NEWSBRIEFS

OPP investigate Stormont B&Es

CRYSLER — Long Sault OPP are investigating a series of Stormont County thefts and attempted thefts that occurred last weekend. Const. Bernie Gadbois said a service station and attached gas station in Crysler were broken into between 9:30 p.m. April 30 and 6:30 a.m. the next day. Stolen were a small sum of money, about $500 worth of cigarettes and some personal cheques, which were later recovered in a ditch south of Berwick. A break-in at the Finch Co-op was foiled at 2 a.m. May 1 when an alarm was activated as a door was being forced open. The culprits left empty-handed, Gadbois said. And a break-in at the Monkland Mini-Mart at 1 a.m., May 2 was also foiled by an alarm. Gadbois said the phone lines and security alarm were disabled by the would-be thieves, but the motion detector was activated once inside. The culprits fled the scene before the owner and police arrived.

Composters ready

CHESTERVILLE — Village clerk Howard Smith would like to remind those who have purchased composters through the village that the units should be picked up Saturday May 8 at the village's public works building on Industrial Drive between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. Tickets must be presented upon receipt.

Duck race, egg hunt on for Saturday

CHESTERVILLE — It looks as if warm weather is finally here to stay, and so is a date for the Rotary Club's annual duck race and egg hunt. After being postponed several times, the events will take place this Saturday, May 8. Children under 12 can search for tokens in the Chesterville Park starting at 12:30 p.m. and trade them in for Easter eggs. There is no charge. The duck race begins at 2 p.m.

Scouts sprint toward fund-raising goal

CHESTERVILLE — Chesterville Scouts planning to attend a Canadian Jamboree in Alberta in July are still trying to raise the $1,200 each it will take to get them there. The group is holding a yard and bake sale at the Nelson LaPrade Centre on May 15 from 9 a.m. to noon. Anyone who wants to contribute to the sale can donate items on May 14 from 7 to 9 p.m. or May 15 from 8 to 9 a.m. Call Elva at 448-2836 for details. The Scouts are also still looking for recipes for a cookbook. Traditional recipes, as well as campfire and microwave cooking tips and household hints are welcome. Send submissions to Brenda Dillabough, RR 3 Chesterville, K0C 1H0.

Don't give up, White tells union

Elizabeth Moreau

CHESTERVILLE — Locked-out workers at Nestle Canada should continue to reject the continental work week proposed by the company, Canadian Labor Congress president Bob White told workers Tuesday.

About 75 people wearing "Nestle Lockout '93" baseball caps gathered in front of the Chesterville factory to listen to the former head of the Canadian Auto Workers union, who was joined by Ottawa Labor Council president Mohamad Alsadi and Council of Canadians chairwoman Maude Barlow.

"They're going to come to the table and settle this agreement. Believe me, I know Nestle," White said, adding he is convinced the company will give up its demand to end premium pay for weekend work.

He said labor groups and unions across the country are looking at the Chesterville dispute as an example of workers struggling to keep long-held benefits.

"Don't give up. The issue today that you're facing is one that workers across the country are facing," he said.

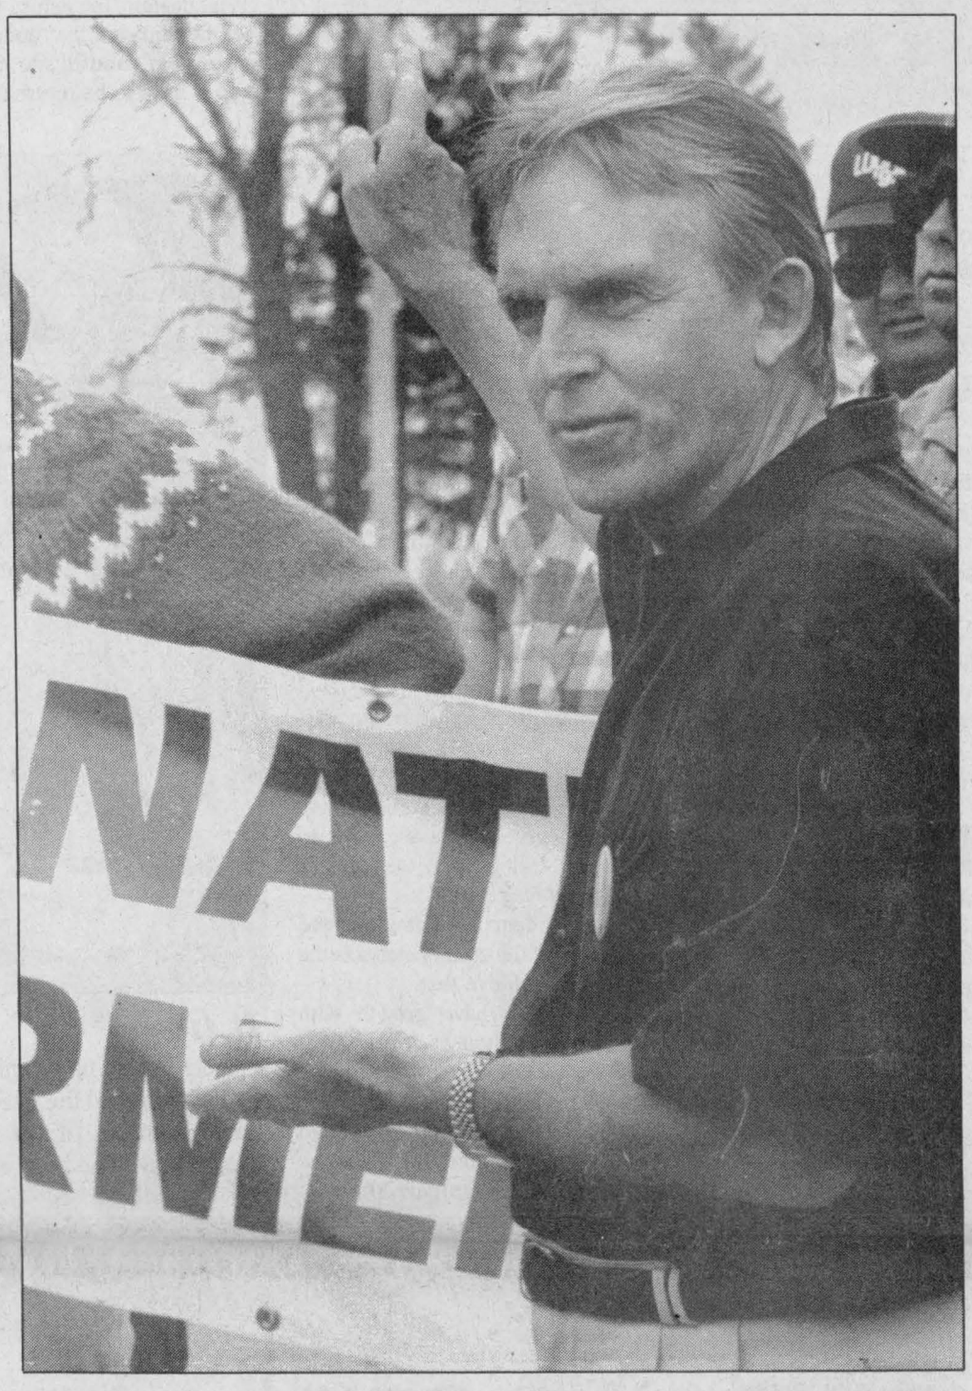
The workers, who have been locked out since March 27, want to keep overtime pay rates for weekend work. Nestle says it can't keep paying time and a half on Saturday and double time on Sunday and remain competitive with its other plants in North America.

Both White and Barlow blamed the dispute on the North American Free Trade Agreement.

"The whole free trade agenda is putting pressure on workers to give up," White said.

The union's bargaining unit is meeting with Nestle management this morning (Wednesday) for further discussions. Two attempts at mediation, called by the Ontario Ministry of Labor last month, failed to produce a breakthrough. The latest meeting was agreed to by the two sides.

Nestle vice-president Marilyn Knox said the company hopes the meeting will bring the two sides closer to an agreement. About Tuesday's rally, she said the company continues to be concerned about "third-party involvement" in the dispute.



Pointing to the Nestle factory, Canadian Labor Congress president Bob White assures workers the company will give up its demand for a continental work week.

Second time lucky for township taxpayers

Greg Hewitt
Record Staff

MAPLE RIDGE — It took them two tries, but Winchester Township council approved a municipal budget Monday calling for a zero-per-cent tax increase.

Council had originally passed a budget April 19 that called for a two-per-cent hike, but that motion was later rescinded after Councillor Gord Johnson said he felt the $8,000 amount that would offset the two-per-cent increase could be found.

Council agreed and went back to the drawing board. They decided Monday to take the $8,000 out of the roads budget until a proposal to reduce the amount the township pays in tipping fees is approved by the township's landfill site partners, Chesterville and Winchester.

