Jail Breaker Arrested Here Sentenced to Three Months

Last October Isadore Hutt, of Ottawa, who had been arrested on the request of Ottawa authorities and placed behind the bars in Winchester made his escape and evaded the police until Sunday last when he was picked up in Chesterville by Constable Garnet McLean and handed over to Provincial Officer Rose of Morrisburg. Monday he appeared before Magistrate McCormick in Winchester and was given three months in the United Counties' jail at Cornwall. Constable McLean was tipped off that Hutt was likely to appear in Chesterville over the week end and Sunday evening discovered him as he was attempting to make his getaway from a house in the west end of the village.

After Hutt escaped from the Winchester lock-up it is said he appropriated a car belonging to a local man and made his getaway in it, and the car is now thought to be in a garage at Lachine where it is held for storage charges.

Bankers and Valley Victors Supper-Time League Play-Offs

Monday night before a crowd of from 350 to 400 spectators, Deb's Beaver's managed to gain a 1-0 decision over Dunbar after a goalless hour of hockey in which Hubert Barkley, in the Dunbar nets, played a sensational game. Jim McCloskey, after four minutes of overtime caught Dunbar with a one-man defence, skated in on top of Barkley and scored the only goal of the contest.

The line-up:

Beavers—goal, Deb. Hummel; def., Len Foley and H. Kendrick; centre, H. McLean; l w, J. Farrell; r w, J. McCloskey; spares, H. Droppo, J. Foley, B. Colquhoun.

Dunbar—goal, H. Barkley; def., H. Marcellus, Irwin Merkley; centre, M. Hollister; lw, R. Barkley; rw, E. Barkley; spares, P. Barkley, Jim Brooks, John Brooks, B. Servage, L. Whitteker, H. Alguire, F. Young.

Referees—'Shy" Harper and "Dob" Plantz.

In the second game, Nation Valley beat the lighter Limerick team 3 to 0. Seven minutes after the start, Ab Munro went in close to score. Midway through the game Ken Merkley went from end to end to shove the puck past Heveran. A few minutes later Merkley again rushed, passed to Ed Shay who score goal No. 3.

The ice was very soft and the hockey was below par—even for the supper-time league.

The line-up:

Nation Valley—goal, J. Bolton; def., Jim Munro, Ken Merkley; centre, Ab Munro; lw, Stan Shay; rw, Ed Shay; spares, Ralph Gray, H. Barkley, H. Merkley, Ed Munro, D. Munro.

Limerick—goal, J. Heveran; def., John Heveran, R. Cass; centre, D. McLeod; lw, "Zip" Barkley; rw, E. Perrault; spares, V. Heveran, B. Servage, T. Curran.

Referee—Bus Hummel.

A very peculiar situation has developed in which Deb. Hummel says that his Beavers can trim Nation Valley; Nation Valley say they know they can beat the Beavers. See for yourselves on Friday evening at 8.15 at the Arena. Continuing this dilemma both Nation Valley and the Beavers think they can overcome the Bankers. The Bankers only say they have never been beaten by a local team and it is too late to start now. This game will be next Tuesday evening at 8.15. Admission to games 15c and 5c.

Fined for Abusive Language

In police court in Winchester Monday Donald McCrimmon, of Cornwall, was fined ten dollars and costs for using abusive language to Constable Garnet McLean, while attending the last Cornwall-Chesterville hockey match here. McLean undertook to give McCrimmon some friendly advice as to his conduct, which the latter resented, and becoming abusive was given an opportunity to explain matters to the magistrate with the above result.

Hydro Gets Handsome Credit

Chesterville was among the two hundred municipalities referred to by the Minister recently which would receive credits on their 1932 consumption of power and as a consequence a cheque of $1150.88 has been received by the local Hydro office, which will doubtless mean that some time before the end of the year users will be given a rebate equal to about the average of their bi-monthly bill.

Community Hall Becoming A Reality for Chesterville

For a number of years it has been the desire of many citizens of Chesterville to have a community hall available for the many uses to which such a hall lends itself. Yesterday at the regular meeting of the Women's Institute a tentative proposition was laid before the members and received the unanimous approval of those present.

While the proposition has not yet assumed concrete form, on the face of it, it appears to be the best chance Chesterville will ever have to attain the objective of such a community enterprise without adding a cent of taxation to any ratepayer. An enactment stands on the Provincial statutes whereby the province will assume a certain stated proportion of the cost of the provision of such halls. The proportion which the province would pay in the case of Chesterville is now ascertained taking into consideration a valuation placed on the present Town Hall. Through the interest of Hon. G. H. Challies, Provincial Secretary, for everything of welfare to the communities of Dundas county, plans and specifications have been placed at the disposal of those working on the proposition, whereby the present Town Hall can be remodelled and with additions made into a very fine Community Hall. To be sure, there are many details to be worked out before the final stages are reached.

One of the first considerations to receive attention is the source from which revenue is to come to take care of the community's share of the cost. It is estimated that around $3,000 would be required for the work, out of which would come the proportion paid by the government, leaving in the neighbourhood of $1800 to be provided by the community. To provide five per cent interest on that amount and sufficient principal to wipe off the debt in ten years a sum of approximately $260 annually would have to be assured. At the present time the Hydro Commission of the village, which is the village council, pays $200 yearly rent for the premises now occupied, and the Women's Institute pays $100 rental for the Library Hall, which more than totals the required amount, not taking into consideration any revenue derived from the use of the hall for travelling shows, dances and other entertainment which cannot be counted community endeavour.

The use of the hall is free under the conditions of the government grant to all the churches of the community for meetings and entertainments of all kinds; to the Women's Institute (which will undertake to provide an amount yearly equivalent to the rental now paid for the Library Hall), the Public Library must be housed in the building, and the schools are entitled to free use of it for their entertainments.

Another aspect of the case is that under the relief plans of the present year, it will provide considerable work for unskilled labour which will very materially help to carry relief costs which are still mounting.

Fire Chief Receives Donation

This week Fire Chief Alf. Morris was very agreeably surprised when he received a cheque for twenty dollars as recognition of the services rendered the Bank of Montreal when the fire in their premises last week was brought quickly under control with a minimum of loss. An equal division was made among the six members of the brigade.

Daring Robbery Staged In Store at Cornwall

Daring burglars operated in the heart of Cornwall's business district between seven and eight o'clock last night and succeeded in getting away with loot valued at approximately $1,000. City and Provincial Police, as well as police of the entire district, are searching for a light truck which is believed to have been used by the thieves.

The Economy Store, operated by Kane and Kalil, situated less than a half block from the main business corner, was entered by thieves soon after the employees had locked up for the night. Tracks in a yard at the rear of the store indicated that the burglars drove their truck up to the back door of the store, smashed a nearby street light to mask their operations, gained entrance through a window and proceeded to load up with men's and women's garments. The burglary was discovered when Mrs. Kalil visited the store at eight o'clock.

While the thieves operated within, hundreds of persons must have passed the front window of the store without noticing anything amiss. Police patrolling Pitt street were unaware that a burglary had taken place until notified by owners of the store.

Chesterville Is Disqualified In Ottawa District Playdowns

Disqualification of Chesterville and possibility of further action by the Ottawa and District Association caused a mild sensation in district hockey circles over the week end. The action against last year's Central Ottawa Valley League champions after they had eliminated Russell and earned the right to meet Maxville, was taken at a meeting of the Central Ottawa League held in Finch on Saturday, attended by delegates of all clubs and presided over by Dr. J. G. McLeod.

Charges made by the Russell team of unethical dealings by the Chesterville Club with regard to the transfer of Clifford Olsen from Chesterville to Spencerville last year was the direct cause of the disqualification according to Dr. McLeod, president of the Central Ottawa League. A meeting had been called for Saturday afternoon and after the charges had been thoroughly probed, a vote of the delegates resulted in disqualification of the Chesterville team.

Immediate steps were taken by Chesterville Club officials to exercise their prerogative and appeal the league's decision to the district body. Although Thomas Holly, president of the Ottawa and District Association, had not received the Central Ottawa's report, he was of the opinion that the district body would sustain its action in disqualifying the club.

According to Dr. McLeod the charges involved the payment of money by Spencerville to Chesterville at the time of Olsen's transfer to the former club. This occurred last year. Dr .McLeod stated that the dispute had not been finally settled, but that Chesterville stands disqualified for the present from participation in the Central Ottawa finals.

WomanElderElected to Session of Chesterville United Church

Taking advantage of the powers given congregations at the last General Council of the United Church in Canada to elect women to the Sessions of churches, Chesterville United at their regular annual congregational meeting Tuesday evening elected Mrs. Charles Graham as the first lady to be added to the Session of the local church. At the same time Mr. Samuel Peake was also elected a member of the Session.

