Village bridge reconstruction will take 3 months

(Staff) - The east section of Chesterville village will be a large construction site for three and a half months this summer when the entire span of the bridge over the South Nation will be removed.

Earlier it was assumed only the centre span of the bridge was due for repairs but county road engineer Don McDonald told The Record the entire bridge needs replacement.

A lengthy discussion at last week's village council meeting covered the procedure in store for the months of July, August and September. A covered pedestrian walkway will be installed along the length of the bridge but cars will have to find alternate routes into the village. As well, there is a walkway over the Casselman dam for pedestrians shopping in the village centre.

"We have to take out the entire middle span," Mr. McDonald said in a telephone interview. "A bridge usually has about 35 or 40 years of life and the Chesterville bridge is 35 years old."

Mr. McDonald said the entire project would cost about $400,000 to completion after all the odds and ends are calculated into the price.

"The road program was adopted at counties council so it is going," he said of the project.

September 26 is the last day in the contract, Mr. McDonald added, and this should be the day of completion of the project. "We're going to miss most of the school buses," he said.

Beginning in the early to mid-nineteen sixties small cracks and fissures began appearing in the bridge's concrete. "Water penetrates and salt stays there," Mr. McDonald explained.

Tenders for the project close May 28. By Monday, June 2 the first work day should see some preliminary work done but by about mid June the project should be in a full swing. From then on until the end of September the east end of the village will be closed to traffic.

Town foreman Jack Smith indicated the South Street entrance to the village and the western road near the fairgrounds would provide access through the summer months.

As well water mains work has to be done near the South Nation in the east end of the village. Victoria Street is due for a facelift this summer and this work has to be completed by July 31.

A major complication in work on the bridge is the lowering of the level of water in the South Nation by seven feet. However, when the water level is lowered from 221 to 214 feet workers have to make sure the Nestle intake valve is covered by water. River water is used in the cooling process at the plant.

The major upheavel in the village will leave sidewalks along the bridge intact as they are now. However street lighting will have to be removed temporarily since everything has to be moved off the bridge. If the hydro poles are found to have deteriorated they will be replaced. The cost of the street lighting and the water mains will be borne by the counties.

Newsbriefs

No bikes

WINCHESTER (Staff) - The local OPP detachment has issued a warning about violations or highway laws involving the use of dirt bikes and three and four wheelers. Constable Al Lummiss said on Monday the problem was noted in the Chesterville area particularly. "These vehicles are just not allowed on the road," he said, "but some people may not know that."

Post office hours

(Staff) - The post office has announced Easter Holiday hours. During the Easter weekend the hours will be: Good Friday, March 28, Saturday, March 29 and March 30, no carrier or wicket service; Easter Monday, March 31, no carrier or wicket service.

Speaker

AVONMORE (Staff) - Len Turkevics, executive assistant to S.D. and G. MPP Noble Villeneuve, will stand in for the provincial representative tonight (Wednesday) at a free trade symposium sponsored by the counties' federations of agriculture. Mr. Turkevics has worked as a Tory researcher specializing in the resource development field, including agriculture and food.

Other panel members are Charles Gracey, executive vice-president of the Canadian Cattlemen's Association; Ontario Milk Marketing Board vice-chairman Grant Smith, and Prescott-Russell Liberal MP Don Boudria.

The symposium will be held at Tagwi Secondary School at 8pm.

Winners

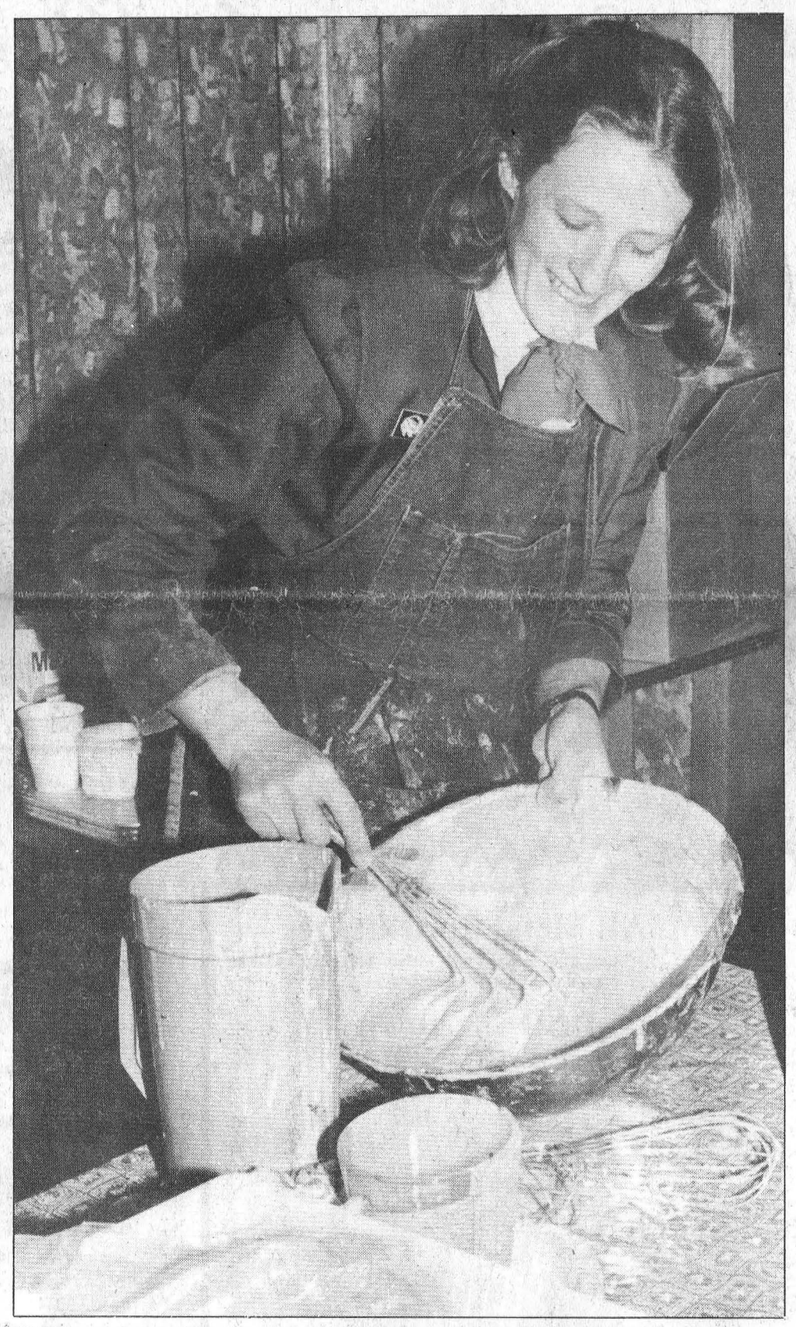
CORNWALL (Staff) - Students of Tagwi and Rothwell-Osnabruck schools distinguished themselves recently at the Sears Seaway Drama Festival here. Michael Colebrook of RO and Peter Simard of Tagwi won Outstanding Performance Awards. Tagwi's Cathy Conners won for outstanding technical achievement. Jennifer Gillard, RO, won an award for her performance; Sandra MacCormick, Tagwi, won for lighting, and Chris Decarie won for sound.

Speech

TORONTO (Staff) - SD&G MPP Noble Villeneuve will present a resolution to the House during the next session. Mr. Villeneuve will propose a private member's bill be implemented to permit the use of tax-free gasoline and fuel by farm commercial vehicles licensed in Ontario under the Highway Traffic Act. He intends to argue lower farm input costs will benefit both producer and consumer while high agricultural input costs lessen the producer's ability to compete with subsidized foreign imports.

