a position with its back to the wind and thus shelter and protect the bird visitor.

A writer states that one result of the increasingly popular interest in birds has been a definite movement to protect them and to concentrate them where they are especially desired. It is during the breeding period that birds are at their best, and people who love to see and hear them or who need their help in fighting insect pests are eager to offer inducements in the way of nesting-sites to invite their presence at that season.

The transformation of a primeval wilderness into cultivated land has modified the distribution of birds to a marked degree. Perhaps no group of birds has suffered greater disturbance by the clearing of wooded areas than those nesting in hollow trees. Forests have decreased to a small part of their former extent, and decaying trees suitable for occupancy by such birds are usually the first to be cut. From an economic point of view, hole-nesting birds rank exceptionally high, and there are strong grounds for the evident desire to keep them in the vicinity of homesteads. To accomplish this the practice arose of erecting houses for the use of the more familiar species. Gradually, as the nesting requirements of other birds have become better understood, the number of species occupying bird-houses has increased.

THE GUARDIAN TREE

By Jean Rambeau

Translated by William L. McPherson

They were talking of spiritualism, telepathy, apparitions and all those things which the 1,500,000 dead in the war have made so painfully popular. M. D., to whom the mistress of the house put a question, answered after a slight hesitation:

"No, madame. Personally, I have never found anything substantial in this class of phenomena. I have never seen a phantom. But the last time I went to my home in the country I heard a story which will interest you, perhaps, and which everybody down there believes to be authentic.

"It is the story of a 'guardian tree.' You know that in the South of France most houses have alongside them a tree, which serves as a landmark, as a protector, an, I might say, almost as a fetish. This tree is sometimes a cypress, sometimes a poplar, sometimes an oak. But more often it is a parasol pine—the Pinus Pinoea of Linnaeus, which is also called the Italian pine or the French pine.

"One of the old houses in my village had a pine of this sort alongside it. It was a very beautiful tree. It was more than a hundred years old. It had been planted, so they said, by a soldier of the Revolution—a gruff old fellow whose portrait hung in the place of honor in the reception room of the house.

"In 1915 a frightful cyclone uprooted many trees in this region. The pine was not unrooted, but it was bent out of the perpendicular. It was evident that the house was menaced by the leaning tree. The least storm might blow it over on the roof, smash the timbers and demolish the walls. They decided to cut the pine down. The village carpenter was sent for. He examined the tree and made a mark on the trunk at the point at which the axe should be laid, so that the pine would not fall on the house. Then he went away and sent back one of his workmen.

"This workman was a sort of simpleton, who didn't know how to read or write and who, because of his mental condition, was known as the 'Gnagna.' The 'Gnagna' looked at the trunk, found the mark where he ought to begin to cut and raised his axe. But as he was about to strike he jumped back, his eyes starting out of his head.

" 'Oh!' he cried.

" 'What is the matter?' asked the proprietor, who was watching him from the doorstep.

" 'The matter is that I cannot cut down this pine.'

" 'Why not?'

" 'You see very well. There is some one who prevents me—some one who stands between me and the tree."

" 'Are you crazy? I would see him if anybody were there.'

" 'Don't you see him, master?'

"No. I don't see anything. There is nobody there. Take up your axe.'

" 'The workman took up his axe again and was about to wield it. But again he recoiled.

" 'No, no, and no!' he said, throwing down his tool. 'I swear to you that there is somebody there. Not a living person, perhaps. I see the pine through him. But it is some one, all the same. Why, it is the man in the reception room; the soldier whose portrait I have seen in your house. I swear that he is there, and that he forbids me to touch this pine tree. And by the living God I will not touch it! Not for hundreds, nor for thousands! Get another carpenter if you want to.'

"The 'Gnagna' made the sign of the cross, put his axe on his shoulder and went away.

"The next day the proprietor went to see the head carpenter and asked him for another man. But the story had spread. Everybody had heard that there was a ghost guarding the pine, and no workman in the country was willing to touch the tree. People came to see it. No one could distinguish the phantom which had shown itself to the 'Gnagna.' But what did that prove? It must be there, all the same. The simple-minded see things more clearly than others do. Besides, the third day after a dog howled himself to death under the pine tree. It was clear. The ghost was there. It guarded the tree. But woe to him who should dare to touch it! It would surely fall on the axeman and kill him, or, at least, an evil spell would be cast upon him.

"So it was impossible to find anywhere in the region a man courageous enough to attack the pine. The proprietor was extremely annoyed. He was not rich. The tree could fall on his house at the first gale and demolish it, flattening it out like a pancake. Before the war fifteen or twenty thousand francs would have been enough to rebuild it with. But now it might take fifty or even eighty thousand. That accursed 'Gnagna'! Why had he been inspired to see the phantom?

"In a fury, the proprietor took an axe himself, one morning when there was a high wind, and walked toward the tree. But his old mother stopped him.

" 'No,' she begged, 'don't touch it!'

" 'But if it crushes us?'

" 'Don't touch it! Let the dead alone and trust to God's mercy.'

"The pine was spared. The old mother went to say her prayers under it every evening. Strangers from the city came to see the pine. They took photographs of it and the newspapers printed articles about it. A sort of pilgrimage was established. The sick came to rub their sores against the trunk.

One day when there was no wind the tree collapsed, all of itself. There was a fearful crash. But in falling it did not touch the house. It did not knock loose a single shingle. And what did they find in the ground, among the roots? A buried treasure. An earthen pot, in which were gold and silver pieces of the time of Louis XVI. Fifteen thousand francs, some said. Others said thirty or fifty thousand. Doubtless, during the Revolution, an ancestor had buried his hoard there and then planted a pine tree to mark the spot.

"You must not tell the people down there that the 'Gnagna' was deceived. For everybody the ghost was a reality. It was the soul of the ancestor which appeared. This ancestor wanted to enrich his great-grandson. That is why he prevented the carpenter from touching the tree. It is clear that if the tree had simply been chopped down or sawed off close to the ground the treasure would not have been discovered.

"That is my story, madame. I have told it to occultists and to doctors. The former said to me: 'Yes, it was the soul of the dead man which revealed itself to the simpleton. It was an apparition of the overspirit. It is elementary.' The latter said; "It was a simple halluciation. The 'Gnagna,' having seen the portrait, having known that the ancestor planted the tree, created the image himself. It all passed in his brain. It was a mirage of the subliminal. There is nothing supernatural about it.' What do you think of my story, madame?"

The mistress of the house remained pensive for a moment.

"What can I think of it?" she answered "Mystery surrounds us. The more we progress in science, the more we feel that we know nothing. Suppose we talk about something else?"

So they discussed the M. Sacha Guitry's latest creation.

What We Owe to Savages.

We may look patronizingly or contemptuously on the "untutored savage"; but we should remember that we are indebted to him for many useful inventions.

Without him, for example, it is possible that we should know nothing today of the varied and appetizing potted meats which are such a welcome addition to the domestic larder.

The inspiration of them all was the pemmican, which for centuries formed the winter food of the Indians of North America, before it was adopted by the pioneer fur-traders of the Hudson Bay Campany.

To the aboriginal Americans, too, the world owes the yam, or "sweet potato," which is consumed and enjoyed in such vast quantities in Southern Europe and the United States; and maize of which the world, from Egypt to the Argentine, grows nearly 90,000,000 tons yearly.

The potato figured on the bill of fare of American "savages" centuries before Sir John Hawkins introduced it into England.

Tobacco, "the earth's greatest gift to man," is as savage in its name as in its origin; for "tabac" was the name of the "pipe" in which the West Indian native smoked the fragrant weed long before Jean Nicot presented some of its seeds, brought from Florida, to Catharine de' Medici.

The Canadian who smokes his cigar to-day is merely imitating the old-time West Indian who made his tobacco into cylindrical rolls wrapped in maize-leaves.

The canoe is a gift from the Indians and snowshoes from the Eskimo; and not only was the sledge an old-time invention of the Arctic native, but we have adopted its form, and our explorers even use Eskimo harness for their sledge-dogs.

Many of our tools, too, were in common use among savages many centuries ago. And, try as we may, we can design no sailing craft to rival the "proa," in which the South Sea Islander has skimmed the seas from ancient days at a speed which would leave an American Cup yacht far behind.

In Korea and South America there were suspension bridges hundreds of years before Thomas Telford designed his bridge over the Menai Straits.

Nor must we forget, in our tribute to the savage, that vaccination was used as a preventive of smallpox by the natives of East Africa long before Jenner was cradled; or that the medicine men of Timbuctoo operated successfully for cataract more than three centuries ago, when such an operation was never even dreamt of in Britain or America.

Wood Stronger Than Steel.

Wood is one of the strongest substances in the world, but its strength lies in one direction only. A thin strip of wood cut with the grain will withstand about three times as heavy a pull as steel wire of equal weight. But if the strain is across the grain the strip will be broken by quite a small weight. You cannot pull a stick in two, but you can snap it easily across your knee.

It occurred to an inventor some time ago that it would be possible by using several layers of wood, cut at various angles to the grain, to produce a material of enormous strength. And so plywood was made, which, weight for weight, is vastly stronger than steel.

The layers, sometimes no more than one-hundredth of an inch thick are glued together and subjected to great pressure. The result is a material little thickr than stout paper which will bend but not break.

It is being used nowadays for all kinds of purposes where strength and lightness are required. It is even employed for making the wings of aeroplanes.

So successful was the idea of using several layers of material that it has now been applied not only to wood but to metals, for they also have a grain of a kind.

You know that nickel or silver plating is done by means of electricity, a thin coat of metal being deposited by means of battery currents. The same process is being used to build up "ply-metals," which consist of many layers welded by electricity into one solid mass. By using metals of various sorts a material of amazing strength can be produced.

Testing Coal for a Queen.

In olden days the Lord Mayor of London was one of the Sovereign's most trusted henchmen, and at times many strange duties have fallen to his lot. One of the quaintest was devised by Queen Elizabeth.

Until her reign coal was almost unknown in the South of England, though sea coal was gathered regularly from the shore and used in the North.

One day a Northumbrian subject sent her a consignment of coal. The Queen saw it burn on the hearth and enjoyed it pleasant glow. "Can it be used for cooking?" she asked. She was assured that it could.

But she was a cautious person. She sent a quantity to her Lord Mayor, ordering him to use it for cooking his own dinner and to report to her whether food treated in this way was fit for human consumption.

Not until the Lord Mayor had reported that he had eaten and survived would she have coal used in the royal kitchen.

The Gentle Hint.

An American editor hit upon the following ingenious method of jogging the memories of delinquent subscribers to his paper:

"There i$ a little matter that $ome of our ubcriber$ have $eemingly forgotten entirely. $ome of them have made u$ many promi$e$, but have not kept them. To u$ it i$ a very important matter—it'$ nece$$ary in our bu$ine$$. We are very mode$t and don't like to $peak about $uch remi$$ne$$."

THE PRINCE AS A MASON

HEART OF LONDON IS SHRINKING

For the last twenty years the population of the County of London has been gradually getting smaller, until now there are more than 50,000 fewer people in the county than there were in 1901. On the other hand, the number of people living in the outer ring, or London outside the county areas, has increased by nearly a million. At midnight, June 19, 1921, the total population of London, including its outer ring, was 7,480,201; in 1901 the figures were 6,591,402.

The British Isles as a whole, have 2,000,000 more women than men, and the city of London alone contributes a quarter of this figure. In 1921 the excess of women over men in London and her suburbs was 552,160. The ten years from 1911 to 1921 saw the male population increase by only 57,603, while the number of women gained from 3,844,940 to well over four millions, making an increase of 171,240, or three times the total increase of men. For this, however, the war years 1914-'18 are mainly responsible.

During these years there was also a great increase in the number of widows, the number going from 197,693 in 1911 to 223,615 in 1921. Of the total population of the county in this year, 1,131,889 men were single, 865,300 married, 72,459 widowed and 1,931 divorced, and of the women, 1,309,828 were single, 877,298 married, 223,615 widowed and 2,203 divorced. While the number of spinsters between twenty and thirty years old has decreased in the last few years, there has been a very large increase in their number above the ages of thirty-nine. It has been suggested that this decrease in young and middle-aged single women is probably due to emigration.

The census returns give an interesting table which shows the number of voters in the various boroughs. Men in England are allowed to vote as soon as they reach the age of twenty-one, but women must be thirty years old before they can qualify for fanchise. If Englishwomen were given the vote at the same age as the men they would preponderate in most of the London boroughs and could control every election. As it is, for the whole of the County of London the number of women voters in 1921 was only 933,326, while the men numbered 1,170,662.

As the result of marriages after the war, there has been a considerable increase in the number of children in London, and the total of one year and under is the largest on record, 97,368 boys and 94,787 girls.

The average size of a private family in the city has decreased from 4.15 to 3.79 since 1911. The housing tables of the Census Blue Book show that there has been a tremendous shrinkage in the number of families living in houses containing six rooms and over. The "new poor" have been obliged to accept smaller dwellings, and where 4.1 per cent. of the private families in 1911 occupied places with ten rooms and over, in 1921 only 2.6 per cent. lived in these larger houses. This means that the greater majority of new houses built in these years contained under six rooms. In spite of smaller houses, however, the average amount of accommodation per person has increased during the last ten years, the average number of rooms occupied per head in 1911 being .88, and in 1921 .91.

