CRUMBS from Graham's Loaf

Your family journal carries a notice this week about an application being made in Finch for a club licence for the purveying of beers and wines on a restricted basis. It brings to mind the fact that Chesterville is not yet boasting about a vending store on its outskirts. The last report to reach the thirsty is it is on its way. Due to winter works programs and the need to look after the unemployed, the work will not begin until things get a little more unemployed this winter. It would seem the Christmas spirits will still have to be gone for to the south or the north. Ethan's farm emporium will not be in operation for a while.

Back when the world was young and held in check by the OTA, we had little to do with the evils of drink. We were even adverse to just plain water, in any form, except for swimming. Suddenly a gentleman up near Kemptville way, to the everlasting horror of our Methodist parents, decided to allow 4.4 beer to be sold. Along with a group of bigeyed and interested kids, which included Jack McAvoy, Nig Tate, Doc Carroll and a few more, we stood at the McCloskey House one memorable day and watched the men unload the first of the foamy stuff. That opened the way to a tidal wave of the poor man's delight and the ladies' liquid hair restorer.

Just in case you think we have slipped into a pool of the stuff and become gargle-happy, we will hasten to explain. According to a very responsible journal of Bay Street, women in Caanda spend up to $100,000 a year for beer in their hair. It seems the stuff that foams and bubbles puts "body" into milady's thatch. The beauty salons buy the brew by the gallon just for that purpose. We have such a limited quantity of fuzz any more to cherish on the dome, we would not dare try the treatment. And besides body in the hair is only relative. For years the human animal has been working to keep all manners of bodies out of his hair. Why tempt Fate?

The beer in the hair business has turned our thoughts to a small item of doggerel discovered as we sat waiting our turn at the shears. Something like this:

Now bring out the best in styles,
Rush along to Mr Giles.
He rubs on the freshest beer,
His hair cuts give "body cheer."

Composite county school newest plan

Morrisburg meeting briefed decision asked for Oct. 31

A new $2,300,000 composite school has been suggested as a solution to the district's school building problem. The suggested building would be built at a site in the neighbourhood of Winchester Springs, close to the border of Dundas North and Dundas South school districts. Thirty-odd rooms would be needed for the proposed building. Under present Provincial-Federal agreements the total cost of the vocational side of the structure, a full 60%, would be taken up by the governments. Students would be transported from Stormont at Finch and Ingleside, Chesterville, Winchester, Iroquois, Morrisburg and South Mountain.

A meeting was held in Morrisburg last Friday night that will have long-reaching effects on secondary education in the district. Inspector J. O. Proulx outlined his suggested plans for consolidation of the present North and South Dundas districts and parts of Stormont. The marriage of these units would allow, in his opinion, enough students to become available for the new style of "composite" school. Composite schools are able to take advantage of the new secondary school system that was announced August 27 by the Minister of Education.

The school inspector spoke to school board representatives and council members from Finch, Ingleside, Morrisburg, Iroquois, Mountain, Winchester and Chesterville. Morewood did not have a representative present although the inspector noted they had been notified.

The new system of secondary education aims at keeping more students longer in schools. Dropouts in this area account for nearly 60% of the district students between Grades Nine and Twelve. Called the mortality rate, it looks something like this:

The first figures are the enrolment in Grade 9 in 1957. The last figures are those that reached Grade 12 in 1960:

Chesterville: 34, 21; Finch: 55, 15; Ingleside: 53, 18; Iroquois: 68, 19; Morewood: 13, 3; South Mountain: 46, 20; Winchester: 77, 47; Morrisburg, 67, 25. Total: 413, 168, or a mortality rate of drop-outs of 59.3%.

Dr Proulx suggested the new system of screening and directing the early grade students would result in a much greater number of students available for the extended classes. He said the Department of Education felt that at least 40% of the students who now drop out would be kept on in the classes of business, commerce, engineering, technology and trades. The system would follow a pattern of courses that would develop in Grades Nine and Ten. After that period the way of the student would be set, either for Arts and Science, for Business-Commerce or the technical courses. Courses would be offered from five years' duration ending in university entrance to four years and two years for employment.

The composite school offered many advantages, the inspector stated. A greater variety of courses would suit individual abilities and inclinations; there would be a reduction of the mortality rate; there would be a greater facility to obtain and retain qualified and experienced teachers, and a better challenge would be offered to the able students.

An example of a township school to be built on the composite plan was given. It would rise in a township with an assessment of $14,270,000 and would house 930 pupils. Due to the large provision made for technical courses, the 60% paid in full by the government would come to $1,454,000 and the township would debenture for $926,-220.

