DHIA exec

WINCHESTER (Staff) - The annual meeting of the Dundas DHIA was held Jan. 20, with its 1987 executive being elected at the Winchester Community Centre. The first part of the meeting was held at the John Stoodley farm, where members were shown the farm operation and a new barn constructed there. Elected as one-year directors for the '87 executive are Tom Clapp, Gordon and John Smith and Abe Douma, past president. The two-year directors elected were Tom Forward, secretary treasurer, Jim Adams, vice-president, Gary Steele and John DeJong. The three-year directors elected were Ralph Tibben, president, Martin Schoones, Rina Groniger and John M. DeVries.

Dairy day

CHESTERVILLE (Staff) - Two area farms will be highlighted during Dundas Dairy Farm Management Day Tuesday, March 3. Both Carl and Muriel Smith's Sunnylodge Farms Inc. and John, Abe and Rick Douma's Chestcreek Farms Ltd. will be the subjects of a tour sponsored by the Dundas Holstein Club, Dundas Milk Committee and Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food. All Dundas County milk producers are invited to attend the day which starts at the Sunnylodge Farms at 10:30 a.m. and wraps up with a tour of Chestcreek Farms starting at 1:15 p.m. Lunch will be held at the Chesterville Legion Hall, with milk provided by the Dundas Milk Committee.

Concerted effort

IROQUOIS (Staff) - The best youth musicians in the United Counties will gather at Seaway District High School from Thursday to Saturday. Three days of workshops will end Sunday with two concerts by the SD&G Youth Concert Band. The first will be held in Iroquois at 2 p.m. and then moves on to Aultsville Hall on the Cornwall campus of St. Lawrence College at 8 p.m. Admission is $1.

The public is also invited to hear the McGill Wind Ensemble perform Friday at 8 p.m. in Seaway's auditorium. On Thursday evening, the Woodroffe Community Jazz Ensemble will play. Both concerts began at 8 p.m. and admission is $1.

Adding up

OSNABRUCK CENTRE (Staff) - Township council here will have an ad in two Standard Freeholder advertising supplements this year. Council decided to have the $500 ad in a close two-to-two vote, broken by a vote in favor of it by reeve Stewart Hart. "As far as I'm concerned, I wouldn't put anything in at all," said councillor Donald McElheran. "We've got to save our nickels and our pennies."

"I think we're advertising in the wrong newspaper," said councillor Carson Elliott.

The Record thanks all local residents who submitted engagement and wedding photos for the supplement appearing in this issue. Readers are reminded to drop by the office and pick up their photographs.

SNRCA levies up more than a third

BERWICK (Staff) - The old adage that you have to spend more money to make more may be the catch-phrase for the South Nation River Conservation Authority this year.

In order to obtain a 77.5 per cent increase in provincial grant dollars, the authority has decided to raise municipal levies 38.9 per cent for 1987.

"You will, no doubt, immediately notice that the proposed levy to member municipalities represents a 38.9 per cent increase over the 1986 levy," said general manager Jim Windsor Feb. 2 in an authority memo. "This is, of course, a significant increase."

Although 38.9 per cent may be a hard increase to swallow, the budget -- which was approved without too many complaints Wednesday night - "is felt to be both reasonable, and appropriate, given the major increase in provincial grant available," said Windsor, also secretary-treasurer for the authority.

The levy increase may seem like a substantial jump, but it could've been higher had the authority not decided to draw money from its reserve to "cushion the blow", Windsor told about 40 people attending the meeting.

"The required levy increase is 38.9 per cent (and not 77.5 per cent) because we are proposing to draw some $60,000 from our reserves and some $43,000 from a special municipal levy (Cambridge Township)," he said.

In dollars, the increase means that Chesterville will pay the authority $7,164 instead of the $5,423 it payed last year, Winchester Township will pay $13,828 instead of last year's $10,633. Winchester village is up to $8,893, compared to $6,477 last year. Finch Township's assessment is $9,160, up from $6,968. Finch village will fork out $1,193, compared to $923 last year. Williamsburg Township was hit with a jump of about $1,300 and Osnabruck Township faces an increase of about $500.

The authority's near $1.3 million dollar pie is to be divided into seven categories with the biggest chunk going to administration. A whopping 45.9 per cent of authority budget dollars will go to administration -- 23.3 per cent for general administration, 2.9 per cent for conservation administration, and 19.7 per cent for water administration.

The second largest part of the budget, 42.2 per cent, will go to water capital and the remainder will be divided among conservation capital, special employment projects and the reserve fund.

More money will spent on the Chesterville dam in '87. A total of $15,700 has been allocated toward the upgrading and maintaining of the dam. About $11,000 of the total will go toward maintenance, Windsor said. Dams require major maintenance every five to 10 years, he said. The Crysler dam was allotted $4,000 and the Crysler dyke, $1,000 for operation and maintenance in '87.

Although the 38.9 per cent levy increase "is a significant one", Windsor said in his memo addressed to authority members, the levy that conservation authorities charge in Eastern Ontario is "significantly lower than for most of the rest of the province (on a per capita basis)." In 1985, Southwestern Ontario ratepayers were charged $3.37 per capita and Central Ontario ratepayers, $3.47 per capita, Windsor said.

"In Eastern Ontario, in the same year, the average per capita rate was $2.65 (less

Winchester courthouse site of Alternative School

WINCHESTER (Staff) - The old provincial courthouse here has an alternative use.

The Alternative School, which offers in-class courses and job training programs to obtain or upgrade high school credits, has rented the space above the OPP detachment on Main St.

Bill Dickie, Alternative School principal, said Monday the school could be open as early as April.

"We have enough contacts in the community to know there is a need there, so what we'll be doing is starting on a small basis so we'll be there long enough to know what kinds of needs are there."

The premises have been vacant since the end of December, when the provincial court moved to Morrisburg. One of the reasons given for the move from Winchester was the second storey court's inaccessibility to the handicapped.

Dickie said the Alternative School is "very aware" of the physical problem. "This is what I would call our experimental period," he said. "It's a place where we're able to do it right away without a lot of fuss. We had to have a centre to work out of."

If accessibility is a problem, he said disabled students could use another location in Winchester.

Among the programs that could be established most quickly through Winchester is the upgrading of basic literacy and numeracy skills. A second program combining in-class study of those skills with work experience could also be set up. Such a program now operates out of the Alternative School's base in Morrisburg.

The school can work in conjunction with Futures, a federal training program which subsidizes the salary of an employee learning a new job, and youth employment counselling centres in Cornwall and Cardinal.

Dickie said individual academic study, in which the student spends at least three hours per week under a teacher's supervision on a specific course, could also be implemented.

The school will be directing its programs initially to two groups: unemployed youth and people in need for literacy skills. "Those are very dire needs," he said.

He's eager to see the school established as quickly as possible in Winchester. "We believe, and this is what we're hearing, that programs should be made available, if possible, in the rural community.

One and a half years ago, the Alternative School opened its first satellite school in Morrisburg and a second began operating in Alexandria last fall.

Since mid-October, a course to upgrade literacy and numeracy has attracted 16 students in Alexandria. Since Christmas, the school has offered academic services and a career explorations program that have drawn 18. Between six and ten students are registered in individual academic study programs. Sixteen women are also in a job re-entry program.

"We anticipate within a short period of time we'll have similar shows of interest in Winchester and Chesterville," Dickie predicted.

The school has yet to establish an advisory board of farm representatives but Dickie said input from the agricultural community is needed.

