STEINBURG SENTENCED TO 3 YEARS IN PORTSMOUTH PENITENTIARY

Ewart Steinburg, wanted in connection with the robbery last November of an employe of the Bank of Nova Scotia branch at Chesterville, Ont., was arrested at Toronto on Friday last, and held without bail.

Inspector H. Gardner of the provincial police found Steinburg at Toronto, and placed him in jail, pending his return to Cornwall, to stand trial for the $1400 robbery. With another man, Steinburg is alleged to have held up and robbed T.J. Bourke, bank employe. His alleged accomplice, Osler McCaffery, 20, of Westboro, was convicted last December for his part in the armed robbery, and sentenced to jail.

Provincial Constable J. Frank Rose left last Friday for Toronto, and brought Steinburg to Winchester on Saturday, where he was arraigned before Magistrate McCormick on a charge of robbery while armed. He was remanded without pleading to Cornwall jail, and appeared this (Friday) morning, at Morrisburg, before Magistrate McCormick. He pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to three years in Portsmouth penitentiary.

PRESCOTT CITIZEN DROWNS IN ST. LAWRENCE

Orange Scott Dawson, an old and highly esteemed resident of Prescott, was found drowned in the St. Lawrence river in a few feet of water, off the power house dock in that town on Sunday, at noon. He had left his home the previous evening to take a walk, as was his usual custom, and it is believed that he wandered away and accidentally fell from the dock into the water. Coroner C.F. McPherson of Prescott was notified, and deemed an inquest unnecessary.

The late Mr. Dawson was born in New York state 84 years ago, and went to Prescott with his parents, settling on a farm just east of the town. There he resided until a few years ago, when he went to Prescott to reside.

Mr. Dawson was actively interested in municipal affairs, and was reeve of Edwardsburg township for some time. He was also a sports enthusiast and was particularly fond of fishing and hunting.

He is survived by one sister, Mrs. Thomas Curry, North Channel.

MINUTES OF COUNCIL

Regular meeting of Council held at the Town Hall, on Monday Oct. 1st, 1934, at 8 p.m.

Members all present.

Minutes of previous meeting were read and adopted.

Moved by Mr. Roach, seconded by Mr. Becksted, that by-law No. 592 appointing nomination and polling dates, be read a first, second and third time, passed, signed and sealed in open Council this 1st day of October, 1934.

Moved by Mr. Flynn, seconded by Mr Coligan, that by-law No. 593 be read a first, second and third time, passed, signed and sealed in open Council this 1st day of October A.D. 1934.

Moved by Mr. Flynn, seconded by Mr. Roach, that Mrs. Wm. Mullin be given a refund on light rates from the date of resolution passed changing rate to domestic.

The accounts which had been received by the Clerk, during the month, were paid.

OTTAWA MAN DIES IN TRUCK SMASH

One man was killed, and three others injured, none seriously, when a truck in which they were transporting fair concessions from Carp to Avonmore failed to make a sharp turn on the Winchester-Chesterville highway, five miles east of Winchester, last Friday afternoon.

James (Paddy) Moran, 32, of 91 Sherwood street, Ottawa, was killed and his three companions, George Duford, the driver, and George and Lucien Chartrand, all of Montreal, were cut about the arms and body.

According to the version of the accident as told police by George Chartrand, who was sitting in the front seat with the driver and Moran, the truck was travelling about 25 miles an hour at the time of the accident, and the driver, Duford, apparently did not notice the sharp curve until he was almost on it. Chartrand claims that the driver applied his brakes, and swung his wheel sharply to make the curve, but that the truck tilted over on its side, throwing Lucien Chartrand off the back of the truck, and then clipping off a post before hitting the railway crossing and turning completely over and pinning Moran beneath. The other three occupants imediately righted the truck to release their companion, and hailed a pasing motorist, asking him to summon a doctor. Moran was dead when the doctor arrived.

The body was removed to Ottawa, where the fnueral was held.

A charge of reckless driving has been laid against Duford by Provincial Officer Frank Rose. Duford was araigned before Magistrate McCormick on Saturday last, and was remanded until after the inquest into Moran's death on Friday. He was granted $300 bail.

OCTOBER MEETING OF LOCAL WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The regular meeting of the Morrisburg branch of the Women's Institute was held in the Agricultural Office on Monday evening, Oct. 1, with Mrs. Clark the president in the chair. After the minutes of the previous meeting were read the members answered the roll call with the names of their favourite flowers. A social evening for November, under the direction of the members who are grandmothers, was discussed.

Very pleasing musical numbers were rendered by Mrs. Jas. Mallen and Miss Barbara Finnie.

Miss Rose Allison gave a most interesting and practical health talk on taking temperature, pulse and respiration, after which Miss Edna Pyper rendered a delightful solo in her usual pleasing manner.

Little Miss Lois Mallen's solo captivated her audience, who showed their appreciation by a hearty encore.

An interesting feature of the meeting was a display of table bouquets, which were judged by Messrs John Meikle, H. Bradfield and Fred S. Broder. In giving the decision, Mr. Meikle commented on the numbers and beauty of the exhibits, in spite of the inclement weather. Winners were:

1st prize—Miss Jane Dillen.
2nd prize—Mrs. H. Bradfield.
3rd prize—Miss Gillespie.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

MERKLEY—MYERS

A very quiet and pretty wedding was solemnized in St. James Church on Wednesday at 3 p.m., when Marion Audrie, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs Harry Myers, was united in marriage to Mr. Arnold Delbert Merkley of Ottawa, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Merkley of Iroquois. The youthful bride looked charming in a dress of brown crepe d'or, smart brown felt hat, and matching gloves, slippers and bag of French antelope. She wore a corsage of Talisman roses. Mrs. Frank Covington of Cardinal, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, wearing blue crepe, with matching accessories. Mr. Covington supported the groom. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Strange, of Aultsville, in the absence of Rev. Holmes.

Following the marriage, the bridal party drove to the home of the bride, which had been beautifully decorated for the occasion by Mr. Albert Burris. Shortly afterward, Mr. and Mrs. Merkley left by motor for a honeymoon trip to western cities, the bride travelling in a navy blue costume. Upon their return, they will take up residence in Ottawa.

That the bride was justly popular was evidenced by the number of gifts received. On Sunday morning, prior to her marriage, the Sunday School classes of St. James Church presented Miss Myers with a beautiful English porcelain fruit bowl and nappies. The presentation was made by Mr. Ed. Swayne, president, on behalf of the members of the school. Miss Myers thanked all for their kind remembrance, and invited them to visit her in Ottawa.

COLIGAN—EASTER

A pretty wedding ceremony was solemnized in St. Mark's Church in Prescott, on Saturday morning, Sept. 29th, at 10 o'clock, when Miss Evelyn Easter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Easter of Prescott, became the bride of Gerald Coligan, son of Thomas Coligan of Morrisburg. Father Briceland officiated and celebrated a nuptial mass.

The bridesmaid was Miss Myrtle England of Ogdensburg, and the best man Ray Coligan, of Morrisburg, brother of the groom. A musical program was rendered by the choir, which sang "I Love You Truly" during the signing of the register in the vestry.

The bride was attired in a brown taffeta gown, with brown hat and slippers and light gloves, and carried yellow roses. Her attendant wore blue satin, silver slippers, grey hat and gloves, and her bouquet was of sweet peas.

The ceremony was followed by a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's parents. Among those present were Mrs. Ernest Hopwood, Capt. Matthew Farrell of Morristown, N.Y.; Mrs. Timothy Kelly of Ogdensburg; Thos. Coligan, Mrs. Harold Coligan and Ray Coligan, of Morrisburg; Miss Myrtle England, Mrs. Jesse England and Emmett Morley of Ogdensburg; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kennedy, Mrs. Evelyn Belgard, Miss Gertrude Easter, Mrs. Laura Torrance, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Elliott, the latter a sister of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Boyle, Jr., Miss Anna Walsh, Fathers Mea and Briecland, all of Prescott; Mr. and Mrs. Bud Easter, the former a brother of the bride, of Ogdensburg; Mrs. Wm Leahy of Domville, Ont.; Miss Mary Harris and Alfred Bush of Lowville, and Miss Lucy Charlebois of Norwood.

The bride is a graduate of the Hepburn Hospital School of Nursing in Ogdensburg, and the bridesmaid was her classmate.

Mr. and Mrs. Coligan left by train for Montreal, where they spent their honeymoon. The bride wore a brown crepe traveling suit, with accessories to match. The couple have now taken up residence in Morrisburg.

RADIO COMMISSION

The radio commission has been the target of much criticism, a large part of it being of the non-constructive type. Much of this criticism has been unfair. But many Canadian radio enthusiasts refuse to admit this. They realize that the commission has put Canada on the air. Several excellent features by Canadian artists have been developed, some of these being so good that they are broadcast regularly by the United States chains. This means that home talent is being employed and encouraged. A large part of the outlay of the commission is for programs, which financially benefits many Canadians directly and many others indirectly.

Another important accomplishment for which the commission should be given credit is the unification of Canada over the air. The fact that the commission has made it possible to broadcast a Canadian program from coast to coast makes for a feeling of unity.

Nor should it be forgotten that the commission has made radio pleasure general throughout Canada by enabling local broadcasting stations to function by providing them with programs. Were it not for these programs many of the stations would find it exteremely difficult to carry on, and those who are largely dependent upon these stations for their radio entertainment would be deprived of much of the pleasure which they are now receiving. — Strafford Bacon-Herald.

HITLER'S KINDNESS

Out of the kindness of his heart, Germany's Mr. Hitler proposes to allow Germans sentenced to death to choose their own means of exit. Thus, if a man is sentenced to be executed, there will be placed in his cell a vial of poison and a loaded revalver. If, within a reasonable time, the condemnde man fails to make judicious use of either of these, the executioner will simply come along and relieve him of his head in the usual way.—Vancouver Sun.

SLOGANS NOT ENOUGH

In Great Britain they put on a "safety-on-the-highways week." The results was that in that particular week 126 persons were killed and 5,595 injured, the second highest casualty list for British highways on record. The experience suggests that carelessness on the highways calls for something sterner than experiments in good precepts.—Ottawa Journal.

RELIEF FOR BOWED BACKS

Those who have become stoop-shouldered from carrying around pocketsful of paper money will hail with glee the Ottawa announcement that the new Bank of Canada notes—shortly to be issued in denominations from $1 to $50,000 or thereabouts—will be much smaller than our present greenbacks. Smaller, in fact, than the dwarfed currency of United States.—Border Cities Star.

