HON. JAMES A. ROBB

Hon. James A. Robb, Dominion Minister of Finance since 1925, and a cabinet member since 1921, died in Toronto at 4.05 o'clock, on Monday afternoon, from an apoplectic stroke.

Death came unexpectedly, just as he was starting to recover from the lobar pneumonia which had kept him seriously ill at the Royal York hotel for the past two and a half weeks. He was 70 years of age last August.

His passing, which ended four hours of coma into which he lapsed after his stroke at noon, came as a shock and a surprise to his family, friends and his physicians.

The statesman's body was taken from Toronto at 11.30 o'clock Monday night, aboard a special car. Accompanied by relatives and associates in public and private life, it was taken to Valleyfield, P.Q., where Mr. Robb was born and first entered public life as a member of the town council.

Mr. Robb died one of the best known and respected public men in Canada, and one of the most successful finance ministers the Dominion has had, in the opinion of the prominent men who hastened to express their sympathy and tributes. He worked his way up from the very bottom, having entered public life as a school trustee of Valleyfield in 1897.

MR. MORTEN E. HUNTER

Death came with startling suddenness to one of the most respected citizens of Morewood in the person of Morten E. Hunter. For nearly a year past he had not been well, yet his unexpected passing came as a great shock to the whole community He was born at Maple Ridge, 69 years ago, the only son of the late Mr. and Mrs. A.D. Hunter. Over fifty years ago they moved to Morewood, where he has resided ever since.

In his early days, Mr. Hunter was a merchant, but for the past thirty years he has been a boot and shoe traveller, representing the Williams Shoe Company of Brampton.

Forty-eight years ago he married Miss Isabel Carlyle of Dunbar, who predeceased him three years ago. He leaves to mourn his loss six daughters, and one son: Mrs. B.G. Main, Winnipeg; Mrs. W.S. Feeley, Cannamore; Mrs. W.C. McQuaig, Ottawa; Mrs. H. Burrows, North Bay; Miss Carrie, Ottawa; Miss Laura and Lyle, Morewood; his eldest son, Douglas, died seven years ago; also two sisters, Mrs. W. Feeley and Mrs. A. Dillabough, Morewood.

The funeral, which was held from his late residence, Morewood, to the Presbyterian church was largely attended.

In his immediate home circle, he was a kind and devoted father. He was always a good citizen, taking a keen iterest in all local affairs and his genial nature and ready wit made him a general favorite.

D'ARCY CLAIR HUTT

The death occurred suddenly on Tuesday morning, November 5th, at his home east of Iroquois, of D'Arcy Clair Hutt, aged 31 years and three months. He was ill only a few hours and his passing came as a distinct shock to his family and friends.

For the past few months, deceased had been bothered with indigestion at intervals. On Monday evening at 6 o'clock, when he returned home from the Caldwell Linen Mills where he was employed, he complained of not feeling well. Although his wife insisted that he remain at home, he returned to the above mills and worked until 10 p.m. He then returned home and called Dr. Marcellus, who found him suffering with a bad case of indigestion. The doctor left him about an hour later apparently in a recovered condition.

About 1.30 a.m. he suffered another acute attack, which was so severe that his wife was unable to leave him to secure assistance. At 2.40 a.m. he became unconscious, and his wife, after calling the doctor, rushed to the home of James Fenton, a near neighbor. On the return of Mrs. Hutt and Mr. Fenton he breathed his last, passing away without regaining consciousness, before the doctor arrived.

The late Mr. Hutt, a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hutt of Iroquois, was born in Morrisburg. For the past 27 years he had resided in Iroquois, with the exception of five years (1914 to 1918) which he served overseas in the Great War with the 77th Battalion of Ottawa. He was a young man of strong moral character and in physique and general appearance looked the picture of health. His untimely demise came as a great shock to his many friends here.

On August 15th, 1922, he married Miss Iva Blair of Cornwall, who, with an adopted daughter Muriel, aged 5½ years, are left to mourn the loss of a kind husband and loving father.

Besides his sorrowing widow and young daughter, he is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Hutt, Iroquois; three sisters, Mrs. Harry Smith (Beatrice) of Brockville; Mrs. James Smith (Ethel) and Miss Marjorie, and one brother, Rexford, all of Iroquois.

ANNUAL MEETING OF ST. LAWRENCE HOCKEY LEAGUE

The annual meeting of the St. Lawrence Amateur Hockey League was held on Friday night in Gilson's Hall at Brinston. Delegates from Prescott, Cardinal, Iroquois, Morrisburg, Spencerville and Brinston, the six teams that comprised the league last year, were present; also delegates from Kemptville, asking admission to the league. After the meeting was opened, the Kemptville club was taken in, and a motion passed that Brockville be invited also, thus making an eight-club league. The following officers were elected for the coming season: President, George E. Fitzpatrick, Prescott; 1st vice-president, Dr. Louden, Morrisburg; 2nd vice-president, H. Caldwell, Iroquois; sec'y-treas., J.A. Keeler, Iroquois. The rules and regulations were gone over, and the referee question settled. The play-offs are to be the same as last season, that is, the second and third team in the standing playing off, and the winner meeting the first team for the championship and the Benson cup, which was won last season by Morrisburg. The schedule was left to be drawn up by the president and the secretary, starting the first week in January.

The most successful season in the history of the league is being anticipated, owing to the fact that every team, with one exception, (Brinston), will have a covered rink It was a most enthusiastic meeting, the hall being well filled with hockey fans.

THE "CANARY" MURDER CASE

© Charles Scribner's Sons

by S. S. VAN DINE AUTHOR of THE BENSON MURDER CASE

THE STORY THUS FAR:

The jewel case had been opened with a chisel after being battered with a poker. And this puzzles Vance when it is found near the strangled body of Margaret Odell. It makes him think two men were in the apartment, the murderer unaware of the man hiding in a clothes closet. In no way can the presence of even one be accounted for. Finger-prints lead to the arrest of Skeel, after Cleaver and Dr. Lindquist are questioned and Spotswood's known actions eliminate him. Vance shoots a sudden question at Skeel: "Why didn't you give the alarm?"

CHAPTER XXI.

"Don't bother to answer," pursued Vance, as the man opened his lips to speak. "But tell me: didn't the sight shake you up a bit?"

"I don't know what you're talking about," Skeel retorted with sullen impertinence. But, for all his sang-froid, one sensed an uneasiness in his manner. There was an overtone of effort in his desire to appear indifferent, which robbed his words of complete conviction.

"Not a pleasant situation, that." Vance ignored his retort. "How did you feel, crouching there in the dark, when the closet door-knob was turned and some one tried to get in?" His eyes were boring into the man, though his voice rtained its casual intonation.

The muscles of Skeel's face tightened, but he did not speak.

"Lucky think you took the precaution of locking yourself in—eh, what?" Vance went on. "Suppose he'd got the door open—my word! Then what?"

He aused and smiled with a kind of silky sweetness which was more impressive than any glowering aggression.

"I say, did you have your steel chisel ready for him? Maybe he'd have been too quick and strong for you—maybe there would have been thumbs pressing against your larynx too before you could have struck him—eh? . . . Did you think of that, there in the dark? . . . No, not precisely a pleasant situation. A bit gruesome, in fact."

"What are you raving about?" Skeel spat out insolently. "You're balmy." But his swagger had been forgotten, and a look akin of horror had passed across his face. This slackening of pose was momentary, however; almost at once his smirk returnd, and his head swayed in contempt.

Vance sauntered back to his chair and stretched himself in it listlessly, as if all interest in the case had again evaporated.

Markham had watched the little drama attentively, but Heath had sat smoking with ill-concealed annoyance. The silence that followed was broken by Skeel.