Reports from the various branches of the church's work showed all to be in a healthy state. Following the business meeting refreshments were served by the ladies of the congregation.

EYESTRAIN HEADACHES

IS THIS YOU?

Straining at fine work, driving your eyes to hard labour when they have already had a full day's activity? A sticth at the wrong time will cost you more than nine, for strained eyes reap an early harvest of headaches and other bodily ills—and they pave the way for further weakening and more strain.

Healthy eyes make sewing a pleasure, and ensure restful, useful evenings in the home. Glasses properly fitted help to keep them healthy.

Morewood United W.M.S. Met for February Study

The regular meeting of the Women's Missionary Auxiliary of Morewood United Church was held at the home of Mrs. G. A. Bogart on Thursday last. Mrs. Orrin Dillabough presided in the absence of the president, whom, we regret to say, is ill.

The devotional leaflet, "The Woman of the Home," was given by Mrs. Allison. Items from the study book were read by Mrs. G. Rorison, Miss Laura Walker and Mrs. G. H. Smith.

Miss Irene Jervis has accepted the position of Baby Band secretary.

Among the various items of business discussed was a W. M. S party to be held in March.

After the closing prayer a social half hour was spent.

Washington's Birthday Feted By Local Women's Institute

There was a very large attendance at the meeting of the Women's Institute yesterday afternoon. A bright and interesting programme was enjoyed.

Mrs. Geo. Merkley sang a very lovely solo, Miss Harrison gave a reading, "An Italian's Version of 'the Cherry Tree and George Washington'." A round debate caused a great deal of merriment. Mrs. L. Marcellus, affirmative, and Mrs. P. S .Boyd, negative, as captains, chose as the subject to be debated: "Resolved, that the Horse has been of more good to Mankind than the Automobile." The judges, Mrs. R. E. Newman, Mrs. G. C. Lacey and Mrs. A. Carruthers, gave their decision in favour of the affirmative.

The tea table was in charge of Mrs. C. W. Casselman and Mrs. W. A. Durant, and was prettily decorated with cherry trees and hatchets in honour of the anniversary of George Washington's birth.

The committee who served very dainty refreshments was: Mrs. W. O. Dixon, Mrs. H. J. Fulton, Mrs. Dr. Hutt, Miss Harrison, and Mrs. Harold Durant.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture

Ontario Cheese Production.

"Contrary to the general impression," said George H. Barr, director of the Dairy Branch, "the production of cheese in Ontario is increasing.

"Figures for the year 1932 show the production of cheese in this Province as approximately 80,000,000 pounds in 1931. An increase of some 5,000,000 pounds, or about seven per cent, is worthy of attention, particularly when we know that the increase in quality is more than equal to the increase in volume."

Healthy Pigs.

In an address at the outset of the Swine Demonstration Train, Dr. Lionel Stevenson, provincial zoologist, emphasized the importance of health in growing pigs. Healthy pigs, if properly fed ,should be ready for market at from six to seven months of age. Pigs that did not reach market weight at this age were either improperly fed or were not healthy. Internal parasites were one of the common causes of unthrifty hogs, and the farmer should always be on the lookout for possible infection from internal parasites. Sanitation and cleanliness were essential in the hog industry. Common treatments were recommended which may be secured by writing the provincial zoologist, Dr. Lionel Stevenson, Ontario Veterinary College, Guelph, Ont.

Soy Beans in Kent.

The winner of the soy bean championship, Mr. G. G. Finlay, at the recent International Grain and Hay Show at Chicago, began to grow soy beans as an all-round stock food when the European corn borer invaded the fields of Kent County in 1923.

Mr. Finlay at that time decided to adopt the O. A.C. 211 registered variety of soy bean seed. He sowed ten acres in 1924 and was rewarded with eleven large loads of matured beans, which he found to be relished by the cattle, hogs, sheep and chickens carried on his farm. The following year, the O. A. C. became interested in his project and, noting his success, devoted their extension educational resources toward the rapid expansion of soy bean growing in Ontario.

He obtained a splendid yield of threshed beans on a seven and a half acre field that in 1930 was in alfalfa. After harvesting two cuttings of alfalfa hay, the third cutting was threshed for seed. The field was then fall ploughed and seeded to beans in late May, 1931. When the beans were harvested they yielded 32 bushels to the acre.

By securing registered foundation soy bean seed, by annual field inspection and by carefully selecting his seed each year, Mr. Finlay has raised his seed to a standard of perfection that enabled him to win the championship in the continental competition of the Chicago show.

Ontario Apples Only.

"As a further indication of the growing demand for graded Ontario-grown apples, J. B .Fairbairn Deputy Minister of Agriculture, has been advised that still another prominent Toronto fruit distributor will, in the future, handle graded apples exclusively.

An inspection of this fruit house intimated to Mr. Fairbairn that his organization had adopted this policy because of the fact that it is now easy to procure almost unlimited quantities of carefully graded apples grown in Ontario orchards. Another point mentioned was that the public demand for Ontario apples is increasing most noticeably.

Time to Improve.

An appeal to farmers to improve their farms and livestock at this time instead of simply marking time was made by E .K. Hampson, past president of the Ontario Experimental Union in a recent address: "The present is not a time for a negative type of farming. No progress can be made by that method. Probably never has there been a finer opportunity for improving herds with pure-bred foundation stock and field crops with pure seed. Labour is more plentiful and cheaper than it has been for years. May not these factors be taken advantage of in making some improvements? Farming in Ontario will be the major industry for many years to come, and we must adopt the long-term vision of it with faith and hope that better times will return."

Fertilizers Sold in Canada.

Of the almost innunumerable brands of fertilizers offered to the public in the earlier days of the fertilizer business in Canada there were hundreds of brands which contained so little plant food that they were practically worthless for the purpose for which they were purchased. This condition led to the inclusion of a clause in the Fertilizers Act, 1922, requiring that every fertilizer sold in Canada contain not less than 12 per cent of available plant food as nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash singly and combined. In 1928 this minimum was raised to 14 per cent, which is the requirement still in effect. During the first year of operation of the 14 per cent total plant food requirement hundreds of brands of so-called fertilizers were put out of the market.

This provision of the Act established a reasonable basis of minimum plant food content and undoubtedly has meant a material saving to farmers in the purchase of fertilizer and prevented many a disappointment in crop returns which would have resulted from the use of inferior and fraudulent materials.

Grading and Packaging Result in Better Price

"Much has to be accomplished in the way of grading and packing before the Ontario farmer can expect prices for his product equal to the 'laid down' value of similar imported products."

New Zealand farmers, or producers on the Pacific Coast, because of their distant markets, perils of transportation, and competition of home-grown products on those markets, are forced to pay more attention to grading, and attractive packing.

Farmers of this Province, however, in most lines have not been forced to do this, except in those products where there is an exportable surplus. Therefore, until the same attention in packaging and grading is given farm products for domestic consumption, it will be extremely difficult to organize home markets.

Current Reports.

Fourteen young sows were sold from the Swine Demonstration Train at Shelburne in Dufferin County.

Many farmers in Halton County are endeavouring to secure men at this season of the year with the idea of employing them through the summer months if satisfied.

More interest is being shown in Peel County in horses, owing to the low prices of farm products, and bidding at auction sales on horses is reported brisk.

Eggs have been selling on the Hagersville market in Haldimand County at 11c, 13c and 15c according to grade. Egg dealers report difficulty in disposing of the grade "extra" as there is apparently a "cheap" complex in the mind of the consumer, causing him to buy a cheaper product.

Lincoln County reports that vegetable growers are getting their early cash crops started in greenhouses and there would appear to be at least the usual acreage of cabbage, lettuce and early tomatoes grown.

Livestock in Middlesex are in better than average condition, most feeders having ample feed to carry them through the winter.

There is increased interest manifested in the eradication of tuberculosis in Norfolk County judging by the number of enquiries and new entries under the accredited herd system.

In Wentworth there is a brisk demand for good work horses on farms at present and they are commanding an excellent price, first-class young horses selling from $100 to $175 each. Custom hatcheries look for an increased business in chicks for 1933.

There has been a movement in pure bred live stock in Peterborough County, nine good young bulls having been purchased by farmers at prices around $50 each.

Live stock generally is thinner in Glengarry than usual to due to scarcity of feeds as most farmers have been feeding carefully.

In order to give service to the farmers of Renfrew County, custom seed-cleaning prices at the Renfrew plant are only about half what they were last year.

Sun Life Assurance Company Manifests Much Optimism

In a year when business statements are, on the whole, far from cheering the published experience of life insurance makes heartening reading.

While other investments have too often proved disappointing, every policy held in our life insurance companies is still worth one hundred cents on the dollar, with substantial additions in accumulating dividends.

