IN THE

FIRESTONE QUESTION and ANSWER CONTEST

There's no catch in this. All you have to do is to write answers to eight questions. There's nothing to sell or nothing else to do. Come into our place and get the folder of directions, etc. The contest closes on April 30th, so start right away. Come in today.

HERE ARE THE QUESTIONS

How is a Firestone Tire made?

What process makes Firestone Tires better than other tires?

What does this process do to make Firestone Tires so much better?

What kind of tires has your father on his car, if he owns one?

What makes Firestone Tires safe on all kinds of roads?

What other construction feature has Firestone Tires?

Why is this feature so important?

Why should a car owner buy Firestone Tires?

Why should a man's family insist on his having tires with good treads on his car?

Give the name and address of a man you know who has all Firestone Tires on his car.

LOCAL 100 CLUB RECEIVES OFFERS

HOWARD ROSS, K.C., MONTREAL, AND OTTAWA TEMPLE CHOIR OFFER SERVICES

The 100 Club have had several offers of different organizations and individuals who have offered their services to the local Club.

An interesting letter was received from Howard S. Ross, K.C., D.C.L., of Montreal, who has offered to address the Club at one of its open meetings on the subject "World Unrest and a Suggested Cure." Mr. Ross who is known from Halifax to Vancouver as a brilliant lawyer, orator and economist also offered to give a humorous address to the local High School, in the afternon on "Some Poets I know and their verse." It is expected that Mr. Ross will visit Winchester in the early part of June.

The Ottawa Temple Choir also offered their services but the 100 Club could not accept the splendid offer as the date would conflict with the concert and debate, which is to be put on shortly.

Women's Institute

With the President, Mrs. J. Singleton, in the chair the April meeting was held on Tuesday evening. Some Canadian and British statesmen named in answer to roll call were Sir Geo. Foster, Hon. Geo. P. Graham, Hon. MacKenzie King, Sir Ramsay MacDonald, Hon. Lloyd George, etc. The annual meeting will be held on the evening of May 16th. No summer speaker is available for Winchester this year. The nearest one will be at Morewood. Mrs. J. L. Dixon reported some good relief work being done.

Mrs. McInnes, President of Iroquois Institute spoke of the work they are doing, being much the same as ours.

Mrs. Rowat took charge of the programme and social part. A number of fine new recipes that sounded appetizing were given by Mrs. J. H. Ross. The paper on "Legislation" given by Mrs. Cass was both instructive and interesting. All legislation she said, has as its object the welfare of the people. Modern legislation has benefitted woman and given her the franchise. Her opinion is that more women ought to be among our legislators. She spoke of several prohibitory laws, such as those forbidding the use of profane, insulting and abusive language on our streets; the carrying of firearms, etc. Many other important laws were dealt with.

An enjoyable solo entitled "Little Brown Cottage" was contributed by Mrs. P. Durant. Mrs. Harry Baldwin and Mrs. Wm. Lannin were winners in a kitchen contest. Refreshments were served and a social time spent. The singing of God Save the King closed the meeting.

DYNAMITE EXPLODES IN HAND

Pembroke, April 16.—Explosion of a stick of dynamite as he was carrying it in his hand caused serious injuries to James Gaughey to-day. His right hand was so badly shattered it had to be amputated and he lost the sight of one and possibly both eyes. He was blasting some rock at his camp on the Quebec side of the river, ten miles north of here, when the accident happened.

Telling Their Dreams

IT WAS THE WORST DREAM OF ALL

Last week in a local barber shop three men were discussing over dreams and nightmares, and one suggested that he could tell the worst dream or nightmare, of the three, on a bet and if he "didn't" he pay the barber for a hair cut for the three. The other two at once took the bet. Then the man began to relate how he dreamed one night he was in a pasture field. In that field was a big bull that usually was considered tame, but this day it seemed restless and as he walked over the field the bull began to paw the ground and bellow. He was some distance from a fence, and no help was in sight. He didn't have a dog. Then the big bull with its sharp horns took after him, bellowing like mad. He started to run but he knew it was a hopeless race, and as he neared the fence the bull was just behind him. He could feel it's breath and he could almost feel the cruel horns in his body as he was to be tossed and gored to death. Then he woke up all in a perspiration, and didn't get over the shock all day.

Some dream, said the second man, but I had one I think even more terrible. I was going to Ormond early in the morning in my old car. The roads were wet and slippery, and when I got to the creek near Blacks, something went wrong, and the first thing I knew I was in the ditch, the car on its side. I tried to get out, but some thing held me. Only my head was out of water, and I called loudly for help, but none was in sight. I felt myself gradually being pulled down as the car settled, and I began to pray as I felt there was no hope. The water began to cover my face, and as it reached my mouth I gave an awful yell. It was then that my wife came in and shook me and said, "John, get up and build a fire, don't you know its raining like everything, and the house is chilly." I tell you boys that was a dream I hope never to have again, and I think it beats John's bull dream.

The third man was silent a while, and he said, "Well boys those were bad dreams, and bad scares, but last night I dreamt I had to go to Chesterville to see a sick brother, and when I thought of that Ridge Road I had to travel, my hair fairly stood on end.

Here, shouted the other two, don't go any further, you win.

Stewart - Kerr

Married on April 15th, 1933, in the City of New York, Mr. J. D. Stewart, late manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia Winchester, and Miss Leona M. Kerr, New York, who is supervisor in one of the large schools in that city. They are spending a quiet Easter honeymoon. Mr. Stewart will return to Winchester next week, but Mrs. Stewart will continue her duties in the New York school until the end of the term. Mrs. Stewart is well known in Winchester and visited here every summer for many years. She was born at Nation Valley, and has many friends and relatives in this section.

Vernon W. I. Entertains Local Branch

The village of Vernon was invaded by a band of the members of the Winchester Women's Institute on Wednesday afternoon, when they paid a friendly visit and furnished an afternoon's entertainment to the Vernon Branch Women's Institute. There were in all about thirty-five who went out, and they were most hospitably received and welcomed by the ladies of Vernon at their regular meeting. Mrs. L. Allan, 1st Vice-President of the Vernon Institute presided. The reception committee received the visitors at the door and gave them a most hearty welcome. The meeting was opened with the W. I. Ode. Miss Crearer presiding at the piano. The roll call was answered by each member telling what she would prefer as a labor saving device, and the answers were nearly all with a wish for some electrical appliance to save house drudgery. Mrs. Howard Porteous, the efficient secretary, read the minutes and the regular business being concluded, the meeting was handed over to the Winchester delegation, with Mrs. J. Singleton, the local president in the chair. Mrs. David Bruce gave a very interesting talk of a visit to the Caldwell Linen Mills at Iroquois, explaining the perfect system they obtained there, and told how linen was was made, showing several samples of the products of that industry. Mrs. W. J. Cass accompanied by Mrs. Fetterly sang a solo, after which there was a short playette entitled, "The Happy Day" in which Mrs. George Wilson, Mrs. Crowder, Mrs. O. Wallace, Mrs. Walter Barkley, Mrs. C. Rice. Mrs. E. Kellogg and Mrs. Lorn Kinkaid took parts, Miss Grace Irving was the director. The play was an amusing one and provided a very pleasing entertainment. Dainty refreshments were served by the Vernon ladies, and proved beyond a doubt that the men folk of the Vernon section are provided with house and home keepers that cannot be excelled. At the close a very harty vote of thanks was moved by Mrs. Cass for the splendid entertainment which proved a most enjoyable outing as well as fraternal visit for the ladies of the Winchester Women's Institute. The meeting closed with the National Anthem. All together it proved a most delightful afternoon, and if the ladies of Vernon could have heard all the nice compliments paid them they would have gone to their homes with tingling ears.

LANNIN'S GARAGE

Lannin's Garage has been practically turned inside out, and made into all that a modern garage should be. It is in charge of Harold Lannin, and he has practically everything, as the saying goes, from a needle to a hay stack, that is required in a modern garage to make old cars run like new, to correct defects, to brighten up, to do anything and everything required to make a car perfect. It has been remodeled, made more convenient, and service is now the watchword. See his advt. in this issue of the Press.

Harold will have with him a mechanic of over 16 years experience, Mr. Austin McFarlane, of Carleton Place, and he is not only an expert, but a thorough one. He is moving here with his family and will occupy a home at the east end of the town.

AGAIN IN HOSPITAL

The many friends of Mr. Eugene Lanoue, Melvin Settlement, will regret to learn that he had to be taken to the hospital a few days ago. Since he was kicked by a horse he has suffered a great deal, and the operation then performed did not wholly overcome the trouble. It was found that he had a kink in his bowel that was causing this latter trouble, and the trouble was removed. It is hoped he will soon be about again.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

A meeting was held at South Mountain United Parsonage on Tuesday afternoon for the purpose of organizing a Ministerial Association consisting of the ministers of Protestant Churches of Dundas and Grenville counties. There were present Revs. W. R. Johnston, South Mountain; D. R. Morrison, Hallville; H. M. Beach, Oxford Mills; H. G. Tuttle, Heckston; W. G. A. Wilson, Brinston; W. D. Turner and John MacKay, Winchester,

A tentative organization was set up with Revs. D. R. Morrison and H. G. Tuttle acting as President and Secretary respectively. The first meeting will be held at South Mountain on Monday afternoon, May 8, at 2 o'clock. It is expected that an address will be given on the Oxford Group Movement by Rev. W. J. Hurlow of the Kemptville Presbyterian Church. Notice of this meeting and an invitation to be present will be sent to every minister in the district.

A renewal of your subscription will be greatly appreciated.

NELSON DIXON HAS NARROW ESCAPE

TRUCK CRASHES INTO HIS WAGON CAUSING IT TO OVER-TURN IN DITCH

Mr. Nelson Dixon, who delivers the express and does some carting, when coming back from the C.P.R. station last night, his wagon was struck by a truck owned by the Fraser Dentile Co. Ltd., of Westboro, and driven by William Thomas. On the wagon with Nelson were James Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Robinson, James Jacobs and Stanley Raistrick. The truck struck the hind wheel of the wagon capitulating it into the side ditch, and throwing those on it in all directions. Nelson escaped wth a severely bruised head, young Jacobs was bruised on the head, and Robinson bruised and cut. Young Raistrick, who is about 19 years of age was the most severely hurt, and Dr. McLaughlin, who is attending him, is very anxious about his condition. He had a bad scalp wound, and seems to be hurt internally, and it will be some days before his condition will be fully known. He is suffering much pain. The wagon was badly shattered, and the horse somewhat bruised and cut, and will be unable to do any work for some time. There was a big truck going south and it had just passed Nelson's wagon, when the truck following him, in trying to squeeze a way past, struck the hind wheel. The driver says he tried to bring the truck to a stop, but that the brakes were defective, and he could not, and to avoid hitting the wagon in the rear, tried to make the pass, but was unsuccessful. The accident is being investigated by the local and provincial constables. It was a narrow escape for Nelson and his horse.

Girls' Conference Will Be Held Here

On Saturday and Sunday, April 29 and 30, Winchester will be the meeting place of girls from Dundas and Grenville counties where a C. G. I. T. Conference will be held under the direction of Miss Evelyn Craw, B.A., Toronto, Girls' Work Secretary of the United Church of Canada. Miss Craw will be assisted by a leader representing one of the other churches, as C.G. I.T. work in Canada is interdenominational, and girls from all Protestant churches will participate. Plans for entertaining the conference are now being made and fuller reports of places of meeting, etc., will be given next week. It is expected that all local girls will accept this opportunity of receiving leadership from Secretaries who are superbly trained to direct girls in their intellectual, physical, social and religious living.

NEWSPAPER MISTAKES

The city papers take great delight in pointing out some of the mistakes made by weekly newspapers, but we doubt if any weekly ever made one quite so funny as that made by an Ottawa paper last week, in a short item on the Marriage Code proposed. The Ottawa paper said that it was proposed by a group of ministers that pastors not only pre-announce weddings but that they give pre-martial marriage classes or clubs for the young married persons. Just why the clergy should advise and instruct young married couples in such warlike behaviour is hard to understand. Probably the writer meant "pre-marital." That is one on the city papers.

CAR IN DITCH

Dr. McLaughlin finds the country side roads in pretty bad shape for car travel these days. On Sunday he was called to a home beyond Ormond, and in backing out of the driveway his car skidded on the soft road embankment and before he knew it, it was nearly upside down in the ditch. Fortunately the doctor was not thrown out or pinned under the car, but he had a narrow escape. The farmer got his horses and pulled the car to the road, none the worse for the mishap.

House and Contents Damaged By Fire

Fire of unknown origin broke out at 4 o'clock on Friday morning last, and almost completely destroyed the frame residence on Ottawa street, owned by Mr. George Barkley, now residing in Ottawa.

The house had been vacated by its owner a few weeks ago and the furnishings were still in it, pending their removal to Ottawa at an early date. These, too, were badly damaged by fire, smoke and water. No one was in the house at the time and no fire had been placed in the stoves for a couple of weeks, so public opinion is that the blaze started from defective electric wiring.

The fire was first noticed by Mr. George Robinson, night watchman at the M. F. Beach Co. factory, and he turned in the alarm. Firemen were soon on hand and although the blaze had got a good start, the fire was confined to the place of origin.

The blaze started between the ceiling of the lower storey and the floor of the upper storey, and before it was finally extinguished, had done considerable damage to the interior of the house. Mr. Barkley's loss will run close on to $1000, and is partly covered by insurance.

