Thieves backed van up to front door

MOREWOOD — Winchester OPP are investigating a daylight break and enter that occurred on Russell Street in Morewood Sept. 29. Const. Ann DeGiovanni said a side window of the home was entered and stolen were a Partner chainsaw with a 16-inch bar, with social insurance number engraved under the trigger, two Magnasonic TVs, a Panasonic color TV, Toshiba stereo system, clothing and jewelry. Witnesses told police the thieves drove a blue Dodge Caravan with a Quebec licence plate onto the front lawn of the home, from where they exited.

Driver fled scene

CHESTERVILLE —Police are looking for a blue van after a hit-and-run incident in the parking lot of Chesterville's Anglican Church Sept. 29. Winchester OPP Const. Ann DeGiovanni said a 1984 Pontiac Acadian parked in the lot was hit and pushed about five feet, damaging the rear bumper. Const. Peter Valiquette of the Morrisburg detachment is investigating.

Citrus sales begin

MAPLE RIDGE — Oranges of all sizes will be for sale from Oct. 7 - 21. Students from North Dundas District High School will be selling large and small oranges along with gift boxes for various prices in addition to grapefruits of the same sizes. Students will be canvassing the area throughout the next few weeks in order to sell the oranges. However, if not contacted, those wishing to purchase fruit may contact the high school at 448-2328.

Elliott won't run

INGLESIDE — Former Osnabruck Township deputy-reeve Carson Elliott has decided he won't seek election this November. Elliott cited health concerns for his decision, as he is still recovering from leg and back injuries he received recently. Elliott, who was unsuccessful in a bid for the reeve's chair in 1991, says he will continue to have a keen interest in the township and may run in the future.

Governments come through with infrastructure cash

Greg Hewitt
Record Staff

"It's a project that we would not have been able to go ahead with. (The grants) allowed us to move the project ahead quite a bit."
-Williamsburg clerk Mike Waddell

More than $800,000 in projects are ready to go ahead in Winchester, Finch and Williamsburg townships with the announcement that infrastructure grants have been approved.

And the three municipalities agree that the projects would not have been possible this early without the help of the federal and provincial governments.

The grants were awarded through the Canada-Ontario Infrastructure program, through which the federal and provincial governments each contribute a third of the cost of a project, and the municipality the remaining third. The program is expected to create up to 527 person-weeks of employment in the three municipalities.

In Winchester Township, $211,723 will be used to rebuild River Road from Hwy. 31 to the Nation Valley Bridge.

Another $81,000 project, shared with Mountain and Osgoode townships, will reconstruct Boundary Road South to Harmony Road, and pave three kilometres of road leading to the intersection of Winchester, Mountain and Osgoode townships.

Reeve Claude Cousineau said it would likely have taken five to eight years for the township to fund the River Road project on its own, and said the Boundary Road project was a good deal because the municipal third of the cost was shared with Mountain and Osgoode.

Cousineau noted, though, that by funding the projects and creating jobs, the federal and provincial governments are likely incurring more debt, and that the township has had to consider very seriously whether it can afford its share of grants offered in the past.

"But on the other side of the coin, if we don't take advantage of it as a municipality, there are 700 other municipalities out there that will gladly grab it. You're damned if you do and damned if you don't."

In Finch Township, three projects worth $175,350 were approved, including $114,000 to replace a deteriorating sewer on Fourth Street in Crysler, $46,000 to replace the sidewalk on Charles Street and $15,000 for road name signs throughout the township.

The three projects are expected to begin this month and will create 72 person-weeks of employment.

The township, eligible for a total of $186,000 also applied for a $10,000 grant to replace garage doors at the municipal building. The application was submitted just before the deadline, and the township has yet to learn whether it too will be accepted, clerk Arnott Empey said.

But Empey said the grants were appreciated, as the township would not have been able to fund the three projects on its own.

"We're quite happy we got them because otherwise, there wouldn't have been any grants on (those projects).

Also approved was Williamsburg Township's grant for an extension of Schell Street and sewers, hydro and other underground services, projects that will total $365,574.

The projects are expected to pave the way for residential and commercial development in the hamlet of Williamsburg's west end.

Feelin' vine

Two and a half year old Rebecca Appleton dropped in from the pumpkin patch to wish Williamsburg residents a happy fall harvest festival during Saturday's parade. Rebecca and her mother, Sheila, were on the float entered by the village's Baden Powell groups, which took the award for best non-commercial entry. MUNICIPAL Election '94

Two more throw hats into election ring

BERWICK — Roger Ouimet and Don Campbell are the latest to declare candidacy in the upcoming municipal election in Finch Township.

Having previously served one term on council, Campbell says he hopes to stay in order to "make things a little better than they were."

Waste management is expected to be a big issue in the township during the next three years "as it could use some improvement."

Campbell admits township concerns have improved during his term, "but there is always room for more change."

Community policing is an area Campbell is interested in developing. "We are now into getting community policing working with the village of Finch." With the OPP promise to the township of one full-time officer, says Campbell, "I would like to see that happen."

Campbell adds it would be nice to see a business or industry development of some sort move into the township. "It would certainly help the tax base."

Ouimet, an 18-year employee of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Catholic Schools, says his experience of having lived in Crysler for the past 31 years will be of great benefit to him if elected.

He made his decision to run for public office after being approached by a number of township residents.

"I like to work with people and see work on council as a challenge," says Ouimet.

Having been a member of the fire department for 30 years, he is familiar in dealing with council, he adds. As well, he has been

Village awaits arrival of new pumper

Greg Hewitt
Record Staff

CHESTERVILLE — Chesterville's Volunteer Fire Department could have a new toy to show off in this year's Christmas Parade.

Council last week approved the purchase of a new 1,000-gallon pumper truck for the department, and it is scheduled to arrive in the village by December 15, and possibly in time for the parade Dec. 10.

The $213,786 truck is being ordered from Superior Emergency Vehicles of Red Deer, Alta., where it is now being manufactured according to the village's specifications.

The 30-foot-long vehicle will have a Freightliner engine and chasis, and will be red with a white top.

The cost of the Superior truck was the highest of four tenders received, but Fire Chief Ross Casselman told council the company's manufacturing method and truck bodies are more modern than those of other companies, and said he had concerns about other companies which had submitted tenders.

Casselman later said in an interview that he was impressed when he viewed the same truck at other fire departments, and noted that Superior, with its Montreal-area outlet, would be close if service is needed.

The village's new pumper, the same as this model, should arrive Dec. 15.

Also, Superior was the only company that was able to build a six-person cab, also contained in the village's specifications.

"We liked their workmanship, their service is not far away and the all-around truck looked good," Casselman said.

The village financed the pumper by tucking away $50,000 in reserves for the last four years. Under provincial law, a fire department's main vehicle must be replaced every 15 to 20 years.

The cost includes lettering and GST. It also includes a more powerful electrical alternator, specified by the village in its tenders

Hazardous waste event deemed a success

Melissa Batchilder
Record staff

MAPLE RIDGE — Household Hazardous Waste Day is being deemed a huge success in Dundas County Saturday.

Organizer Wyman Barton said he was pleased with the "excellent response" shown by county residents at the event, held to collect items such as batteries, used oil and chemicals.

Winchester Township Garage was the local drop-off site for Saturday's event between 10:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m.

With more than 200 vehicles hauling waste to the local site, Barton said, there has obviously been an increase in the awareness of hazardous waste since the event was first attempted two years ago.

Morrisburg and Matilda Township, the other drop- off sites, each had 100 vehicles haul waste to those sites.

"There were 300 batteries brought in across the county along with 116 large propane tanks and 86 small ones," said Barton.

As well, more than 3,000 litres of paint were left for the county to transfer on to Kingston and Area Recycling Ltd., the company which oversaw the project.

Once the materials, which also included disinfectants, solvents, pool chemicals, weed killers, fertilizers, used motor oils and expired prescriptions, were sorted, the recycling company is expected to dispose or recycle the materials.

Smoke detectors focus of Fire Safety Week

Greg Hewitt
Record Staff

CHESTERVILLE — Fire safety is important year-round.