The $8,000 will be returned to the roads budget if the proposal is supported by Chesterville and Winchester.

Cousineau said council had to take the amount out of the roads budget for now because it could not pass a budget based on a proposal that has not yet been approved by the landfill partners.

"We can't depend on this. Until (Chesterville and Winchester) agree, we're out in the cold," he said.

The township will collect just over $410,000 from taxpayers for municipal purposes, about the same as last year. A $43,000 surplus was used to lower the levy.

Township taxpayers will contribute $343,000 to the United Counties, and the education levy has not been set by the school boards, which collected $1.6 million from township taxpayers last year.

Cousineau described the budget as a "no frills budget," noting that department budgets did not increase, and that roads department has been asked to minimize hiring of part-time help, and the recent computerization of the township offices should reduce the need for part-time office help.

He said that year-end tax records, which showed some businesses and residents had trouble paying their taxes last year, show the necessity of a zero-per-cent increase.

"With so many people out of work, these are tough times," he said. "People are having trouble making ends meet."

Johnson described the tipping fee reduction to the municipality to offset a budget increase as "taking some of the money collected through that process and giving back to the ratepayers."

"I think if there's ever a time we need to do it, it's now."

But during the meeting, Councillor Jack Durant expressed concern that the proposal might necessitate an increase in the future.

"1994 is only eight months away," he said. "I don't have a good feeling about borrowing from the future."

Not in their backyards

Village residents say there are other ways to foster growth

Elizabeth Moreau
Record Staff

When residents are in favor of development in the community as long as it's done far away from their own homes, it's often referred to as the NIMBY syndrome — Not In My Backyard. But when a group of Chesterville residents say they don't want apartments in their backyards, they mean it literally.

Peter Van Kessel wants to develop a piece of land he owns, and he wants to have the option of building row housing or apartments. But to do that, the five-acre parcel has to be rezoned from its current status of R1, to R2 residential.

The land is bordered by Main, Mary, College and South streets. And it's smack in the middle of the 29 homes that line those streets — literally in the residents' backyards, many of which don't have fences.

About 25 of those residents packed Chesterville's council chambers last Wednesday, demanding that council reverse its decision to approve the zoning change request. All of the residents signed a petition opposing the change, which would allow two-storey buildings up to 35 feet high, or apartments up to 40 feet.

"You're trying to put high-rise places in people's backyards," said Main Street resident Grace Macaulay. "It's one piece of land in the middle of everybody else's."

Harold Edwards, chairman of the group, which calls itself the Concerned Citizens Committee, outlined the residents' reasons for opposing the rezoning. He said multiple-unit dwellings often lower the value of neighboring homes and increase traffic flow in an area.

The residents also worry about living near buildings which are rented rather than owned. They contend that tenants tend to have less respect for other people's property than homeowners, and that longtime homeowners make each other feel more secure in emergency situations.

"I think you are aware that we're very serious about this," Edwards told council.

Van Kessel, who is also a Chesterville councillor, has said that the land could be used to build housing for seniors, something Reeve Jim Cook says is desperately needed in the village.

Cook cited 1991 census figures which show that the 405 single residents in Chesterville should represent 52.6 per cent of housing

Board will improve efficiency of landfill site management

Greg Hewitt
Record Staff

A proposal to streamline management of the Boyne Road landfill site is being considered by the dump's three municipal partners.

Landfill representatives from Chesterville, Winchester and Winchester Township have proposed a board of management for the site, which would have the authority to make decisions about landfill operation.

Resolutions to support the change have already been passed by the three councils.

Winchester Township councillor Jack Durant said that under the current system, landfill site recommendations have to be returned from the committee to the three councils, which can take up to two months to collectively process the decision.

And the three councils often have to meet together to discuss landfill matters.

A board of management would meet regularly and consist of two members from each of the three councils. The two members would have one vote between them, and in case of a difference of opinion would return to their respective council for direction.

Board members would still discuss plans with their respective councils and major decisions involving budgets and large expenses would still be made by the councils.

And Durant said the proposed system would also save ratepayer's money, as the costs of the meeting would be drawn from the landfill's operation rather than from the municipalities.

Landfill manager Dave Sloane says a board of management will make for more efficient management of the site because he will answer to three people instead of 15.

"If I have a problem I can phone one person and get an answer. I'm very much in favor of it," he said.

Chesterville Reeve Jim Cook described the proposal to give board of management status to the landfill committee as "an idea whose time has come."

And Cook said the biggest advantage to the plan is that it will give Sloane a "very clear line as to who he reports to."

Rezoning on hold for now, Cook tells residents in the village. Instead, housing for the village's 365 families (two or more people) makes up 78.8 per cent of homes, while single people make up only 21.2 per cent of existing housing.

"We decided this would be a good opportunity to put in the type of housing needed," Cook said.

The amended zoning bylaw has not yet been proclaimed, and will not take effect until then. Cook said the village's planners are proposing some alternatives, in conjunction with ongoing work on Chesterville's official plan. He added he hopes the residents and Van Kessel can come to some kind of agreement.

Council approved the zoning change 3-1 in March. Van Kessel declared a conflict of interest and did not vote.

Councillor Roger Cole, who cast the dissenting vote, said last week he is still opposed to the change.

"The number of concerned ratepayers and their objections should be listened to more strongly by council," he said.

Cole said the need for affordable housing could be achieved by creating smaller lot sizes rather than multiple-unit dwellings. And he said both Van Kessel and the surrounding residents bought their properties knowing Van Kessel's land was zoned as R1.

"That was my position three weeks ago, that still is my position, and that will remain my position," Cole said, eliciting applause from the residents.

The one-hour discussion prompted several heated exchanges between residents and council members. Even Van Kessel, who was not to take part in the discussion, grew frustrated as the two sides could not seem to agree.

"The offer is still open," he told the group. "If you would like to buy that piece of property, then you could do whatever you want with it."

Cook declared Van Kessel out of order.

Councillor Martin Derks said growth in the village should be encouraged, not thwarted.

"Will your property values go up if all developers walk away from Chesterville?" he asked. "We need developers to continue some growth in the village. Just as we have to please you (ratepayers) we have to please the developers."

But the residents are not convinced that changing the zoning status is the only way to achieve that.

"You can still have growth with single-dwelling houses," said College Street resident Ruby Miltimore. "If you put up apartment buildings the value of our properties will go down....Are you going to lower the assessment on our property?"

Don't expect more money in '93, council tells village supervisors

Elizabeth Moreau
Record Staff

CHESTERVILLE — Municipal department heads have been told not to expect any more money for their budgets this year. And until the province tells the village exactly how much grant money it will get in 1993, Reeve Jim Cook says it is anyone's guess how much Chesterville may have to cut.

Supervisors of public works, recreation, administration and the fire department were to present draft budgets at last Wednesday's council meeting.

But they were told to go back to the drawing board and come up with figures that are not one cent more than their 1992 budgets.

"Anyone who sits at the end of this table with an increase in his budget is probably dreaming in Technicolor," said Cook.

Two weeks ago the Ontario government announced $4 billion worth of spending cuts. And more could come when the province brings down its budget sometime this month.

But how much that will mean for Chesterville is still unclear. Indications are that Ontario municipalities could lose up to 11.4 per cent of their grants.

Last year $277,000 of the village's $2.7-million budget came from provincial grants. Village taxpayers kicked in $1.5 million — $444,000 for Chesterville, $189,000 for the United Counties and $882,000 for the two school boards.

"We'll probably drag our feet on passing the budget until (Ontario Treasurer Floyd) Laughren brings down a budget," said Cook in an interview.

Councillor Roger Cole pointed out that in recent months, council has urged the school boards and the United Counties to pass budgets with no increase.

"It would be very foolish of us to have gone on record as saying that and not (do it) within the village," he said.

In 1992, the total budget (operating and capital) for recreation was $287,000, general government was $160,000, transportation services (including street maintenance, public works and construction) was $292,000, and $102,000 was budgeted for the fire department, including $50,000 set aside in a reserve fund to purchase a new pumper truck.

Workshops to help women guard against sexual assault

Elizabeth Moreau
Record Staff

Giving women the tools to protect themselves against violence will be the goal of a month-long campaign to raise awareness about sexual assault.

May is the fifth annual Sexual Assault Prevention Month in Ontario, and the Sexual Assault Support Services for women in SD&G and Akwesasne is holding a series of four workshops, designed to help women learn how to make themselves safer both in public and in their personal relationships.

The first, held Tuesday and conducted by Chris Hunter of the Ottawa-Carleton Women's Action Centre Against Violence, offered suggestions on how to make a community safer.

On May 11 Kathryn Kelly, a professor and researcher at Carleton University, will discuss the results of a national survey on dating violence.

Reducing the risks of sexual assault will be the subject of the third workshop on May 17, led by Judie McSkimmings, chairwoman of the Women's Action Centre Against Violence.

A similar presentation in French, by Rozanne Lepine of the University of Ottawa, will be held the same evening.