The steady flow of insurance funds into productive industry is one of the greatest mainstays of business today. But few realize the extent of this financial support in the case of indiviuals. Payments to policyholders and their dependents during the year, for instance, by the Sun Life of Canada, whose statement appears in another colmun, climbed to over $108,000,000. A portion of this represents money that the assured could obtain only on the value of their policies to meet the special exigencies of a distressing period.

These and other conditions during the past three or four years have subjected life insurance companies to a most exacting test. The war and the influenza epidemic, by abnormally increasing mortalities, produced a situation which human foresight could scarcely provide. The financial catastrophe by which they were so closely followed created conditions that only the strongest institutions could withstand.

Yet, during the three years in question, the business of the Sun Life Company increased by nearly five hundred million dollars and its assets by forty-three million dollars. The number of its policyholders increased during that period by over two hundred thousand and now amounts to nearly a million. This resiliency under abnormal strain is both amazing and reassuring to the man in the street.

One explanation of the ability of an insurance company to meet all its obligations under such trying conditions is that its obligations are so scientifically estimated that it is able to provide for all expenditures out of ordinary revenue. This renders it unnecessary to dispose of assets during a period of depressed prices, and make the fluctuation of security prices a matter of no special concern.

The report of the Sun Life refers to the fact that the total of its assurances in force—nearly three billion dollars—will be payable during the present generation. If to this huge sum be added the amount payable during the same period by other insurance companies the wholesome effect upon the economic and social situation in the coming years can be scarcely over-estimated.

The young wife was in tears when she opened the door for her husband. "I've been insulted," she sobbed. "Your mother insulted me."

"My mother!' he exclaimed. "But she is miles away."

"I know, but a letter came for you this morning and I opened it."

He looked stern. "I see, but where does the insult come in?"

"In the postscript," she answered, "it said: 'Dear Alice, don't forget to give this letter to George."

Former Communist Leader Committed for Prison Riots

Kingston, Ont., February 20th.—Charges that Tim Buck threatened to kill guards, gave the riot signal by pulling a power switch and in other ways led Portsmouth Penitentiary convicts in their revolt last October 17th, were heard to-day at the former Communist party leader's preliminary hearing on charges of rioting and damaging prison property.

Buck was sent up for trial, the 21st convict to be committed on rioting charges. William McCrea, alleged to have handled an acetylene torch used to release prisoners, and Paul Demers were given hearings with Buck today.

"If they dont grant the terms we ask, we'll kill the screws, (guards)," Guard J. T. Hull quoted Buck as shouting to the rioters. He pulled the switch which stopped work in the factories and gave orders for a supply of water to be stored, other guards testified. "We can live without food," Buck said, according to Guard W. H. Goodwin, "but not without water."'

The Toronto Communist, serving a five-year sentence for belonging to an unlawful association—the Communist party—exhorted the convicts to fight, Goodwin said. Guard Hull said he saw Buck armed with a hammer but other guards testifying could not corroborate this.

Buck was represented to-day by Michael Garber, Montreal. He shuffled into court shackled at the ankles and surrounded by guards. A packed courtroom listened to the evidence against him, Mr. Garber held there was no evidence Buck had damaged property and that he could not be committed on this count.

During a speech to the convicts Buck asked them if they were willing to fight, Guard Goodwin testified. "They said they would," he continued, "and Buck gave orders for barricading of door and getting all the water possible.

"I heard Buck tell the convicts to get some heart," Guard James Henderson related. "I heard him tell them to 'bar the door and bar it tight. The soldiers are coming.' "

The former Communist leader made no statements in his defence.

Could Be Worse.

The argument had been all on Mrs. Brown's side throughout the evening, and Brown was distinctly annoyed.

"You seem to think a cold in the head means nothing to a woman," stormed his wife. "I don't know of anything more annoying!"

Her husband peered over the newspaper he had been try to read.

"No?" he countered, with a rare flash of spirit. "What about lockjaw?"

As the Legislature Was Opened By New Lieutenant-Governor

Toronto, Feb. 16th. 1933.

MARKED by traditional procedure accompanying historical British parliamentary custom, the fourth session of the 18th Ontario Legislature was opened on Wednesday afternoon at Queen's Park by Hon. Dr. Herbert A. Bruce, Lieutenant-Governor, who officiated for the first time since assuming office . Before crowded galleries of smartly clad women, Dr. Bruce, wearing Windsor uniform, ascended the dais were he read the Speech from the Throne setting the session in motion.

Dr. Bruce was accompanied to the Parliament Buildings from Government House by Col. H. M. Hilchie, newly-appointed aide, who succeeds Col. Alex. Fraser, being met near Queen's Park by the travelling escort of Royal Canadian Dragoons. As His Honour neared Parliament Buildings a battery of four guns fired the viceregal salute of fifteen guns, while the footguard from the Royal Canadian Regiment was inspected in front of the Parliament Buildings. Dr. and Mrs. Bruce were escorted to the Chamber by Premier George S. Henry. Following the official ceremony, the guests were entertained at tea by Hon. Col. and Mrs. T. Ashmore Kidd in the Speaker's apartment while the state dinner was held in the evening by Dr. Bruce at Government House.

New school legislation was forecast in the Speech from the Throne which will mean considerable saving to rural townships who find themselves in financial difficulties. This legislation proposed a reduction in the amounts which townships, under certain assessment conditions, are obliged to pay to school sections for teaching purposes. Under the present law, there is a provision stipulating that where the average school section assessment in a township is $100,000, the township shall pay to every school board concerned the amount of $600 for each principal teacher and $450 for each assistant teacher. The new legislation will cut the $600 payment to $450 and the $450 to $337.50, or a 25 per cent reduction.

Another important forecast is in connection with interest rates, the Speech declaring: "Circumstances are directing public and expert attention to the study and consideration of the prevailing rates of interest, as well as the importance of their relation to the economic and domestic life of the community." Premier Henry indicated that there is no intention of reducing interest rates on deposits in the Ontario Government Saving Offices, but that the government is ready to follow any lead that the Dominion authorities may lay down in connection with interest rates. At the recent inter-provincial conference, interest restes were discussed, but the provinces indicated that any lead in this connection should come from the Dominion Parliament.

The Speech paid tribute to the conscientious services of Hon. W. D. Ross, former lieutenant-governor and Right Hon. Sir William Mulock, as administrator, while the inter-provincial conference was referred to in connection with existing duplications of public services and instances of overlapping legislation. Progress was made towards an understanding from which definite resutls may be expected.

An agreement, the Speech continued has been reached between Federal and Provincial authorities concerning the development of the water powers of the international section of the St. Lawrence development. Upon ratification of the seaway treaty between the United States and Canada, the provincial house will be afforded an opportunity of pronouncing upon the proposed development. One of the outstanding achievements of the province during the past year was the completion of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway to James Bay, the line opening fresh avenues for the progress of Ontario with a wide range of attractive possibilities. The new terminus at Moosonee is destined to become an important distributing centre.

In connection with Northern Ontario, His Honour pointed out the importance of cheap and abundant electric power, which had prompted the purchase of the Abitibi Canyon Power project by means of which industry and mining in the north will be placed in an exceptionally favourable position.

Reference was made to the Budget Committee, appointed by Premier Henry, which is to give close scrutiny to expenditures while it is expected that the economies recommended by the committee, in addition to the retrenchment effected during the past fiscal year, will improve materially the financial outlook of the province.

Agriculture, the Speech pointed out, had its financial position further aggravated through Great Britain going off the gold standard. The prospect of an early return to better conditions is improved by the outcome of the Imperial Economic Conference and by the energetic work of the Marketing Board coupled with the plans for an intensive drive for British and Canadian markets. The Government anticipates further results from a definite effort to stimulate the consumption of Ontario's products by the people of the province under the Department of Agriculture.

The Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission during the past year met all its financial obligations and further increased its reserves which now amount to $62,500,000, while gold mining has placed Ontario in an enviable position and helped the province to sustain the credit of the Dominion. Last year, provincial subsidies in County and Township roads amounted to $5,547,739, and on King's Highways there was $7,705,649 expended for construction and maintenance. By the establishment of a plant for the development of radium products at the University of Toronto one of the important recommendations of the Cancer Commission has been brought into force and the distribution of radium emanations commenced.

Reference was also made to the redistribution bill which is to be handled this session providing for a reduction of the size of the House probably to 87 seats. Relief is also to be provided for mortgagors, especially home owners.

"I invite your earnest attention to the public business, and trust that your labours will advance the welfare of all classes and improve the conditions of the people," concluded Dr. Bruce.