OBITUARY

A highly respected resident of this vicinity, Margaret Ellen Barkley, widow of the late Mr. Manla Hess passed to the Great Beyond on Tuesday afternoon at five o'clock, April 11th, at her late residence. She had been confined to her bed for several weeks the result of a broken hip, although the end came quickly and unexpectedly. The late Mrs. Hess was the oldest pioneer of this district, being in her seventy-eighth year. She was a life long resident of this district being the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Eligah Barkley. The deceased watched this community turn from a vast wilderness to the advanced state of civilization which is enjoyed by the generation of today. The deceased was of a particularly quiet, mild unassuming disposition. She was a model wife and a most exceptionally devoted mother, in fact it almost reached the point of idolatry. She was a friend to all, more particularly the young who always enjoyed visiting her home and partaking lavishly of her kind hospitality. The school children were always wending their way to this home which speaks for itself.

The late Mrs. Hess leaves to mourn the loss of a godly mother, one daughter, (Violet) Mrs. W. Froats at home; one son, Clifford, of Iroquois, and two grandchildren. Her husband predeceased her seven years ago. The funeral obsequies were held Friday afternoon, April 14th, at half past one at her late residence. The Rev. Mr. Newman, of Chesterville, officiated. He spoke comforting words to the family and a warning to friends from James 4th 14 (What is your life). The hymns favorites of the deceased "Abide With Me," "Jesus Lover of My Soul" and "Face to Face" were sung.

The pall-bearers were schoolmates of the family Messrs. Harold Baker, Jas. Munro, Kenneth Merkley and Stanley Froats.

The floral tribute was by request of the deceased only a pillow from the son and daughter. A large concourse of friends testifying to the esteem held for the departed followed the remains to its last resting place, Maple Ridge cemetery.

LEGISLATURE PROROGUED

The Ontario Legislature prorogued on Monday last. The Lieutenant-Governor in his brief address said that the farming as well as every other business in Ontario was on the upgrade and had a brighter outlook.

TRAFFIC OFFENDERS

Magistrate McCormick had been kept fairly busy during the past week dealing with cases of offenders against the traffic laws. The authorities are determined that law shall be observed, not only as to licenses and permits, but in other traffic regulations, and drivers will have to be careful if they don't want to pay a fine.

Undenominational Gospel Meeting

"WORLD CONDITIONS AND BIBLE PROPHECIES—DEALING WITH THE SECOND COMING OF THE LORD JESUS CHRIST"

TOWN HALL, WINCHESTER

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, April 23

Commencing at 2.30 o'clock.

At this meeting and under the above heading, T. J. Ellis, of Ottawa, will speak concerning the following things prominently mentioned in the Bible and relative to the Lord's return:

1—The Four Great World Empires.
2—Jerusalem and the Jews.
3—The glorious rapture, when Jesus will come in the clouds.
4—The Beast, his number and the image of the beast.
5—The great tribulation and the three Angel Preachers.
6—The battle Armageddon, Satan bound a thousand years and the time of the end, when the earth shall be destroyed by fire.

Yes dear reader the Lord Jesus Christ is coming back to earth again. "Behold He cometh in clouds and every eye shall see Him, and they also which pierced Him and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of Him. Rev. 1 and 7. Almighty God's sign posts are up all over the world today, you can see them everywhere.

While no man knoweth the day nor the hour not even the Angels in Heaven, yet God tells us in 1st Thess 5:1 to 6, that we need not remain in darkness regarding the approaching time, we are chidren of the light, let us not sleep but be sober and watch for His coming. Remember the words of the Angelic visitor when He said to Daniel, at the end time the wicked shall do wickedly and none of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand,

In the fullness of time Jesus came into the world, so will He return a second time. A comparative few were looking for Him then, only believers like dear old Simeon and aged Anna. Before every great event in history, God has revealed His plan to a chosen few even telling the time. Abraham knew when Sodom and Tomorrah were to be destroyed. Noah knew that in seven days the flood would sweep over the world.

The speaker will divulge the meaning of the above truths as God has revealed them to Him through the medium of two great mystery books of the Bible, the book of Daniel and the book of Revelation. He is not seeking to force this message upon any, only striving to work out the will of God in His own life and to win others to Him.

MY KINGDOM

For this is my kingdom: My peace
with my neighbor,
The clasp of a hand or the warmth
of a smile,
The sweetness of toil as the fruit of my labor,
The glad joy of living and working
the while;
The birds and the flowers and the blue
skies above me
The green of the meadows, the gold
of the grain;
A song in the evening, a dear heart
to love me
And just enough pleasure to balance the pain.

POSSESSIONS

I'd rather have one honest friend,
To-day, to-morrow to the end,
Than all the crowd that may attend
The concourse of a king.
I'd rather have one little cot
That I can come to, rich or not,
Than all the castles he has got,
Or wealth that rank could bring.

I'd rather have content of mind
Than all the gold than I could find,
And have the comfort of the kind,
That counsel of the sad.
And since I have a coin or two,
A house like that, a friend like you,
I'm rather glad that all life thru
I had just what I had.

WHAT CAN I DO

What can I do
To ease the load
Of some lone pilgrim
Along life's road?

What can I do
When clouds obscure,
To help a friend
Still to endure?

What can I do
To quench a tear,
Or drive away
The ghost of fear?

What can I do
To serve and give,
To show an outcast
How to live?

Perchance these words
May cause you, too,
To think and plan
What you can do.

WHEN A MAN'S A MAN

"I can't" is a foolish expression—
'Tis really a coward's confession,
Somehow or other it always comes back
Stealing the good things we already lack,
Bringing us nothing but trouble and care,
Leaving us hopelessly sunk in despair,
But there's never a day
When the world can say
That a man's not a man if he DARE!

"I will" is a wonderful blessing,
A heart full of courage expressing,
Somehow or other it brings us success,
Fills us with joy that we cannot re-
press,
Gladdens our friends, makes their burdens more light,
Places a star in our crown ev'ry night.
For there's never a day
When the world can say
That a man's not a man if he'll FIGHT!

—By Brinson Smith.

WATCH YOUR WORDS

Keep a watch on your words, my brother,
For words are wonderful things;
They are sweet like the bee's fresh honey;
Like the bees, they have terrible
stings;
They can bless, like the warm glad sunshine,
And brighten a lonely life;
They can cut in the strife of anger,
Like an open two-edged knife,
Let them pass through your lips unchallenged,
If their errand is true and kind—
If they come to support the weary,
To comfort and help the blind:
If a bitter, revengeful spirit
Prompt the words, let them pass unsaid;
They may flash through a brain like lightning,
Or fall on a hearth like lead.
Keep them back, if they're cold and cruel,
Under bar and lock and seal;
The wounds that they make, my brother,
Are always slow to heal.
May peace guard your life, and ever,
From the time of your early youth,
May the words that you daily utter
Be the words of beautiful truth.

THE SONG OF THE SHUT-IN

(Gertrude Bowen-Webster in the Ottawa Farm Journal.)

Must I grow glum and petulant,
And sit me here and sigh,
Since, prisoned in this place of pain,
I watch the world go by?
Or, with a gay and gallant heart
Fare forth to the Unknown,
Content to travel day by day
In bodies not mine own?

Oh, I must find a questing soul
Sufficient for my needs,
And don the armor of delight
In other people's deeds.
They are my friends, these men and maids
Who pass along the street,
Their busy hands my badge of toil
And mine their dancing feet.
I work in factory and field
With children go to school,
I soar with birds that flit and fly
About each lily pool.
And though I climb the shining stairs
To starlight's vast abode,
Life's sweetest dreams keep warm within
This cottage by the road.

So, I will take the harp of Hope
And learn to laugh and sing,
And make a merry minstrelsy
With its remaining string.
That burdened folks, who pass my door,
And, pitying, pause to see,
May find fresh courage 'mid despair
And mount on wings with me.

THE GAME OF LIFE

It's a wonderful game if you play it right,
If you use every one of your teammates white,
If you never cheat and are fair and square
And learn the lesson of bear and forbear;

If you meet with a failure now and then,
To never give up but to try it again
And through it all to keep smiling and sweet,
Though looking straight in the face
of defeat,

If you stick to the rules of the game,
my friend,
You're sure of a victory in the end.
While some are unfair, be it said to their shame,
If you play it right, it's a wonderful game.

—By Ida M. Thomas.

THE FRIEND THAT JUST STANDS BY

When trouble comes your soul to try
You love the friend who just "stands
by."
Perhaps there's nothing he can do—
The thing is strictly up to you;
For there are troubles all your own;
Times when love cannot smooth the road
Nor friendship lift the heavy load.
But just to know you have a friend
Who will "stand by" until the end,
Whose sympathy through all endures,
Whose warm handclasp is always yours—
It helps, some way, to pull you through
Although there's nothing he can do.
And so with fervent heart you cry,
"God bless the friend who just stands
by."

EASTER SERVICES

A large congregation was present in the United Church Sunday morning to partake of the communion service and to hear the inspiring message of Rev. J. McKay when he spoke from Matt. 28:9 — the Easter greeting of Jesus to humanity because He had conquered death. This is a greeting to us in all the trials of life. God has provided for the forgiveness of our sins. Christ is by our side and with that consciousness we do not feel defeated. We are to attempt great things for God and to expect great things from God. Burdens are grievous but God's word is: "Be of good cheer, I am the burden bearer." The spirit of Easter is joy and faith. We should exemplify the spirit of love and be more considerate of one another.

The pastor conducted an impressive reception service for nine members who joined the church on profession of faith and several others joining by letter.

Easter lilies, ferns, and other plants in bloom adorned the front of the church. The beautiful rose bush in front of the pulpit was placed there by Mrs. J. Dixon in loving memory of Mr. Dixon.

The evening subject was the walk to Emaus and the texts were verses 17, 27 and 29 of Luke 24. The preacher showed that it is possible for us also to misunderstand Christ, but we should be sufficiently humble to sit at his feet and listen to what the word of the Spirit has to say to us. When we ask Christ to come into our lives His spirit will make us strong and courageous to meet all our tasks. We need Christ. Let us not dare to try to live without Him. He needs us as we need Him. Without His presence we cannot go forth to live the right kind of life. The choir under the leadership of the organist, Miss Helen Smith rendered special Easter anthems that were much appreciated.

Next Sunday evening a sacred pageant will be given by the Mission Circle at their Easter Thank-offering meeting.

FINCH LADY HONORED

A very pleasant evening was spent at Mrs. Hiram Campbell's home at Finch on Tuesday evening, April 11, when the ladies of Chalmers' United Church arranged a party in honour of Mrs. Nellie Wereley and presented her with a sterling silver sandwich plate. Other guests present were Miss Ina Wereley ,of Cornwall; Mrs. John Farrell, Chesterville; Mrs. McIntyre, Mrs. Chas. Hollister, Mrs. George Helmer, Newington; Mrs. T Henry, Mrs. Rombough.

IROQUOIS COUPLE BADLY INJURED

When their automobile struck a Hydro pole and overturned in a ditch on the highway about a mile east of Iroquois, Mr. and Mrs. Milburn Hyslop, two popular young Iroquois residents, were both seriously injured Sunday and are patients at a Brockville hospital. Mr. Hyslop's arm was broken, while Mrs. Hyslop suffered a deep gash near the jugular vein and wounds to her ear and head. When the car overturned in the ditch, pinning its occupants underneath, E. Hodge, living nearby, rushed to the scene and extricated the victims. Dr. Marcellus, Iroquois, and Dr. E. F. McIntosh, Morrisburg, gave first aid at the scene and had the injured removed to hospital. The automobile was badly damaged.

Mr. and Mrs. Hyslop were on their way to visit Mrs. Hyslop's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Swerdfeger, near Morrisburg, when the accident occurred.

WHAT TYPE OF CITIZEN ARE YOU?

An ideal citizen is the one who sees clearly and ever something good in the town and never loses the opportunity to spread that good news abroad that others might derive the benefits therefrom, whose unselfishness makes him want others to share opportunities, health and pleasure which his home town offers.

George Bernard Shaw having publicly expressed the opinion when visiting monkeys gathered around luncheon China that Rotarians are "over-stuffed tables," the president of the Shanghai Rotarians made a fitting response when he declared that the reason why Shaw was invited to its luncheon was that there was "always room for one more monkey."

ONLY HALF THE TRUTH

Many of you think of religion as comfort for the sad, strength for the feeble, a light for those entering the Valley of the Shadow. All this is true, of course, but it is less than half of fact; otherwise religion would be precious only to the sick, the sorrowful, and those whose early life is almost at an end.

Religion is comfort for the sad, but it is also joy to those who are light of heart. It is strength for the weak, but it doubles the strength of the hearty. It is a light for those at the end of life, but for those at life's beginning it is a beckoning hand. Religion is a high adventure. It is a challenge to vigor and enthusiasm. It is as necessary to youth as to age, to ambition as to resignation. Do not think of religion as something important to you by and by. It is important now.

BLAZE AT IROQUOIS

Between nine and ten o'clock Wednesday morning of last week the siren called out the Iroquois fire brigade to the home of Gerald Welsh, College Street east. With a wood fire in the furnace, the pipes became over heated, and, after throwing water on them, the alarm was sounded. More damage was done to the house and contents from water than from the blaze. However it was easily extinguished. Welsh is an employee of the Merkley Transport company and was a tenant of Mrs. William Merkley of Matilda township.

Will Occupy Historic Row At Washington

PREMIER MacDONALD AND BENNETT TO GET LINCOLN INSPIRATION

Washington, April 17.—Two British Empire prime ministers will sleep in the blue canopied bed of the old Lincoln study next week.