But with the slogan "Test Your Detector For Life," local fire departments are gearing up for a one-week awareness campaign for Fire Prevention Week, Oct. 9 to 15.

Fire departments are urging residents to take a few minutes to ensure their smoke detector, a proven life saver, is in working order.

Chesterville Fire Chief Ross Casselman says people should think about fire safety year-round, but says the special week is a way of raising awareness.

To mark Fire Safety Week, the Chesterville Volunteer Fire Department is going to hang banners at each end of the village.

The department is offering voluntary inspections of homes and businesses.

Casselman recommends that people test their smoke detector and ensure it's in working order, and look for fire hazards in the home such as bad wiring and extension cords under rugs.

Also, Casselman says, gasoline and propane should not be stored in basements, as well as oily rags and piles of newspaper.

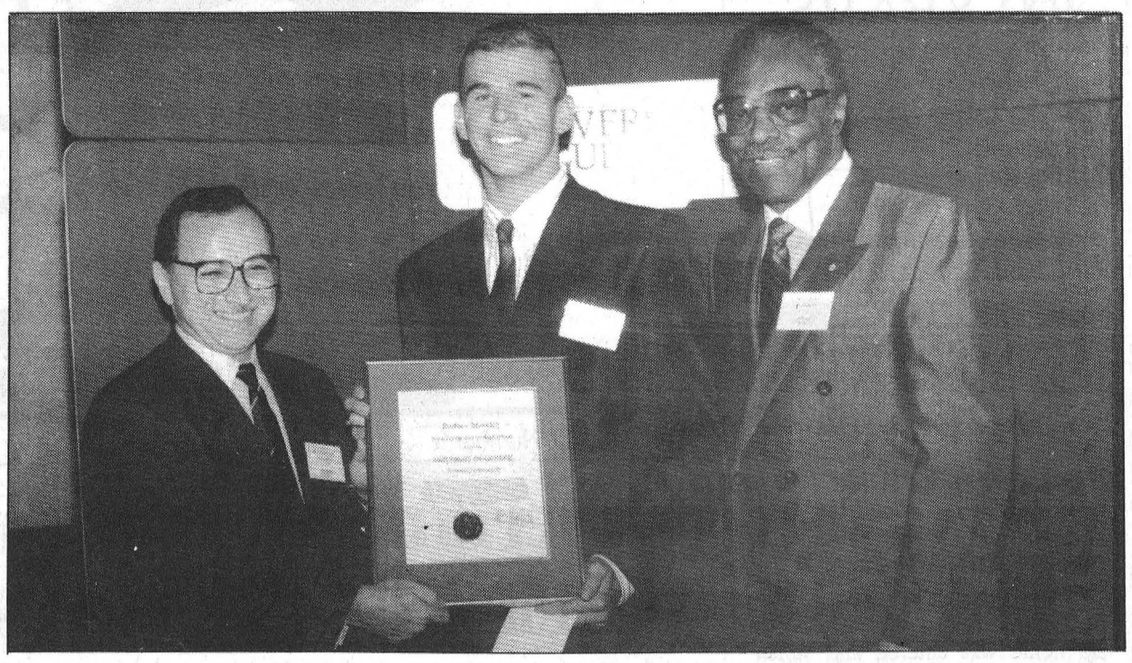
As part of Fire Prevention Week, test evacuations will be held at local schools. And fire safety awareness is something that has become part of the curriculum.

The Learn Not To Burn program, sponsored by Canadian Tire's Child Protection Foundation, is taught in one or two sessions a year at Chesterville Public School, says principal Bob Gilroy. Through videos and other learning materials, the program teaches kids how to protect themselves from fire.

According to statistics, Canadian fire departments in 1991 responded to 68,150 fires in which 380 people were killed and 2,103 were injured. The fires caused $1.24-billion in property damage.

The greatest single cause of fires was smoking materials, responsible for about a quarter of all incidents.

The fire fatality rate in Canada in 1991 was 13.6 deaths per million people, about 25 per cent less than the rate in the U.S.



Glad grad: Chesterville's Rodney Merkley recently was presented with Guelph University's prestigious President's Scholarship, one of only 13 new students at Guelph chosen for the honor. With Merkley are Guelph president Mordechai Rozanski, left, and Chancellor Lincoln Alexander. Merkley was awarded the $16,000 scholarship as a result of his academic performance at North Dundas District High School, as well as his contributions to the school and community. Merkley is studying biomedical science.

the supervisor for the Village of Crysler for the past nine years.

He says he is very enthusiastic about seeing the completion of the water and sewer system in Crysler along with the possibility of a housing project developed in the village. Currently, applications are being made to the provincial government for funding of the latter.

Both Campbell's and Ouimet's names will be joined on the ballot Nov. 14 by councillor incumbent Parry Carruthers, reeve Floyd Dingwall and deputy-reeve Archie Byers.

The final date to register as a candidate is Oct. 14.

but not originally included in Superior's tender.

The department's current main pumper, a 1973 model, is in good condition, Casselman says, but replacement parts could be difficult to find if needed. The village could be liable if its main truck was not available in case of a fire.

Reeve Jim Cook pointed out that ironically, the new truck will hopefully have to be be used as little as possible.

"If all it does is drive around in a few parades, then we'll be all too happy."

The village's current second truck, a 1953 pumper, is currently undergoing $1,600 in repairs to its pump for a second time and will likely be phased out after the new truck arrives.

Waste

Barton noted there seemed to be a large increase in pharmaceutical products brought to the site along with bottled material. The latter was stored and is to be cleaned and recycled if possible.

The increase in awareness of hazardous waste is in part credited to the blue box program in Winchester Township, said Barton. "We were able to put advertisements about the event in every blue box in the township."

Whether or not the event will be held next year will depend on its cost, added Barton. "We are now waiting to see the cost and will decide in accordance with that."

Grants

Surveying for the project has already been done, and construction is expected to begin this week and last about a month.

Clerk Mike Waddell said the township used its entire allotment of grants on the project, and is paying more than a third of the cost. But he said it's still an excellent deal for the municipality.

"It's a project that we would not have been able to go ahead with. (The grants) allowed us to move the project ahead quite a bit."

It is anticipated that because of the project, lots and consequently homes built in the serviced area will be more affordable.

WLLIAMSBURG - New attractions and a fall day as crisp as a Macintosh apple brought out record crowds to the third annual Williamsburg Harvest Festival Saturday.

Visitors had a wealth of events to choose from throughout the village as residents of town and township displayed the fruits of the field and garden but the largest crowd was at the ballpark where many of the new events, including an antique and classic car show, goat milking competition, "Bessie Bingo" and craft show were staged.

Winners of the various competitions were as follows:

Best garden basket, Andy Saddlemire. Best flower arrangement, Paul Saddlemire. Biggest pumpkin, at 343 lbs., Ben Schaillee, honorable mention to junior exhibitor Kassie Whitteker, whose entry weighed more than she does. Largest sunflower, Edna Dusa. Largest zucchini, Sandy Hough. Best cob of corn, Lisa Lewis.

Heaviest vegetables - corn: Mr. Wallbridge, .96 lbs.; potato, Jessica MacDonald, 2.37 lbs.; cucumber, John Shay, 1.89 lbs.; carrot, Josh Tambush, 2.01 lbs.

Greg Bech of Oxford Mills was the winner of all three chainsaw categories in the woodsmen competitions and he and Hubert Beach took first in the crosscut saw event. Don Clark, also of Oxford Mills, won the Swede saw competition.

Jordan McNalty received the award for the best costume in the boys under five category while Elizabeth and Laura Casselman tied in the girls category. Grant McMillan was first in the boys 6-9 age group and Nicole Disheau took the girls' award.

Bennie Haner was judged to be wearing the best old-fashioned costume and Andy Buter took the prize for best hillbilly costume.

Audrey Casselman took the award for best decorated house. In second was Jean Whitteker; Sheila Crowder took third and fourth was a tie between Wilma and Paul Oosterhof and Gerry Merkley.

Whitteker Meat Market's entry was judged best commercial float in the parade and the entry of the Williamsburg Scouts, Guides, Brownies and Cubs was judged best non-commercial. Paul Whitteker's tractor was judged best in the parade and Bill Irvine's entry was judged best car.