Glengarry Dogs Have Rabies County Under Quarantine

Glengarry and Prescott counties have been placed under quarantine, under the Animal Contagious Disease Act, following an outbreak of rabies in the district, and there is some possibility that the restriction may be extended to cover at least a portion of Stormont County ,if the epidemic is not checked. Vaudreuil and Soulanges counties, in Quebec, are also under quarantine.

The quarantine was ordered by H. Barton, Deputy Minister of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, following discovery that rabies was prevalent among dogs in the northern portion of Glengarry County. Surveys since, have revealed the dogs in other portions of the district are affected.

Since the quarantine went into effect only one case has been reported to the authorities in which a human being has been bitten by a suspected dog. A 15-year-old Glen Walter boy is under observation at a Cornwall hospital, after having been bitten by a dog last Thursday, and has received serum treatment.

Under the quarantine regulation copies of which have been sent to every resident of the counties affected, dogs running at large may be destroyed forthwith, and the owners are liable to prosecution. A number of suspected dogs have already been killed.

Why Do People Attend Church ?

The Kincardine News "wonders why people go to church." The editor heard the preacher make the striking statement that "there is as much evidence that can be recorded against there being a God as there is in the affirmative" and in casual conversation he asked several who heard the sermon what they thought of it and only one mentioned that he had noticed the above remark, which causes the News to comment: "Do people go to church because of habit? because it is the custom? because it is the respectable thing to do? because of example? because it is something to do in an otherwise long day? or do they go for spiritual refreshment? One thing appears to be the fact—that by the middle of the week a very small percentage of the people who attended church on Sunday remember what the sermon was about. Even if church-goers do not remember the sermon, one is much better off at church than grouching around home and fault-finding with those who are trying to be good.

Wife: "Henry, here you are grouching over a few little bills for my hats, stockings, and what-nots. Do you know I could have married M. T. Head, the telephone magnate—and he is a millionaire."

Henry: "Yes, that explains why he is a millionaire."

Teacher: "Tommy, can you give me an example of a paradox?"

Tommy: "Yes, sir. A man walking a mile, and only moving two feet."

FLYING SAFEST METHOD OF TRAVEL

Aviation authorities quoted figures to show that flying is safer than any other mode of travel.

The Imperial Airways announced that their passenger 'planes had competed 10,000,000 miles of flying when the continental air liner arrived at Croydon on Saturday. They said that in nine years since the service was started they had had only five accidents involving injuries, while 200,000 passengers had been carried on the London-to-Paris service without a single injury.

"Gentleman Jim" Corbett Receives Jeffries' Praise

New York, Feb. 19th.—The career of the prize ring's first master scientist, the fighter who helped most to lift the sport of boxing out of its rowdy bare-knuckle days, had closed to-day with the death of James J. Corbett.

To Jim Jeffries, his foe in two fierce battles in the early years of this century and a friend in later years, Jim Corbett was a "square shooter."

The former world's heavyweight champion paused in his ranch duties to eulogize Gentleman Jim.

"He was a gentleman," said Jeffries, "a square fellow, if there ever was one. Did you ever hear of Corbett doing anyone out of a cent? I never did. Well, he was that way in the ring. Sure, we had our little differences and I beat him a couple of times, but it was all in fun."

World's champion from 1908 to 1905, when he retired, the sturdy Jim Jeffries straightened up from his task of watering a garden of onions, radish and lettuce.

"Jim used to stop and see me every time he came to Southern California," he mused. "He was a great kidder and every time we met he'd say, 'You don't know who I am, do you?'

"I'd say, 'Sure, you're Jim Corbett,' knowing all the time what his reply would be.

"'You're wrong,' Jim always came back. 'I'm Gentleman Jim Corbett.'

"He always got a big kick out of that. He wanted to be known as 'Gentleman Jim' and he was a gentleman in every sense of the word.

"Jim never could figure out how I knocked him out the first time we met. That was at Coney Island in May, 1900. He always asked me how I did it. I'd say it was one of my trade secrets.

"You know, the newspapers never were right about it. They said I knocked him out with a right. In fact, it was my left.

"I've never seen a better boxer. He could make you miss close up as well as at arm's length. Well, he made me look foolish. I kept jabbing with my left and he kept slipping the punches by, turning his head a little bit each time. You know Jim never made you miss far, but just far enough. I got to timing that left and along in the twenty-third round I saw my chance. He turned his head and I hooked the punch a little, putting all my weight behind the blow. It hit him flush on the chin.

"I was going to hit him again, with the right, but I saw his eyes were glassy so I just pushed him over with it instead. He had such fine legs that he was out on his feet. That's what made it hard to knock him down.

At San Francisco two years later I knocked him out in ten rounds, but Jim wasn't in the condition he was for the first fight.

"You know," he concluded, "what's wrong with the fight game today is that it hasn't anyone like Jim."

Judge: "Now, uncle, what is your name?"

Witness: "Ma name, Kunnel, is Washington Calhoun Clay, sah."

Judge: "And can you write your name?"

Witness (hesitating): "Well, Jedge, Ah hab neber had no 'casion ter write mah name. Ah jest dictates it, sah."

Modern Girl: "I will never tie myself down to one man!"

Suitor: "If I organize a syndicate, will you consider our offer?"

Husband: "Good heavens; the paper says my bank has gone smash. I am ruined."

Wife: "Not at all, dear. Your cheque book is safe at home."

Cornwall Factory Burned Estimated Loss $200,000

Cornwall, Feb. 19th.—About 250 persons were thrown out of employment and approximately $200,000 loss was suffered when fire swept No. 1 plant of the Cornwall Pants and Prince Clothing Company here late yesterday afternoon. The factory, a four-storey brick and sheet metal building on Marlborough street south was gutted.

While the exact cause of the fire was still unknown, this afternoon it is believed that a minor explosion took place in the boiler room, shortly after four o'clock yesterday afternoon. At that time, there was no one in the building but passersby stated that they heard a distinct report and saw two windows blown out by the blast. A few minutes later, smoke began to seep through the windows and doors, and persons living near the plant turned in an alarm.

In Rear of Plant.

When city firemen arrived on the scene, it was found the fire was located in the rear half of the plant and had spread through the first and second floors. Burning cloth sent up clouds of dense smoke which made it almost impossible for firemen to locate the heart of the fire. Five streams were poured into the burning building for more than an hour before the flames were brought under control, but, in the meantime fire had spread to almost every section of the first and second floors, doing extensive damage. The third floor, while escaping damage, was flooded with water and the contents, consisting mainly of finished clothing and cloth, were ruined by water and smoke.

The company was one of Cornwall's busiest industries, prior to yesterday's fire, and more than 250 employees were working night and day filling orders for spring delivery. On this account the store rooms were filled with finished goods and materials, which made the loss exceptionally heavy.

The factory is owned by Aaron Horovitz, mayor of Cornwall, who was in New York yesterday in connection with business of the Cornwall and Northern New York International Bridge Company, of which he is vice-president. Notified by telegraph of the fire, Mayor Horovitz returned to Cornwall at once, reaching the city this morning. After making a full survey of the plant, he estimated the loss at from $200,000 to $250,000, and pointed out that an even heavier loss would be suffered because of the inability of the company to make delivery of goods ordered by merchants for spring stock.

Affects Another Plant.

No. 1 plant is the main unit of two factories operated by the company, but, owing to the fact that all material is stocked and cut in No. 1 the fire will result in the closing of No. 2, where the goods were finished into suits, trousers, top-coats and other clothing. The number of workers thrown out of employment will almost double Cornwall's unemployment total.

Mayor Horovitz stated to-day that rebuilding of the factory would begin as soon as insurance companies have adjusted the loss. He hopes to have it in operation within three months.

The factory was said to be the largest "pants" plant in Canada. Several thousands men's suits, top-coats and pairs of truosers were destroyed. In one section, the fire swept along a curtain serving as a dust shield for long rows of suits and coats. So rapidly did the curtain burn that the flames merely destroyed the sleeves of the suits and coats which happened to be exposed.

The plant was equipped with a sprinkler system but there were some doubts to-day whether the apparatus operated efficiently when the fire first broke out, giving the flames considerable headway. The origin of the fire, evidently in the boiler room, may be discovered after the fire department has completed its task of pumping thousands of gallons of water from the basement of the plant.

The Mohawks' scores were credited to Kennie St. Pierre who netted two, and Earl Price, who got the third. Bernard Campbell, of Finch, handled the game in a satisfactory manner.

Crysler Juniors Lose Round to Iroquois 7 to 2

Iroquois, St. Lawrence Junior Hockey League champions, advanced another step in the Ottawa and district junior playdowns at Finch last night when they set back Crysler, Central Ottawa Valley League winners, by a 3-0 score. The victory gave Iroquois the series on the round by 7-2, they having won the opener on their home ice by 4-2 on Monday. Iroquois will now engage Pembroke, Upper Ottawa champions, the first game of the series to be played in Iroquois on Friday night.