This particular school, not quite as large as the one suggested for Dundas, would have thirty-odd rooms. Its technical courses would include commerce in all branches, drafting, auto repairs, carpentry millwork, electricity, welding, and other allied courses. All the academic courses available would be taught. The building would include cafeteria and a double gym.

In use, the composite school would draw its students, from Chesterville and Winchester for all classes. Neither present school is adequate for the towns. Member schools would continue to teach all the academic courses with reduced teaching staffs and all students for business-commerce and engineering-technology-trades would be transported to the new unit. The speaker assumed that figure would come to about 40% of the present dropouts or about 400 pupils at the end of five years. Academic classes would supply another 500 students by present estimates, to make a school population of 900-1,000.

In conclusion, Dr Proulx pointed to the time limit of Federal government participation. The agreement runs out on March 31,

R. C. Dillabough, 69

The whole district was saddened to learn Saturday of the sudden passing of Ray Dillabough at his Morewood home. While not in the best of health for the past seven years, this past summer had found him more active than for some time. Saturday, at the noon hour, he suffered a seizure and was dead before medical aid could be called.

Ray Campbell Dillabough was the son of the late Orrin Dillabough and his wife the late Belle Campbell. He was born in the village of Morrisburg. On December 22, 1915 he and the former Elizabeth Kinkaid were married. To the union were born three sons, who with their mother survive. They are Dwight, Toronto, Douglas, Brantford and Ronald, Morewood. Two sisters and two brothers also mourn their brother. They are Mrs J. V. Fetterly, Morewood, Mrs Jean Scott, Saskatoon, Sask., Dwight of Schenectady, N.Y. and Ralph of Ottawa.

Noted as an educator, Mr Dillabough was a school teacher and principal for many years in the district. He taught school for 42 years, 18 in Russell, 2 years in Morewood and 22 years in Chesterville. He was active in every civic venture and organization and was a past president of Chesterville Rotary Club, the Red Cross Society, Chesterville Chamber of Commerce and Chesterville Concentrated Milk Producers; he was a past master of Chesterville Masonic Lodge, an elder of Trinity United Church and former recording secretary of that church.

Funeral services were conducted in Trinity United Church in Chesterville on Tuesday of this week at 2.30 p.m. With his Masonic brothers assisting, the service was conducted by the Rev. E. B. Bugden and the Rev. D. L. Gordon. Interment followed in Maple Ridge Cemetery.

Pall bearers were J. Howard Fulton, Clark Smith, Hume McConnell, Walter Mattice, Frank Casselman and Stewart Mattice.

Married at the weekend were a popular young couple of Chesterville and Winchester. Miss Joyce Hay, daughter of Mrs Colin Hay, became the bride of Harold Armstrong, son of Mr George Armstrong. The couple were married in Winchester Presbyterian Church. They will live in the David Store apartments in Chesterville.—Photo by LaSalle.

A real apple

Nap Struthers out on the old Pat Kirby farm in Limerick wandered into the office this week. He was lovingly lugging a large hunk of apple cider in the raw, a huge Wolf River apple. The big red fruit was 14½ inches by 13 inches and weighed nearly a pound and a half. It looked like a lot of fresh apple sauce. Mr Struthers says his trees have many such fine apples.

Big producers at Angus Smith farm

Angus Smith has received notice of two fine production records made by cattle he has tested. The one, made by Lady Dixon Burke (GP), who died last year, has a Silver Seal production record of ten lactations that produced 162,408 lbs. milk, 5154 fat all on 2X and six on 305 days. To the time of her death she had fifteen registered offspring, all by separate birth.

The second Silver Seal producer in the herd in Tena Rag Apple Marksman (VG). She has an 8-year lactation 2X total of 156,456 milk, 3.58 fat% , 5601 fat, six in 305 days (156-150 BCA). She is fresh again and in September was milking over 70 lbs. a day.

Dundas public school teachers hold convention at Morrisburg

The annual convention of the Dundas Public School teachers was held in Morrisburg Public School on September 29th. The president, Mrs E. Reid, was in charge of the programme which opened with the singing of O'-Canada. Rev. Mr Howald brought greetings from Morrisburg Public school board, and Rev. J. M. Allan conducted devotions.

Mrs Florence English, Iroquois, introduced Mr B. Healy, B. A., B. Paed., superintendent of Professional Development, who officially opened the Science Seminar. Mr R. Coleman, Chesterville, introduced Mr L. J. McLachlan, B.A., M.E., Master of Ottawa Teachers' College, who discussed the new Science Course to be used in Grades 7 to 10, and demonstrated several interesting experiments to be used in teaching Science in Intermediate grades. Mr H. Droppo and Mr S. Waddell showed a film on South Africa.