In the past, the school has successfully offered a course in farm maintenance, including welding and mechanical skills, out of North Dundas District High School. He said course organizers have thought the skills could be better taught if students moved from farm to farm but couldn't find a feasible way of managing that. A board of farm reps, he said, could suggest how to overcome that hurdle.

The school will also be looking for both qualified teachers and those lacking formal teaching credentials, as well as volunteers who would like to work one-on-one with students.

Power to the people

The lights went out in Chesterville Thursday afternoon when repair crews from the Winchester Office of Ontario Hydro cut the power to replace a pole in the north end of town. The pole was damaged Wednesday night at about 11:10 p.m. when it was struck by a car driven by Betty-Anne Merkley, 26, of Morewood. Merkley and two passengers suffered minor injuries. She was charged with careless driving. Damage to the pole is estimated at $2,000.

Tax increase of up to 15 per cent proposed

OSNABRUCK CENTRE (Staff) - If a picture is worth a thousand words, the looks on the faces of township councillors must have been worth a million when told the mill rate increase for the proposed 1987 budget last week.

Township clerk Warren Bethune told council members, there would be a 25 to 30 mill increase in township resident's taxes in 1987 if they approved the proposed budget as is. A mill increase at such a size would mean a 12-15 per cent tax increase for ratepayers.

After saying how shocks like that give him and other council members grey hair, Reeve Stewart Hart and the rest of council went to work trying to pare the budget down.

There may be a few more grey hairs than usual for township council members this year as they try a new budgetary process aimed at taking more control of township priorities, said Bethune Monday.

The new process takes a "smorgasbord approach" to the annual budget and is generally used in larger municipalities such as the City of Cornwall, Bethune said. Unlike the township's previous process, which was "reactive", the new budgeting process is "proactive", he said.

With a proactive budget process, council can make decisions without outside influences, determining the municipality's priorities first, Bethune said. Instead of budgeting in April and May, as it had in the past, council sifts through the budget earlier and takes more time making decisions, he said.

"It's an attempt to take more control of our priorities," he said. Council members go head-to-head pitting the value of one project against the other, looking at the projects and then the consequences, Bethune said. Instead of reacting to what is done by the United Counties council or the board of education, council determines its priorities first.

"This way they (council) gets to sift through it and think about it. All the options are laid out -- eyes open. The public gets a sense where council's going."

The new process will hopefully help council make more responsible decisions concerning taxpayer's money, Bethune said. He added it also may leave council members more open to public scrutiny and criticism.

But council feels it's worth trying and only time will tell whether it will pay off, he said. The township is planning for growth and this is the best process to use in that situation, he said.

"Right now, there's many roads to travel. There's many things you can do."

"Last year was an extraordinary year," Bethune also told council last week. The township did well in land sales and tax collection and also pulled in more than $60,000 in garbage collection, he said. He also expects to receive some $55,000 in taxes not collected last year, Bethune said.

Budget makes government 'look good', MP says

OTTAWA (Staff) - Even Stormont-Dundas MP Norm Warner admits some may have found last week's federal budget boring.

"Generally, the budget was a statement of what has happened recently, the Tory MP said Thursday following the presentation of Michael Wilson's budget Wednesday night.

"I think spending is on target, our deficit has reduced and it's going to be reduced next year. It's really a continuation of the themes of previous budgets and previous economic statements."

Perhaps the biggest news emerging from the budget was what wasn't there. Warner said the government began working on comprehensive reform of the tax system a year ago. "It's something that's really long overdue," he commented. "Our tax system has a lot of inequities in it."

But unlike past practice, he said Wilson has opted to present his tax proposals in a separate white paper rather than including them in his budget.

"We believe in consultation and I think it's very important, when you look at a major initiative such as tax reform."

He said he'll be inviting comments from his constituents when Wilson introduces his proposals, expected in the next couple of months. Warner said the government hopes the reforms will be in place for 1988.

"It's very easy for the opposition to criticize a change so it's going to be an interesting process," he said.

David Whetter, president of the Stormont Federation of Agriculture, said there was little for agriculture in a budget that contained "not a heck of a lot".

Farmers, he said, would be pleased to see the retention of a fuel tax rebate for farm vehicles. (Other motorists were hit with a hike of one-cent-a-litre in fuel price.)

But citing proposals to introduce a value added tax on all goods and rumored changes to capital gains tax, he said, "We're looking forward with apprehension to proposed tax amendments."

Whetter's fears were echoed by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture. In a press release, Don Knoerr, the federation's president, said the CFA will be "watching closely for the government's tax reform direction. The imposition of taxes on farm inputs would place a burden on Canadian farmers that they would not be able to pass on."

Although he was happy with the federal government's $1 billion Special Grains Program, Knoerr said, "All indications are that there will be a need for continued assistance of this nature for farmers."

He also said farmers' exclusion from the increase in the excise tax on fuels will have to be extended beyond its December, 1987 deadline.

The CFA was "disappointed" that the budget contained no indication of the government's view of the Farm Credit Corporation's mandate.

"It is most urgent that action be taken to broaden the FCC's role as a provider of credit for the farm community," Knoerr said.

The budget offered little for Stormont-Dundas in particular. But Warner said this type of budget "makes us look good" and could attract foreign investment to his riding.

Although there were no new job creation measures, he said they may be a spin-off. "The outlook for business is very good and it is small business that creates most of our jobs."

"The main thing is we are looking responsible and we are doing well as a country. It is very important for small business people to have confidence in the government and know that interest rates will remain, at least in the short term, in a predictable range."

In a move that hasn't generated much controversy, the government dropped tariffs against some American imports, including Christmas trees and books, which had been imposed in retaliation for U.S. tariffs on Canadian shakes and shingles.

The Americans haven't said they plan to switch their policy.

Warner said the Canadian move wasn't an indication the government is backing down in the trade battle. In fact, he believed the American import duty on shakes and shingles have hurt the U.S. industry.

"They're starting to realize they made a mistake," he said.

He also suspects the Americans may drop their tariffs. "I don't know and I don't have any great source, but I do know they did ruin the market."

He said Canadian tree growers in particular had been hurt by the imposition of tariffs against American imports.

than the cost of a trip to McDonald's), "he said.

Windsor failed to mention the criteria for such a claim. An authority member noted that trip to McDonald's would probably cost more than $2.65 if the nearest outlet was more than 100 miles away.

"We in the South Nation River Conservation Authority (for that same year, 1985) charged our ratepayers even less than the Eastern Ontario average. Our per capita municipal levy was $2.47," Windsor said.

The authority included $15,000 in its budget to continue its beaver program and will also be spending $8,300 for its fortieth anniversary celebrations. The celebration of the authorities fortieth year in existence began with a "Skate the Nation" night last week.

Elected to the SNRCA executive for 1987 was Gaston Patenaude, chairman and Johnny Whitteker, vice-chairman. Other executive members for '87 included Winchester Reeve Larry Gray, Winchester Township Reeve Gerald Holmes, Roxborough Township Reeve John McIntyre, Dave Sloan, Ray Reid, Bob Graham, Albert McKeown, Lorne Strader, Lucien Groulx and Ewart Simms.

The authority also passed a resolution requesting that the provincial government use some of its $400 million surplus funds to finance some of the authority's priority projects.

Non-refundable checkoff for beef passes vote

TORONTO (Staff) - Ontario cattlemen voted overwhelmingly in favor of making a checkoff to the provincial cattlemen's association non-refundable.