Ross Wylie gave the St. Lawrence team their first goal after 15 minutes of play in the first period. Crysler was on the offensive from the start, but was unable to get the puck past Haley, who turned in a good game in the winners' nets. The second session went scoreless and Wylie counted the second goal seven minutes after the start of the third. Three minutes later with five Crysler players caught in the Iroquois zone, Jack Whittle broke away to register the final goal.

The match was played on a soft sheet before some 500 fans and produced plenty of exciting action.

The teams:

Iroquois—Goal, Haley, def., Cook, and Montpetit; centre, Wylie; wings, Whittel and Sisty; subs, Kennedy, Cornell, Strader and Clark.

Crysler—Goal, Levesque; defence, Nicholls and Brydges; centre, Carriere; wings, Regnier and E. St. Denis; subs., M. Ouderkirk, R. St. Denis, E. Ouderkirk and Casselman.

Champion Wood Chopper

Perth Expositor. — Perfect wood chopping has almost become a lost art, as exemplified by the late Mr. Charles Foster, who for years was the champion. But a gentleman at Rokeby has gained great prominence by reason of his wonderful performance with the axe one day last week. Mr. George Greer, four score years and two years old, hale, hearty and full of vim and energy, does not feel his 82 years much of a handicap, and just to prove to his own satisfaction that he was still a young man, he decided to prove it by some work in the bush with his axe. Arriving at his bush he began underbrushing—making a clearing where he intended to begin chopping—and this completed to his satisfaction, he peeled off his coat, spat on his hands and went to work to ascertain how long it would take him to fell the trees and chop, split and pile a cord of wood. And what do you think he did it in? Just exactly three hours. Is there a young farmer in the County can equal this fete? There may be, but one of our farmer friends says he doubts it. We know we could not do it in three days, or perhaps it would take us three weeks, and we hale Mr. George Greer as the champion wood chopper, of 82 years of age, of the Dominion.

FIRE IN MOREWOOD RESIDENCE

The residence of Mr. A. B. Allison, Morewood, had a narrow escape on Sunday when fire started in a room but which ,through lack of air, burned itself out.

An insurance agent had found a new life to insure.

Taking out his note book and pencil he commenced to ask the usual hackneyed questions.

"Now, sir," he said, "how old are you?"

The simple-looking little man scratched his head thoughtfully.

"I was forty last birthday," he said, "and I'll be forty-two next."

The agent gasped.

"But, my dear sir," he smiled, you've got things a bit mixed. If you were forty last birthday you'll be forty-one next birthday."

"Oh, no," said the man. "I'm forty-one to-day."

PRIZE HOLSTEIN COW IS DEAD.

Kingston, Feb. 20th.—H. S. Patterson, of Stella, owner of the Pine Grove herd of Holsteins, has lost Rita Tensen, which won the Canadian championship in 1929, carrying to Amherst Island the laurels from the Province of Quebec. In a 365-day lactation period she gave approximately 24,000 lbs. of milk at twice-a-day milking and a little better than 700 pounds of butter fat, according to the official R. O. P. test.

SHOULD BE TRIED HERE.

The town of Aylmer has an excellent scheme of solving the transient problem. A large sign in the waiting room near the police cells announces that transients wanting meals must cut a quarter of a cord of wood. The wood is placed conveniently at hand and the transient shown the pile and a saw. When the quarter of a cord is cut he gets a 20-cent meal ticket which, when presented at a local hotel, will bring him a good meal. Aylmer finds that they are not bothered with any great number of lodgers.

Son: "Mummy, aren't you mistaken in regard to the position of my mind?"

Husband: "I don't have to take back talk at the office any more."

Wife: "Oh, so, you've fired your stenographer."

Proof of Actual Cruelty Now Not Required of Wife

Proof of actual cruelty will not have to be given by a wife seeking maintenance from her husband on these grounds, according to an amendment to the Deserted Wives and Children's Maintenance Act which was introduced in the legislature yesterday. The amendment was brought in by Hon. William Finlayson, in the absence of Attorney-General Price.

While no hard and fast definition of cruelty is given in the amendment, an explanatory note sets forth that "conduct causing reasonable apprehension of bodily injury, or of injuring health, without proof of actual violence, which renders the home an unfit place, either for a wife or a child, may constitute acts of cruelty within the meaning of the sub-section."

The facts in each case must determine whether or not cruelty has been committeed, but the amendment is a guide to juduges and sets out what they may consider to be cruelty without having before them proof of any of the acts complained of by the wife. Under the act a married woman is deemed to have been deserted when she is living apart from her husband through his acts of cruelty.

No Better 'Ole Than Canada

To any Canadian who has the blues we would suggest that he have a half-hour talk with some American citizen, who might by chance be in his vicinity. He would end the conversation by being 100 per cent Canadian and by deciding that conditions are ideal in the Dominion as compared with the republic. We may think we are having a hard time in Canada, but these are prosperous days compared with what they are facing in the United States. There are cities in the republic where at least one-third of the population is on relief. . .

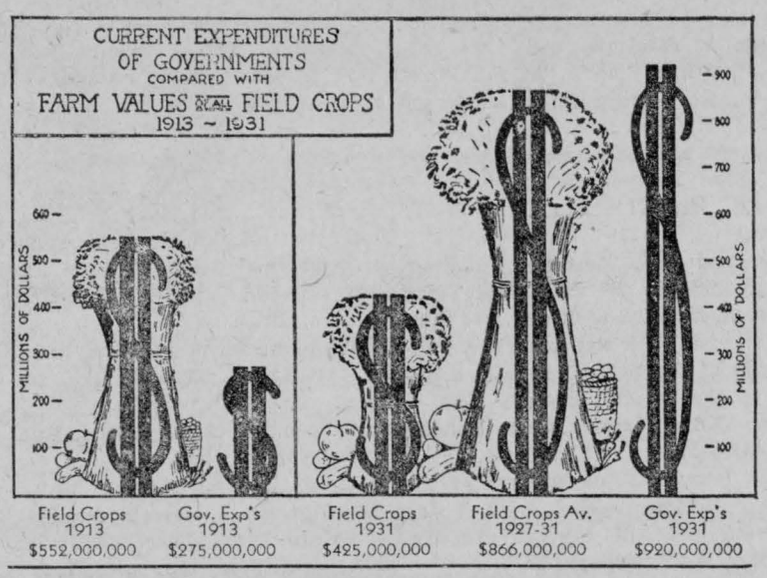
On the other hand, Ontario citizens who have returned recently from England speak with enthusiasm of the spirit of the old land. The British people are facing the problems of the day with that same indomitable courage which saw them through the war. They are cheerful and confident. They have no question as to the future. Business is improving, industry is on the upgrade, England is again assuming the financial leadership of the world and is again obtaining her old commercial supremacy.

We in Canada should be thankful that we have inherited British traditions, that we have built our banks and financial institutions on British standards, that we have British ideals of law and order, justice and liberty, that we have the British system of parliamentary institutions, and that we live under the Union Jack and all it stands for. We have our problems, and they are not easy of solution, but we should be thankful to-day that we are Canadians.

Will Change DogTax Payment

Kemptville Advance. — A special meeting of the council was held on Saturday afternoon when the question of making it necessary for owners of dogs to purchase licenses early in the year was discussed. The present method of paying the dog tax with the town taxes at the end of the year has not been working very satisfactorily and if the new system can be passed owners will have to take out their yearly license just as they do for a car. One of the big troubles in other years has been that by the time the tax has been due the dog is said to be owned by another person or died. This makes it necessary to grant rebates or find out just who owns the dog and there is often plenty of argument as to who does own the dog and when the transfer was made. Some people seem to feel that if they can get out of paying the dog tax is quite all right, but it is not fair to those who religiously pay for the dog they own and others do not. The council are doing good work in getting this matter adjusted.

How Canada Gets and Spends



A study showing the comparison between the cost of Government in Canada and the farm value of all field crops has been prepared by W. Sanford Evans and released for the National Committee on economy in public finance by the Canadian Chamber of Commerce. The study, as illustrated by the chart, indicates that in 1913 the total sum expended by governments for ordinary purposes was equal to 50 per cent. of the farm value of all field crops in Canada. In 1931 Governments expended a sum equal to 216 per cent. of the value of all field crops.

As prices were exceptionally low and yield not high in 1931, another comparison is added. The average value of all field crops for the 5 years, 1927-1931, including three years of good prices, was $866,000,000, while the ordinary expenditures of governments in 1931 were $920,000,000.

Whereas in 1913 a sum equal to one-half the value of the field crops sufficed to meet ordinary government expenditures, a stage has now been reached where the average value of all field crops falls short by many millions of dollars of meeting the ordinary requirements of governments.