The People's Choice award in the car show went to Jenny Miller's 1956 Ford Thunderbird. John McDermid's 1911 Ford Model T was the oldest vehicle; best original vehicle was a 1978 Volkswagen Beetle convertible owned by George Vakopoulos of Ottawa, and the best high performance vehicle was a 1939 Plymouth-Fargo truck shown by Dwayne Froats of St. Thomas.

Harvest Festival president David Lapier was a surprise winner in the goat milking competition, edging township reeve Johnny Whitteker. Josh DeJong, in the under 12 category, placed third overall.

EDITORIAL & OPINION

Proven life savers

There are two stories in this week's Record about safety. In both cases, awareness is being raised through an annual campaign, a yearly event that has become routine.

But when the Ontario Provincial Police and local fire departments promote seat belt use and fire safety respectively, we should pay attention. They are reminding us that there are simple ways to reduce the risk of danger.

Because all of us live in houses or apartments and drive or are passengers in cars, Fire Prevention Week and the seat belt blitz apply to all of us.

There are striking similarities between the two practises. They're both relatively simple, a matter of habit. They're both proven life savers. They're both the law.

And every year, sadly, lives are lost because people weren't wearing their seat belts, or because their smoke detector wasn't working. Or the battery was taken out and never replaced.

In most municipalities, each residence must have a working smoke detector on each floor, and across the province, seat belt use is mandatory.

Simply, both wearing your seat belt and ensuring your home is fire safe, throughout the year, are common-sense ideas that are proven to save lives.

In many accident fatalities, the victims are thrown from the vehicle, often through the front windshield.

And while no home is completely immune to the possibility of fire, a yearly inspection, either by the homeowner or the fire department, can greatly reduce the chance of fire.

And if fire does break out, a working smoke detector can make the difference between life and death.

If you set aside even a half-hour over the next week, or any time of the year to inspect your home for fire hazards, or to think about the possible consequences of not buckling up, then we're all better off.

Raising awareness about the benefits of seat belt use and the benefits of a fire-safe home are jobs that our police and fire departments do regularly.

But if you ask them, they'll say they prefer that job than the tragedy of attending a fatal road accident or house fire.

Quizzical in Qu'Appelle

Dear Quizzical:
How sweet of you. Will you be showering individually or communally? Does Lyall know? Will he be there? Are you having the Brown Pops before or after? I'd suggest Irish Spring. (Manly, yes. But I like it too.)

Dear Stan:
Is it ribby or ribbie?
Bewildered in Bewdley

Dear Bewildered:
It's RBI. And the plural is RBI.

Dear Stan:
So how do I get on the Simpson jury?
Baffled on Baffin

Dear Baffled:
Answer the following:
"Knock, knock."
"Who's there?"
"O.J."
"O.J. who?"

Just answer me this:how many men should it take to clean a toilet?
Stymied in Stittsville

Dear Stymied:
Your guess is as good as mine. It's never been done.

Dear Stan:
What's the WD stand for in WD40?
Boggled in Bobcaygeon

Dear Boggled:
Wife'll Do it.

Dear Stan:
What do women want?
Befuddled in Bella Coola

Dear Befuddled:
If I had the answer to that, my old son, I could get people to shave their heads and sell my books in airports.

Dear Stan:
How come I gotta wear a tie?
In knots in Nottawasaga

Dear Knots:
Because they don't make leashes wide enough to put cartoon characters on them.

Dear Stan:
So what does Quebec want, anyway?
Puzzled in Pugwash

Dear Puzzled:
See Bella Coola, above.

Dear Stan:
You're an outdoors kind of guy, right? So, anyway, I was having an argument with Bill Saiff III in a bar in Heuvelton the other night about the three most vicious creatures you're likely to encounter in the wild hereabouts and what kind of ammo you'd recommend. He said they're the wolverine, the polecat and the coyote. I said they're the wildcat, the lynx and the bull moose. Whatta you think? Would a steel-jacketed three ought three with a hollow point be enough to bring them down?
Flummoxed in Flackville

Dear Flummoxed:
Are you talking vicious or dangerous? The most dangerous I've ever faced was a rogue rhino on the Serengetti. But for pure viciousness, nothing beats the hockey mother (genus Bonnieus Lindrossus) during team tryouts. As for ordnance, the best defence for both is a swift pair of feet.

Dear Stan:
I'm a Deputy Minister with the federal government (can't say which department or Lloyd Axworthy'd have my scalp...oops) and we were having an inter-departmental meeting the other day at the Rideau Club. Anyway, we're going on endlessly about the impact of the new social welfare system Lloyd is trotting around the Maritimes when the subject turns, as it always does, to lunch. That's when things got interesting. As usual we got into the federal-provincial thing, whether it'd be tortiere or steak tartare; then the interdepartmental thing, whether it'd be flounder or filet; then the multicultural thing, whether it'd be Swiss cake or Schwarzwalder kirschtorte. Veterans Affairs even kicked in, insisting that the first course be halibut with cider Dieppoise. By this time, it was 1:30 and time to knock off for the day.

All I want to know is, how can guy get a decent lunch around this place anyway now that the Parliamentary Restaurant is full of Reformers drinking out of their finger bowls?
Confounded by Confederation

Dear Confounded:
Just sit down with the Tories and eat crow. You can bring a buddy and sit down with their caucus at a table for four.

THE FARMER'S WIFE'S

By Wyn Thompson

Spenser said, "Then came October, full of merry glee." Even if I didn't have a calendar square in front of me, I would know that it is October, for there is a magic about this month that is defined by the brilliant leaves, the crisp mornings, the golden afternoons, and the chill in the air at eventide.

October is full of the sights and sounds of harvestime, and it exudes a delicate potpourri of spice mingled with the fragrance of crisp apples, and the faint odor of woodsmoke in the refreshing air.

A walk along a country lane in October usually requires a sweater, and the combination of brisk air and warm sun is wonderful.

It stirs the poet within us, whets the appetite, and is entirely invigorating. At night the hunter's moon will hang over the bush, turning the lawn slightly golden.

This month holds within its hands two wonderful festivals, Thanksgiving and All Hallows Eve. We like to think of Thanksgiving as one of the oldest of our national festivals.

However, the Book of Judges states that the Canaanites "went out into the field and gathered their vineyards and trod grapes and held festivals and went to the house of their God and did eat and drink."

The Romans held a harvest festival for Ceres, their goddess of grain. They, too, feasted and drank and danced. The English celebrated Harvest Home, when the last load of grain was hauled from the field, with singing and merrymaking and, naturally, a big supper.

Certain Indian tribes had their Thanksgiving — four-day fete featuring the green corn dance with purification rites, during which the whole village was cleansed and renewed. Old clothes and supplies were discarded, new fires lighted, and the year began anew while they feasted on new corn.

And, I feast on turkey. I never tire of turkey. "Rugose and carunculated," Audubon called its head and neck: all wrinkled and swarthy, full of warts and bumps, and wattles that flop.

Homely as it is, the meat it produces today bears no resemblance to that of yesteryear. Although turkey breasts were prized by Canadian colonists, geneticists have greatly enlarged the turkey's breast. They have also made the meat delicate and tender, praise be.

I have often thought it would be neat to return to eighteenth century England at this time of year, to see the flocks of turkeys being walked a hundred miles or so to market so they could be slaughtered fresh for the occasion.

Can't you just see the thousands of birds crowding down the narrow roads to London. Mind you, I would only want to return for a day!

Be that as it may, Thanksgiving continues as one of the best of our national holidays. It is a long holiday for school children. College students, barely settled into a school schedule, come home. Families get together and a great deal of cooking goes on.

Even in times of recession, families feel compelled to lay the best board they can for Thanksgiving. There are church services in all the churches, where even the most rather say-nothing reserved lot give thanks openly, for all the good things that have come their way since the last celebration.

Thanks too, are said for those who have died and for the lives they have lived. It is done with cheerfulness which I feel is good for isn't it better to feel gratitude for a loved one who lived rather than grief for his death.