Peter Mesman, one of two Stormont producers attending the meeting, said Monday night only 24 people opposed the move in a vote taken on convention floor by colored card.

"When I saw all the cards go up, I thought there would be no one against but there were some."

Despite the support from 138 voters, the question generated controversy -- "an awful lot of discussion, arguing, if you like." He said about 100 people addressed the issue at the microphone.

After the meeting, Jack Riddell, Ontario Minister of Agriculture and Food, addressed the convention. "He says he will live up to his promise of making it non-refundable,' Mesman said.

In December, Riddell had said the Beef Marketing Act could be amended to make the fee non-refundable if two-thirds of the delegates, bound to vote by their counties' wishes, supported it at the annual meeting.

In 1986, refunds of the fee represented about 20 per cent of the OCA's expenditures.

About half of the association's budget now goes to advertising, which for this year was allotted about $900,000, down slightly from last year. But Mesman said promotion could be given a boost later this year, thanks to last week's vote.

He himself was pleased with the vote's outcome. At the annual meeting of the Stormont Cattlemen's Association a month ago, producers unanimously approved making the fee non-refundable. Their counterparts in Dundas had earlier supported the move.

Also coming out of the convention was a resolution that the OCA request a meeting with Beef Producers for Change, a rival organization of cattlemen. Mesman said the smaller group is strongest in several counties in Southern and Western Ontario and boasts a membership of 1,000.

In other convention business, Victor Wagemans, of Morrisburg's Mutal Products was elected to the OCA executive, marking the first time a veal producer has served on the seven-member panel. He replaced Gerry Lalonde of Prescott County.

Hugh Sharpe, a Napanee area auctioneer, defeated the incumbent, Edgar Wideman, for the president's seat.

Dance for Heart kicks off

CHESTERVILLE (Staff) - Local aerobics students have a chance to increase their own cardiovascular fitness while contributing to research into the prevention and treatment of heart disease and stroke.

Dance for Heart, a three-hour exercise marathon, will be held Monday from 7 to 10 p.m. at Jennifer Gregoire's aerobics studio in Chesterville. All proceeds will go the Heart and Stroke Foundation of Ontario.

Organizers stress the three-hour session will be surprised by a qualified instructor, with water and frequent rest stops provided. Participants can exercise for only five minutes or the entire three hours and spectators offering support are also invited

"It's a fun event," said Judy Baril, the foundation's co-ordinator for Dundas, Leeds, Grenville and Lanark.

The Chesterville event is the only one to be held in Dundas, she said.

Participants are also eligible for gifts ranging from a lapel pin to a gym bag depending on the amount of money they raise in pledges. Baril noted pledges can either be made at a flat rate or by minute or hour.

She noted that 89 cents of every $1 donated to the foundtion is spent on research or education. Just over 8 cents goes to fundraising expenses and administration takes only 2.8 cents.

The need for research and education is critical, she said. Last year, more than 81,000 Canadians died of heart-related illness, 30,000 in Ontario alone.

Local NDP offered hope for growth in future

FINCH (Staff) - Even the president admitted the turnout at the founding meeting of the provincial NDP riding association under expanded boundaries was disappointing.

Only 12 people – including the guest speaker and his wife and three media representatives -- attended the founding meeting of the new riding association last Wednesday night at the Finch Legion hall.

Trevor Tolley, re-elected president of the association, blamed the small crowd on the recent cold snap and bouts with the flu. But Mel Swart, the guest speaker and NDP representative from Welland-Thorold, told party members to be optimistic.

He himself had to run eight times before he was elected to the southern riding he has represented since 1975. In 1963, the NDP captured only 7 per cent of the riding's voters. By the last election, support had increased to 60 per cent.

He jokingly said he thinks the party has him tour the province as proof that an NDP candidate can get elected if he or she works hard enough.

Tolley too saw some hope for the party's future. "When I first came down to live here in Dundas, there was no formal association and it's just under ten years ago that we founded the formal NDP provincial riding association for Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry."

But he was critical of the enlarged constituency. Even prior to the addition of eastern Grenville, he said the riding was "unmanageable".

Police solve local hit and run cases

WINCHESTER (Staff) - Two hit and run accidents which occurred within the area during the last two months have been solved as a result of investigations by Winchester OPP Const. Howard Smith.

Lawrence Droppo, 33, of Chesterville, was charged with failing to remain at the scene of an accident after a westbound vehicle had struck a bridge on a Winchester Township road along the second concession Feb. 19. The Droppo vehicle received $2,000 damage as a result of the collision.

A 29-year-old Kenmore, Ont. man has been charged with failing to remain at the scene of an accident after a unknown vehicle struck a hydro pole on Ottawa Street, Winchester.

John Hickling has been charged in connection with the Jan. 18 incident, which caused about $2,500 damage to the pole. The Hickling vehicle received approximately $1,300 damage.

A collision between a car and another parked vehicle early Thursday morning, on concession 11, resulted in a total of $11,000 damage.

Christopher Dunn, 31, of Russell, was southbound on the Mountain-Winchester Township boundary road, when he failed to stop at the intersection of concessions 11 and 12, sliding into the Harmony Church parking lot, striking another vehicle.

The Dunn vehicle received $6,000 damage as a result of the accident. A vehicle owned by Dianne Oschmann, of Winchester, sustained $5,000 damage. No charges were laid.

A 20-year-old Crysler man has been charged with following to closely after he was involved in a three-vehicle collision north of Berwick Thursday morning.

Francois Landry was charged after the vehicle he was driving struck the rear of a vehicle driven by Laura Hunter, 21, of Morewood. The force of the collision drove the Hunter vehicle into a school bus she was stopped behind, driven by Rene Leduc, 67, of Crysler. The school bus was stopped to let off passengers, police said.

The bus received $100 damage, the Landry vehicle received $500 damage and the Hunter vehicle sustained $700 as a result of the collision. No one was injured.

Organizer predicts good turnout for annual Crysler farm show

CRYSLER (Staff) - The annual Crysler Farm Show to be held March 4 and 5 could have its best turnout ever this year, says one of the organizers.

"If the weather co-operates," the tri-county event should have an even better turnout than last year, said Marcel Masse.

"There's quite a bit of interest," in the two-day show running from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. March 4 and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. March 5, Masse said.

There'll be a large variety of small equipment, exhibits, all-terrain vehicles, lawn equipment at the show, Masse said. Two door prizes will be given away over the weekend and there'll be a trophy for both the best inside and outside exhibit, he said.

The event which has been running for about 15 years, is sponsored by the Crysler Community Centre and organized by Masse, Armand Gibeault and Adrien Lamoureux. "Last year I got all the glory," Masse said. Other people involved in the event should also get some praise, he said.

The weekend event will be held in and around the Crysler Community Centre

Insurance driving people off roads: MLA

FINCH (Staff) - Hikes in automobile insurance two years ago have driven some motorists off the roads, a NDP MLA from southern Ontario told the local provincial riding association here last Wednesday night.

A public auto insurance plan similar to schemes in Western provinces was the solution offered by Mel Swart, the MLA for Welland-Thorold and the NDP critic of financial institutions and consumer and commercial relations.

Swart was addressing the founding meeting of the expanded riding. In the past two years, he said automobile liability insurance rates have increased an average of 38 per cent.

Apart from "the rip-off" of the high premiums, he said Ontario drivers shouldn't accept that much authority from the private companies.

"They have more to do with who drives on our roads than the law does," he said.