All the workshops are free and take place at General Vanier Secondary School, 1500 Cumberland St., Cornwall, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Funding for child care is available on request. For more information, call Carolyn Seabrook at 1-800-461-8192 or 774-4011.

Also as part of Sexual Assault Prevention Month, the Ontario Women's Directorate is launching a mass-media campaign aimed at correcting myths about sexual assault.

The campaign includes radio and television ads, in English and French, and information brochures, posters and buttons. The directorate has also given $2,000 to 141 organizations for local public education projects.

This week the provincial group released the results of a survey indicating that many Ontarians believe women are responsible for provoking sexual assault.

Forty-nine per cent of people surveyed said women provoke sexual assault by the way they dress. Sixty-six per cent believe alcohol and drugs are major causes of sexual assault. The directorate says sexual assault is caused by men who "ignore a woman's right to deny consent."

Behind the veil of mental illness

Chances are that you or someone you know has suffered a mental illness. In fact, the chances are pretty good.

One in three Canadians will suffer temporary emotional problems at some time in their lives — one in six seriously enough to require professional care. One in eight Canadians — 12.5 per cent — can expect to be hospitalized at least once for a mental illness.

The problems can range from temporary emotional upsets like anxiety related to a particular situation, stress, or depression over the loss of a loved one to major psychiatric disorders like schizophrenia or manic depression.

A 1991 survey by the District Health Council of Eastern Ontario said that 8,175 adults in SD&G can be expected to have a mental health problem at any given time.

But despite the prevalence of mental illness, it is still largely misconceived by much of the Canadian population. Misunderstanding can lead to discrimination, which only compounds problems for people whose illnesses often prevent them from working.

People with schizophrenia, for example, are much more likely to be poor. After a hospital stay, people with mental illnesses sometimes end up in sub-standard housing because their income is low, and some end up on the street. Estimates of the homeless population in U.S and Canadian cities with mental health problems range from 25 to 90 per cent.

But the illnesses are not caused by poverty, and more than a disease like schizophrenia is caused by a poor upbringing or something the victim did wrong.

Because mental illness is often invisible, unlike physical disabilities, it is sometimes thought that victims can "snap out of it" or have control over the illness. Some temporary illnesses like depression caused by a specific situation can be "cured" by life changes. Other more chronic illnesses can be treated, and medication can help control the disabling symptoms to allow sufferers to cope with everyday life.

May 3 to 9 is Mental Health Week in Canada, and a good time to reflect on why discrimination and misconceptions still exist. The more mental illness is misunderstood, the more removed its victims become from mainstream society. And the more difficult it is to get back.

OFF THE RECORD

The shortstop who couldn't catch a cold

By Robin Morris
Editor, Baseball This Week

I regret to inform you, gentle reader, that I may have caused irreparable harm to the athletic development of a whole team of six-year-old softball players Sunday afternoon.

One of those things expected of a parent of the male persuasion is that he will glory not only in athletic pursuits, but in imparting his sporting knowledge and experience to his offspring.

I may as well tell the young lads about the time I joined the Manhattan Project, split the atom and brought a quick end to WWII. I think they would prefer to see their father as "Death the Destroyer, the Shaker of Worlds" than as the kid with washboard ribs and Popsicle-stick forearms who could lose grounders in the sun and who would have booted the ball if only he could have caught up to it.

You've seen them in every schoolyard as pick-up teams are chosen by the biggest guys in the class from among a scraggly crew lined up against the fence. Do you have any idea of the agony of the littlest guy, the one with absolutely no coordination, the one with the size eight feet stuck on the ends of size four legs, as the numbers alongside him dwindle until only he is left? And the captains are arguing not over who is going to get him, but who has to take him?

"I'll take the one in the black and white outfit."

"You can't. That's Mel Parrott's dog."

"Okay, okay. I'll take the other one. Morris, you take deep right, across the street on the Dubrules' front lawn in case one rolls across the road."

"Great," I think. "What happens if one does roll across the road? I'll have to run a hundred yards before I can get it to the pitcher. I think I hear my mother calling me."

"See ya later, guys!"

"Morris's mother sending secret coded messages again?" one captain asks the other as I disappear down West Street in a flap of U.S. Keds. (Remember those? If you want lots of jumping power, Get Keds, kids, Keds. It was a lie, every bit as big as getting 10-year-old white kids to force their parents to lay down $125 for a pair of Nike Airs on the false presumption that it will let you play b-ball like Michael.)

It's worse — although I can only surmise — that being the last pick in the NHL draft. Even if those guys don't make it to The Show, their athletic ability at least got them that far. And they didn't spend an entire childhood learning the difference between a Frost fence and page wire as they stood waiting to be assigned to another afternoon of ignominy, released only by sudden maternal telepathic messages.

You'd think I would have learned my lesson, right?

Oh, no, not me. I had to be one of the guys and sign up for Grasshopper League Baseball back in the days when they played down on the Fort Field, where Sara and Shorty and the boys could stand at the corner of King and Vankoughnet and put one over the walls.

I couldn't even see that far.

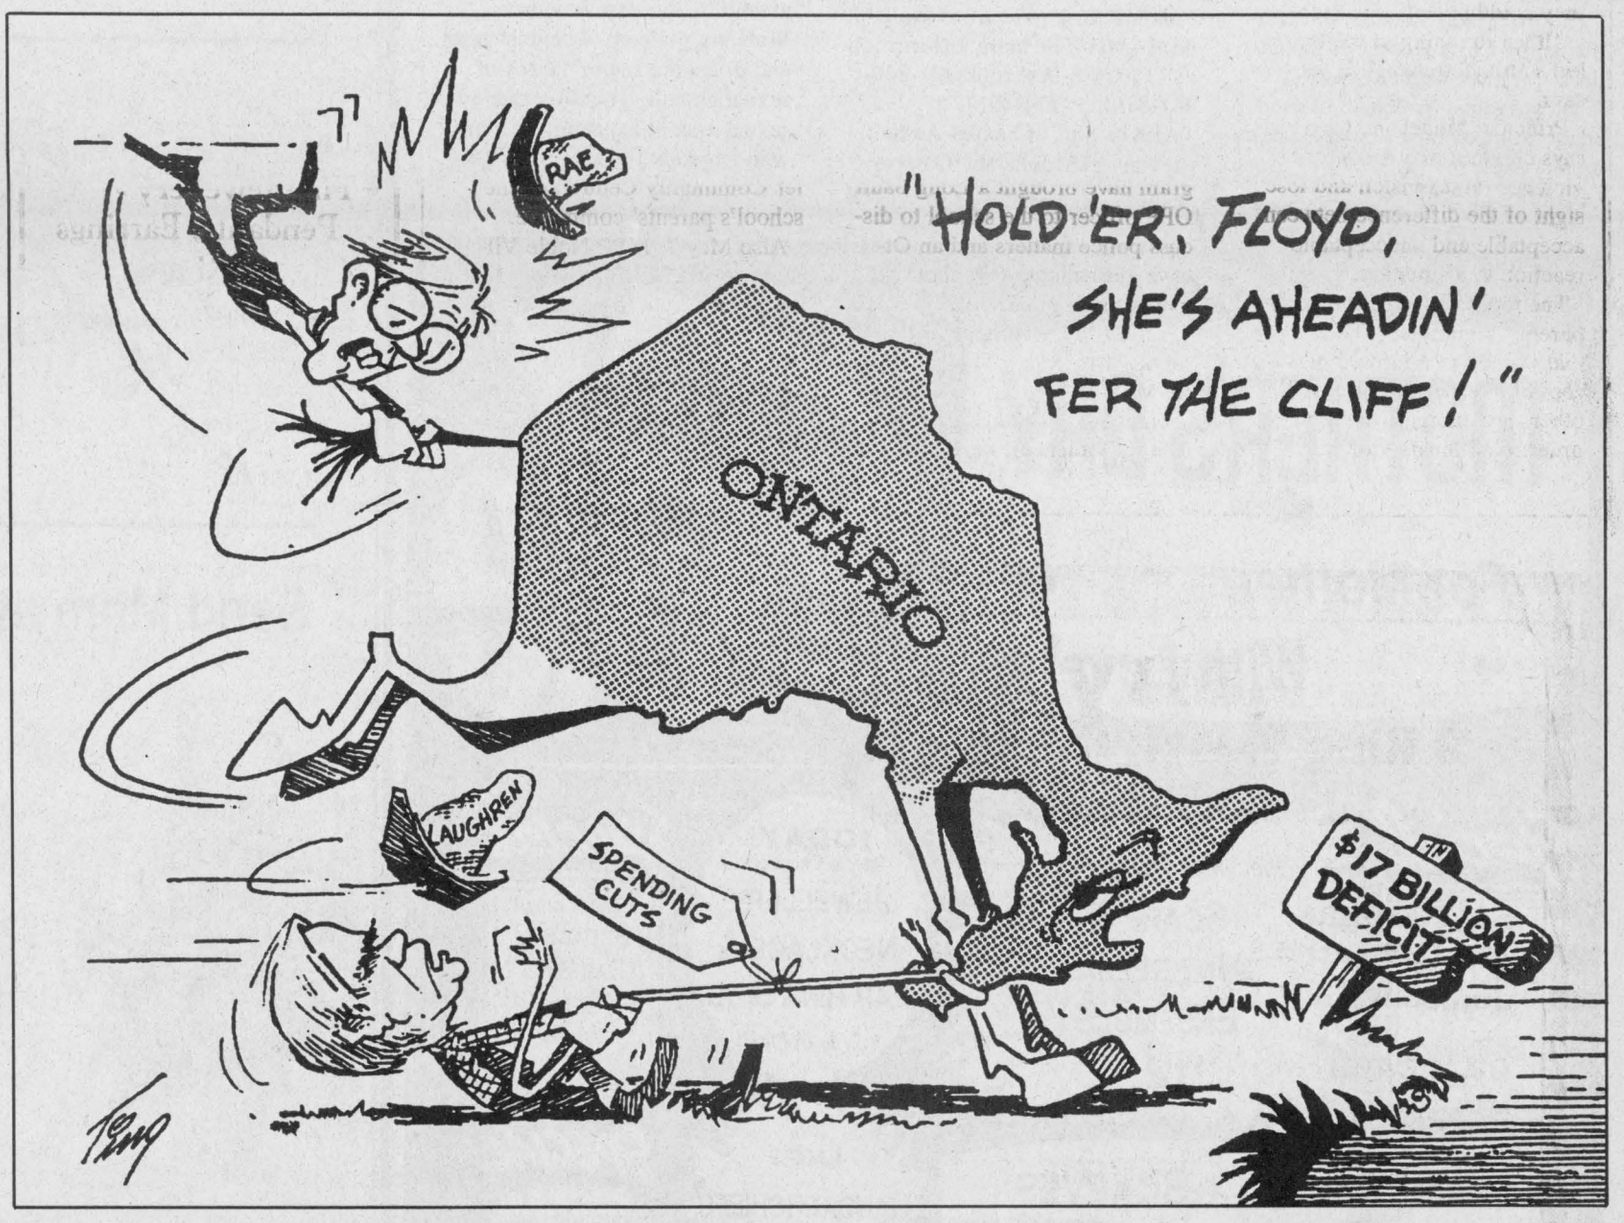
But I signed up. For three years running. And always as shortstop, without the foggiest idea of what a shortstop was, where he stood or what was expected of him once he stood where he was supposed to be standing.