Husbands, it has been discovered, are invariably from two to three years older than their wives, and as the result of the changes in population the average age of the inhabitants of London has increased. At the census of 1911 twenty centenarians were returned, while in 1921 this number had increased to thirty-two, sixteen of these being in the county itself. It is reckoned that the average age of Londoners has increased by two years in the last ten years.

Machines That Measure Rain.

A rain-gauge consists of a small metal cylinder, the lid of which is in the form of a funnel with a specified diameter. Inside the cylinder is a small glass vessel for collecting the rain.

The rim of the funnel is usually composed of brass, whilst the rest of the contrivance is made from copper or japanned metal, which serve as a protection against rust.

Two types of rain-gauges are in use at the present time. One has a diameter of eight inches and contains a metal bucket from which the rain is measured; the other is three inches smaller and contains a glass vessel graduated in half-inches, from which the water is poured into another more finely graduated bottle.

In one invention the rain from an ordinary receiver passes to a cylinder fitted with a float. To the float is attached a lever which raises and lowers a sliding pen. The latter works on a revolving drum similar to those used on the barograph, the instrument often seen in opticians' shop windows.

When one inch of rain has been collected, the cylinder empties itself automatically, and the readings begin again at zero.

The Village Street.

A boy was born at Bethlehem
That knew the haunts of Galilee,
He wandered on Mount Lebanon,
And learned to love each forest tree.

But I was born at Marlborough,
And love the homely faces there!
And for all other men besides,
'Tis little love I have to spare.

I should not mind to die for them,
My own dear downs, my comrades true,
But that great heart of Bethlehem
He died for men He never knew.

And yet, I think, at Golgotha,
As Jesus' eyes were closed in death,
They saw with love most passionate
The village street at Nazareth.

Not For Ducks.

An English rider, coming to a river that he was unfamiliar with, asked a youngster who was playing on the bank whether the water was deep. "No," replied the boy, and the rider started to cross. But he soon found, says the Traveler's Beacon, that he and his horse had to swim for their lives.

When he finally reached the other side he turned and shouted to the boy: "I thought you said it wasn't deep."

"It aren't," was the reply. It only takes grandfather's ducks up to their middles."

England's Commonest Name.

The commonest of all place-names in England is Newton, which occurs no fewer than seventy-two times in various parts of the country. Newport is also quite common, occurring frequently in both England and Wales.

Stories of Well-Known People

One of the Heroes.

A memorable incident of 1914 is recalled to mind by the appointment of Major-General Sir George T. Molesworth Bridges, K.C.M.G., to the Governorship of South Australia.

Sir "Tom" Bridges at the beginning of the war was a major in the 4th Hussars.

When the British Army was making its great retreat from Mons, Major Bridges was sent back to St. Quentin to round up and hurry forward two hundred and fifty stragglers.

He found them in a state of collapse. At a little village shop he bought a toy drum, and falling the men into line with the toy drum and a penny whistle for band, he marched them off, laughing in spit of their weariness, and led them a distance of twenty-eight miles.

"If You Were King—"

During his morning ride while staying at Deauville, France, he noticed four little girls who were staring at him with all their might.

"Vive le Roi!" cried the eldest of the four, a child apparently about eight years of age.

The King rode up and smilingly handed her a 50-franc note. Thereupon the youngest of the quartette, a pretty child of six or seven, cried: "There, you see, Loulou, I was quite right, he is not the King of Spain at all."

"And why not?" asked King Alfonso.

"Why?" said the child. "First of all because you have not got a crown on your head; and also because you have given money to Loulou. If you were the King, you would not have been surprised and glad that she cried 'Vive le Roi'; and then, kings are better-looking than you are, I am quite sure."

Lord Chancellor's Record.

There is probably no other record in British Parliamentary history to compare with that of the present Lord Chancellor, Lord Birkenhead.

Thirteen years ago he was a member of the Junior Bar, and in that short time he has been made a K.C., elected to the House of Commons, and become, in turn, Solicitor-General, Attorney-General, and Lord Chancellor. He has just celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his birthday. There is one member of the House of Lords, Lord Loreburn, who was called to the Bar before Lord Birkenhead was born.

Among the Lord Chancellor's many stories is one about the wife who woke her husband up in the middle of the night to tell him that she had heard burglars moving about.

"You'd better go down, William," she said.

"Good gracious!" replied William. "What a low opinion you must have of me. I'm not in the habit of associating with burglars."

"Peter Pan."

Even Sir James Barrie sometimes makes puns. He was at a luncheon-party one day, and the man next to him said: "I suppose, Sir James, some of your plays do much better than others. I mean, they are not all great successes, are they?"

"No," said Barrie. "Oh, no. Some peter out altogether; others pan out very well."

Fortunes Spent on Meals.

Not long ago an American millionaire tasted one of the famous beefsteak puddings served at the Cheshire Cheese, London. He asked the landlord how many people could dine off such a pudding. A hundred, he was told. Thereupon he offered his informant $2,500 to take a pudding to New York and carve it at one of the clubs there.

There was a luncheon some time ago at which the chief dish was an emu's egg omelette. The contents of the egg weighed two pounds, which was sufficient to give each of the dozen guests a small helping. The dish cost $250.

One of the most delicate fish in the world is a tiny creature no bigger than a smelt, which is caught occasionally in the Yellow River in Northern China. It is called the "Nian-tu."

A San Francisco millionaire determined to have a dish of them served on the occasion of the coming-of-age of his son. He sent a special agent to China to procure them. The agent reported that the fish would not keep well, even upon ice. "Spare no expense," was the reply, "but see that they arrive in perfect condition."

The agent had two large tanks prepared. These were fixed on board a liner and filled with water from the Yellow River. In this way the fish were kept alive until they were delivered at the millionaire's mansion. The bill amounted to $1,600.

The ortolan is a very rare bird, caught only in Italian vineyards. It has to be fattened in a specially-constructed dark room before being killed for market, and if during this process a severe thunderstorm takes place, the little bird may die of fright. Small wonder that at a London hotel a dish of ortolans for four diners cost the giver of the feast $50.

Moslems Abhor Photographs.

One may not send any photographs and the like to Turkey, for to the Moslem the picture of any person signifies a curse.

"That youngster of mine is as good as a play," enthused the fond parent. "I don't notice any loud cries for the author," insinuated the bored bachelor.

School Orchestras and Bands Increasing.

The rapid increase in the formation of orchestras and bands in the public and high schools of the United States is one of the outstanding phases of school music to-day, and in this, it is hoped that the experience of the American schools will be that of our Canadian schools. So quickly is this branch of school music going ahead that the Association of Music Supervisors across the line, which has done, and is doing, a splendid work throughout the year, has been supplemented by a special committee on instrumental music, to collect information and assist wherever possible in the furtherance of instrumental music in the schools.

The chairman of one of the committees devoted to this work recently said: "If you want to have a school orchestra, and can handle the work, start it; Start it, if your beginning is only three or four violins, a cornet or clarinet and piano. About the middle of the second practice, you will see a little tousled headed boy peeping round the door, and saying to his chum, 'I wonder what I can play,' or, more likely, 'What instrument could I learn the quickest?' and then your applications for membership will start to come in."

The supervisors also urge the advisability of recommending the purchase of quality instruments, particularly in the brasses, affirming that almost any fiddle, no matter what it cost, would improve with age, but it was flatly denied that any cheap brass instrument ever held its own with age, let alone improve.

In a number of cases reported by supervisors of music in American schools, it was recorded that there were more applications to join the school orchestra than there was room for, and in this event a junior orchestra, or a school band was started, which not only furnished the elementary instruction in orchestra work, but trained players for the leading school orchestra.

Commercial Flying in Canada

Commercial flying in Canada experienced a period of readjustment during 1921, according to a report of the Canadian Air Board, and many of the small, insufficiently equipped aeroplane companies were forced out of business owing to the cost of aperating machines and the lack of public response to pleasure-flying due to the fancy prices demanded. The tremendous interest evinced in flying machines after the war resulted in numerous companies springing up over the Dominion, and the public at that time were willing and even eager to pay high prices in order to experience the thrill of flying, but the publicity given to accidents shook the public faith in this form of travelling, with the inevitable result that many companies dependent upon passenger travelling for their income were forced to discontinue business.

Great attention was paid to developing aerial photography during the period under review, and this phase of the industry rapidly assumed a position of importance. Many business companies, as well as the different governments, engaged aerial photographers to take photographs of their various undertakings. The lumber, pulp and paper companies especially were active in aerial photography, many having their entire timber limits photographed, and from the prints were able to accurately determine the amount of timber on their holdings, thus saving a great amount of time and labor. In the mountainous regions of British Columbia the Geodetic Survey of Canada was greatly assisted by aeroplanes, which were able to penetrate where it was impossible for the surveyors to go on foot.

In addition, aerial photography was utilized to a great extent for advertising purposes. Well-known scenic and historical points in the Dominion have been photographed from the air; moving pictures and post cards made from the prints have had a wide sale. Cities and business corporations have also found it advantageous to have aerial pictures taken of their grounds, plants, public buildings, etc., both for advertising and private records.

The work of aeroplanes in British Columbia and Quebec in combating the forest-fire menace is well known to the Canadian public. Canada now has twenty seaplanes and five land machines in action on forest survey and forest-fire prevention. Seventeen of these are Dominion Air Board machines, and eight are owned by private companies. Numerous forest fires have been extinguished before they could get under way and do untold damage due to the efficiency of aeroplane patrol service in reporting these outbreaks, and rushing fire-fighters and equipment to the scene of the conflagration. This form of aeroplane work has proved so popular that additional seaplanes are needed at the Jericho air station in British Columbia to fill demands for air surveys of fire-swept areas, customs patrol, and transportation of men and equipment.

The most outstanding feature of the report was the remarkable increase in freight or express carried, which rose from 6,740 pounds in 1920 to 77,850 pounds in 1921, an increase of several hundred per cent., The statistical summary of aviation in Canada shows that the number of firms operating decreased from 35 in 1920 to 31 in 1921. The number of flights 18,671, mileage 422,462 and total duration of 6,505 flying hours in 1920, dropped to 10,385 flights, 294,449 miles and 4,347 hours in 1921. The number of passengers in the same period decreased from 15,265 to 9,153.

Air stations have been erected in the majority of the provinces of the Dominion by the Federal Government, and it is proposed to have stations in all provinces in the near future, so that an aviator flying across country will be able to descend at any of these air harbors and secure oil, gasoline, spare parts, etc., if in need. There are other schemes under way for the advancement of commercial flying in Canada, and the comparative freedom from airplane accidents in the latter part of 1921 has done much to restore this industry in public confidence.

WHY RHEUMATISM OFTEN COMES BACK

The Usual Treatment Does Not Reach the Root of the Trouble.

Most treatments for rheumatism do no more than aim to keep down the poison in the blood and enable nature to overcome that particular attack. Then when the system becomes run-down from any cause the disease again gets the upper hand and it all has to be done over.

Sufferers from rheumatism who have found their condition unrelieved or actually growing worse while using other remedies, would do well to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The tonic treatment with this medicine has proved in thousands of cases that it builds up the blood to a point that enables it to cast out the rheumatic poisons through the regular channels of excretion, the bowels, kidneys and the skin. When this is done rheumatism is banished, and as long as the blood is kept pure and rich the patient will be immune from attack. This is proved by the case of Mrs. J. Hewitt, Beach P.O., Hamilton, Ont, who says: "For a number of years I was troubled with muscular rheumatism, which caused me a great deal of suffering. I would get rid of the trouble for a time, but it always came back. A friend recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I have not had an attack of rheumatism since I took them, and that is five years ago. I have since used the pills for anaemia and found them equally good, and I now recommend them to any friends who may be ailing."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HEALTH EDUCATION

BY DR. J. J. MIDDLETON

Provincial Board of Health, Ontario

Dr. Middleton will be glad to answer questions on Public Health matters through this column. Address him at Spadina House, Spadina Crescent, Toronto.

Tuberculosis is well known to us as a deadly enemy, fighting secretly, noiselessly and continuously, killing 10,000 of our young people each year. This dreadful toll is taken without interruption, day and night. No melodramatic gun shots accompanying it, nothing spectacular, no brass band to attract attention; 10,000 quietly "slip away to premature graves, without more sound than the disease itself makes in the killing."

10,000 dead. Think of it, every time the clocks of Canada strike the hour, year in and year out, it marks the passing of another of our citizens who might have been saved. Science and practical demonstration have proven that tuberculosis is preventable, and in most cases curable if taken in time.

In these striking words, President A. B. Cook of the Canadian Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis opened his address before the Public Health Congress at St. John, N. B., recently. What Mr. Cook said then holds good to-day. The fight against tuberculosis is still being waged strenuously, with good prospects of success.

But as Mr. Cook very plainly points out, in silence and insidiousness are the features of the enemy's attack, it should be our duty to counter attack with loud noise, so loud that the people shall become alarmed and demand the observance of preventive measures for those who are threatened, and that provision shall be made for the care of those now suffering with the disease.

Little has been done by the Federal Government to combat tuberculosis of the human type. Up to the present this work has been left almost entirely to the provinces, assisted by the public-spirited citizens connected with the many local organizations. These, working for years, have now demonstrated beyond question the value of their work, and the results obtained should be sufficient to induce the Federal Government to take its proper place in the firing line and lend its assistance to the organizations that have been doing the pioneer work.

It is true that the Dominion Government realize the importance of bovine infection among cattle.