The teachers enjoyed a delicious luncheon in the United Church hall, A highlight of the luncheon programme was the presentation of the W. J. Stewart Trophy to Mr Stewart by Mrs M. McIntosh. Mr Stewart, former Public School Inspector, expressed his appreciation for the tribute paid him and presented the trophy to the Dundas Teachers' Institute to be awarded to the winner in the Dundas County Public Speaking Competition. Mrs Reid accepted the trophy on behalf of the teachers.

Prof. Isobel M. Laird, M.A., Queen's University, introduced by Mrs M. Simms was guest speaker at the luncheon. Prof. Laird spoke on the Dimensions of Following and in her enthusiastic, humourous address reminded the teachers of the boundaries following imposes on pupils and urged them to allow pupils to use their imagination and initiative. We should all learn a new skill at least every five years, the speaker said.

Mrs I. Ross introduced Mr John Young of the Department of Education who gave a demonstration of Physical Education with a group of Morrisburg pupils showing how Physical Education can be taught with limited space and equipment.

Mr M. N. Hutchison, I.P.S., spoke briefly to close the meeting.

High School News

The past week being short due to the Thanksgiving holiday Chesterville High was quite busy Wednesday morning we had another fire drill and the school was vacated in 41 seconds.

Friday morning three buses left the school filled to peak capacity headed for Metcalfe and the ONDAA. Osgoode District High School won. Chesterville placed fourth on the list. In the cheerleading competition South Mountain came first for the fifth consecutive year. It was agreed that the day had been a decided success.

We are very proud of Francis Marriner ,who won the 880-yard dash and broke the record of 2 minutes, 18½ seconds by doing it in exactly 2 minutes, 8½ seconds. Verne McMillan won the senior boys' shot put and Arden Marcellus won the intermediate shot put.

Susan Graham placed second in senior 100-yard dash, 60-yard dash and in senior standing broad jump. Doug Barker got second in the senior discus throw.

Dick Fulton tied for second place in the junior pole vault. George Butcher received two seconds in the 100-yard dash and 120-yard dash and he also got a 2nd in an 880-yard relay.

Saturday dawned with grey skies and cool weather. By 10.30 that morning the football team accompanied by the cheerleaders arrived in Kemptville to take part in the football tournament. The first game was won by Chesterville with a score of 18-13. Between the two games two cheers were presented for competition. After dinner the girls again performed for the last time. According to the judges Kemptville got the cup which was to be presented at the dance held after the final game. Chesterville boys were in the play-offs and played a real hard game but lost. The score was 31-6.

ENGAGEMENT

Mr and Mrs Neil Gray wish to announce the engagement of their only daughter, Marian Grace, to Mr John Hyndman McMillan, son of Mr and Mrs Hyndman McMillan, of Chesterville. Marriage to take place on Saturday, November 11, in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Winchester, at 12 o'clock noon.

A Cadillac Education?

Last Friday night at Morrisburg, members of school boards and councils of the townships affected watched and heard an unveiling. Dr J. O. Proulx, district inspector for Secondary Schools of the Department of Education, was in charge of the matter and he outlined the new extended education plan. We have reported his presentation at some length in our news columns.

The idea of an extended education in Business-Commerce and Engineering and Technology Trades is one of promise and interest. When the Department of Education presented the plan to the province some time ago, it was understood the system would be worked into existing programs of education when facilities allowed. As school populations increased, either through natural growth or amalgamation, the new patterns of education would emerge.

Changed attitude

Suddenly the attitude here has changed. Rather than wait, or at best, explore to the fullest, the value to us of the new system, we are told to get cracking before the end of October. In other words, make up our minds, before they change theirs.

This newspaper has no intention of accepting that attitude towards anything as important as the secondary education of the district pupils. And the basic reason is not just plain contrariness, but rather one of hard and simple mathematics. Where would we find enough pupils to fill an institution worth $2,300,000? And if the place is not filled, who foots the fancy upkeep accounts that have a habit of coming around every month? Regardless of the free 60 per cent of the building cost paid under the Federal-Provincial agreements, there is still nearly a million to be debentured. That amount is reasonable in light of present building plans. But the district school board will have to supply and pay all teachers, light and heat and otherwise service the whole institution. Dr Proulx's figures point to an estimated 40 per cent of the district students, otherwise drop-outs, who would be taught in the vocational section of the school. At the moment district schools suffer a 60 per cent drop-out between Grades IX and XII. We don't think the figure of 40 per cent is realistic, in our rural districts. It seems to us someone has reached into a deep hat for a nice round amount to make up the requisite number of pupils for the composite school to operate successfully.