USE OF WORDS

It is related of a Frenchman who studied English that he testified: "When I first discovered that if I was quick I was fast; that if I was tied I was fast; if I spent too freely I was fast; and that not to eat was to fast. I was discouraged; but when I came across the sentence, 'The first one won one-dollar prize' I gave up trying to learn the English language." This recalls the conversation reported by "Punch" from a whist drive long ago. One player in a set remarked "we are two to two." At a neighboring table another player called out "Are you two to two? We are two to two, too." What could the Frenchman make of that?—Hamilton Herald.

COURTESY

Making reference to the death of a notable public man it was said of him that he will be remembered for his unfailing courtesy. That feature was stressed and that is as it should be. There is nothing as fine as unfailing courtesy whether it be in man or woman. It smooths the pathway of life and makes contacts with our fellows much more pleasant. No matter what the business may be, courtesy is a great factor in bringing it to success. But courtesy must be something innate, not forced, the outward expression of an inward state of mind.—Niagara Falls Review.

THE OLD FAMILY DOCTOR

The old family doctor type has been given a new lease of life though many have feared he was soon to be extinct. Dr. A. R. Dafoe, of Callander, who brought the Dionne quintuplets into the world is a case in point. The Journal of the American Medical Association has paid the highest tribute to the doctor, who serves along the concessions and settlements. There is still and will always remain room for the old style family practitioner as well as the other type of physician for both are necessary in this world of births and ills and developments.—Ontario Intelligencer.

BICYCLES AND CHILDREN

"During the past few weeks there have been a number of close calls of boys and girls in town being either killed outright or at least severly injured, as the result of careless riding on bicycles. Just last week a boy, through downright carelessness, ran plum into a motor car, but fortunately neither the bicyclist nor the auto driver was going very fast, and the only result was a bad scare on the part of both. It is useless for the press to warn the children of the danger they run, for that is a duty devolving upon the parents, and every father and mother should impress upon their sons and daughters the absolute necessity of using precaution while riding when crossing streets in the centre of blocks. At crossings pedestrians have some rights, but in the centre of blocks they apparently have none.—Perth Expositor.

FLIES ARE SO STUPID

Flies become a nuisance this time of year. Until now it seems they have been content to go hopping about elsewhere but in recent days they have taken to coming in here. What they expect to find we have not the slightest idea. And yet they sit on the parliamentary guide, the dictionary, look over all the papers and sit on the top of one's head. Flies are mean that way. We are sure flies are stupid. Right near to the building there is a restaurant which keeps open long hours each day and night. If they knew anything at all they would not be wasting their time around an editorial office where no victuals enter. They would be snooping around the restaurant next door or departing on an excursion to the grocery store on the street. Even a brindle cow knows more than to pasture on a concrete highway surface, and a dog knows enough not to start chasing a cat when dinner dishes are being cleared. But the flies seem to be such stupid things.—Walkerton Times-Herald.

THE EMPIRE

AN AGED VINE

The grapes on the 166-year-old vine at Hamption Court Palace are now ripe, and cutting was begun on Sunday. The fruit was sold to visitors at 6s a pound, including a carrying basket made by the blinded inmates of St. Dunstan's Hostel. The grapes on the vine, which was planted in 1768, are of the black variety and of fine quality, the bunches averaging from 1 lb. to 1 1-2 lbs. in weight. The vine is bearing about 500 bunches—some years ago the yield was about 2,000 bunches. During the Summer the vine has been inspected by thousands of visitors, who have paid a penny each to enter the vinery.—Inverness Review.

Leather Bows, Flowers, Bracelets and Clips, Fashion's Latest

There are frills and thrills for the feet in Paris—if seeing is believing.

Afternoon dresses of marvelously colored prints are all a rustle with frills and ruchings, large and small. Some are of the frock itself, while others stand out in crisp white contrast around the neckline and cuffs.

And the new shoes are not to be outdone. They, too, repeat this ruffled theme. The just-out blue and brown kidskin shoes have nifty little butterfly bows and odd trimmings lined with white, knotted coils of stitched and pleater kidskin tabs.

Leather flowers are doing their smart duty several places too —on plain kidskin pumps, either at the side or in front, and also are to be found trimming leather and fabric purses, belts, hats and the gauntlet cuffs of gloves.

Leather bracelets and clips are new —some trimmed with metal and some even set with stones while others are content to ornament themselves with knots of leather or bits of bead, glass or straw.

Heads Two Sets of Five Generations

Proud head of two sets of five generations, and with 14 children, seven living between 50 and 60 grandchildren, 40 great-grandchildren, David Noakes of London, England, celebrated his 100th birthday. He was married twice.

Jobless Man "Ends It All" By Sitting Nude on Hornets' Nest

Tampa, Fla.—The stings of scores of hornets killed Ramon Perez, 34, unemployed cigar maker who leaped nude into a colony of the insects with the avowed intention of killing himself.

Perez died after suffering hours from the stings. He was in the swarm of hornets for about 10 minutes. He went from his home to an adjoining vacant lot, removed his clothing, and sat down in the midst of the insects. While someone called the fire department, Perez's mother rushed to the aid of her son.

He refused to heed her appeal to flee. Finally, after firemen had begun burning weeds in order to smoke out the hornets, she dragged him from the lot.

Every part of his body was distorted to more than twice normal size. He refused medical treatment.

New Homes Provide Room For Games

Ten out of twelve of the houses being built today provide game rooms, a prominent architect declares. He is not talking solely about luxury homes, he insists, but about moderate-priced structures to be occupied by families with average incomes.

"The game room has come to have a definite place in the home scheme," he explains. "Especially is it important when there are young people growing up in the house. The game room gives them a place to which they may bring their friends and find equipment especially designed for the kind of amusement they like best Most important of all, since the ideal game room generally is isolated as much as possible from the rest of the house, the young folks can make all the noise they please and nobody else will be disturbed."

The ideal place for the game room, of course, especially when it must be inserted into a house that already has overtime use for every room, is the cellar. The cob-webby, cluttered basement, useful only for holding the furnace and those intricate winding pipes that nobody ever seems to know the use of anyway, is no longer fashionable.

WILLING HELPERS AVAILABLE

The clever householder, contemplating the installation of a game room, will interest not only his young people but the sons and daughters of his neighbors in the project. Then, before he knows it, he will have a volunteer corps of carpenters, fixers and planners whose eager enthusiasm will make up for minor lacks in technical skill.

In some successful cellar playrooms, the ugly fixtures of which every basement seems to unnecessarily full, are hidden by false walls. But if they must show, let the youngsters paint them to match the genral color scheme.

STAGE IN ONE CELLAR

One cellar playroom that has proved especially successful in a large family has one corner devoted to a stage where amateur theatricals are performed. Another, belonging to a family of fishermen and hunters, is decorated with the trophies brought home by proud anglers and good shots. If it is not possible, as it sometimes is not, to dedicate an entire room to the game idea, the living room may be made to serve the purpose if one corner is fitted with a table for games and comfortable chairs for the players.

The room where Norma Shearer and her husband entertain their friends at cards has walls panelled in dull-finished wood and a floor carpeted in dull blue-green, with furniture covered in various shades of beibe and brown and draperies in henna.

YOUR DRAPES

You can carry out any color scheme with little expense if you are clever with your fingers. Unbleached cotton may be dyed at home to any shade you wish. A ball fringe to match may be bought for a few cents a yard. Checked or plaid gingham or an inexpensive cretonne may be used to cover old furniture and you may buy lovely shades of paint and lacquer and have a perfectly lovely time "doing up" your game room to the Queen's Taste at an expenditure of a few dollars.

Such a room may well provide fun for all the members of the family. Mother could have her bridge club there or Dad his poker party without disturbing the rest of the house. There might be a folding ping-pong table and if there is a small stage, there could be charades, tableaux and all sorts of "stunts" for both your own children and the neighbors. It would be a good way to keep the youngsters at home during the long winter evenings.

Improving Economic Position Shown By Latest Relief 'Figures

Ottawa.—Arresting statistics made available by the Department of Labor show, as one of the most satisfactory features of the Dominion's improving economic position, the extent to which expanding Canadian business is affording re-employment to the heads of families.

As compared with May, the figures show, the number of heads of families drawing direct relief dropped from 265,796 to 226,959 for the month of August just ended. During the period, accordingly, approximately 39.000 Canadian family heads achieved a sufficient measure of economic re-establishment to do without public aid.

The number of dependents who were dropped from the relief rolls as a consequence was no fewer than 174,934.

The drop throughout the summer in the number of direct relief recipients has been steady, as each month has afforded a higher volume of employment. Costs to the Federal Treasury are also, accordingly, on the down grade. Whereas the May cost was $$6,500,000.

In May there were 43,845 individual cases of single unemployed men being cared for and in August only 30,432. Single men employed on highway works, Federal and Provincial, dropped in the period from 36,597 to 24,920.

The relief picture, it is further understood, would be immeasureably bright were it not for the unfortunate conditions which have overtaken Saskatchewan. That province alone has 143,000 people receiving assistance. This handicap to the general statistics is regarded by officials as making the improvement which is shown all the more impressive.

Marine Disasters In Past Century

While the loss of life in the Morro Castle tragedy was appalling, other marine disasters of the past century have taken bigger toll.

Following is a list of the more notable marine disasters in the last 80 years:

Interest Centres on Sturgeon River Area

Once again western Ontario is experiencing the mad excitement of another GOLD rush and many important looking discoveries have been made over a stretch of territory with a length of some forty miles and about four miles wide. While a number of promising showings of visible gold were uncovered at earlier dates, the real excitement did not start until June, and since that time the length and width of the district has steadily grown. It is seldom that so many of the older and soundly established mining companies have been so prominent in securing ground and options as has been the case in this field. Among those who have already secured claims are Coniagas Mines, Kirkland Hudson Bay (controlled by Lake Shore), United States Smelters, Macassa, International Nickel, McVittie Groham and others. Several of the properties held by these companies are already under active development and results of work done to date in the district cannot help but create enthusiasm over the outlook. Literally hundreds of veins have been opened up and showings of visible gold has become a common occurrence.