(The bovine type of tuberculosis germ is similar but not identical with the human type.) During the past few years the Government has extended the activities of the Health of Animals branch towards the suppression of tuberculosis among our herds. The results obtained amply justify the efforts put forth and the money expended, and only demonstrates, in a more conclusive manner that properly directed energies along improved lines, means the suppression of the disease, and, possibly its extermination.

In some of the areas of the United States, where intensified efforts have been going on for some time, a case of tuberculosis among cattle is seldom found. The same remarks can be made while speaking of the efforts made to eradicate the human type of tuberculosis, and all that seems necessary is to secure funds sufficient to put into practical use the recognized and approved methods of dealing with the disease.

Children and Music.

The appearance of the Boys' Band from Waterloo, Ont., at the band music contest held in Toronto during Exhibition weeks led to a great interest in boys' bands and orchestras. The Salvation Army, Toronto, have a fine boys' band in addition to their several splendid adult bands. The boys' band recently gave a public concert at Sunnyside Beach.

A gramophone equipped with march records does duty this year in supplying music for the boys' marching in and out of classes at St. Paul's Catholic School, Toronto. One of the pupils is appointed by the principal to look after the machine, and the boys are eager to take their turn at playing the music.

An orchestra for the pupils attending Toronto public schools is a proposition being taken up this school year.

The effect of music's influence on children was strikingly shown recently in one of Philadelphia's public parks, when a symphony orchestra on a Saturday morning gave a concert which drew 1,000 children away from baseball games, tennis courts and swimming tanks to hear the excellent program.

London and Hamilton, Ont., school boards intend to enlarge greatly their musical activities for children during the current school year.

GUARD THE CHILDREN FROM AUTUMN COLDS

The Fall is the most severe season of the year for colds—one day warm, the next cold and wet, and unless the mother is on her guard, the little ones are seized with colds that may hang on all winter. Baby's Own Tablets are mother's best friend in preventing or banishing colds. They act as a gentle laxative, keeping the bowels and stomach free and sweet. An occasional dose of the Tablets will prevent colds, or if it does come on suddenly their prompt use will relieve the baby. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

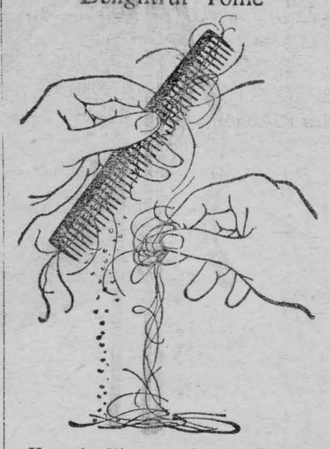
A SIN TO LET HAIR FALL OUT

35c "Danderine" Saves Your Hair—Ends Dandruff! Delightful Tonic



Hurry! It's your duty! Each day you see a little more hair falling out and you are making no effort to avoid baldness. What a pity. Falling hair means your hair is weak, sick,—possibly dandruff is strangling it, or the hair root pores in the scalp are not firm and tight, thus wasting the hair-growing oils.

Danderine almost instantly stops falling hair of men or women and cleans every particle of dandruff away, then the hair takes on new life, vigor and strength to grow strong, thick, and long.

Danderine is delightful—not sticky or greasy. Go to any drugstore now and get a bottle. Use it Have healthy, heavy, beautiful hair and lots of it.

Music as a Life Asset.

If music is made part of the life of every child, as baseball, dancing and reading are part of his life, a natural spontaneous activity, we shall be a musical people. But if music will continue to be classed with geology and foreign languages as a school study to which several half hours a week are grudgingly devoted we shall find the next generation of men being dragged to concerts and the opera as reluctantly as this one is.

The homeopathic doses of music administered once or twice a week by private teachers to most well brought up children make very little impression, especially when each lesson is prefaced with the usual "I didn't have much time to practice, we had so much homework this week." But if musical notation were taught in the primary grades along with the three "R's" we should soon have plenty of children turning as naturally to their song books for their recreation as to fairy tales.

And if the public school provided short selected programmes of good music for assembly once a week, or even twice, we should in a very short time find our children quite as much interested in the works of the great composers as in the products of the jazz factories.

There are countless other ways in which music might be made an intimate part of school life, such as studying national music in conjunction with geography or period music with history and literature. The essential thing is that the attitude towards music be changed, the rest will come of itself.

And when the importance of music as a life asset is realized, perhaps even the school schedule will be relaxed to the extent of allowing a child who really cares to master the technic of any art sufficient time to do it in a dignified and unhurried manner.

"An' where have you been, Andrew?" demanded the good man, sternly.

"Weel, I dinna richtly ken," answered the prostrate one. "It micht ha' been a weddin', or it micht ha' been a funeral—but, whichever it micht ha' been, it was a maist evtra-ordinary success."

Old Boats.

I saw the old sea-captain in his city daughter's house,
Shaved till his chin was pink and brushed till his hair was flat,
In a broadcloth suit and varnished boots and a collar up to his ear

And it happened that I went home last June and saw in Mallory's yard
The old red dory that sprung a leak a couple of years ago,
Dragged out of good salt water and braced to stand in the grass
And be filled with dirt from stem to stern, where posies and such could grow;

Painted to beat the band, with vines strung over the sides,
And red geraniums in the bow—a boat that was built for water,
Made into a flower-garden. I looked, but I didn't laugh,
For I thought of the old sea-captain living in town with his daughter.

Hope for Job.

The Sunday school lesson was on Job. The superintendent was endeavoring to picture the painful existence of Job to his youthful audience. To this end he was dwelling at length upon poor Job's sufferings and the futility of medical treatment.

"What is it, Willie?" asked the superintendent.

"Have they tried Dr. Smith?" asked Willie, naming the family physician.

Streamline Models.

Fish, birds moths, snowdrifts and boulders are all forced to take similar shapes by wind and water, nature's firm of magic tailors, who have decreed the streamline model for all bodies moving or immersed in a moving fluid.

But Not in Spelling.

Punch quotes this extract from a letter that a nine-year-old boy wrote toward the end of his first term at a preparatory school:

"I feale I have lernt a lot sence i came hear."

GETS HIM IN FINE SHAPE FOR WINTER

"Tanlac built me up in fine shape last Spring, and now I am getting another bottle as a tonic to keep me fit for the cold weather," declared Henry Duefenbach, 450 York St., Hamilton, Ont., recently. Mr. Duefenbach has been identified with the grocery business in Hamilton several years, and is very well known.

"My stomach was troubling me for a long time and I got into a badly run-down condition," he said. "Almost everything I ate upset me terribly, and gas would form on my stomach and keep me miserable. My nerves were unstrung, too, and many a night I never got a bit of rest.

"I was feeling simply all played out when I got my first bottle of Tanlac, but before I had finished it, the pains in my stomach went away entirely, my food began to agree with me and I have never had indigestion since. With my nerves calm, my strength back and my appetite in fine shape, I expect to enjoy Christmas dinner and all the good things of the holidays as I have not done for a long time. They can count on me to always give a good word for Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

NURSE THINKS NOTHING BETTER

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Advised for all Women in Poor Health

Toronto, Ontario.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for years and it is the only patent medicine I ever recommend. I am a nurse and if I find a woman is in poor health I always tell her to take it. Although you know that doctors and nurses do not use patent medicines I must say that I think there is nothing better than your Vegetable Compound. When I first took it many years ago, I was so tired when I got up in the morning that I could not eat, and when I went to bed I was too tired to sleep. My mother-in-law told me that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was just what I wanted so I tried it and only took two bottles when I felt better. Since then I have found that there is nothing that makes me feel so well, for it seems to build my system right up. I don't know any other medicine that has done so much for women."—Mrs. W. H. Parker, 19 Wellesley Ave., Toronto, Ontario.

Women testify again and again that they have been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound "after other medicines have failed." It has been tried for nearly fifty years and not found wanting.

If you are suffering from any of the various ailments which accompany female weakness try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The Lanark Election.

The result of the election in Lanark on Monday was a win for the Conservative Candidate, Dr, Preston, of Carleton Place, by a majority of over 1500. The majority is as large as was ever given a Conservative Candidate in Lanark, in a straight party vote, under normal conditions. When the late Dr. Hanna carried the riding in 1917 by over 3000 majority, it was for Union Government, and a "Win the War" policy. When the late Hon. J. A. Stewart, carried the riding in 1921 against a progressive by a majority of over 2600, he had assisting him on the platform a late Liberal member for the North Lanark Riding, Mr. Caldwell, who brought to him much Liberal support. The contest on Monday was a straight party one, and shows clearly a strong sentiment against the King Government. Before the North and South ridings were joined, the normal Conservative majority for South Lanark was about one thousand, while in North Lanark it was about equally divided, and was as often in the Liberal as in the Conservative colum. The victory for Dr. Preston is all the greater, as he was opposed not only by a very strong and very worthy Liberal Candidate but also by all the power, oratorical and material, that the King Government could bring against him.

A Progressive Flops.

Mr. W. J. Hummel, elected as a Progressive for Muskoka, has deserted the Farmer's party and gone over to the Liberals, body and bones. This he announces in a statement given the public press last week. When elected he was a U. F. O. director for Muskoka, and an enthusiastic worker, apparently, for the cause of the farmers. But according to his published statement he says: "A year's careful study, of the principles and aims of the various parties convinces me that there are protectionists in all three parties, and that I can be of at least as much service to my constituents and my country as a member of the Liberal party as any other." In other words, Mr. Hummel says that the Progressives are no true to their Free Trade, and other political principles, than the Liberals and consequently he goes back to his first love. Had a Conservative Government been in power it would have been just as easy for him to have gone over to that party. The Farmer's Sun says:—"Mr. Hummel was one of a little groupe of Progressive Members who repudiated the farmer platform and deserted their collegeagues by going to the rescue of the King Government on the budget vote." In that groupe is numbered the number for Dundas, Mr. Preston Elliots, and it would be no surprise if he too, should soon follow in the footsteps of this Muskoka betrayer." In fact the Toronto Globe announces that there are four or five other so-called Progressives ready to flop when the next session of the House meets. Crerar has worked his game well in the interests of the King Government, but, as the late circus man, P T. Barnam, said, "you can't fool all the people all the time."

How to Treat the County Warden.

In this county, from time immemorial, it has been the custom for the Warden to entertain the members of the County Council, the county officials and prominent men of the county, at a big dinner. This has been expected year after and to omit it the Warden for the year would seriously lose prestige. It is surely an imposition on the Warden, however. He, above all other members of the Council, has born resposibilities and sacrificed his time in the interests of the county's affairs during his term of office. The plan might justly be reversed. It would be a sane and reasonable thing for the members to entertain the Warden, out of respect for his patient, courteous conduct of the duties of his office during the year. In some counties this plan is followed in the holding of this function, which seems to be s necessary feature of the closing of the year's business of the Council's term. In York county last week the County Council entertained the Warden and presented him with a gold-headed cane. Isn't it time that Halton lifted the burden from the shoulders of the Warden?—Acton Free Press.

Who's The Responsibity

If some of our real good men and women, some of our critical fathers and mothers, would take the trouble to observe how hopelessly forlorn our young lads are in the long evenings as they wander about the streets, or congregate here and there where there is a friendly light, and a welcome, perhaps they would bestir themselves to provide a recreation room or gymnasium for them where they could meet, enjoy friendly games or sport, be under good influence, and parents know they were not under evil influence. The responsibility of the going estray of a young lad in this community rests on the shoulders, if not on the conscience, of the older citizens. And the boys, who are the victims of this penurious stinginess and dewarfed view of life are to be pitied more than blamed.

Cannot Recall Them

Under the postal regulations of the United States, the sender of a letter through the post office is privileged to recall that letter up till it is actually in the hands of the person it is addressed to. It may be in the hands of the postman on his delivery route, but if postman can be reached in time the letter may be withdrawn. What a blessing it would prove if our words could be withdrawn in the same way. The letter written in anger and in haste is often recalled. But the spoken word, the angry word,the false accusation cannot be recalled and destroyed as the letter can be. It may be recalled in a sense, an apology may be offered, but the poison the word contained has already reached the objective, and while it may in a sense be neutralized it will never be eradicated. How very careful then we should all be with our words.

Temperance in Ontario.

Speaking before the great world convention on behalf of Prohibition held in Toronto recently Premier Drury assured that Convention that the Province of Ontario was "Dry" and would remain dry. In other words Premier Drury reiterated his already expressed views, that as the head of the Government he would not in any way interfere with the Ontario Temperance Act. When Sir Wm. Hearst was premier of Ontario he took an even more courageous stand, he passed the Ontario Temperance Act, although there was at that time considerable opposition to it in his own party. If Premier Drury is rewarded by the Temperance people of Ontario in the same way that Sir Wm. Hearst was, he will be completely snowed under at the next election, for the rank and file of the temperance workers seem to be a very ungrateful people. In the last election candidates who worked hard for the cause of temperance, who even suffered in business as well as in popularity for their temperance principles, were turned down and candidates who made no pretence of being supporters of prohibition were elected in their place, and elected too by the temperance vote of the country. This is no argument against Temperance, but it isa warning to public men not to depend on a temperance vote to either elect them to office, or keep them in power.