"Well, I suppose I'm to be railroaded. Got it all planned, have you? . . . Try and railroad me!" He laughed harshly. "My lawyer's Abe Rubin, and you might phone him that I'd like to see him."

Markham, with a gesture of annoyance, waved to the deputy sheriff to take Skeel back to the Tombs.

"What were you trying to get at?" he asked Vance, when the man was gone.

"Just an elusive notion in the depths of my being struggling for the light." Vance smoked placidly a moment. "I thought Mr. Skeel might be persuaded to pour out his heart to us. So I wooed him with words."

"That's just bully," gibed Heath. "I was expecting you any minute to ask him if he played mumbly-peg or if his grandmother was a hoot-owl."

"Sergeant, dear sergeant," pleaded Vance, "don't be unkind. I simply couldn't endure it. . . . And really, now, didn't my chat with Mr. Skeel suggest a possibility to you?"

"Sure," said Heath, "—that he was hiding in the closet when Odell was killed. But where does that get us? It lets Skeel out, although the job was a professional one, and he was caught red-handd with some of the swag."

He turned disgustedly to the district attorney.

"And now, what, sir?"

"I don't like the look of things," Markham complained. "If Skeel has Abe Rubin to defend him, we won't stand a chance with the case we've got. I feel convinced he was mixed up in it; but no judge will accept my personal feelings as evidence."

"We could turn the Dude loose and have him trailed," suggested Heath grudgingly. "We might catch him doing something that'll give the game away."

Markham considered.

"That might be a god plan," he acceded. "We'll certainly get no more evidence on him as lon' as he's locked up."

"It looks like our only chance, sir."

"Very well," agreed Markham. "Let him think we're through with him; he may get careless. I'll leave the whole thing to you, Sergeant. Keep a couple of good men on him day and night. Something may happen.

Heath rose, an unhappy man.

"Right, sir. I'll attend to it."

"And I'd like to have more data on Charles Cleaver," added Markham. "Find out what you can of his relations with the Odell girl. Also, get me a line on Doctor Ambroise Lindquist. What's his history?—what are his habits?—you know the kind of thing. He treated the girl for some cysterious or imaginary ailment; and I think he has something up his sleeve. But don't go near him personally—yet."

Heath jotted the name down in his note-book, without enthusiasm.

"And before you set your stylish captive free," put in Vance, yawning, "you might, don't y' know, see if he carries a key that fits the Odell apartment."

Heath jerked up short, and grinned.

"Now, that idea's got some sense to it. . . . Funny I didn't think of it myself." And shaking hands with all of us, he went out.

(Wednesday, Sept. 12, 10.30 a.m.)

Swacker was evidently waiting for an opportunity to interrupt, for, when Sergeant Heath had passed through th door, he at once stepped into the room.

"The reporters are here, sir," he announced, with a wry face. "You said you'd see them at ten-thirty."

In response to a nod from his chief, he held open the door, and a dozen or more newspaper men came trooping in.

"No questions, pdease, this morning," Markham begged pleasantly. "It's too early in the game. But I'll tell you all I know. . . . I agree with Sergeant Heath that the Odell murder was the work of a professional criminal—the same who broke into Arnheim's house on Park Avenue last summer."

Briefly he told of Inspector Brenser's fiindings in connection with the chisel.

"We've made no arrests, but one may be expected in the very near future. In fact, the police have the case well in hand, but are going carefully in order to avoid any chance of an acquittal. We've already recovered some of the missing jewelry. . . ."

He talked to the reporters for five misutes or so, but he made no mention of the testimony of the maid or the phone operators, and carefully avoided the mention of any names.

When we were again alone, Vance chuckled admiringly.

"A masterly evasios, my dear Markham! Legal training has its advantages—decidedly it has its advantages. . . . 'We've recovered some of the missing jewelry!' Sweet winged words! Not an untruth—oh, nil—but how deceivin'!"

"Leaving all that to one side," Markham rejoined impatiently, "suppose you tell me, now that Heath's gone, what was in your mind when you applied your verbal voodooism to Skeel. What was all the conjurer-talk about dark closets, and alarms, and pressing thumbs, and peering through keyholes?"

"Well, now, I didn't think my little chit-chat was socryptic." answered Vance. "The recherche Tony was undoubtedly ambuscaded in the clothes-press at some time during the fatal evening; and I was merely striving in my amateurish way, to ascertain the exact hour of his concealment."

"And did you?"

"Not conclusively." Vance shook his head sadly. "Y' know, Markham, I'm the proud possessor of a theory—it's vague and obscure and unsubstantial; and it's downright unintelligible. And even if it were verified I can't see how it would help us any, for it would leave the situation even more incomprehensible than it already is. . . . I almost wish I hadn't questioned Heath's Beau Nash. He upset my ideas frightfully."

"From what I could gather, you seem to think it possible that Skeel witnessed the murder. That couldn't, by any stretch of the imagination, be your precious theory?"

"That's part of it, anyway."

"My dear Vance, you do astonish me!" Markham laughed outright. "Skeel, then, according to you, is innocent; but he keeps his knowledge to himself, invents an alibi, and doesn't even tattle when he's arrested. . . . It won't hold water."

"I know," sighed Vance. "It's a veritable sieve. And yet, the notion haunts me—it rides like a hag—it eats into my vitals."

"Do you realize that this mad theory of yours presupposes that, when Spotswoode and Miss Odell returned from the theatre, there were two men hidden in the apartment—two men unknown to each other—namely, Skeel and your hypothetical murderer?"

"Of course I realize it; and the thought of it is breaking down my reason."

"Furthermore, they must have entered the apartment separately and hidden separately. . . . How, may I ask, did they get in? And how did they get out? And which one caused the girl to scream after Spotswoode had left? And what was the other one doing in the meantime? And if Skeel was a passive spectator, horrified and mute, how do you account for his breaking open the jewel-case and securing the ring—?"

Timid Wife (to husband who has fallen asleep at the wheel): "I don't mean to dictate to you, George, but isn't that bilboard coming at us awfully fast?"

Mrs. Bloop: "Does your car have a worm drive?" Mrs. Bleep: "Yes, but I tel him where to go."

Fear at Midnight

Midnight, and silence of the infinite spaces;
In glittering legions, rank on rank arrayed,
The fixed stars quake and tremble in their places;
Orion uivers like the Bear he chases;
The Hosts of Heaven are afraid.
—F. L. Lucas in the London Observer.

Many a young man finds that the girl of his choice is "a little dear."

The Colored Man

Jamaica Times, Kingston: Whatever undesirable characteristics — moral, physical, or social—may be accentuated by inter-breeding, it is certain that, from the point of view of social efficiency, it s not the mixed colored class, if any, that is decadent in physique, intelligence, or energy in Jamaica. It would appear reasonable that where we have a community of diverse races we had better make up our mind not only not to despise the offspring of the illegitimate interbreeding that invariably takes place and will continue to take place in such conditions, but to make our account for a certain amount of legitimate and honorable interbreeding, and to look upon it as not necessarily or presumably a misfortune, but as more probably an advantage.

"Did you know, dear, that tunnel we just passed through was two miles long and cost $12,000,000?" said the young man to his sweetheart. "Oh, really, did it?" she replied as she started to re-arrange her hair. "Well, it was worth it, wasn't it?"

Poor Geese

Ishpeming, Mich.—The savory odor of roast goose filled the air recently, telling curious sniffers who won the battle between 200 wild geese and the miners who work the night shift at the Tillden open pit.

The geese came honking out of the north en route south. Above Ishpeming a blizzard broke up their formation. They sighted the beacons lighting the mine workings and tried to reconnoitre.