The eastern section of the new district lies some sixteen miles northwest of the Little Long Lac field, which has been so prominent during the last year. In this part of the field several properties have been under development for some months, and last winter a shipment of gold ore from surface of the Dik-Dik property was sent to the Flin Flon smelter in Manitoba and it is said that after all charges were paid a return of some eighty dollars per ton was obtained. Other companies in this section include the Jomac Gold Syndicate, Sturgeon River Exploration Syndicate, U.S. Smelters, Int. Nickel subsidiary, and Kirkland Hudson Bay (Lake Shore).

In the central and western sections of the camp Coniagas, Kirkland Hudson Bay, Oliver Severn Syndicate, McVittie Graham, the Connell interests, Spring Exploration and many others are prominent with important looking strikes having been made.

General opinion, of those who have visited the new area, is that it seems likely that this district will outshine even the spectacular Little Long Lac section before many months have passed and certainly as the situation looks at present, this does not seem to be any exaggeration.

Rush To Market Wheat

Western farmers are said to be rushing their wheat crop to market at an unprecedented rate, according to reports eminating from western centres. It is estimated, now, that this year's crop will exceed the 1933 one by some 15,000,000 bushels and in addition the price is about seventeen cents higher. One third of the marketable crop is already in the elevators, with quality being good from the southern sections. Frost has affected grade from the northern sections with the exception of the Peace River country which escaped the frost and is said to have a very fine crop.

Malting barley is reported at a premium and present prices are over 60 cents, as compared with about 36 cents last year. A considerable amount has been shipped to the American market with the result that Canadian buyers are unusually active in soliciting this grade. Cash quotation for the best quality of malting barley is around 80 cents.

Long Lac Adair Mines

Word coming down from this companie's property continues to be of a decidedly optimistic nature and Frank Leslie, in charge of operations, states that another new vein, running at right angles to the big number five, has been uncovered for several hundred feet. First assay from four-foot channel ran well over $7.00. Two additional assays from the number five ran over $14.00 and $6.00. The management are now considering plans for winter development, and it seems likely that shaft sinking will be started in the near future. Results of work to date on this property would indicate that Long Lac Adair has real possibilities of bringing in a producer.

Rail Revenues Rise

The steady increase in traffic revenues of the Canadian Railways, which has continued almost steadily for over a year provides one of the bright spots in the Canadian economic picture. With the exception of June, when a slight decline was recorded, combined traffic revenues of the two roads have shown an increase each month over the same period a year ago. During the month of August the increase amounted to 4.89% while the first two weeks of September recorded an increase of over eleven per cent., as compared wit the same two weeks in 1933.

Dominion Coal Co.

It is reported on good authority that notice will soon go out to shareholders proposing a reduction in the preferred dividend rate to 6% and at the same time offering preferred stock in lieu of arrears of dividends on the issue. It is understood that, if this arrangement is completed, dividend payments on the new basis will be resumed right away.

Humberstone Shoe Co.

For the year ending July 31st this company earned $2.87 per share on the outstanding common stock and sales were reported as being the highest in the company's history. Earnings were shown at $66,073 as against .63,-429 for the previous year.

Working capital also showed improvement, being $383,103 as compared with $369,172 in July, 1933.

Mineral Output Shows Big Advance

Figures released by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics show that mineral production in Canada for the first six months of the current year has made a very substantial increase. All metals except arsenic and the quantity of gold showed big advances. Gold output was only one per ent. less than in the first six months of 1933 but the average price of gold in Canadian funds during the period ending June 30 was $34.67, as compared with $25.75 in the first half of 1933. Output totalled $49,862,602, a new record high and an improvement of some 33% over the 1933 period.

Total of all minerals for the period under review amounted to $131,942,-180 as against $90,647,151 in 1933, an increase of approximately 45%

Sturgeon River Exploration Syndicate

Following the intense interest which has developed through the widespread and almost sensational discoveries in the Sturgeon River district, announcement is made of the formation of the Sturgeon River Exploration Syndicate for the purpose of acquiring properties and interests in other companies operating in the area. The Syndicate has already obtained a substantial interest in one three-million share company with acreage in the heart of the area where spectacular surface showings were responsible for the present intense interest in the district; has several properties under option and has others under consideration.

Recognizing the tremendous profits which accrued to pioneers in such fields as the Little Long Lac Area, the Syndicate management feels that the same opportunity exists in Ontario's most recent prospective mine-making district, and it is the intention of the syndicate to wholesale part of its holdings, but at the same time retain interest in the properties through holdings of securities to be issued by the operating company.

The Sturgeon River Development Syndicate, which will shortly be publicly announced, will have as its purpose, actual financing and development assigned to it by the Exploration Syndicate. Unit holders of the Exploration Syndicate will participate on a preferred basis in the issue of Development Syndicate units and will also get preferred position as, if and when share companies are formed and offerings made.

In Sturgeon River, during the past month or two, literally hundreds of veins have been reported to have been discovered, and many of these are said to be of a spectacular nature. Geological conditions are reported as excellent and it seems reasonably certain that a number of new producers will be added to Ontario's steadily growing list.

Briefs

McIntyre Porcupine Mines is reported to have three drills working on property recently optioned in Hislop Township, with eleven holes completed to date.

Teck Hughes has reduced its dividends to ten cents per share quarterly, as compared with former rate of fifteen cents per share.

Lee Gold Mines has acquired holdings in the new Sturgeon River Area and is planning immediate development.

Calgary and Edmonton Corporation income for year ending June 30th was $19,376, as compared with $16,866 for the previous fiscal year, while income in realization account was $132,477 as against $97,124 in the previous year.

St. Anthony mill is now treating some 146 tons per day. Gross production in August was $36,300 as against $25,000 in July.

Trafalgar Long Lac Mines has uncovered a new vein on its property in the Long Lac section.

When Hollinger shares sold through $21.50 last week they touched a new high record since 1927.

Profit of Beattie Gold Mines for six months to June 30, reached $122,078.00 with over $75,000 of this being earned for the second quarter.

Buys New Yacht

Something new in yachts is being built in the 64-foot sailing schooner now under construction at Newport Beach for Richard Arlen Paramount star. The vessel has a spring floor in the galley, which according to Arlen, means that no matter how rough the seas and no matter how rough the sea, and no matter how far the boat may rock, the floor of the galley remains perfectly level, thereby permitting cooking in all kinds of weather.

News of the Air

Last week we gave youse all a couple of accounts of the rise of Public Enemies No. 1 and 2, Rudy Vallee and Bing Crosby respectively. It is with mingled feelings that we relate the story of the rise and fall, (yes, fallen already so soon) of a singer, with a future that was every bit as bright as those of public enemies Nos. 1 and 2 have proven to be. Just think back a few years to those early morning programmes emanating from New York and sponsored by a big soup manufacturer. The whole hour was built around a young singer who had earned a fair degree of success in and around New York, and the powers that be, decided that he was star material and only needed the building up to put him in that class. The programmes were a big success, so the next step was to give him an orchestra of picked men and spot him at the Statler Roof in Boston. As you expected, after his first week, everyone, with the "what-it-takes" were there dancing to his music and listening to his singing. The second week though, something seemed to have gone wrong, the band was better than ever, but his voice had hit that long long trail. He would attempt a note, falter, hit it, then waver miserably. As the weeks passed, it became apparent that his voice was getting worse rather than improving. Needless to say, his contract was not renewed. N.B.C. must have dropped him completely also, for he was heard only occasionally in the two years that followed his dismal debut.

The past week, we were listening to the very fine music of Leo Reisman's orchestra on the ciggie half-hour, when, of all things, who should we hear singing, but the very man who seemed to have missed out as far as reaching the top was concerned.

Lou Conrad, for that is his name, is singing a song or two in an absolutely obscure role.

It goes to prove what Winchell says, "It's tough enough getting to the top of the ladder, but it's tougher to stay there."

Just in case you wondered as to the identity of the queer assortment of names we published last week, here they are:—

Cab—Well, that's an easy one. Le Calloway of the Hi-De-Ho school of music.

Miff—Who answers to Mr. Mole. One of the finest trombonists sliding around these parts or any other parts.

Isham—of the "keeping up with the Jones" clan. And what a band!

Muzzy—We suppose that most of you said, "The guy who writes that radio column is screwy, there's no one by the name of Muzzy anywhere. But there is; Muzzy Marcolline, the scat singer with Ted Fiorita.

Fess—One of Mrs. Williams little boys, leading a hot style dance band, and finally, Oswald Nelson, known better as Ozzie.

Mustn't forget to recommend the American Album of Familiar Music to those lovers of the semi-classic and light music. Virginia Rea and Frank Munn make a grand team interpolating the songs.

We have often wondered just what type of music you folks in the smaller towns and country villages favour the most. The sender of the best letter will receive a free ticket to one of the big Radio Broadcasts here in Toronto this winter.

Once again then, until next week, Heigh-Ho and aren't the middle strains of "I Saw Stars" a steal from "Now you can make my life a Bed of Roses." Am I right?

A Chinese Champion

Miss Gem Hoahing the remarkable little thirteen-year old player who won the Midlesex Girls' Tennis Championship last Saturday, has all the makings of an England player in her—and fortunately though she is Chinese by parentage she is British by birth.

Handicapped though she is by not standing more than a head higher than the net, she fought her way without check or hesitation into the final and won that, against a player fully up to championship standard, by 6-3, 6-1. She plays with both her head and her feet. Her footwork is remarkable and so is her mental concentration. Not of a physique to make hard driving a specialty she wins her games by skill in placing.

Two of the disabilities of her youth are that she cannot play in the Wimbledon Junior Championship this year or next or take the London matric for three years. Her father, watching her Middlesex triumph was a monument of Oriental impassivity.—The Spectator.

KEPT AWAKE BY BACKACHE

She Was Always Tired

Tried Kruschen — Now Full of Life

Only those who have experienced backache can understand how painful it can be. Only they can understand the disappointment of this woman as she tried one remedy after another—only to find that they failed. And they will appreciate her delight at now being able to write the following letter:—

"I was always feeling tired, never had any energy, and could get no sleep at night, for the pain in my back. So after trying several different so-called remedies (which did me no good at all), I decided to try Kruschen Salts. I am delighted to be able to say that I am now a different woman, full of life and energy, and free from the pain in the back."—(Mrs.) M. A.

Backache is commonly caused by the kidneys becoming inactive, and allowing impurities to accumulate in the bloodstream. The six salts in Kruschen will coax your kidneys back to healthy, normal action so that they will rid your blood-stream of every particle of poisonous waste matter. As an immediate result you will experience joyous relief from those old, dragging pains. And as you persevere with the "little daily dose" of Kruschen, the twinges will become less and less frequent until finally your backache will be no more than the memory of a bad dream.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at all Drug Stores at 45c. and 75c. per bottle.