In the past five years, he said the average premium in Manitoba increased by only 12.8 per cent and in British Columbia 8.3 per cent. Saskatchewan saw a decrease of 3 per cent.

He said the Liberal government has done little to remedy the situation. He blamed the party's close philisophical ties to the private enterprise represented by insurance companies for its refusal to look at alternate systems.

Last fall, he urged the government to authorize a study comparing the systems in Ontario and the West. Although the motion passed with the support of the Tories and against the opposition of only four Liberals, he said the province has not acted.

A little over a year ago, the Liberals appointed a one-man commission to investigate the escalating insurance rates. But, said Swart, the commission wasn't authorized to review the public insurance systems in the three western provinces.

He said the minister responsible for the commission, Monte Kwinter, stated repeatedly that public insurance wasn't the policy of his government.

"They started out with that millstone around their neck," the veteran MLA said.

A second commission on insurance is expected to report by November of this year, he said.

In response to what the NDP saw as government inaction, Swart said he became part of a party task force that toured the province seeking the public's views.

He recited horror stories of rates for buses that jumped from $3,500 to $32,000 per bus, hospital premiums that increased from $4.5 million to $39 million in two years, and a father whose premium increased because his sons lived at home and their individual rates were high.

Young drivers in particular are hurt by rates that are more than triple the norm, he said. He described such a policy as contrary to the principle of innocent until proven guilty.

"The simple facts are that not only are the rates one-third to 40 per cent cheaper than they are in this province but all of those nightmares I have talked about don't exist in those western provinces."

Citing a 10-year-old study comparing the systems in Ontario and the West, Swart said 21 per cent of premiums in the public systems went to expenses while 79 per cent were paid out on claims.

In Ontario, he said expenses and profit accounted for 41 per cent of the premium dollar and only 59 per cent went to claims.

Tasha Street revisited

CHESTERVILLE (Staff) - The controversy about a sign erected on a driveway to his apartments has surprised Jim Sullivan.

A week and a half ago, Chesterville council had a sign reading "Tasha Street" removed from the entrance to Sullivan's property at 205 Main St. North. Reeve Carl Ward said the blue and white sign, of the same style as those designating village streets, could imply the driveway is a municipal street.

Later councils, he said at a regular council meeting, could mistakenly believe the village is responsible for maintaining the private driveway.

Sullivan learned last week the sign had been removed and described the issue as "petty stuff". He said the address on the property would have remained 205 Main St. North, with the addition of "Tasha Drive".

"They (the village) made a mistake. It was supposed to be Tasha Drive."

Sullivan said he has asked council in October if he could erect a sign on the driveway into his newly constructed apartments. With council's permission, he said, he ordered the sign through the municipal office and it was later installed by the village foreman.

He disagreed with the village's stance that the sign wasn't on private property. He maintained it had been placed on his property, which extends to the sidewalk.

At the meeting, council advised that Sullivan not be billed for the sign, which cost about $18. But Sullivan received the invoice in the mail this week, attached to a bill for the installation of a light on the property.

When he visited the office to pay the two bills, the cost of the sign was knocked off.

THE CHESTERVILLE Record Editorial / Opinion

The February blahs

Maybe its the hint of spring that quickly turns to a blustery winter day, or maybe it's the frustration of suddenly realizing the salt stains on a pair of boots can never be removed.

But whatever the cause, February is a month of lows, when the trivial takes on a new meaning.

At a meeting two weeks ago, Chesterville council quibbled over the style of a sign marking the entrance to apartments in the north end of the village.

Reeve Carl Ward argued that because the sign was the same as those designating village streets, later councils could mistakenly assume the driveway was a street for which the municipality was responsible. So the sign, ordered and installed by village staff, came down the next day.

Jim Sullivan, owner of the apartments marked by the disputed sign, summed up the whole issue as "petty".

The debate over the possible closure of small rural post offices continues, amid rumors of yet another strike, this time among letter carriers. But the mail itself continues, bringing with it its own load of the trivial.

Earlier this month, the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food mailed a cardboard box, measuring about four and a half inches square, by Priority Post.

Inside the box, carefully wrapped in bubbled plastic paper for protection, was a green cardboard carton manufactured by a Washington, D.C. company -- Creative Cookie Co. Inc.

Inside the carton, again carefully wrapped (this time in green tissue paper), was a fortune cookie. The message inside the cookie?

"Person who watches mailbox in Year of the Rabbit receives many good things from FOODLAND ONTARIO."

Even the federal budget was boring -- no great spending cuts, no controversial initiatives. Notable by its absence was an increase in the tax on liquor, which traditionally has been earmarked with cigarettes and increasingly gas for inevitable tax hikes.

But a new vice to tax has been found, and one in keeping with the spirit of February. What could more fitting for a month dominated by the trivial than a 12 per cent federal sales tax on junk food?

The Life of Riley

by Wayne Riley

Just over the hill, on the right side of the road, a plain-looking mid-sized car was parked on the gravel shoulder.

It was only when I had halved the distance between that car and my own that I caught a glimpse of the insignia on the door and recognized the vehicle as a police car.

As is normal for a motorist caught offguard in this way, I immediately began to make a number of adjustments in my behavior. Having looked and found I was slightly over the speed limit at 83 kilometres an hour I took my foot off the gas pedal and let friction slow me to 60. I sat up straight so that my hair flattened against the roof. I shut off the radio which had been playing a little too loudly, slid my hands back into the ten-to-two position and ceased to breathe.

I would have continued this way for six kilometres, the farthest I can safely hold my breath at that speed, if it were not for a second car parked in front of the plain-looking mid-size. This second car bore no insignia except a decal in the back window that said Niagara Falls.

I nearly slumped off my seat with relief. The constable, it turned out, already had a customer.

Not that I was afraid of the law, mind you. Wanting to watch my children grow up, I stay away from things that might even have the remotest chance of sending me to The Big House.

And policemen I have known, including my wife's cousin Reinhardt, seem to be pretty regular guys. They're just people like anyone else, only they have more arms.

Still, there's something about passing a patrol car, especially one that you didn't know was there because there was no roof-mounted light, that suddenly makes you feel like you had a bowling ball for breakfast.

My own theory is that the law is so complicated that even a law-abiding citizen is never totally sure that he isn't breaking the law. And everyone knows what kind of defence ignorance makes in the eyes of the law.

One only has to look to the government to see the depth of this complexity with lawmakers themselves confused into wrongdoing.

So the average motorist, knowing that even good honest politicians can be tripped up, is justified in worrying about The Heat.

Did the motorist remember to put his licence sticker in the right corner of the plate? Were the lights on at the right time? Were the seatbelts attached?

Are there enough candy bar wrappers on the floor to warrant a charge of littering?

Shortly after taking his new car out for a highway drive, a friend of mine noticed the red lights of a police car behind him. Although certain he was not speeding, he nevertheless had the sinking feeling that he had done SOMETHING wrong.

He stopped and a middle-aged officer walked over to his window. "Sorry to bother you," he said, "but I've been thinking of buying one of these cars. How do you like it?"

Not everyone, of course, is lucky enough to be stopped just for a chat and the general rule of thumb on the road is to regard all roadside cars with some suspicion. Abandoned cars have done more to enforce the speed limit than any combination of signs.

So, as I drove by the car with the Niagara Falls decal in the back window, my first impulse was to stop and shake the driver's hand for sacrificing himself so that I could pass by unworried.

My second impulse was to wave good-naturedly to the constable, letting him know that he wouldn't have to worry about me on his beat.