Mine buildings, steam shovels and ore cars loomed too late for two point landings and the fowl racked up all over the property.

The miners attacked in a body, some capturing as many as four geese apiece. One gander scored a technical point by snipping the finger off a miner's leather glove. The finger was no in the glove, however, so the superintendent said it was a foul.

When a girl tells a man she won't be his, it doesn't mean she won't let him be hers.

Needless Suffering

The next time a headache makes you stay at home—

Or some other ache or pain prevents your keeping an engagement—

Remember Aspirin! For there is scarcely any sort of pain it cannot relieve, and relieve promptly.

These tablets give real relief, or millions would not continue to take them. They are quite harmless, or the medical profession would not constantly prescribe them.

Don't be a martyr to unnecessary pain. To colds that might so easily be checked; neuritis, neuralgia; to those pains peculiar to women; or any suffering for which Aspirin is such an effective antidote.

You need not hesitate to take Aspirin. It is safe. It is always the same. It never depresses the heart, so use it as often as needed; but the cause of any pain can be treated only by a doctor.

Canada Fifth in Commercial List

People in 130 Countries Buying Goods from Dominion

GROWTH IN WEST

Country's Pacific Ports in Position to Play Big Part

One of Canada's proudest achievements commercially is her status as fifth in international commerce. Not only is Canada capable of supporting herself, but she has a wealth of production for which other countries all over the world are clamoring. In over 130 different countries, Canada, which ordinarily to the inhabitant would be regarded merely as a space on the map, and a background for thrilling adventure stories, becomes a reality in Canadian goods which are displayed for sale and which they buy as commodities or luxuries. Ships sail the Seven Seas carrying Canadian goods far and wide, and in return bring back to us the choicest of distant lands.

Two of the main clients of the Dominion of Canada in the export trade are the British West Indies and the Orient. The West Indies trade is a natural and increasing factor of inter-Empire commerce. They are our closest imperial neighbors and lack nearly all the produce in which we are so rich.

Important to Canada

The importance of foreign trade on Canada's Pacific Coast is one of our brightest hopes for the future. Nearly three-quarters of the world's population dwells in countries bordering on the Pacific, and many of these are only just opening up to western civilization. The British Columbian ports are some of the most logical and convenient for the Orient trade, and it would be difficult to exaggerate the possibilities this offers when the full development of these countries is attained.

One of the most widespread trades of Canada is that in furs. It would be useless to enumerate the different countries which she supplies in this line. for she is recognized as the world's general fur depot. Wheat is at present the most voluminous department of the export trade and finds its chief customers in the United Kingdom, Japan, Germany, the West Indies, Denmark, Ireland, Holland, South Africa, Norway, Spain, Greece, Italy and Brazil.

Hay to Europe

Hay is sent to Germany, Belgium Holland, British West Indies, and the United Kingdom, while the same places provide markets for a great proportion of the barley and oats which we produce.

Canada's forests are the main sources of lumber for Japan, China, Australia, New Zealand, the United States, South Africa and the British West Indies; and in the form of pulp and paper are exported to the United States, Great Britain, the Argentine, Australia, New Zealand and other markets.

Although tobacco growing in any quantity is a comparatively new venture in Canada, it has made tremendous strides in the past few years, and Canadian tobaco is becoming known in the world's markets. At the present time, about 29 per cent. of the Canadian crop is exported to the United Kingdom.

Feeds Many Peoples

Besides providing a great deal of the bread, Canada also produces and exports a considerable number of other things which find their way to the world's table. Meat and lard are sent to the United Kingdom. Germany, Belgium and Holland; cheese to the United Kingdom, British West Indies, United States, Belgium, Holland, Germany, South Africa and Denmark; eggs sail from Vancouver to Auckland, New Zealand, and from Montreal to England.

The Red Cross Helps Guatemala

Volcano in Guatemala Suddenly Erupts—20 So Far Dead and Relief Crews at Work

Guatemala City.—The government and the Red Cross put forward great efforts to give relief to the 300 victims of the violent eruption of the volcano Santa Maria, 70 miles northwest of this city. The official death list stood at 20.

The volano suddenly began violent eruption of sand and lava which continued for several days, although with somewhat diminished force. A stream of lava ran down the course of the Samalea river, causing suffocating heat in the district around Quezaltenango, Retalkuleu and Maoaltenango. Property damage in El Palmar area was estimated at $1,000,000.

Special trains were chartered to carry the relief workers to the scene of destruction and hospitals at Retalhuleu and Quezaltenango cared for many cases.

Several tales of heroism were told, among them the case of David Rodriguez, who remained at his telegraph key summoning aid until the glowing lava reached the door of the office.

A Lesson From The Stock Market

The crash in stock market prices in the United States, like most disasters, is not without its value to that part of the public which learns from catastrophes rather than from experience. The severe industrial crisis of 1920 had its lesson for American industry in teaching concerns that commitments must be the least possible and expansion carefully planned, and that caution must be observed in not pursuing profits at the risk of losing the whole business. American industry has learned that lesson well, and the last few years have seen hand-to-mouth buying, rigid inspection of overhead costs, and careful attempts at protecting the sales market. As a result, there has not been as severe an industrial disaster since that last one of 1920-21, and there are a number of economists of note who maintain that the country has actually ironed out the business cycle or flattened its rolls.

The recent unprecedented fall in stock market prices is not directly related to industrial activity, but to the large number of individual investors and speculators who have hoped to get rich quickly by buying securities on a small margin. The lesson they have learned, at some considerable expense, is that, while expectations of great profits may boom a stock up far out of proportion to its earnings, such hopes will not keep it from a drastic fall.

Investors who were caught in the unpleasant episode which culminated this week have realized that those without ample resources should buy stocks outright or at a margin constituting so high a proportion of the purchase price as to make it easy to hold on to securities at a critical period. They have probably also learned the wisdom of buying securities which, beause of their relation to actual earnings, are paying a dividend that makes it possible for the owner to hold on indefinitely without being overwhelmed by carrying charges. If the large investing public has learned some such lessons as these, it is probable that this month's decline in values may at some future time be looked upon with a more tempered regret than the recency of the occurrence now permits. — Christian Science Monitor.

Whaling Season Ends on Vancouver Island

Total of 406 This Year as Compared With 314 in 1928

Victoria.—The last whale has been hauled up on the beaches of the west coast of Vancouver Island for the season and the year's quest for the world's largest mammal in the north Pacific is now only a matter of record.

A total of 406 whales were taken this season by six whaling steamers of the Consolidated Whaling Corporation, compared with last season's catch of 314.

In the past there has been a steady market for the oil and bone of the whale, and now British Columbia whalers are finding money in whale's teeth. These are sold in Japan. The sperm whale, which is the common species off the British Columbia coast, is the only large whale equipped with teeth.

Removal of all the marketable portions of a whale carcass is but a matter of a few minutes when the expert Japanese and Indian cutters commence operations. The blubber or flesh is cut in strips, 30 feet long by three feet wide and one foot thick. It is peeled off like a skin from a giant orange, the "pull" being generated by a steam winch. One side finished, the whole whale is turned over with fourfold blocks and the other side is stripped. The ribs are then chopped through with an axe along the backbone, and the whole side torn out to explore the inner workings of the monster. These are neatly severed from the body and hauled out. What remains of the carcass is then hauled off the landing skid, cut up and turned into fertilizer.