Canada's Exports Up $51,273,382

Dominion's Trade Figures Show Big Increase Over Last Year.

Ottawa,—Canada's exports for the last five months of the present fiscal year totalled $258,897,407 or $51,273,382 more than for the corresponding period of last year.

Imports up to August 31 came to $221,531,524 or $60,083,285 more than last year.

Total revenues amount to $141,215,-849 in the five-month period or $19,-776,838 more than last year.

New Land For Old

India is so far away that most Canadians if they ever give it a thought regard it simply as a land of teeming millions and overwhelming heat—and fasting Gandhis. But India is in reality becoming a more and more important factor in the British Commonwealth of Nations, and therefore anything that affects its prosperity ought to be of interest to them all.

The Indian governmen has just been celebrating the completion of a great work of irrigation which must be added to its triumphs of peace. Mother India utilizes irrigation as European countries employ emigration—to aid her surplus population. Instead of relying entirely upon the latter to relieve her congestion, she actually provides new land for her people within her own borders, by providing water supply for areas that could not possibly be properly cultivated as they are.

The latest development in this direction is the Mettur dam on the Cauvery river in Madras Presidency. This vast work is second only to the huge Sukkur barrage on the Indus which was completed two years ago. It ranks in importance and size with the splendid works at Assouan on the Nile It is one mile long and 170 feet high, it has created a reservoir one hundred miles in circumference, from which seventy miles of main canals provide ample water supply for three hundred thousand acres of land which has not hitherto been under cultivation. The total cost was $3,000,000 and the Government expects to realize six per cent upon its investment. All the machinery and materials employed upon the work were British.

Thus it brought to completion a dream of the eleventh century, for the Cauvery was damned then. Hundreds of thousands of people are also assured of an ample living who have hitherto had to eke out a precarious existence, dependent entirely for their water supply upon the rather unreliable monsoons. British energy and enterprise continue the great work of developing India for the Indians whether Gandhi fasts or fights.—Montreal Star.

Under Anaesthetics

There were held the other day at Dundee meetings in connection with the British Dental Association. At one of them there was discussion on anaesthetics that might be used in dental surgery. Evipan was spoken of as were also chloroform, ether, nitrous oxide and oxygen.

In course of the talk, experiences of dentists with patients under and after anaesthetics were described. Mr. R. Wilcox, Bristol, spoke of the wrecking of his surgery by a stalwart and violent Welshman, a former rugby internationalist. After the troublesome tooth had been extracted the patient became very violent. He caught the dentist by the thighs and threw him several feet against the wall. The nurse jumped out of the surgery window; but the anaesthetist, a young Scot who played football brought the patient down with a rugby tackle, and ultimately he was overpowered. The patient was a sport however, and after saying he was afraid he had behaved in an extraordinary manner, offered to pay double fees.

Mr. R. C. Scott Dow, of Edinburgh, related the experience of a Dundee dentist, whose premises had been where a new building stands today in the city. The dentist was amazed when several of his patients having sat down in his surgery chair, changed their minds about having the extraction done, saying: "I won't have gas today." The dentist could not understand the change of front until one day he sat down in the chair himself. Directly opposite on the wall of the Salvation Army Citadel, in large letters, were the words: "Prepare to meet your God."—Banffffshire Journal

Canadian Weeklies Merge in London

Canada and Canadian Gazette Abandon Competition

London, — The weekly illustrated paper, "Canada," published here for the past 27 years is being merged with another weekly the "Canadian Gazette."

The editor and founder of the former publication, Walter Lefroy closes 37 years of prominent association with Canadian news work in London.

Announcing the merger the directors of "Canada" remark the recent years of depression severely affected, the fortunes of many newspapers. It had been wisely decided the two Canadian weeklies in London should cease their wasteful competition, they added.

Mr. Lefroy, an Irishman who lived in Canada for some years, is 64 years of age. He first visited the Dominion in 1891 and after six years' residence returned to London, contributing articles to leading publications concerning the resources and development of Canada and its growing importance. Before, he founded "Canada," he established the "British Columbia Review."

You Take Your Choice

Bruce Bliven, editor of the New Republic, New York, says the radio broadcasting in Britain is 1000 per cent superior to that of the United States. Joseph Hergesheimer, in the Saturday Evening Post, ridicules the British service and says it would be impossible to foist it on the American public. Both men spent some time in England studying the system there. So there you are.—London Advertiser.

News And Information For The Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Advanced Registry in swine is catching on in Ontario. Applications for entry are increasing rapidly, and the first testing station in Ontario located at New Hamburg with 34 pens, is filled to capacity, and scores of litters will be put on test on the breeders' farms this fall. Swine raisers are wanting to know what is back of the sow or boar they purchase, and the best way to provide that information is through oficial feeding and slaughter tests.

Grain Burnt Lambs

The use of legume hay, either alfalfa or clover, is considered essential for success in lamb fattening. Home grown grains may be combined to make an excellent ration for fattenng lambs, but range lambs require a considerable period of building up before being fed a heavy amount of fattening grains. Where the grain is increased too rapidly to include barley and wheat, lambs may become grain burnt, or overfed on grain. In such cases, they practically go off feed and stop making gains. These lambs are very difficult to handle. They should be taken of grain entirely, and fed on alfalfa hay and roots for a period of three weeks to a month. The grain feed may then be gradually increased until the lambs are being fed a full fattening grain allowance.

Weekly Crop Report

Reports from Bruce, Dufferin, Middlesex, Wellington and other counties state that frequent rains during September have greatly improved pastures, with a resulting optimism as to wintering of stock, snce beef cattle are gaining and will go into stable in very fair condition. Warm weather also resulted in a wonderful growth for fall wheat In Huron county, al root crops will be above the average of last year. Corn-cutting and silo-filling has been the order of the day in most sections. Reports of threshings in Wellington continue to give details of splendid yields, and the grain is of higher quality than for two or three years. Sweet clover seed there has yielded as high as ten bushels to the acre, and while timothy yields were not as high, good prices are very encouraging. Haldimand also reports higher yields than at first anticipated. Mangels will be a bumper crop in Middlesex, so the supply of feed for livestock will be much larger than expected.

Poultry Field Day at the Central Experimental Farm

Aspecial poultry field day on the finishing, dressing and grading of poultry, wil be held at the Poultry Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, on October 18th.

Demonstrations and lectures will be given on fattening feeds for poultry, crate feeding and crate feeding practices, killing and plucking, and grading of dressed poultry.

Farmers and poultrymen who would be interested can secure programs either through the Experimental Farm or by notifying their local agricultural representative.

Extend Ontario Boar Bonus Policy Until Next March

In pursuance of the present policy of encouraging the production of bacon hogs suitable for the Export Market, it is announced that the federal share of the assistance offered under the Ontario Boar Bonus Policy will be continued until the end of the present fiscal year, March 31st, 1935. Under this policy, a bonus of $5.00 is offered to owners of purebred boars of approved type, available for public service. If such boars are from sows qualified under Advanced Registry, the bonus payable is $7.50. Applications should be sent to H.J. Maybee, 59 Victoria Street, Toronto, 2, Ont.

Crate Feeding of Poultry

Crate feeding of opultry gives the highest quality flesh, and feeding in clean sanitary pens makes the best substitute. Only healthy birds of any kind will pay for feeding. Before confining them in crates or pens they should be given a laxative and made clean of lice. Feed sparingly at first. Two to four weeks are required for the finishing. It has been found that almost an good mixture of home-grown grains finely ground and mixed with milk wil" answer.

A satisfactory finishing ration may be composed of the folowing:

One part finely ground whole wheat.

One part finely ground whole barley.

One part finely ground whole oats.

Fresh skim, whole or buttermilk should be used as a mixer. This ration is satisfactory for all market poultry except geese and ducks.

Fruit Export Regulated

The new Fruit Export Marketing Scheme, recently approved at Ottawa is of particular interest to Ontario, since its purpose is to regulate the marketing for export from Canada of fresh apples and fresh pears. During the past five years, the average annual amount of fruit exported from the Daminion has been more than two million barrels.

By regulating the export, it is anticipated that over-supplies and shortages of Canadian fruit on the markets of the United Kingdom will be prevented and better prices obtained. It is also hoped to raise the general standard of Canadan apples sold in the United Kingdom. A Board has been appointed to administer the scheme, of which the Ontario member is P.W. Hodgetts, Parliament Bldgs., Toronto, from whom licenses may be secured for export of fruit. The Board will regulate the movement of all apples and pears exported from Canada and may prohibit during any period the exportation of any quantity, size or quality of fruit. Assessment will be made and colected on fruit exported, such assessment to be used to pay the Board's expenses. No person shall export from Canada any fruit in contravention of the oBard's regulations nor until he has obtained a license.

Effects of Drought in Canada

The following references to Canadian crop production are from Canadian official sources and indicate the effect of the drought as experienced in Canada.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics, in a bulletin issued Sept. 11, estimates the total yield in bushels as follows: Spring Wheat, 270,282,000 bus.; Fall Wheat, 7,022,000; Oats, 344,746,000; Barley, 68,800,000; Rye, 6,523,000; Flaxseed, 1,096,000. Yields per acre of all grains are below average, but are slightly higher than the revised estimates for last year.

The hay and clover crop is estimated at 9,884,000 tons, the lowest on record as compared with 11,433,000 tons in 1933 and an average yearly production of more than 16,000,000 for the four years 1926-1930. The fear was therefore well founded that Canada might be faced with a hay shortage, and the Order-n-Council of August 24th was accordingly passed requiring a license for all exports of hay and straw.

The Order-in-Council has had the effect of directing attention to the unusual shortage of supply, and the requiring of a license for export has prompted those in needy areas to anticipate their season's requirements, with the result that there is now a substantial movement of hay in Canada from the surplus areas to the areas of shortage.

MRS. SIMEON GOVE

On September 28, Mrs. Simeon Gove, an old and well beloved resident of Aultsville, passed to her reward, after several weeks' illness. Mrs. Gove, whose maiden name was Alice Harrington, was born in Chesterville, on June 18 1859. She was a daughter of Ira H. Harrington, a native of Ireland, and his wife, Sara E. Ault, who was born in Mille Roches.