The room which Mrs. Roosevelt chose for both Rt. Hon. Ramsay MacDonald, of England, and Rt. Hon. Richard B. Bennett, of Canada, was the large and historic one which has a plate over its fireplace saying that the emancipation proclamation was signed there.

Mr. MacDonald will occupy the room from the time of his arrival here, until he leaves on Wednesday of next week, whereupon Mr. Bennett will move in.

The Monroe room adjoining will be used by both as a sitting room, convenient to the President's own oval study.

Annual Gathering Of War Veterans

WILL MEET AT ANNUAL DINNER AT OTTAWA ON SATURDAY

War veterans of the First Canadian Contingent residing in this district will be joining up with their comrades in Ottawa and other adjoining sections of the Ottawa and St. Lawrence Valleys in a re-union dinner on the night of April 22 to commemorate the Second Battle of Ypres. It was at Ypres that Canadian troops first went into action and created history by preventing the enemy from breaking thru and reaching the channel ports. It was also at Ypres that poison gas was first used. Thousands of Canadians and the adjoining French troops suffered agonizing death from the poison gas for which they were totally unprepared and many of the survivors of the engagement are still today suffering from its effect.

Miss Pauline Docksteader, of Ottawa, spent the Easter holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Docksteader.

It was at the Second Battle of Ypres that Canada first found herself, or, as an article appearing in the Canadian Legionary this month says, "May it not be said that just as Canada emerged from the war a nation, with all the responsibilities, all the dominant pride, and all the obligation of nationhood, the foundations of that nationhood were laid at Ypres?" Saturday, April 22, is the 18th anniversary of the Second Battle of Ypres and throughout Canada, wherever veterans of the First Canadian Contingent foregather, re-unions will be held to commemorate the day and to honour the memory of those who had fallen. For the past 14 years, or ever since the return of the troops to Canada, the veterans of the Second Battle of Ypres residing in the Ottawa district have attended a re-union dinner at Ottawa.

This year's re-union will be held, as in the past few years, at the Chaudiere Golf Club at 8 p. m. Buses will be available leaving the Ottawa Post Office at 7.15 and 7.30 p. m. All wearers of the red chevron, that is members of the First Canadian Expeditionary Force, and members of the Imperial and Allied forces who saw service in 1914, are entitled to attend.

SAFE PLACES IN THUNDER STORMS

Now that the beginning of the lightning season is near, the question of safe and unsafe places during thunder-storms is in order.

The following hints on the subject were supplied by Dr. Humphreys, of the U. S. Weather Bureau, for the information of Boy Scouts, but they are just as valuable to other people. We quote them from Charles Fitzhugh Talman's Science Service feature, Why the Weather? (Washington):

"During a thunder-storm it is dangerous to be close beside a wire fence. In this position one may be killed or, at least, hurt if the fence is struck anywhere along its entire course.

"It is also dangerous to take shelter during a thunder-storm under a tall tree, or indeed, a tree of any kind if it is out in the open, and all the more so if it is at or near the top of a hill.

"It is advisable to keep away from the top of a hill during a thunder-storm, even if some distance from trees.

"If Scouts on a hike should happen to be inside a cave during a thunder-storm they would be absolutely safe from the lightning. Another perfectly safe place to be is inside a frame structure of steel, or an all-meta building of any kind. One is tolerably safe also at or near the bottom of a deep narrow ravine or canyon. Properly installed lightning-rods make a house fairly safe during electrical storms and, as a rule, one is safer in a house even if it has no rods at all, than one is likely to be outdoors. It is best indoors to keep away from stoves, fireplaces, and walls."

DO YOUR HAYING EARLY

To begin haying the day after the Fourth of July is an old New England custom which New Hampshire farmers abandoned in 1930. They are now getting into the hay fields approximately ten days earlier as a result of a campaign for earlier cutting by the New Hampshire Extension Service. Hay cut June 20 is twice as valuable for the dairy cow as that harvested July 20. It is estimated that this earlier harvest increases the value of New Hampshire home-grown cow feed by $400,000.

"AS A MAN THINKETH"

Doctors know that when a patient makes up his mind that he is going to die it is very hard to save him. Despair weakens. On the other hand the indomitable determination to get well, combined with a sunny spirit often cheats death of its prey. If you know that you are going to fail, you will fail; and you deserve it. If you wish to succeed in life, resist the tendency to think you are inferior. Believe that you can do what you undertake; then put every ounce of your energy into the task.—Rev. R. P. Anderson.

DIPTHERIA DISAPPEARING

That diptheria is rapidly vanishing as a cause of mortality is indicated in the further decline of the death rate, both in Canada and the United States. The more recent accomplishment is reported to the effect that a most encouraging record has been made in the province of Quebec, where the deathrate for diphtheria was among the highest on record. Indeed, in 1931, the diphtheria mortality rate was 22.2 per 100,000, and in 1932, it was 17.4 per 100,000. But, for the first three months of this year, the death rate in that province dropped to the amazing figure of 5.6 per 100,000. With the latter figures, the diphtheria deathrate in Canada and the United States, for the first quarter of the present year, is brought down to 2.8 per 100,000, which is a remarkable achivement.

THE ONLY WAY TO HELP YOUR TOWN

On political issues the world cannot agree; in matters of religion there are eternal differences of opinion; all people have ideas; other people lack sound reasoning; but on one point we all agree; everyone wants to see his home town prosper and grow.

The way to a growing prosperous community is through good stores. And the way to stores is through trading at home. Buy away from home and watch the town die.

Some experts contend that good trading facilities build population and real estate values; others say that good stores follow population, but again, all agree that local prosperity can never come until adequate trading facilities are established. No town was ever built by money going to the cities.

A large part of the dollar spent in the home community remains there. It travels from home to grocer, to the butcher, to the hardware merchant, and so on around the wheel of home trade. Spent out of town the dollar has gone forever.

Every community likes to take pride in its stores. And yet those stores which are expected to keep up to the community standard, do not receive all of the shopping dollars. Stores are what the customers, not the proprietors, make them.—Exchange.

WILL PRINT VOTERS' LISTS

The Ontario government in future will assume the costs of preparing and printing voters' lists, Hon. W. H. Price, Attorney-General for Ontario, announced in the legislature Thursday. The cost has hitherto been borne by the municipalities. Action followed request of the municipalities to be relieved of this burden.

WINCHESTER SANITARY BOARD

LET US HOPE SO

Owing to subnormal precipitation during recent years, it an anticipated by officials of the Entomological Branch of the Department of Agriculture, that mosquitoes and other biting flies which develop in water will again be scarce in the Ottawa district this year.

Resists Boiling Oil In Extraordinary Test

Spectacular Test Ushers in New Development in Household Product

A crucible of Boiling Oil heated to the terrific temperature of 407 degrees (twice the heat of boiling water) was recently poured over a table finished with a new household Enamel to demonstrate its heat resisting qualities.

This new Porcelain Enamel, to be known as NEPTO-LAC, is made in Canada by The Lowe Brothers Co., Ltd., manufacturers of "High Standard" Paints and Varnishes, and is widely advertised throughout Canada.

NEPTO-LAC Quick Drying Enamel can be used Outside as well as Inside; can be used on Cooking Utensils, Floors, Walls or Furniture, and is made in 20 of the most modern and colorful shades. Another interesting feature of this Super Enamel is that it is sold at prices no greater than ordinary enamels.

NEPTO-LAC pioneers the Heat and Moisture Resisting features in decorative quick drying enamels, and combines beauty with extraordinary service.

Color Charts of this product include many practical decorative color schemes, which may be had through the exclusive l[illegible] agent—

A. SWEET & CO.

These 10 Important Features Characterize Nepto-Lac— A Super Enamel

1. Nepto-Lac can be used inside or outside.
2. Nepto-Lac leaves no brush marks.
3. Nepto-Lac is heat-proof — water-proof—tough—and durable.
4. Nepto-Lac dries dust free in two to three hours—and hard in from four to six hours.
5. Nepto-Lac requires no special thinners.
6. Nepto-Lac requires no undercoating.
7. Nepto-Lac has no strong or objectionable odor.
8. Nepto-Lac is easy to apply and it can be brushed back and forth as frequently as necessary.
9. Nepto-Lac hides unusually well in one coat.
10. Nepto-Lac is very economical.

SPECIAL OFFER TO PRESS SUBSCRIBERS

Yes we know that money is scarce—none know it better—but we each have a little to "keep-a-going," and considering the "Depression, Unemployment, Hard Times, Grave Economic Conditions" and a dozen more shadowy nightmares that seem to be haunting everybody, we want to DO OUR PART and at the same time want our subscribers to play the game and do their part, and see if we can't HELP EACH OTHER in this financial struggle. Now here is the scheme that will last till the end of this month.

"Anyone owing one or more years subscription can settle the same at the rate of $1.50 per year LESS 25% DISCOUNT if paid before April 30th. The only condition is that you pay your renewal for 1933 at the same rate."

CAN YOU ASK FOR A FAIRER DEAL?

The Press isn't printed weekly except at considerable cost. We have to pay CASH for Wages, Rent. Electric Power, Paper, Ink, etc. The amount YOU owe is small, but four or five hundred like YOU mean a considerable amount to the Press.

IT IS A GENEROUS OFFER and intended to meet our friends and subscribers in that friendly co-operative spirit that the present times require. WILL YOU PLAY THE MAN AND COME IN AND SETTLE UP.

Remember that this offer holds good only till the end of the present month. After that date all subscriptions over two years in arrears will be struck off our list, and the account placed in court at the regular rate of $2.00 per annum, and without further notice. Look at the label on your Press and you can figure out how you stand, then act accordingly.

THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

Redistribution of provincial ridings, whereby the size of the Ontario Legislature is reduced to 90 instead of 112 members was approved, although protests were registered by those members whose ridings are lost in the changes. Toronto, formerly having fifteen seats is reduced to thirteen; while twenty-nine ridings are unchanged, the basis of representation as directed by Premier Henry to the special committee which prepared the bill, was 25,000 for rural and 50,000 for urban ridings.

Premier Henry stated before the House that Hon. J. R. Cooke, chairman of the Hydro-Commission Power Commission, had handed him his resignation ,asking to be relieved of his duties, but that the resignation had not been, nor was likely, to be accepted. Premier Henry intimated that he felt the majority of the people of the province desired that Hon. Mr. Cooke should remain in his present post.

In tabling the annual report of the Commission, Hon. Mr. Cooke stated that the demand for power in the fiscal year 1932 was on the whole substantially equal that of 1931, some systems showing slight increases, others small decreases. Average load of all systems showed a decrease of only 1.2 per cent. compared with the decline of 15 per cent. during 1931. It was pointed out that in comparing the load during the past year and that during the year preceding the start of the depression, the total load on all the commission's systems, shows an increase of about 10 per cent. Number of municipalities served was 747, including 27 cities, 95 towns, 267 villages and police villages and 345 townships.

Total capital investment in all power properties, railways, office and service buildings, construction plant and inventories, etc., administered by the commission amounted to $273,228,754 on October 31, 1932. This total includes $5,400,000 bonds of the commission given in exchange for $6,000,000 par value of Ontario Power Service Corporation bonds.

By an amendment to the Election Act, the period for election campaigns is reduced from 41 to 32 days, Attorney-General Price stating that the Government, after giving it careful consideration had arrived at the conclusion that the shortening of the election period would not only be beneficial to the province but of advantage to those who had to carry on the campaign.

Hon. Mr. Cooke introduced an amendment to the Power Commission Act providing for amalgamation of existing and proposed power developments in Northern Ontario into one unit under the Hydro Commission. Such undertakings are to be proceeded with as a provincial venture on the terms of agreements between the Hydro and the province, but municipalities may obtain a supply of power if desired.

A means to curb publication of certain obscene and immoral matter is found in an amendment to the Judicature Act, sponsored by Attorney-General Price, which provides that proceedings against such publications may be taken by means of an injunction or mandamus.

Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Minister of Highways, introduced an amendment to the Highway Traffic Act, under which transfer from the Department of Highways to the Ontario Municipal Board is made so that the Board may regulate applications for commercial vehicles and truck licenses. Under this procedure, Hon. Mr. Macaulay stated there would be no suggestion of partisan discrimination in granting such licenses.

Hon. George H. Challies, provincial secretary and Minister of Game and Fisheries, seeks to establish a provincial wide gun license, with the fee cut from $2 to $1, in an amendment to the Game and Fisheries Act, while another provision is that trapping licenses shall not be issued to non-British subjects and that bear can only be taken under authority of a license except in the case of farmers, trapping and hunting on their own lands.

Legal bills committee killed two measures, one seeking to prevent publication of discriminatory matter as applying to certain races, or creeds, and an amendment to the Medical Act, which sought to have osteopaths classed with the same status as medical doctors.

The House ratified the bills validating the purchase of the Abitibi Canyon power development project, the division in second reading being recorded at 74-18, and giving the government a majority of 56. A strong and vigorous defence of the purchase was made on behalf of the Government by Hon. Charles McCrea, Minister of Mines, who defended all phases of the purchase, as well as the situation in connection with the bondholders of the Ontario Power Service Corpororation.

CITY FRESH CHAP

A young gentlman from the city was passing down a country road when he came across an old darkie burning off his garden. Determined to have som fun at his expense, he called out:

"Hey Sambo, look out, that place of yours will soon be as black as you are." And he laughed inordinately at his joke. Then the old darkie replied:

"Maybe, sah. But jus' wait till the rain comes and it will all be jes' 'bout as green as you are."

Then the young gentleman walked on.