Jaime fund

WINCHESTER (Staff) - The Jaime Adams benefit fund continues to grow as community groups are rallying to the aid of the Iroquois girl stricken by morquio. The Winchester Venturers are planning a mammoth dance at Winchester Community Hall March 27. The president of the Iroquois-Matilda Lions Club will be on hand to accept a donation for the little girl whose growth has been restricted by an enzyme deficiency. Also on hand will be John McAuley of Chesterville, president of the St. Lawrence District of Boy Scouts of Canada, Winchester reeve Larry Gray and scouts District Commissioner John Tenant.



House of pancakes

Trisha Barkley was covered in pancake dust last Sunday when together with five other cooks she managed to feed more than 500 hungry people who gathered for the maple syrup social. Hosted by Trisha and Brian Barkley of Elma, the event has been held for the second year in a row with last Sunday's customers doubled in number over last year.

Top dairy honor to Casselman

Staff) - One of the highest awards in the dairy world has been won by JFC Holsteins just north of Chesterville.

The heroine of the day is JFC Silvery Citation (VG), who has produced more than 13,500 kilograms of milk for three consecutive years. The Certificate of Achievement Award was presented to Frank Casselman by Holstein Canada.

"This is a very distinguished piece of paper," said Dundas county agricultural representative Bob Humphries. "It's quite a magnificent award to come to our county."

Mr. Humphries added Silvery Citation is the only cow ever to have won the award on the basis of having been bred and raised in her own area.

"She was bred here and her maternal line was bred here," said Mr. Casselman.

He added a son of this cow is currently on the Quebec AI unit (CIAQ). She is being boarded right now on a farm near Kemptville for embryo transplant.

Another Holstein in the herd, JFC Senator Lana (VG), was named first in the Honor List for her 259 per cent BCA in her senior four-year old record of 13,604 kilograms of milk. In her category she placed first in Canada in terms of production.

Morewood company ordered to rehire fired workers with retroactive pay

by Alvah Hanrahan
Record News Editor

Morewood Industries has broken Ontario labor law, a decision of the Ontario Labor Relations Board has ruled.

Last week the company was ordered to rehire workers fired last summer and to compensate the 12 for back pay they would have earned at the house manufacturing site here.

Hearings in Ottawa over the past few months have resulted in a decision that accused the company of "massive violations" of labor laws in July, 1985.

At that time a dozen fired workers demonstrated outside the plant here protesting their treatment at the hands of the firm. Around that time several workers tried to form a local of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters in order to gain bargaining rights and a contract.

The tough board decision ruled that since the vote taken by workers was slightly under 45 per cent the union, local 1030, must now be in place at Morewood Industries. The decision was unanimously endorsed by all three board members.

Reasons given by management for the firings were a drop in business and quality and productivity programs. However, other evidence indicated the company increased overtime at the time of the labor unrest.

Roberta Scanlon, a former employee and one of the 12 dismissed said she and other workers were compelled to work 65 hours per week.

"There was mandatory overtime or you were fired," she told The Record. Miss Scanlon, a Kingston area native, said the workers were told by management a permit had been obtained to allow the compulsory overtime. She indicated the permit allowed for up to 48 hours only if management and labor agreed to the arrangment.

Asked if she would like to return to work at Morewood Industries she replied she was happy in the new job she has found in an area retail outlet.

She said the long ordeal of the court hearings were "definitely worth it because of all the people who have been helped."

Her boyfriend, Mark Lefebvre, who has since returned to work at the plant, said several improvements are now in place including vending machines and an updated lunchroom.

Union organizer Frank Manoni said in a telephone interview the decision proved "a victory for freedom of association."

He added the next step is to come to an agreement regarding a contract for the newly unionized workers. "Both parties have an obligation to negotiate in good faith and to make every effort to come to an agreement."

Asked if he thought the union's case would win he replied flatly, "Yes." "I told the employees I was confident but I could not guarantee for sure because then I would be the judge in the case."

But he indicated his side brought "a lot of proof and a lot of evidence to the board."

In the matter of retroactive pay Mr. Manoni said the plant's work is partly seasonal and agreements must now be worked out on that basis. Management can point out that some of the workers in question may not have been employed during all the months since last July.

"It's a question of negotiation," he said.

"I hope that good will prevail on both sides."

Three of the fired workers are back at the company while four others have found other employment. Another five reportedly want to return.

Company representative Stephen Rosenburgh declined to comment about the case to a Record reporter on Monday.

Little or no flooding predicted for South Nation River area: SNRCA

BERWICK (Staff) - Residents whose houses are located along the banks of the South Nation River can rest easy this year, indications are that flooding won't be a problem as ice and snow thaw and warm temperatures herald spring, 1986.

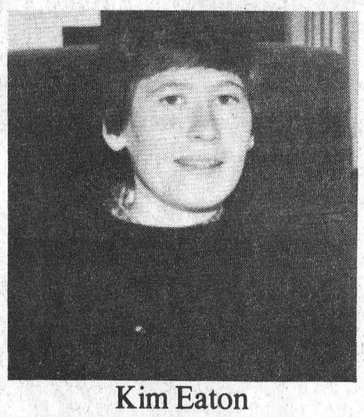
Kim Eaton, operations director for the South Nation Conservation Authority here, said just before press time flooding "is not presenting any problem this year."

"There's a less than normal snow pack and the ice thickness is slightly below normal."

Ms. Eaton indicated last week's rain washed away much of the snow.

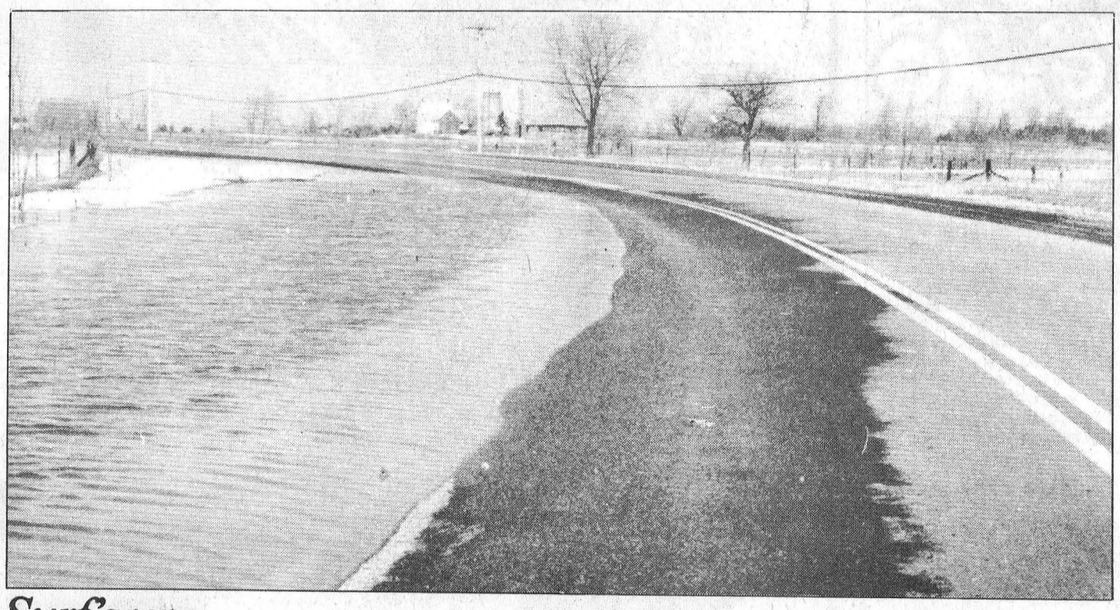
She said unless there were an extremely heavy rainfall in the offing the authority is not expecting any flooding. In fact, the season has been so uneventful the authority has not removed the logs from the dam. Last year this was done in the first week of March. Now, however, there may be no need at all to remove the logs. Last year March was warned, Ms. Eaton pointed out and the ice broke up sooner.