Indian summer hangs on until the end of the month and we hope it will hang on into November, golden day following golden day. Into this lovely respite comes the celebration of all Hallows Eve, which we call Halloween.

The Irish say that on this day the Devil spits on the blackberries, thus accounting for the mildewed fruit of fall. The celebrations originated from the pagan's feast to the waning sun. Like many pagan feasts, this was long ago incorporated into the Christian year, and became the eve of All Saints' Day.

There is little, if any, significance to the feast now. It has become a fun time for children, all mixed up with witches, black cats, ghosts and so on; really a return to the pagan superstitions.

It is good fun and long may it continue to be enjoyed. Oh, I know, there is the rank and foolish mischief committed by the irresponsible which isn't fun.

All too soon the last goblin vanishes, the last ghost flits away, the last owl hoots, and Halloween is in the past with another October.

But, before this time comes, there is much pickling and potting and stewing. I note that we always appreciate more the few leftovers in the garden than we do the riotous plenty of summer. It seems exciting to get a whole meal from the vegetable patch after we think we should be done with it.

Then there comes a day when neighbor Amanda exclaims, "I am not going to bring in a single thing more. Fun is fun, but we won't live long enough to use up all this stuff." The garden gets cleaned up, the bulbs planted, the wood in.

Sunny mornings cool and still, when the last leaves drift downward through the sparkling air, beckon us. No wind stirs, no frost, no rain. They are days to step up to, and enjoy.

Melissa Batchilder
Record staff

Those who know Bernie Gadbois describe him as being "a real people person," or "a real good guy...the kind that just aren't made anymore."

Obviously, they know the retired Long Sault OPP officer well as their descriptions couldn't be more accurate.

His casual approach is obvious as he strides into the Marina Restaurant in Long Sault, a spot where he has spent many mornings enjoying breakfast.

Before he sits down, the owner of the restaurant bolts from the kitchen towards him and the two men start speaking in French, as they periodically erupt in laughter.

"I went to school with that guy way back in Grade six or so. He bought this place awhile ago and has really made it work," says Bernie, who looks a youthful 51, as he takes a seat at a table in the corner. A window nearby allows him to glance out at the St. Lawrence River from time to time.

Dressed in jeans and a denim shirt, he still wears his hair cropped just as he did during his 31 years as a member of the Ontario Provincial Police.

Immediately, he begins to speak as if he can't wait to get to the real good stories.

"I was the community services officer at the Long Sault station for the last 10 years of my career." The move into public relations came, he explains, after he was given a special review for handing out too many warnings and not enough tickets.

"I felt really bad about that but then came along the community services officer position and I really liked that."

Nevertheless, there are always drawbacks to most things in life, he adds, as he is about to recount a story that happened not long after he took up the post.

Bernie, who was then Constable Gadbois, was contacted by a local man who said he had found unusual cigarettes in his son's room. Although he didn't want Bernie to investigate the situation, the man did want Bernie to speak to the boy.

"I picked the kid up and we went for a drive and talked about it. He said he didn't use drugs and that they belonged to his friends." The friendly neighborhood policeman gave the kid the benefit of the doubt and let him go. Three years later the boy was arrested for trafficking narcotics. So much for being a nice guy.

Bernie Gadbois hasn't looked back since retiring from the OPP in January.

"But, I never regretted working with kids. I enjoyed working with youth. Those kids are smart. You have to level with them and then listen to them."

In his role as community services officer, he would often find himself in the midst of a room full of teenagers either teaching them what he knew and sometimes what he didn't. "I never liked teaching about drugs because I really didn't know that much about them myself, but I did the best I could."

Of course he also taught things like driver education. "I remember one time having to stop one of the students I had taught. He told me he had already received on ticket and literally cried that if he got another one he would lose his license."

However, this time Bernie wasn't being the nice guy; he was being fair. "I thought since he already had one ticket and didn't learn the lesson that maybe he would if I gave him another."

Being a police officer was never a dream of Bernie's. As a matter of fact, it hadn't entered his mind until his grandmother suggested a job as a dispatcher to him.

Growing up in Cornwall, and with both of his parents working, Bernie spent a lot of time with his French-speaking grandmother.

"I had graduated from St. Lawrence High School in June, 1962, and that summer my grandmother was listening to the radio one day when she heard the Long Sault OPP were looking for four civilian dispatchers."

Because there were only four officers at that time, having four civilian dispatchers, would free up the officers.

At 18, Bernie went to work for the detachment where he remained as a dispatcher for three and a half years.

"I got married to Lucille during those years and was beginning to see I needed more money. Then when Lucille was pregnant with our first child, I really knew we needed more money."

Around the same time all four original dispatchers became members of the force.

"I wanted to stay in Cornwall and was afraid of transferring for family reasons. I knew I wouldn't get the city, but I was assured I would get Long Sault." He remained at the detachment for the next three decades. "I think they forgot about me."

Perhaps, it's Bernie's warm sense of humor that has endeared him to so many or maybe its just his general outlook on life. He believes people must remain human at all times and this philosophy must naturally carry into all aspects of work, recreation and family.

Anyone who has ever had Bernie respond to a crisis situation knows he is not immune to showing his emotion. "Being human is the best way."

Pushing back from the table a bit and leaning forward, Bernie recounts one particular situation where he had to sit with the parents of a woman and her daughter who had just been murdered. "I wish I could have done more. I couldn't say I understood because I didn't. I just cried."

On a more positive note, Bernie grins, the community services aspect of his position always gave him great pleasure. "People would often call wanting to know where to find a plumber or something else."

However, it was coming up with an answer for a young person that was truly satisfying. "Sharing an experience with a group of young people or anyone for that matter always made me feel content. Knowing that someone enjoyed my discussion and learned something was important to me. It was very satisfying."

Running into a couple of young women recently at a cheese factory, made Bernie realize perhaps just how difficult he is to remember.

"I spoke to them and said I thought they were from one school I had spoken at, but didn't remember their names. They told me I had the wrong school and added they could never forget me. My wife thought that was pretty funny."

Some schools provided more heated conversations than others and some classes were more lively. "Grades six and seven students always want to talk about everything."

Over the years, Bernie, along with thousands of other police officers have been forced to accommodate the times. "Police have received thousands of different mandates of the years and most are probably good."

However, it makes retirement for many senior officers perfectly understandable. "There are always changes and sometimes it's easier for the younger officers to cope with them."

Going back to school can often be difficult for a senior officer. "It gets to you."

Bernie says he realized his time had come, "I retired in January and haven't looked back." With a grin, he admits, he is enjoying the finer things in life like fishing and golf.

As he stands to bid farewell to the restaurant owner, his sense of humor surfaces again as both men laugh and shake hands. Bernie promises to come back.

Melissa! — by Melissa Batchilder

Oprah is really my hero ya know. Honestly, she's one of this world's truly good people...and truly good chatterers. The latter being extremely important to me.

I love people who can talk. Now I don't mean people who always have something to say, but those who can just chatter endlessly about nothing for no reason. People like meself. I wonder if that's another sign of my vanity!

Back to Oprah. I was reading one of those fine pieces of literature, the National Enquirer, the other day and was so impressed with some of Oprah's comments on life. Now you can clip these out and put them on your fridge with one of those big fridge magnets depicting some form of fruit.

This is what she said..."When you learn, teach. When you get, give. That's how you change the world."

And just guess where I was reading the National Enquirer. Well, it was in between biting my way into obesity at the Heritage Cafe where they make the absolute best nachos I have ever eaten in my entire 26 years of existence on this planet.

At one point I actually had to set down my reading material and just savor the yumminess of the food before me. Heavenly, I thought. I am in heaven.

There I sat with a gossip tab, a full pack of smokes a diet Pepsi and the biggest and bestest plate of nachos I have ever been challenged to consume. What more could one want in life? The money to pay for it would have been nice. No, no. I'm just kidding. The boss came good this week and paid me. I guess that means I'm here for at least two more weeks!

******

I've discovered another place to be in love with. Of course, I still adore Finch, but now there's Williamsburg too.

First, let me tell you about my introduction to that 'burg before I tell you about what prompted my passion for it.