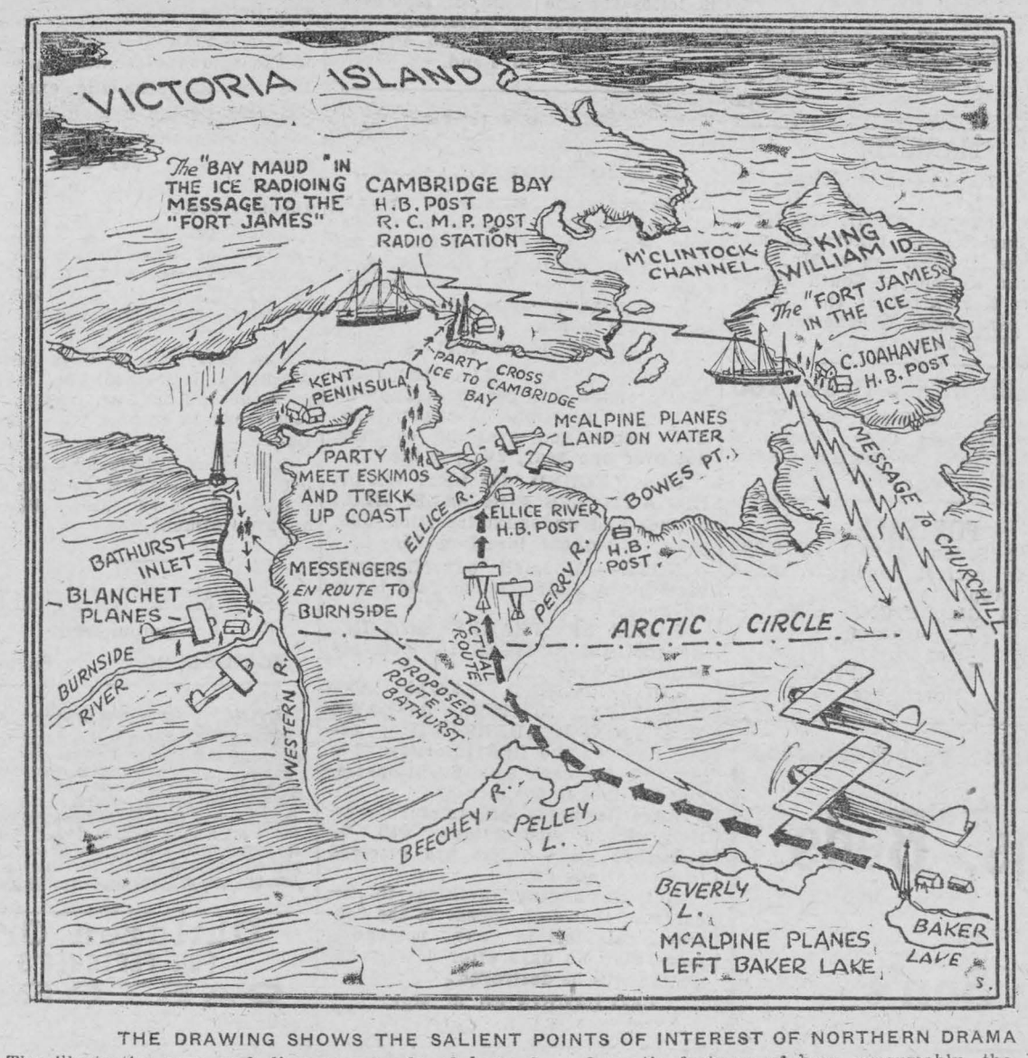
The blubber, cut into easily-handled pieces, are fed into a revolving knife, which reduces them to the size of bacon slabs. Carried upwards by a conveyor these little pieces drop into rendering tanks, where they are boiled for 10 hours and finish as sperm oil.

Scientists Capture Devil of Deep Seas

Auckland, N.Z.—A deep-sea devil was one of the strange catches made at a depth of nearly 8,000 feet off the New Zealand coast by Danish scientists recently, acording to R. A. Falla, who accompanied the expedition. The deep-sea devil is a creature with an enormous mouth and constructed like a skeleton, with practically no internal organs, so that there is water inside and out. It thus is able to withstand the great pressure in the depths in which it lives.

A strange thing about the creature is a long feeler above its head holding a lamp. By generating its own light for this it attracts fish from higher levels which become easy prey to the great jaws.

Graphic Depiction of the McAlpine Hunt



THE DRAWING SHOWS THE SALIENT POINTS OF INTEREST OF NORTHERN DRAMA

The illustrative map and diagram reproduced here show dramatic features of how, presumably, the McAlpine party became lost on the shores of the Arctic ocean and how orders, in preparation for their removal to civilization, will be instigated and flashed over the air to northern posts. As the diagram shows, the McAlpine aeroplanes presumably became "blind" and flew out over Queen Maud gulf, finally landing in water. The aeroplanes were then pulled ashore and after a lapse of time the party started to hike along the shores of the Arctic, eventually falling in with friendly Eskimos who guided them across the ice to Cambridge Bay. News of the mining men's arrival was flashed by the Arctic ship Bay Maud to the ship Fort James at Cape Joahaven, where it was relayed to Fort Churchill. Back, via Baker Lake, would come wireless instructions to Bathurst Inlet radio station, from where messengers would start out on foot to Burnside station, where three aeroplanes started to bring out the lost men...The journey from Cambridge bay to Bathurst is a 250-mile hop across Dease strait, between Victoria island and the mainland; over Kent peninsula, which projects northward on the east side of Bathurst inlet, and across the half-frozen waters of the inlet to the southwest shore, where the radio station is located. Three of Captain Blanchet's patrolling quartette made the journey to Cambridge bay to bring out the new-found McAlpine men. No message has indicated the identity of the pilots who manned the trio of machines, but four pilots under Captain Blanchet's command are Roy Brown, William Spence, H. Hollick-Kenyon and Andy Cruickshanks. A 450-mile jump faced the Blanchet phalanx in their next move towards civilization, and Baker lake, 300 miles west, on Hudson Bay, is their goal. Baker lake is some 600 miles north of Churchill,ft bay terminus of the Hudson Bay railway. Churchill, in turn, is about 1,000 miles north of Winnipeg. Colonel McAlpine and his seven companions are expected to reach Churchill by the middle of November, and Thayer Lindsley, director of Dominion Explorers, declared that the company's party, missing for eight weeks in the Arctic, should be in Winnipeg before the end of the month.

Philadelphia Gives Show for Boys Dogs

"Mutt" Barred at "Plain Dog" Show, but the Difference Is Only a Name

A dog, no matter how lowly his origin or how far he may be from distinguished lineage, is not a "mutt" and the officers and agents of the Philadelphia Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals are anxious to make this plain. If a canine happens to belong to that class of ineligibles for blue ribbon honors, he is just a "plain dog." But he is never a mutt.

This was made manifest when the society held its annual "Plain Dog Show," which had been exploited by facetious newspaper writers variously as "a pooch exhibition," a show of unlovely pups," and a "mutt bench."

The term mutt, although approbious to the S.P.C.A., has a different meaning to the urchin who, perhaps, has found his pet lunching around an ash can. When a very freckled and very red headed boy leading a yellow "plain dog," a hopelessly plain one, by a string, applied for admission to the show, he asked:

"Say, lady, is dis de place where de mutt show is going on?"

The attendant eyed him with an expression that may have meant anything, but she replied:

"This is the place where we're holding a 'plain dog' show. We don't know anything about 'mutts'."

"Well, dis dog is a plain dog all right, lady, but he's one of de best mutts you ever seen. Can I bring him in?" And when permission was given the freckled lad and his pet appeared before the judges.