What I actually did was drive by the scene at the correct speed with my hands gripping the steering wheel at the proper places and my eyes watching the road.

And hoping nothing would fall off the car while I passed them.

A very pleasant time was spent last evening at the Methodist parsonage when a number of the congregation gathered there, in honor of the birthday of Rev. A.E. Runnells. During the evening an address was read and Rev. Runnells was presented with a telephone being placed in the parsonage for his own use.

Mr. Geo. F. Johnstone of Winnipeg, arrived in town today. Mr. and Mrs. John Hummel of New Ontario, are visiting in town. Mrs. L.A. Zufelt and Mrs. C.S. Smith visited Mrs. Howard Barnes at Monkland one day last week. Miss Mary McElroy of Chesterville was renewing acquaintances in Russell Monday evening.

On Tuesday evening, the 19th a very pleasant social was given by the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church in the parsonage. A goodly number were present and a very enjoyable evening was spent by all. A pleasing nature of the evening was the presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Seller of an address, which was read by Mr. Alva Sullivan, accompanied by a roll-top oak writing desk to Mr. Seller, a gold watch and music cabinet to Mrs. Seller and a Morris chair for the parsonage.

The Town Hall was filled with an appreciative audience last Wednesday night to listen to a "United States entertainment" arranged by a committee under the convenorship of Mrs. Jas. Hughes, Mrs. G.C. Lacey and Mrs. M. Durant. The decorations were carried out with flags, bunting and pictures of scenes in the lives of Abraham Lincoln and George Washington.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid of Chesterville United Church was held in the Sunday School hall on Wednesday afternoon. In the evening, a congregational social was held and an interesting programme was given by Mrs. Wright, Mrs. Chamberlain, Miss Willa Ellis, Rev. Mr. Pounder and Brock Harper.

Chesterville Branch of the Women's Institute entertained their husbands and friends at an anniversary dinner in the dining-room of the Trinity United Church, last Thursday night, to mark the fiftieth year of the Institute's existence. About fifty guests enjoyed the bountiful fare provided for their taste and enjoyment.

"Clean Waters" was the title of an excellent film shown at the regular meeting of the Chesterville Rotary club, last Monday night. Dealing with the problems of sewage and waste disposal, the colour pictures were very graphic in their portrayal of the distress and property losses than can come with the indiscriminate dumping of refuse and sewage into our lakes and rivers.

Monday night, Charles McMillan was made an honorary member of the Chesterville Branch of the Canadian Legion in recognition of his efforts on behalf of the Legion during the past year.

Drivers urged to check fan for cats

To the Editor:

As soon as the cold weather arrives, cats become more susceptible to a painful death or injury, being literally ripped to shreds in the fan or fanbelt of a vehicle. During cold weather, cats tend to huddle around the engines of vehicles in a desperate attempt to keep warm. This unfortunate, albeit understandable, habit leads to the deaths or injuries for numerous cats annually in Ontario.

Cats tend to crawl up under the hood of parked vehicles. Once the owner returns to the vehicle and starts the engine the cat is unaware of the imminent danger until it is too late. These unfortunate accidents could be eliminated, or drastically reduced, if the person driving the vehicle banged on the hood of the vehicle or honked the horn prior to starting the engine. If the horn is used to scare the cat, ensure that enough time is given to allow a cat to escape before turning on the engine. Do not make the mistake of beeping the horn and then immediately turning on the engine. Vehicles equipped with space heaters are more likely to attract cats seeking warmth.

Alerting any cats lurking under the hood of your vehicle should be done each time you start the engine. This way you will develop a habit of alerting cats and will be less likely to forget. While cats are less likely to crawl up under the hood of a vehicle in the warmer weather, being curious creatures they have been known to do so. So, before starting your vehicle's engine, alert those felines which might be seeking shelter under the hood of your vehicle.

Sincerely,
N. Glenn Perrett

by Wyn Thompson

April has the reputation for capriciousness because Will Shakespeare said, "The uncertain glory of an April day," and everybody knows that Will was never wrong. But, in my humble opinion, if he had taken up February now, he would have had a mittful of uncertainty to wipe up.

Snow, rain, sleet, thunder, and suddenly, one sodden day when you least expect it, a sky as blue as blue can be, sunshine tender in its caress, and a faint trace of green on the willow.

February is crazy, February is downright nuts, February is a month to reprove and reprimand - but only if you uphold consistency.

Sometimes on holiday in a southern clime when day follows sunny day, I lose patience with ever-the-same weather, and I tune in the Canadian news station and take particular pride in what is happening back home in Eastern Ontario. "Which is probably why I could never spend more than six months out of country," I wryly inform the Farmer.

"People in the sunny south do exchange weather notes," he informed me. "Last fall while I was waiting on an elevator I heard four people doing just that and they disparage the weathermen just the same as we do."

"Well, at least one of the southern weathermen have a sense of humor. I'll never forget hearing one conclude a forecast by saying, "We'll treat you so many ways one of them's bound to suit you." I loved it. It was the icing on the weather cake as far as I was concerned.

So it is with February. It treats you a lovely lot of different ways. If you are a sit-by-the-fire type, who loves to be indoors listening to music and reading, February's your month.

If you like walking in the rain, sloshing over field and dell, examining the earth in all its moods, February was created for you. If you hanker after a little spring skiing, you got it.

Here at Hill House, we have been snowbound twice in twenty years. But in the days of my youth, snowbound was normal. So those last two times were enough to remind me that all the stories and poetry of my youth about snowy isolation was not wasted.

What do you do when you're snowbound? Well, the first thing you do when you realize that there are too many hazardous miles between you and civilization is start cooking.

Naturally, you never prepare with succulent steaks and roasts from the freezer. You usually have a package of hamburger and maybe a tired old soup bone. Never mind, you improvise. Now, here is the ritual I worked out the first time we were snowbound twenty years ago. I followed it the second time too, and now it is part of the survival training refresher course I undergo each year. On my own, of course.

First, you fill the bird feeders. That assures you diversion and elegant, feathered company as you cook. All kinds of birds show up at the feeders on a snowy day.

Then you build a fire in the big fireplace, a fire such as the homes of England crave during their bitter, snowbound days.

Next you check the freezer. That hamburger meat can be stretched into a meat pie. There's always a couple of limp carrots and a desiccated celery stalk in everybody's refrigerator. Add lots of onion, even more potato, a pepper if you have one, enfold everything into your two best deep-apple pie plates on top of your best pie crust, and that tired, listless little package of hamburger will feed a small sized multitude for a couple of meals.

Those two tired old soup bones are a great bonanza. I like vegetable soup, and whatever's in the refrigerator can be picked out and tossed into the pot. It smells heavenly as it simmers on the back of the stove and will be very sustaining for those snowbound days.

If you're short on vegetables, there are dried beans or peas or the pastas.

I love to make bread on a cold, blustery day, and there are so many recipes I have collected over the years that I can have a picnic trying two or three of them. One out of three is my batting average, anyway.

With the fire burning on the hearth, the bread rising, the oven warming and perfuming the kitchen, and some great music on the record player, you beat and stir happily all morning. Even your feathered friends, gorging themselves at the feeder, make you feel as virtuous as the woman in Proverbs who "looketh well to the ways of her household and eateth not the bread of idleness."

But don't get too complacent. As I said at the beginning, February is tricky. You think you are snug and busy and happy in your picture postcard setting. Then the power, becoming more and more subject to sudden death from falling limbs and snow-laden lines, goes off. There you are, your oven cooling, the furnace sliding into a coma, every pot and pan and spoon in the house dirty, and the water's off!