But it didn't make any difference because for two and a half years I never showed up for a game. Nary a one. I'd gone through endless Central Public School team drafts and wasn't about to take any chances by being made to stand against another fence with every other 10-year-old in town as a whole league of teams chose players. Instead of being last among 18 (Sorry, 19. I forgot about Mel Parrott's dog.) I stood a better than even chance of being last out of about 2,500. Better to get your name on a roster and not bother showing up. Anyway, Walt Disney was on at 7 on Friday nights. And there was always Cubs, even if I couldn't tell a reef knot from a round-turn and two half-hitches. (How did that go again? The snake comes out of the hole and goes around the tree? Or does the snake comes out of the hole and you beat it to death with a pointy stick?)

So against my better judgement, one warm Friday night about 33 years ago I allowed myself to be talked into going down to the Fort Field, finally to take up my self-appointed position at short and do whatever it is that shortstops do when they're shortstopping.

The scent of magnolias hung heavily in the air, the folks down in Dusky Town were singing a spiritual as we, with our gloves hung on our bats, and our bats slung over our shoulders, resembling tiny little soldiers going off to fight the good fight against the Abolitionists from up north — sorry, wrong story.

I'll see if I can get back on track for next week.



THE FARMER'S WIFE

By Wyn Thompson

I stood in the downtown section of a nearby city today. People-watching. There were all kinds that passed me by...poor, rich, homely, beautiful, sad, sick, sunburned (in spite of all the cautionary advice), happy, hardy, cheap, silly, old, young, lame, blind.

Nevertheless, I thought, we are the best there is in this world. We are all there is: everything goes back to us, we strange, moving people; everything comes out of us; we must make our world out of this teeming mass. Our government must be fashioned out of us. Revolt, as we may, there is no other or better material.

And when all is said and done, how extraordinarily interesting we are! What possibilities are tied up in us, warts and all. Every last soul of us has a story in him - perhaps even a poem.

But, we are a challenge at the moment as we seek to do something about what one person chose to acknowledge as "being the worst of times I've seen in many a decade."

Even in this time when the flowers are beginning to bloom, I have moments, in these days of national and provincial gloom, financial recession, "hard times," when I feel I must be sad, or at least cynical or skeptical - but on such a spring day I find it hard.

I guess I am like the lad in the life of Samuel Johnson, bemoaning the fact that he could not be a philosopher, because "cheerfulness was always breaking through." There is so much wrong that one would be an utter fool not to acknowledge it, but when compared to other parts of the world, there is not much wrong in our valley.

Alighting from the car when I arrived home, I saw under a cedar tree in a damp section of my lawn, a little clump of violets flowering their hearts out. Some floral interpreters give to the violet the meaning of faithfulness; some give to it a meaning of modesty. The meaning is your choice.

Weren't violets just made for picking? I think so, or else why would they appear in such abundance in the spring. If I were to name the one flower of my childhood that I liked the best, it would be the violet, which I gathered in fragrant bouquets along the concession roads and plunked into a bucket of water in which to keep them fresh until I got home.

Violets are at home in damp woods, meadows and gardens of Eastern Ontario. There are many kinds and many colors, and a few little clumps set under trees and in shady corners will brighten your spring mornings.

So far as I know there is no reason for you not to take your trusty trowel and 'hi' off to the nearest bush and get yourself a clump of these most rewarding of all spring flowers. My favorite ones are the little plants covered with blue flowers.

Don't forget this Sunday is Mother's Day. There are good mothers, bad mothers, mediocre mothers, and so on, and surely I must come somewhere in between there!

There are some pretty awful cliches about Mothers, her virtue, her purity, her unselfishness, and her absolute devotion. There are some vicious indictments, as well. In spite of all this, children, bless them all, usually try to forgive and to do the best they can to understand and to love.

"Why not?" a friend of mine asks each year. "You need your mother, even if she is a poor thing." My sons, very early, caught on to this saying and through the years have had a field day with it.

So Mother's Day is celebrated, and all over the land we stop and think a little about the relationship - striving, for the most part, to be better mothers and better children, glad for the never-aloneness that exists for those of us who are lucky in our mothers.

May has been termed the moon of new leaves and it certainly is as one after another unfurls its tiny self to the sky. It is just about dusk and I shiver a bit and decide I best go in. Nights are cold at this time of year, and I think of the coffee the Farmer will have ready.

Poplar-wood smoke curls upwards from our chimney and has a delightful smell which reminds me of bonfires which I still love. Today, it is the smell of Eastern Ontario as a tiny fire is needed on the hearth each evening to keep the chill out.

To burn wood, if only for a bit of supplementary heat, gives one a feeling of independence from possible power failures. To burn wood is also an acknowledgement to nature for her gift of the poplar tree.

Here in Eastern Ontario, we like to speak of early springs and late springs. So often as we meet in the supermarket, do we hear friends say: "I never saw things so backward; why, the trees aren't even green!" Yet, from year to year, there is - we are told - only a few days' variation in the greening of the leaf. And this is irrespective of the weather.

I check my diary for I have been watching the unfurling of the leaves for half a century and note that this is so. Mind you, I refer to the first leaves, not the catkins.

Pastures, too, show a plain tinge of green now. They await the spring rains to become lush. We show too little respect towards the natural world; we are impatient and whining in our contemplation, demanding that everything appears on cue. If we would but remember that by and large, in the natural world, it does.

To ponder: "One today is worth two tomorrows."
- Francis Quarles (1592-1644).

Crysler students will join hands in support of a less violent society

Greg Hewitt

CRYSLER — A change in attitude toward violence may make for a kinder, gentler Crysler thanks to a program at Ecole Notre-Dame du St-Rosaire.

The 192 students at the school, ranging from pre-kindergarten to Grade 8, have for two months been learning through weekly sessions that violence is an attitude and attitudes can be changed.

Linda Couture-Stockland, of the Trois Petits Points cultural centre in Alexandria, has been overseeing the project.

She says while there may not particularly be a problem with violence in Crysler, the program is a good preventative measure.

"We're not at the situation where kids have guns and knives like in Ottawa, but we want to make the kids aware of different patterns or attitudes," she says, noting put-downs, peer pressure and self-esteem as negative factors that could contribute to violence.

"Everyone can become violent," she says. "But you can decide not to be."