The show was not limited to dogs. There were cats, a turtle, a goose, parrots, rabbits, white mice and a few pigeons. There were no fancy names like "Longshore's Royal Fang," or "Skyland Rose of Monthaven," which one might hear about the upstage shows where the dogs are not plain. Of the 125 dogs benched (beg pardon, that's a professional term), that is to say exhibited, a score were called "Spot," some were called merely "Here, Pupsie!"

Prizes were awarded for the grand champion dog of the show, whose name, by the way, happened to be "Queenie," and who was adjudged the most typical mongrel of all entries. As far as the youngster with the red shock and freckled face was concerned, he was unconvinced(and as he departed, he said affectionately to the little tousled bundle under his arm:

"Come on, mutt, let's go out and git some eats."—Christian Science Monitor.

Mennonites Seek Homes in Canada

Dominion Considers Proposal to Admit 5,000 from Moscow

Ottawa.—It is learned that the department of immigration and colonization is confronted with a proposal to admit approximately 1,000 Mennonite agricultural families, representing about 5,000 souls , who have arrived in Moscow after having been dispossessed of their farms in Siberia. So far as is known these families are without funds or friends in Russia. They have heard of the opportunities awaiting agricultural settlers in Canada and are eager to find refuge in this country.

It is understood that the department has been asked to allow these people to join fellow Mennonites principally in Western Canada, who may be willing to open their homes and give them refuge until next spring when they will be able to find employment on the land. This action is urged not only on humanitarian grounds but because the families concerned are bona fide agriculturists, law-abiding, well-behaved, and although disposed to settle in groups are by no means communists. The good record of the great majority of Mennonites already settled in Canada is urged in their behalf.

Immigration officials interviewed admitted that a proposal to bring 1,000 Mennonite families to Canada from Moscow has been presented to them, but they would not state whether or not the proposed movement would be authorized. It is understood that much depends upon the assurances which can be given that the families will be given shelter and maintenance in Canada by fellow Mennonites until suh time as they are able to establish themselves.

Women Working For Senate Seat

No Appointment Likely Before Christmas—Names Already Mentioned

Ottawa.—Plenty of women are writing to Ottawa these days seeking a seat in the Senate. If they are not doing it themselves, others are putting forth their names. No appointment to the Senate is likely before Christmas and, of course, one can be made only where there is a vacancy.

These exist in Ontario, Quebec and Manitoba, but nowhere else. Hon. Mary Ellen Smith's name is put forward, but she is from British Columbia, where there is no vacancy.

Mrs. Edith Rogers, M.L.A., of Winnipeg, may have a chance. Many here think that Mrs. Norman Wilson, of Ottawa, wil be selected. She is the millionaire daughter of the late Senator MacKay, of Montreal, very prominent in the Liberal women's organization, a fine speaker and a personal friend of the Prime Minister.

Ontario To Extend Care of Epileptics

Province to Build Extra Quarters in Hospital at Woodstock

Ontario will rank second to no other state in the world in its treatment of epileptics when work finally has been completed on tenders which the provincial department of public works will call within a week for additions to the Ontario hospital at Woodstock.

The present capacity of this hospital is 200 patients. Under the work planned, this capacity wil be trebled by the addition of three units. Two of these buildings wil be sleeping and living quarters for the patients and the third will be a kitchen and dining room. In addition a central heating and power plant is being constructed. The latter will be built close to the railway line which lies near the institution and a siding wil connect it with the main tracks. Tunnels will join the heating plant to the main offices of the hospital.

At present Ontario is perhaps the only province in the dominion having a special institution for epileptics. In other provinces, these cases are sent to asylums with the insane, although epilepsy, except in its final stages, by no means upsets the reason.

At the Woodstock hospital special attention is paid to the children's cases. Research aimed at the control of the disease also is proceeding under the superintendent, Dr. T. Cumberland, and his assistant, Dr. C. H. Pratt, and officials hold high hopes of the results.

Socialism in Australia

The Patriot, London: Socialism has for some time been the curse of Australia, holding back prosperity, demanding uneconomic wages, inflating the cost of living, helping to pile the population into the towns and checking employment in a land where it is available in super-abundance for every honest and energetic worker. Australian Socialism in late years has become more and more penetrated with so-called Communist elements, whose tendency to violence has been painfully demonstrated. Socialist legislation, which was heading rich Queensland towards ruin, had experimented on a large scale with compulsory arbitration.

A STITCH IN TIME SAVES NINE

This age-old adage applies just as well to the eyes as to other things.

It is a peculiar fact, that in spite of the splendid facilities now availabe for the scientific examination and care of the human eye, many people disregard the Optometrist's existence until they have eye-strain to such a degree as to make them uncomfortable.

Many people who dread the thought of wearing glasses would never have to wear them, except perhaps for reading, if they would consult a competent Optometrist in time.

The best time to have your eyes examined is before you feel your eyesight failing, not after. It is dangerous to gamble with your eyesight.

Eyes should be examined at least every two years, and, under some conditions, more often. Phone for an appointment.

Sunday School Lesson

November 17. Lesson VII — Living With People of Other Races.—Acts 10: 9-15, 30-35; Galatians 3: 28, 29. Golden Text—Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: But in every nation he that feareth him, and whom worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.—Acts 10. 34, 35.

ANALYSIS.

I. AN INTERNATIONAL FRIENDSHIP, Ruth 1: 1-18.

II. OVERCOMING NATIONAL PREJUDICE AND ILL WILL, John 4: 5-10; Acts 10: 1 to 11: 18; Gal. 3: 28, 29.

III. WHAT WE OWE TO OTHER RACES AND NATIONS, Rom. 1: 14.

INTRODUCTION—We have, in the Bile, some interesting examles of frienly intrcourse and neighborliness between people of different races or nations. Such are Abraham's relations with Hittite communities in southern Palestine (Gen. 14: 13), the cordial welcome given Jacob and his sons by the king of Egypt (Gen. 47: 1-10), Moses with the Midianites (Exod. 2: 15-21), David among the Philistines (1 Sam. 27: 1-7), David and Solomon and the king of Tyre (1 Kings 5: 1-7). It is true that there are many wars in Bible history, but there are also some bright instances of international friendliness. It will be remembered that Jeremiah counseled submission to Babylon, and spoke well of the king, Nebuchadnezzar, chap. 27: 1-12. He even advised the Jewish captives to settle down peaceably, and to make homes for themselves in Babylonia, saying, "Seek the peace of the city whither I have caused you to be carried away captives, and pray unto the Lord for it: for in the peace thereof ye shall have peace" (chap. 29: 4-7)—good advice for exiles of every age.

I. AN INTERNATIONAL FRIENDSHIP, Ruth 1: 1-18.

The family of Elimelech had been hospitably received in Moab, just across the Jordan valley to the eastward. he sons married women of Moab. Apparently they were not influenced by the bitter terms of the law against foreigners in Deut. 23: 3, if such a law was in existence at that time, and they quite evidently knew nothing of the stern measures taken against mixed marriages by Ezra and Nehemiah in the fifth century B.C.

The story centres in Ruth, the Boabitess, whose warm affection for her mother-in-law Naomi, leads her to forsake her own homeland, and to returs with Naomi to Bethlehem in Judah. It is quite possible that she was influenced by the superior purity and dignity of Naomi's religion as well as by her personal character. In the sequel Naomi persuades her to claim from her dead husband's near kinsman the right of levirate marriage, a right ordinarily admitted only in the case of Jewish women, see Deut. 25: 5-10. And so Ruth, the woman of Moab, becomes the wife of Boaz, of Bethlehem, and great-grandmother of David, the king of Israel.