The record player has come to a screeching halt, and even the birds at the feeder have started fighting. There are two things you can do: 1) sit by the fireplace and knit, or 2) fill your hot-water bottle from the diminishing water supply in the kettle and get into bed.

As twilight settles down, you may say with Rupert Brooke:

"The kindliness of sheets, that soon Smooth away trouble; and the rough male kiss of blankets." Or then again, you may not!

And the country silence, with none of the household appliances humming, no television braying, no telephone ringing, is balm to your soul. You listen to a log settle in the fireplace, an icy branch bang the front window, and you push your feet against the still warm hot-water bottle, remember capricious old Feburary, and scream where in heaven's name are the hydro repair crews.

Area farmers oppose plan to reduce EBI debt

WINCHESTER (Staff) - In an effort to decrease a debt that's plagued Eastern Breeders Inc. (EBI) for the second year in a row, the co-op has decided to implement a coupon method of payment for services to replace the month to month payment currently in place.

Although the new system, which will have farmers pay for a coupon booklet worth a set sum of money in advance, isn't supposed to be put in place until June, it's already met with strong opposition from area farmers, as members of EBI from Kemptville learned last week at the annual Dundas County meeting here at the community centre.

Advocates of the new coupons, which only apply to in-cow services, say the payment-in-advance structure will help the unit pay for expenses normally paid for through a bank loan, in order to stay operating at full capacity.

"It costs EBI $25,000 a day to open its doors," Harley Nicholson, EBI's general manager, told farmers. "There are just so many slow payers, who extend their payments for months leaving us with a very small cash flow, that this is the only way we can see to improve the situation," he added.

The new system, already in place and working "fine' for farmers using the services of United Breeders, will mean farmers must have an adequate supply of coupons at the barn when the technician comes to service a cow. "If there's not enough in coupons, and no cash, then it'll be up to the technician whether the cow gets serviced," said Nicholson. "We feel the technician probably knows better than anyone else whether that farmer will pay up if he's short of coupons."

But farmers here were crying foul because they'll have to pay up front for a service they might not need for weeks or even months. "I don't operate my farm that way, why should I have to give you money in advance then?" asked one angry farmer.

"Farmers don't get their money in advance for work that's not done, so why should EBI?" asked Allison Fawcett.

Despite the fact that EBI staff already know now that it'll lose customers over its decision, those managing the finances at Kemptville feel it's the only way to alleviate $30,000 in bad debts the co-op must write off this year.

In 1985 that figure was $22,000 and the projected figures for 1987 are already set at $48,000. "We just shouldn't be operating that close to the zero line," noted Nicholson.

John Dalrymple, the unit's board member for Dundas county, wasn't completely in favor of this kind of payment, but he said he is willing to support it if means getting the unit out of the red and on its feet again.

"I would have liked to see a pre-authorized checkoff payment done at the bank, something else the board discussed," said Dalrymple in an interview.

"We realize it'll be a change and a shock, but after a few months farmers will realize how much money in coupons they'll need each month," explained Keith Drummond, EBI's assistant general manager.

The coupon system comes on the heels of another fee increase the unit plans to put in place this year. First service charges will go up to $15 and repeat fees will go up to $7. The unit is also planning to charge a minimum of $5 for the in-cow price of semen.

According to Nicholson, the unit had to take some drastic measures to offset losses. "There is a loss of betwen $2 and $4 on bulls whose semen is priced below $5," he said.

The coupons will be made available in June, with a three-month adjustment period to follow. As of Sept. 1, farmers will be expected to pay by coupons or cash.

Local students learn area history

MAPLE RIDGE (Staff) - From log homes to the stories of local farms, senior students here and at Nationview Public School delved into history as entrants in the Chesterville and District Historical Society heritage contest.

Local historian and geneaologist Clarence Cross was the force behind the introduction of the contest, which is intended to spur interest in local history.

Stephanie Van Gilst, a Grade 7 student at Maple Ridge, researched the Allison Stock Farm, now the home of Stan and Betty Vanden Bosch.

"I was interested in the farm and Dad said one of the owners went down with the Titanic and I was interested to find out more about it," the 12-year-old said.

Honorable mention went to Grade 8 students Evan Berry, who constructed a log stable, and Mark St. Pierre, who researched the history of the St. Pierre estate.

Grade 7 students Angela Young and Tom Whitteker also won honorable mentions for projects on the Fraser house in Morewood and the Williamsburg home of Walter Whitteker respectively.

Cross and history teacher Mary Steele were impressed with the number and quality of the entries. About 150 students prepared projects as part of the history course and about 40 were sent to the contest's judges (Cross, Glenn MacGregor of Morewood and Phil Groves, a North Dundas District High School teacher).

Jamie Foley, 14, chose his home town of South Mountain as the subject of his entry. Although his was the only submission from Nationview Public School, Cross was pleased with his effort.

"When I heard there was only one entry, I thought that maybe there was no contest, no award. But it turned out to be so good," he said.

Foley found the research revealing of his town's past. "There used to be a lot more stores and a lot of stuff like that than there are today," the Grade 8 student said.

Historical interpreter Tanya Middlebro' told a Grade 9 class at North Dundas District High School last week that the story of war hasn't changed since the eighteenth century: man's understanding of the weapons of war hasn't kept pace with technological development.

Nineteenth century warfare sometimes brutal

MAPLE RIDGE (Staff) - It usually takes a massacre before man's understanding of war catches up with the technology of killing, students at North Dundas District High School were told last week.

"That's really what war is, proving technology with people's bodies," said Tanya Middlebro', a historical interpretor at Prescott's Fort Wellington. Since mid-October, she's brought her presentation on nineteenth century war tactics and technology to more than 4,000 students in five Eastern Ontario counties.

Option ruled out

Today, she said, society has to throw out the idea of having a war because the terrifying technology of nuclear weapons has ruled it out as an option.

She pointed out that men have been slow to learn. During the Crimean War, she said the British led a cavalry charge -- once a strong offensive move -- down a narrow canyon into Russian cannon. Cavalry charges became less frequent after the massacre, she said.

Until the first world war, she said, the theory prevalied that the number of arms didn't matter if there were enough soldiers to "plow through".

The machine gun changed all that. At the Battle of the Somme, she said 60,000 men were killed in a single day. "Just the sheer magnitude had changed by 1914. But they hadn't figured it out yet."

Canada has a unique place in modern weaponry, she said. In 1885, when Indians in Saskatchewan rebelled, she said "a crazy American" sold Ottawa a rifle named for him -- the Gatling gun, the first truly automatic gun.

She described the period between 1871, when the British military began moving out of Canada, to World War I as "the glorious period" in Canadian arms. Those four decades, she said, have been the only time Canada alone was responsible for primitive site for aiming.

But one of its most memorable accomplishments was the infamous Ross Rifle, which jammed often.

Until the 1880s and the invention of smokeless gunpowder repeating rifles, weapons couldn't match the speed and accuracy of the Indians' bows and arrows.

For every 200 balls fired from a flintlock musket used in the 1770s, she said only one wound was caused. "And today, a movie that passes as entertainment shows one person killing 76 people."

On the other hand, she said Indians could fire 12 arrows a minute that could strike a deer in the neck at 300 yards.

In early North American conflicts, she said the crucial question became: whose side are the Indians on?

'Barbarism'

Succeeding the musket was the Snider-Enfield, which could fire in the rain and had a site for aiming.