On April 19, 1882, she was married to Simeon Gove, of Aultsville, who predeceased her in December, 1932. Since her marriage, she had resided in Aultsville continuously, a period of more than half a century. She had been a member since childhood of Aultsville Methodist church, now Trinity United. She had taken an active part in the varied activities of the church, and was for many years an active worker and teacher in the Sunday School.

She is survived by a son, S. Clifford Gove of Aultsville and two sisters, Mrs. Alex Thom of Morrisburg, and Miss E.A. Harrington, Montreal.

The funeral service was held on Sunday at 2 p.m. from her late residence to Trinity United church and cemetery. The service was conducted by Rev. W.A. Morrison, who delivered a message of comfort to the bereaved family, and of inspiration and hope to the many friends of Mrs. Gove who were present.

MRS. ALBERT HAGGERTY

The funeral of Mrs. Albert Haggerty, a highly respected resident of Toyes Hill, was held on Monday from her late residence to Winchester Springs United Church, where the service was conducted by Rev. K. Woodwark, assisted by Rev. E. Lacey of Brinston.

The pall bearers were: Messrs Rumsey Peterson, Joseph Hunter, Zerney Harper, Sterling Coons, William Steele and Isaac Harper.

Interment was made in Maple Ridge cemetery.

Mrs. Haggerty, whose maiden name was Jane Johnston, was born on a farm at Toyes Hill in 1857, where she spent the greater part of her life. She was a daughter of James Johnston and Susanna Toye.

In 1862 she married Albert Haggerty, who survives her, with one son, Irwin Haggerty, with whom she resided at the time of her death. She also leaves to mourn her loss, four sisters: Mrs. Jeffrey, South Mountain; Mrs. R. Bell, of Brinston; Mrs Farrell of Tacoma, Wash., and Mrs. Bristol of Pullyup, Wash.; and one brother, James Johnston, on the old homestead.

MR. WESLEY GILSON

There passed away at the home of his son, Chas. I. Gilson, Brinston, on Saturday morning, Sept. 22nd, Wesley Gilson. He was born at a picturesque old homestead one and onehalf miles east of Brinston on June 14th, 1841, 93 years ago, the son of John Gilson and Susanna Edwards, and had spent his entire long life in the vicinity of Brinston. In 1864 he moved to Brinston to work at the blacksmith trade. He later bought a farm in the vicinity, and went to spend his last days with his son, 14 years ago.

He was elected township councillor for a number of years, and was superintendent of the Sunday School of the old Brown Church, and president of the Knight's Templars for a long term of years. His mind was clear to the last and his narratives of pioneer days were extremely interesting and instructive, as the account of the first train going west on the Grand Trunk Railway, the towing of boats up the St. Lawrence by horse and mule, the building of the plank road from Iroquois to South Mountain, and many other interesting events of pioneer days. He possessed a very amiable disposition, and was beloved by old and young.

The funeral was conducted from his late home on Monday afternoon, Sept. 24th, to Brinston United Church, where Rev. E.C. Lacey conducted the servide, consoling the friends and relatives with an eloquent sermon. Besides the anthem by the church choir, Mrs. Chas. Strader sang an appropriate solo.

The remains were laid to rest in Brinston cemetery. The many floral designs bespoke the high esteem in which deceased was held.

He was predeceased by his wife, Mahalah Dillabough, in 1853, and brothers, George and Charles (twins), Edward and Thomas, and one sister, Eliza. He leaves to mourn his loss eight children: Chas., of Brinston; Millton, Mrs. A. Sharkey and Mrs. E. Shaver of Iroquois; Jesse of Canton, N.Y.; Mrs Hunter and Mrs. G. Irvine, both of Elrose, Sask, and Lee of St. Mary's; and two deceased, Mrs. Beckstead, formerly of Ogdensburg, and William, formerly of Canton.

TOBIN—BARRY

St. Mark's Church, Prescott, was the scene of a very pretty and interesting wedding on Saturday morning last, when Marion Frances, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Barry of Prescott, was united in marriage to Wilfred James Tobin, son of Mr and Mrs. James Tobin of Kemptville. Rev. Father Mea officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a gown of sapphire blue velvet, a velvet beret of the same shade, and faille sandals to match. She wore a shoulder bouquet of orchids.. Mrs. Arthur McGrory, of Ottawa, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and wore a gown of wine chiffon velvet, a velvet beret of the same shade, and sandals to match. Her shoulder bouquet was of Johanna Hill roses.

Jack Tobin, of Kemptville brother of the groom, was best man.

Following the ceremony, the wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, only the immediate relatives of the two families being present.

Mr. and Mrs. Tobin left on a motor trip to Muskoka and points west, the bride travelling in a rust tree bark crepe dress, trimmed with lapin, and a lapin jacket. Her hat was a brown felt model by Agnes, and she carried matching accessories. On their return, they will reside in Ottawa.

Eight-year Bonds, $500 and $1,000
Fifteen-year Bonds, $100, $500 and $1,000

Cash Subscriptions

All cash subscriptions will be subject to allotment. Following the announcement of the plan of allotment, payment in full for the bonds allotted must be made promptly against delivery of interim certificates, which will be effected on or about 15th October.

Refunding Subscriptions

Holders of Victory Loan 5½% Bonds due 1st November, 1934, after detaching and retaining the coupon due 1st November next, may, for the period during which the subscription lists are open, tender their bonds in lieu of cash on subscriptions for a like par value of bonds in one or more maturities of the new issue and receive allotment in full with prompt delivery. The surrender value of the Victory 5½% Bonds will be as follows:

100% of their par value on subscriptions for the Two-year 2% Bonds and the Five-year 2½% Bonds.

100⅛% of their par value on subscriptions for the Eight-year 3% Bonds if effected on or before 6th October, and 100% of their par value after that date.

100¼% of their par value on subscriptions for the Fifteen-year 3½% Bonds if effected on or before 6th October, and 100% of their par value after that date.

Holders will receive in cash the difference between the surrender value of their Victory Bonds and the cost of the bonds of the new issue.

The amount of this Loan is limited to $250,000,000.

The Loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest are a charge on the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada.

The proceeds of this Loan will retire $222,216,850 Dominion of Canada 5½% Bonds maturing 1st November, 1934. The balance will be used for the general purposes of the Government, including the redemption of short-term Treasury Bills.

Subscriptions will be received and receipts issued by any branch in Canada of any Chartered Bank and by Recognized Dealers, from whom may be obtained application forms and copies of the official prospectus containing complete details of the Loan. Applications will not be valid on forms other than those printed by the King's Printer.

The subscription lists will open 1st October, 1934, and will close on or before 13th October, 1934, with or without notice, at the discretion of the Minister of Finance.

DUNDAS TEACHERS IN CONVENTION

The sixtieth annual convention of the Dundas County Teachers' Institute opened at Winchester on Thursday, in the public school assembly hall, and will conclude with the afternoon session on Friday. Registration of teachers took place on Thursday morning, there being over one hundred teachers present.

The president, Harry Potter, presided at the morning session, following devotional exercises, which were conducted by Rev. Mr. Wood, pastor of the Winchester Baptist Church. In his opening remarks, the president announced that he would not give an address, as scheduled on the program, but would attempt to give a few scattered remarks on the subject of "Moral Training for Boys and Girls". "In my opinion," said the speaker, "the best moral training we, as teachers, can give to boys and girls, is to train them in the habit of doing good work. Since many boys and girls, especially in rural schools, get little more than a public school education, I believe they who acquire the habit of performing the uties assigned to them well, have the best kind of a start in life that we as teachers can give them". Mr. Potter then gave an outline of the things that he considered essential in the proper training of boys and girls—punctuality, precision and perseverance.

The reading of minutes and communications by the secretary, Herman Hamilton of Iroquois, was the next order of business. This was followed by the appointment of the following committees:

Nominating—Steve Stewart, Audrey Marcellus, Vera Haggerty and Ella McDonald.

Resolutions — Robert Anderson, Eva Donaldson and Mildred Derby.

Press—Lulu McGee, Ray Coligan, Catherine Merkley and Lenora Merkley.

Miss Laura Dukelow then gave a description of the summer course in health teaching, which was educational and instructive. This was followed by communitiy singing, with Miss Marion Casselman of Chesterville presiding at the piano.

Following the opening of the afternoon session, Miss Florence Waddell of Iroquois, Ontario Educational Association delegate, brought in her report.

The financial statement for the year was presented by Herman Hamilton, and showed that the institute's finances were in a favorable condition. iHs report was sanctioned by the auditors, who had just completed their audit of the books.

Miss Gertrude Weegar then favored the teachers with a musical number, which received hearty applause.

"Methods in second class composition, oral and written," were presented by Miss Marion Casselman of Chesterville, and Miss Donella Latourell of North Mountain.

To add color to the afternoon session, a delightful folk dance was presented by pupils of Winchester public school, under the direction of Miss Emma Gardner.

A brief address was delivered by the school inspector, Mr. W. Stewart, during which he explained the new register, and gave some points on writing, etc.

Rotation groups were formed and round table discussions took place as follows: "Methods in Composition," by Herman Hamilton and Miss M. Derby; "Agriculture," H. Graham and Miss Estella Stewart; "Primary Arithmetic," Malcolm R. and Miss Gertrude Weegar; "Domestic Science," George Young and Miss Lulu McGee.

In the evening, the teachers attended a banquet at Hotel Winchester, and were addressed by Ca J. Ketchum, Canadian-born Fleet Street correspondent. His subject was "Interviewing the Great". Following the festivities at the hotel the teachers were entertained at dance and social evening, in Lanni Hall.

The convention is continuing today, with morning and afternoon sessions.

THEN AND NOW

Fifteen years ago, Canada was engaged in floating one of the most successful of its war loans. National enthusiasm was at its high pitch. Business was booming and money was plentiful. Results exceeded the fondest hopes, nea 800,000 citizens subscribing for 1919 Victory Loan Bonds. True, income yield of 5½ p.c. was v attractive, but opinion then was t people subscribed more from th whole-hearted desire to assist nati al reconstruction, rather than cause of the attractive rate of int est.