II. OVERCOMING NATIONAL PREJUDICE AND ILL WILL, John 4: 5-10; Acts 10: 1 to 11: 18; Gal. 3: 28, 29.

The Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans. The Samaritans were a mied race, descendants of the few people of Israel who were left after the fall of that kingdom, and the carrying off of many captives by the Assyrians in B.C. 722, and the strangers from eastern and northern countries who were brought and settled there with them, 2 Kings, chap. 17. In religion as well as race they were a mongrel people, combinisg the worship of Jehovah with that of other gods, and with gross superstitions. They had asked to be permitted to share with the returned Jews in the building of the second temple, but had been refused, Ezra 4: 1-3. Henceforward they were enemies. The climax was reached in B.C. 432, when Nehemiah drove from Jerusalem a man of high riestly rank, who had married the daughter of a Samaritan noble, Neh. 13: 28. This man fled to his father-in-law in Samaria, and either then or within the following century a temple was built in Samaritan territory on Mount Gerizim, which became a rival of the temple in Jerusalem.

In the story told in chap. 4 of the Gosnel according to John, Jesus is seen overstepping the bounds of Jewish prejudice, talking freely with a Samaritan woman, and visiting and preaching to the people of the Samaritan town of Sychar. Compare Acts 8: 5, 6, 25.

It was not easy to break down the prejudices of the disciples of Jesus against any kind of free intercourse with people of other races. The story of Peter's visit to the Roman centurion is a good illustration of this. Cornelius, a centurion, a devout man, has had a vision in which he has been told by an angl to send to Joppa for Peter. While a soldier and two of his household servants are on their way to invite Peter to come to him, that apostle has himself had a trance, dream or vision in which he is made to doubt whether there is any real value in the Jewish distinction between clean and unclean foods (Acts 10: 14; compare Leviticus, chap. 11). While his mind was occupied with this perplexing question the messengers of Cornelius arrived. Next day he went away with them and certain brethren from Joppa accompanied him.

When Peter and his Jewish companions went into the house of the Roman officer and met in a friendly way the company assembled there, they were doing what was not only very unusual, but was regarded as unlawful. But the influence of Peter's dream remains with him and. he said, God hath shewed me that I should not call any man common or unclean. He shows himself truly great in his willingness to learn. In every nation. he now learns, are men accepted of God.

When Peter returned to Jerusalem, and what he had done became known, he had to defend his conduct against those who had the same prejudices which he had found so difficult to overcome. It was to their credit as well as his that when they heard his story they held their peace and glorified God, chap. 11: 1-18. The spirit of Christ was working mightiiy in the minds and hearts of these strict observers of an ancient and venerated tradition. In him the nations are being made one—neither Jew nor Greek . . . neither bond nor free . . . all one in Christ Jesus, Col. 3: 28, 29.

What Paul means is not that he is in debt to these others for what he has received from them, but rather for what he has been entrusted with in the gospel for them. He has been charged with a message of saving grace for all men—debtor until his message is delivered. It is for the Greek as well as for the Jew, for the unwise as for the wise. To the highly-cultivated Greek other nations were barbarians, but for them, also, is Paul's gospel of the power of God unto salvation, v. 16. Such is our debt today to those who have not the knowledge which God has given us in such rich measure.

III. WHAT WE OWE TO OTHER RACES AND NATIONS, Rom. 1: 14.

Daring Canoeists Reach Varennes

Dick Lesage and Paul Paquin Encounter Rough Water in St. Lawrence

Dick Lesage and Paul Paquin, the two intrepid canoeists, who left Montreal recently to continue their 4,800-mile trip from Vancouver to Halifax, arrived at Varennes the same night, and next morning continued their journey down the St. Lawrence. They say that for the most part of their journey they encountered rough water, the east and northeast winds making waves which caused them to make but slow progress.

Their canoe has been strengthened by an extra layer of boards around it, and they have had a canvss cover fitted. This will be a great protection against the waves of the Gulf. Paquin and Lesage both say they are very glad to be paddling down the St. Lawrence River, which, they declare, is the best river in the world. During their trip they met many steamers and from each of them were greeted with triple blasts of their sirens in salute. Both are in the best of health.

Peril in Wet Windshield

A wet windshield is dangerous, especially at night when light from approaching cars is magnified by raindrops blinding the driver. If your car is not equipped with an automatic windshield wiper, apply a solution to the glass to clear the vision. One that has proved satisfactory contains a mixture of two ounces of glycerin and one ounce of water and one dram of salt. Apply with a soft cloth, rubbing up and down.

Prince of Wales May Buy Lands

Extension of E.P. Ranch Possible Lands Act Having Been Complied With

Ottawa.—Legal difficulties in the way of the purchase by the Prince of Wales of a sechion of school lands in Alberta as part of the E.P. ranch have been set aside as result of an Order-in-Council officially published in this week's Canada Gazette.

Under the Dominion Lands Act, lands set aside as "school lands" may not be disposed of without approval by the Minister of the Interior and unless Dominion land of equal value be set aside in lieu thereof. These formalities have been taken care of, according to the Order-in-Council, and no difficulty now remains.

Britain and Russia

Viscount Brentford in The Sunday Times (Cons.). Mr. Henderson is—like all the Socialist Party—an advocate of open diplomacy. Surely it is time that he took his fellow-countrymen into his confidence. True, he tells us that this agreement which he has signed will bring the two countries together, but on what terms? What has he promised his Russian friend? After all, it is not closer contact we want, but cleaner contact. We want to know, before we come into that happy friendship with Russia which Mr. Henderson foreshadows, that we shall find Russia with a changed heart—no longer the apostle of revolution in the world in general and in our Empire in particular.

Courage

On the thin plank of courage I
Walk with slow steps, and fearfully,
Across the unspeakable abyss,
And dare not look that way or this
Lest the unfathomed depths should show
The things I am afraid to know;
Lest on my downcast eye there gleams
The phosphorescent stuff of dreams,
Or, trembling in the misty air,
Grim shapes of terror and despair.
And ever as I go I hear
The jealous waves of doubt and fear
Stretching with many-fingered spray
To snatch me from my narrow way,
And drag into their angry sea
My half-inch of security.
God grant it fail not till I feel
The solid earth beneath my heel.

—J. J. Mills in the Observer.

It is not what happens to you in life that matters; it is the way in which you face it.

Air and Ventilation

It has long been known that air can be polluted in such a manner as to be injurious. For many years, is was thought that this pollution was due to an excess of carbonic acid gas, but it is now understood that, in an ordinary occupied room, the amount of this gas is not harmful, nor is there a sufficient reduction of oxygen brought about to acount for the effects of bad air.

In the early years of this century, it was proven by experiments that the symptoms caused by living in so-called bad or vitiated air are due to the temperature of the air, its moisture and its stillness. In other words, conditions of the air which do not favor the loss of heat from the body are the conditions which cause the ill effects of bad air. The body is constantly generating heat and if the person is to be comfortable and fit, the surplus heat must be got rid of. The skin is the means for getting rid of exessive body heat. When the body is surrounded by hot, humid, still air, it is difficult or impossible for the skin to eliminate as it should, and, as a result, there is discomfort, and, later, if the condition persists, there will be headache, shortness of breath and an increased pulse rate and temperature.

W know, form common experience, how much more comfortable we are on the warm days when there is a breeze as compared with the way we feel when the day is hot and still.

To secure comfort and fitness, we should live in an atmosphere of cool air whih is in gentle motion, and the object of ventilation is to maintain such an atmosphere. This can usually be accomplished in a satisfactory way by having a thermometer in the room and by opening the window. A considerable amount of the ill-health that occurs in winter is due to the lowered efficiency of the body which follows upon living and working in overheated places. The body is toned up by cool air and upset by overheated still air.