The bayonet's introduction into fighting also had an impact. "It wasn't really the bayonet that changed the battle. It was fear of the bayonet," she said.

Its triangular blade, which ideally was to be thrust up under the ribs and then twisted, made a hole that was difficult to sew up. Consequently, soldiers bled to death.

"This was thought of as unnecessarily barbaric," she said, and the bayonet was outlawed in the soul-searching that followed the first world war.

The greatest problem faced by eighteenth and nineteenth century military officers, she said, was motivating soldiers to fight for an ideal. In earlier times, she said even the population of the country the armies were ostensibly to protect hated soldiers as they marauded through the countryside.

Food, barracks and improved pay were introduced as governments sought larger and larger armies. By the 1860s, soldiers in Canada were allowed to marry and had use of special quarters.

By 1914, the transformation was complete and soldiers were viewed as the flower of the nation's manhood. Today, she noted, the military is a well-paid career.

Board and secondary teachers reach tentative settlement

CORNWALL (Staff) - A tentative agreement has been reached in negotiations between the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry County Board of Education and its secondary teachers.

The agreement, which is still subject to ratification, was reached during a meeting between the two parties Tues., Feb. 17, said Bob Whittaker, manager of employee relations for the board. The agreement could be ratified within the next two weeks.

The two major issues holding up an agreement were component staffing and workload. Component staffing is a way of deciding upon the required number of staff and their allocation to schools and programs. The board had wanted to use a pupil-teacher ratio instead.

For teacher workload, the board wanted to change the existing maximum teaching assignment guidelines, but the teachers wanted them to remain the same.

Despite a favorable report by fact finder Carol Beatty early this month, negotiations between the board and its elementary have yet to be resolved. Some issues that were in contention have been narrowed down, but "by and large" the same issues are still holding up negotiations, Whittaker said. The two parties had a mediator appointed two weeks ago to help resolve the dispute.

The board and its teachers were in mediation until early Friday morning but made no progress, Whittaker said. The mediator, Dr. Ann Peers of Oakville, has since returned home but is still available should the parties want to get back together, he said. No meeting has yet been scheduled.

Three major issues were holding up the negotiations, Whittaker said early this month: administrative release time for principals, wages and noon-hour supervision. The teachers had been asking for a six per cent wage increase while the board was offering just a 3.6 per cent increase, no increase to allowances and the removal of a special education allowance.

The teachers were also asking that administrative release time for principals be granted according to the number of teachers the principal supervises. The board was willing to grant it on the same sliding scale the teachers wanted, but only for a range two half-days to a 16-day maximum. The teachers had requested five days of release time for four teachers to 20 half-days for 25 or more teachers.

Former ag minister urges protection for unique Canadian marketing boards

SOUTH MOUNTAIN (Staff) - The Man in the Green Stetson came to town last Friday. Former federal agriculture minister Eugene Whelan kept a capacity crowd at the agricultural hall here entertained as he made a fervent pitch to protect Canada's marketing boards.

Our marketing boards are unique because they're Canadian, Whelan told the crowd at the Dundas Federation of Agriculture's annual meeting. "They're also unique because they work."

After 11 years' service as agriculture minister, Whelan's political career came to a close following a decision not to seek the leadership of the Liberal party. "I think the Liberals made the biggest mistake they ever made in 1984 -- in June of 1984, not the fall," he told the audience in a humorous side.

On a serious note, he stressed the need to guard Canadian agricultural institutions from the potential threat of a free trade deal with the United States. "I'm not saying it's perfect," he said. "But when you look at the chaos that's in the European Economic Community and the United States, you can say Thank God for some of the things we have here."

Some people think our marketing boards are bad, but they provide economic stability for those sectors that have them, said Whelan. Chaotic conditions exist for everyone in the world except for those who belong to some kind of organized marketing system.

There are some who feel that farmers should still be subject to "the marketing conditions they had in the days before Christ," said Whelan. "Even in 1987 we think that's the way we should run some of our marketing systems."

It is implanted in people's minds that marketing boards are inefficient, Whelan said. He suggested that anyone who thinks agriculture today is inefficient should work on a dairy farm for a year and find out what it's like to have to be on time every day even when you're sick. "Let them find out they can't phone the cow and say 'I'm not coming in today, take care of yourself' ".

"Let them drive that tractor when the airconditioning's not working," he said. "I did all those things, but there wasn't a colleague of mine in the Cabinet who had."

Free enterprise

Even some of the best-educated people in our society, Whelan suggested, are ignorant enough about farming to believe it is possible for surplus food produced in Canada to be shipped to the Third World.

Whelan argued that anyone who thinks marketing boards interfere with free enterprise should look at the example of the United States. The U.S. is supposed to be "the bulwark of free enterprise", but the government there has intervened more heavily in the marketplace than anywhere else.

Canada is the Americans' largest customer, but they don't seem to show much gratitude for that, Whelan noted. Referring to recent American tariffs on pork and shakes and shingles, he added, "if I had a big customer, I wouldn't crack him across the side of the head and say, 'get in line, boy.' "

We should be wary of allowing Americans to dictate the management of our agricultural economy, Whelan concluded, in light of the fact that U.S. president Ronald Reagan has already run up more debt than all the presidents who preceded him combined.

Whelan said he knows free trade negotiators Simón Reisman and Clayton Yeutter from past experience. "I know what their philosophies are, and unless they've changed, we're going to be in trouble," he added.

Iroquois resident gives WDMH Auxiliary $1,000

WINCHESTER (Special) - The February meeting of the Winchester District Memorial Hospital Auxiliary took place on Feb. 12 with 20 members present.

The Morrisburg Unit presented a cheque for $1,000 to the treasurer, Lee Wenz, donated by an Iroquois resident. Unit director for Morrisburg, Rita Bray, announced that her unit will be hosting a rummage sale on May 22 and a luncheon on May 28.

Winchester unit director Violet Reaney announced that the unit's annual spring fashion show will be held May 7. Gift Shoppe chairman Betty Barton turned over a $3,000 cheque.

This committee expressed a need for homemade mitts and special socks.

Volunteers, both seniors and teens, donated a total of 671 hours of free time to the hospital. The Sunshine Circle is very active on First East ward, making the patients' stay in hospital more pleasant. A Valentines party provided some relief from the blah winter months. Tuesdays and Fridays are music days on this ward and the music has proved to be a very successful means of communication for patient and volunteers.

While many talented residents have given freely of their time, many more are needed, as are music books and song sheets. If you possess musical talent and have spare time and wish to make life happier for the confined to hospital, please contact - Mrs. Ethelywn Carkner at 774-2618. A blood donor clinic is slated for Feb. 25 at the hospital.

The Dessert and Games party will be held April 7.

In 1988, Winchester will celebrate a centennial year and the auxiliary will mark a 40-year milestone as part of the celebration. The auxiliary will once again present Brides of a Century, a fashion show featuring bridal gowns from yesterday. The show will be presented in the summer of 1988 and if you have in your possession an heirloom wedding gown and wish to have it shown, please contact Arlene Davidson at 774-2537.

Some members expressed interest in attending the regional conference in Pembroke on April 23.

Flyers clip Eagles' wings to get ready for the playoffs

CHESTERVILLE (Staff) - The Chesterville Jr. C Flyers said bon voyage to a frustrating regular season Sunday, launching their third consecutive trip to the league championship with a convincing 5-1 victory over top-ranked St. Isidore.