Magistrate Hopewell, of Ottawa, in imposing a fine of $200 and costs, or three months in jail on George Bruce, a young man of 21 years, for unlawfully having liquor in his possession, said; "Of all the laws I know, the Ontario Temperance Act is the one law that was placed on the statues by the people themselves. This is not a law placed there by the legislators, but one that 165,000 majority wanted there, and if there is any law in this country which good citizens must obey it is the law of the majority. I don't say the majority is always right, but the majority ought to be respected.i'

Mr. J. J. Morrison, Sec'y of the U. F. O. in Ontario, speaking to the Independent Order of Good Temples in Toronto on Monday said:—"We have ceased to teach temperance and are trying to do it with a club." Mr. Morrison said. "I want to tell you it won't work out; not because the Ontario Temperance Act is a bad measure, but because no law can function properly without the hearty support of public opinion. We have changed our system from moral suasion to force, the speaker contintued. "Together they would be a great team; alone, force is not a success."

both rural and urban under private enterprise controlled by a public service commission.

Yet the Orillia Packet says that "private enterprise would not tackle rural telephone lines."

I have no idea what the standard of intelligence is among readers of the Orillia Packet, but I at least, have a great deal of respect for the intelligence of reader of the Winchester Press. I know that the Press is not friendly towards me, but this does not blind me to the fact that, except during election campaigns, the Press is ably, courageously and intelligently edited and it is a weekly paper of which this county and this province has a right to be proud, and I cannot understand why you should have marred your colums by quoting such trash from the Orillia Packet.

In conclusion let me quote a prophecy of the late Theodore Roosevelt. He prophesied before his death, in the midst of the war, that "the agricultural problem would be one of the great issues." He said, "that all great nations went to pieces when their agricultural went to pieces." "A lack of prosperity among cultivatiors of the soil led absentee ownership of farm land, and to the tenant farmers replacing the owner farmer. The tenant farmer makes no improvements and exhausts resource. And if the whole nation does not protect its agriculture those who cultivate the land will in the end act together in a group for self-interest, and group action of any kind is a danger to American ideals and to the soundness of the American political system."

You knows, Mr. Editor, as well as I know, that in this country we cannot have permanent social, commercial or industrial well-being unless we have a prosperous and contented agricultural community. It is an axiom that we cannot afford to ignore that nearly all wealth comes from the land, and it is therefore the duty of every good citizen to foster and promote by every just means the interests of those who cultivate the soil. There is no boon that could be given the farmers of this province that would do more to brighten farm home life and lighten the burdens of the farm women than to extend to them the benefits of Hydro electric service. The farmer has an equity in the waterfalls epual to the equity of the townsman, his property is pledged equally with the property of the townsman for Hydro electric development and where it is feasable he has a right to share upon equitable terms in the benefits of Hydro service and it is in the true and lasting interest of the urban dweller to help to bring this about. The principle of power at cost as we have it under Hydro practice is not equitable in that it gives service to the individual living in the city at much lower rates than to the individual living in a small town or in a rural district.

Yours truly
W. H. Casselman.

Ed. Note:—While we willingly gives space to Mr. Casselmans letter—and Mr. Casselman is some letter writer—and while we acknoledge with thanks the very neat, and we hope sincere, compliment he pays the Press, we must confess that we are still in a maze as to just what Mr. Casselman is driving at. If we interpret him aright, he contends that private owned Electric power is being produced cheaper than by Hydro power, and that the Hydro Commission is discriminating against the farmer and in favour of the towns and cities. Perhaps Mr. Casselman knows whereof he speaks, but is it not somewhat singular that although a Farmer Government has been in power in Ontario for three years, and while many investigations have been held into the working of the Hydro System no concrete and reasonable propsition has yet been made whereby the Electric System may be extended into remote rural sections on a paying basis. According to a statement issued the private owned Electric services of Buffalo, Detroit, and other American cities are charging a higher rate, in fact nearly double, what the Hydro is charging in Canada. Mr. Caselman refers to a privately owned and operated system in Peel County. The system referred to, as Mr. Casselman well knows, is not to be compared to the Hydro system either in equipment or service, and its owners are to day very anxious to sell their plant to the Hydro knowing that if they have to bring it up in efficiency, and keep in proper repair, the rates they are charging will have to be greatly increased

The Hydro Commission may not be perfect. They may make mistakes, but this we know, they build for permanence, they supply at cost, and the municipality that deals with the Hydro eventually owns its own system. The average montly bill for domestic purposes in Winchester for the past five years has not exceeded $1.50, and the service has been the very best. The power rate is somewhat high, but it is efficient, and reliable. We very much fear that the Hydro System is being made the target for the shafts of political agitators— and promotors.

CORRESPONDENCE

Chesterville, Nov. 27, 1922,

Editor Winchester Press

Sir—In last week's issue of the Press there appears in your editoral columns an extract from the editoral columns of the Orillia Packet, in which my name is several times somewhat disparagingly mentioned as a critic of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

I presume that I have a right to ask space in your attractive paper, that I may take some notice of what the Orillia Packet, in its wisdom, has to say of me.

The Packet as reported by you, says that I criticize the H. E. P. C. "for not having done more to supply power to the farmers." To this charge I plead guilty, without shame. The Packet endeavours to show that it is not feasible to supply power to the farms of Ontario but says what little has been done in this direction has been done by the H. E. P. C. because "private enterprise would never waste capital in distributing current to the farmers." Of course the Orillia Packet known all about it, but might an humble individual like myself venture to cite a few facts which the informed editor of that paper has been pleased to overlook?

The Hydro Electric Power Commission was not the pioneer agency in the distribution of electric power in rural districts and it does not now successfully complete with private enterprise in this class of service. There is a privately owned power developement in Peel county that has been supplying rural service since 1899, long before the H. E. P. C. was thought of, much less operating. This service is now extended in three counties, Peel Dufferin and Wellington, and according to the owners published statement it has been successfully extended at about one-half the rate asked by the H. E. P. C. I have talked with members of the Ontario Government and with the owner of this system with reference to this service and am assured that a satisfactory rural service is being extended at very reasnoable prices. Again while there are farmers taking power from the H. E. P. C. in Dundas County, they are taking this service off the high tension lines by means of wires running back from Urban transformer stations, and there is not a single mile of strictly rural Hydro line in this county, yet right here in Dundas county a private concern has some fourteen miles of rural lines giving service at about one-half the estimated Hydro rates. Yet again, In Quebec the Southern Canada Power Co., with head office in Montreal has a rural service at $5.00 per month service charge and 3c per K. W. H. consumption charge permitting the use of a 7½ H. P motor. This rate is very much lower than the Ontario Hydro Commission's rate for a similar service, and yet this company expect to make a profit. I quote from a letter I have from its manager as follows "We hope to build up the business to a point where we can make some profit on it even at this low rate." Yet the Orillia Packet, as quoted by you Sir, says that "Private enterprise would never waste capital in distributing current to the farmers."

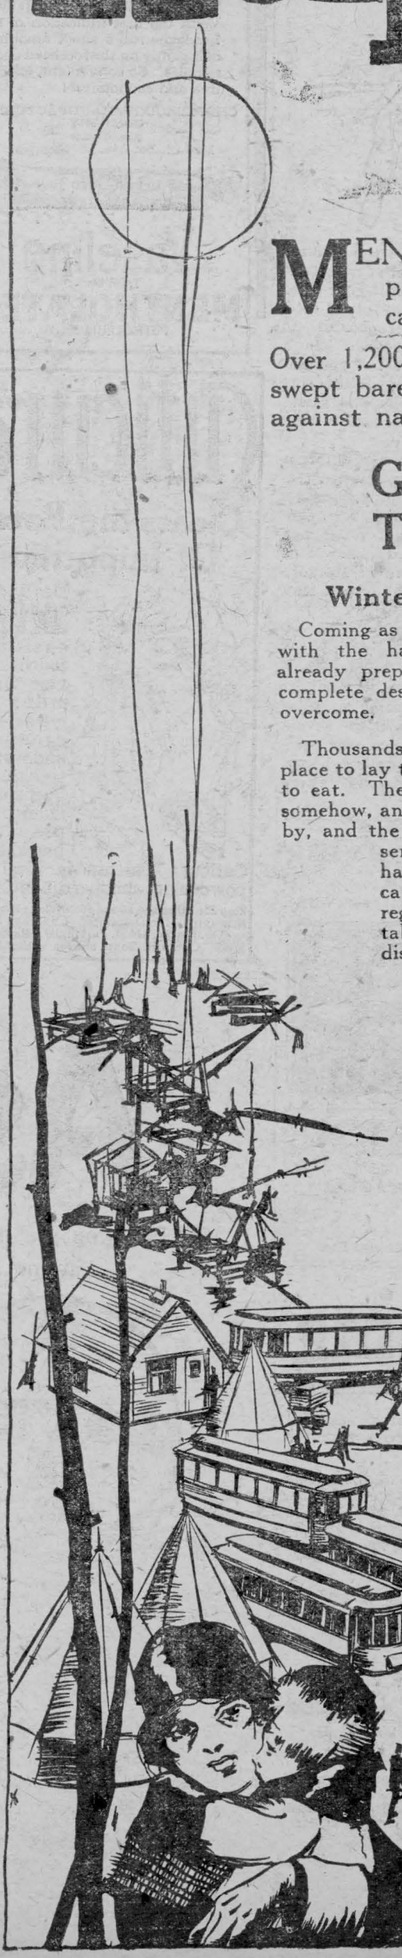
As quoted in the Press, the Packet winds up by saying "And yet Mr. Casselman declares in favor of development by private enterprise under Government control. Private enterprise would not even tackle rural telephone lines, which cost much less to construct and maintain than do power lines."

Orillia Packet to the contrary notwithstanding I have not "declared in favor of developement by private enterprise under governmens control." I have declared in favour of private enterprise controlled by a non-partizan public service commission whose duties it would be to see that all interests were safe guarded. I believe by this means we would get more economical construction, more efficient managemet, and that we would get all classes of service upon equitable terms and I think that this belief is justified by the operations of the H. E. P. C. and by our experience with Government built and operated railroads.

But the Orillia Packet says that "Private enterprise would not even tackle rural telephone lines." Did any one ever read such rot? I wonder where the editor of the Orillia Packet lives. Does he not know that this Province is cobwebbed by rural telephone lines and every inch of them privately owned and operated?

True the Bell Telephone Co., a private enterprise, developed its urban service just because it was more profitable. After a while the farmers wanted telephone service, so co-operative companies, joint stock companies, and in some cases private individuals built rural telephone lines, and even invaded urban districts where the Bell Telephone Co. was already giving service. We had at one time two telephone exchanges belonging to two distinctly different companies in Chesterville as in other villages and towns. This did not make for efficient service, so in the end a public service commission, which we call the Dominion Railway Board, straightened out the tangle, and now we have an efficient telephone service

Help burned Ontario over the Winter/



MEN and women of Ontario—it is time that we should all realize the terrible completeness of the fire calamity that devastated Northern Ontario in the early days of October. Fires and calamities we have had before, but never such complete destruction as this.

Over 1,200 square miles laid desolate, town after town nothing but a bleak expanse of ruins, hundreds of farms swept bare, thousands of your fellow citizens "cleaned out" and thrown abruptly back into man's primeval struggle against nature and her grim forces: fire, hunger, ice and the stark northern cold.

Give 1,800 families a fighting chance to get on their feet. Temporary relief must go on. We must not fail the North.

Winter—the relentless foe

Coming as this terrible fire did, in the autumn, with the harvests in, with the townspeople already preparing for the rigors of winter—the complete destruction wrought is the harder to overcome.

Thousands of people at first had literally no place to lay their head, little to wear and nothing to eat. They had to be taken care of at first, somehow, and then, desperately as the days went by, and the cold grew more intense, rough but serviceable standard shacks, 16′ x 20′, have been replacing tents, old street cars, packing boxes and sheet iron—a regular food supply has been established, and rough clothing is being distributed.

What can a man do with his house a blackened hole in the ground, his barn a charred heap, his work shop a twisted pile of rubbish—and a northern blizzard raging over all?

Temporary Relief Until Spring

In the name of humanity we must see these fellow citizens through until Spring opens up the land and general business activities are resumed. Money must be forthcoming from the citizens of Ontario, from municipalities, industries, societies, public bodies, lodges, churches, etc.—not for rehabilitation or re-establishment, but for the supply of bare necessities, "temporary relief", in fact, to the stricken North.

The Brighter Side of the Picture

Everywhere throughout the fire swept district one hears only a strong, manly note of confidence, of resolution to go forward, to "stick to the country" if body and soul can be held together, to make good once more, to restore the hundreds of burned farms, to rebuild the eight or ten destroyed towns—And it will be done if the stream of temporary relief from Old Ontario does not dry up!

All for One—One for All

Here is a portion of our Province in ruins, and for the sake of the whole Province as well as for its own sake, this section must be restored to prosperity and happiness. We need the North, we need its vigorous, pioneering spirit so one and all, let's "give a hand into the saddle"—and do it NOW.

Money is needed. The Relief Committee can buy in large quantities, get big discounts, and often free gifts of merchandise from the many manufacturers who are generously co-operating with the Committee. The exact needs are now known.

The Northern Ontario Fire Relief Committee

has been enlarged and now is thoroughly representative of the Province of Ontario. The Provincial Government is co-operating to the fullest extent and is doing everything that a Government can properly do to assist in temporarily relieving the fire sufferers.