Questions, oncerning health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College St., Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

Empire Trade

The Standard, Nairobi, British East Africa: Those whose primary attitude to the British Empire is one of pessimism will experience a new hope and a great pride if they read the annual report of the Empire Marketing Board. The report provides a picture of Imperial economic progress, prosperity, courage and faith fascinating and inspiring in the vividness of its simplicity. In a survey of the position during the last thirty years we find that every one of the great Dominions an some of the colonies have advanced from relatively modest positions into that of great and important contributions to and purchasers in the markets of the world.. Since the beginning of the present century there have been phenomenal increases in the exports of raw and manufactured products. In the words of the report, "the tide of Empire trade is flowing strongly." Britain has moved away from the stage in its political thought when "Imperialism" was a sneer and a reproach in public life. To-day each party strives to outbid the other in attention to Empire development and there is a growing body of public opinion which favors the withdrawal of Britain from her international entanglements in order that every ounce of the nation's strength may be concentrated on the development of the Empire as a unit within itself.

Trans-Canada Road Three Links From Its Goal

Gaps Lie North of Lake Superior, in Rainy River District and Through Rockies

Work to Cost Millions

Route Will Span Dominion Area From Coast to Coast

There are only three links missing in the highway that soon will span Canada from coast to coast.

Until the gaps north of Lake Superior, in the Rainy River district, and through the Rocky Mountains are completed, it will still be necessary for the trans-Canada motorist to journey through the United States.

Links to Cost Millions

Agitation for completion of the road is growing, but the few hundred miles to be built run through a territory where tons of dynamite must be used before motorists will have a path.

The missing links will cost millions but will mean an immediate return of millions in extra tourist revenue. The Lake Superior country, the territory from Fort William to the Manitoba boundary and the Rocky Mountains offer possibilities for creating the finest scenic highways yet constructed in the dominion.

The gaps are gradually being closed. The Ferguson Highway, opened three years ago, pierces the northern Ontario wilderness for hundreds of miles. From North Bay the Trans-Canada has completed the 280 miles to Sault Ste. Marie. From here the motorist crosses into the States though the road is opened for nearly eighty miles north of the Sault.

Attraction for Tourist

In the centre of the long gap from the Sault to Manitoba a stretch of highway is completed on both sides of Fort William and Port Arthur and is being pushed gradually westward along the old Dawson Trail. In British Columbia the Cariboo Trail has passed through one range of mountains, but the main Rockies remain to be crossed.

It is the wild country that provides the real attraction for the tourist. Its lure draws motorists from the smoothly paved highways of the south to the twisting, turning washboard gravel that represents the pioneer stage of road construction in the north.

Within five years it is expected that the Trans-Canada will be complete across Ontario. Most of it will be paved. By that time many stretches will be strengthened.

In the north it is still possible to almost forget hot dog stands and miles between gas stations are common. But there are beautiful lakes every few miles and stretches of giant red pine border the highway.

It is the ideal land for the motor camper. Forest rangers are clearing camps at convenient spots on the Trans-Canada and have already cleared scores of sites on the Ferguson highway through the Temagami reserve.

It will be late next year before the Trans-Canada taps what is believed to be Eastern Canada's most rugged scenery. Pushing north from the Sault the road is almost on the edge of the canyons and semi-mountains of northern Algoma. The Algoma Central Railway alone taps this territory at present and few tourists and almost as few Canadians have discovered its ruged beauty.

It was this section of Algoma and the northern shore of Lake Superior that almost halted the Canadian Pacific Railway fifty years ago in its attempt to span the dominion with steel. The hills are solid rock and in the rock is low grade iron ore, millions of tons of it, waiting for development.

Difficulties ahead in this section have caused some agitation to change the route and have the road go straight north along the Ferguson Highway to Cochrane and then west, following the National Transcontinental Railway. The cost of this route would be less, but the scenic grandeur of Algoma would be lost.—N.Y. Herald Tribune.

Dreaded anaemia can be banished!

IN middle life, when vitality is not as great as it once was, and the blood stream is naturally thinned and devitalized, anaemia easily lays hold on the system. At first, just a tired feeling, it quickly results in bodily weakness that ordinary tonics cannot avail.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills then become a wonderful aid. They supply the necessary oxygen to the blood, increase the blood count and renew waning vigor.

"I was seized with anaemia," writes Mrs. Charles Lambert of Port Hope, Ont., "and was in a very bad state. As a girl I had taken Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for a run-down condition and decided to take them once more. Again the result was marvellous. In a little while I was fully well again."

You cannot begin too early to check anaemia. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold at your druggist's or by mail, postpaid, 50 cents, from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Different Woman

"I have great pleasure in informing you that Kruschen Salts have worked wonders for me. I have been a great sufferer of liver and kidney trouble, and after trying one bottle I am a different woman. I had to give up my work, but thanks to Kruschen Salts I am back at work again, and I give my son a little every morning, and I don't hear of the little complaints now which a child generally gets. He is happier and brighter. I have enclosed a snap-shot of son and self. I am 43 years, boy 6 years. On Passamaquoddy Cranberry Picking

Summer, mellow and heavy with clover until late in September, at last was gone. The keen days of October marched in flaming pageantry over the three farms along the river.

"It's the fall of the year," Janet MacQuarrie reminded Debbie. "The cranberries are red now in the rocky pasture."

"I've been thinking for a week or more, Aunt Janet, that it's time to be preserving them for the winter, and I've only been waiting till I was sure they were dead ripe."

"You'd best be doing it now, Debbie, or you'll not have them picked before the frost gets at them."

It was a day of flooding windy light when Debbie at last took her pails to the rocky pasture.

The land beyond swept up to a bald hiltop, and there, too, the cranberry vines were clinging. From Harbor By Chance and even from other settlements around the bay, the women and children would come before snowfall to strip the vines of their scarlet fruit.

Already the slopes of the Bocabec Hills were dotted with the first cranberry pickers. Debbie, working alone in the pasture, could see the Duncans half way up the hill. Beyond them young Tony Lufti and his mother were busy on their knees. Still further up the rocky slopes a group of boys and girls had found some heavily laden vines and their shouts and laughter sounded clearly through the crisp air.

The small red cranberries rattled swiftly into Dibbie's pail. She had been working for some time in the cranberry patch of the rocky pasture when she heard her name called from the fence and saw that Mrs. Duncan had come down the hill.

"It's a good cranberry year, Debbie," she called. "Some years seem to be good for everything—herring and cranberries and hay."

Debbie left her pail on the ground and went over to the fence.

"This has been a good year for us all," she agreed. "Has the White Head Weir been doing well, Mrs. Duncan?"

'Ay, Debbie. Angus was saying only last week that if the herring stay inshore for a little longer it'll be an easier winter for us than we've had for many a year."

"For all Harbor By Chance, too, I'm thinking," was Debbie's grave reply. "My father's well pleased with the summer."

"We're all glad of that, Debbie."

The woman on the other side of the fence turned away, and Debbie returned to her cranberry patch. From time to time she heard the laughter of the children clearly across the sunlit distance. She heard their shouts when one discovered a new patch, and she saw them disappear around the shoulder of the hill.

Wave on wave of sunlight and of shadow swept up from the asters, blue at the river's edge, over the brown fields and thickets of goldenrod, to the masses of crimson maple on the Bocabec Hills. And on the rocky slopes the cranberry pickers knelt before the glossy vines.

The sunlit moments hurried by. A flock of crows flew across the sky with a loud cawing. A woodpecker drummed on a tree nearby. Steadily the scarlet berries filled Debbie's pail. —Frances Gillmor, in "Thumbcap Weir."

HOW TO RELIEVE CHILDREN'S COLDS

Avoid Serious Results by Using Baby's Own Tablets.