That same night the same young gentleman came to grief again. The boarders were at supper, himself being well down the table. At an opportune lull he penetrated a further witicism calling on the hostess to pass the milk "Pass along the cow, Mrs. Smith," quoth he.

"Mary," called Mrs. Smith to the waitress, "take the cow down to where the calf is bleating."

And the next day the young gentleman returned to town.

A NEWS MAKER

LET us look at Jesus twenty-four hours, schedule; see how it bristles with front-page news.

The activity begins at sunrise. Jesus was an early riser. We discover a little boat pushing out from the shore of the lake. It deposits Jesus and his disciples in Capernaum, his favorite city. He proceeds at once to the house of a friend. The report spreads instantly that he is in town, and a crowd collects outside the gate—a poor palsied chap among them. The day's work is at hand.

Bruce Barton

Having slept soundly in the open air he meets the call with quiet nerves. He stoops down toward the sufferer.

"Be of good cheer, my son," he cries, "your sins are all forgiven."

Sins forgiven! Indeed! The respectable members of the audience draw back with sharp disapproval. "What a blasphemous phrase," they exclaim. "Who authorized him to exercise the functions of God! What right has he to decide whose sins shall be forgiven?"

Jesus sensed rather than heard their protest. He never courted controversy but he never dodged it; much of his fame arose out of the reports of his verbal victories.

"What's the objection?" he exclaimed, turning on the dissenters. "Why do you stand there and criticize! Is it easier to say, 'Thy sins be forgiven thee,' or to say, 'Arise, take up they bed and walk?' The results are the same." Bending over the sick man again he said: "Arise, take up thy bed and go unto thine house."

The man stirred and was amazed to find that his muscles responded. Slowly, doubtingly he struggled to his feet, and with one great shout of happiness started off, surrounded by his jubilant friends. The critics had received their answer, but they refused to give up. For an hour or more they persisted in angry argument, until the meeting ended in a tumult.

Can you imagine that day's issue of the Capernaum News, if there had been one?

PALSIED MAN HEALED . . . JESUS OF NAZARETH CLAIMS RIGHT TO FORGIVE SINS . . . PROMINENT SCRIBES OBJECT . . . "BLASPHEMOUS," SAYS LEADING CITIZEN . . . "BUT ANYWAY I CAN WALK," HEALED MAN RETORTS.

Front page story number one.

One of those who had been attracted by the excitement was a tax-collector named Matthew. Being a man of business he could not stay through the argument, but slipped away early and was hard at work when Jesus passed by a few minutes before noon.

That was all. No argument; no offer of inducements; no promise of rewards. Merely "I want you;" and the prosperous tax-collector closed his office, made a feast for the brilliant young teacher and forthwith announced himself a disciple.

Interesting Story Of California Earthquake

Long Beach, Cali.,
March 22nd, 1933.

To Friends and Enquirers:

The earthquake that we have just experienced was interesting and instructive. As earthquakes go, it appears to have been a fairly good sample. The unfortunate part being the very great loss of life and property, the former estimated at fifty-two fatalities in our city and the latter at many millions of dollars. Most of the fatalities were caused by falling material. Personally, neither we nor any of our friends were injured although there were several narrow escapes.

Sidewalks and streets in many places were impassable due to the quantity of debris. Fortunately, our city officials were punctual in shutting off the gas, thereby very much reducing the fire hazard which usually accompanies such displays of the sleeping powers of nature.

The first indication of the quake was a violent jarring and shaking of the ground surface and buildings, and almost at the same instant, the very alarmingly noise made by the falling material and moving articles in the buildings, which continued for some minutes. Then, everything was dead quiet, although people were still very much excited and frightened. People on their feet had difficulty in keeping their equilibrium. A great number of people speak of an earth noise or rumbling.

Most of the Long Beach residents, being too nervous to occupy their homes, slept on lawns, in vacant lots and in the city parks. The United States fleet, anchored just a few miles off shore, provided three thousand sailors and marines for patrol duty throughout the city. This action brought a feeling of reassurance and protection to the homeless populace.

We were, and still are, domiciled in the Villa Riviera, our staunch own-your-own apartment buildings. This building is nineteen stories high and has a complete elevation of three hundred and twenty-five feet. This frame is of steel, built on the rocker plan, suggested by the federal government, as being the most pronounced earthquake proof structure. This type of construction allows several inches for oscillation. The frame of this building was not injured in the least. The only damage sustained was the peeling off of the plaster putty coat in some places, mostly on the lower levels. The swaying of the building was very terrifying, as results of unseen causes always are, and most of the five hundred inmates rushed out, and owing to the splendid service rendered by our manager and staff, who forgot their own danger all were removed without injury of any kind. But some believing the building the safest place, remained throughout the disturbance.

The cause of this catastrophy which is probably the cause of all earthquakes, is one that has been very much discussed by scientists of all time. Scientific research, however, has failed so far, to demonstrate that there has been any evidence adduced by which these seismatic disturbances may be foretold, but the causes that produce the awakening of these sleeping powers of our old earth, seem to be fairly well known. The central point of this late trembler was undoubtedly in stratas very deep under the ocean-bed, and very far from the land. We gather this from the fact that the surface effect, of this last display, was very extensive, which would indicate its deep source, as distinguished from the action that occurred in Santa Barbara some years ago, which was more violent on the surface, but in a more restricted area.

Our earth is getting old and rheumatic (crystalline) and under the fixed law of evolution, is shrinking in accordance with the law of gravity. All earthquakes, of this class, are caused by shrinkage. The first shock being the giving-away of a long stabilized static condition, of the crystallnie stratas, is of necessity, the greatest; and, the stresses that bore the load to the breaking point, being relieved, the subsequent shocks are lighter, and it is supposed, represent the displacement of smaller detached bodies.

The great abysmal deep of the Pacific Ocean has been studied lately by our government, and by the British government many years ago, which evidences that this great oceanic depression is very extensive and covered by a depth of appoximately thirty to thirty-eight thousand feet of water (over seven miles.) Under what law of evolution this gigantic valley has been formed, is not clearly understood, but it has had the effect of causing the subsidence of the crystalline rocks to an unaccountable degree and depth. This has caused the stratas to respond to this depression, causing a slope, or decline, from the coast mountain ranges of North America to the abysmal depths referred to. This decline might be estimated at a probable sixteen degree slope. This great abyss, whatever may have been its cause, can be held responsible for the fact that the west coast of North America is frequently visited by forces such as the one we have just experienced.

The whole trouble comes from the breaking-down of the crystalline strata at its lowest point, or at some distance towards the surface, where it is also settling. This depression, it is claimed is caused by the super-abundant weigh of the water, which does not bridge its weight in the manner of the crystaline rocks, but forces a concentrated pressure on the deepest portions.

If this hypothesis is correct, science, in the future, may predict the result of the continuation of this force until the water may be forced to the interior of the heated zone, which inevitably would produce disastrous result

To us who live on the western coast of North America, the fact seems clear, that the very foundation of our continent, far out under the Pacific Ocean is settling slowly, it may be, but surely towards this great abyss, and as long as the forces remain active, that have made this possible, we may feel a continuation of the phenomena just experienced, at long intervals.

It is not difficult under the circumstances described, to visualize the result of the breaking-down or subsidence of parts of the lithosphere, and the jar and shock thereby being transmitted to our dry land habitations. The opinion seems to prevail, with many of our greatest writers on the subject, that these great ocean depths, however produced, give at least an idea of the cause referred to. The Japan oceanic depression, while not as great superficially as its Pacific prototype seems to exhibit the same phenomena that its sister of the Pacific has given us in our late tremblor.

In studying the causes of our disaster, we should not confuse the two great opposing detructive forces of Nature. Contraction and expansion. Of the former, we have just had an example, and, of the latter, Stromboli the great active volcano of South America, is a living evidence. It is one of the many safety valves of the earth, which has been active for over two thousand years. Volcanic action expansion) is usually preceded by some sort of forewarning, while earthquakes (contraction) give no warning. This uncertainty makes it all the more terrifying.

In our general aspect of everything in nature, cause and effect, law and order, and the evidence of design prevail, our animal minds and eyes do not enable us to harmonize the working of the great laws. The great book of all law says: "Where there is no vision, the people perish." Now, what is vision? Is it not the faculty of visualizing the effect of an act, before the act has been committed? No civilization was ever produced by, or maintained by, governmental laws produced by the animal mind. The education of the physical brain will never produce a city, a nation or a civilized community. All peoples, that have produced great cities and communities, have done so under the leadership of men of vision, who have produced and enforced laws for the protection of the life and property of the people. Trees that grow up must fall, our earth must shrink, but the dangers thereby occasioned and the tenfold greater dangers occasioned by traffic accidents, can be minimized.

The principles that produce honesty, honour and manliness are not obtained by the disregard of the Sunday School, the Church and the Bible. And, for this, the Sunday morning baseball game is a poor substitute. The misfortunes, trials and sorrows of life should be used as stepping-stones to guard us against the recurrence of other evils. And to accomplish this the millions of noble, honorable and red - blooded Americans should in obedience to the inspired quotation, select men of vision to administer our laws and protect our people in their life and property. Long Beach has been visited by a terrible misfortune. Thousands were left homeless, but no one suffered from hunger and cold, and will ever stand as a monument to the self-sacrificing, altruistic spirit of our citizens, and to the honor of our country.

Mrs. Preston and I have remained ing that it has been subjected to. We steadfastly in our grand old Villa Riviera, notwithstanding the violent shak- are thankful that we can assure our many friends of our well-being and safety.

Sincerely,
W. A. Preston.

CONFLICTING STORIES OF THE SOVIET "FAMINE"

(Literary Digest)

"There is no bread. We are dying!"

This is the cry one witness of the "famine" in Soviet Russia says he heard everywhere as he walked thru villages and investigated twelve collective farms.

He is Gareth Jones, a former Secretary of David Lloyd-George, and, as quoted in Berlin press cables, he declares the cry is rising from all parts of Russia—from the Volga district, from Siberia, from White Russia, from Central Asia and from the Ukraine black dirt country.

But Soviet newspapers, including the official Pravda, related about the middle of March, that seventy high officials of the People's Commissariat for Agriculture had been arrested in Moscow. Thirty-five of them were executed, while the others received varying lesser sentences. Pravda informs us that they had been found guilty of "counter-revolution through malignant and deliberate sabotage of agriculture in the Ukraine, in the Northern Caucasus, and in White Russia."

Anti-Soviet Russian newspaper published outside the Soviet Union naturally disagree with the reports of Soviet Government officials about the so-called famine conditions. Dni, for instance, the moderate Socialist Russian weekly edited in Paris by A. F. Kerensky, former Premier of Russia's Provisional Government, prints a letter from its secret correspondent in Moscow in which we read:

"In the Volga regions, in the Ukraine, and in the Northern Caucasus one now sees what one saw there during the famine of 1921, with this difference, that, in 1921, people starved and died passively and silently, while now the spirit of hunger riots dominates among them.

"They attack trains transporting food supplies, destroy and burn the government food stores, and between those of them who are starving and those who are relatively well fed a pitiless, cruel struggle is going on.

"The local Soviet authorities in the provinces have completely lost their heads.

"The orders which they receive from the central Government are obviously senseless.

"Not to carry them out means to run the risk of being upbraided; to carry them out may mean to be punished later on—when their absurdity becomes obvious—for 'deliberate sabotage and counter-revolution.'"

THE MONTREAL GAZETTE HITS THE NAIL ON THE HEAD

No one will accuse the Montreal Gazette of being an extreme partisan newspaper. It has always been considered Conservative, but independently so, and while it favors the national policy of the Conservative party it does not hesitate to point out some of the more glaring weaknesses of the administration of a Conservative Government, any more that it is broad enough to give credit to the good legisation of a Liberal Government. When the Rhodes Budget was brought down in the House of Commons, the Montreal Gazette sounded a note of warning that taxes were being levied where they should not be, and expenditures not reduced where they should be. In its issue of Tuesday, April 18th, the Montreal Gazette comes out with another warning note, and a warning that Hon. R. B. Bennett and his Government would do well to heed. What the Gazette says is true, and we publish herewith a portion of the Gazette's editorial:

"The taxpayers of Canada, those of them who reside outside the federal capital, are very naturally puzzled over the failure of the Government to reduce expenditures. They have good reason for believing that the existing administrative machinery is very much more extensive and costly than is necessary for the actual requirements of the public service. They are aware that the conditions existing at Ottawa would not be tolerated for a moment in private industry, and yet the Government, which has the same responsibility to the taxpayer as any private company directorate has to its shareholders, persists in maintaining major and minor administrative departments and branches whose functions are of little or no value to the people who pay. The only explanation of official inaction in the present circumstances is that the Government is afraid to take the steps which ought to be taken in the public interest. Of what is it afraid?"

The Gazette then goes on to point out that the City of Ottawa is honeycombed by a social, financial and official system that practically rules the Government. The Civil Service organization and its power, the influences of certain big business firms, and merchants, all are in their way keeping the Government under control. The Gazette concludes its very timely editorial in the following unmistakable language:

"The condition of the country's finances requires prompt and drastic action by the Government, however unpleasant the task may be. It may mean an exacting test of the Administration's courage, but it is a test which cannot be avoided if the Government's duty to the public is to be discharged. It is the duty, first of all, of the Cabinet, but if for the sake of convenience that duty is to be delegated to the heads of departments, the Government should see to it that these heads of departments are not made to suffer in any way from expressions of local resentment. The circumstances are very pressing and if the Government fears to do what these circumstances require of it the public will find the new taxes imposed upon them just that much more unpalatable."