The program also explores negative situations like put-downs, sadness and self-esteem that can lead to violence.

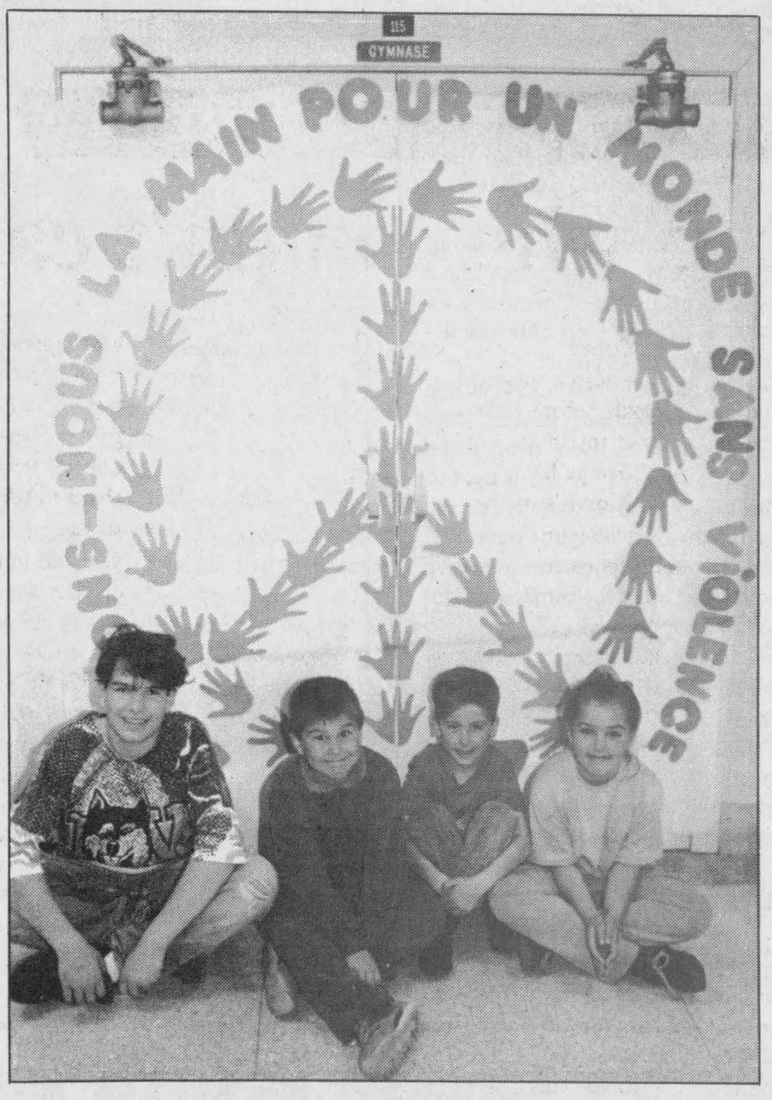
And Couture-Stockland says she has seen a difference in the children's attitudes in the playground. She says they are more aware that name-calling, for example, is negative and should not be accepted.

She adds that the kids, especially in the younger grades, were eager to talk about the topics — they couldn't stop, she says.

"It's a fun thing to see the kid's attitudes change," she says.

Principal Madeleine Charette says children may see a lot of violence on television and lose sight of the difference between acceptable and unacceptable reaction to a situation.

The topic was suggested by a parents' committee, she says, that wanted to reinforce the concept of "respecting ourselves, others and things around us in order to eliminate violence."



Ecole Notre-Dame du St-Rosaire students (from left) Francois Gagne, Phillip Stockli, Marc-Andre Lebrun, Precille Lebrun and others will kick off their anti-violence campaign in Crysler May 7. Gagne's family designed the logo in the background.

The topic is explored in the classroom through, for example role playing. Kids are asked to recall a negative schoolyard situation, play it out and then try to find a positive solution, followed by discussion.

In higher grades, students discuss current events in the newspaper. Younger students are asked to critique their favorite cartoons in terms of violence.

Workshops included in the program have brought a Long Sault OPP officer to the school to discuss police matters and an Ottawa journalist to talk about the media's role in society.

A logo and accompanying slogan that reads Donnons-Nous La Main Pour Un Monde Sans Violence (Join hands for a world without violence), depicts hands joined in the shape of a peace symbol.

And on May 7, when the school's anti-violence campaign in the community is launched, students and parents will do just that — join hands to form a human chain to "demonstrate their commitment to a violence-free society."

The logo will appear on buttons paid for by the Knights of Columbus, Optimist Club, Crysler Community Centre and the school's parents' committee.

Also May 7, MPP Noble Villeneuve and MP Bob Kilger will be at the school to participate in a full day of activities including song and dance.

Students will be able to sign a petition against a 'serial killers' board game.

Village WI selects officers for new year

CHESTERVILLE — The Chesterville Women's Institute held its annual meeting April 19 at the United Church hall, electing its new officers for 1993-94.

President Florence Hoople welcomed members, who sang Grace and sat down to a pot luck supper. The meeting followed with the secretary reading the 1992-93 annual report. The treasurer presented a complete financial statement for the year, followed by each of the convener's reports. Doris Cross and Alice Shay served as auditors.

During the year, Virley Edwards, a life member, received a special WI pin for her work with the group. Margaret Casselman and Elsie Graham were honored as valuable life members who had reached the half-century mark with the WI.

Members grieved the loss of three former WI members — Norma Reid, Winnie Jeffrey and Helen Graham.

The slate of officers for 1993-94 is: Florence Hoople, president; Grace Macaulay, vice-president; Olive Cass, secretary, Gladys Smith, treasurer, Isabel Forward, card secretary. Thelma Johnston retired as press secretary.

Brochure aims to attract tourists to United Counties

Record Staff

WINCHESTER — A year after the recession and bad weather hit local tourism hard, two United Counties agencies hope a new marketing campaign will help lure visitors to Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry.

The SD&G Department of Economic Development and the Seaway Valley Tourism Council announced this week they will publish and distribute a "discovery guide" to attract tourists to the area.

The 40-page guide will be the first tourist brochure dedicated solely to Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry. The United Couties are already featured as part of New York state and eastern Ontario tourism magazines.

"Once we get tourists here, this is the publication that will get them to our attractions, events, stores, restaurants and accommodations," said economic development director Terry O'Reilly.

The guide will be paid for through advertising, and 30,000 copies will be distributed in camp sites, gas stations, hotels and motels throughout SD&G, Cornwall, chambers of commerce and other tourist bureaus both in New York and eastern Ontario. Another 20,000 copies will be mailed directly to homes in Ottawa and Montreal's West Island. It is scheduled to be published by July.

Earlier this year, the tourism council and department of economic development held a series of information sessions in SD&G and Cornwall to find out what area business operators wanted in a tourism marketing campaign.

He was the dear brother of Kezia Wells and Harold Pemberton, both of Williamsburg. He will be fondly remembered by 16 grandchildren and 13 great-granchildren.

Centre for abused kids won't open in SD&G

Elizabeth Moreau
Record Staff

CORNWALL — Plans to open a therapy centre for sexually abused children have been scrapped after the provincial government refused to help fund the project, the centre's board of directors announced this week.

An ad hoc group of people from various children and family services groups in Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry have been working for two years to raise funds for the proposed centre. They had hoped the province would match the funds to cover the centre's budget, estimated at $250,000 annually.

More than $65,000 was raised through public and private donations, and more money was committed should the project get off the ground.

"It's been two years and we felt that in all good faith we could not keep that money idle anymore," said board secretary Robert Smith, a supervisor with the SD&G Children's Aid Society.

The centre would have served sexually abused children and their families. A similar program was cancelled by the CAS in 1991 because of funding cutbacks. It served about 40 families at the time, said Smith. Families who need specialized counselling and treatment services have to travel out of the area to places like Ottawa.

"There isn't anything in the community for sexually abused children and their families and there won't be in the near future," Smith said.

He said the province offered no reason as to why it would not fund the project.

All the donations will be returned, but Smith said the board hopes the money will be redirected to other children's services agencies in Cornwall and SD&G.

Last month, the Ministry of Community and Social Services gave $300,000 to another Cornwall-area group looking to help children affected by the recession.

The group, led by the SD&G public and Catholic school boards, had asked for $9 million over three years. The budget for the proposed child sexual abuse therapy centre was included in the original proposal. Smith said the board is "quite upset" that the project did not receive any government money.

"We consider this important enough that it would be funded separately," he said.

Smith said the money raised locally wouldn't have been enough to provide treatment for more than a year. The board decided it would be unfair to start a program it couldn't continue, Smith said.

Last year 140 cases of child sexual abuse were reported to the SD&G Children's Aid Society.

Business is the bottom line at Roxmore

Elizabeth Moreau
Record Staff

AVONMORE — The 19 students in Sue Page's Grade 7/8 class at Roxmore Public School still have a few years to go before they make career choices. But because of a group of area businesspeople, at least some of the students have decided that entrepreneurship is in their future.