The victory, which came on the heels of a disappointing 3-2 loss to the North Stormont 86s last Thursday, lifted the Flyers record to 14-14-4, fourth in the six-team league.

In 35 games last season, the Flyers were regular season champions with a record of 22-10-4.

Although the victory against the Eagles gave the Flyers a much-needed shot of confidence, it did not come without a price. The team lost Ken Byers with a dislocated shoulder on what team president Tom Van Dellen called a "questionable check".

"We've been having tough luck the last 10 games," admitted Flyers coach Mike Armstrong. "We've been playing up and down. It was good to really put it together against St. Isidore."

Armstrong, who said at the beginning of the season that this year's Flyers were as good as last year's championship team, hasn't changed his tune despite the club's drop to fourth place.

"We have kids in Grade 13 and college this year and it makes it tough to get a full team out every night," he said. "Last year's team was super but when we have everyone out I think this year's team is pretty close."

As for the Embrun 72s, who the Flyers will meet in a best-of-five playoff series beginning in Embrun this Friday night, Armstrong said the key will be diffusing the 72s explosive offense.

"If we can keep them under four goals we have a chance at beating them," he said. "If we get into shootout we haven't got a chance."

The Flyers and the 72s split their six games during the regular season. Embrun outscoring Chesterville 27-26.

But Embrun won the last three games of the series convincingly, shutting out the Flyers once and outscoring the team 14-8.

Since joining the league in the 1977-78 season, the 72s have won the playoff championship four times.

Embrun also carries the advantage in firepower, led by the league's top two scorers Alain Lapointe (45 goals, 25 assists) and Ivan Clement (29, 34).

Clement was chosen the league's player of the month for February.

The Flyers' strong point is defence which ranked second in the league for fewest goals. The team also has top 10 scorers Mary Guy and Jerrold Boulanger to add scoring punch.

The North Stormont 86s, who finished in fifth place after a strong start to the second half, will have to figure out how to beat Casselman-Cambridge on the Stars' home ice. In six games this season, the teams split evenly with home ice advantage.

The 86s won their last game against the Stars 4-3.

The series started last night in Casselman. A score was not available at press time.

In the third playoff series, Russell is against St. Isidore.

St. Isidore, which won the regular season by eight points over the Stars, will receive the season trophy at the league's first annual banquet in St. Isidore

In the 30 and over final, Yogi's Bears, a Finch area team, held Leo's Return of the Natives to a third perioid goal to win 5-1.

Leonard O'Donohue scored twice for Berwick and Harold Dingwall, named the team's most valuable player had the single.

St. Albert had led 3-1 after the first period before Berwick came back to tie the game in the third.

February Fantasy hit by blahs

CHESTERVILLE (Staff) - Chesterville's February Fantasy may have been better termed a February Flop after the small turnout it received Sunday.

Only 25 people turned up at the village fairgrounds for what was supposed to be a day filled with fun in the snow. But those who did show up enjoyed themselves, said Chesterville recreation director Tom Lee.

It was the first year for such an event, which was to include snow golf, earth ball and chili dinners. The snow golf started at 12 noon as scheduled, but the earth ball, scheduled for three games later in the afternoon, never arrived.

"I guess we were disappointed in the turnout," Lee said, but added "everyone that did it (snow golf) had a lot of fun".

Lee said he'd thought of the events for the winter carnival but didn't have time to plan them. Had the events been held during the carnival there might have been a larger turnout, he said.

"It was a beautiful day," Lee said, adding it was maybe too beautiful to be tied up in an organized event. The nice weather also brought a large number of skaters out on the river, he noted, and that may have drawn from Sunday's event also.

Valerie McPhail demonstrates the proper stroke as she goes for par during the snow golf event held at the Chesterville fairgrounds Sunday. Although the weather was almost warm enough to hit the course greens, only about 25 people turned up for the winter version of the sport which was part of the village's February Fantasy day. Todd Marcellus invited to international tournament

CHESTERVILLE (Staff) - A former Chesterville minor hockey league player has been chosen to face-off against the world's best Pee-Wees.

Todd Marcellus, 14, a centre with the Cornwall Major Pee-Wee AA, was chosen with the team to participate in the 28th Annual International Pee-Wee Tournament in Quebec City this month.

The tournament, one of the biggest of its kind, has drawn 100 teams from around the world.

Coached by former NHL referee and Cornwall Royals' coach Bob Kilger, Cornwall won its opening round 4-3 against Boston Friday night.

The team continues in the elimination competition this Thursday against St. Foy.

Todd's father, Dale Marcellus, said the Quebec City tournament is great experience for his son.

"I'm sure happy for him," he said. "It's a once in a lifetime experience."

Cornwall is currently in fourth place in the nine-team Ottawa Valley League.

Among the teams competing in the international tournament, which ends next Sunday, are two from France and three from Switzerland.

Immersion skiing

Just back from some winter recreation at Le Centre Touristique de la Petite-Rouge, at St. Emile de Suffolk, Que., some students from Chesterville Public School strapped on some skis Friday for a little more fun in the snow. Above, Mahina Arnold, foreground right, helps fellow Grade 6 student Kristie Lynch put on a pair of skis. It was the second year the school participated in the "Ecole de Neige" which combines outdoor fun with learning the French language.

Flyers trounced 9-2

CHESTERVILLE (Staff) - The Chesterville-Winchester Midget A Flyers were pounded 9-2 by South Grenville here last Thursday in a game that saw the team take a dozen penalties.

The Flyers head into the final week of the regular season in third place behind Brockville and Prescott.

The Flyers close their season March 2 against top-ranked Brockville, a team they handily defeated 8-0 in Chesterville Feb. 12.

A best-of-three semi-final follows with the Flyers playing Prescott.

The Flyers fell behind early against South Grenville, trailing 4-0 after the first period.

It was 7-0 before Jeff Holmes put the Flyers on the board at 4:27 of the second period, scoring on a play set up by Raymond Sherrer and Jason Smith.

South Grenville added two more before the Flyers scored again. Chris Williams getting the goal late in the game from Ross Giles and Chris Rodney.

Against Kemptville, Rodney Casselman and Danny Dubois each had a pair of goals. Singles went to Craig Robinson, John Mackler, Ross Giles and Derek Hyndman.

Ben Henry had the win in net.

Bantam Hawks defeat Potsdam

WINCHESTER (Staff) - The Winchester-Chesterville Bantam A Hawks held Potsdam to a pair of third period goals to win the exhibition game 6-2.

After a scoreless first period, Chris Williams put the Hawks on the board at 11:20 of the second with a goal assisted by David Harper.

Chris Van Bridger made it 2-0 at 8:35, again from Harper, and Harper himself made it 3-0 a minute later.

The Hawks struck again early in the third, Chris Williams and Tim Holmes giving the team a commanding 5-0 lead.

Potsdam ruined Craig Lyon's shutout bid with a pair of unassisted goals midway through the period.

Powerplay goals tie Atoms 2-2

WINCHESTER (Staff) - The Winchester Atom B Hawks scored a powerplay goal with two minutes left to play in the game to tie Chesterville 2-2 in a game played here Feb. 12.

Chesterville's David Empey opened the scoring with the only goal of the first period on a play assisted by Craig Beckstead.

Shawn Steinburg made it 2-0 midway through the second, from Jason Desormeaux and Rodney Merkley, before Winchester got on the board at 1:17 on Fabian Adams' unassisted goal.

Adams set up Philip Brisebois' tying goal at 2:00.

Robbie Dowell was in net for Chesterville and Clint Henge tended net for Winchester.