THE SCHOOL TEACHING PROFESSION

In a few weeks the Universities, College, Normal Schools and High Schools will be turning out hundreds and thousands of graduates, many of them looking for, hoping for and expecting to be employed in High or Public Schools at comfortable salaries. But the school teaching profession in Canada is suffering from an overplus, and to-day there are thousands of qualified and capable teachers who are out of employment, and who would be willing to accept any reasonable salary, and any kind of work that might be offered them. During the war years and up until a few years ago the number of school teachers was not in excess of the demand, and salaries were increased, so that, in a High School, a minimum of $1700 was fixed. Aside from the argument as to the cost of procuring an education, the fact must be faced that intelligent and educated men are being thrown out of work by industrial depression and some who a few years ago commanded salaries from two to five thousand dollars a year, would be willing to accept almost any employment at $1000 a year or less. One cannot but feel that when there is such a surplus of teachers, some action should be taken to equalize the state of affairs as relates to teachers and other wage earners. Parents who are trying to put their children through High School, Normal School and Universities in the expectation that when they graduate there will be ready employment for them, should consider seriously the present situation of thousands of school teachers looking in vain for situations, salaries being forced down, and no relief in sight. In fact the two year terms at Normal is a good suggestion, and the closing up of all Normal Schools for two or three years might not be a bad idea.

A GOOD AND SAFE MAN

The Orillia Packet and Times in an editorial dealing with some of the incidents in connection with Hydro affairs as brought out in the session, just closed of the Ontario Legislature says:

"Men in public life have to learn to be ready to sacrifice their private interests to the public welfare when need arises; that is one of the qualifications for ministerial responsibility. They should be judged by their general record, and not by incidents such as that in which the Prime Minister has become involved. On this basis, there is no reason why the public should lose faith in the man who is at the head of affairs in Ontario, for his record has been clean. It may be that he would have shown better judgment to at once acknowledge his ownership of the bonds, when he was challenged; and perhaps he would have been well advised to take his colleagues into his confidence at the start. On the other hand, it is clear that advantage is being taken of the situation by influences inside the Conservative party which are anxious to get Mr. Henry out of the way, because he is a stumbling block in the path of their desire to have the Government consent to the private sale of beer and wine, and is a check upon the domination of the party by the Conservative machine in Toronto. For this reason, the Prime Minister will have widespread sympathy in his fight to retain his position."

INSPIRING SIGHT

It was an inspiring sight to see a number of the young men of this community publicly acknowledge their faith in God, and in the church, when they made their profession of faith and took their first sacrament in a local church on Easter Sunday morning. Those young men have the true ideals of life; they show that their desire is to live a useful, and so far as possible a sinless life. It is to such that the world to-day is looking to "carry on" and uphold that which is good and true. The old Bible truth that "Righteousness exalteth a nation" is as forceful to-day as the day it was first spoken. Young people identified with the church are not the ones for whom courts are kept in existence and prison walls built. The Press has no use for that narrow and dwarfed view of a religious life that would relegate all our young people to singing hymns, and segregating themselves with the "holier than thou," but we look to them as the leaders in our public and social life. To them innocent amusements are as much a place of worship as in the back room of a church edifice, where the social atmosphere is charged with a current of depression and gloom that only death will release them from. The greatest political, financial and industrial leaders of the world were and are men who are identified with Christian and church work. It is only the critics, the do-nothings, the fault-finders, who keep aloof from the church and its activities. The manly young man is with the church. It is the cowardly and the selfish who stay away.

CLOSE THEM ALL

Closing of the Government House at Edmonton, officials residence of the Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta, in preference to reduction in educational grants was urged in a resolution passed by the executive of the United Farmers of Alberta a few days ago. If the Legislature complies it will be showing as good sense as the farmers who urge it. The Lieutenant-Governors of the several provinces are simply expensive ornaments, and ornaments that at the present time should be discarded. Ontario got along just as well for nearly a year without one, and it could get along just as well if the big house on the hill in Toronto was closed. These are times when those in authority must be convinced that useless and unnecessary expenditures are to be cut out. The people simply can't and won't stand for it.

FEELING THE PINCH

The Government at Ottawa while no doubt realizing in a degree the necessity for economy, do not fully appreciate the fact that from West to East, the demand is that the cost of Government in Canada be cut down, and no expenditures undertaken that do not mean the giving of employment to men in need. The feeling is not confined to one or any political party, but is one that is forced by necessity on the attention of all. The resolution recently unanimously passed by the Montreal Board of Trade, and forwarded to Hon. Mr. Rhodes, Financial Minister at Ottawa, expresses a feeling and sentiment that is in Canada endorsed by all thinking men, and no Government is so wise or farseeing that they can afford to ignore resolutions from important and influential bodies like the Montreal Board of Trade. In reciting some of the burdens now placed on the Canadian people, and asking for economy and relief, one clause in the resolution reads:

"The Chamber does not presume to suggest in detail how such governmental economies should be effected, but it does venture to point out that Canada is a much over-governed country and the Chamber desires to assure the Government that it would heartily endorse further drastic reductions and rearrangements of the public service."

VARIOUS VIEWS ON DEPRESSION — WHAT IS THE SOLUTION?

Personally you solve the question. With too many the depression is a mental attitude. In fact there are those with whom "hard times" is ever present, and the dark side of life is their only outlook. Ministers shout from their pulpits "Look up, and forget your troubles, only trust in God and all will beright." Economists tell us that we have turned the corner, that the sunshine of better times is showing above the horizon. A minister in Montreal is reported by the Gazette as saying:

"That God helps those who help themselves. I am a member of an anti-depression club. We are not dead yet. We have health and strength to smile and keep on fighting. Our song is the 'depression was terrible, but it is past.' Now is the time to spend again." That sounds inspiring, and makes us feel better.

Sir Arthur Salter, a famous economist, speaking in Montreal on Monday said that the world is coming out of the depression, and things are looking brighter. Great hope seems to be placed in the Washington Conference to be held shortly of the several nations' representatives, and the feeling is that there will result a better adjustment of international tariffs.

* * * *

We heard a well-balanced man, who personally does not feel the depression, tell a group of men in the Post Office a few mornings ago, that "We had to get back to simpler living, cut out pleasures we think necessary, and the reduction of the cost of government. It sounds sensible, but what about the poor fellow who is burdened with a couple of years of unpaid taxes, store debts that are made a nightmare, and no work in sight? How about the business man who can't collect his debts, and is being hounded by his creditors until he hates to open his mail, and expects every day a notice that suit has been entered against him? How about the farmer who, now that spring has come, wants seed, wants repair for machinery, wants many things that only money can buy, and no money coming in except enough to keep his household?

* * * *

The people, the country, has a right to look to their rulers to help them out in times of depression, and no doubt they are trying to do so in the way of supplying the actual needs of those who have nothing. But the position of the tax-burdened and debt-burdened, of whom there are a very vast majority,, must have relief of some kind. We know many a man has been driven to suicide by the burden he had to bear. We know that many are hanging on like grim death, and trying to fight it out. Moratoriums are good so far as they go, but they don't go far enough. Several of the nations of the world who are in debt to the United States ask that their debts be cancelled. Has not an individual the same right to make of his creditors? Cancelation is an act of charity, but only the man who has lost the sense of honor will ask that his debt be concelled. If the credit system could be made unlawful, if all the debtors were given time to pick themselves up and make an honest effort to meet their obligations, if instead of direct relief, our governments would put the unemployed to work at a living wage, and get money in circulation; in time debts would be liquidated, and everyone feel better.

There are too many living in luxury and too many in want. There is no disguising that fact, and the temper of the people is becoming desperate. Call it Sovietism, Bolshevism, Socialism, or what you will, if those clothed in authority, and who have the power in their hands, do not do something practical and do it quickly, the preaching from pulpits, the publishing of misleading newspaper articles, the talk of politicians, the theories of college professors and economists, will not avail. The situation is beginning to dawn on the undertanding of many city newspaper editors, where the evidence of desperate want, and the beginning of lawlessness is most in evidence. That spirit of unrest and desperation is gradually extending to the smaller towns and villages, and unless wise heads are consulted and wise legislation enacted there is no telling what may happen within the next twelve months. The people are demanding more than mere talk and hopeful promises. They want action. The result of quick and decisive action by President Roosevelt is already apparent in the United States. We want more such action in Canada to-day.

BOYS AND GUNS

A picnic party of young people went to the woods near Toronto to spend Good Friday. One of the party had a gun, and not seeing anything better to shoot at, he shot at a stone or rock in the centre of a small stream. The bullet glanced off the stone and hit one of the party who had to be taken to the hospital, as he was seriously wounded. The Torono Globe says that the ravines about Toronto echoed with the firing of guns by young people on Good Friday, by young people out for the holiday. So many accidents occur by boys with guns, that one wonders where they are able to get them, and why parents permit their young boys to go out to the woods with a gun. Teach them the use of a bow and arrow. The time has come when the law should step in and prevent the sale of small rifles for boys, as well as revolvers to anyone who has not a magistrate's permit. This and every community has been saddened by the tragedy of the young lad with a gun fatality.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Japan seems to have a great liking for China the way she is collecting precious pieces. Will there be a crash of China, and who will suffer most the China or the Japs.

Says the Arnprior Chronicle—"Advertising is like a porous plaster. It won't work unless it is applied." Yes, and its a great puller. The business man who don't advertise is not a business man, he is only a man temporarily in business.

NEIGHBOURS CHICKENS

People in this, as well as in every other village, says the Stirling News Argus, have from time to time been troubled during the summer months with the neighbours' chickens. Now that gardens will be the fashion again in a month or so, perhaps the following scheme of getting rid of the nuisance may be available. It is the old scheme of tying a card or piece of paper, by means of a short thread, to a grain of corn. When the fowl swallows the corn, the card dangles from their beaks, thus frightening them home. A message is written on the card similar to the following: "I have been in Mr. Smith's garden, where I should not have been, so kindly shut me up." If this does not bring results, a louder message may each time replace the former one.

THE RIDGE ROAD

Winchester, Ont,
April 17, 1933.

To the Editor Winchester Press:

Dear Sir:—I see by the paper that there has been a Committee Meeting about the Ridge Road.

Well that road has been spoiled by scraping it down to the sides of the track year after year, thus forming a ridge on each side of the track and scraped so low that the water lays on the track and cannot get off. This completely spoils the road.

I heard an old road Superintendant say many years ago that the first principle in road making was to take the water off, and second to keep it off. The same principle stands good yet. Otherwise it is time and money wasted.

WILLIAMSBURG W. M. S.

WILLIAMSBURG, April 18. — The Women's Missionary Society of the United Church, Williamsburg, held their special Easter meeting in the church hall on Friday. Mrs. (Rev.) A. M. Russell, president, was in the chair. The meeting opened with singing a hymn, and responsive reading bearing on the Easter season was continued throughout the service, interspersed with singing hymns. Mrs. Geo. Hill took charge of the scripture lesson. Misses Maude and Florence Marcellus rendered a pleasing duet. A reading, "The Empty Tomb," by Mrs. Strader McIntosh. The president gave a very interesting address on "The Drama of the Cross."

BANQUET AT HALLVILLE

The Tuxis and Trail Ranger groups of Hallville United Church held a banquet and programme on Tuesday evening. Charles Christie, Tuxis mentor, was master of ceremonies. After a sumptuous supper, a sing-song was enjoyed, and the speech making began. The first speaker was Gordon Durant, member for Dundas in the Older Boys' Parliament who outlined the work of the Parliament and a boy's privileges and opportunities in connection with the church. Following this, Jack Johnston of South Mountain, Trail Ranger representative at the Parliament gave a racy and interesting talk on boys' camps urging the fellows to attend Broder Island camp this year. Several of the Hallville boys also spoke, and a few remarks were made by Revs. D. R. Morrison and John MacKay. The Hallville Church has two newly organized groups who are doing excellent work under the leadership of Charles Christie and Wilfred Allan, assisted by the minister.

UNITED CHURCH W. M. S.

The regular monthly meeting of the United Church Woman's Missionary Society was held on Thursday, April 13th in the Sunday school rooms. The president, Mrs. George Earle, opened the meeting with a consecration hymn "Take My Life and Let It Be," followed with a prayer. Mrs. Scott read a very interesting paper entitled "Without Spot or Blemish."

Mrs. T. O. Keyes, supply secretary, reported a shortage of sheets and towels to complete the necessary articles for the supply box to be sent away about the middle of May. It was planned to have a towel shower at the next meeting in May, each member bringing a towel along with them.

Mrs. S. Christie, temperance secretary, gave an article "What Liquor Can Do." A very impressive Easter worship service, "We would see Jesus," was taken responsively, Mrs. F. Davidson leading. Hymn "When I Survey the Wonderous Cross," was sung and a season of prayer for consecration of self by Mrs. R. Crowder, Mrs. N. W. Beach and Mrs. J. W. Ault closed this period of worship.

Mrs. M. Baker read the devotional leaflet, the woman of sacrifice, Jephthah's daughter was a great heroine.

Mss A. Walker and Mrs. S. Lindsay sang a beautiful duet, "The Heart that was broken for me," accompanied by Mrs. J. MacKay, which was very much enjoyed. The treasurer, Mrs. R. D. Preston, reported the amount of the contribution from the thankoffering envelopes to be over $177.00. A beautiful Easter message was given by Mesdames Earle, MacKay and Preston. Hymn "Speed Away on Your Mission of Light" was sung and Rev. J. MacKay showed a number of slides on Passion Week that was very inspiring and instructive. To those who were privileged to see the pictures a very deep feeling was impressed in their hearts of the agony and suffering on the Cross at Calvary in that Passion Week of long ago. After the singing of a hymn Rev. J. MacKay pronounced the benediction.