When a child shows the first symptoms of a cold, such as sneezing, redness of the eyes, clogged or running nose, prompt measures for relief may avert serious results. Mothers should always have on hand some simple safe and effective remedy for immediate use.

Baby's Own Tablets act quickly, contain no opiates or narcotics, are tasteless and harmless. Concerning them Mrs. Jos. Cadieux, Holyoke, Mass., says:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my children and find them a very satisfactory medicine. When my little boy had a cold I gave him the Tablets at night and he was well the next day. I gave them to the children for constipation and they are always benefited. I think Baby's Own Tablets are much easier to give a child than liquid medicine. I strongly recommend all mothers who have young children to keep a box of the Tablets in the house."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

General Smuts: A Great Living Empire Figure

(By a Young Boer)

General Jan Christian Smuts, the greatest living Empire figure, has arrived in England and is delivering Rhodes Lectures at Oxford.

General Smuts is no longer a Premier sunk in the sterility of opposition, a tragic genius penned into a small holding. Here at least he will find that the people are at last beginning to follow the Empire banner which he and a few like him have carried alone for so long.

Here Smuts is a world figure. All Englishmen know him as the grave pleader at the Versailles Conference, who would have saved Europe much misery, if only Europe's own statesmen had not barred the way. But few know that, in his own country, this former enemy of England has suffered more for the Empire than any Englishman has done.

When he returned from his triumphs in Europe he found acclamation at Capetown, it is true; but he also found gross cartoons in the Afrikaans Press showing him as the "Handyman of the Empire," in khaki uniform, next to a baboon tied to a pole.

A "Khaki Boer"

This carried the bitter implication that he was a "khaki Boer"—of the renegade sort who helped Britain during the Boer war—tied to his Empire pole like a captive baboon. The vilest thing you can call a soldier is 'traitor," and for years Smuts has had this epithet flung at him. Many in South Africa were, like myself, trained practically from childhood to hate him.

A politician could have countered with an even viler epithet, but I leave you to imagine what pain this must have caused to a great and sensitive character such as that of General Smuts. The rural tub-thumpers still talk of Smuts and the Rand revolt, accusing him of causing bloodshed among his people—of shooting his own blood flat, as the idiom runs. It is a tragedy common among the Boers, inevitable in a race in which the hot blood of the French runs beneath the phlegm of the Netherlander. The Boers were divided even on th Great Trek.

It ise a greater tragedy still that Smuts should have had to apply his epic qualities to humble but necessary things such as trade treaty disputes and the bilingualism of railway porters. Kruger was the same. He had a brain like Solomon, and would have towered over most of the statesmen of the past century if he had been orn in Enurope.

Lonely in the first place with the terrible loneliness of the intelectual, Smuts was further estranged from popular sympathy because the scene of his triumphs lay in a land which few of his own people had seen and which most of them knew only as a former enemy. He was nicknamed "Slim Jannie" (Sly Jock) for the same reason that made the average Berliner look upon the great Stresemann as a traffic light, facing all ways at once.

Before these vicious attacks Smuts was puzzled, hurt, but never resentful. That it caused him deep pain was obvious, for the love of the Boer for his people is a far more intimate thing than European nationalism. He had to stand by and see his enemies forge their way to popular heroism by a path that he could only too easily have adopted himself.

Smuts Punished

I have seen him pathetically trying to reach down to the minds in front of him. He stood on a wagon in the Marico bushveld once and explained in almost Biblical Afrikaans how "the people had punished him for what he had done in the Rand revolt." It was lame, clumsy. I remember a meeting near Pretoria, where an unsoaped little alien got up in the front row and practically made hay of the tall, golden-bearded figure on the platform. Smuts was stammering, uncomfortable.

Most of Smuts' imperfections lie in this same inability to be one of the people mentally. Socially, he has fewer pretensions than, sty, the mayor of a London suburb. His manner is charming, but cold. He cannot be vapidly effusive to bazaar organizers. If you disagree with him, he does not argue, but merely says you may do as you please. He cannot call people names.

In Europe you are lucky. You always see Smuts at his great moments. In South Africa we only get the chance rarely, at times such as when he drove by car through the rebel-infested Rand, in the certainty that any of the people he passed would have emptied a magazine into him with glee. He does not know fear.

We only see him at his greatest when he is speaking in a place that really inspires him, and we hear oratory resonant as Cicero's and graceful as Burke's; at the unveiling of a war memorial at the top of Table Mountain, at De Wet's funeral, at the rededication of Kruger's memorial in Pretoria.

His thoughts then are gigantic. His words are like a wind in the Drakensberg peaks. His mind is like a mellow sun, embracing al a man's actions and the end of all human effort. At De Wet's funeral, under the great needle of the Concentration Camp Memorial, he spoke like a Roman at the bier of a brother fallen in civil strife.

On the top of Table Mountain his words hung man's destiny in pictures before our eyes, from the time when he was a speck in the slime.

And now I must make the bitter confession that to you in Europe, Smuts means more to us in South Africa. He is an intellectual. Shaw's King Magnus might be Smuts when he tells his grocer-like Prime Minister: "There are things in me which must not die."

THE CALL OF THE WILD

Guns are bing examined, high boots oiled and all the other gear of the sportsman overhauled — the hunting season is under way. Reports from the haunts of the moose, the bear and the deer are like music in the hunter's ear. Game is plentiful. The dry spells in the spring were favorable for the game birds. Partridge are whirring and the curlew calling. There's plenty of them if you know where.

Is Quebec Waking Up?

Toronto Telegram (Ind. Cons.): Mayor Houde, of Montreal, the new leader of the Conservative party in Quebec, is a fighter. He has stirred up the by-elections down there till they are made more than mild initations of Donnybrook Fair. He cut the Liberal majority in Compton to the bone and his present campaign in Richelieu is evidence that he is still up and doing. Whether the revival in the Ancient Province will spread into the Federal field remains to be seen. But the fact remains that the Liberals are being given a bit of a jolt by the fiery Frenchman. There are still Conservatives in Quebec and if Mayor Houde rallies them to the polls, who knows but that the long-promised twenty seats may yet become something more than a pre-election dream?

TORONTO girl is Prize Winner...

"CONSTANCE was cross and fretful a lot," says Mrs. J. Flatt, 99 Highfield Road, Toronto, Ontario. She was upset and bilious; didn't want to eat and couldn't digest her food right.

"California Fig Syrup has changed all that, and made her a different girl. It regulated her bowels quickly, improved her appetite and digestion. She has had no trouble since; but has continued to gain until today friends say she's a regular prize winner for health."

Mothers by thousands are praising California Fig Syrup. Physicians endorse it. A pure vegetable product; it is safe for any child. The prompt relief it brings bilious, headachy, constipated children lasts; because it helps tone and strengthen bowels and stomach. Appetite increases; digestion improves with its use! A youngster's entire system benefits. Next time bad breath, coated tongue or feverishness warn of constipation, try it with your child and see how it helps!

When buying, look for the name California. That marks the genuine.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

THE RICH, FRUITY LAXATIVE AND TONIC FOR CHILDREN

When BABIES are upset

Baby ills and ailments seem twice as serious at night. A sudden cry may mean colic. Or a sudden attack of diarrhea—a condition it is always important to check quickly. How would you meet this emergency—tonight? Have you a bottle of Castoria ready? There is nothing that can take the place of this harmless but effective remedy for children; nothing that acts quite the same, or has quite the same comforting effect on them.

For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old, reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an everyday aid. Its gentle influence will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. Its mild regulation will help an older child whose tongue is coated because of sluggish bowels. All druggists have Castoria; the genuine bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper.