With a warm weekend predicted, she concluded "the ice should break up next week."



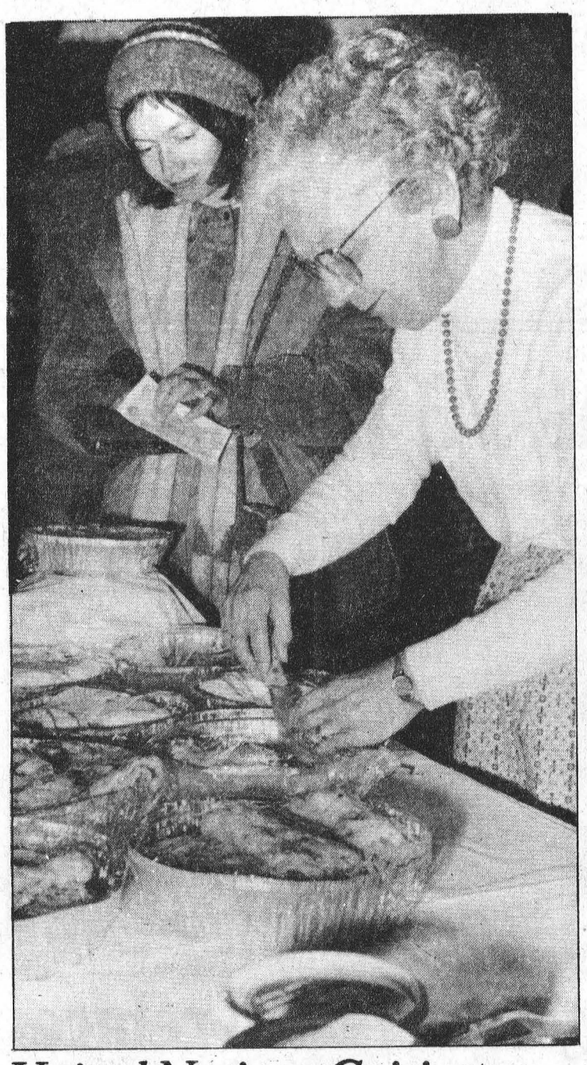
Kim Eaton

There has been an active flow of water beneath the ice which has served to weaken the ice, preparing for the eventual breakdown of the pack. But cold nights have frozen things over and the rate of melting is slow and even.



Surf's up

Flooding occurred in many areas of the district last Wednesday as melting snow turned to water in the warm temperatures. By the next day, though, the water was frozen and flooded lawns and fields were once again under a coating of ice. County Road 8 near Chesterville was awash in several places.



United Nations Cuisine

Greek diples served by Audrey Butcher intrigued many customers at an international bake sale sponsored by the Chesterville unit of the Winchester District Memorial Hospital Auxiliary Friday in the village. The bake sale was a multi-national success, raising $700 for the Winchester Hospital. Plans for an international bazaar are in the works.

Chesterville water problems continue with village pump house

(Staff) - With water problems continuing in Chesterville village council was informed last week that pump house No. 2 needs a new valve installed. At a cost of about $670 the new part will replace a thirty-year old valve which is no longer functioning.

Environment ministry representative Harold Sharkey told council last week he had installed a stop gap valve but that the pump house needed a permanent replacement part. Although water will be shut off at the pump for about two hours this will not affect the water pressure in the village.

Deputy fire chief

Ross Casselman has been appointed deputy fire chief. He takes over the position from Jack Lannin.

Dog kennel

Chesterville dog catcher Carmen Langabeer informed council he was not intending to go any further with his plans to establish a dog kennel in the village at this time.

Crests

A design for a village crest is being considered by council which is currently reviewing color combinations for two designs.

North Dundas News

By Elena Pizzamiglio

Back from the March Break, for many a much needed rest, students and teachers alike are once again involved in the "high-voltage" school life. A dance, with music provided by Wattage, took place Friday 21, and it was as good as usual.

The SADD chapter is keeping busy with many events which will contribute to its success. Among these are participation in a Junior Assembly April 10 and a delegation of representatives to the conference at Gananoque on April 15 and 16. The information discussed will be presented to the School Committee April 17 at North Dundas.

A mini-tournament of volleyball was the main feature of the staff-students challenge Friday night at North Dundas which everybody enjoyed immensely.

Meanwhile, in school, the classes continue to keep us entertained. The education trips such as last week's law trip to the Ottawa Courts to witness the workings of the legal system, and the interesting geography trip to Cornwall hydro dam are class-related activities which seem to make it all worthwhile.

Well-deserved congratulations go to the NDDHS programming team whose members are Rich Rodney, Paul Spencer, Clinton Young and Robert Wu as they tied for first place in the SD&G programming contest. Well done!

These days the Junior and Senior Accounting Contest teams are getting into shape for the tourney in April to be held at North Dundas this year.

The magazine campaign kicks off on April 4 and runs until April 14. Students will be taking new subscriptions as well as renewing old ones. The fund-raising committee hopes to be as successful as last year.

With the sap running at last, Barkleyvale Maple Sugar Bush is now in full operation. Last Sunday's maple syrup social brought out the crowds who were willing to risk cold and windy weather to see how the syrup is made. Driving the group was Gordon Smith. The event has been held for the second year.

500 turn up for syrup with everything

DUNBAR (Staff) - The walls of the community hall here had to stretch to the limit on Sunday when the second annual maple syrup social marked the first local community event of the season.

More than 500 people showed up for a pancake breakfast and all the trimmings from 9am until about 2pm when the last persons were served.

Held by Barklayvale Maple Sugar Bush, the event was enlivened this year by the fiddle music of Williamsburg's Malcolm Scarf.

Proprietors Brian and Trisha Barkley of Elma hosted the event helped by five cooks and six local ladies serving meals to the crowd. As well as the luscious menu a selection of maple based products was on sale. Diners were treated to pancakes with syrup, maple baked beans, maple cheesecake, maple brittle and maple popcorn.

"Some people came here around nine before going to church," said Mr. Barkley surveying the crowded room. "We decided to open a little earlier this year and the lineups have been steady but no one had to wait too long."

The numbers doubled over last year's crowd of 250, said Mrs. Barkley. Many of those people elected to take the hay wagon driven by Gordon Smith into the Barkley's bush operation to watch the sap being boiled and observe the modern pipeline system in place.

The couple has operated the bush since 1975 although the maple grove was in use from the turn of the century until about 1945.

The weather didn't cooperate this year, though, as far as the sap run was concerned.

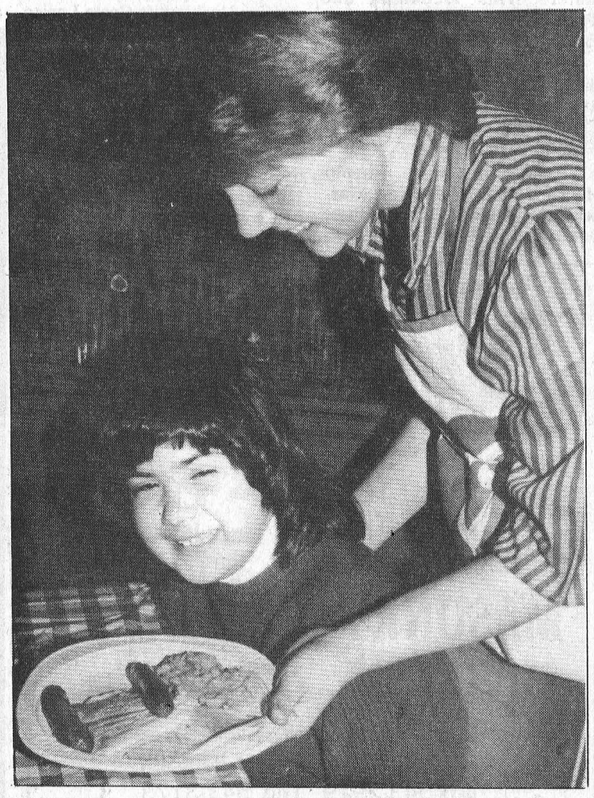
"It's been really cold," said Mr. Barkley "but there's a bit of a run now. We started boiling last week and there's a nice flavor this year."