Roxmore is one of 13 elementary schools in Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry involved in the Project Business course, a program that pairs businesspeople across the counties with high-school bound students.

Flip Flockton, executive director of the Industry-Education Council, spent an hour a week for four months with the Roxmore class, introducing them to the world of business.

Through scores of activities and real-life situations, the students learned about loans, profit and loss, interest rates, career exploration, advertising and consumer habits.

"The idea is to instill in them an interest in business, in entrepreneurship, and to keep the creativity very high," said Flockton, who runs a consulting firm.

Thirteen-year-old Jeremy Brozincevic said he learned how to manage money and apply for a loan.

Classmate Keith Dollard, 12, said he plans to start his own business someday, and that the course has given him a head start.

"When I get to high school, I'll already know a bit about business."

The Project Business course, offered for the first time this year, is run by Junior Achievement of SD&G, a non-profit group that fosters business and entrepreneurship in schools. All the people who teach Project Business are volunteers, and several businesses donated $500 each to pay for materials.

Gail Kaneb, president of Junior Achievement, sponsored the Roxmore class and was in Avonmore Friday to present the students with certificates for completing the course. She said the program helps open up a new world for many students.

"A lot of these kids know their parents go to an office every day, but they don't know what they do," she said.

Encouraging the students to solve problems helps develop their creativity and allows them to see that the world of business can be exciting, Kaneb said.

"While there are a lot of headaches (in business), there are a lot of challenges," said Kaneb, who runs a home heating oil company in Cornwall.

She said teaching the course also helps the volunteers improve their own presentation skills.

"There's a lot of personal gratification, especially if you have a class that's enthusiastic," Kaneb said.

Junior Achievement also sponsors an after-school program in some high schools, in which students start their own business. With the help of advisers, the students conceive and create a product, get a business loan, elect officers for the company, issue shares, and market and sell the product.

North Dundas drive boosts local charities

Liz Edwards
Special to The Record

WINCHESTER — If she was going to grade community generosity during last weekend's food and clothing drive, teacher Cindy St. Pierre would give it top marks.

Saturday, a class at North Dundas District High School students collected food and clothing in six local villages to benefit the North Dundas Food Bank in Winchester and The House of Lazarus, Matilda Resource Centre which offers food, clothing and counselling for needy residents in the St. Lawrence Seaway area.

"It was super, the communities were very generous," says St. Pierre "We had a really good turnout with the clothes as well, much better than we expected."

Her students collected more than 1,000 cans of food as well as 25 boxes and approximately 40 garbage bags of clothes. Any cash donations were given to the food bank. The students went door-to-door in Winchester, Chesterville, Morewood, Vernon, Berwick, Hallville and Mountain to collect donations.

The drive started as a challenge between the Grade 11 french immersion Human Society, Challenge and Change class and its english counterpart. The students from the two classes competed to see who could collect more canned goods during the second last week of April. St. Pierre's french immersion class won, collecting 240 cans to the other class's 45.

Students will receive up to five bonus points on their final term grade depending on their efforts.

St. Pierre's class also organized and executed the drive May 1. Students were also graded for this event. Both food bank director Barbara Savary and Lazarus coordinating director Lynn Edwards say they are impressed with the students' initiative.

"They came up with the whole concept and it was just so thoughtful of them to do it," says Savary. "In this day and age with all the negative comments about our teenagers, I think that's just amazing that they have that kind of concern for people."

Savary says she is overwhelmed by the way the community supported the bank during this drive and others.

"We've had four volunteers here working all morning, sorting and putting away the donations so that tells you something."

Lazarus House has such a surplus of clothing donations from recent bazaars and the high school drive, the centre's employees and volunteers have had trouble sorting it all, according to Edwards. Numerous surplus bags and boxes of clothing have been stored outside to send to other charities in Ottawa. A recycling company picks the clothing up once a week.

"People have been wonderful but now we're asking them to call the recycling company themselves now," says Edwards.

"We have a system and it does work. But there's so much that has come in in the last week or two, we're just going as fast as we can go."

Musical youth group stops in Cornwall

CORNWALL — Up With People, an international educational entertaining group, will make a stop in Cornwall next week as part of a 10-city Ontario tour. Made up of 130 students from 20 countries, Up With People performs a two-hour "family musical" called "Rhythm of the World." Tickets for the two shows, May 14 and 15, are available at the Brookdale Mall, Kinsmen Centre, Centra Gas office on Pitt St., and the Prescott Centra Gas office. Proceeds from the shows will be donated to a Cornwall drop-in centre for youth.

Super sitters

These Maple Ridge Senior Public School students received certificates recently for completing the Red Cross babysitting course. The nine-session program was adapted to include the farming and rural aspects of tending children. Nurse Margery Trillo said she was pleased with each of the students' performance in the course.

We've got you covered!

Curran Carpet Centre was established in 1978 on St. Lawrence Street, Winchester by Bernie Curran. The store moved to Chesterville in 1980, and was sold to Andy and Kaireen Cotnam in February 1984, due to the illness of Madeline Curran. After the sale of the business, Bernie remained with the Cotnams as the installer. Bernie Curran retired in April 1989, but stays in close contact in a consulting capacity, and as a close friend of the Cotnams. Andy Jr. took over the installation side of the business.

In September 1987 Curran Carpet Centre moved to a new 3,000 square foot building on Industrial Road, Chesterville, with Power by Jennifer in one part of the premises. La Leche League moved into an extension in March 1992. Kaireen Cotnam opened the Winchester store in August 1990, and moved up the street to larger premises in November 1992. Employees include Mary Ahokas, Andy Jr., Jeff Barkley, Beverley Ibbitson, Catherine Kelly, and Florence Hoople as well as Kaireen Cotnam.

Quality, Service, Dependability

Opening his ultra-modern body shop facility has been a lifelong dream for Winchester native Dennis Carkner.

More than 20 years ago he started in this business, working for Brennan Motors in Chesterville. Then, along with brother Garry, operated "Carkner's Collision" in Hallville. Always in the back of his mind, Carkner was dreaming of owning a shop in Winchester.

After a nine-year stint as a body shop manager at a local GM dealership, Carkner moved on to work as a production manager, supervising a large-volume GM repair centre in Ottawa.

Finally in October 1988 he opened his own shop in Winchester - D's Collision Center was a reality. As a result of strong community and individual support, "D's" quickly outgrew their facilities and Carkner proceeded with plans to build that shop he had been dreaming about all those years. Carkner even went so far as travelling to Europe "to make sure he was up to specs on the new technologies of the industry", ensuring environmentally friendly, top quality repairs and services to fill his customers' needs.

"From Part-time hobby to full-time business"

Sheldon started his business on a part-time basis and as a hobby; hand painting farm and business signs. As the demand grew, it soon became a full-time operation. Trying to keep up to the demand of signs, Sheldon purchased computerized vinyl cutters. Along with the computers came a new line of business, striping vehicles.

Today, Sheldon and his wife Dianne, employ two full-time and two part-time employees to operate the three computers at Shane Signs. The business has expanded from wood signs and truck lettering; to backlite, silk-screening, coroplast signs, logo designing, billboards, and vehicle striping. Vinyl is still used in all the work, however, Sheldon still hand paints, to add a professional look.

The doors are always open at Shane Signs for all who wish to see the operation.

IN MEMORIAMS

IN MEMORIAM

BROOKS - In loving memory of my dear husband, Loran who was taken from me suddenly on May 11, 1992.

You are always in my heart.
Little did I know that morning
The sorrow that day would bring.
The call was sudden, the shock severe
To part with one I loved so dear.
If tears could build a stairway
And memories build a lane
I'd walk all the way to Heaven
To bring you back again.
So many times I've needed you
So many times I've cried
If love could have saved you
You never would have died.
Friends may think I have forgotten
When at times they see me smile.
But they little know the heartache
My smile hides all the while.
They say time heals all sorrow
And helps us to forget
But time so far has only proved
How much I miss you yet.

Sadly missed
and loved forever,
Wife Elizabeth

ND wins annual relay meet for third time

Chris Thatcher
Record Staff

There was nothing quiet about La Citadelle's arrival at annual Dave Stevens Memorial Relay meet.

The Cornwall high school, dominant in most SD&G sports, rolled into the parking lot at Seaway District High School in Iroquois Thursday morning, with not one, but two buses.

No small track team.

For many of the nine participating schools, the competition is more an endurance test than a series of relay races. Some of their athletes run as many as five events.

More legs equals more points, or so Patti Hall thought as she watched the buses unload.

"When La Citadelle brought two bus loads, it made us nervous," the North Dundas District High School coach said.

But, while La Citadelle was collecting five points for third and fourth place finishes, North Dundas was compiling 10 points for firsts and seconds, enroute to its third straight title.