To give immediate relief the Committee must secure actual cash without delay. If each municipality or county would devise some means of raising an amount equal to one half mill on the total assessment the relief can be continued. The raising of relief funds could be undertaken by public spirited citizens, clubs, churches or councils and provides a most deserving cause for Christmas giving. Now it is up to every community in Ontario to help a neighbouring district in its hour of trial. Make cheques payable to—

HEALTH EDUCATION

BY DR. J. J. MIDDLETON

Provincial Board of Health, Ontario

Dr. Middleton will be glad to answer questions on Public Health matters through this column. Address him at Spadina House, Spadina Crescent, Toronto.

A few weeks ago I was down in Eastern Ontario and spent some time in the rural districts, many miles from even a town. I was interested in the health of these people that I met and I was particularly interested in the health and general condition of the children. In some cases an examination was made of the boys and girls at school, the very ones who were supposed to be in good health and who never had a doctor to see them since they were born. There were a good many children examined, in fact over one thousand, and would you believe it, over half this number showed physical defects of one kind or another. In one instance it was defective hearing, in another defective sight in one eye, in another some skin disease, in another rheumatism, and in yet another heart disease. Of course many other defects were found but these mentioned are just a sample.

In every part of the province it is the same, and the regrettable part of it is that so many of these defects could be corrected in early life if the trouble was not allowed to develop.

One thinks of the farm as a health resort, and an ideal place for the upbringing of children. It is, in so far as the country air and surroundings go, but in some other respects it is no more conducive to health than the city. For instance, children in the country often do not get the opportunity of being examined for physical defects and consquently they drift along to adult life oftentimes impaired in health and physique, when with a little foresight in youth they might become normal men and women.

Then again, there is the question of personal hygiene. Many farms are not equipped with suitable bathing facilities and so the warm bath weekly and the daily sponge of the body are oftentimes neglected. The question of keeping one's body clean is one of the most important in the whole range of public health. Then again the question of milk must be considered. I heard a doctor say not long ago that there were far too many cream separators in this province. That may or may not be so, but one thing is certain, we should not impoverish the milk at the expense of babies and young children, who would thrive better on whole milk than on skim milk. In cases of infants not fed at the breast, whole milk is absolutely necessary if the proper feeding is to be given.

One of the greatest causes of malnutrition in young children is mismanagement. This often happens in the case of so-called "spoiled" children who get out of control and do just whatever they like. Perhaps the mother is too indulgent and lets the child have its own way. It takes advantage of this, and consequently leads a most irregular life that is anything but good for its health. The child rises in the morning when it likes, eats the kind of breakfast it prefers without any thought as to what nourishment the food may contain; bolts its food at midday and does not take any time for rest in the early afternoon. Between meals the child eats candy, ice-cream, soft drinks and other things that impair its digestion yet bring very little nutrition to the growing child. When evening comes, there is no regular bedtime arranged, and the child roams the streets with other boys, perhaps learning bad habits, and getting totally out of parental or maternal control. These conditions are all too prevalent at present, and parents should realize their responsibilities towards their children if the coming generation is to be improved or even kept at the present level.

For Those Inland.

On this page I will put the blue of the sea
And gnarled trees blowing on a sandy ledge,
The long sharp waves breaking unceasingly.
Tossing thick foam upon the russet sedge.
Here, blue-white shells embedded in the sand
Glisten and bubble as the waters ebb;
A smell of salt blows inward on the land
Where thin mist sparkles like a spider-web.

Here you may look and see a cloud that blows
Across the far horizon's perfect rim
Made lonelier for one dark ship that goes,
Dragging its smoke where there is gold to dim.
Learn fortitude where broken winds are caught
In tortured waves that climb and crash and lull. . . .
Lean with courageous oaks and let your thought
Soar starward with a great slow-curving gull.

—George O'Neil.

Mourning for Murderers.

The infliction of capital punishment upon the assassins of the British Field Marshal, Sir Henry Wilson, has apparently caused great grief in Soviet Russia. The "Izvestia," one of the leading Bolshevist organs, in a long article laments their fate.

"The "pravda" not only mourns but calls for vengence and, addressing Great Britain, says: "We shall take our revenge upon you for having thus treated the best and most energetic of our agents, who were laboring for the good of humanity and the cause of communism."

WORDS OF PRAISE FOR BABY'S OWN TABLETS

No medicine receives such great praise from thankful mothers as do Baby's Own Tablets. Once a mother has used them for her little ones she will use nothing else. The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative. They regulate the bowels and stomach; drive out constipation and indigestion; relieve colds and simple fevers; promote healthful sleep and make teething easy. Concerning them Mrs. Omer LeBleu, Maddington Falls, Que., writes:—"I am well satisfied with Baby's Own Tablets and will always use them for my little ones." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Salute to the Trees.

Many a tree is found in the wood
And every tree for its use is good;
Some for the strength of the gnarled root,
Some for the sweetness of flower or fruit;
Some for shelter against the storm,
And some to keep the hearthstone warm;
Some for the roof and some for the beam,
And some for a boat to breast the stream.
In the wealth of the wood since the world began
The trees have offered their gifts to man.

Encouraging the Cat.

Outside a dog was barking shrilly, and at frequent intervals an excited voice was shouting, "Sic 'em, sic 'em!"

When Mrs. Brown opened the door she saw a small but lively black-and-tan dog alternately barking and digging under a large box while Jimmy, a mischievous small boy who lived in the block, was jumping round and urging him on. The cause of the excitement, Mrs. Brown soon learned, was a forlorn-looking little kitten that had taken refuge under the box. "Why, Jimmy!" she cried. "You mustn't do that; it's very wrong! I'm surprised at you. You mustn't set the dog on the kitty."

Jimmy straightened like a flash; he was neither frightened nor ashamed. "No'm, I ain't," he replied. "I'm saying 'sic 'em' to the cat."

PANGS OF NEURALGIA

This Painful Trouble is Due to Poverty of the Blood.

Neuralgia is one of the most painful maladies that afflicts humanity. The trouble is usually seated in the face or head, following the course of some nerve, but it attacks other parts of the body as well. It is characterized by acute pains, sometimes steady, at others spasmodic and darting. But whatever course it takes the pain is agonizing and almost unbearable. Medical authorities agree that neuralgia is due to poverty of the blood—that the nerves are actually being starved. It is further agreed that if the blood is purified and enriched the trouble will disappear. It is for this reason that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been so successful in treating neuralgia. They enrich the blood which feeds the starved, aching nerves and thus bring relief to the sufferer, whose general health is also improved. Proof of the value of these pills in cases of this kind is given by Mrs. M. Brown, R.R. No. 1, Warsaw, Ont., who says: "I have taken Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and can recommend them as being the best medicine I know of for neuralgia. Two years ago I had an attack of this trouble in the neck and shoulder. The repeated attacks of the pain were of such frightful intensity that my life was almost unbearable. I consulted two doctors and took their medicine, but without relief. I had taken Dr. Williams' Pink Pills years ago, when they helped me wonderfully, and I decided to try them again. Before I had taken more than a half dozen boxes the pain had disappeared, and I have since enjoyed the best of health, thanks to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $5.00 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Winning Through Difficulties.

The tree that never had to fight
For sun and sky and air and light,
That stood out in the open plain,
And always got its share of rain—

To Heaven from the common soil,
Who never had to win his share
Of sun and sky and light and air—
Never became a manly man,
But lived and died as he began.

A Novel Method.

James was newly married, and he arrived home one day to find a pie of immense length on the table awaiting him.

"What's this, Maggie?" he asked.

"That's a rhubarb pie," replied Maggie proudly.

"An' whatever have you made such a big one as this for?" he asked testily.

"Why," replied Maggie, in an aggrieved tone, "it's only as long as the rhubarb."

With The BOY Scouts

Scouts Decorate Graves.

On a recent Sunday the Scouts of Amherstburg held their annual Decoration Day parade, marching to Highland Cemetery, where they placed flowers on the graves of Scout Bruce Sanger of the 1st Halifax Troop, Mr. E. J. Lay, a past president of the Amherstburg Boy Scouts Association and King's Scout Bert Chapman, of the 1st Amherstburg Troop. A special Scout Decoration Service was conducted, after which the boys marched back to their headquarters for dismissal.

Handsome Cups as Scout Prizes.

A competition for efficiency among the boys of the 1st Galt Troop has received added interest by the generous donation by Mr. H. M. Anthony of a handsome silver cup, of beautiful design and standing eighteen inches in height, which is to be presented at the annual banquet during the winter to the patrol scoring the most points in the competition for the year. To the Scout with the highest score Mr. Anthony is giving a miniature replica cup.

A Scout Canoe Trip.

Scouts of the 1st Renfrew Troop under Scoutmaster R. F. Fraser took their summer outing in the form of a canoe trip up the historic Madawaska River, with its miles of white water, rugged hills, and stately pines, beneath many of which a small green mound and a rough-hewn slab of wood marks the spot where some rugged driver sleeps the long sleep within hearing of the rumble of the fast water they loved.

The troop made the Duck's Hunt Club, at the head of the Duck Rapids, their headquarters, and during the week hiked to Chain Rapids and Black Donald Mine. They also visited the power house, had some fine fishing in the rapids there and altogether spent a very enjoyable and profitable week.

Bishop Dedicates Flags.

Right Rev. W. Cyprian Pinkham, D.D., Bishop of Calgary, preached in St. Stephen's Anglican Church, Toronto, on the occasion of the placing of the colors of the local Boy Scouts Association in the church.

Annual Meeting in Hamilton.

The city of Hamilton has been chosen as the scene for the 13th Annual Meeting of the Provincial Council for Ontario, which will be held about the beginning of February, 1923. This will be the first meeting of the Provincial Council to be held outside of Toronto. Special committees are now working on the programs, both of this meeting and of the Annual Conference of Scout Officers which will be held in conjunction with it. Notable Scout leaders from England, the United States and Canada are expected to participate and every effort will be made to make the occasion one of the biggest in the history of Canadian Scouting.

Open Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, give a teaspoonful to cleanse the liver and bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

Piccadilly, the famous London thoroughfare, is said to have received its name from the "pickardil," a collar worn by men of fashion in the seventeenth century; these were sold by a merchant who built himself a house, Piccadilly Hall, which stood where Piccadilly now runs.

Read How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Mrs. Beecroft

Hamilton, Ontario.—"I have suffered for three years from a female trouble and consequent weakness, pain and irregularity which kept me in bed four or five days each month. I nearly went crazy with pains in my back, and for about a week at a time I could not do my work. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the 'Hamilton Spectator' and I took it. Now I have no pain and am quite regular unless I overwork or stay on my feet from early morning until late at night. I keep house and do all my own work without any trouble. I have recommended the Vegetable Compound to several friends."—Mrs. Emily Beecroft, 16 Douglas St., Hamilton, Ontario.

For nearly fifty years women have been telling how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored their health when suffering with female ills. This accounts for the enormous demand for it from coast to coast.

If you are troubled with any ailment peculiar to women why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? It has helped others, let it help you.

Notes From Regina

Mr. Thos. Bow, Regina, Sask., writes the Press as follows:—"We are becoming settled in our new home, just opposite to the Imperial Oil Works, where there is quite an important industry in the manufacture of gasoline, coal oil, etc. The crude material is brought in and about 400 hands are employed. There has been an expenditure by the Company in the land site, of about $3,000,000. The finished product is shipped out to all part of the province. The last census placed the population of this city at 35,000. In the summer and fall of this year there was a great deal of building, especially on the north and west sides. Instead of the protestant churches of this place remaining apart and struggling in Mission fields and outlaying districts, calling for Missionary aid, they are now becoming self-supporting through the new plan of Union Congregations, which has been adopted by Methodists and Presbyterians in general and other bodies in particular. The Presbyterian synod held its annual meeting here this month, and by a vote of 93 to 15 approved of a resolution calling on the General Assembly to proceed towards the Union of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational Churches. The only cold dip of the season was on the 18th, when it registered 7 below zero.

"Nearly Lost Baby With Croup"

Has Depended on Dr. Chase's Medicines for 25 Years

This letter from Mrs. Thompson gives you some idea of why so many thousands of people depend on Dr. Chase in the hour of sickness.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has a permanent place in the great majority of Canadian homes because it is the most certain relief from Croup, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough and Asthma.

Mrs. Alex. Thompson, Whitla, Alta., writes:—"When my first baby was born, I think she would have died from croup before we could reach a doctor, if it had not been for a neighbor who had a bottle of Dr. Chase's Linseed and Turpentine in the house. This relieved her almost immediately. That was 21 years ago, and Dr. Chase's Medicines have been friends of ours ever since."

Asthma

Mr. Thomas Bond, Sheldrake, North Shore, Que., writes:—"I suffered for years with asthma, sometimes being unable to lie in bed, but after a treatment of Dr. Chase's Linseed and Turpentine, I am now quite well and thank this medicine for restoring me."

BLUE WATER

A TALE OF THE DEEP SEA FISHERMEN

BY FREDERICK WILLIAM WALLACE

Copyright by the Musson Book Company

Thus Frank was left, but with Miss Denton visiting him daily, he was by no means lonely, although he yearned to be up and about again. Sometimes he had his blue moods during which the future looked black; but as soon as Lillian Denton came they vanished like fog before the sun. Daily he looked forward to her coming, and when she failed to arrive one afternoon he had a feeling as if something had gone out of his life.