With wood that's been seasoned a year in advance the sap is boiled in vats. The Barkley's collect sap from 600 taps on pipeline and a further 300 buckets.

"The last two years the season has been irregular," he noted, "and because the last season was dry this affects us now."

They obtain about one litre of syrup per tree per tap.

Repeat customers at the social were in evidence as were newcomers from Embrun and Brockville. The Barkleys keep a guest book on hand to record the names and comments from visitors every year.



Monica Siegenthaler was one of six waitresses on hand to feed 500 hungry people at last Sunday's maple syrup social at Dunbar Community Hall. Amy Pemberton was relieved to have her pancakes served at last. Maple syrup was the order of the day with desserts like maple cheese cake available as well.

Seniors' housing a possibility in Crysler

CRYSLER (Staff) - Finch Township will have a second chance to get senior citizens' housing.

A survey will soon be in the mail to township residents 58 years of age and older, said Rochelle Newton, Ministry of Housing eastern region housing analyst, Monday.

A 1982 survey found only 17 people interested in a seniors' apartment building, several people short of the required 20 to 25.

The project was saved when more applicants stepped forward after the deadline had passed and the 26-unit apartment building in Finch Village opened last fall.

Marie-Therese Sabourin, a member of a Crysler francophone senior citizens' group organizing support for the apartments, said she is not the only one who would welcome the building in the village.

"Many are ready (to move in) as soon as it is built," she said.

Housing for seniors, she said, allows an older person to stay in his or her home community without the stress of maintaining a house and lawn.

And an apartment building in Crysler would serve a predominantly French-speaking population, she said.

Being a francophone population, she said, should be in the village's favor when under consideration for housing.

As well, Finch village's apartments, only 11 kilometres away, are already filled -- another plus, Mrs. Sabourin said, for constructing housing in Crysler.

Members of the club have canvassed only part of the village for support, but Mrs. Sabourin said the response so far has been "pretty good".

Ms. Newgton commended the group for already working to organize support.

"It does happen in a lot of municipalities where the seniors are interested in supporting the survey through meeting with other people in their club...so they can encourage them to fill out the survey form," she said.

She said seniors sometimes don't realize that completing the survey doesn't commit them to moving into an apartment when the building is completed.

The survey, she explained, is only an indication of the need and demand for housing in the area.

The township and village first considered a seniors' apartment building in 1980, when the municipalities completed a housing statement of their own needs. In 1980, the ministry approved their policy statement and completed the area's first housing survey two years later.

But the survey found interest in only six rent-geared-to-income units and 11 market-rent units.

By November of last year, Finch Township was eligible for another survey and authorized it, this time designating the north end of the township in the Crysler area as a possible location.

Ms. Newton said redesigning of the survey forms is delaying the mailing. But she said the new forms should be ready "in the next little while".

She stressed it's "crucial" that survey recipients complete and return the forms in the stamped, addressed envelopes provided.

Public meetings to answer questions about the survey and apartment buildings will be held during the third week of the four-week survey period.

She said relatives of elderly people who may wish to move or return to the Crysler area can also request surveys from the municipal office in Berwick. Former or new residents would also be eligible for seniors' housing in the township.

$220,000 in supplementary funds requested

BERWICK (Staff) - If fiscal trends continue, Finch Township may receive only a fraction of the $220,000 in provincial supplementary funds it wants this year.

At a meeting last week, council approved a request for partial funding for a new tandem truck and work on a bridge east of Finch village.

But over the past several years, the township has usually received only between $25,000 and $30,000 in supplementary funds for construction work and purchases beyond the normal roads budget.

The largest portion of the request, $155,000, is earmarked for the rebuilding of a St. Luke's Road bridge over the Payne River.

A pre-engineering study on the bridge was completed last summer, but the Ministry of Transportation and Communications has not yet decided whether it would be replaced with culverts or a more expensive reinforced concrete structure.

Whether the work is completed this season depends on the amount of supplementary funds approved.

The township has also asked for $65,000 to cover more than half the estimated cost of a new tandem truck, including a wing and related equipment.

The township now has a 1975 model truck which has run into expensive repairs.

Estimated total cost of a new truck is $100,000.

If only part of the supplementary grant for the bridge work is approved, repairs may have to be spread over two years.

Payments on a truck could also be made over two years, but the township would then have to count on receiving enough supplementary funds next year to pay it off.

The township expects to hear how much funding the province has approved in May.

The township also plans to complete the Ashburn Road work this year. A three-year project, this year will see the eastern portion finished.

Finch is also discussing work on boundary roads with the neighboring townships of Winchester, Roxborough and Cambridge.

Finch Township has requested $155,000 in supplementary funds from the province to begin work on this St. Luke's Road bridge south of Highway 43. The township has also applied for $65,000 to help purchase a new tandem truck.

Fire budgets approved

MOOSE CREEK (Staff) - Budgets were the order of the day last week when Roxborough township council presented accounts for the coming year. Council has approved a $32,230 budget for Avonmore and Monkland Area No. 2 Fire Department.

Another firefighting budget was approved as well. Moose Creek Area No. 1 Fire Department's expenditures have been approved for this year in the amount $28,425. An amendment includes $100 each for two captains.

Council has accepted the road superintendant's program of proposed expenditures on roads in 1986 for $608,000. The Ministry of Transport and Communications will subisdize the township for $279,400. In addition the township has requested $98,000 in supplementary allocation for a truck and a sanding unit.

The Roxborough Recreation Association's budget for $25,000 has been approved. Jamieson Campbell and Gladys Mesich have been appointed to the Roxborough Committee to replace Yvonne Whitford and Dois Begg who declined appointment.

In Memoriams

IN MEMORIAM

McINTYRE — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Allen, who passed away March 29, 1984.
Time speeds on, two years have passed,
Since death its gloom, its shadow cast.
Within our home, where all seemed bright,
And took from us, a shining light.
We miss that light, and ever will,
His vacant place, there is none can fill,
Down here, we mourn, but not in vain,
For up in Heaven, we will meet again.

Lovingly remembered by Wife Irene, Brenda, David and Mark, Lee and Leslie

IN MEMORIAM

SUMMERS — In loving memory of a dear son, husband and father Ronald Summers who passed away March 28, 1978.
Memories are treasures, no one can steal,
Death is a heartache no one can heal,
Some may forget you now that you are gone,
But we will remember no matter how long.

Sadly missed by mother, wife and family

A Realistic Approach

During inflation (and we're in it), there's an excellent case for investing in real estate. Most of the investment is paid for with borrowed money. Someone else's fixed-dollar savings provides your mortgage money. Even though interest rates are up several notches from where they were, a mortgage loan is the only way the average consumer can borrow long-term money.

This, then, is your big chance to turn inflation to your advantage. Your mortgage gives you full-price dollars to work with today. You then pay them back with cheaper dollars you will be earning for the next 20 to 30 years.