The Devils accumulated 196 points, almost 30 more than the second place Patriots. The St. Lawrence Saints placed third.

"We didn't have as many runners as (La Citadelle) but we've been training really hard," Hall said. "Some of our runners have been training from the start of the year and we started (the track team) right after the March break."

The meet is a preliminary to the SD&G finals this Thursday at Tagwi. But "it gives us a chance to do all different distances and gives us a chance to compete against other SD&G runners," Hall said.

The races were two 1600 medleys, two 4x100, a 4x200, a 4x400 and a coaches medley which the Devils won.

Because North Dundas has small teams at both its senior boys and girls level and its junior girls division, four athletes had to compete in virtually every event.

The Devils also juggled junior and senior athletes, allowing some juniors to run in senior races.

Deal may be good, but you have no way to know

Out of left field
Chris Thatcher

There's an aura of delusion to this story.

By now you are probably aware that the city of Cornwall has acquired an American Hockey League franchise.

You read it in the Citizen, the Gazette, the Sun, the Standard-Freeholder, you saw it on CBC, CTV and TSN (both French and English) and heard it on every conceivable radio station from Kingston to Halifax.

It's old news.

But if you took even a sampling of those media outlets, you didn't learn very much. Because there wasn't much to tell.

While last Wednesday's press conference was thick on commendations and praise, it was astonishingly thin on specifics.

Last week, the Quebec Nordiques announced they were moving their AHL farm club from Halifax to Cornwall because, and the details are sketchy at best, the Halifax Trade Centre Ltd. refused to waive a $241,00 payment to continue the last two years of a four-year contract.

Cornwall, despite its 21 per cent unemployment rate and its inability to sustain a Junior "A" franchise, was chosen "out of the blue," as mayor Ron Martelle said.

But nowhere in all the backpatting and celebrating was there any mention of the details of a five-year contract: The size of Cornwall's payment to Quebec; the number of season ticket holders needed to stay solvent; what penalty Cornwall must pay if it fails to generate enough revenue.

Nothing!

The secrecy is at Nordiques co-owner Marcel Aubut's insistence and, he says, the deal is "a standard AHL agreement." The facts, ma' am, are not for public consumption.

If it proves a successful venture, Cornwall will be doffing hats to its mayor and council. And they will certainly deserve it. Given the way the recession has devastated the Cornwall economy, it is a bold and courageous move.

But it also begs the obvious question: Can Cornwall honestly support the team?

Martelle believes so.

"We have to remember that the Cornwall Royals were a different organization than the Quebec Nordiques," the mayor said. "There were extenuating circumstances at that time. The fans never thought they'd lose the Royals."

Aubut, the affiable owner, says he wants Cornwall to succeed and there's no reason to doubt him. But throughout the press conference, Martelle and others used terms like fast track and snowball.

Most business ventures are conducted with a good degree of caution; this appears to be a whirlwind decision. The team failed to give the Ottawa Senators a courtesy call just to let them know they were moving into the neighborhood and now that has ruffled some feathers in the Senators' front office.

In Halifax, the team averaged around 3,000 fans per game, though it fell below that recently. The Cornwall Civic Complex holds just under 4,000. More seats can be added by filling in "The Pit" but even that will only increase the seating capacity by several hundred. Is that enough to support a franchise?

Without additional numbers to make comparisons its hard to tell -- and nobody was supplying those. But we must assume there is a clause somewhere in the agreement stipulating what kind of revenue the franchise must generate. Any shortfall will probably be made up by the taxpayers.

Cornwall is not a city that can easily afford that price.

OFSAA gymnastics

Bond, Castle vault to top third at provincials

North Dundas District High School didn't win any medals, but it did come away with two top third placings at the Ontario Federation of Schools Athletic Association (OFSAA) gymnastics championships in Toronto Sunday.

Tamara Bond and Jenny Castle both vaulted into the top third of their divisions.

Bond, making her fifth appearance at the provincial championships, qualified in four events in Level IV competition -- vault, beam, uneven bars and floor -- and earned high marks on the vault. It was also her strongest event at the East Regional (EOSSAA) two weeks ago where she won a gold medal with a 9.1 score.

Castle, who also won gold in the vault at EOSSAA, participated in the Level II competition. This was her first trip to OFSAA.

In total, North Dundas sent nine gymnasts to the meet at Seneca College. Over 500 athletes from 14 school associations competed in six levels.

"For the most part, (our) scores were pretty consistent with (our) EOSSAA results," coach Fran Kelly said. "Some were better and some weren't as good. Nobody came last.

"But the competition is pretty tight; in a (division) of 50 gymnasts, the difference between 10th and 25th is sometimes .05 of a point."

North Dundas won five gold medals at EOSSAA but sent all nine of its gymnasts based on the judges' recommendation that they could compete at that level.

"It's an exciting meet. It's very well organized and gives the girls a better sense of some of the gymnastic traditions," said Kelly, who co-coaches the team with Rhonda Kelly and Kelly Durant.

"The thing I emphasize is that it is a privilege to be here. They can see the routines and try to incorporate them into their own routines for next year.

"For the most part, they were pleased with their efforts. I've taken girls to OFSAA for 13 years and very rarely didn't have them fall on the beam. But Kerry Houze and Jenny Castle were perfect. It was pretty exciting."

Cellophane nets stump Seaway Valley Devils

Chris Thatcher

"No luck around the net."

It's become an anthem for the Seaway Valley Devils at national championships.

For the second consecutive year, Seaway Valley dominated its opponents at the Canadian National Juvenile Women's Broomball championships —allowing just eight shots on its net in three round-robin games.

But at the other end, where the Devils bombarded goaltender after goaltender, nothing went right.

Though Seaway Valley won its first two games, a 1-0 loss to Newfoundland in the final round-robin contest cost it a berth in the final four.

"We had some bad luck," co-coach Brian Rombough said. "There were lot's of tears after that game.

"We spent 80 to 90 per cent of every game in the other (team's) zone. That's why we took it so hard when we didn't make it to the playoffs."

Seaway Valley, representing Ontario, entered the tournament in Cornerbrook, Nfld., seeded among the top three following its performance in the 1992 final, a heartbreaking 2-1 loss to Quebec. Rombough and co-coach Jim Bancroft had predicted that the Devils wouldn't repeat last year's loss; this year they intended to win it all. The team was stronger and faster and had handily won its third straight provincial title.

But the pressure had its effect.

And the lack of scoring compounded the problem; it became the primary focus for many of the players.

But there was little the coaches could do

"The girl's were coming off asking what was wrong," Rombough said. "They were looking for answers but Jim and I couldn't help them. We kept saying, 'you're not doing anything wrong, the ball's just not going in.' The passing was super. They were doing everything right, but everytime we shot on net something went wrong.

"Whether we were too confident, I don't know."

If Rombough needed proof that the Devils were not destined to win, he got it in Saturday's tilt with Newfoundland.

Seaway Valley dominated the match from the outset, allowing just six shots on goaltenders Kim MacLean and Wendy George, and appeared to have broken its scoring jinx late in the second half. A Newfoundland forward froze the ball in the goal crease and the Devils argued that it had gone in. They were awarded a penalty shot, but could not score.

"I wish we had a replay camera on that," Rombough said. "I told the girls that the cellophane across the net was very thick; we just couldn't break it. We outplayed them so bad but couldn't hit the net."

"In that game, we took 30 or 40 shots and we must have hit every damn post," said Bancroft. "But sometimes that's the way it happens."

The loss left the Devils with a 2-1 record and in a three-way tie for first place in their pool. Only the top two would advance.

The Canadian Broomball Federation broke the deadlock based on goals-for-and-against, and Seaway's inability to score finally came back to haunt it.

"That was the game that did the damage," Rombough said.

Ironically, the Devils wrapped up the tournament with a placement game against Cornerbrook and, with the pressure off, walloped the host team 8-0.

"The girls went crazy and mercied them," said Rombough. "We didn't even finish two periods. Everything started to go in. Even the referee said, 'It's about time you started to fill the net.'

"I don't know, maybe we were trying too hard."

Gail Garlough, who was named to the tournament's second all-star team, capped off a five-goal week with two. Julie Pollock scored twice and set up a pair and Glenda Lauzon netted a pair. Lauzon was also named MVP for the contest.

Christina Rombough and Christine Bancroft scored singles.

On Friday, Seaway opened the national championship with a 1-0 win over Nova Scotia and then downed New Brunswick 3-0.

Garlough scored the lone goal against Nova Scotia, on a pass from Bancroft, to earn the MVP award. MacLean and George faced just two shots.

Garlough connected twice against New Brunswick, first from Bancroft and then from Pollock. Bonnie Loynachan set up Susan Stewart for the other marker. Wendi Lawson was named the game's MVP.

Neither MacLean nor George, who split the goaltending, saw the ball.

Pink posts season's first win

Julie Armstrong scored the first goal of the Chesterville/Winchester Ladies Ball Hockey League season, sparking the Pink Ladies to a 3-1 win over Green Thursday night.