DEATH AT BURRITT RAPIDS

The death of Daniel Hamlet Burritt, of Burritts Rapids, which occurred on Sunday, removes the surviving male member of that pioneer family in that locality, and brings to a close a family name which has been closely connected with this district since 1793. In his 55th year. Mr. Burritt had been ill several weeks, but his passing came as a great shock to his many friends.

The land owned by the Burritt family was granted by the Crown to Stephen Burritt, a member of Parliament who was given the postmastership of the locality, and who was also a United Empire Loyalist. Col. Edmund Burritt, from whom Daniel Burritt descended directly, was Stephen's son, and was the first white child to arrive on the Rideau River. The first marriage of a white couple was solemnized at the Burritt home.

TRUCK BURNED

A truck belonging to the Boyce transport of Kingston was destroyed by fire at Eastview, three miles east of Kingston on the Gananoque highway. The brakes on the truck locked going down a hill. The truck was overturned in the ditch and caught fire and the blaze set fire to the dry grass, fences and trees nearby, and a lively fire ensued. The driver, Thomas Donoghue, of Kingston, escaped with a few cuts on one hand. The truck was not loaded to capacity and was on the way to Montreal to get a load.

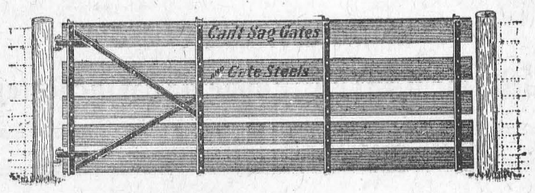
OF INTEREST TO FARMERS!



"Cant-Sag" Gates

Last longer than any other gate you can buy or build. They weigh much less than ordinary all-wood gates and are far stronger than any steel, wire or gas-pipe gate made. They can't get bent and twisted out of shape by stock as steel gates do—the worst thing that can happen to a "CAN'T SAG" is a broken board — a new board and 5 minutes of your time replaces that and the Gate is as good as new.

Give you everything you can ask for in a farm gate—and at surprisingly low cost. They look neat—hang straight—swing freely and are strong and durable. America's finest farms are now almost universaly equipped with "CAN'T-SAGS." You see them everywhere you go. Come in and let us quote you prices.

"CAN'T SAG" GATES ARE MANUFACTURED BY

HINTS TO FARMERS

(Experimental Farms Note.)

Following the exceedingly dry summer of 1931 and lack of snow covering during the following winter large acreages seeded to hay crops failed to produce a "catch" for 1932. In many sections of Eastern Canada drought conditions prevailed in 1932 throughout a large part of the growing season and conditions during the winter of 1932-33 have not offered ideal protection for new seedings. There is every reason to believe that hay and pasture in the 1933 season will be very thin in these districts and in all probability many fields will be entirely "killed out." It will be necessary, then, for may farmers to resort to emergency crops.

Several mixtures of grains have found reasonably satisfactory as annual hay or pasture crops both from the standpoint of yield and quality. Probably one of the best and most practical mixture is one made up of 2 bushels of oats and 1 bushel of peas, seeded at 3 bushels per acre. Other mixtures which gave almost as good results consist of oats 2 bushels and rye 3-4 of a bushel, seeded at 2 3-4 bushels per acre. This latter mixture contains no legume and has a feed ratio low in protein. It may, however, be grown on soil comparatively low in fertility. Where vetches grow successfully a mixture made up of 2 bushels of oats, 3-4 of a bushel of peas and 1-4 bushel of vetches makes a splendid mixture. Oats alone seeded at 2 1-2 to 3 bushels per acre or fall rye alone at 1 1-2 bushels per acre will produce fairly good hay or pasture. These crops may be pastured as soon as growth is well under way. They may be seeded as early in the spring as it is possible to prepare the land. For hay the crops should be cut when in the milk stage and when cut may be dried or cured and made into hay in the same way as a crop of clover.

SPRING CARE OF SEED POTATOES

(Experimental Farms Note.)

In the production of potatoes, whether for table use or for seed purposes, the farmer endeavours to grow a good crop at the lowest cost per bushel. This is accomplished by means of productive soil, high grade seed, good cultivation, thorough spraying and the best possible care of seed potatoes in the spring of the year. The last named factor involves such important considerations as late storage conditions, seed treatment, cutting, care of sets, planting and early cultivation.

When cutting the sets remember that the young plant gets its start from the seed-piece, therefore make them not less than 1 1-2 ounces in weight. Discard all tubers showing discolorations, rots or a dark ring just under the skin and most commonly found at the stem-end.

Seed is best planted immediately after cutting, the objection to early cutting being the likelihood of poor stands. This undesirable feature is partially eliminated by seed treatment which destroys the germs on the potatoes. All cut sets of course should be stored in crates or spread out for ventilation purposes. Dusting surfaces and preventing the sets sticking together.

Great Chinese Wall

The Great Wall of China where fighting is now taking place between Japanese and Chinese forces is one of the seven wonders of the world. It was built 200 years before the birth of Christ by Shi Hwang-ti the first emperor. The Chinese then were famed for their advanced state of civilization. They had progressed so far that they became the envy of the barbarians beyond their frontier. The emperor saw the danger signal and decided to build the great unclimable wall from the seat to the furthest western corner of his empire.

He assembled 300,000 workmen and forced them to work night and day to build the giant barrier against invasion. His workmen toiled unceasingly for fifteen years. He had the foundations built of granite, and into the wall, made of boulders and burnt brick he threw the bodies of 1,000,000 of his subjects—"to make it strong." He built 25,000 towers and 15,000 watch towers, which he manned with a newly recruited army. Many of those towers to-day are being used for their original purpose—to keep out the invader. The wall is twenty-five feet wide, and crosses mountains more than a mile high. It begins 200 miles east of Peking, on the coast of the Gulf of Liao-tung, and stretches westward to the edge of the Gobi Desert. The giant barrier varies from thirty to sixty feet in height, and has a massive parapet on each side.

MAY HAVE FOUND IMPORTANT CURE

London, April 10.—A gland secret which reveals the cure for bow-legs, rickets and weak bones is said to have been discovered by a physician while treating a young woman at the London Hospital, Whitechapel. When the patient was admitted to the hospital, it is stated, her bones were so bent and weak that they threatened to collapse.

The young woman in question was operated upon and the tiny parathyroid glands in the neck were found to be diseased. The glands were treated, and the woman is now making good progress. Further observations by the physician led to the discovery that the four glands control the bone-building supplies of the body.

Captain Harry L. Milson, secretary of the hospital, told the following about the case:

"The London Hospital is recognized as one of the foremost hospitals for the treatment of bone diseases, and patients come to us from far and near. The physician's name cannot be disclosed, but his discovery is important. Hitherto the purpose of these glands has been unknown. It now appears that the parathyroid glands ensure that the amount of calcium in the body is maintained to a correct level. When the glands become diseased calcium is taken from the bones, which are thereby weakened."

For several years Dr. J. B. Collip, of McGill University, Montreal—who, in conjunction with Dr F. G. Banting, produced insulin for the treatment of diabetes—has been trying to land the secret of the glands.

SYNOPSIS: Pauline, sentimental, trustful, sincere and loving love, becomes engaged and marries Dennis O'Hara in the belief that their blissful happiness will continue unchanged thru all the years. On her wedding morning she awakens with a strange premonition that maybe love does change, a thought buried in her mind by a letter from her closest friend, Barbara the night before. Pauline adored Barbara who had been married, was the mother of a child which died, but now divorced and living a life which some of her friends could not understand. Between Dennis and Barbara is a seeming wall of personal dislike by both. Six months after Pauline's wedding, Barbara comes for a short stay. During this visit Barbara confesses to Pauline that there is a man she really loves, but she refuses to tell his name. . . . NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"Oh, yes, at the Club."

"Because I'd love to get you something to eat if you're hungry." She looked as if she hoped he would say he was.

"No, thank you, dear!"

The last little word was spoken unconsciously, but it warmed her heart. She perched herself on his knee and put her arms round his neck.

"Have you missed me?"

"You baby! What do you want me to say?"

"That you love me."

"Is it necessary? Of course I love you!"

He put his arms round her little figure and drew her closer to him.

"What have you been doing all day?"

"Talking to Barbara and working."

"Does Barbara ever do anything besides talk?"

Pauline laughed. "Not often. I wish I could talk the way she does—she's so awfully clever."

"Clever! Rubbish! She talks like a cheap novelette."

"Dennis!"

"So she does. All this stuff about love and marriage and twin souls."

"She doesn't mean half she says," Pauline declared.

"Let's hope she doesn't," Dennis answered drily. He set Pauline on her feet, his arm still round her. "Run up to bed, you'll take cold. I——" He broke off, as there was a slight sound in the doorway, and looking up he saw Barbara there.

"So sorry," said Barbara, looking directly at him. "I came down for a book. I had no idea you were in. So sorry!" she added again, a little smile curving her lips. "Good night!" and she went away. Dennis looked angry. "Good-night," said Pauline.

"She knew good and well we were here," he said. "Damn the woman!" he added under his breath.

"I told you I knew Barbara wasn't happy," Pauline informed him later on when she was lying cosily in bed. "I wouldn't tell anyone but you, Dennis, darling, but she does love someone—frightfully!"

"Half a dozen of 'em, I should think!"

"No—seriously, one!" Pauline insisted. "There was quite a different look about her when she told me."

She lay still watching him with adoring eyes. Presently she said shyly, "Dennis?"

"Um?"

"You love me best in all the world, don't you?"

"What would you do if I said the answer was in the negative?" he asked, teasingly.

"Die," Pauline whispered.

"Then you may safely live," he assured her.

Pauline sighed and closed her eyes.

It was no use; she realized that nothing on earth would ever make Dennis romantic.

It was at breakfast the next morning that Barbara announced she must go home that day, "home" meaning the queerly furnished flat in Greenwich where she kept the clothes she was not wearing, and slept when she was not staying in other people's houses. Barbara did not often come down to breakfast, but this morning she was standing looking out of the window when Dennis came into the room whistling.

When he saw her he broke off in dismay.

"Hullo! Couldn't you sleep?" he asked, with a poor attempt at humor.

Barbara met his eyes calmly.

"I lay awake thinking of you," she said in her charming voice.

Dennis flushed; not because he thought for a moment she meant it, but because everything she said and did for some reason or another irritated and annoyed him.

"Indigestion," he said briefly. Barbara laughed—she was very difficult to offend.

"No, we had a very good dinner," she answered seriously. "Spoiled by your vacant chair, of course, but otherwise perfect."

Dennis scowled and took up the paper. Barbara might be in love, he told himself, remembering Pauline's words last night, but that any man could possibly fall in love with her. . . .

Pauline came into the room at that moment.

"Why — Barbara!" she said, amazed.

"Yes—myself in the flesh," Barbara said calmly. "I had a wire this morning on urgent business. I must go back home."

"Go back! You haven't been here a week."

"I'll come back—never fear! Your spare-room bed is too comfortable to forget," said Barbara.

And then his own question: "Who is the poor devil, then?"

Who was the poor devil? In the midst of all his pain O'Hara was conscious of a maddening desire to know the name of the man.

Well, he would ask her! Surely to ask a simple question like that would not be wrong?

Barbara, whom he had never liked—whom he pretended to despise—this woman with the tears on her white face, bending over him, bending so low that surely her lips touched his, cool and fragrant?

"I lay awake thinking of you," she said in her charming voice.

Barbara was stirring her coffee with an irritating little tinkle of silver against the china cup. "I wonder if I may ring up for a taxi presently," she said.

"Dennis will drive you down," Pauline said quickly. "He has to go down to Albany on business this morning—you told me so last night," she added faintly, meeting her husband's annoyed eyes.

"I said I might have to," he answered.

"Well—you could take Barbara, couldn't you?" Pauline asked.

"Delighted."

"Do you hate many people as much as you hate me?" Barbara asked Dennis later on, when they were driving away in the little two-seater car.

"People who hate well generally love well," Dennis said surlily.

"Yes." Barbara's queer eyes looked straight ahead down the road. "I should think you would make quite a good lover," she agreed.

Dennis jerked the wheel.

"I dare say Pauline could give you any information you require," he said.

"A lover and a husband—two different things," Barbara said, sweetly.

"Aren't we talking a lot of rubbish?" Dennis said with exasperation.

Barbara folded her hands in her lap with mock resignation.

"Very well—from now until our journey's end I am dumb," she said mockingly.

Dennis quickened speed. The journey could not be at an end too quickly for him. They turned onto one of the new broad arterial roads, and he let the engine out to its fullest extent. He never dared do such a thing when Pauline was with him. Presently he stole a sidelong glance at her. She was sitting very still, perfectly controlled and unmoved. She was a strange woman, he thought, and almost angrily he wished he understood her.

Barbara suddenly touched his arm. "There is a crossroad just ahead," she said in her calm voice. "I am not at all afraid, but you are driving rather recklessly, you know, and there is Pauline to consider, so. . . ."

Afterward he wondered stupidly what she had been going to say, but her words were lost in a chaos of shouting and confusion and the grinding of brakes—and then—struggling back to consciousness he heard her voice still, agonized, broken with tears—unlike the cool, indifferent tones to which he had grown so irritatingly accustomed.

"Oh, my dear—Dennis—Dennis—speak to me—Dennis!"