It is not to be supposed that reading was the only subject which occupied the time. Some days there were when the girl would lay the book down after the recital of a few paragraphs, and they would wander away from the romance of the Doone Valley to the nearer romance of home. She was a lover of the water, of the open spaces and the beauty of nature, and in Frank Westhaver she found a man who had seen and done many things. Unlike the majority of seafarers, he retained the impressions of what his eyes had gazed upon, and had a faculty of simple description which held Miss Denton entranced for many a pleasant hour. His life upon the Banks, the work of the fishery, and tales of the rollicking, dare-devil gangs who manned the vessels of the off-shore fleets, were to her as something entirely new in spite of the fact that she was a Nova Scotian girl and bred in a seaport town. A strange paradox this, but one which is universal. People refuse to see the romance right at their own doors until a stranger comes and opens their eyes.

By the remarks which she was in the habit of letting fall during these talks, Frank wondered how she came to know so much about his history. He had never told her of his trip in from Georges in the Fannie B. Carson, yet she seemed to know all about it; the rescue of Jake Simms; the happenings of his first voyage as skipper, even to the incident of Jules's escape from a St. Malo fisherman, were betrayed by her in casual references to the events. When she left, he was in the habit of pondering over their conversations, and the interest she evinced in his past, and in the ambitions of his future, led him to ask her a question.

"Miss Denton, tell me how you came to know so much about things I've done? I don't remember sayin' anythin' 'bout them."

She laughed in her usual sunny way. "Ah, so I've let the cat out of the bag, have I? And I thought I was so diplomatic, too! Captain, it's a fine thing to have good friends—friends who will stand to you like old Salvation Yeo did to Amyas Leigh——"

"That's ol' Sabot—Jules!" exclaimed Frank. "So he's th' dog!"

"He's a sterling fellow, Captain," she said. "And he thinks the world of you——"

Frank nodded, and with a puzzled look in his grey-blue eyes, he asked, "Excuse me, but how did you git t' know I was in hospital here? I never rightly knew how that came about."

"Jules again, Captain," she replied. "He had no sooner got you in here before he was up to our house."

"He was, was he?" Frank was still perplexed. "I wonder what put it into his head t' go an' bother you about my affairs? You were a'most a stranger t' me. . . . An' it's been him what has been spinnin' ye all these yarns? Poor ol' Jules."

He paused for a few seconds and then gazed into the brown eyes of the girl beside him. "Did he say anythin' about what happened outside thar'?" He hesitated as he saw the embarrassed flush on her cheeks. "How I came t' git inter this scrape?"

For a space she turned her gaze away. "Yes," she answered softly. "He told me all."

Westhaver remained silent for a long time thinking. He wondered why his old dory-mate should have told these things. What was his object? Jules had a curious trait of turning things over in his mind and springing unusual questions, and the remarks he sometimes made had impressed Frank many times with their strange truthfulness.

"You know about that—that girl?" he asked at length.

"Yes," she replied. "Your friend told me all."

For some minutes neither spoke. Frank was gazing hard out at the vista of blue sky showing through the window, and the girl stole a glance at him in his reverie. She remembered the day she first saw him as oilskin clad and ruggedly strong he stood in the door of the berth and looked down upon her. She remembered hearing the tones of his masterful voice as he sung out to the gang while the vessel was lurching and plunging in a Western Ocean gale. How frightened she was then! The roar of the wind and sea; the thunderous crashes of the water on deck; the straining of the little schooner's fabric as she tumbled into the seaway; the water pouring down into the cabin; and lastly she retained a vivid impression of his dripping figure as he came below that night. "Yes . . breezin' up again. . . Had t' heave her to after she shipped that last load. . ." How confident and strong he looked! The sun bronze had faded from his face now, but it glowed with the clear pink of health, and the well arm which lay over the white sheets was muscular and powerful. How wistful and gentle his eyes were at that moment! The strong chin, determined mouth, well-shaped nose, and high forehead with the silky brown auburn hair streaking across it made up the features of just such a man as she would imagine had done the things she had heard, and a man who would be no quitter in the face of danger. And he was no common man with but the endowments of strength and iron nerve to commend him. She knew him better than that, and in their many conversations she was able, from the standpoint of a well-educated and clever young woman, to fathom the thoughts which ran in the young fisherman's mind.

Frank turned suddenly and spoke with a half-smile on his face. "Do you know," he said, "I'll be really sorry to get well again. It means I'll have to go away from here, an' I'll miss you so much."

Miss Denton had been thinking regretfully upon the same question. She too would miss these delightful visits, and for a moment she was at a loss for a reply.

"Yes," he continued, with a note of pensiveness in his voice. "I'll miss hearin' you readin' to me. You've been so kind to spend your time upon me—a common fisherman, an' you——"

"No," said the other; ". . . . an angel!"

The July days passed slowly, and Frank was glad when the doctor said that he could get up and sit outside in the sunshine. The collar-bone had knit nicely, and it was only the arm which really bothered him. But while he was improving in his physical injuries, he was becoming much disturbed mentally over the fact of leaving the young woman who had cheered the long hours of his enforced loneliness. He had given a great deal of thought to her, and a feeling was beginning to take possession of him that it would be a hard thing for him to leave her when the time came. Whether her feelings in that respect were the same as his own he did not know, and he was afraid—much afraid—that he would make another mistake. To reveal to her the unrest which held him in daily suspense might mean a rejection which would be fatal to their friendship. She was, to him, all that was good and beautiful, and with such a woman to work for he felt that he could do great things. The very thoughts of her inspired him, and an analysis of his attitude towards her showed that he was cery much in love.

He had been afraid at first that she was in a social position far superior to his own; but when she admitted that her father's affairs would necessitate her taking up school teaching, Frank felt almost glad that such was the case. With no barrier of this nature between them, he pondered as to whether she would look upon him in the light which the other girl had—that of his profession as a fisherman. He wondered, but in a vague way he did not think so. Lillian Denton was a girl of the right sort—free from affectation and social airs. Besides, even if he were a fisherman, he could be a gentleman in spite of his profession. He could earn good money and keep a wife in the best of everything. His mother's estate would fall to him some day—but he dismissed the thought. He knew instinctively that Lillian would marry for love and not for money, and Frank wondered if he possessed the attributes which would be likely to attract a girl of her type. "I'm afraid," he soliloquized, "she'll think I'm a feller that's blown about by every wind what blows. Turned down by one girl a few weeks ago, an' proposin' to another a few weeks after. Oh, but I'll never be able to exist without her. She's everythin' to me now, an' if I don't get her, th' bottom'll be knocked out of my life. I'll be no good afterwards. I'll never be able to stick at anythin' . . but I'll have to do it an' take a chanst, for I want her badly—aye, badly."

Westhaver was young, and he loved the beautiful in life with his whole heart. It was the way in which he did everything—whole-heartedly. Thrown together so much as they were for many weeks, it is not to be wondered at, his falling in love with Lillian Denton. Frank did not know many girls, and since he was a boy he had lavished all his affection upon one who had proved shallow and false. He was a sailor, and the loneliness of a sailor's life tends to make them respect and honor women more than the ordinary landsman, and when a sailor falls in love he does everything with a rush. Fishermen are said to go the regulation deep-water sailor one better, and there is a saying around the fleets that an extra high-line trip which gives a young fisherman one month's money ahead will send him ashore to marry the first girl he fancies.

The day came when the doctor told him he could leave the hospital on the morrow and go home. Frank received the news with no great enthusiasm, and the medical man—a keen judge of human nature—put two and two together, and made his deductions with a smile. He met Miss Denton on her way up to the institution, and in the course of conversation remarked that "her friend, the Captain, was feeling quite blue about leaving the hospital." The blush which suffused her face when he made the remark sent him off chuckling to himself. "Given a quiet, lonesome hospital; a handsome young sailorman, sick; a pretty girl, sympathetic; daily visits for a few weeks; and the bacteria will take effect. That's the prescription." And smiling to himself at his joke, he went his way.

Frank was sitting by the open window when she entered, and he looked at her with the welcome shining in his eyes. "Got t' clear out t'-morrow," he said when she had seated herself.

"Are you sorry?" she asked with a smile.

"Yes," he replied slowly, "I am."

She apparently ignored his answer. "Dad wants you to come along to the house and stay for a day or two before you go home. Is your suit-case packed?"

"Everythin' is in it, Miss Denton. But it ain't right for me to impose on you——"

Rupture Kills 7,000 Annually

Seven thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the sign (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss, appliance, or whatever name you choose to call it? At best, the truss is only a make-shift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way, and every truss sufferer in the land is invited to make a test right in the privacy of their own home. The PLAPAO method is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture the world has ever known.

The PLAPAO PAD when adhering closely to the body cannot possibly slip or shift out of place, therefore cannot chafe or pinch. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—inexpensive. To be used whilst you work and whilst you sleep. No straps, buckles or springs attached.

Learn how to close the hernial opening as nature intended so the rupture CAN'T come down. Send your name and ten cents, coin or stamps, to-day, to PLAPAO CO., 765 Stuart Bldg., St. Louis, Mo., for trial Plapao and the information necessary.

Not All He Expected.

A youth who had accomplished a good deal in football but little in his studies, was dropped from one preparatory school and immediately invited to enter another. He had been there but a few days when he met a member of the faculty.

"Well," said the professor, "how do you find it here?"

"Pretty fair," said the boy.

"That's good. Find it smooth going, eh?"

The boy reflected. "Well, I shouldn't like to say that exactly," he remarked. "The field's sort of rough yet in places, sir."

Making Ends Meet in Music Education.

The problem of making "ends meet" while continuing their education in music is often the most pressing question which confronts the students of to-day. Yet many times the very people who need it most pass by an opportunity at their doors and going farther afield to make money fail dismally.

As one instance: In the city of Ottawa there is a good conservatory with efficient teachers. Just twenty miles or so away on the line of the railroads is a little village that is the centre of a flourishing farming community, and in this village a class of twenty-four pupils waits in vain for a teacher to take the place of the one whom they have lost. Each of these pupils is willing to pay fifty cents for a half-hour lesson, while one family in the village offers free board and lodging for a day and a night each week to any teacher willing to go from the city to give lessons to the children The railway fare to and from this village amounts to one dollar and fifteen cents This leaves a profit of ten dollars and eighty-five cents for approximately one day's work Almost the same story with the same inducement for a teacher holds good of another village in a different direction up among the Gatineau Hills, but it would not be quite so convenient for a student to go there as to the first place It might, however, be well worth while

Fifty cents a lesson may not be much to some teachers, but then what about the opportunity for rendering real service to those children who are still looking for their music teacher? There must be many other little villages in Canada in need of help from the music teachers.

What about it? Are we going to neglect our little friends in the rural districts of this great Dominion?

A SUGGESTION TO THE POWERS

"Why not let go the anchor of the League of Nations?"

—Sunday Chronicle, Manchester

More Pumpkin Pie.

And now comes another question on home canning. Is it practical and worth while to can pumpkin and squash?

Yes, most emphatically. Neither pumpkins nor squash can be kept very long in the average home cellar or storage space without rotting. Fortunately, pumpkins and squash are a most splendid, economic and delicious food product when canned, either in glass jars or tin cans. By following the cold pack method of canning the product is ever ready for use as a vegetable dish throughout the winter, spring and summer months, and always ready for pie filling. Here is the way to can them.

Canning pumpkin—Select firm, ripe pumpkins and cut into halves. Scrape out the seeds and spongy pulp. Cut each half into strips one and one-half to two inches in width, and with a sharp knife cut off the outer rind. Cut the strips into convenient sections and blanch in steam ten to fifteen minutes, or until tender. Mash with a potato masher or put through a sieve. Pack immediately into hot jars or enamel-lined cans; add salt and other seasonings, or spices if desired. Sterilize in hot water canner, for two to three hours, according to size of can, and for fifty minutes have the steam pressure canner under ten pounds of steam. Remove jars and complete seals at once. Tin cans should be plunged immediately into cold water, thus being cooled quickly.

Canning squash—Cut squash open; remove seeds and core. Cut into sections and place in oven to bake until pulp becomes soft and easily removed with a large spoon. Pack contents into hot jars or cans directly upon removing from rind and follow the same process as in canning of pumpkin. Some folks prefer to steam the squash in removing from rind.

Following are some tried recipes by which these two vegetables may be made tasty.

Scalloped pumpkin—Cut the pumpkin in slices, peel and boil in boiling salted water for twenty minutes. Drain and put into a buttered pudding dish in layers, seasoning each layer with sugar, powdered cinnamon, grated nutmeg and small pieces of butter, pour over all one-half cupful of milk and bake in a moderate oven for one hour. Serve in the baking dish.

Squash pie—One cupful of squash, made very fine, one-half cupful of sugar, two eggs, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one cupful of milk, one-half cupful of cream, one cupful of chopped dates. Add fruit and salt to cooked squash. Beat eggs light, add sugar, milk and cream, and mix all together. If no cream is used stir into the squash a lump of butter, while squash is still warm.

Pumpkin fritters—Beat up one egg until light, add one-half cupful milk, one teaspoonful salt, a few grains of red pepper, sift in one cupful of flour, add one teaspoonful of olive oil, and one cupful of stewed pumpkin. Mix until smooth and glossy, and drop by spoonfuls into smoking hot fat. Fry a golden brown, drain on white paper.

Hot Lunch for Schools.

What about the school hot lunch at this time of the year? Does your school serve it? If not, are you not missing a good chance to give valuable help to your children and to your community?