Holders of these 1919 Vict Bonds, which will mature Novem 1st, are now being asked to conv them into bonds of the 1934 funding Loan. That the majority holders of 1919 Victory Bonds avail themselves of this privil there can be no doubt. They kn what a safe and profitable inv ment they have had, and will su wish to continue it. The record Dominion of Canada Bonds dur the past few years when invest have suffered loss of capital distress of mind, demonstrates c clusively that there is no safer vestment than Dominion of Can Bonds. Security of principal is amount in any investment. Co quently, when the unassailable curity of Dominion of Canada Bo is coupled with so desirable an come yield as is offered by the Bonds, the response from those ing bonds to convert as well as plications from new investors sh be both prompt and enthusiast

Gallinger, and Mrs. Carmi Froats made the presentation. The address was as follows:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. McConnell:

We, your many friends, have gathered here this evening to celebrate with you the happy occasion of your twenty-fifth anniversary. We have always appreciated the kindly interest you have taken in the social functions of the community, and especially now that you have reached more mature years, de we appreciate your spirit of youthfulness, as well as your thoughtfulness and consideration regarding the pleasures of the rising generation. For this reason you have endeared yourselves to all, both young and old.

In a humble attempt to show our grateful appreciation of you as friends and neighbours, we ask you to accept this purse as a slight token of the esteem in which you are held; and as you set out on the morrow towards that goal which, God willing, will be your golden anniversary, may your path be strewn with every blessing which Providence has to offer, is the sincere wish of your many friends.

Signed,

Mr. and Mrs. Carmi Froats.

Mr. McConnell responded with a suitable reply, after which all joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows".

A buffet luncheon consisting of sandwiches, cake and lemonade was then served later candy was passed after which dancing was resumed until the "wee sma' " hours, and everyone left wishing Mr. and Mrs. McConnell many more years of married happiness.

Even Rheumatic Pains Eased Fast Now!

BAD HEADACHES, NEURITIS PAINS OFTEN RELIEVED IN MINUTES THIS WAY

Remember the pictures below when you want fast relief from pain. Demand and get the method doctors prescribe—Aspirin.

Millions have found that Aspirin eases even a bad headache, neuritis or rheumatic pain often in a few minutes!

In the stomach as in the glass here, an Aspirin tablet starts to dissolve, or disintegrate, almost the instant it touches moisture. It begins "taking hold" of your pain practically as soon as you swallow it.

Equally important, Aspirin is safe. For scientific tests show this: Aspirin does not harm the heart.

Remember these two points: Aspirin Speed and Aspirin Safety. And, see that you get ASPIRIN. It is made in Canada, and all druggists have it. Look for the name Bayer in the form of a cross on every Aspirin tablet.

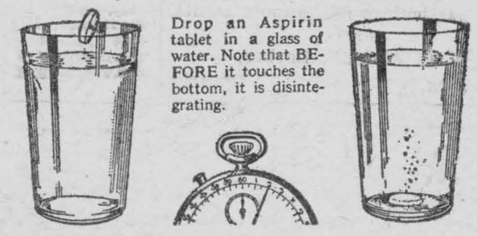
Get tin of 12 tablets or economical bottle of 24 or 100 at any druggist's.

Why Aspirin Works So Fast



Drop an Aspirin tablet in a glass of water. Note that BEFORE it touches the bottom, it is disintegrating.

IN 2 SECONDS BY STOP WATCH An Aspirin tablet starts to disintegrate and go to work.

What happens in these glasses happens in your stomach—ASPIRIN tablets start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

The TUDOR HOUSE

By MRS. STANLEY WRENCH

(Author of "Sing for the Moon" "Strange Lovers," etc).

SYNOPSIS

Michael .Borde, 40, unmarried, born and bred in a Birmingham slum, is now a wealthy motor manufacturer. One day he visits the countryside around his old home and rescues Daphne Eden from a menacing tramp. He falls in love and proposes. Daphne accepts and introduces him to her father, who greets him with the words "Get out of here you cur — you ruined my home — stole my wife — curse you!"

Daphne's father dies and she disappears. Michael explains to her friend, Mrs. Gregory, that he was misrepresented. He buys the old Tudor House owned by the Hamill-Hardy's. Mrs. Gregory promises to mail a letter from him to Daphne arranging a meeting. Daphne does not appear. On the way home Michael collides with a car driven by Diana Hamill-Hardy.

Queer how it all came back, memories of those War years, his first wound, and that left leg, always affected even now by cold and damp, liable, too, with overstrain and overwork, to give him a bit of trouble. He forgot all about it, but ..... he winced once more and found himself wondering what had happened. Could an old wound be re-opened by a crash of this kind.

"I say, is my car hurt?" he asked.

"No, sir. We'll have her out as soon as the garage folk come along. I've sent a motor cyclist along to the nearest place. I don't think there's much amiss."

Next moment he found Diana Hamill-Hardy looking down at him, but it was a different girl from the angry and distressed motorist who had blamed him for her own indiscretion. Pale, slightly dishevelled, yet with something about her he could still admire, she she remained self-possessed, and having begged a cigarette from the A.A. man, was smoking this calmly.

"I'm glad you're not dead," she said, and there was a note of irony in her voice. "That would have landed me in much bigger trouble than ever. You looked pretty ghastly, too, when you fainted away like that."

Borde was swift to detect the slight note of scorn, and recognized the reason. So she thought he was that sort, a man who fainted over a little hurt. Blast her! Gritting his teeth again, he tried to sit up, but once more that ghastly pain shot through his leg, and the man in uniform gently pushed him back.

"Please keep still, sir, till we get a doctor here, or you'll undo my work," he said, anxiously.

"I say, could I have a cigarette?" he asked, and stooping, she put one between his lips, and kneeling beside him, gave him a light from her own.

Once again, as in that room at Werburge Lucy, he saw with curious amazement that flush mantling beneath her skin, a kind of warm light running, exactly as though a lamp inside sent a glow beneath. He was interested, as he had been before, wondering what had caused this.

"It's my leg," he said to her. "I got knocked out in the War and I guess that old wound has opened up. I'd forgotten all about it, but sometimes it's given a bit of trouble. Thanks so much," he drew at his cigarette. "That's better. Now what about your car?"

She made a comical grimace.

"Done for. Utterly finished," she said. "The worst of it is I've only had her this week, the first car of my own," and she laughed ironically. "My father will say 'I told you so,' and advise me to stick to horses, as I suppose I should, if I hadn't seen those cunningly worded advertisements of yours. You're pretty good on publicity, Mr. Borde, aren't you? Anyhow, one of your advertisements induced me to buy a Multiple care in preference to any other. I saw myself driving to meets next winter, and my mink coat," here he saw her eyes distinctly change to green, "that's worse still, I suppose ..... with luck I can get another car. I shall never afford another coat."

Odd how attractive she was when she talked liked this. Odd too, how fascinating it was to watch her eyes change. Sea-green to sea-grey and back again, then almost dark-grey, like wet slates, and once he could have sworn they were dark blue, almost black. Her mouth was hard, but perhaps, that was due to the stuff she had put on it; Michael Borde found himself watching this as she talked, noting the fine evenness of her teeth, her pointed chin, the cleft in it, the delicate lobes of her eyes, the way her hair grew. .....

Suddenly he looked away. Curse it all, he would not be lying here, with sharp pins and needles shooting through his body, and his head aching like blazes, if it had not been for her being on the wrong side of the road, and then losing her head into the bargain. Just like a woman. They had no business to be handling fast cars. Especially women of her sort, accustomed to horses all her life with horse sense and horse hands. Then he looked back at her, and wondered.

"Ah, here they come. Now we'll get a move on."

It was the A.A. man speaking.

"Keep still, sir," he adjured Borde. "We'll have a doctor here soon, and then everything will be O.K., but I do know you ought to keep still. We'll have your car out of the ditch in a very short time, and I don't think she's hurt at all. The other...." he glanced at Miss Hamill-Hardy, "what is left of her can be towed to the garage."

"I'm staying less than half a mile from here," she said to him coolly as the official moved away. "If your car isn't hurt I'll drive you there when they get her out of the ditch. I hate spectators, don't you?"

For the first time she addressed him in friendly fashion, and put herself in the same category as himself.

"Sorry, my own cigarettes are in the car with my bag," she went on with a smile, proffering the packet the A.A. man had given her, and Michael noticed she went on smoking incessantly.

"My case is somewhere," he murmured, fumbling, finding his breast pocket he held out the platinum case, a monogram minutely inscribed in dull enamel in one corner. As her fingers closed over this, again Michael Borde experienced an odd sense of satisfaction. At one time when a cheap gun-metal case was his, he had longed desperately for the time when a fat gold cigarette case should hold his smokes, had pictured himself holding this out, the envy of his friends; when the time came that he could afford anything within reach or reason, he discovered that not only had his tastes changed, but that such things as cigarette cases, even for men, have their varying fashions, too. Besides, he went to the best tailor in London whose word even to Royalty was law and the thin cigarette case had come about through suggestion of his.

"Move up one, Michael Borde," he told himself now, as he watched her eyes studying that neatly worked monogram.

"Damn her," he told himself a second later. "I suppose she expected a design in diamonds. I'll show she .....it isn't only blue blood....."

There was a clatter of comment, satisfied sighs and grunts, he could guess what had happened; they had hoisted his car from the ditch. A couple of men in blue overalls were rubbing their knees, another man with his cap stuck at the back of his head came and glanced down at him curiously, then quickly moved away as Miss Hamill-Hardy turned to regard him, and Michael Borde grinned to himself.

"I wish I knew how she does it. Withers a man with a look," he told himself.

"Your car doesn't seem to be hurt," she told him, watching the men as they started up Michael's car. "That's a blessing."

He listened attentively. The engine seemed to be running smoothly.

"Look here," she said, bending towards him again. "My friends live quite near. We can be there in a few minutes, and get their doctor. I'll drive you there. Will you trust yourself with me?"

"Sure," he rejoined, without a moment's hesitation, but he saw a strange look flicker into her eyes, and although it was not until some minutes later he realized this, Michael Borde established himself in her estimation. When, too, he refused the offer of the A.A. man to stand upon the step, supporting him, he saw that he pleased her. Mounting his motorcycle, the man rode behind, but Diana Hamill-Hardy drove carefully, and without the slightest trace of nervousness.

"No, frankly, I don't understand cars," she said in answer to some remark about this. "But I don't possess nerves. That was knocked out of me years ago."

He wondered a little, for her voice sounded bitter. Watching her face, her gaze ahead on the road, he noted again that slightly tilted chin.

"When you've had a few tosses in the hunting field and have had a bone or two broken .... and when you've beaten a horse that has savaged a man, a crash with a car doesn't seem too terrible," she remarked. "All the same, I hate fire, and ever since I've driven a car I've been slightly funky. However, here we are," and she turned carefully into a drive where the scent of lilac blossom met them, and chains of budded gold told where laburnum would swing in splendor in a few days' time.