As I was driving to a meeting there one evening last week, after I had gorged myself on natchos, I realized I had not a clue where I was going.

Now this isn't an unusual occurence in my life as you can well imagine. So, I did what I normally do when this happens...I stop beside the first person I see whether it's man, woman or child.

Since it was dusk, things were a bit out of focus as I was stopping. That's my excuse anyway and I'm sticking to it. I pulled my car off the road a bit and was sort of still looking around as I started to speak to the guy on the road.

I was asking him where I was and if he could show me the direction I was to go. I suppose in retrospect he could have, had he been human. There I was in the middle not knowing where I am chattering endlessly and this guy was being really rude. He wouldn't even answer me. Imagine, he was completely ignoring me!

Believe me, I was a bit miffed and was about to inform him as to just how rude he was when I rolled down my window a bit further and discovered I was having a one-sided conversation with a scare-crow cornman placed in front of someone's house!

It's a good thing I haven't really felt humiliation since I was five otherwise I would have been mortified. Instead, I just thanked him for his valuable time and bade him farewell.

It's about to happen here in Chester-city, the phenomenon that is taking over the world. Chester- city has gone loonie. Now that's loonie, not looney.

The minute the door to that place opens I'm goin' to break all speed records to get there. I just love a good dollar store. For weeks, I have been monitoring its progress justa waitin' for the day I can get in there and wrestle other shoppers to the ground for the best buys. That would be a sight now wouldn't it.

We don't need midget wrestling here in the metropolis when we can have folks like me tearing each other's hair out for the last pot holder on the rack!

I just love this fall season, taking walks, getting fresh air and good exercise, other people's mail! No I'm just kidding about all of those things.

The fall means preparation for the annual family visit. Joy! Come November, momma, poppa and sibling along with Smellie, my dear friend will arrive on the doorstep looking for food. Oops! That's not the way they visit, that's the way I visit. I always get those two confused. Silly me.

Yes, my dear poppa will load everyone into the car for the venture west from d'oisland. Enroute he'll point out all the important things in life like, "hey, look at that pile of wood. I bet that pile of wood could heat us for d'winter." Better yet, he won't let anyone stop to go to the bathroom until they hold up a sign to the window indicating to passersby that their kidneys are being held hostage by a psycho-travellin' man.

Indeed, my momma will chew my father out the entire way for never taking a scenic route and Haley-the-wonder-child will whine about the length of time it takes to get to a destination. Oh, the joys of family travels!

Of course, we are yet to know what Smellie, the good friend's, role in the journey will be cause she has never travelled with them before. I would assume she will be the one standing on the side of the highway as soon as they all get off the boat to the mainland with a sign reading, "take me anywhere as long as it's away from the psycho- travellin' man."

Ah, dear poppa, he whines about all the abuse he takes from me. If only I had the space to tell ya a story or two. In time there will be.

******

And did I have a dandy time or what in Williamsburg Saturday. Well, it was just marvellous. Harvestfest couldn't have been better. I mean there was everything...garage sales, garage sales and more garage sales.

Of course, there were also traditional harvest-like things like pumpkin contests, craft shows and lotsa food. The latter being very important of course.

I just want to congratulate the fine folks of Williamsburg for hosting a great day.

When I got back from lovely Williamsburg, I was resting my weary bones. (It's tough you know when you have to use your wrists so much to turn the steering wheel while driving all over the 'burg to watch events.) Anyways, I'm sitting there reading the paper and of course, flip to the classified to see if anyone is looking to buy something I might have and could sell them for cash so I can feed my turtles.

Well, before I got to that, I glance at the personal advertisements and start to wonder. (No mom, I didn't call and find a husband!) How exactly is one supposed to describe oneself in these ads.

According to descriptions, there are a lot of beautiful, attractive, humourous, financially independent, non-smoking, non-drinking, tall, slim people out there. I just don't get it. I don't see that many "beauteeeeful" people in the run of a year.

Many of them must be lying, I believe. Really, how would one accurately describe oneself fairly, I wondered. Would you respond to an ad that says, "Short. Naturally big hair. Can consume a box of Kraft dinner all by myself. Eats chick peas out of can cause never has clean dishes. Favorite TV shows are Partridge Family and Lawrence Welk. Hates long walks or any kind of walks for that matter. No money ever. Cuddling makes me want to vomit. Please respond with bank account number."

Anyone fall in love with me yet? See ya next week!

Greg Hewitt

CORNWALL — Ingleside's Diane Leighton wants to see a higher quality of education and less spending on administration in local public schools.

Leighton has announced her candidacy for the Osnabruck Township trustee seat on the SD&G Public School Board in November's municipal election.

A newcomer to the spectrum of school board politics, Leighton cites her experience in teaching as an asset to the position.

Leighton is a business college graduate who has worked as a part-time teacher, volunteer English as a Second Language teacher and tutor with Tri-County Literacy Council. She makes custom-made clothing and dolls, and plans to soon open a small business.

Diane Leighton

Leighton says she is concerned about the quality of education locally, especially the level of literacy among residents. She points to statistics that show more than 25 per cent of the population is deemed functionally illiterate.

Too much of the money collected from taxpayers for school purposes, she says, is spent on administration.

"There's definitely something wrong with the system," she says. "I'd like to see and work toward getting more funds into the classroom."

Leighton also supports the concept of greater sharing between the school boards, and participated in a local group advocating the principle. She believes the concept of a unified school board should be studied.

"There should be more co-operation between the school boards in busing and in buying supplies. I'm sure there's lots of money to be saved by having one purchasing agent between them."

Former chairman seeks return as SD&G public board trustee

Greg Hewitt

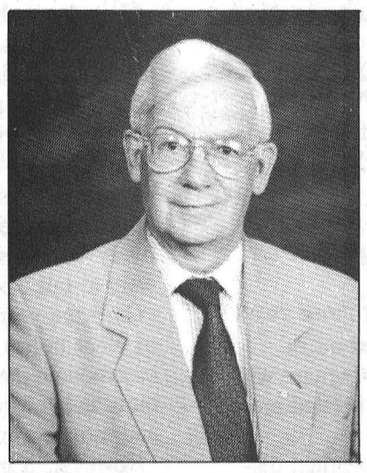
Morewood's Sarsfield O'Connor is no stranger to the SD&G Public School Board.

And the former chairman is hoping to return to the board with a "strong, constructive voice" for Dundas County.

O'Connor has announced his intention to seek the Winchester Township - Winchester Village trustee seat in November's municipal election.

O'Connor says he feels there is a need for stronger representation of Dundas County on the board, which he says "for too long has been unduly influenced by a well-organized Cornwall trustee lobby."

He also believes the $90-million budget deserves closer scrutiny, and that taxpayers and parents should be more regularly informed, especially through school committees.



Sarsfield O'Connor

A former trustee who was chairman of the board in 1983-1984, O'Connor also cites the experience of holding a number of positions in the community. He is a past president of the Chesterville Fair Board, has represented Dundas County on the District Health Council, chaired SD&G's committee that oversaw the planning and creation of seven new seniors' support centres and represented Dundas on the Waste Management Liaison Committee.

O'Connor also notes that having recently retired as regional marketing manager for the Ontario Milk Marketing Board, he can offer "full-time, dedicated availability" to taxpayers, "with no perceived conflicts."

Time to buckle up:
OPP prepare for annual seat belt blitz

Melissa Batchilder

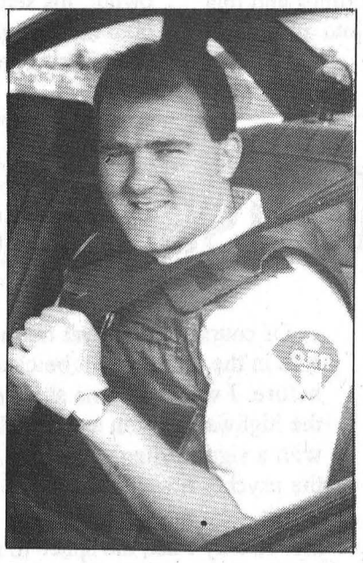
LONG SAULT — The old adage, seat belts save lives, may seem stale but nothing could be closer to the truth.