Staff reductions

We also feel the teaching of Arts and Science in present schools with a reduced teaching staff leaves something to be desired. The word is that teachers would be fewer, so costs would be down. The figure of three less teachers in a school like ours in Chesterville is used as an example of economy.

Chesterville High School teaches all grades, five of them, with multiple grades in IX. The school now has seven teachers. Take away three, and we end up with a minus number of teachers and a plus number of grades.

Ingleside and Finch-Stormont were included in the plan presented Friday night. The reaction from the representatives of the schools was something less than enthusiastic.

Finch is a case in point. At the moment that school is drawing pupils by bus from as far away as the Glengarry border. Over 35 miles each way. Add another 15 miles each way, and we have pupils riding 100 miles a day to school. Ingleside is 12 miles from Cornwall, and Cornwall does have technical courses. Any student has the right to go to Cornwall and be educated, if Stormont does not have the facilities, at Stormont's expense. As long as Cornwall accepts the students, there is bound to be little enthusiasm for a more distant site of education.

Ford economy

The main reason for the new school system is to offer all things to all students. In other words, the feeling is abroad that if Joe and Jane in the city have certain education rights, then country Joe and country Jane have just as many rights to these advantages. An admirable attitude, but it appears to this writer we are approaching a Cadillac education with only a Ford economy to pay for it.

The high population density areas in the neighbourhood of our cities and towns can afford larger institutions of learning. And with additions to present plants, schools like South Carleton, South Grenville and Eastview can easily take advantage of the new systems. They have a ready-made school population now. South Dundas, North Dundas and Stormont are serving a predominantly rural area. School populations are growing but not at the rates needed to pay for a composite school.

A central school to serve the whole county is an old dream of county educators. Every time it has come up, the hard facts of distance and population density, combined with the resulting high operating cost, has spelled doom to the dreams. Now, for the first time, the initial costs have been levelled to our pocket books. But the average businessman would shudder and go under over the so-called bargain maintenance. It would seem some sort of guarantee would be needed from the Department of Education to assure the district boards that a composite school would not be a high-priced luxury.

Dissatisfaction

There is a feeling on the part of the local municipal council members that somewhere along the line they have been led down the garden path. On April 11, 1961, and at following meetings and conferences with Department men, including Dr Proulx, plans, specifications and costs were arrived at to build a couple of high schools for North Dundas. One at Chesterville and one at Winchester. On June 12 a by-law was sent to Toronto outlining Chesterville's intention to underwrite the debenture. In August, the Municipal Board announced that our by-law had been "overlooked" and it would be immediately taken care of. Three weeks ago we were assured over the telephone the preliminary approval for the building tender would be at hand. Now we find the new system of composite schools has been planned since January and Dr Proulx has been actively planning Friday's presentation since late summer. In all that time, the local municipal council and council's district school board representative, were under the impression we were progressing with the original plans.

Haste makes waste

The haste of the moment on the Department's part is in vivid contrast to their actions all summer. We still disagree with the attitude it is good economy to spend municipal funds wholesale just to take advantage of grants that are available. Especially if the expenditure will become more of a burden than an advantage.

Chesterville and Winchester need high schools. Build one at Winchester Springs and the two municipalities add a tab for transportation of about $25,000 after grants each year. Build separate schools and be satisfied with 75 per cent grant for a composite school if and when the area can afford it. In the meantime continue to pay for vocational training where the students find it.

October meeting North Valley W.A.

The October meeting of the North Valley W. A. was held at the home of Mrs Glen Hollister. The meeting opened with a hymn followed by reading the scripture in unison.

The topic "Commisioned for Service" was taken by Mrs Mancel Flegg. There were eleven members and three visitors present.

The minutes of the last meeting were read by Mrs Kenneth Shaver in the absence of the secretary, Mrs F. Zummach.

The roll call was answered by a Bible verse containing "Service". The treasurer's report and M. and M. report were given.

Thank-you cards were read. The November meeting will be held at the home of Mrs Mac Otto.

The meeting closed with prayer.

Don't leave empty cans of potato-top killer lying around. The residue of sodium arsenate is a deadly poison to man and animals. If you plan to use these cans, wash them thoroughly in a place where no residue will be left on grass or sod, and the water will drain away quickly. If they are going to a dump, puncture the bottom with a pick or crush the can with a tractor wheel so they can't be used by someone unaware of the danger.

Shoreline improvement at Ingleside finished

The "new look" along the Ingleside shoreline of Lake St. Lawrence has attracted favourable comment from both tourists and townsfolk alike.