"Lord Trottenleigh lives here. His daughter is my greatest friend," she told him.

Woman Checks Fishermen's Tales

Charts Show That Women Hold Two World Records For Fishing—Mrs. Anna Tiffin Hauled In The Largest Brown Trout Ever Caught At Cariboo, B.C.

Francesca La Monte never in all her life caught a fish, big or little, yet every fisherman in the United States who makes a haul that she hopes is phenomenal rushes to tell Francesca about it. For that matter, so does every fisherman.

For this pretty dark-eyed young woman is custodian of the chart of world records in fish catching which is kept in the Hall of Fishes at the Museum of Natural History in New York. This guardianship is part of Miss La Monte's job as assistant curator of ichthyology at the Museum.

Besides keeping the biggest catch records up-to-date, she helps to plan and prepare exhibits for the Hall of Fishes and works in the laboratories sorting and identifying hundreds of varieties of fish that they sent to the museum from all parts of the world.

Women hold two world records for fish catches, according to Miss La Monte. The record Florida king fish was caught by Mae Haines off Long Key, Fla., in April, 1927. It weighed 58 pounds.

The world record brown trout was caught by Mrs. Anna Tiffin on July 2, 1933, at Deka Lake, Cariboo, British Columbia. It weighed 30 pounds and three ounces. The world record rod and reel catch for women is held by Mrs. Eastham Guild, also known as Carrie Fin. Her champion fish was an 823-pound black marlin, caught in the South Seas. The biggest black marlin ever caught beat Mrs. Guild's by 153 pounds.

BATTLES FISH HOURS

"Most of the champion fisherwomen are anything bnt husky-looking," Miss La Monte commented thoughtfully. "You'd never think for instance, that Carrie Fin, who has a positively fragile appearance, could ever stick out a battle with a giant fish lasting five or six hours. But she's done it again and again. Miss Fin lives on a cocoanut plantation in Tahiti. She and her husband, who is also a big game fisherman, stopped off to see us last year.

"Another well-known fisherwoman who doesn't quite look the part is Mrs. Marie Starr Chadbourne, whose special hunting grounds are Florida and Bimini. She is young, blonde, pretty and always perfectly dressed.

"Our world records are compiled in cooperation with Field and Stream Magazine and the chart is changed whenever a record is broken. We get jubilant letters, telegrams and even cables from hopeful aspirants nearly every day during fishing seasons. They always describe the dimensions of their catch, but we write back that they will need to send us pictures and also affidavits.

"Our fish stories must have backing—and, as a matter of fact, we find that most fishermen and women are very honest."

PRESERVED IN GIN

The fishes sent to the museum come in all kinds of containers. Hundreds from the interior of South America, arriving in gasoline cans, wrapped in banana leaves. One man, failing other preservatives, sent a fish along in a bottle of gin. It kept very well, Miss La Monte says.

Along with all her other duties, Miss La Monte runs a kind of information bureau. Artists frequently come in to see color plates of fish. Then there are always eople who want to know things like what is a "silding"? (that's Danish for young herring); or what is a Jack Dempsey? (which is the nickname of a popular tropical fish.)

Miss La Monte gets and answers inquiries in every conceivable language from English to the dialects used by African or Indian natives. She knows six languages herself, but often uses them all up in a day and has to call for help.

Besides the inquiries about fish, there are women bringing in pocketbooks to find out what kind of shark the leather came from; hotel men wanting to know about fish names to use on menus; school children hunting material for compositions.

WRITES ABBOUT ANIMALS

Animals are her hobby in her spare time. Miss a Monte writes books about them.

Miss La Monte has lived and "kept pets," as she expresses it, in most of the countries of Europe, including Russia, Italy, France and Norway. She also went as the museum representative to the International Congress of Zoologists. In her onw private zoon from time to time she has had everything from white mice to baby jaguars.

The Song He Sings

The man who wins is the man who goes
Ahead with his work each day,
Who's never stuck by his adverse luck
But makes of his labors play;
From early dawn he will labor on,
And know that the world's all right,
And he sings a song as he goes along,
For it sharpens his appetite.

The man who wins is the man who smiles
And sees that the sky is blue;
He is always there with a great big share
Or smiles and of sunshine too;
He never growls and he never howls
That the world is out of gear—
But he meets the shocks and the jealous knocks
With a great broad smile of cheer.

Get Acquainted

It is astonishing how slow many people are in getting acquainted. Not merely do strangers find it hard to make friends, but old-time residents will not speak to each other; people may meet each other on the street for years and never give any sign of recognition. They know each other perfectly and would like to get acquainted but they have not been introduced.

These unbending people may be lovely and charming in their own circles and full of kind thoughts towards others. Their attitude does not necessarily mean that they are proud. It frequently comes from an exaggerated feeling of propriety or bashfulness, an idea they will be considered forthputting if they disregard strict etiquette.

A town where this spirit exists has a cold pall of distance stifling its people. They can not form friendships they need for their own welfare and the development of the community. People get false ideas of each other and look on each other as haughty. They draw back in their own little shells, and no neighborly spirit is developed.

It is a good rule when two men or two women have met each other enough so they know each other by sight, to get acquainted. As isolated strangers they are an obstacle to the community. When they get to know each other, and discuss their common interests, they become good neighbors and a force for community progress. —North Hastings Review.

THE MUSHROOM SEASON

The sight of a mushroom makes the approach of Autumn bearable. Every cook has her method of dealing with mushrooms. Here is a collection of favorite-tried recipes.

MUSHROOM SOUFFLE

Two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour, three-quarters cup milk, one-half pound mushrooms, three eggs beaten separately, salt and pepper. Blend butter and flour, add milk, salt, pepper. Cook until smooth, stirring constantly. Wash and peel mushrooms and fry in butter for five minutes. Chop finely and add to the cream sauce. Add beaten yolks, cool and then fold in stiffly whipped whites. Pour into a buttered baking dish and place in a pan of boiling water. Bake in a moderate oven for 25 minutes. Serve immediately.

WITH MACARONI

Break four ounces of macaroni into small pieces, cook in a pint of boiling stock with a chopped onion and a small bay leaf, until all the stock is absorbed. Peel and chop four ounces of mushrooms, cook until soft in about an ounce of butter, and make layers in a casserole with the macaroni and pepper and salt. Sprinkle with grated cheese and add a few dabs of butter, and bake.

WITH RICE

Cook half a cup of rice in boiling salted water until tender, then mix with four ounces of chopped, cooked mushrooms, two hard-boiled eggs and enough tomato sauce to make a stiff mixture. Add seasonings and a little chopped onion and fill tomato shells with the mixture. Bake in a moderate oven.

WITH SWEETBREADS

Par-boil sweetbreads, remove all skin and membrane and chop them. For two pairs of calves' sweetbreads allow a cup of cooked mushrooms, heat in half a pint of thick white sauce, add seasonings and flavoring, and pour into a greased dish. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake for about 15 minutes.

PICKLED MUSHROOMS
(Buttons)

Clean them with a flannel dipped in salt and do not peel them. Sprinkle them with a little salt and then put them into a stewpan with a little mace and white and black pepper, and leave them till the liquor runs out. Then shake them over the stove until the liquor is nearly absorbed again cover them with vinegar, boil up and bottle them.

PICKLED MUSHROOMS
(Full Grown)

See that they are not too far open, cut them in quarters, and pour over them just enough vinegar to cover them, seasoning it with a little mace, some cayenne, a few shallots and one anchovey. Boil gently together until the mushrooms are cooked, let them get cold, and then bottle them in the vinegar and cork them well up.

If you do not like the taste of vinegar and do not mind if your mushrooms do not keep so long, try potting them this way:

DRIED OR POWERED

Dried Mushrooms are also useful, and can easily be resuscitated, though their flavor cannot be compared to that of the fresh ones. Wipe the mushrooms well, and dry them. Remove the brown part and take off the peel. Then lay them out on sheets of brown paper to dry in a cool oven, and hang them up in a dry place in paper bags. They will regain nearly all their original shape, if you heat them gradually through in stock or gravy.

Mushroom Powder makes a savory seasoning which many like. Peel half a peck of large mushrooms, wipe them, take off the brown part, and put them into a stewpan with a couple of onions, a dozen cloves, a quarter of an ounce of ground mace and a dessertspoon of white pepper. Shake them over a clear fire without burning them until all the moisture is evaporated, then put them into tins and dry them in the oven. When they are dry, pound them very finely and cork them up in small bottles.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

When you boil a fowl add a pinch of bicarbonate of soda to the water. This makes it exceptionally tender.

* * *

When frying fillets of fish, always put them into the frying-pan with the skin uppermost. You will find them less likely to break if cooked this way.

* * *

A narrow shelf over the sink to hold dishwashing supplies saves many steps. Paring knives and other utensils used at the sink may be hung underneath.

* * *

Do not throw away the vinegar from bottle pickles, but save it and use when making French dressing. It will add a pungent, spicy flavor.

* * *

Many housewives find almond icing for cakes expensives. Ground peanuts are often used by professional cooks, and few people know the difference.

* * *

Do not keep the dishrag after it has reached the raveling stage. It is poor economy, because its lint will leave tangled strands in the drain pipe.

* * *

Should anyone in the family be put on a liquid diet, place a little lime water in each glass of milk served. It is an aid to digestion and sweetens the stomach.

* * *

Lemons that have been kept too long and have hardened can be softened by covering with boiling water and standing on the back of the stove for a few minutes.

* * *

Never store preserves, pickles or jams on the top shelf of store- cupboard or pantry. Keep them lower down, as hot air rises and may induce fermentation.

BUYING A HAT

It's just about time to step out and buy the new fall millinery. Today's the day, isn't it, for after September the first, the straw hat is more or less outlawed.

Here are the rules given by one of the world's millinery experts to those about to change the headgear.

First—Study the crown of the hat in relation to the crown of your head. A perfect head can wear a close round crown all right, but all heads with imperfections towards the egg, flat, or square shapes, should have fulness in the crown. Remember heavy features are most often in small faces and heads, and the heavy featured woman of this type should have fulness in the crown.
ber heavy features are most often in small faces and heads, and the heavy featured woman of this type should have a heavier crown for balance.

Second—Understand your neckline. This means the shape and length and breadth of your neck, not your hairline as most women think. If your neck is short, don't buy a wide hat that sits on your shoulders. You must balance the neckline to wear a hat smartly.