BOYS' AND GIRLS' CLUBS

Regulations Governing the Loan of Animals.

An outline of policy under which pure-bred rams and boars are loaned to Boys' and Girls' Sheep Clubs and Swine Clubs have been issued by the Live Stock Branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture. The information is comprehensive, dealing as it does in detail not only with the constituted clubs eligible to make the request for a boar or a ram, but also setting forth the steps that must be taken to form the necessary organization to enable application to be made together with the rules and regulations governing the distribution of animals.

In no case do the rules apply to individual persons. Applications will be considered only from clubs specially organized in accordance with the rules regulating Swine Clubs in the case of boars, or Sheep Clubs in the case of rams. Also the application from the club should be made out on special forms issued by the Live Stock Commissioner at Ottawa. In order to encourage Canadian breeders both directly by increasing the market and indirectly by emphasizing the value of Canadian pure-bred sires, all the animals distributed are bought in Canada, are Canadian bred, and, as a rule, placed in the province in which they were purchased.

The animals are the property of the Dominion Department of Agriculture and are subject to the general control and supervision of the Chief of the Sheep and Swine Division of the Live Stock Branch. One of the important rules in maintaining animals on loan is that the club must select an efficient man in whose charge each ram or boar will be kept.

Freight charges to the shipping point most convenient to the club are paid by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, but should any expenses arise after unloading in the matter of stabling or cost of maintenance at the shipping point, the club is responsible for payment. In the case of removal of an animal, the freight charges from the shipping point are also paid by the Department, the club meanwhile being required to deliver and load the ram or boar, as the case may be, at the shipping point without cost to the Department. The expenses on the part of the Club represent chiefly the up-keep of the animal.

Rams and boars are purchased for distribution during the autumn months and are loaned for a period expiring on October 1st of the following year. Renewal applications for the same animals for the next year will, however, receive favourable consideration provided the reports of inspectors of the Live Stock Branch indicate the affairs of the club have been conducted in accordance with the intention of the Department of Agriculture ,and provided a satisfactory annual report of the club is forwarded at the proper time (on or before February 1st each year).

During the year ending March 31, 1932, there were 106 Boys' and Girls' Sheep Clubs operating throughout the Dominion; 76 being in Quebec province; 10 in Alberta; 6 in British Columbia; 5 in Manitboa; 4 in Nova Scotia; 2 in Ontario, and one each in Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick and Saskatchewan. During the same period there were 154 Boys' and Girls' Swine Clubs in seven provinces, namely, 42 in Saskatchewan; 35 in Alberta; 32 in Manitoba; 20 in British Columbia; 11 in New Brunswick; 9 in Ontario, and 5 in Nova Scotia.

Now Pronounced Dead After Sitting Up In Morgue

Wilmington, Del. — One of the strangest cases in medical annals had ended Sunday night as Leroy Taylor, 43, officially was pronounced dead.

Taylor actually died last Thursday, but not until exhaustive tests over a period of two days failed to show any signs of life and rigor mortis set in fully, were attending physicians ready to state unequivocally that he was ready for the undertaker. That was because Taylor had "died" several times before.

Once, in 1927, he dropped in a Philadelphia railroad station, Authorities pronounced him dead. He was taken to the morgue and placed on a slab to await identification.

The attendant went out of the room for a moment. Returning, he took one look, shrieked in terror, and fled. For Taylor was sitting up, gazing about him in bewilderment.

Several times later Taylor seemed dead and ordinary tests failed to show otherwise. A stethoscope gave no indication of a heart beat. But each time, after a period of an hour or two, Taylor revived.

The cause lay in a war injury. As a result of it, a vein and an artery in his head, his family said, were connected and venous blood seeped from the vein into the arterial system.

When sufficient venous blood got into the arterial system a condition difficult for physicians to explain other than in medical terms resulted.

That would result in a deep sleep so similar to death, his family declared, as to defy ordinary, perfunctory examination.

A FREAK CALF.

Edgar O'Brien, local dairy farmer, has a real freak in the shape of a Holstein calf, born two days ago with only three legs. The two rear legs and the right front leg are normal, but while the front left shoulder is perfectly formed there is no leg attached. Apart from the fact the calf is minus a leg, there is no other deformity, it is active, eats well and is apparently healthy. Mr. O'Brien believes it will live.—Pembroke Standard-Observer.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

By Etta Bitta Pye

COOKIES FOR LUNCHES.

A READER who calls herself "A lunch box mother," asks us to repeat some valuable suggestions for the making of a simple cookie dough for children—and variations which she remembers as being a great aid in keeping up variety in this favourite and most practical form of cake for the children's carried lunches.

So here it is—a recipe for a wholesome cookie dough, nice but not at all rich—and with the proportions you need for it in using either sweet or sour milk. And besides the master recipe, we offer as a tribute to all our young school friends, half a dozen good variations — in effect, seven quite different cookies.

Simple Cookies for Children.

2-3 cup shortening
2 cups brown sugar
2 eggs
4 cups flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
¾ teaspoon salt
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon flavouring

(If desired to use sour milk or cream instead of sweet, use only 2 teaspoons baking powder and add ¼ teaspoon soda.)

Cream shortening and sugar very thoroughly. Beat and add eggs and milk. Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Add to mixture; add flavouring (extract or grated rind of orange or lemon, or spice, etc.). Form into a roll and chill thoroughly for several hours or over night. Slice thin, with a very sharp knife. Bake on greased pans, 8 to 10 minutes, in a hot oven—450 degrees F.

Spice Cookies.

Add one teaspoon cinnamon or cloves or nutmeg, or mixed spices, to Simple Cookies recipe, decreasing the amount of flavouring if vanilla extract is used or omitting extract. You may include one cup chopped nutmeats or currants, raisins, or a mixture that includes finely shaved and cut candied peel.

Ginger Cookies.

Use only one cup sugar and add one cup molasses to Simple Cookie recipe; sift two teaspoons cinnamon, 1½ teaspoons ginger and ½ teaspoon soda with the flour (if you are using the recipe with the sour milk and soda in it, this ½ teaspoonful soda is still to be added).

Peanut Cookies.

Use peanut butter instead of ordinary shortening, creaming it, and the sugar together in the usual manner. You will not need quite so much liquid as the peanut butter is itself a trifle more liquid than butter or other shortening. You may press half peanuts into the top of the cookies or sprinkle them with chopped nuts.

Filled Cookies.

Use dates, raisins or figs; to 1½ pound fruit, add ½ cup sugar and ½ cup boiling water and cook to a thick paste. Cool before using. A tablespoonful of lemon juice may always be added to sharpen flavour. Put filling between two rounds of cookie dough, press edges together and bake at 450 degrees F., or use the filling to sandwich baked cookies together. Butter icing may be used as a filling.

HEALTH by Dr. Fraser Simpson

ON USING TOBACCO.

THERE is an old saying, and a very true one, to the effect that what is one man's meat is another man's poison. This aphorism is most fittingly applicable in the case of tobacco.

Just as people differ in their physical make-up and in their mental outlook, so also may they differ in their response to foods, drugs, tobacco and other substances. This latter phenomenon is spoken of as an idiosyncracy.

No two persons are exactly alike. One person eats certain foods and digests them readily, while the same foods will cause a disturbance in another person . So it is with carbon monoxide, nicotine and certain coal-tar derivatives which are contained in or are the products of tobacco smoke. Tolerance—the ability to use tobacco without discomfort—may be acquired fairly quickly in some cases but more often it takes years to make an individual a seasoned smoker.

It is a recognized fact that smoking causes a quickening of the pulse and a temporary increase in blood pressure. Digestion is slowed, and it is well-known that smoking destroys the feeling of hunger.

The extent to which these and other changes occur vary in different individuals, but in the majority of cases none of them reach the stage where they may be said to cause concern. To those with a varving degree of hypersensitiveness or abnormal conditions of their bodies, the variations and the extent of their occurrence may be a real problem.

To the susceptible individual, overindulgence in smoking may be manifested in many ways. It may be indicated by palpitation and rapid heart action—what is generally known as the "tobacco heart." The increase in blood pressure may give rise to pain in the chest, or contribute to dizziness ,irritability and insomnia.

That period of extreme restlessness and tossing about prior to sleeping of which many people complain can often be placed at the door of excessive smoking. The number of smokers with coughs bears evidence to the irritating effect of smoking on the respiratory tract of some persons. This, if continued, may contribute to the occurrence of more distressing lung conditions.

The pleasure which smoking gives to many people is not to be denied. This pleasure would be enhanced were the bounds of moderation not overstepped.