Begun in the spring of 1960, the project continued throughout the winter and was completed last month. When the job was finished a total of 250,000 cubic yards of earth had been taken from the lake bottom and placed on shore.

W. S. Elliott, a member of the Ingleside Chamber of Commerce industrial committee, said the Chamber felt the town had been overlooked when shoreline improvements were carried out before flooding for the seaway project.

"Under pressure from the Chamber of Commerce, Ontario Hydro consented to call tenders for the necessary improvements," Mr Elliott said.

The Ingleside shoreline, which was little more than a swampy area before the work was begun, is now filed with a minimum of three feet of water.

"The shoreline area is now deep enough to hold up to five feet of water if there is a change in the level of the lake," pointed out Gordon Willows, Hydro construction manager.

The bottom of the lake was dredged for about one mile in front of the townsite, not only to improve the look of the area, but to allow small boats to pull into the shore. A cofferdam was built to allow dredging in the area.

A small island in front of the village was improved by the addition of top soil and fill and Hydro also provided a small boat basin along the shore of the mainland.

Mr. Willows said excavation was completed in February by the contractors. The remainder of the work was hindered by heavy rain last spring and hence was not completed until almost two months later than scheduled.

"The Chamber of Commerce is confident that the Ontario St. Lawrence Development Commission will straighten out the remainder of the unsightliness between the shoreline and the highway," Mr Elliott commented.

SEAT BELT STANDARDS BEING DRAFTED

Canadian standards for automobile seat belts do not exist, but they will soon. The Canadian Standards Association and the Canadian Government Specifications Board are both working on them and plan to produce belt standards for Canada shortly.

In the United States, two sets of standards exist, one drawn up by the Society of Automotive Engineers, the other by the Federal Specifications Bureau. The standards of the federal body, designating specifications for use of government bodies, and those of the SAE, for all others, have differences. In Canada, the CGSB, which designs standards for government use, and CSA, for others, expect to produce uniform standards. At present, seat belts in Canada generally conform to the SAE standards. The Canadian Highway Safety Council believes a seat belt, to be efficient, must be able to "lift a weight equal to that of your car," or about 4,000 pounds.

Until standards are set, the Council refers to a statement from one of the most important makers of safety equipment on the continent on requirements for quality seat belts: strong, meeting a minimum standard for tensile strength; durable, resistant to soil, mildew and water; non-abrasive, smooth finish with no sharp edges to catch on clothing; fully adjustable in length; one-hand opening for quick removal, and buckles of a finish guaranteeing no smudging of clothing.

FRENDLEE FARM CHATS

By Lillian Allison

Procrastination wasn't the only reason we were late touring Upper Canada Village. We'd hoped to see it the day of the opening, but the long-winded speakers stretched the afternoon session out and we could almost hear our cows bawling to be milked before the Village gates were opened to the public.

Then we picked a Sunday in July for our visit. It turned out to be so hot and sticky the mere thought of milling about with a few thousand perspiring humans was too much. So we drove through the Parkway instead.

And I am glad we waited. A month or so ago they announced that the project would stay open until Thanksgiving and, best of all, the fee would be lowered from 1.75 to $1. Now that was really news. I've had an idea all along that $1. admission was enough anyway. Folks argued and quoted larger prices paid to see less in other areas but I was firm.

Upper Canada Village is our own history. It should be available for everyone to see — not merely those with money to get rid of. It was built and is being operated as a government project so we're paying for it indirectly anyway. And most of all it is the strongest magnet for the tourist trade east of Niagara Falls and all our tourists aren't Texas millionaires. Most of them are plain joes like you and me out to have a little holiday and trying to get as much for their piggy-bank money as possible. $1. each for ma and pa and the grown-up kids is enough. Sure they see a lot in the Village but there's no better satisfied customer than the one who thinks he got a bargain. So let's run the place at $1. a head next year and leave the tourist more to spend in the community.

Thanksgiving afternoon was an ideal time for a trip through the village. The weather was perfect and the crowd quite small—only 2,000 I believe. Besides we had two eager youngsters and their parents to share the tour.

The children were thrilled most with the oxen and the cart. They could hardly wait for a ride and stood in the cart grinning broadly while we took pictures of them and the plodding beasts. The youngsters were excited too over a ride on the horse-drawn streetcar but it was an anti-climax to the ox-cart.

Me? I didn't dare test the strength of the oxen and the horses. I was satisfied to keep my two flat-heeled shoes on the ground moving as much as possible.

It was all interesting and well worth a return visit next year (at $1. of course.) But the single thing that impressed me most was the wallpaper on the parsons house. "That is the original wallpaper," the lady in charge explained. She told us how a sample of the paper had been sent to England and they found there by checking old records that the paper had been made in 1820. And there it is now on the walls after 140 years.