With Saturday's launch of Operation Impact, an annual event focusing on encouraging seat belt compliance, Long Sault OPP Constable J.D. Doiron says now more than ever, drivers and passengers should be certain to buckle up.

During the next two weeks, police forces across the province will be participating in a seat belt campaign organized in conjunction with various government ministries.

Since Jan. 1, it costs an Ontario driver, caught not using a seat belt, two demerit points and a $90 fine, says Doiron. Furthermore, if a passenger under the age of 16 is not strapped in, the driver is penalized.



Const. Joel Doiron buckles up

Transport Canada estimates seat belts and child safety seats have saved up to 14,000 lives and prevented 295,000 injuries across Canada since 1980.

"That's like having five years of driving in Canada with no one dying in a motor vehicle crash."

If everyone in Ontario had been securely buckled up last year, more than 150 of the people killed in motor vehicle collisions would still be alive today, he adds.

Locally, the Long Sault Detachment joined forces with the Cornwall Police Service Saturday to kick off the campaign.

Check stops were set up throughout the area.

The seat belt campaign will continue until Oct. 14 and "we will be targeting non-seat belt users."

It's a fact, says Doiron, seat belts save lives. "This year there is an even greater incentive to buckle up. Remember; it only takes a second; it's the law and it could cost you or a loved one dearly."

Export market opens up for auto dealership

Greg Hewitt

CHESTERVILLE — Six jeeps from a Chesterville car dealer are headed for adventure, thanks to a favorable Canadian dollar and a lucky connection.

The vehicles — three used Suzuki Samurai jeeps from Chesterville and three new Lada Cossacks being shipped from Halifax, were bought from Chesterville's Car-O-Line Autos by United Forest Products in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania.

The Suzukis were painted yellow and green, and towed Friday to Montreal, where along with the Ladas, they were loaded on board a ship bound for Africa.

Car-O-Line Autos owner Colin Abbott said the lumber company had contacted Lada Canada directly, which in turn contacted Car-O-Line, which has been a Lada dealership for 15 months.

"It just happened we were the people that Lada Canada recommended," Abbott said, adding that other countries are beginning to look at Canadian suppliers because of the relatively low Canadian dollar.

He said U.S. dealers are buying Ladas in Canada and shipping them abroad.

"The export market is starting to open up. We hope we can get into the export market a little bit more."

Along with the six vehicles, Car-O-Line is also supplying extra parts, such as spark plugs, belts and filters. But more important than any money made on the deal, Abbott says, is getting a foot in the export market as a means of securing future business.

Abbott said once before, a government official purchased a car from his lot that was sent to Beijing, China.

SPARTA looks for public input

Liz Edwards
Special to the Record

WINCHESTER — Organizers of a project aimed at bettering the community socially, culturally and economically will be asking residents what to do.

SPARTA, which was formed last February, hopes to produce a strategic plan for the United Counties and the City of Cornwall. Part of the goal is to organize existing services and human resources, many of which have been sponsored by the government in recent years to boost the economy and community development, so they are accessible. A similar project was conducted in Port Colbourne.

Some of the services and resources may be duplicated or not well known. As a result of SPARTA, organizations could end up streamlining functions or sharing resources. As well, SPARTA wants to organize groups around certain common goals and it will hold forums to determine what communities want these goals to be.

The project is funded by federal and provincial governments who have given a total of $200,000 to SD&G Community Futures Committee, the group that spearheaded the organization of SPARTA. Municipal governments participate in such ways as providing facilities for meetings.

At one forum held in August, people talked a great deal about providing youth recreational facilities to offset crime, says Sylvain Girard, project assistant. They also came up with a list of more than 30 positive aspects about their communities.

Sessions will be held Oct. 15 in Morrisburg at the Operating Engineers Institute, Oct. 29 in Winchester at North Dundas Dis-

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Learning Centre thanks sponsors

To the Editor:

Through the medium of your newspaper we would like to publicly thank everyone who helped the members of the Dundas Community Learning Centre in our fund raising endeavors last weekend –as we drew attention to International Literacy Day.

Our special thanks this time goes to Mike Dean's Grocery, Chesterville, Andy's Food Town, Winchester, Albert Gale Real Estate, Winchester, our DCLC Volunteers and the Winchester Press for its coverage.

Many people enjoyed the hamburgers, hot dogs, etc. served by the group and showed their interest and support with monetary donations as well. Those who truly enjoy reading and realize its importance continue to lend their support for which we are most grateful.

Exhibition games get hockey season underway

Express looking forward to best season yet

Sandra Dillich
Record Staff

FINCH - The North Stormont Express ended its exhibition play last week with a 1-2 record.

"Exhibition games are really a trial and error thing. One gets to look at who can play," explained head coach Peter DeRooy.

"There are no points for winning exhibition games," he said.

DeRooy has spent the past couple of weeks trimming his roster down to 21 from its original 40.

"We might sign 21, but it will probably be more like 18 or 19 (players)," said DeRooy.

The first night of try-outs looked bleak for DeRooy but since then his players have improved enough to make him more optimistic about the upcoming 94-95 Jr. 'C' hockey season.

"I was a little disappointed the first night (of try-outs) but it got better," he said.

Returning to the team are: Chris Leroux, Lance Ouderkirk, Julian Benoit and Mike Marleau. New to the squad are: Nick LeBrun, Randy McLeod and Pat Cadieux.

"Pat is going to be a great asset to us. He is just what our team needs," said DeRooy.

DeRooy is hoping the combination of these veterans and new players will make for an exciting season.

"We should be better than last year which was one heck of an improvement from the past five years. We won the most amount of games then (in 93-94) than in the previous three years together."

"We're setting a goal to finish in the top three," he said.

Although DeRooy was hoping to use these exhibition games as a test of his potential players' abilities, he was unable to see everybody in their best form.

Many players who made it through camp became injured or sick right before Finch's first match-up against a suprisingly tough Russell team.

"We only had 15 players...We had defencemen playing forward," explained DeRooy.

Lacking the players in numbers did not count the Express out of the game.

The Express were down 3-0 before they started to take advantage of the scoring opportunities Russell gave them. James Cooper, Chris Leroux, Nick LeBrun and Mike Marleau all dumped the puck in the net, to tie the game 5-5 in the final minutes of the third period. Tom Cooper came in and gave the Express the winning goal.

"I was glad to see the way we came back. We're definitely better than last year," said DeRooy.

Right: Chris Lefebvre and a Russell Lion battle it out in front of the Russell net Friday night.

With Finch playing with fewer men, injuries were bound to happen. Those injuries proved costly against Casselman Thursday night. Finch lost 6-4.

"We were missing our starters...Chris Leroux, James Cooper, Pat Cadieux and Julian Benoit," explained DeRooy.

Leroux missed Thursday's game due to a torn knee ligament he suffered Wednesday night. Cadieux missed Thursday's game because of a groin injury.

"If we would have had them (the starters) we would have walked all over them," he said.

Finch's goaltending was also not at its best in the Casselman game.

"We let in three really bad goals," said DeRooy.

DeRooy was disappointed by the loss but notes the game gave him the opportunity to view other players in tight spots.

In the third of three exhibition games, the Express faced off against the Russell Lions once again.

"Its (Russell) definitely a better team than last year," said DeRooy, who saw his team drop their second game in as many nights. This time the Express was unable to make a comeback. The score was 8-4.

Russell came on strong in the first period and continued to dominate the game. Russell headed to the locker rooms with a 2-0 lead after the first period.

A good team starts with a good coach

Sandra Dillich
Record Staff

OTTAWA - To an athlete, the single most important person is the team coach.

The coach does more than order plays and rotate players from the bench to ice and back to the bench.

The coach is the players' mentor.

"The coach represents a leader, teacher and organizer. He should be a role model to that young person," explained Ottawa District Hockey Association (ODHA) technical director, Rick Ladouceur.

One important aspect of a coach's role as a leader is attitude. According to the ODHA, the ideal coach should always maintain a positive attitude during practices but most importantly, during the games.

"He should give a lot of positive reinforcement and be a good organizer. As well, she should be able to build player self-esteem and care about his players," explained Ladouceur.