"Oh, Young Lochinvar"

IT HAD RAINED all day, a copious June downpour. Director Katon, of the Forest and Field Motion Picture Company, was barred from his makeshift lot by the weather. Caged with his wife and other actors in the Comas village on this rainy day, he stood moodily watching a checker game. Then he strode into the inn parlour, where Mrs. Katon—known on the screen as "Vera Astaire"—was also trying to kill time.

"If you weren't so cross to-day," said the lady. 'I'd favour you with a dandy plot for a story."

No answer from the disconsolate Mr. Katon. He looked out of the window, wishing the rain drops would stop falling. Suddenly his mood changed, and he called out in loud admiration of what he beheld—a boy galloping a nimble riding-horse down the village street.

"It's that Orman Rowe, the young chap who has been helping us in pictures," he said. "That's some nag, and the young fellow sure can ride."

"All right," said the helpful wife. "We can cast him and the horse for a rescue of a chase. I think there's too much fist-fighting in our comedies. and everybody knows before the fight begins that the hero is sure to whip everybody in sight."

"Yes. and you can bet the hero will never be trimmed in our pictures—not while I write the stories and play the hero," said Author-Actor-Director Katon, cheerfully.

"Tom," said his wife, slowly, "you are making a noble struggle to stay young and look young. But it must strain your mind to think up all those hero stories, day in and day out, so that a middle-aged man like you, wearing a toupee, can get by with athletics and young-love interest. Suppose you let somebody else play hero for a change."

"Yes, and what about you?" replied her spouse, bitterly. "Say, Poll, I have to play you out of focus in close-ups, as it is, to favour your mouth lines."

Mrs. Katon deepened those lines by making a face at him. They were not truly annoyed at each other; they both knew that middle age was coming on apace, and both secretly wished it were not necessary forever to be acting eternal youth.

"Well, now," said Mrs. Katon, relaxing, "here's the next story for us." She shook an open book under his nose—a volume with rusty covers. "That boy outside on the horse is just the type for the hero."

"What's the book?"

"Poems."

"Take it away!"

"I will not. It's great stuff, Tom; a thrill to every page."

"Who wrote it?"

"Sir Walter Scott."

"My land!" said Mr. Katon. "You are shooting worse, Poll. There is only one thing in favour of anything like that—the book's so old we can use it without getting tripped for royalties. However, nothing doing!"

"Suppose I tell you the story, Tom. Forget it's a poem and who wrote it. You see, here's a big fashionable wedding going on, and the hero rides through the river on horseback, and just when the party is breaking up he—"

"Not so rotten, not so rotten," said Mr. Katon, grudgingly. "I see some chances for action. But I don't ride very good."

"Who," asked the lady, "said you were going to ride. The riding will be done by Orman Rowe, and we'll pick some smart slim young girl in the village for the bride."

"All right," said Mr. Katon, after a thoughtful pause. "Maybe it'll go good, if we jazz it up enough. How does the end come out—if it isn't a happy ending we'll have to change it to one, of course."

"Oh, it ends O. K.," Mrs. Katon assured him. "The boy gets the girl all right. Now, we need a big house for a castle, and some extras,—husky chaps,—brothers and sisters too, for the party—and some retainers. There were always lots of retainers in the old castles."

"It won't be a castle," said Mr. Katon firmily.

"Oh, Tom. You know I'm coming along great with my glass work, and I'd just love to paint a castle scene."

She was referring to a device that has been surprisingly effective in producing grand effects. On a square yard of glass, with a rectangular section cut out of the centre, the artist paints whatever scene is required, a mansion or street or palace hall. At a distance beyond the glass is set up the practical scene required for action by the characters. Then the camera lens, located a few feet from the rectangle, blends painted glass and practical scene with actors into a consistent whole.

"No, ma'am! No castle! We'll shoot the scene at that old house up in the Brettun clearing—call it a smuggler's den on the border. The forced marriage is between smuggler chief and a father who's after the crooked business. I'm the brave revenue officer killing two birds in the affair—breaking up the gang and seeing to it that my young brother gets his true love. You're the bride's sister,—only a little older,—and I'm in love with you. You live just over the line in Canada, see? When the clean-up is made, I have your father break with the gang. Then there's a double wedding that same day—we join up with Locky and the girl somewhere. I'll be thinking that out later. Only you and I don't go on horseback! However, it'll be a pippin! Snappy action! Hardly a subtitle needed! Hah!"

AT that moment he glanced out of the window and made a break for the door. Orman Rowe was returning from the village, and Katon had caught sight of him.

"Say, son, I've got a part for you in the next picture. Corking part!" Katon caressed the horse's topknot. "You're to rush in and grab a girl all togged up in her wedding dress, standing up with a man and ready to be married to him. You lug her out, jump on your horse with her, and gallop for a getaway. Of course, the girl must have some spryness and grit of her own. How about your getting some nimble, slim lass in the village?"

Orman flushed. There were listeners. A group of young men, loafers for the day on account of the rain, had gathered under the roof of the inn porch. They cackled hilariously, and one said, "This is where Actor Rowe gets a movie job he hadn't ought to ask any pay for doing!"

"Mr. Katon, my horse is nervous, and I don't believe he'll stand for a double load the young chap protested.

"Hi, there, hoss, give him the laugh!" jeered the group's spokesman. "He's passing you the buck about being nervous."

Orman stared at the youth over Katon's shoulder and narrowed his eyes. "That'll be about enough from you, Barry."

Katon added his own word, too, to stop more provoking sarcasm. But he broke off in telling the cowed loafers what was what. A girl was walking past the tavern, evidently taking advantage of a let-up in the storm in order to do an errand at the store. Impulsively Katon called to her, and she came to the porch.

She was a village lass who, like many others in Comas, had appeared before the camera in barn dances which had furnished background and relief for strenuous action in several pictures. Director Katon snapped prompty to the point.

"Miss Alice, you're just in the nick of time. Le's see, I've never given you a real part, eh? Here's one for you. You play opposite Orman. Young-love interest—almost star parts for both of you. Are you on?"

With delighted alacrity, showing no embarrassment, she promised, "I will do my best in anything you give me to do, Mr. Katon. I'll be so glad to have a real part in a picture."

"That's the word, Miss Alice. And it's a real part, all right. Was just telling Orman, here. Lochinvar stuff. You're rescued like the girl in that poem. Do you know it?"

"I do know! I've recited it lots of times. It'll be perfectly fine, won't it, Orman?"

"Yes," he acknowledged without enthusiasm ,again staring at the jeering youth and doing his best to give them the danger signal.

But one of them, a burly young fellow, stepped away from the others, advancing. "Hold on a minute about this thing! It might just as well be known as how I'm keeping company with Alice Austin. And I ain't standing for love stuff with any other fellow."

Now the girl did show embarrassment along with vivid indignation which coloured her cheeks. "How dare you speak out in public like that, Wes Holt? We're not engaged nor anything like it."

"Well, we're going to be," he insisted doggedly.

Katon pushed in for his own purposes and to shield the girl in her manifest distress. "Look here, Holt, you young idiot, what do ye mean, blatting all this in front of listeners? We're only talking about acting in a picture. If Miss Alice is willing to take the part, she shall have it. I'm boss in that line."

"I do want the part," she insisted, almost sobbing.

"That settles it," stated the director. "This storm is breaking, and we'll have sunshine to-morrow. Report early at the old house in Brettun clearing, Miss Alice. I remember you had a pretty white dress at the dance. Wear that and fix up a long veil."

"I'll be on hand—and I thank you awfully much, Mr. Katon." She ran away toward the store.

Holt bristled up to Katon, who waved him aside. "Got no time to fool with you!"

"Well, I'm going to have business with you from now on—and it won't be fooling, either. This ain't the first time movie companies have tried to bust up things between a fellow and his girl. But it ain't going to be done to me. 'Im warning ye! I'll be at the Brettun clearing to-morrow—and we'll see!"

"If you butt in there to make trouble for my company," stormed the director, "you won't be seeing anything, not after I have closed both eyes for you. That's a warning, too."

Katon whirled and went into the inn.

Young Holt shot forward and clutched on the bridle rein of Orman's mount. "D'ye thing you're going to play movie masher with my girl and get away with it?"

Orman leaned toward Holt from the saddle and pointed at the restraining hand. "Before I answer you, Wes, you take your hand off that rein."

Grudgingly Holt obeyed.

"Now," said Orman, "I have no interest in your affairs, or in your girl. But I've agreed to fill in for Mr. Katon whenever he can use me. Just how he uses me is his business—and my own, too. You'd better meet me halfway on the no-meddle stand.

"That's no answer to what I asked! According to what that movie man said, you'll have to be picking up my girl and riding away with her and it'll all spread out on the picture screen for thousands to gawp at. Nothing doing."