Four to six generations of housewives have looked at that paper. They probably planned to re-paper the room every spring since 1850 and never quite managed it. And how they endured it I'll never know. It isn't dirty but it is loud. It's the kind of design that would drive anyone with simple tastes up the wall. And it's been there since 1820. "Now the next time you mention papering the living room," Harry said, "I'll remind you about this." And I haven't a doubt that he will.

The Louck's Farm House, of course, is the piece de resistance. And that is understandable. It's Victorian in style and not really so very old. Anyone my age or over remembers having visited in a house not unlike the Louck's house. I played an old piano like the one there when I was a little girl. Our neighbours had it. I remember it well. The feather beds and straw ticks were familiar as were the feather wreaths and so many other things in that ornate old home. It is bound to stir up a bit of nostalgia in most of us.

Then the fact that we knew so many people in the Village made the afternoon even more interesting. We knew most of the local people who work there and many of the visitors as well. The trip certainly took longer because there was so much visiting to be done.

Yes, we like Upper Canada Village very much. It is a credit to Eastern Ontario and to those who conceived the plan and carried it through. I hope they continue to improve it and to add to it. I'll be back often to see how they are getting along.

Dundas Advisory Board holds regular meeting at Morrisburg

The regular fall meeting of Dundas Advisory board of CNIB was held in Morrisburg on Monday of this week. Present were representatives from Morrisburg, Iroquois, Chesterville and Winchester. George Patrick, field secretary of the Counties, Cornwall, was also present.

General business included a review of the work being done in the county. Plans were made to furnish the usual Christmas packages to the blind. A full report was given by field secretary George Patrick.

Treasurer R. W. Walroth reported canvass returns at about the same level as last year, with a number of districts still to be heard from.

Mrs K. Hillis gave a report on attending the district short course on "Window Treatment."

The November meeting will be held at the home of Mrs H. Hueff, on November 8 at 8.15.

The program committee had a nice program, consising of poems, sing-song and a reading by Mrs S. Barrington and Mrs H. Hueff.

The meeting closed by singing the national anthem. Lunch was served by the committee in charge with Mrs M. McLeod as convener.

Mrs B. G. Main

The death occurred on October 6 of Nell Hunter Main, wife of the late Byard G. Main, formerly of Kemptville and daughter of the late Mr and Mrs M. E. Hunter, of Morewood.

She is survived by one daughter, Mrs Harold MacLean (Marion), of Vancouver, and one son, B. D. Main, of Port Arthur. Her oldest son, Wm. Hunter Main, predeceased her last year. Also left to mourn are four sisters and one brother, Mrs H. Burrows, North Bay, Laura and Carrie Hunter, Mrs Zoe McQuaig and W. C. Hunter, all of Morewood.

Most of her married life was spent in Winnipeg until eight years ago when she moved to Vancouver.

She will be greatly missed by a large circle of friends and in Chalmer's Church where she was an active worker and a life member of the W.M.S.

Rev H. Meadows, of Chalmer's Church, conducted the funeral service at Mount Pleasant Chapel, Kingsway, and interment followed in Forest Lawn Cemetery, Vancouver.

The beautiful South African antelope known as a springbok was so named because of the long distances it can leap.

The BIBLE TODAY . . .

"The magnitude and the opportunity and the urgency of the situation can hardly be overstated," was the view of Reverend Dr L. E. Holmgren, of the executive of the American Bible Society, after a recent visit to Latin America. Dr Holmgren was accompanied by the Reverend J. H. Williams, Deputy Secretary of the British and Foreign Bible Society, after both had attended special celebrations in Rio de Janeiro to mark the retirement of two secretaries of their Societies from the Bible Society of Brazil where they had served in a fraternal capacity.

A rapidly growing population in Latin America would reach double that of Canada and the U.S.A. by 2000 A.D. Literacy is rapidly increasing. There is freedom for the distribution of the Scriptures. Portions of the Bible were issued in five languages for the first time in 1960.

FAST-GROWING TREES IN CANADA

Trees are growing taller faster in the arboretum of the Central Experimental Farm maintained by the Canada Department of Agriculture in Ottawa. A poplar grew 59 feet in 10 years.

A. R. Buckley, well-known horticulturist who has spent many years at the farm, reports that measurements indicate more growth in many trees than could normally be expected. Yet the trees are maintained under natural conditions without special attention.

Alders planted in 1950 are now 38 to 43 high. These trees are suitable as an alternative to willows for wet areas or near streams but they grow fast even in dry places. In the arboretum, the speckled alder, European alder and the red-vined Oregon alder grow the fastest but lack attracive foliage or fruit.