Many minor hockey coaches are well-intentioned volunteers who, at times, can become over zealous to win a game.

"Often where coaches have difficulty, and they are all well-meaning, is in their approaches," said Ladouceur.

A coach's continual negative approach to his team can eventually be harmful to the game and the player.

If a child continuously hears negative comments about his or her playing from the coach, their love for the game can be destroyed.

"Sometimes he'll (the player) look at the coach and ask 'does he ever have anything good to say,' or 'why am I playing this game if I can't do anything right,'" noted Ladouceur.

Being an excellent hockey player is definitely not a criteria.

Most coaches at the pee-wee and recreational levels are parents who have decided to take an active involvement in their child's extra-curricular activities.

"There are so little volunteers to go around and most parents won't get involved until their kids are involved," said Ladouceur.

However, allowing parents to coach their own children can create problems. "They (parents) don't want to coach other kids, they want to coach their own. This can be detrimental because no matter how hard they try, they always look at their own flesh and blood differently."

Lancers beaten by Gaels, left with 0-4 record

R-O's head coach, Tom Santowski, did not leave the game disappointed since his young team accomplished what it set out to do.

"Today we wanted to score two goals and allow less than nine (goals) in," explained Santowski.

The first half of the game looked like Santowski may have had to change his wishes for the game.

By the end of the first half the Gaels had broken through the Lancers young defence enough times to give them a 4-0 lead.

While the Lancers were unable to keep a tight defence in the first half, it was also unable to penetrate the Gaels' more experienced defence.

"They (the Lancers) shouldn't get discouraged about losing to Glengarry. They only play soccer for school, (whereas) Glengarry plays all year," he said.

"In the first half we got beat up...In the second half we played well," said Santowski.

Santowski took the second half of the game to revamp his line-up which amounted to the Lancers scoring two goals on the Gaels.

"I moved down two full-backs which helped out," he explained.

His strategy also created the first goals to be scored against the junior Gaels this season.

Santowski was, however, more concerned about getting his players experience on the field than winning the game.

"This year I just want to give the guys a chance to play," he said.

"We didn't do too bad considering most of these guys are only in grade nine."

Although many of R-O's players are new to high school soccer, there are a few players to give the team leadership and strength.

"We have a couple of seniors. Matt Ware, Jay Crites and Mark Went are my seasoned veterans," said Santowski.

Games keep seniors' competitive edge

Sandra Dillich
Record Staff

LONG SAULT - Ontario's seniors have already started training for the 1996 Ontario Senior Games (OSG).

The board will start the swimmer's training at the Transport Canada Training Institute Oct.4.

"It's (training) to build them up for the games," explained public relations director, for the Ontario Senior Games, Charles Sayeau.

The OSG are held every two years with a local competition held in the alternate years.

"This gets them ready for the Ontario competition," he said.

At both the local and the Ontario games, seniors, aged 55 and over, compete in 16 different events for gold, silver or bronze medals.

"We try to keep seniors active. It gives them something to do," explained Sayyeau.

Coaching

According to Ladouceur, parents are extremists. They are either too soft on their children and do not give constructive criticism when necessary, or parents do just the opposite and become too tough on the child and never give positive reinforcement.

"It's not a win-win situation for the parent or the child," said Ladouceur.

Not every parent/coach-child relationship is like this. It is possible for a parent to coach their child's own team.

"One way around this is for a coach not to work with his or her own child...by having another parent work with your kid...so he deals with a stranger."

No matter what type of approach the coach takes with the team, he or she first has to complete a series of coaching courses.

The ODHA has recently announced new coaching regulations it hope will benefit everybody involved in hockey.

In order to coach pre-novice and below an Initiation Program must be completed.

"It's lesson plans for beginners. Potential coaches learn to work the kids' skills," explained Ladouceur.

To coach at the atom, house league or recreational level he or she must complete ODHA's Coach Level.

"This deals more with the role of the coach. Communication, leadership, goaltending, team playing, puck control and skills are also worked on."

The third level of coaching certification is the Intermediate level. This level is geared more towards the competitive teams.

"It teaches offensive and defensive tactics, how the body works, introduction to physiology and more goaltending," noted Ladouceur.

The Intermediate program also deals with player selection, building a player's self-esteem and skills analysis.

There are also the parents who sit in the stands and become arm-chair coaches.

"It's human nature, when sitting in the stands, to be critical of other people's kids and your own," noted Ladouceur.

But it does not help the child when he or she is trying to play his best for his parents and the coach.

"Rambunctious, but well-meaning, parents are an unfortunate part of the game. It's detrimental to the kid to listen to his parents override the coach."

The ODHA is trying to eleviate this problem by making the game of hockey more fun for the whole family.

The ODHA has recently made a video entitled 'Parents Can Make A Difference', which is available for viewing at its head office in Ottawa.

"It's a video for parents in the stands, in the car, at home, everywhere. It deals with being positive with your children," explained Ladouceur.

Clinics are available for people wishing to be certified as a coach.

Seasoned soccer player Matt Ware was the first to penetrate the Gaels defence on an early second half breakaway from mid-field. Newcomer Matt Jackson scored the second goal for R-O.

To date, the R-O junior Lancers' record is 0-4. They lost 1-0 to North Dundas, 3-0 to Tagwi and 9-1 to Cornwall Collegiate.

Santowski decribes their loss to Cornwall as a 'blow out'.

"Our centre left us half way through the game so we had nobody back for defence. Cornwall scored five goals then."

Finch

Finch never gave up and fought back by scoring twice on the power play bringing the score to 3-2.

Early in the last period Russell was still dominating the game and scored two more goals.

With most of the third period gone, Finch started to get together and found the much needed holes in the Lions' defence.

The Express' third goal of the game came when the goalie was caught on the short side. Finch scored its fourth goal on a two-man advantage.

Unfortunately, the Express' mini comeback was a bit too late in the game and the Lions defeated them 8-4.

The Express' regular season opens this Thursday night as its hosts Embrun. The puck drops at 8 p.m. The Express then travel to Russell on Friday night to face the Lions once again. Game time is 8:15 p.m.

Seniors

"Some of the events include swimming, walking, darts, euchre, cribbage, horse shoes, shuffle board and bridge," he said.

Earlier this year the provincial competition, also known as Actifest, was held in Sudbury.

Approximately 1,700 competitors from 38 districts across Ontario competed for medals in 16 different games.

District 8 came away from the Sudbury games with a total of four medals.

In 1995 a local competition will be held for District 8 and the three united counties of this area.

The 1996 OSG will be held in Richmond Hill.

25 for Byvelds gives ND a win

MAPLE RIDGE—Forward Jill Byvelds had a field day with the Panthers' defence here last Wednesday.

She broke free for 25 points sparking North Dundas's 41-38 victory over St. Joe's. Byvelds hit four points in the opening quarter, four more in the second, eight in the third and finished the game off with nine in the final period. Her play drew special attention from the Panthers who fouled her eight times. Her shooting from the floor was pinpoint but Byvelds drained just three shots from the line.

The Devils led the Panthers 8-5 at the quarter but trailed their visitors 17-14 at the half. Dundas was up 27-21 and held on for a three-point win in spite of being out-gunned 17-14 in the final frame.

The same afternoon the NDDHS Senior Devils lost 68-18 and the Midget Devils won 22-16.

With the win North Dundas SD&G Junior Girls High School Basketball League record improved to 2-0-0.

"We pulled down no defensive rebounds for some reason. I think we are a good rebounding team."