It was a dream—opening his eyes he was conscious of a confusion of sky and clouds from which Barbara's face wet with tears and white with dread bent over him.

So she could feel, after all! Pauline had been right, and she had a heart hidden away beneath all her artificialities.

Pauline had said something else about her, too. What was it? Oh, yes, with difficulty he sorted the words from the confusion in his brain—"She does love someone—frightfully!"

Dennis O'Hara closed his eyes. He was in pain, in great pain—there was a heavy weight across the lower part of his body, crushing him. He wondered what Pauline would say when she heard—poor little Pauline! He tried to recall her face to his fading consciousness, but somehow he could only see Barbara's eyes and the tears on her white cheeks—only feel the cool fragrance of her lips on his, only realize through the sea of pain in which he was drowning that at last he knew the name of the man she loved.

Pauline was busy arranging fresh flowers in the drawing room when the news was brought to her. She was not feeling very happy. Barbara's sudden departure had hurt her and left her puzzled.

Pauline longed to be a perfect hostess as well as a perfect wife. Her anxious mind explored every nook and cranny of her household to find in what particular detail she had failed in hospitality, and reluctantly she decided it must have been her husband.

Dennis was never nice to Barbara. It was impossible to disguise the fact that he did not like her. This morning at breakfast time, for instance, he had shown only too plainly that he objected to taking Barbara in the car. It was too bad of him.

Pauline carefully arranged the red roses in a silver bowl—a wedding present. Only six months ago since she had unpacked it, together with a host of other lovely things.

Only six months! It seemed a long time, and yet she knew people who had been married for sixteen years—twenty years, thirty years and even longer.

"I expect the time will go more quickly when we're really settled down and used to being married," Pauline told herself with a little feeling of satisfaction. A sharp thorn from one of the roses gave Pauline a nasty prick, and it was while she was busily wiping away the tiny bead of blood from her finger that the door bell rang.

"The postman!" Pauline thought as she went to the front door, but the little letter box was empty and through the glass panels she could see the burly outline of a man's waiting figure.

Pauline opened the door, then she caught her breath sharply, for the man wore an officer's uniform.

He looked at Pauline with kindly eyes.

"Mrs. O'Hara?" he queried doubtfully.

"Yes," Pauline was panicky. Did she owe one of the tradesmen anything? She had always been so careful about not getting into debt. She was a thousand miles from the truth when the man reluctantly broke the news to her. "I am sorry to say there has been a bit of an accident. Gentleman by name O'Hara—"

Pauline thought she would have died on the spot.

Dennis hurt! Killed! "Oh, my God!" she whispered, white-lipped.

"The Ottawa Spotlight"

Ottawa, April 19th.—All eyes at Ottawa are turned to the forthcoming conferences at Washington and London in the hope that something will be devised to start Canada again on the road to prosperity.

The amount of work going on behind the scenes both at Ottawa and Washington suggests that Premier Bennett and President Roosevelt mean to talk turkey. Premier Bennett has had a staff busy for several weeks drawing up proposals for a trade treaty with the United States, and the American legation here has been studying the existing tariffs between the two countries forwards, backwards and upside down.

Semi-official reports, believed to be wholly accurate, say that President Roosevelt is prepared to offer valuable concessions, perhaps even free entry, for Canadian live cattle, fish and lumber.

In return the United States will ask Canada to remove the present arbitrary and uncertain dump duties and other annoyances to the American exporter.

The United States also seeks more considerate treatment of American coal, steel, machinery, chemical and a range of manufactured items.

In order for Canada to concede what the United States asks, some modification of the Ottawa agreements is necessary, according to informed American opinion, as reported here.

This can only be done by consent of all interested parties.

The fact that it was done in respect to a dozen items in the recent Rhodes budget shows that there is no insuperable obstacle along this line.

Free entry to the United States market for fish, lumber and cattle would prove of great benefit to nearly every province in Canada, say the trade experts here.

As many as 500,000 live cattle a year were at one time sold to the United States, but when the Hawley-Smoot rates were applied, running from $20 to $30 per animal, this trade fell at once to zero, or nearly so.

Two years ago exports of fresh and frozen fish to the U.S. ran over ten millions: last year this fell to $6,400,000.

Exports of unmanufactured or semi-manufactured lumber, which ran over 50 million dollars two years ago, were down to one-third last year.

In a word, any tariff changes which would restore the sales of these products to their old levels would mean many millions in the pockets of Canadian exporters, and would re-employ thousands of men in the fisheries, the lumber camps and on the ranches.

The milk inquiry continues to furnish the most sensational news at the capital. A former book-keeper of a Montreal dairy company swore that by use of fictitious surplus that is, giving only surplus price to farmers and then selling the milk to consumers at the regular rate, the company in the first nine months of 1931 had paid producers from 3c to 19c less per hundred pounds than the farmers were entitled, and that in the one month of September, 1931, alone, this was equal to cheating the farmers out of $1,370.

W. H. Taylor (Lib. Norfolk-Elgin) told the committee he had been informed that the Borden Company of New York had telephoned its Canadian office to 'clear all files' of evidence which might be damaging if brought out at the inquiry. Officials of the company were unable to throw any light on this alleged conversation.

The Borden subsidiary at Ottawa, a $1,700,000 company, has built up reserves of over two million dollars, of which $745,761 represents profits made in the past five years. The New York company owns all the stock and can at any time remove this profit surplus to the United States, witnesses stated. Asked if he knew of any farmer in the Ottawa area who had built up any kind of a reserve by producing milk for them, the general manager of the Ottawa dairy admitted that he could not name any.

Easing The Old Farm Mortgage

(Literary Digest.)

One of the frostiest of the frozen assets in the banks of the farm-belt is the well-known mortgage on the old farm.

Its chilblains rack the farmer, the banker, the lawmaker, and the national Administration at Washington.

All are anxious to thaw it into a liquid state.

The latest effort takes form in President Roosevelt's $2,000,000,000 refinancing plan. It aims to reduce the interest, readjust the principal to a lower figure, postpone the date of repayment, and relieve the farmer's mind of that much worry.

Everybody admits that the plan is complicated. But an apparent majority of editors agree with the Washington News that "the Roosevelt Administration has gone to the root of the farm problem," and that by offering "definite help to distrest farmers" it promises to stabilize the whole mortgage market.

Showing the size of the problem now being tackled, press dispatches from Washington tell us that about 40 per cent. of our farmers are carrying mortgages outstanding is estimated at the enormous sum of $8,500,000,000.

MRS. DUNCAN MACLEOD

MAXVILLE—After an illness which confined her to bed for many months, Mrs. Duncan MacLeod, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Neil M. MacLean, Baltic's Corners, on Monday, April 10, being the last surviving member of a family of four sons and three daughters. Her maiden name was Jessie MacIntosh, a daughter of Neil MacIntosh and his wife Bella MacCrimmon, being born in Scotland, on October 31, 1843.

To-day the farmer is paying a high interest rate on a debt incurred on land whose value has slumped. To make his predicament worse, his income has been slashed through the drop in the price of the things he sells.

"I seek," said the President in his message to Congress, "an end to the threatened loss of homes and productive capacity, now faced by hundreds of thousands of American farm families." This he would accomplish by "a more equitable readjustment of the principal of the debt, a reduction of interest rates, which in many cases are so unconscionably high as to the contrary to a sound public policy, and, by a temporary readjustment of amortization, to give sufficient time to farmers to restore to them the hope of ultimate free ownership of their own land."

Saying that the legislation "will not impose a heavy burden upon the Treasury," the President gave assurance that he would ask similar for the small home owners of the nation.

Under the Administration plan, the interest rate to be paid by the farmer is not to exceed 4 1-2 per cent. As Theodore C. Wallen explains the proposal in a Washington dispatch to the New York Herald Tribune:

"Briefly, the President's program for dealing with the farm mortgages handles them through the Government's new loan set-up by means of an issue of 4 per cent. Federal Land Bank bonds not in excess of $2,000,000,000 resigned to make new loans or exchange the bonds for outstanding mortgages.

"The land banks would lift the mortgage burden either by buying first mortgages within their districts or by exchanging the bonds for mortgages on a basis of 50 per cent. of the normal land value of the farm, plus 20 per cent. of the improvement value. The cheaper method would be followed. The limit of the amount of loans is $50,000."

Among the papers which are dubious about the plan is the Denver Post, which says that "until produce prices are increased materially, farmers can't sell their crops for enough to pay even the reduced interest on the new farm-mortgage bonds."

IN LITTLE OLD NEW YORK

Five hundred young men and women, representing 66 nationalities, live in an eight-story building in New York. It is the International House on Riverside Drive, the home of foreign students attending New York's many colleges.

A New York department store is considering the introduction of a rock-me-to-sleep oscillator to be attached to beds. This is a machine which produces a gentle rocking effect which, it is said, is conductive to sleep.

* * *

It is said that a good many New York women are buying and wearing men's shirts. So long as the women own their own and leave husband's shirts alone, all will be OK.

* * *

Henry Collins Brown, an authority on New York history, tells of an old tavern here in which were posted these rules:

"Four pence a night for bed.
"Six pence with supper.
"No more than five to sleep in one bed.
"No boots to be worn in bed.
"Organ grinders to sleep in wash house.
"No dogs allowed upstairs.
"No beer allowed in the kitchen.
"No razor grinders or tinkers taken in."

St Paul's church, on Broadway, between Fulton and Vesey streets, is the oldest church building now standing in New York. It is the rear of the church which is seen from Broadway, as the church originally faced the Hudson River.

Thirteen years were required to build Brooklyn Bridge in New York. Work was started in 1870.

There are some heavy eaters in the Bronx Zoo here. Some of the big "Cats" eat 12 pounds of the best beef every day. The little duck-billed platpus consumes $4.50 of meal worms and shrimps every 24 hours. Walruses demand about 20 pounds of soft-shell clams a day.

In central Park is an obelisk which originally stood in front of the Temple of the Sun in Heliopolis, near Cairo, where it was erected 1600 years before Christ.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

BY JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

LARYNGITIS

I am struggling today with an attack of laryngitis. It occurs to me that my readers may be interested. You may get an attack, you know.

The larynx is the "vocal box" where the sounds of the voice are moulded into words. The "itis" signifies inflammation of the vocal cords. The first symptom is hoarseness, and is very pronounced. Not much pain, necessarily, at first. Pain indicates a more violent attack — see the doctor at once. My voice today sounds like that of an old hen with a grain of corn lodged in her wind-pipe!

It is weakening, sickening, disgusting. My work as a physician, takes me out in all sorts of weather, and at most all hours. There is much exposure—we call it that—and you must guard against it.

What am I doing for this distressing condition? Well, I have my neck wrapped with woolen, — with turpentine and oil of eucalyptus equal parts sopped on the cloth. The vapor from this does good. I keep the neck warm on the outside. I keep my feet extra warm. I take antiseptic such as Aspirin — and those containing a small per cent of formaldehyde — and let them dissolve in my mouth — five or six times a day. Of course, I attend to the regular function, good food, plenty of water, and take the best care of myself that I can. It has been most severe weather, and the climate in my state is treacherous; besides, some of these things are communicable — we must not forget that.

I admit that it takes courage to endure such attacks and remain on foot and at work. The patient who does as he should do, will go to bed, call his physician — and get well in half the time. Bear in mind that laryngitis may be a very dangerous condition. Better attend to it early.

HUMANE EDUCATION

What is the object of humane education? To awaken and foster, above all in the heart of the child, the principles of justice and compassion toward all sentient life. At first particularly toward the world of animal life. And is this primarily for the sake of the animal? No. Primarily for the sake of the child. It is the reaction upon the character of the child of the principles of justice and compassion finding expression in conduct and life that is the fundamental thing in humane education. The child trained to treat the lowly creatures about him as he would like to be treated, fairly, kindly, grows into a manhood governed in its relation to his fellows in accordance with these same high ideals. It cannot be said too often that whatever humane societies have done for animals they have done vastly more for men, women and children by awakening in the soul the spirit of a great and noble humanity. Mercy is always twice blessed. It blesses him who gives and him who takes.

The Widow's Only Son

In nearly all our Sunday School publications of music will be found a piece entitled "A Light in the Window for Thee." This beautiful hymn was written from the history of "The Widow's Only Son." We think this story will bear re-reading, containing as it does, many beautiful sentiments:

"Mother, I will be everything to you that I can be; I promise you that."

The boy lifted his head. A look of high resolve made the young brow manlike in expression. Not yet had ten summers deepened the gold on those fair locks. The earnest blue eyes looked fondly in the face that bent over him. There was a world of love in his soul—a love that was not only lip-deep, but was proved by acts of self-denial.

They were poor — that mother and son—oh, how poor they were! You could almost see how poverty had drifted over everything about them—drifted whitely over the pine chairs and tables—drifted over the humble quilt that had grown so faded—drifted over their clothes and through them, till patch after patch was placed on the sad havoc that pitiless, drifting want had made.

But in holy heart-love they were richer than the Rothchilds; yet, out of their bank in Heaven—that bank directors here might sneer at — they drew every day, every hour, uncounted treasure.

"Mother, I will be everything to you that I can be; I promise you that."

The words are beautiful enough to be repeated. Henry Locke smiled, because as he spoke there came tears to his mother's eyes. He had that morning been promised a place in a little country store, five miles from the cot —, or rather cabin where they lived. It was but a small pittance; but of late mother had grown so feeble that she could scarcely do the little that order and neatness called for at her hands.