I used the word "community" advisedly. The boys and girls who are going to your school to-day will be the men and women of your community in another decade or so. The physique and mentality they are now building will count tremendously then.

What difference does a hot lunch make? Try it for yourselves. It has passed the stage of fad or experiment. Wherever it has been inaugurated it has become a fixture. Try it in your school.

The hot lunch at school does not mean that the teacher prepares a pot roast with various seductive extras. Nothing of the kind. Its chief value does not consist in the additional food that it gives to the children, so much as in the added palatability and digestion given to the lunches that they bring from home.

In most rural schools one hot dish each day is all this is attempted. This dish may be nothing but hot cocoa, it may be a milk soup, it may be a vegetable soup. The fact that stands prominently forth is that the children who get this addition to their fare become brighter students, stronger in frame and better nourished.

No doubt very much of the improvement is due to the fact that instead of gobbling their cold, dry lunch as hastily as possible, the addition of the extra dish gives somewhat of the ceremony of a meal, thus encouraging them to eat and digest the food brought from home to a very much better effect.

We need not bother about the explanation. The absolute and verified facts are that the hot lunch, even in its simplest form, is a good thing for your children, and a practical thing for any school to give; and this is just the season to begin.

The expense need not be very great. One cooking vessel of large size helped out by serving dishes brought from the homes of the children has been the start of the hot lunch experiment in many schools. But to do it properly it should be handled as an experiment in teaching domestic science and sufficient money should be appropriated to purchase a modest outfit of cooking and table utensils.

Experience.

Deborah danced when she was two,
As buttercups and daffodils do;
Spirited, frail, naively bold,
Her hair a ruffled crest of gold,
And whenever she spoke her voice went singing
Like water up from a fountain springing.

But now her step is quiet and slow;
She walks the way primroses go,
Her hair is yellow instead of gilt,
Her voice is losing its lovely lilt,
And in place of her wild, delightful ways
A quaint precision rules her days.

For—Deborah now is three and oh,
She knows so much that she did not know. —Aline Kilmer.

Twice Nothing.

Thomas was not the brightest specimen on earth, and, try as he might, he could not succeed in obtaining a situation.

At last a bright idea occurred to him. He would offer his services free for a fortnight.

On these terms Mr. Ikey Fingelstein engaged him.

'Vat is your present salary?" asked Fingelstein.

"Nothing, sir," said Thomas.

Mr. Fingelstein contemplated the lad.

"Vell, my poy, your vages is doubled!"

And Thomas was quite satisfied—until he had had time to think over the generous offer.

Poisons You Eat Every Day.

How many people who were startled by the recent epidemic of food poisoning realize that daily most of us consume poison with our meals?

Bacon, for example, which figures on most breakfast tables, contains a small amount of saltpetre; it gives the rind its coloring. Take a dose of an ounce or so of saltpetre, and even if you do not die you will have a decidedly uncomfortable time.

An ounce of saltpetre has been known to kill a person in two hours while medical records contain numerous instances of people having been made very ill by mistaking this substance for some other form of salt.

Mention of salt brings to mind the little known fact that a favorite Chinese method of committing suicide is by taking a cupful of the common table variey. In any more than small quantities salt is a violent gastric irritant, one of the effects of which is the setting up of fatal inflammation of the stomach.

Another salt of which most of us partake fairly freely at some time or other is oxalic acid, a distressingly powerful irritant and poison when taken in sufficient quantities. It is found in rhubarb and sorrel, and gives both their pleasant thirst-quenching flavor.

Bloaters and kippers are not infrequently preserved in a preparation containing formaldehyde, which is liable to bring about stomach trouble and sometimes worse effects. The amount used in curing fish, however, is so small as to be almost negligible.

Even your iced Christmas cake cannot be absolved from the charge of being poisonous in a slight degree. That delightful almond flavor, appreciated by most people, is a sign of the presence in the icing of prussic acid, less than one ounce of which is sufficient to kill two or three people in a very short time.

Many of the cheapest kinds of jam contain arsenic, as do inferior brands of sweets and confectionery.

Then, again, such familiar items as cloves, nutmegs, horse-radish, and certain herbs are poisonous if taken in large quantities.

Black pepper contains an alkaloid poison known as piperine, while the cayenne variety, better known perhaps as red pepper, is even more potent as a poison.

A case was reported in which a woman swallowed half an ounce of cayenne pepper and died in agony a few hours afterwards.

All doctors agree that over-indulgence in tea or coffee, owing to the caffein these drinks contain, is decidedly injurious to health.

Tobacco takes its name from the Island of Tobago in the Caribbean Sea, where it was discovered, but "nicotine" was the name first given to tobacco in France through the introduction of the herb to Catherine de Medicis by the Ambassador to Lisbon, Jean Nicot.

The object of this department is to place at the service of our farm readers the advice of an acknowledged authority on all subjects pertaining to soils and crops.

Address all questions to Professor Henry G. Bell, in care of The Wilson Publishing Company, Limited, Toronto, and answers will appear in this column in the order in which they are received. When writing kindly mention this paper. As space is limited it is advisable where immediate reply is necessary that a stamped and addressed envelope be enclosed with the question, when the answer will be mailed direct.

V. R.: I have some corn fodder which was frosted before it was ripe; I have cut it and shocked it. Would this fodder be good feed for horses, providing I fed a little hay and oats with it? The horses seem to like it. Is there any such thing as horses getting worms from feeding sornstalks?

Answer: Successful experiments have shown it possible to feed horses, which are not working to capacity, a limited amount of silage. Some stations have fed over 100 lbs. per head per week. N. Carolina Station rated 2 lbs. silage to take the place of 1 lb. clover hay. Instances are on record of where horses were poisoned with mouldy silage, so you would do well to examine the silage carefully before feeding it.

H. C.: Will you kindly give the value of good silage per ton?

Answer: Some years ago New York Exp. Station placed a value on good silage of $3 per ton when hay sells at 10 a ton.

C. F.: I would be pleased to know the best time to sow lime. Can it be sown with a grain drill?

Answer: Lime may be sown any time preferably on plowed ground. The idea is to get the particles of lime distributed through the soil as thoroughly as possible. Lime can be drilled in with the fertilizer dropper of a grain drill but best results are gotten from broadcasting it over plowed ground and disking or harrowing it in.

P. R. H.: I have a field of rather poor sandy loam soil which stood in sod a number of years as pasture. This year raised a fair crop of corn. This fall I applied 300 pounds of sixteen per cent. phosphate per acre and 1,200 pounds of ground limestone per acre, and sowed to rye and vetch, and I have a good stand of it. I want to know the quickest and best method of getting this field into alfalfa. I haven't any barnyard fertilizer to use, but am willing to use whatever lime and chemicals are necessary. I have a field of sandy loam which grew a good crop of red beans—thirteen bushels per acre—this year without fertilizer of any kind. I want to plant this field to corn in 1923 and have no barnyard fertilizer for it. I would like to know what chemicals to use, when and how to apply them to get best results.

Answer: Next spring have your rye and vetch field plowed fairly early and have it disked and harrowed down into a fine seedbed. As soon as all frost is past drill about 1 bus. wheat or barley per acre, and with it about 20 lbs. of alfalfa seed per acre. If you have a combined drill, sow about 300 lbs. of fertilizer analyzing about 2-12-2 per acre, at the time of seeding. If you do not have a drill scatter this fertilizer broadcast just before the last harrowing.

Am afraid your sandy soil may be short on moisture for corn after growing beans. As to fertilizers for corn, I would advise you to work or drill 400 lbs. per acre of fertilizer carrying not less than 4 per cent. nitrogen, 8 to 10 per cent. phosphoric acid, and 4 to 6 per cent. potash. Do not let the corn fall directly on the fertilizer. Such an analysis as suggested should start your crop well and make up to a large extent for the plant food limitations of sandy soil.

Sheep Notes

Breeding ewe lambs before they have reached full maturity is not to be recommended. The practice not only impairs the development of the ewe lambs, but is likely to produce lambs with weak constitutions. Ewe lambs immaturely developed at mating time are most apt to intensify physical defects and deteriorate breed type.

Sheep of different breeds vary somewhat as to age of coming to maturity, but it is a wise rule to follow not to mate ewe lambs of any breed the first season. I know that some flock owners claim that by proper feeding of the ewes and lambs during the suckling and weaning periods the lambs may be brought to breeding maturity and mated the first year without injurious results. Good care and feeding goes a long way in bringing to early maturity any kind of breeding stock, but if best results are sought it is advisable not to force animals for the purpose of early mating. Ewe lambs in particular need good care and feed to come to full maturity and prove strong healthy breeding stock.

Ewe lambs coming to maturity need all their strength to build framework and muscular tissue. If mated the first season the ewe lambs are called upon to do double duty, first to sustain themselves and secondly, to grow their unborn young. One or the other is likely to suffer.

Progress in building up flocks of sheep comes from the gradual and permanent strengthening of the productive qualities of each member of the flock. Matured parent stock is essential to assurance of meeting this desirable end. I have never made it a practice to mate ewe lambs, but I have had instances occur of ewe lambs being mated the first season through accident, and the results were not satisfactory.

Dairying—Everybody's Business.

Miss Helen G. Campbell of the Dominion Dairy and Cold Storage Branch, never made a truer statement than that contained in a recent address, "To train a child in good food habits is one of the fundamentals in making him a success in life." The subject of her address was "Dairying—Everybody's Business." She went on to describe how the cow became a manufactory of the most wholesome and best body-building food for human consumption. Reading a verbatim report of the address, it is impossible to avoid the thought that everybody in the land, and especially women, would have profited by hearing and digesting the many truths she gave voice to. She described how dairy products fed and fostered the body and thus led to improved mentality. She quoted scientists of different nationalities to substantiate her statements, Metchnikoff, for instance, to prove that dairy products promote longevity, and Dr. McCollum, that they are a large element in the making and preservation of good teeth, and that the first and most important principle of nutrition is extension of the use of dairy products.

Speaking directly of the business relationship to her subject Miss Campbell showed how all classes were concerned; how all were kept fit for their work, and oftentimes for the accomplishment of big things, by the free consumption of milk and its products. In fact, the speaker ventured to say, that sometimes she was led to think that business men, in their down-town lunch at least, were more faithful followers of the doctrine "drink milk" than any other class of people. Concluding, she paid tribute to those schools wherein milk is distributed to underweight children, and to the Home and School Clubs of the Border Cities, which she said are in the forefront in all worth-while work of this kind.

Our sorrows are as essential as our joys. They are needed to increase our appreciation of the happiness which comes to us.

The Dairy

Good dairymen are finding it a wise practice to feed well the cows which are dry, or nearly so. The big milk producers, during the period of heavy production, commonly draw upon the supply of mineral elements in their bodies. This supply must be replaced. The time to replace it is when the cow is yielding little or no milk. Then it is that a surplus of these important elements should be stored ready for the following season of heavy production.

Certain feeds are richer in lime and phosphorous than others. Alfalfa, clover and soy-bean hays are especially rich in lime. Phosphorous in feeds is found in the largest quantities in wheat bran, cottonseed meal, standard wheat middlings and linseed meal. Where these hays and concentrates are given in appropriate quantities to the cows, the best results will be obtained.

Rapid Development of Fox Farming.

The rearing of the silver-black fox in captivity for fur production is a business that has made rapid strides in Canada since 1910, and coincidently a demand has been created for information on the various problems associated with the undertaking. A bulletin "Fox Ranching in Canada" is recently to hand, prepared by Messrs. J. A. Allen, of the Research Station at Charlottetown, P. E. I., and J. Ennis Smith, of the Research Station at Hull, Que., published by the Health of Animals Branch under the authority of the Dominion Minister of Agriculture. Section 1 deals with management, sanitation and diseases, and Section II with the scientific nutrition and feeding of foxes. Previous to 1910, fox rearing was a secret pursuit. A veritable scramble for breeding stock then occurred, and the cost of a pair of foxes steadily rose from $3,000 to $20,000 in 1913, as high as $35,000 having been paid for an exceptional pair. Prior to 1914, optimistic investors speculated in futures and options were taken on unborn pups, but the World War brought about a change, and breeding and selling are now conducted on a business basis. At present a pair of foxes is worth $500 and upwards, according to quality and performance. It is estimated that over 600 pairs of live foxes were exported from Prince Edward Island last year and that the crop of pelts in the last pelting season was 6,000, the price obtained running from $100 to $650 per skin and the average being about $275.

The Dilatory Worker.

We probably all know people who seem to be, as they express it, "always in a rush," yet who are always just a little late. They find apparently almost a pleasurable excitement in putting off till the last moment the performance of necessary tasks and then executing them under high pressure. No doubt there is something stimulating in having to accomplish certain results within a given time, but a good many persons in allotting their time seem to mistake the harassing for the stimulating.

Every teacher knows that, if on a Tuesday he assigns a certain task to be completed by the following Tuesday, a considerable percentage of the class will begin work upon it on Monday evening. He knows too that there is a very small fracton of the class who will set to work upon it immediately. He can soon tell which of his pupils are the fore-handed and which the dilatory workers, says a writer in Youth's Companion. It may be that the forehanded workers will not always do the best work. Some of the dull pupils are sure to be among the forehanded ones; they have found that they have to be, in order to keep up at all; and often among the dilatory puplis there are the brightest minds. But if not overcome, the habit of dilatoriness will eventually slow up a naturally bright and active mind, and the habit of forehandedness, if maintained, will often quicken a dull one.