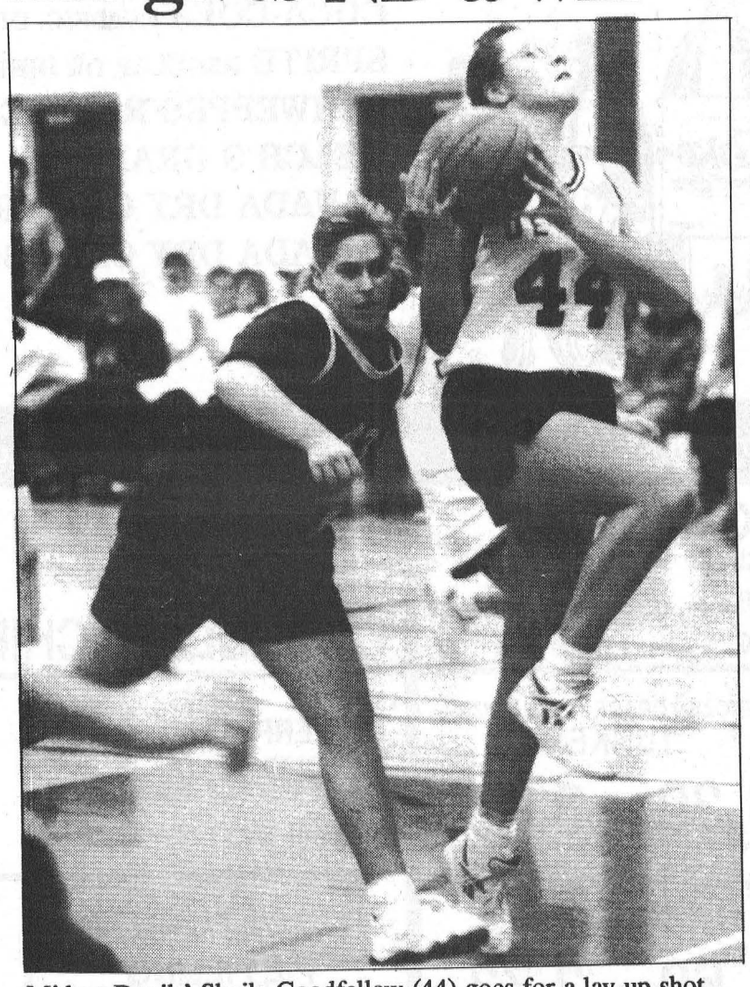
Corbett-White said her team played St. Joe's tight, man-to-man, but they started beating her team so she switched to zone and it worked well, "considering we haven't really worked on it (zone)."

The game was tied 34-34 with 2:54 left on the clock. Time ticked down to 2:24 when Mindy Holmes nailed a free throw to snap the tie (35-34).

Jill Byvelds then came through with a deuce from the line (37-34) with 2:16 left. Holmes finally controlled a fourth rebound and drained two more to open up a 39-34 lead with 1:35 to go.

Byvelds nailed a jumper with 0:43 on the clock and the Devils were up 41-36.

St. Joe's closed the final gap to 41-38 scoring with 0:10 showing but time ran out on them.



Midget Devils' Sheila Goodfellow (44) goes for a lay-up shot.

"It was a good game to win and should build some confidence for us," the coach added.

Byvelds led the Devils with 25 points. Mindy Holmes added 10 while Chrissy Linton, Diane Charron and Amy Berends each hooped two Following his team's opening 53-21 loss to St. Lawrence, Senior Devils' coach Gerry Jean attempted to build the players' confidence.

"We worked all week on shooting and building confidence in our shooting. They worked hard."

But the effort went for naught as North Dundas was drilled 68-18 by the Panthers.

St. Joe's dominated early and led 22-3 after eight minutes and 30-9 by the half.

"We got something going in away in the first 30 seconds of the game and it turned into one of those days (you would rather forget)."

Lauren Clobridge, Maggie Graham, Carrie Swerdfeger and Meghan Bumbaco were among the North Dundas scorers

Down 10-2 the Midget Devils rallied for a 22-16 victory in their encounter with the Panthers.

Assistant coach Sean Hachey said the win was especially satisfying because St. Joe's had beaten the Devils in a preseason tournament.

"It was a good win. We have worked on passing, looking for the open man and then getting the ball to the shooter. The fast break isn't working yet but it is getting better," he explained.

St. Joe's led 10-7 at the half but could only beat the North Dundas coverage once in the third period and were down 18-12 after three quarters.

NDDHS seniors' dominate tournament, juniors split

MAPLE RIDGE - North Dundas District High School senior Devils dominated their first volleyball tournament of the season. The senior Devils beat the St. Lawrence Saints and the Glengarry Gaels three games to none.

"They (the Devils) put their practices to use and the whole team performed very well," explained Devils head coach Mike Moore.

The Devils dominated both defensively and offensively. North Dundas' defence was headed by the unbeatable duo of power spiker Mahina Arnold and setter Matt Robinson.

"Matt Robinson had an exceptional match. He set the ball to the power spikers," said Moore.

The Devils beat the Saints 15-12, 15-11 and 15-10.

North Dundas' offence was put to the test in their second game of the day against the Gaels. The Devils easily defeated the Gaels in all three matches 15-1, 15-7 and 15-3.

According to Moore, the Devils winning season has just begun and will not end until the championships.

"We're a strong team. We'll definitely be in the playoffs and win the playoffs and go to the Eastern Ontarios," said Moore.

The junior North Dundas Devils also participated in the tournament but were not as victorious as the seniors. The juniors easily beat St. Lawrence in all three matches but then lost all three matches to Glenarry.

"We played very well (against St. Lawrence). They improved their basic skills very consistently," explained co-coach Hugh Conlin.

Two players which had an outstanding game against the Saints were Mike Hodge and Jared Cote.

"Mike Hodge played consistently all three matches and Jared Cote was strong on the block...he knows the floor," said co-coach Francis Vanderburg.

However, Hodge and Cote could not do enough to get their team a win against the very tough Glengarry Gaels.

"Glengarry is just a very good team. They have a lot of size and consistent skills right now," explained Conlin.

"We should have done a lot better," said Conlin.

The Devils had many opportunities to catch up, or take the lead away from the Gaels, but the Devils' offence lacked one necessary ingredient - getting the serve over the net.

"Serving was a major problem...we have to improve on being more consistent," he said.

The Devils defence is also in need of improvement when it comes to playing against the Gaels.

The Devils gave the Gaels ample opportunity to constantly put their back court power spikes past the Devils which, more often than not, fell just inside the line.

The Devils lost to the Gaels 15-7, 15-6 and 15-8.

North Dundas senior Devils Sean Hachey (10) and Barry Bell (14) block a spike from St. Lawrence's Colin Ashby in their game last Thursday afternoon. The Devils beat the Gaels in three straight matches.

Fit back in

Our spine supports our body by carrying our weight through bones, called vertebrae, along with the discs between them. Each of our discs can be compared to a mini shock-absorber built to withstand the jolts and strains our back endures every day. Our backs are uniquely designed for the job they must do, but they're not intended to work alone. Our back and trunk muscles, if strong, should help to share the load and portect our backs. That is why exercise is essential for a healthy back. Then our muscles will be able to provide that added support that reduces stress on worn or sensitive structures and keeps them pain- free. As little as ten to fifteen minutes a day of exercise can make such a difference!

We will enjoy other benefits as well. Firming up our abdominal muscles will improve our posture as well as strengthening the trunk, taking inches off our waists and improving flexibility. Regular exercise and better posture improves the function of our cardiovascular system, and standing up straight is also good for our morale. So, it is easy to see that an exercise program to improve back problems also improve our appearance, performance, and our attitude.

Often, a great deal of back pain is the result of muscle spasm along the spine. These muscles are of the same type and design as the other large muscle groups in our body. What would we do for a painful leg cramp? Massage that muscle, stretch our foot, or get out of bed to walk the cramp off. It would no more make sense to avoid gentle stretching exercises for an acute back spasm than it would for that leg cramp.

Most back pain is the result of natural aging of and cumulative wear on the joints and discs of the spine. We can't prevent this process, but we can slow it down and overcome its unpleasant results; through exercises that stretch and strengthen the muscles of our abdomen and low back.

We now know that, like the back, every part of our body depends upon regular exercise. When a specific part of the body is exercised, the body responds by sending more blood, nutrients and energy to that body part. This response leads to an overall improvement in the health and vitality of that particular part. If exercise is neglected, the body will become weak and all its physical powers will be diminished, but with regular exercise the entire system will be strengthened and invigorated.

There is an activity/activities for everyone. This varies greatly from person to person, as well it should. Different people need different routines, and we should never do more than our body type and lifestyle demand.

We are so very lucky to be able to do it for ourselves.