This isn't a cynical approach. It's realistic. In fact, it's one of the main reasons why many wealthy individuals continue to make big real estate investments. And you can do the same with a home that you own and need anyway.

Stormont federation slams proposed bike path, wants answers from Bell

AVONMORE (Staff) - The Stormont Federation of Agriculture wants Bell Canada to explain its position on a proposed sale of land for a bicycle path running from Cornwall to Ottawa.

At a meeting here Monday night, the federation decided to write the corporation opposing the sale to anyone other than landowners abutting the 80-kilometre stretch of abandoned railbed and invited further discussions with Bell.

Federation president David Whetter said the next step is "to put the squeeze on Bell" to find someone in authority to answer farmers' concerns about the proposed sale of the property to the Cornwall and Ingleside--Osnabruck Rotary clubs.

When land is expropriated for any purpose, he said, it's usually returned to the original owners when it's no longer needed for that purpose.

But in this case, the land is being offered to another organization.

The bike path was first proposed late in 1985 by the two Rotary Clubs as a scheme to bring tourist dollars into small rural communities along the abandoned New York Central rail line.

But Stormont farmers north of Newington have expressed fear the path would threaten farmers' access to fields and lead to trespass on private property, unauthorized use by motorized vehicles and rowdiness.

Mr. Whetter said a key to the corporation's eagerness to sell is fear of lawsuits should someone be injured on the railbed.

"I honestly think they want to unload the liability, not the railway track," he said.

The same fear, he said, is also discouraging Bell from offering the property to individual landowners.

Some owners along the track would probably refuse to buy it, leaving Bell responsible for parcels along its route.

But if the Rotary Clubs take on the project, he said, Bell would be rid of it.

Because several parcels have been sold years ago to individuals and municipalities, Mr. Whetter said a continuous route would be "impossible". Problems policing the trail through farmland and scrub bush make the proposal "impractical".

A federation member abutting the rail line suggested that farmers sign a petition opposing the sale. If there's enough opposition, he said, the project may be dropped.

In other business, the federation decided to join with its Dundas counterpart to draw up guidelines for supporting a voluntary, third party debt review process for financially troubled farmers.

Members of both federations had attended a summit of Eastern Ontario federations in Kemptville that day where the federal budget's proposed farm debt review panel had been discussed.

Mr. Whetter said the federal proposal did not allow for eventual arbitration by the courts if necessary, a step supported by many farm organizations.

He suggested that federations try to work Ottawa's way and prove it won't work.

The federation favored debt restructuring or set-asides, rather than a reduction or write-down of either principal or interest payments.

Lorraine Lapointe, an Ontario Federation of Agriculture director, said a reduction of one farmer's debt would be unfair to another who was meeting his financial obligations.

When asked the percentage of Ontario farmers struggling to meet payments, she said the figure would probably be closer to the Farm Credit Corporation's estimate of 30 per cent rather than the bank's one or two per cent.

But a figure shouldn't matter, she said. Any farmer under financial stress would appreciate efforts to restructure his debt.

Tagwi bags mags

Tagwi's annual magazine subscription campaign to raise funds is now under way and will last for two weeks. The drive was launched last Thursday morning when campaign leaders gathered during school assembly to lead the effort. The goal is $5,000 and the reward for top effort is the Spirit Award Trophy. Proceeds will go to the school band. From left, front row, Joanne Sproul, Lesley Phillips, Susan Armstrong, Kelly Morris, Laurie Phillips, Tracy Rigby. Second row, from left, Bryce Robinson, Bill McLeod, Charles Wert, Dean MacIntosh, Murray MacKenzie. Third row, from left, Rick Birch, Readers' Digest, Toronto and Brad Hunt.

County hazard

County Road 18, once again, is a disgrace. The potholes, bumps, ridges, cracks and other pitfalls which lurk along the road from Osnabruck Centre to the Church Road are guaranteed to transform any automobile into an instant wreck.

The driver, too, is in jeopardy as the human frame is not immune from the ravages of the aged and patched road.

Some of the rolling hills along the road's surface are so deep and so unexpected the road should be avoided if possible.

Every year the situation along County Road 18 seem to worsen and like clockwork the counties claim there is no money in the budget to attend to this area. Apparently, there are worse roads in the United Counties, but we wouldn't like to see any of them.

Take our word for it — stay home or find an alternate route.

Burning with fuel

Ontario motorists are being gouged when they line up at the gas pump, according to the president of BP Canada Ltd.

Of course, most Ontario drivers have long suspected they were paying more than they had to. Apparently gas could be priced at 40 cents a litre and still make a whopping profit for the refiners.

To his credit, provincial energy minister Vince Kerrio has gone on record as saying he is upset by the pricing situation and says he'll look into it. His department will consider the question of legislating competition in the marketplace.

Even at 35 cents a litre, said David Sellers whose company sold out its Ontario gas stations to Petro-Canada in 1982, the companies could make a profit. They would then be operating on a low margin of profit as they have sometimes chosen to do in the past.

It seems, too, that the Alberta oil producers are themselves being gouged by the big four refineries, Petro-Canada, Texaco Canada, Shell Canada and Imperial Oil because they pay less than American producers are getting for their oil. Ironically, gasoline costs the consumer less in the United States.

The recent price drop in gas came about as a result of criticism of the practices of the oil companies by federal energy Pat Carney. But the collective clout carried by Mrs. Carney, the provincial energy ministers and the Canadian producers is apparently not significant enough to prevent the refiners from profiting excessively in this country.

The Farmer's Wife

by Wyn Thompson

Nobody asked me but...March has been an interesting month, for me at least.

It began with my visit to the English Country Butcher Shop in the Brinston area. Seeing this shop with its promotion of English Country sausage on Country Report, I decided it was just the place to take my mother and a visiting sister-in-law from Georgetown, for a Saturday outing.

I chose the first Saturday in March, immediately following the television show. It was a pretty day. A day made for a country drive, we all agreed. So did a few hundred others, and we all converged on the English Country Butcher Shop.

The queue formed on the right inside the door which was both entrance and exit, and it wound backwards and forwards to the counter like inexorably entwined intestines.

Line jumping was not foreign to this gaggle of humanity, the accent of which was British, very British. And the wrath of god and a belated British empire rained down on the two intrepid souls, both women, who attempted this innocuous act.

No, I was not one of them. I was saved by the fact that I was wedged in between two six-foot, two hundred pound British men, very British men.

My mother got waited on first, somehow, then she and my sister-in-law retreated to the car. One hour and one-half later I emerged, weary and slightly worse for wear, but clutching a package of English country sausage, Scotish country sausage and a pork pie.

The irony of it was, I couldn't taste any of it for even a slight taste test is not abandoned by my non-functioning gallbladder. But not to worry, I had enjoyed my first experience of "queueing up." The camaraderie was great. The information exchanged on everything from international recipes, to travel trips, to world history and culture was scintillating.

Shortly, we relaxed in a local restaurant and ate, no not sausages. That would come later.

I served the sausages that night, the Scottish seasoned with pepper, the English with sage, and was told they were absolutely delicious and oh, so filling.

"Settle down," I advised a gallbladder so insensitive as to rebel at the aroma of such gourmet food. "This is an historic event you witnessed, one that will be enshrined in the annals of Eastern Ontario ad nauseam."

Later in the month, I celebrated International Women's Week by concentrating on womankind, past and present, a segment of society that in other weeks the world tends to ignore. It was a week to begin to retrieve, what has not been lost to human history...the contribution of women.

I reviewed the thrust of International Women's Days. The first March 8 that women marched in the name of sisterhood was in 1857, when New York City textile workers hit the streets and demanded equality.