The London plane tree has developed into a beautiful specimen in 15 years. It is 40 feet high, has a branch spread of 41 feet and a girth of 41 inches.

The silver maple, a fast-growing species, reached 38 feet in 10 years. The red Norway maple, Crimson King, and the common Norway maple have grown to 16 and 22 feet respectively. A cut-leaved silver maple became 44 feet high, 43 feet wide and 49 inches in girth in 15 years.

Among the smaller trees moraine locust has grown 28 feet and the European mountain ash 29 feet in 11 years.

The newer birches, transplanted in 1950 from seeds sown in 1947, vary unusually in growth. The lovely Japanese birch has grown to 28 feet and has a spread of 15 feet; the nut-leaved birch, a graceful tree, has attained 31 feet with a spread of 11 feet; the popular European birch is 33 feet tall; the hairy birch 38 feet, and the Forrest birch, 33 feet. The latter has a spread of 30 feet. Most birches spread from 14 to 16 feet but the Forrest and common birches are almost as wide as they are high. This is advantageous for home planting.

Among coniferous evergreens, the red pine has grown 23 feet and spread 15 feet in 11 years from seed—that is in six years from transplanting. The shore pine grew 22 feet in 14 years from seed and in nine years from transplanting. A white spruce has grown 17 feet from a nursery plant in 10 years. A Japanese larch has attained 31 feet, a spread of 12 feet and a girth of 17½ inches in 14 years from seed and in 10 years from transplanting.

The poplars have made amazing growth in this time. The Upright Simon poplar grew 59 feet in 10 years and the bolleana poplar, a type that is rapidly replacing the Lombardy poplar because of its glistening white bark, silvery leaves and neater habits, grew 51 feet in 12 years.

Here's an easy way to train young pullets just off range to start roosting in the laying pen this fall. Go through the pen just at dusk for the first few days and lift any birds sitting on the floor up onto the roosts, suggests John Walker, poultry management specialist at O.A.C. You might try scaring the birds up to roost with a broom, but don't overdo it.

TO CAMPAIGN FOR GOOD OUTDOOR MANNERS

Plans for a "Good Outdoor Manners" campaign to be launched in early 1962 were announced recently by G. W. Phipps, president, Ontario Forestry Association. Details of the program are being prepared by the Association's Forest Fire Prevention Committee and Donald Inman, Streetsville, a commercial artist.

"Our Association has been concerned with the litter problem since a segment of that element of the public which is careless with litter in our forested areas is also careless with matches, cigarette buts and campfires." said Mr Phipps. "For this reason we believe that our forest fire prevention program should be expanded to include other aspects of good outdoor manners."

Mr Phipps pointed out that the Smokey Bear symbol would continue to be used in OFA fire prevention activities. "Dealing with other aspects of good outdoor manners will lead to the production of additional symbols," he predicted.

In making the announcement, Mr Phipps stressed the need for support of all OFA programs by the public at large. The Association, a non-profit, non-political public body active in the conservation field since 1948, relies for its finances upon individuals, business and government.

"Certainly the cost of cleaning up litter on our highways and in our parks, and the cost of suppressing man-caused forest fires, not to mention the cost of lost tourist traffic, timber, and financial returns, warrant the spending of larger sums of money on the prevention of these problems. All citizens of the province have a part to play in these activities" he added.

The Ontario Forestry Association conducts several major conservation programs including the Resources Rangers, Tree Farm Movement, Smokey Campaign, Target: Forests Forever, teachers' workshops, film library, information service, speakers' bureau, lecture tours and conservation publicity. Located at 229 College St., Toronto, the OFA is one of eight provincial forestry associations comprising the Canadian Forestry Association.

FISH AND SEA FOOD WEEK

AS OCTOBER 16-22 IS FISH AND SEA FOOD WEEK, I should have had these recipes in last week's paper but I received them from the Department of Fisheries too late for that date. But fish is good any week and every week so here are some good ideas.

Boiled Fresh Lobster

In this part of the country not many of us have the occasion to cook live, fresh lobster, but this is how it is done according to the Consumer Service of the Department of Fisheries.

To boil lobsters, fill a deep container with enough water to cover them. For each quart used, add 1/4 cup of salt. Heat the water to a rolling boil, grasp each lobster behind the head, and drop it in head foremost. Cover and again bring to boiling point. Simmer small or medium lobsters for 15 minutes and large lobsters for 20 minutes. Cool quickly under cold water and drain.

Place each lobster on its back and with a sharp knife or kitchen shears cut it in half lengthwise. Remove and discard the small stomach sac which lies just back of the head, and also the intestinal vein which runs from the stomach to the tip of the tail. However, do not discard the green liver, or the coral roe if it is present. Both are delicious.