Third—Now have a look at your face and proportion the brim to it. Chinless, receding faces can't take drooping brims as they shorten a face, and never use a tight-fitting crown. Little hats make heavy, coarse features "jump" out. A shallow, broad crown with not too wide brim on the sides is good for the woman of long, thin face and a snort head-crown. The woman with prominent nose should choose a brim "following" the features, that is, swinging towards the front. Round-faced girls should lean to small, or no brims with small hat crown.

Fourth—Stand and look at yourself full-length in a mirror to see that your hat and head are in proper proportion with your body and height.

MUFFS WITH DRESSES

Fur bands used skifully help to improve the slimness of the silhouette. A long coat of gun-metal cloth is trimmed with bands of dark grey broadtail. Possibly there will be a hat of the cloth trimmed with fur, and shaped after the turban idea. A small muff to match may also be included, for there is a great effort being made to bring back the muff as part of the dress-scheme.

If elaboration of the costume be desired, this vogue may gain sway, but women today dislike complications that interfere with their activities. The slit-skirt is an aid to freedom, but a muff may prove an encumbrance.

APPROACHING CALLERS

This is a moment
I could gloat
Over a drawbridge
And a moat.
Not only foe
But friend as well
Would have to swim
To reach my bell!

Instead of which
I hide behind
This ineffectual
Window-blind:
The castled folk
Of olden days
Had better ways,
Had better ways.

—Mildred Weston, in the New York Sun.

Uplift in Music

The "spirit of uplift" is the curse of all serious Canadian music-making and of orchestral music-making in particular. It is absolutely hostile to the "spirit of true entertainment," for it offers the listener, not what is thought he is likely to like, but what it is thought he ought to like. The listener takes his revenge by going to the concert, not in the spirit of pleasure, but in the spirit of duty. He listens to Bach, Beethoven and Brahms, not because he likes them, but because he is assured that they are good for him. He comes away not with the memory of a glorious experience, but with the consciousness of a task dutifully performed.

World Is Eating Less Heavy Food

Gluttony Was Once Rife—Daily Diet Practically Revolutionized.

An extremely interesting comparison between old-time and modern methods of eating is made by V. H. Mottram, Professor of Physiology in the University of London, England, in the London Daily Mail.

He says:—It is a commonplace among dietitians that our food habits are being revolutionized, and we have to ask ourselves whether this is for our good or not, for "nutrition is the foundation of the public health."

We all know that our grandfathers, or perhaps our great-grandfathers, ate the most colossal meals and finished off two or three bottles of port each at dinner—drank themselves under the table.

GLUTTONY A SIN

Earlier in the history of the world gluttony was so rife that it was placed in the list of the Deadly Sins by the Church. Nowadays not one person in a million, in Great Britain at least and probably in the civilized world, could be accused of gluttony.

Whether we are actually eating less per head only statistics can tell us, and the habit of collecting statistics is still very young. So that we can judge of the change of habits only over our own generation.

That they have changed qualitatively most of us know. For example, we know that only recently have tomatoes, bananas, and grapefruit formed a part of our daily menu. Not so long ago fresh fruit and vegetables in the winter were an unheard of luxury whereas now they are within the reach of everyone.

Butter, too, was very expensive during the winter months and poor people cut down on its consumption but now it is so much cheaper that practically everyone can (and should) use it freely without any thought of extravagance.

MOTOR PICNICS

The motor-car, too, has had its influence on our food habits. The middle-classes no longer have their Sunday dinner at home of roast beef, Yorkshire pudding, vegetables, and an apple-pie and spend their Sunday afternoon in a blessed somnolence, but speed off into the country and have an alfresco lunch, bought, perhaps, ready cooked, or patronize the roadhouse restaurant.

We can feel sure from all this evidence that our food habits have changed qualitatively, and the question is: Have they changed quantitatively?

If we turn to statistics we can see that they have. Speaking roughly, we can say that the consumption of meat, bread, coffee, and alcoholic drinks has decreased per head of the population, whereas there has been a large increase in the consumption of tea, sugar and fruit and vegetables. As regards the last two items it is difficult to obtain accurate figures because no census of home production exists.

FRUITS

But we know that imported fruits last year reached the record figure of 88 lb. per head, and we cannot doubt that there was an increase in the consumption of fruit produced in Great Britain. Milk we know is gradually increasing in consumption, though far too slowly to content the dietitian.

Summing up the evidence we can say that the proportions of the different foods are altering, so that whereas our immediate predecessors ate largely of meat and bread and negelected the fruits and vegetables, we are changing over towards a diet with a larger proportion of the dairy and garden produce.

MEAT AND MILK

The old-fashioned view that meat makes for strength received its quietus long ago. American dietitians—and remember that dietetics was raised to a position of importance among the subjects thought worthy of university studies years ago in the United States—maintain that no family should buy meat until it has bought a quart of milk per head per day!

Bread has been called the staff of life, but that is a misnomer. The majority of us eat it because we and mineral matter, especially lime and iron. Probably a daily ration of a pint of milk and a sufficiency of green vegetables or green salads would cover all our needs for vitamins and mineral matter—commodities in which meat and bread are somewhat deficient.

SUGAR

There remain the sugar and the have been brought up to eat it or because it is cheap. The poor spend about 33 per cent. of the money which goes to buy food on bread and flour simply because they are cheap.

There is, however, evidence that a large proportion of cereal products in our diet makes for poor bones and teeth. For example, it was possible almost completely to check the decay of teeth in children in a Sheffield sanatorium by replacing the cereals in their diet with vegetables.

On the other hand, that the consumption of milk, fruit, and vegetables should increase relatively to the rest of the diet is all to the good. It is a question of getting vitamins beverages to consider. Some dietitians look upon the great increase of sugar consumption with disfavor. Others point to the fact that sugar is a convenient and cheap way of supplying the body with energy.

After all, the foods which a man takes are body building material, for vitamins and mineral matter supply at the most only about one-third of his energy intake and output, so that we still have a satisfactory margin to go upon. We eat about one-third of a pound a day.

Theoretically we could eat one pound of sugar per head per day without endangering our supply of other food stuffs. Remember, too, the craving for sugar of Polar explorers and of the members of the various Everest expeditions.

As regards tea and coffee it seems a matter of indifference to the dietitian whether the consumption deceases or increases. Twelve pounds of tea per head per year seems neither excessive nor extravagant. Dietetically tea is useless unless you believe that a drink which promotes a sense of well being with no evil after effects has its value.

ALCOHOL

Of the decrease in the consumption of alcoholic drinks there is little to say, because the problem of the use and abuse of alcohol is beset with so much prejudice that no scientific data, or, at any rate no interpretation of scientific data on the subject is worth consideration.

To sum up. From the statistics available it appears that the revolution which is taking place in the meals of our nation is to the advantage of the public health. Should any dietitian turn politician his slogan would be "Dairy Foods, Market Garden Produce and Herrings of the Public Health — the things that the British Isles can best produce."

Perhaps we might have a similar slogan in Canada since our dairy and garden products are of such a high order and so many of us, of Old Country descent, have been brought up in British habits of eating—the habits that prevailed when our fathers and mothers were young.

It Isn't Home

By Anne Campbell.

The ocean meets the sky and joins its blue,
The waves are tipped with shredded silver foam.
I gaze upon the sea and think of you.
It may be beautiful, but it isn't home!
The splendid city flings its buildings high.
The stars are all alight in heaven's dome . . .
The lighted windows and the starry sky . . .
It's all so beautiful, but it isn't home!
Across the miles there is a patch of green,
A little house upon familiar loam,
A maple tree, a fence where roses lean . . .
And that is beautiful, because it's home!

With a smile upon your face—
Stop shirkin'.
If you have a task to do,
And would like to get it through—
Keep workin'.

Remembrance Day will be celebrated on its statutory date, Nov. 11, even though it falls on a Sunday, officials of the State Department have declared. It was explained that the anniversary of the Armistice does not fall within the category of those holidays for which the law provides that when they fall on a Sunday, the following Monday shall be observed. Legislation of the 1931 session of Parliament divorced Remembrance Day from Thanksgiving Day.

Saturday evening on the Morewood-Cannamore road, a Ford touring car driven by David Cousineau, Cornwall, with whom was his wife, son and daughter, and an infant about six weeks old, and his aged mother, Mrs. Olive Cousineau, turned turtle in the ditch, and over-ended, when it struck a stone almost opposite Chesley Marcellus' gate. Mrs Olive Cousineau had five ribs broken and her lung punctured. She was removed Sunday morning to the Cornwal General Hospital, and has since passed away. The accident is being investigated by Provincial Officer J.F. Rose, of Morrisburg, and Constable McLean of Chesterville, and an inquest will be held at Cornwall.

The Women's Misisonary Society of St. John's Lutheran Church, Riverside, held a very successful pie social at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Casselman last Friday evening. A varied and interesting program was enjoyed by the large number who were present. During the evening, on behalf of the W.M.S. Mrs. H.A. Hayunga presented to Pastor Mehlenbacher, the beautiful autograph quilt made by the ladies this spring, commemorating the 150th anniversary of St. John's congregation. Mrs. Jacob Schwerdtfeger read the presentation address.

CHARACTER BUILDING COURSE POPULAR IN SCHOOLS AND HOMES

Mr. J. Smyth Carter was in town the early part of the week, in the interest of The MacMillan Company of Canada, Ltd., Toronto. Mr. Carter, who manages the Life Portrayal Series Department for this firm, is featuring "The Character Building Course" for use in schools and homes. This course has already found its way into many homes and schools throughout the Dominion, and will have a great influence in building the traits of character in our children, so desirable in Canadian citizenship.

Mr. W.J. Dunlop, of the Department of University Extension, University of Toronto, is among many who testify to the influence for good which "Character Building" will have among the children as well as adults. He says: "I am grateful to you for the opportunity of going over your series of picture lessons intended for the building of good character. It seems to me that this series has been arranged with remarkable insight and that it should be of the greatest value in implanting essential principles in the minds of young children. Indeed, the series provides many excellent reminders for adults.

"Members of Boards of Education will readily see the value of a course of this kind, and it is to be hoped that they will see that it is placed in their schools. Teachers will welcome it as an excellent means of teaching manners and morals without the use of didactic methods. For the making of good citizens, the task in which we are all engaged, this Life Portray Series is an excellent aid".