Metro Toronto women marched this year for the 9th successive year in honour of International Women's Day. And once again they demanded equality - this time for blacks in South Africa and for any other victims of racism here or abroad.

Ottawa abounded with celebrations, seminars, workshops, and rallies. A friend and I decided, or I should say her feminist daughter prodded us into deciding to attend one of the International Women's Week Workshops at Algonquin College, Ottawa.

The theme was, what else, "Some Ways of Finding Joy and Fun in the Latter Part of Life." Workshop Chairman Helen Levine of Carleton University, reviewed the very real problems encountered by aging women.

The following is a list of recommended reading: Small Expectations: Society's Betrayal of Older Women by Leah Cohen (highly recommended) This Bed My Centre by Ellen Newton; Look Me in the Eye by Barbara MacDonald; Tell Me a Riddle by Tillie Olsen; Old Women at Play by Adele Wiseman; At Seventy: a journal by May Sarton (highly recommended); Ice Age: poetry by Dorothy Liesing.

We were advised to have fun for it's now or never. Helen noted that often women are reluctant to nurture themselves. Women are raised to feel so responsible for so many people that they rarely stand still and say, "I am a significant person, I need time for myself and space to develop."

The group was advised to rediscover fun; to celebrate older women; to move on to rewarding lives.

Support groups, "Crones," are being organized. Helen a 61-year-old feminist, married, living and working in Ottawa, belongs to a "Crones Group," made up of about eight older women all in their fifties and sixties. She stressed that physical and mental health can be enhanced by friendships with older women.

This group has existed in various forms for four years now. "We love having a peer group of women interested in both feminism and aging. We share experiences, past and present, support each other, celebrate birthdays, sing and laugh and cry together and hope to be there for one another in this latter phase of our lives. Self-help groups can be very important for our health," she concluded.

An optimistic note was struck when Helen said, "Old age gives us the chance to refuse the role of servant at the ready for others. In 1949 Simone Beauvoir wrote that women finally achieve independence in their old age, and by then it's too late.

My friends and I are getting to be what we now call 'senior delinquents'." Helen Levine's paper on "Crones" is excellent reading material, perhaps you might get a copy from the university.

We were referred to the Ottawa Women's Bookstore, corner of Gladstone and Elgin, for books, tapes, and records on every subject of interest to women.

The workshop stimulated me. In future, upon being wished a good day, I'll ask that it be changed to an interesting day.

And once a month, for the good of my soul, I intend to commit one outrageous act. It's now or never.

Unbounded enthusiasm was manifest at the meeting Thursday evening last of the canvassers for funds for the erection of a covered skating rink in Chesterville during the coming summer.

At the meeting a week previously the objective of five thousand dollars had been set for a one-day canvass of the village and surrounding community, and so successfully had that been carried out and the response so spontaneous, that when all the lists had been turned in and figured up a total of well over the five thousand dollars was the result.

A stout wooden peg holding the door was smashed but there were no marks on the outside of the door that would indicate any sort of a battering ram being used.

No meat was touched.

Auxiliary says thanks for success of bake sale

The Editor:

On behalf of the Chesterville Unit of the hospital auxiliary we would like to extend our sincere thanks to all those who helped make the international food sale such a tremendous success.

Our sincere appreciation goes to all who donated food; to Thom Travel Agency; to Mrs. Thelma Somerville who supplied decorations; and Mrs. Marg Countryman for the beautiful cake.

Very special thanks are due to Mr. and Mrs. Louis Pavlouinis for the use of their store.

The proceeds of these endeavors enable the auxiliary to purchase the "little extras" so important to the patients' care.

The Life of Riley

by Wayne Riley

I was 12 when I first saw a magician up close. I mean a real magician with a suit and cape and a beautiful assistant — more beautiful than even Elizabeth Montgomery on Bewitched — standing beside him with one leg slightly bent.

It would be years before I found out that an inner breast pocket can hide a bird or that practised fingers can suck a coin off a palm and hold it concealed over the knuckles.

In the summer of 1969 I knew only that magicians belonged to a secret club that met once a year at midnight and that a magician could be threatened with anything and he still would never reveal a secret.

The magician I saw came to the summer fair in Portage as part of the evening entertainment that preceded the sulky races. The first part of his name was The Great, which doesn't tell you much because all the magicians at that time had The Great in front of their names. This was before magic went on the skids and sleight of hand was taken over by a hockey player named Gretzky.

The magician received applause as soon as he became visible on the corner of the stage and before his name was announced. Maybe, like me, they sensed that something really neat was going to happen on this hot, humid evening. Or maybe a lot of people were just itching to get the entertainment out of the way so they could slap down $5 on Lucky Eddy in the third.

Either way the magician came out of it with a good hand and he acknowledged the applause by bowing and touching a wand to his forehead. The wand burst into a bouquet of flowers.

During the show he did some card tricks with an extra-large deck of cards, made a ball multiply in his hand and put a saw through the middle of his assistant (how did he do that?).

But the best stuff happened when he invited some kids from the audience to come up to the stage to watch him perform a trick. My brother and I were among those who walked up the steps.

We stood there like statues, nodding our heads only when he asked us if the top hat he slowly rotated in front of our faces was really empty. Then he held the hat in front of him, knocked on it and pulled out a small white rabbit.

The magician smiled as his little stage audience silently mouthed a long, wide-eyed "wow". Then he bent down as if he was going to let us in on a secret except that he had a microphone in front of him and any little secret he was going to share with us was also going home with a few thousand other people.

Magic and advice

He said, "Things are not always as they appear." He said this the way a father says to his son, "Don't let your mother know we stopped off for hotdogs before supper." Friendly advice from someone who's been there.

I would like to say that I never forget the magician's words, that I hung on to them like a lucky charm. But I didn't. For a few days after the show I tried unsuccessfully to fool my brothers with card tricks — "Pick a card, no, not that card, this card." And then Hercules Cortez threatened to make mashed potatoes out of Killer Kowalski's head in a no-ref cage match and I forgot about magic altogether.

In fact, the whole magic show came back to me only last Saturday afternoon, 17 years later, give a few months. I remembered the magician's advice after the fact, of course, the way all advice is remembered.

I have just uncrated a new bathroom vanity and my first look at it had sent me into a rage.

"What have they done to the top of this vanity," I screamed as I clawed fingers through my hair. "There isn't supposed to be this jog along the top. How can I put a basin top on this?"

I felt the blood flow heavily into my face. "This looks absolutely nothing like the vanity in the catalogue. You save your money, you spend the extra buck for quality and they stiff you. How could someone let something like this get through?"

I had now lifted up the basin top and put it on top of the vanity. I grimaced at the crazy way it teetered. "What kind of stupidity is this?" I said. "It looks just like..."

"The vanity is upside down," my wife said.

"...a vanity that is upside down," I finished. The blood that had pooled in my cheeks instantly drained. "Of course, it's upside down. That's why the drawers in it are upside down. That's why the top doesn't fit. Tops aren't made to fit on bottoms."

My wife may have added something to these observations but I'm not sure because at this point I stopped listening to anything in 1986. For a moment all I could hear was a magician at a 1969 summer fair. "Things are not always as they appear."

I wanted to go up to him and tell him he was right all along and that I wished I had remembered his show before I took the vanity crate apart.

And since we were talking anyway, I would ask him if he could forget about the magician's code of silence for a moment and show me one trick, just one trick before I went back to my wife and the upside down vanity in 1986.

Not a fancy trick with lights and dry ice. Just a plain and effective disappearing act.