Cooked lobster may be served in the shell, either hot with side dishes of melted butter, or cold with mayonnaise. Allow one small or half a large lobster for a serving. When eating lobster in the shell, it is customary to remove the meat with a cocktail fork and then cut it with a regu- Makes 4 to 6 servings.
is served hot, dip each succulent forkful into melted butter. Enjoy the meat from the body cavity and tail first, then tackle the claws, since the shell tends to keep the claw meat warm longer. Nutcrackers may be used to crack the claws. As for the legs, simply pull them off. Each contains a tasty morsel of meat which may be sucked out.

Fish Sticks, Spanish Style

An increasing proportion of Newfoundland's catch of cod and other species is being processed in cooked, breaded form. Packaged, frozen fish sticks are an example. Try them some time in this hearty, speedily prepared supper dish.

1 1/3 cups packaged precooked rice
1 can (20 oz.) tomatoes
½ cup water
¼ cup chopped onion
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. oregano
1 cup grated Cheddar cheese
1 pkg. (8 oz.) fish sticks

Combine rice, tomatoes, onion, salt and oregano. Heat to simmering temeprature and simmer uncovered for 5 minutes. Pour into a greased 1½-quart baking dish. Sprinkle with grated cheese. Top with a single layer of fish sticks. Bake in a moderately hot oven (400° F.) for 15 minutes. shrimp from the more southerly

Seafood Medley Casseroles

Crab and shrimp are two delicious shellfish caught in British Columbia coastal waters. Crab are taken principally from the cold northern waters off the Queen Charlotte Islands and

According to a recent survey, waters of the Gulf of Georgia. Combined in the following manner they make delicious individual seafood casseroles, so acceptable for buffet meals.

1 cup cooked or canned crab meat
1 cup cleaned cooked or canned shrimp
1 cup chopped celery
¾ cup chopped green pepper
2 tbsps. minced onion
¾ cup mayonnaise
1 tbsp. lemon juice
⅛ tsp. Worcestershire sauce
¼ cup crushed potato chips
¼ cup grated cheese

Chop crab meat and shrimp into bite-size chunks. Combine and add celery, green pepper and onion. Blend mayonnaise, lemon juice and Worcestershire sauce. Add to combined seafood and vegetables; mix lightly. Spoon into 4 greased, individual casseroles. Sprinkle with potato chips and cheese. Bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) until thoroughly heated and browned. This will take 15 to 20 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

Salmon Loaf

hope to see him home again Ontario's farm homemakers serve more canned fish than they do fresh or frozen fish. Salmon is one of our most popular canned fish varieties, and one of the most popular canned salmon dishes is the salmon loaf, easily prepared as described.

1 can (15½ oz.) salmon
1 cup liquid (salmon liquid plus milk)
1½ cups soft bread crumbs
½ cup chopped celery
1 tsp. grated onion
½ tsp. salt
Dash pepper
2 tsps. lemon juice
2 eggs, beaten

Drain salmon, saving liquid. Add milk to salmon liquid to make 1 cup total measure. Flake the fish. Combine all ingredients. Place in a well-greased loaf pan or baking dish. Bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) for 1 hour, or until loaf is firm in centre. Let stand for 5 minutes before unmolding on a heated platter. Serve plain or with a sauce. Makes 6 servings.

Laying tile this fall? Don't buy rejected or damaged tile — it's false economy, warns Hank Bellman, engineering extension specialist with the Ontario Department of Agriculture. He suggests looking over every tile carefully before laying it. Even if only a few tiles crumble, it could make your tile drainage system useless.

COMPOSITE SCHOOL—

1963. After that the costs would come out to 75% government and 25% paid by the municipalities. Until that time the agreement means all building costs for the technology side of the composite school would be paid for by the governments. Maintenance, building costs or arts and science division of the school, janitoring, light, heat and allied services would be the responsibility of the board. That would include the largest cost of the program, teachers' salaries.

A lively discussion followed. It boiled down to a statement by the inspector that some decision must be reached by October 31 by the interested parties. He felt there was little enough time now left as it was to get the program completed before the agreements ran out.

A question and answer rally ended when each delegation was asked its opinion of the plan. Finch and Ingleside had no comment until they could discuss it further among their boards. Dundas North, with Sam Ault, board chairman speaking, thought the plan had a lot of merit, but expressed his board's concern over the risk of not having enough pupils for the big school. Dundas South, with good schools now, liked the idea of technical training as did South Mountain.

Further school board meetings will be held in the matter before the end of the month.