For Home and Country

These are Real Nation-Builders.

The Mallorytown Branch commenced the year with a membership of fifty-three, the activities being chiefly confined to the Consolidated School. The financial proceeds have been derived from the holding of ice cream socials, supplying refreshment booths at the School Fair, and serving supper to the Teachers' Convention. The evening session of this Convention was marked by short addresses from Prof. MacPherson of Toronto University, and Sergeant-Major MacDonnell of the Kingston R.M.C., and the presentation of a silver cup, costing $18, by the Women's Institute, to the school winning the highest number of points at the School Fair.

The President acted as one of the judges of the school plots, also of the vegetable home plots, and the exhibits at the Fair.

On Victoria Day there were sports held on the school grounds: in connection with this day there was a young woman sent from Toronto by a grafonola company to demonstrate their musical instrument, and the effect that music had on children, even at a very early age. The President asked the question: "How old does a child have to be before it is attracted by music?" A nurse in the audience answered, "Three days," and told of instances where children had been soothed from fretfulness to quietness by the putting on of a record, even at three days old. A lullaby song was given which suggested a mother putting a child to sleep, a gallop which suggested prancing of horses, and another which represented the pulling out of a train from the depot.

There was also given a demonstration of folk dancing on the green outside. The grounds of the Consolidated School cover an area of six acres, which is the community sports ground as well, there having been many baseball matches this season which stirred up much enthusiasm and interest among both young and old.

Other donations from the Institute were $10 for basket-ball for the school, $24 to the rest room in Brockville for one year, and $25 to the Cobalt Fire Relief Fund.

In June much pleasure was had in listening to the Government speaker on the subject of Community Welfare, and the members are ready this year for more progressive work than ever.

Storage Potatoes Need Air.

Insufficient ventilation during storage is largely responsible for the discolored, blackish area frequently found in the centre of potatoes. Extensive experiments show that the symptoms may be produced at will by excluding air from the tubers, even at low temperatures. The trouble is aggravated no doubt by heat, but is materially checked when proper ventilation is provided. This explodes the old theory that blackheart was caused by the heating of the tubers in storage.

That Spouty Hillside Spot.

Ever get stuck with the car or farm implements in a wet place on the side-hill? If you have, we need not go into detail and describe what the side-hill seep is. They are found in the fields as well as the roads.

If correct methods are used, many of these religion-lost spots can easily be taken care of by a very little expense and labor. In order to find the right method, the cause of the wet spot muse be taken into consideration.

Geologists tell us that at one time this country was overrun by glaciers. These left a hard dense soil impervious to water. In different parts of the country this soil is known by various names as hard pan, joint clay, etc. On top of this deposit is found a layer of finer soil, generally of a wind foundation. Oftentimes this under layer comes to the surface on the side of hills.

The water soaks through the upper layer, reaches the impervious soil and travels along until it comes to the surface. Our problem then is to tap or intercept this water before it comes to the surface. In order to do this we must place tile above the wet spot; run the tile around it and discharge the water into a sodded draw, or down the hill to a convenient place. A small tile will take care of these spots.

An ever-flowing spout may be made to furnish a watering place for the stock by leading to a tank. Often it is hard to make these drained spots produce at once. Use plenty of humus or manure and limestone.

CORNISH MINERS FOR CANADIAN MINES

The picture shows the embarkation of a hundred Cornish miners on the "Audania." Owing to the closing of the tin mines, the community in Cornwall was threatened with distress. The government aided these men to emigrate. The wisdom of their coming is debated on this side.

Lesson Setting—The lesson story, as we find it, forms part of the ministry of Jesus on his way from Perea, beyond Jordan, to Jerusalem.

I. How to Find Eternal Life, 25-29.

V. 25. Behold a certain lawyer. This man was a scribe, one whose duty it was to interpret the law. Stood up, and tempted him. He proposes to test Jesus in a trial of wits, and expose either his inefficiency as a teacher, or his departure from the teachings of orthodox Judaism. Master, what shall I do? He begins with words of seeming deference to Jesus. He seems to consult him as an authority. To inherit eternal life. This was the same question put by the young ruler in a spirit of real earnestness and inquiry.

V. 26. What is written in the law. Jesus immediately makes a twofold thrust between the armor of the self-confident scribe. First, he makes an appeal to the law which it was hoped he would disparage. Second, he puts the scribe on the defensive instead of the offensive. Why do you come with a question which is assured in the law which you assume to teach? The scribe is put in the witness box.

V. 27. Thou shalt love the Lord; the summary of the law in Deut. 6: 5; 10: 12; Lev., ch. 20.

V. 28. This do, and thou shalt live. Jesus puts the scribe in the position of having asked an unnecessary question. The question which was to test Christ only revealed the inexpertness of the scribe.

V. 29. He is willing to justify himself. The scribe feels baffled but not beaten. He is determined to show that there was a real difficulty in the question he propounded. And who is my neighbor? The law makes religion wide enough to take in God and one's neighbor. And who is my neighbor? The rabbis taught that neighborhood in this sense was limited to the nationality of Israel. They limited it by race and stock.

II. How to Find One's Neighbor, 30-37.

V. 30. A certain man; a Jew. From Jerusalem to Jericho; a distance of 21 miles. Fell among thieves. See Light from the East.

V. 31. By chance; meaning rather "about the same time." A certain priest . . that way. Jericho was a priestly residence. This priest had performed his week of service at the temple and was on his way home. His program of religious duties had been performed.

V. 32. When he saw . . he passed by on the other side. He passes near enough to see the need of the man, but it was dangerous to linger here for robbers were evidently near. Moreover, he might be ceremonially defiled by touching the man if he were dead. Religion was for him a fixed program of ceremonial duties. It has no room for compassion and service.

V. 32. Likewise a Levite. The Levites were the assistants of the priests in the temple sacrifices and acted as doorkeepers and singers. He follows the example of his superior. His religion is all confined to the temple. It has nothing for the common road.

V. 33. A certain Samaritan . . came where he was. Little was to be expected from the Samaritans. The Jews had no dealings with the Samaritans. But Jesus has the courage to hold up the hated Samaritan for praise and commendation. Had compassion on him. All other motives are overpowered by the spirit of compassion.

V. 34. Went to him. He might have pitied and passed on, but emotion leads to action. Bound up his wounds. He renders first aid. Pouring in oil and wine. Not in niggardly, but abundant fashion he gives the things he had provided for his own possible needs on the way. Set him on his own beast. He sacrifices his time, turning aside from his own errand. He makes his travelling equipment into an ambulance. And took care of him; becomes nurse and doctor.

V. 35. Took out two pence; provided another nurse and footed the bill. I will repay thee; provided for all possible needs and became surety and bond for the expense. Jesus emphasizes the ungrudging and complete nature of the service rendered. He goes the second and last mile in the way of service.

V. 36. Which now . . was neighbor? Once again Jesus puts his examiner in the witness box and compels him to answer his own question.

V. 37. Note that the lawyer hates to say definitely that the Samaritan was the neighbor. He puts it more vaguely. He that showed mercy. Nevertheless Jesus has compelled him to acknowledge that any one who needs is a neighbor and any one who can meet that need must play the part of neighbor to the needy one.

Application.

Max Muller said that Christianity struck the word "barbarian" from the dictionaries of the world and replaced it with the word "brother." Previous to the coming of Jesus to the Jew, every man not circumcised was a Gentile and outside the pale of God's chosen people. To the Greek, every man not speaking Greek was a barbarian, and one to be regarded only with contempt or patronizing toleration. Under the influence of the teaching and spirit of Jesus we are coming to see that all men everywhere are neighbors and that it is the duty of men to help their neighbors along life's highway.

The loving heart finding expression in service is the ideal Christ set for men. Service had a central place in the life of teaching of the Master. The parable of the Good Samaritan exemplifies this. Then there was that other solemn utterance wherein Jesus declared that when the dead stand before the throne of God their fate will depend upon whether or not they have rendered service. They will be asked if they have fed the hungry; clothed the naked; given drink to the thirsty and visited the imprisoned and sick (Matt. 25: 31-46). "He that is greatest among you shall be your servant," said Jesus.

HIGH TIME

Live Stock Notes.

Have dairy cows freshen in late fall or early winter. They will hold out better in milk.

Cut down the feed of idle horses, thus saving on feed bills and veterinarian's bills. Enforce exercise every day during winter.

Feed grain to pregnant ewes in winter. Unless ewes are thin, not more than a half or three-fourths of a pound a head a day. Use corn and oats, clover hay and silage.

Feed plenty of silage to fattening steers. Silage cuts down the amount of grain needed, and boosts the profits.

Keep record of dates when sows are bred, so that pigs will not be chilled or injured by the mother, should they arrive unexpectedly.

Sitka spruce, found in British Columbia, is said to be well suited for the manufacture of sounding boards for pianos, violins and violoncellos. This is the finding of Professor Percy Groom, of the Imperial College of Botany, London, who was commissioned after the war to look into the question of finding new material for sounding boards.

Fistful of Feathers.

Little brown bird in the stubble,
Born to a life full of trouble,
Up and away!
Through the twelve-gauge's spray—
Ah, little bird, life's a bubble.

Naught but a fistful of feather,
You that belong to the heather,
Up—o'er the brush!
In another wild "flush"!
Brave little fistful of feather.

Run, little bird, in the clover—
Game little life, nearly over—
Steady there! Rise!
Dead bird! O what a prize!
Game little bird of the clover.

Little brown bird in the stubble,
Born to a life full of trouble,
Up and away!
Through the twelve-gauge's spray—
Ah, little bird, life's a bubble,
—Wallace Greenough.

To Get Rid of Stumps.

In late fall or early winter bore in centre of stump a hole about eighteen or twenty inches deep and from one and one-half to two inches in diameter. Put in about two and one-half ounces of saltpeter, fill the hole with water and plug up tight. In the spring, take out the plug and pour in hole eight or ten ounces of petroleum and ignite. The stump will smoulder but not blaze, to the extremities of the roots, leaving only light ashes as the result. This is a safe and sure method for the average farmer who has only a few large stumps to destroy.

Of Course Not.

A conjuror was about to perform a difficult trick. He bared his arms to the elbow and said:

To help me in this trick I need the services of a boy. Any boy will do. I'm not at all particular. Yes, yes, my little man; step right up on the platform; you'll do nicely. First, though (to reasure the audience) of course, you've never seen me before, have you my fine little fellow?"

"'No, papa," piped the little boy.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Faulkner—

Your friends have assembled here this evening to welcome you on your wedding tour and to congratulate you upon your obedience to that command of God—"To marry for it is not good for man to be alone."

You two have been made as one, your destinies, which in the past have been along different paths, are now inseparably bound together by the bands of love, mutual respect, and loyalty If these bonds are genuine, all the storms and vicissitudes of life will but serve to bind you more closely together. If to you the vows which you have so recently taken, have been, not only the mere repetition of a set form of words, but the spontaneous desire of your hearts, peace and happiness will be your constant companion throughout, the unknown future lying golden and mystic in the bosom of time. That love which you have pledged each other will be a panacea for all the misunderstandings and shortcomings of your wedded life.

You Emmerson have endeared yourself to your many friends and neighbors by your easy-going, kindly and affable manner, and by your readiness at all times to assist those in trouble or distress and for that reason we have all been interested in your choice of a helpmate and we feel assured you have chosen one who:—

"When the clouds of trouble and sadness Shroud in gloom your weary head" will be able to shed upon you the light of peace and joy. Hence "Congratulations old boy."

And Mrs. Faulkner we cordially welcome you to our midst. Your labours in the past have been at the bedside of the sick and afflicted and of giving words of sympathy and consolation to the heartstriken in the hour of death. We now extend to you our heartfelt wishes for a long and happy life in that yet nobler sphere of womanhood. May there be no dark shadows of regret for you as you face the future with the one upon whom you have bestowed your affections and in whom you have placed your trust, confidence and welfare.

Mr. and Mrs. Faulkner we cannot let you begin your married life without our expressions of good-will but as words are mere passing sounds we desire to make known our feelings in a more tangible form.

Therefore kindly accept this purse and with it our best wishes for your health, prosperity and happiness.

Mr. Faulkner in a few well chosen words, thanked his friends, on behalf of himself and bride for their kindness and good wishes and their token of goodwill. Then all united in singing, "For they are jolly good fellows" and "See him smiling just now."

"World's Best" means that you get on the new Blue Amberol Records a wider range of Music and Singing than from all others combined. They are not like the Disc Record—Wax Records which soon wear out bv the Needle Scratching, as they are played by the Blue Diamond Point that makes no scratching noise and never need Changing, playing the Longest Record in the World, the Blue Amberol Record. Each Record contains the full selection and is unbreakable. This means that you get twice as much Music on the Blue Amberol Record as you get on the best ten inch Disc Records. With a Disc Talking Machine you always have trouble in changing needles and broken records, which is a labor to operate. Besides it is dangerous to have the needles lying around for your children to get. When you purchase a New Edison Diamond Amberola this bother is gone forever. And it will be a pleasure to know that you have an Instrument that your Smallest Child can play without the fear of destroying or breaking the records. In our twenty one years in the Edison Business, we have never yet seen or heard of any other make of Phonograph that we could not defeat in five minutes. When you purchase an instrument you want the best when they cost you no more. And for this reason we are willing to make this test right in your home.