One dollar a week. It was a very little sum, but better, much better, than nothing. Besides, Henry was to have his meals with his employer, and could, if he chose, sleep there. But he did not choose. For a glad smile from mother; for a pressure of that feeble hand; for the tender Christian he was bravely willing, after his day's words that came from the pale lips, work, to walk the five miles, dark and tedious though the way was. Often he came bringing some little delicacy that he had earned, and which was sweet to the invalid because he brought it.

One night the sky was curtained with clouds. The widow looked from her little window facing the hilly road along which the hay-wagons went on their way to the city, and said, as she saw the twilight deepening earlier than its wont, "He will not come to-night."

No, he surely would not come that night. The wind blew fiercely, and sent the branches of the old apple tree rattling against the clapboards, and threw the rain, as with a spite, over the little windows, sheeting them, and making dreary music. So the widow, quite confident that Henry would not venture out in that storm, read her Bible till her heart kindled with the holy words, and putting out her little light, went to her rest.

She knew not how long she had slept when a voice awakened her. The sweet voice so dear to her was crying, "Mother! Mother!" At first she thought it a dream, but listening intently she heard, lending with the wail of the wind, that cry, and a sound against the latch greeted her. Instantly rising, she groped for a light unfastened the door, and, behold, there stood Henry, a piteous sight indeed, covered with mire, literally, from head to foot. His face was wet, but the honest, happy smile was by no means abated.

"My boy, how could you come on such a night!" exclaimed the widow.

"Why, mother, storm couldn't keep me from you," was his hearty response. "I've had the greatest time, though, you ever did see—lost my way, got into a creek, and it must be midnight; but I meant to come, for S——gave me a trifle over tonight, and I know how much you needed it."

"My dear boy!" sprang from the mother's full heart, with a tear or two that trickled down her pale cheek.

"I wonder I hadn't thought before," she said musingly. "After this, I'll put a light in the window. To be sure, it won't show far; but when you get to the top of the hill it will be pleasant to see it, and know that I am watching for you."

For three years the lamp was placed in the little window every night. People often remarked about it; and "as bright as Mother Locke's little window," became a favorite saying.

At the end of that time young Henry was offered a good chance on board a whaling vessel, and he resolved to accept it. None new what a struggle it cost him to part from his beloved mother. But he knew that the time had come when he must go forth into the world to do battle for himself and for her; and a sailor's life was his coveted calling.

"It seems to me, Henry," said the mother, when, with trembling lips, she parted from him, "as if I must still put the light in the little window. I shall think sometimes I hear the sound of your footsteps, the click of the latch, and your pleasant voice. O Henry, Henry, if I could but light you over the stormy waters!"

"Mother, God will do that," said Henry, pointing to the glowing heaven. "God will light me through storm and through calm; but, mother, I will think every night that the lamp is in the window; that you sit near it; that somebody blesses you for the guiding ray, and above all, that you are praying for me."

The long voyage was almost ended, but another voyage was to end before that. The widow Locke was taken ill. Yet, with unfailing regularity, with feeble step and tremulous hand, nightly the dear woman trimmed the little lamp and placed it in the widow. Still, when the bended form could no longer totter about the cottage, when she lay helpless up on her bed, and the neighbors came to care for her, she would say, "Put the little lamp in the window, my Henry will be thinking of it."

Night after night, and even until her eyes grew dim, she would watch the radiance of the flickering light, only saying sometimes, "Shall I live to hear his footsteps? Will that feeble flame still burn when life's light has gone out?"

"Pray with me," she muttered, "that I may see him before I die. Oh, for that most precious boon."

In vain was all prayer. The pulses, like ebbing drops, fell fainter and fewer, until one calm night in summer she lay quietly, a smile upon her lips, her eyes closed, her hands folded.

"I have longed to see him," she said, "I have prayed earnestly; but I have given it all up now. I shall not meet him in this world."

"Have you put the light in the windows?" she asked suddenly, earnestly a few moments after. "It is growing dark."

But it was not the light that was growing dark.

Her hands grew cold. Over her countenance came that mysterious shadow that falls but once on any mortal face.

"O my boy; my boy!" she whispered, "tell him"—they bent over to catch the falling words—"tell him I will put the light in the windows of Heaven to guide his footsteps there."

The thrilling sentence was hardly spoken, when the shadow dropped from the suffering face, and a smile took its place.

A funeral followed; humble hearts attended the body of one who was loved for her sincere goodness, all through the hamlet; and on the hillside, in a little graveyard she was buried.

Not many days after a great ship came into the port of a busy city. Among all those who stepped from her decks, none were more hopeful, more joyous than young Henry Locke. He had passed through the ordeal of a sea life, so far, unscathed. He had kept himself as spotless as if at every nightfall his feet had been turned toward the door of his mother's cottage. How his heart bounded as he thought of her. Strangely enough, he never dreamed she might be dead. Oh, no! he only thought of the pleasant light in the window that her hands had trimmed for him.

Beautiful was the day on which he traveled again the long accustomed road. How pleasant now to go home with sufficient to provide for the comfort of that dear mother! She would never, never want again. He would take her to a better home, and give her the luxuries he had once longed to see in her possession. That old arm-chair—she should have a new one, easy in motion, elegant in material. The faded shawl, that he had seen folded and refolded year after year; the old-fashioned bonnet — yes, everything should be replaced with newer and better. The flowers on the road all smiled as he looked towards them; the very kine seemed to him turning their meek eyes at the sound of strange footsteps, to know that his heart was glad with love and anticipation. But yonder comes one who trudges on, laggingly—a farmer in heavy boots and frock, his whip in his hand. He cheers the lazy oxen, but suddenly stops amazed.

"I see you know me," said the young sailor, smiling. "Well, Farmer Brown, how is—"

"Know ye! why, how tall ye are! So"— his eye drops, his mouth trembles—"so ye've got home?"

"Your—mother"—he says it in that slow, hesitating way that tells ill tidings before they are told in words.

"Yes—is she well? Is she expecting me. Of course she is; we're late by a month.

"Your mother, Henry, well—the old lady." He plays with his whip, or, rather, strikes it hard in the dusty road. How can he crush that happy heart!

"There, you need not speak!" cried the young man, in a voice of sudden anguish, and he turned almost staggering, from the farmer's side, and buried his face in his hands.

"Henry, my poor lad, your mother is—"

"Don't! don't!" cried the other, showing now a face from which all color had fled. "Oh, my mother! my mother! she is gone—and I am coming home so happy!"

For some moments he sobbed as in agony. How dreary the world had grown! The flowers had lost fragrance, the sun warmth; his heart seemed dead.

"Henry, she left a message for you," said the farmer, wiping his eyes with the sleeve of his old frock.

"A message for me?" It seemed as if the white lips could hardly speak.

"Yes; says she—so my dame told me, and so the minister said—"Tell Henry I will put a light in the window of Heaven to guide his footsteps there."

"Did she, oh, did she say that? God bless your telling me! All my long voyage I have thought of the light in her little window. I have seemed to see it streaming along—along down to the foot of the hill, till it grew brighter and brighter as I drew nearer. A light in the window of Heaven! Yes, mother, I will still think you are waiting for me. I could not see you in these long years but I knew the light was burning. I cannot see you now, but I know the light is burning. I will come, mother."

Slowly and reverently he went to the hillside graveyard, and there he sank to the ground, bursting out in tears. But not there he thought her. She was in her glorious home.

Once more he knelt in the little room where he had left her. Nothing was removed, but, oh, how much was wanting! There on the window sill stood the little lamp—that brought the tears afresh. But he took his mother's well-worn Bible, and, kneeling by the bedside, as if she could hear him, he sought her Saviour, and consecrated himself to a life and work of righteousness. From that cottage he went out into the world carrying his grief as a sacred memorial, but seeing always, wherever his work led him, his waiting mother and the lamp in the window of Heaven.

(Extracts from a Brockville Dairy of the Nineties.)

Snow storm commenced at 6.30 a.m. with a heavy east wind. Very heavy snow with a high wind all morning. Six inches deep. No business to-day. Some cutters out and running well with plenty of snow for them. Evening cleared off a little but still storming. A good many out on the street. Piles of snow on the sides of the streets. Every appearance of mid-winter. Cow and calf doing well.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

by Charles E. Dunn

Jesus Rebukes Self-Seeking
Lesson for April 23rd. Mark 9:30-50.
Golden Text: Romans 13:10.

All of us crave popularity. It is human to seek recognition. But it is foolish to scramble for it. The disciples, in their quarrel as to who was the greatest, and therefore entitled to the honors of rank and precedence, form a sorry picture.

Rev. Chas. E. Dunn

Jesus, with characteristic directness, at once plunged to the root of the whole issue. Greatness, He insisted, is not the fruit of the aggressive seizure of power, but of its renunciation. "If any one wishes to be first, he must be last of all and servant of all." This means that the humble, obscure workman behind the scenes, an unheralded hero never in the limelight, never responding to a curtain call with its ringing applause, may be, by God's standard, first in value and esteem. He it is who, when the kingdom of heaven is established, will be called from his inconspicuous position to a post of leadership.

Then the Master gave a concrete demonstration of this principle. Taking a little child, He placed him in their midst, embraced him, and then uttered those memorable words, "Whoever for my sake receives one such young child as this, receives me." That child, with its trustful eyes so full of wonder, its innocence, its beauty, its simple faith, unspoiled by the sordid, selfish brutalities of our blighted world, both rebuked the grasping disciples, and gave them a needed lesson.

Was Jesus mistaken in His glorification of the child? No indeed. Havelock Ellis maintains that the average man of genius, both in physique and temperament, is child-like. "The progress of our race," he says "has been a progress in youthfulness."

One other saying of the Master in this lesson deserves careful study. It is the declaration, "He who is not against us is for us." How large-hearted! How generous! How we find the secret of the Master's superb tolerance and magnaminity.

4-H CLUB NEWS

4-H Raises Negro Health

Four-H training is doing things for negro boys and girls all over the south. In Virginia, for instance, they are giving much attention to health. Many persons unacquainted with the negro, but holding the popular impression that he is too hardy to need to think about his health should understand that the race is subject to the same defects as the whites. Naturally they have acquired the same defects, as they have more or less adopted the habits of the whites which predispose them to the ills prevalent among them.

Miss Lizzie Jenkins, district agent for home demonstration work in the state mentioned, reports that 1,314 colored boys and girls enrolled in 4-H health programs improved their general health, corrected bad posture and brought their weight up or down to normality.

Members of a local club in Hanover county decided to go in strong for the health work. Last February at the start of the program each member was given an examination and learned their weak and strong points. Bad posture was the most common and serious fault. There were 49 among the 54 members of the club who kept health records. At the end of the year they showed 31 improved their posture, 17 their weight, 15 had teeth cleaned or filled, and 47 brushed their teeth daily.

Club work among colored children in the United States is carried on under the supervision of 160 men agents and 120 women agents. There are about 50,000 members in the clubs, which is only a small percentage o the number of eligible age.

Electricity!

No tale of wonders and enchantments has ever been written that excelled the actual reality which is today at mankind's fingertips in the wonders and magic of electricity. Step by step the intelligence of man leads him on through the ages of civilization until to-day our most common utility is in fact far beyond the mere comprehension of even the dreams of our forefathers. The Hydro System brings all of this to the citizens of Winchester. There is no new development or equipment in the fields that is not available to the life and business of local citizens. The drudgery can be taken out of housework if you let electric energy be the slave.
Possibly your home needs re-wiring or the present wiring a little overhauling. If so let us know about it. We are here to see that you get the best possible results from Hydro Light and Power.

"A Prosperity Program at Depression Prices," Friday, May 5th

Bill Braybrook, a well-known hockey player of Cornwall, died at Bala, Ont., last week in his 25th year.

Service will be held in St. Peter's Church, South Mountain, next Sunday afternoon at 2.30 p.m.

Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba were visited by a big snow storm last week. It was good for the farmers, but hard on Easter festivities.

The steamer Rapids Queen, in use at Morrisburg as a floating hotel, is to be opened for the season on Thursday next. All departments are to be operated this year by the Sin-Mac Line.

Fred C. Beaupre, principal of the Iroquois High School who has been recuperating since March 14, at his home, after some weeks in the General hospital, Brockville, contemplates resuming his work on the staff when the Easter vacation is over.

The seventh annual meeting of the Dundas-Grenville Presbyterial will be held at Brinston on Wednesday, May 3rd. There will be three sessions:—9.30 a.m., 2 p.m. and 7.30 p.m The special speakers are Miss Alguire, Mrs. Faulds and Mrs. Seaton.

WILL BUILD PRESCOTT ROAD

Mr. Harvey, Kingston, who built the splendid pavement through here was in town yesterday with his engineer, Mr. Dwyer. Mr. Harvey has the contract to build a mile of cement pavement through Prescott, and was here to see about the removal of some of his plant he has stored here. If he makes as good a job of the Prescott highway as he did of the one through Winchester they will have little to find fault with.

WILL HAVE SUMMER HOME

Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Keyes are both fond of gardening, both love flowers, and the evening and morning exercise that the home garden affords. They have one of the finest gardens in this section just north of the residence of Mr. W. J. Cass, on Centre Street, and in order to give it proper attention Mr. Keyes is having a summer home placed there, with wide verandahs, and there they will reside during the summer months and care for the flowers, the vegetables and the fruits that will be grown there. Mr. Keyes is an expert horticulturist, and last year had a flower and vegetable garden that would make a picture for a magazine. They will no doubt enjoy their new home for the summer months, and if you want to see T. O. at his best, in overalls, shirt open at neck, broad brimmed straw hat, just visit his summer home some evening during the summer months.