Banking on Crysler

Crysler's Royal Bank has had a new manager on staff since Monday. Claude Lauzon, 30, is a native of the Hawkesbury area and grew up in Ottawa. Together with his wife Nicole, a teacher, and 13-month-old son Justin, Mr. Lauzon expects to settle quickly into the community. "I enjoy small towns," he said, "and I look forward to being active and involved in the community." He comes to Crysler from Ajax, a Toronto suburb, and has also worked for the Royal in Wawa, Sault Ste. Marie and Sturgeon Falls.

Finch Township disapproves of plan to end severances

BERWICK (Staff) - Finch Township council opposes a provincial proposal to end rural severances.

At its meeting March 17, council decided to forward its concerns to the United Counties, which are preparing a joint response to the foodland preservation policy statement issued last month by the ministers of agriculture and municipal affairs.

"Right now, as I understand it, if this goes through there will be no severances on agricultural land for retirement purposes or even for farm help," Reeve Ralph MacKenzie said.

Citing current low prices for corn, he said, "It's hard to tell farmers to save agricultural land when that's all they get for it."

Councillor Armand Gibeault said a no-severance rule could depress land prices further. Farms would be less attractive to buy if prospective purchasers couldn't sever farmhouse lots and would therefore have to pay taxes on them.

"You can't sell a farm nowadays," said deputy-reeve Donald Shane.

Councillor Archie Byers said the policy could prevent urban build-up on agricultural land and pointed to the capital area as an example.

"Go west of Ottawa. See the houses on the most beautiful farmland you ever say," he said.

But Mr. Gibeault said the situation is different in rural eastern Ontario. "That's around metropolitan areas," he said. "That's not Stormont."

But councillor Floyd Dingwall said nonfarm purchasers of rural lots could cause problems in the township. There have already been cases elsehwere in the province, he said, of nonfarm residents complaining of odors and noise from normal agricultural practices.

If a court ever decides in favor of the nonfarm dweller, he said others will be waiting "the next time a combine drives by" to claim for damages.

He said he saw a need for right-to-farm legislation but a farmer's right to sever a lot for himself may be lost.

"I guess you can't have all your apples and eat them, too," he said.

Council also wondered whether severances would continue to be allowed on marginal land and how extensive designations of land as prime agricultural or marginal would be.

In the township, there are pockets of marginal land unsuited for farming sprinkled throughout tracts of prime agricultural land.

But United Counties planner Bryan Weir said the policy intends to create blocks of land as uniform in designation as possible.

"It could work both ways in that respect," he said, explaining parcels of agricultural land could also be included in a large block of marginal land.

Other S.D. and G. municipalities have qualms about the policy proposals.

At a meeting earlier this month, counties council instructed Mr. Weir to prepare a joint response to the proposals.

"They decided to put on strong voice forward instead of maybe a whole bunch of voices coming from townships and villages," Mr. Weir said Monday, adding municipalities are also welcome to submit their own views on the policy.

Two municipalities have replied, both expressing concern with the "strictness" of the severance provision, he said.

Severances also dominated concerns brought to a meeting of they didn't know how the policy would be implemented.

But ministry officials were "receptive" to municipalities' concerns.

S.D. and G. municipalities have until April 15 to submit their views to the counties. The deadline for forwarding comments on the proposals to the province is April 30.

These questions weren't answered, he said, and ministry of agriculture officials admitted planners from across the province last week with officials from the two ministries involved.

He said planners also wondered whether any changes would be effective immediately or if they would have two years to amend official plans to conform with the policy.

Building inspector hired, permits hiked

BERWICK (Staff) - Effective April 7, Finch Township may have its first building inspector.

But home-builders will also find that permit fees have jumped.

At a meeting last week, township council agreed to hire Ross Dingwall as the township's building inspector.

Reeve Ralph MacKenzie said having an inspector to enforce the Ontario Building Code could avoid lawsuits against the township in the future.

Without an inspector, he said, the township could be held responsible if the purchaser of an improperly constructed house later complained.

The conversion of a Crysler factory to apartments also spurred the township to consider creating the new position.

The inspector will be paid $12 an hour and the standard township mileage fee of 24 cents a kilometre.

"If you're going to get a fellow well qualified to do this, you're not going to get anybody for $8," councillor Armand Gibeault said. "I think the price is right."

Increased permit costs will cover part of the inspector's fees.

A permit will jump from 50 cents per thousand dollars of the project's estimated cost to a minimum charge of $25 and a $1 fee per thousand dollars.

Under the old rates, a permit for an $80,000 home would cost $40. Under the new fees, the price will jump to $105.

A permit for a car garage will now cost $25, the minimum fee. Prior to the changes, a permit for any building under $1,000 would cost only $2.

Amid discussion whether home-builders will find the increase too high, Mr. MacKenzie said, "I think we're protecting him down the road because it's cheap insurance."

Council said the new rates are in line with charges in neighboring municipalities.

Permits will continue to be issued at the municipal office, at least until the township can review the success of the new position.

Mr. Dingwall, employed by a contractor, also does carpentry work on his own. He wondered who would inspect township homes he may construct.

"I was wondering if I could build and be building inspector both."

He said provisions in the provincial building code allowed municipalities to share inspectors and council was certain inspection could be arranged for any home he built.

The issue of builders who don't obtain permits for homes or additions was raised by councillor Floyd Dingwall. He said he knew of several additions for which no permit had been obtained and recommended that there be a penalty for such owners.

Clerk-treasurer Arnott Empey said such home-owners will one day pay when a prospective purchaser calls the office to check whether the house conforms to building code standards.

He would then learn no building permit had been issued for the house he was interested in.

Bed and breakfast visits, microwaves discussed at March meeting of Finch WI

FINCH (Special) - The March meeting of Finch branch of Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. J. Dingemans.

The members enjoyed a meal of Dutch soup, buns and several tasty desserts. Mrs. Stuart Duff, convenor of family and consumers affairs, was in charge of the opening of the meeting.

Motto: a driver is safest when roads are dry but roads are safer when the driver is dry. Roll call: exchange in writing a hint on household safety or a consumer tip.

A report from five members on the farmers day in Kemptville was presented as a panel discussion. Ricki TePlate explained the plans to become involved in the bed and breakfast or farm family visits. It is a good way to meet people while working in your own home. It provides rural areas with extra income. Myrna MacLean added we need to have a good water supply and be sure of the safety rules. It helps to be in close contact with local spots of interest although some just like a quiet place for a change, to relax. All enjoy just plain cooking.

Catherine MacLean described some of the guests she has received at her home. You need to get your name listed and then it is just a matter of people phoning and booking ahead for their rooms.

Merle Dame talked about microwave ovens. Many new features are on the new models. A family would need to think over their own need as to the proper size to buy.

Maria gave a talk on the meeting held in Finch, a course in leadership, a talk on executive meetings, working with people, stress and a cause of sickness and the need to take some time to relax by yourself each day.

President Mrs. Duart MacLean chaired the business part of the meeting. Acting secretary Mrs. R. Dillabough read the minutes and correspondence.

Mrs. Merle Dame gave a report on the district directors' meeting. The annual meeting of the district will be in Ingleside, May 22.

Maria Dingemans and Myrna MacLean attended the blood donor clinic at Winchester Hospital.

Our quilt was on display, to be used if needed in the community. A course on window decor will be held in the small hall, Finch, March 26, at 10am. A dinner meeting will be held April 3, in Winchester, at Mary's Restaurant. An Easter meditation: The Great Emancipator, was read by Mrs. D. MacLean.

Long Sault seniors' complex expansion doubles capacity

LONG SAULT (Staff) - A major $400,000 expansion project at Parkway Lodge here will result in doubled capacity for the residential complex for seniors.