In other action at the Chesterville arena, Deanna Corbett-White scored three goals and set up the game winner as the Orange-a-Tangs edged Yellow 4-3.

Goaltender Jackie Boulanger posted the season's first shutout, backstopping the Aqua Aces over Purple 3-0.

Armstrong struck for two goals, including an insurance marker midway through the third period, to kick off the 1993 season.

Lorraine MacIntosh, who assisted on both of Armstrong's goals, scored the winner with time expiring on the clock at the end of the second frame. Shanna Marriner also collected two helpers.

Green's Vicki Holmes spoiled Pink goalie Sherry Stewart's shutout bid, connecting with 1:10 left in the third on a pass from Kathryn Houze.

ORANGE 4, YELLOW 3

Katie Clapp buried a Deanna Corbett-White pass at 5:02 of third period to give the Tangs their first win.

The goal capped a four-point night for Corbett-White.

The forward and Yellow's Corinna Skuce traded first-frame goals, but goaltenders Roxanne Crump (Orange) and Mary Schoones (Yellow) turned aside everything in the second.

Corbett-White gave Orange its first lead of the game at 12:54 of the third and increased it to 3-1 less than 30 seconds later on an unassisted effort. Andrea Acheson assisted on Corbett-White's first two goals.

Yellow's Melanie Leroux cut the deficit at 7:04 and Rhonda Winter, on a solo effort, pulled the team to within one at 1:12.

AQUA 3, PURPLE 0

Michelle Laflamme engineered two goals as the Aces blanked Purple in the opening night's second contest.

She set up Melanie Hoy early in the second and combined with Erin Crowder to feed Jackie Morris late in the third.

Linda Hamelin scored the game's first goal on a pass from Connie Bryan at 8:30 of the first.

Byers pours in four goals as Sierra Grande takes flash out of Jumpin' Jack's

Sierra Grande evened its record at 1-1 Wednesday night, shutting out the winless Jumpin' Jack's Flashes 6-0.

Meanwhile, the Top Valu Jokers notched their second win of the Chesterville/Winchester Men's Ball Hockey League season with a 7-3 dusting of the Red Wings and the Cooperators handed the Winchester Legion its first loss 8-3.

Kevin Byers struck for Sierra Grande's first four goals and assisted on its fifth as the Green team bounced back from an opening week loss to Top Valu.

Kevin Moore engineered three of Byers' goals and set up Paul Melenhorst for the game's final marker. Ray Sherrer also scored midway through the third on a pass from Byers.

Goaltender Denis Desormeaux posted the shutout.

JOKERS 7, WINGS 3

Will O'Conner scored four goals and added one assist to pace the Jokers to their second straight win.

Top Valu held only a slim 3-2 lead after two periods, but blew the game open in the third.

O'Conner netted two and Jerrold Boulanger and Derek Holmes chipped in the others during a four-goal spree.

O'Conner scored twice in the second and Dennis Ouellette buried one in the first. Ouellette also nabbed three assists while Boulanger and Pete Van Kessel picked up two each.

Rob Gourgon and Rene Boulanger scored second-period goals for the Red Wings, briefly tying the game at 2-2.

Jason Kennedy struck early in the third with a shorthanded effort, tying the contest again, but the Wings fell behind for good just over a minute later.

COOP 8, LEGION 3

Ben Henry and Chris Holmes scored a pair of goals each as the Cooperators extended their undefeated streak to two games.

Holmes scored once in the first period and again in the second, and Henry struck twice in the second, to give the White squad a 4-3 lead.

The Cooperators erupted with four unanswered markers in the third. Junior Hamelin, Jamie Kennedy, Ken Byers and Ricky Nelson buried the ball behind Legion netminder Brad Pringle.

Byers and Nelson also nabbed two helpers apiece.

Dwayne Bazinet counted two markers for Winchester, including one in the first to tie the game at 1-1.

John Mackler added one with time running out in the second to cut the lead to 4-3, after setting up both Bazinet markers. Brian Helmer also drew three assists.

SD&G soccer gets late start

Three weeks late and two schedule changes later the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry high school girl's soccer season is about to get underway.

Waterlogged fields and unpredictable weather prompted the soccer convenors and athletic coordinators to postpone the season twice. And, with less than three weeks remaining in the normal season, they were forced to make some drastic changes, eliminating competition between the board's "AA" and "A" schools.

"Because of the wet weather and the field conditions, we've decided to go with two one-day tournaments," Rothwell-Osnabruck coach Al Merizzi said.

"Our field (was) mud," Tagwi senior coach Keith Daniels said last week. "It (was) too wet to start and the snowfall (didn't) help."

Senior and junior teams from the single "A" schools — R-O, Tagwi, Seaway and Char-Lan — will compete in day-long tournaments at Seaway, May 12, and Tagwi, May 19 to determine rankings.

The SD&G "A" semi-finals and championship games will be played on May 25.

"We're not too pleased about it but there isn't much else we can do," Merizzi said.

Each team will play three games per day, making endurance an important factor.

"I'm not quite sure how to prepare," Merrizzi admitted. "Hopefully there won't be any injuries. We could be injury-prone with all the games on two days."

Despite success of gymnastics meet, school sport faces uncertain future

MAPLE RIDGE—Convenor Jack Barkley termed this year's Dundas County elementary gymnastics meet and unqualified success.

"Excellent....it was just an excellent day. First off there was not a single injury among the 350 kids. I heard commments from parents and teachers on how good the competitors were, which translates to the effort put into it by the coaches."

Barkley was extremely pleased with the behaviour of the young athletes noting that the high school population hardly knew they had 350 visitors in the building.

The convenor noted that the effort of Fran Kelly of NDDHS, the high school's custodial staff and the student judges figured into the day's success. He also was quick to thank Terry Palmer for providing the trucking for all of the event's equipment.

But this year's success may not insure the continuation of gymnastics competition.

As they have taken their toll at the high school level, NDDHS is the only SD&G high school providing a gymnastics program this year, cost of equipment, insurance and time may also take gymnastics out of the elementary sports program.

"We had two schools choose not to come this year, Stampville (no gym) and Chesterville (lack of coaching), which has never happened before. But a lot of teachers do not have the background (in gymnastics) or the time. Insurance and the cost of replacing equipment is very high," Barkley explained.

"We certainly like to provide the opportunity for children to experience the competition but we will have to look at continuing it (gymnastics)," he added.

Ageless? really...!

Jennifer Gregoire, Reg. N. N.D., B. Sc. Nu.

Countless experiments have proven that the body mechanisms respond to mental attitudes in direct conjunction to exercise. When patients are given a placebo - a harmless sugar pill - that they think will make them well, their bodies often respond for the better, reacting to the positive thought rather than to any benefit from the sugar pill. Many doctors who are outwardly skeptical about the power of the mind over the body still use placebos in their daily practice.

We are all familiar with the eerie power of hypnotic suggestion. There have been many instances of hypnotized subjects who experienced an extreme physical reaction to a mental suggestion. For instance, when subjects under hypnosis were told that they had been burned, a blister actually formed.

There have also been many recorded examples of the destructive power that the mind can exert on the body. In primitive societies, the witch doctor can often kill by suggestion. Through ritual, myth, and magic that is accepted by the entire primitive society, the witch doctor convinces the victim that he is doomed. And he is doomed. At the appointed moment he just lies down and dies.

We, too, have our rituals, myths, and magic - our tribal convictions.

Deep down, we know we should exercise regularly. We know we would feel better, look better, look younger, have more energy and less fat, improve most of our medical problems, feel better about ourselves...the list goes on. As far as being too busy (and that's one I don't hear too often...), we know that the more time we take to help ourselves through exercising, the more time we are able to give back to ourselves, our jobs, and our families. It's just that it's so darn easy not to exercise! Also, perhaps we've been paying a little too much attention to the ritual litany of the Professional Non-exercisers. You've heard it before,..."At our age"..."No fool like an old fool"..."When I was younger I used to"..."When we get older we slow down"..."It would be ridiculous at my age"..."Honestly! Why can't she (he) grow old gracefully"..."Of course at my age I don't need to" (this could be applied to an older or younger person)..."I get enough exercise on the job"...and so on to their very last day, which such negative, devitalizing, destructive thoughts will certainly hasten.

On the other hand, a positive attitude towards exercise surely brings about a dynamic attitude, stimulating the mind and rejuvenating the body. This rejuvenating effect of exercise on the mind and body has long been observed by millions of people of all ages. Why not listen to them, instead...!

My Silent Achiever this week is the handsome young grandfather who recently entered and finished the famous Boston Marathon held last month. Not only does he, naturally, run every day, but this year has added bone and muscle strengthening weight training to his busy schedule. No wonder he keeps such a young and positive attitude! Excellent work! We are so very lucky to be able to do it for ourselves.