Owned by Elizabeth Kirkby, the residence was opened in July, 1981 at a cost of $400,000 and in the past two years has achieved full occupancy rates. The residence currently houses 36 seniors but when the new section is completed in April there will be 74 beds. Because of the demand for space Mrs. Kirkey said, the expansion was planned and work began last November.

A larger dining room will seat 68 persons versus the current 30 and 15 ground floor private rooms will be offered for rent as well as double rooms. Some residents of the existing building have opted to move into the expanded section. The whole complex overlooks the St. Lawrence and Mrs. Kirkey noted the location is ideal for the residence.

"Residents like to walk to the shopping centre," she said, "and in warmer weather there's plenty to see in the area."

Some residents go home for the summer, preferring to spend the winter months in the complex while others elect to stay for short terms.

"It's a month to month thing," said manager Mike Mansell, "but it's not a hospital, it's their home."

"One lady comes every summer for the her three-week holiday," smiled Mrs. Kirkey.

She pointed out that as well as being a residence "we're offering a convalescant service." A doctor is on hand on Thursdays. Other services are offered too, with a hairdresser on the premises as well as entertainment from time to time. As well there's a chapel in the building and local churches hold regular services there. A laundry is available and residents take meals in the convenient sunny dining room. A few prefer trays in their rooms at mealtime.

Parkway Lodge, a residentail home for seniors in Long Sault, is currently undergoing a major expansion which will double its capacity. First opened in July, 1981, the facility has been filled for the past two years.

Farm show success

OTTAWA (Staff) - An added attraction for visitors to the 59th annual Ottawa Valley Farm Show was the seed, feed and forage show, which saw local growers dominate the competition.

Hardy Seeds Ltd. of Inkerman edged out the best in Eastern Ontario and Western Quebec to receive the Raymond H. Kemp Memorial Award for the Grand Champion Showperson with the most points in the show. Hardy Seeds also picked up the Lanark County Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company Special for the exhibitor winning the most prize money in the registered by the United Co-operatives of Ontario for the champion exhibit of soybeans.

The Barclay Dick Challenge Trophy for the best entry of red clover went to George Webster of RR4 Lansdowne.

John Seabrooke of North Gower picked up the Bishops Farm Seeds plaque for the championship in the barley class.

Jennifer Hyland of Kars won the highest number of points in the 4-H section of the show, and received the special Ketchum Manufacturing Co. prize.

Jean Paul Gregoire of Russell was also a winner, receiving the Funk's Seeds International of Canada Ltd. award for the best exhibit of corn silage.

The J.W. Mackay Memorial Trophy for the exhibitor with the highest number of points in the forage seed classes went to William E. Johnston of RR1, Martintown.

Werner Bill of RR1, Maxville received the J.W.McRae Plaque as the exhibitor with the champion grass, silage, oat or barley silage and haylage eligible for the competition.

The Nutrite Inc. award for the championship in the open and 4-H classes of seed corn went to John Van Turnhout of RR1, Berwick.

Jaime's future now looks more optimistic

IROQUOIS (Staff) - Jaime Adams, the nine-year old who is struggling valiantly to cope with an enzyme deficiency disease which has prevented normal growth, is fighting back.

Jaime travelled to Maryland for a consultation with Dr. Steven Kopits, a specialist in the field earlier in March. Her parents, Lorraine and Glen Adams, reported recently they are now more optimistic for the future of their little girl.

Dr. Kopits, a pioneer in the treatment of morqoui syndrome, has decided to fuse a bone from Jaime's leg onto the top vertebra of her spine. Because her vertebrae are not aligned properly compression of the spine has occurred.

The operation which will take place at Johns Hopkins Hospital, should relieve the pressure on Jaime's spinal cord, hopefully enabling her to lead a normal life. This may take place as early as May.

Scheduled to take eight hours, the delicate procedure will prevent vertebrae from sliding over each other and will stabilize Jaime's neck, leaving her in a body cast for about four months.

Mrs. Adams reported Jaime is ready for the operation and the two-week hospitalization to follow. Once she is released from hospital she will fly home from the United States in a specially designed wheelchair since she must be kept completely immobilized in her cast.

Jaime has visited another patient of Dr. Koptis near Hamilton so that she may understand what the procedure will be like after the operation. Mrs. Adams said Dr. Kopits shows a great deal of sympathy and compassion for his patients and believes good doctors must become emotionally involved with their patients, not the other way round.

Helping Jaime to cope with her ordeal are many local community groups and her family have tried to thank everyone as best they could. Several fundraising events have been held to assist with the medical and travel expenses

Chesterville club stages wizard skating program

(Staff) - Dorothy went down the yellow brick road on skates Monday at the Chesterville arena as part of the Wizard of Oz play that the Chesterville Figure Skating Club put on for parents and friends.

It was a first for the club which put on the performance with a cast from ages 3-16 to participate in such an event.

It took approximately 15 hours of practice time to get the play ready but organizer and club president Pat Henderson felt more time could have been put into it. "It went over very well," said Henderson, "Although we could have used more time it all seemed to come together just at the right time."

The program which has switched from last season's 15 minute weekly classes to a full hour this year, has left instructors Kim Williams and Kim Simms with a much larger sense of accomplishment.

"The girls improved 50 per cent from last year," said veteran instructor Kim Williams. The program was called, "can skate, can figure skate."

Two guest skaters came from Kemptville, Lisa Dykes and Pascale Deryke, performed solo skating routines.

The event was a success and the club feels it will be repeating the play on ice next season.

Flyers tie Jr. B Hawks 8-8 in conditioner for final series

Chesterville set for rematch with 72s

WINCHESTER (Staff) - A mirror image of the 1985 Junior "C" final explains the 1986 final.

Last year about this time the Chesterville Junior "C" Flyers were just coming out of a semi-final series and were to meet the Embrun 72s.

The 72s were favored to win the best-of-seven series with the Flyers placing third at the end of the regular season.

Now the pressure is on the Flyers. Not only do the Flyers have a reputation as a champion to uphold but they also have set high standards for themselves.

Finishing first in the regular season Chesterville also proved it could be competitive at the Jr. "B" level Friday tying the Winchester Jr. "B" Hawks on their home ice 8-8.

"Last year it was the first time we had been in the finals and we had nothing to lose," said coach of the Flyers Mike Armstrong. "This year the pressure is on us. We have to prove that last year was no fluke. We'll be ready for them."

Armstrong has one main strategy for Embrun's team -- the line of Ivan Clement, Brad Spooner and Alain Lapointe. "Their line does half the scoring," said Armstrong. "We'll have to slow them down."

With the Hawks the Flyers "had nothing to lose," said Armstrong. "We tied them on their own rink. That's bad for them (Hawks). They had something to lose. It was good for the fans."

The Embrun 72s swept their best-of-seven semi-final series against the St. Isidore Eagles 8-6, 8-6, 5-4 and 4-3 to advance to the final against the Flyers.

"I thought it would have gone about six games," said Armstrong, "I was really surprised it only took four. If it would have gone further we could have played another match against the Hawks. Embrun is a good hockey club and they were rated number one all season."

Tying the Hawks may have come as a surprise to some but Armstrong said it shouldn't have. "They all came out of the same minor hockey system, most of them, so why should they be any different," said Armstrong. "I think the Hawks took (the game) for granted and a little lightly."

The Flyers were ahead in the match at the end of the first period and by the end of the second the Hawks captured the lead 6-5 then in the third it was a game of leap-frog ending the match in a 8-8 tie.

The Flyers grabbed an early game lead at 18:19 in the first as Jerrold Boulanger scored on a pass from Vince Cousineau.