A young fellow in the group spoke out, hiding impish mischief behind the mask of friendliness:

'You certainly can't afford to stand for any such rinktums, Wes. Folks all over the country will be asking how it ever come about that Wes Holt, feller o' his size and muscle, stood by and let his best girl be grabbed away by Orm Rowe."

"That's exactly it, and I won't stand for it, I tell ye!" raged the jealous Holt.

Rowe had no taste for argument against such silliness: he said as much and touched his horse, and the horse loped away at single-foot.

Holt bawled threats as long as Orman was within hearing distance and continued to bluster to his mates. "I can lick Rowe and that fake-fighting director and maybe one or two others," he declared. "All I ask of you boys is to hold off the rest of the gang and give me a fair field at Brettun clearing to-morrow."

"Mebbe the boss movie-man will take a picture of it, like he grabs at everything else that happens in town," suggested a youth, snickering.

UNDER these circumstances, the word quickly went out regarding Wesley Holt's beligerent stand against having his best girl make her appearance in a young-love-interest part. Therefore, Brettun clearing was filled next morning by all the folks of Comas who could get there.

"The more the merrier," announced Director Katon. "Here's the makings of a jim-dandy mob scene to mix it up when the getaway scene is shot."

He picked up his megaphone and informed the assemblage: "The young lover is going to rush out of that door, lugging a girl in his arms. He'll hop on his horse and elope with her. Some of you are glad because the hero is getting her. The others are backing the old codger who was ready to marry her. So you split off into two parties, and you mix it. Women pull off each other's hats—make believe scratch faces. But use judgment! Men whang into each other—not too hard, of course! It's only acting. But hold your faces straight. This is fun, but it's not to be laughed at."

Over and over he rehearsed the mob scene. Wesley Holt was in it as a volunteer in order to excuse his presence; the director began to take note of that battler's vigour. During a rest period, he took Holt to one side, asking acridly: "Trying to get up your muscles to start something here? Young fellow, you want to remember my warning!"

Holt was excited by the various tussles in which he had been giving and taking blows with other huskies. Roused thus to bravado, he declared stoutly: "When the time comes, I'm going to stop Orm Rowe from hugging my girl in the face and eyes of everybody. And if that's fighting talk, go ahead and make the most of it!"

Hero Katon had no notion of taking chances with this hulking chap.

"Look you, Holt! You're out of the picture from now on. I may hand you what's when later, when I won't be running risks of a bunged eye showing in a close-up. Do you see big John over there?" He pointed to the company's truck driver and general utility man. "He used to be a weight lifter on the stage—has lifted an auto on his back, with four men in it! Hi, John!" Katon yelled across the clearing. "Here's a rube I want you to keep out of all scenes and out of mischief in general. Understand?"

John grinned and flung up a hand the size of a young ham.

One of the young mischief-makers was on hand, eavesdropping. "Going to curl up and let it be put over you, Wes?"

"Nothing like that! I'm going to show 'em!" Holt declared savagely.

Big John strolled up. Conscious of his strength and afraid of it if temper were allowed rein, John was constantly amiable. He smiled when he commanded Holt to go away; he kept smiling when the young fellow growled refusal: and then the giant grinned broadly when he grabbed Holt, tucked him under a brawny arm and lugged the kicking captive to the edge of the clearing, followed by the hilarity of the onlookers.

"It's nice of you folks to laugh," said John, squinting down into the contorted visage of his burden. "If you don't run away from here when I drop you, I'll grab you again and spank every time they see you, for a long time."

He dropped Holt, who landed on hands and knees. Over the youth John clapped his big hands with resounding smacks, bodefully suggesting what the spanking would sound like if administered. Holt scrambled to his feet and fled from the threatened ignominy. He went down a wood road, malevolence firing his spirit to white heat.

Presently, realizing from the sounds that the performers were wholly absorbed, Holt climbed up among the branches of a tree and caught glimpses of what was going on.

Katon was rehearsing the principals in the "young-love interest." Over and over, Orman came rushing out of the door of the old house, the girl in his arms, her arms around his neck.

As often as they appeared, Director Katon bombarded them with explosive criticism from the muzzle of his megaphone. "Action okay, but expressions rotten! Smile up at him, Alice! You're not being kidnapped for running off with your true love. Smile—smile, Locky! Look awful happy! You're looking now like a thief running off with a sack of potatoes!"

The flight from the house had been shot in semi-close-up, so that facial expressions could be registered.

"You're great in action, Orman," continued Katon, smoothing over his previous criticism. "But you've got to thaw out that Yankee icicle face of yours in love scenes."

"I don't like to be in love scenes," blurted the boy, turning from the girl's vexation to face what he could endure better—the laughter of the throng.

"Well ,you're through with the worst of it," consoled Katon. "Now it'll be a long shot and all action."

A long shot was necessary because Orman was now provided with a dummy on which Alice's gown and veil were placed with the assistance of her mother. Even Orman, with all his strength and agility, would have shown up awkwardly in mounting a horse with the real girl herself in his arms. But he came off handsomely with the light dummy. Away he went down the road leading from the clearing, his horse on the dead gallop, the veil floating over his shoulders, the draperies of the white gown fluttering.

Through the megaphone Katon bellowed. "Come back here for a close-up with the girl herself on the horse with you."

All these shots, of course, were to be put together in the cutting room to make a complete and consistent picture in which the close-up of the real persons would trick the theatre spectator away from suspicion that a dummy had been used.

The camera man ground away until steed and rider had turned a bend of the road. Just before Orman disappeared the director commanded to the camera-man, "Iris out!" The shutter was closed gradually, narrowing the shot into a slow fade-out—denoting the end of a sequence in the picture.

However ,a sequence in real life was just getting underway out of view of the throng in Brettun clearing.

FROM his perch, through breaks in the foliage, young Holt was sure that the girl herself had been carried off in Orman's arms. He dropped from the tree when the horse galloped past. As soon as the horse came trotting on his return, he leaped from behind a bush and in doing so got a good look at Orman with white-draped arms about his neck, a veil-swathed head nestled on the hero's breast.

Before the innocent and amazed Orman could gather himself to prevent, Holt lunged forward and snatched the figure from the hero's lax clutch. He had braced himself to receive a burden. What he grabbed was a feather-weight object, an excelsior-stuffed image of a girl. Overbalanced by violence of effort, he tumbled on his back, heaving the dummy away from his grasp with the quick horror of one who has grabbed for flesh and captured a spectre.

Instantly Orman leaped off his horse, with his coil of rope in his hand. He landed on Holt with full weight and with a violence which knocked the breath out of the latter. Then Orman dropped his rope over the antagonist's wrists and pulled the noose taut when Holt raised his arms to strike. With the same snap of action he secured Holt's legs with another loop, then with a mighty heave landed the young fellow across the saddle and bound him there.

Then the modern and jazzed Lochinvar, who had met up with complications never dreamed of by a poet, carefully brushed twigs and leaf mold off the wedding veil and pretty white gown, tucked the dummy under his arm and returned to Brettun clearing, leading the horse, burdened with a bellowing captive.

Director Katon, crack-trigger "author," seized an opportunity the moment Orman appeared at the turn of the road. The camera man began to grind at the command snapped by the director.

"Come on, youngster! Come into a close-up! Don't lug that dummy like you'd been to the store after a string o' garlic. Prop the arms around your neck. No! I'll make it a better tie-up! Run down there, Alice!"

"Shall we stop laughing?" asked one of the "mob," wiping away tears of merriment.

"I don't care how much you laugh, folks! This is where Locky gets home with his bride. He has captured the great robber chief on the way and will collect a reward of five thousand dollars to set up housekeeping with. Mob, when I give you the word you go rushing down to meet Locky and girl. Jump and throw your hands and holler. I'm shooting you from behind so your faces won't register as the gang at the smuggler's house here. Climb up into Orman's arms, Alice. Now come on! All set! Run, mob! Camera!"

Sang Final Hymn As Smoke Rises

Brampton. — With smoke pouring up from the auditorium below the church, members of St. Paul's United Church nonchalantly sang the closing hymn of the service Sunday morning and then filed out while the local fire brigade extinguished the blaze.

Rev. S. H. Soper, the minister, was in the midst of his sermon shortly before noon when, noting the smoke pouring through the church, he concluded his discourse and instructed that the last hymn be sung. The smoke was caused from an old dry timber near a steam pipe connection. The timber first started to smoke around ten o'clock and was extinguished by several of the church officials, only to break out again during the service. While the congregation was filing out, Chief W. H. Milner and his brigade made sure that there would be no further inconvenience.

A FELLER isn't mean
Out fishin';
His thoughts are mostly clean
Out fishin';
He doesn't knock his fellow-men,
Or harbour any grudges then;
A fellow's at his finest, when
Out fishin':

The rich are comrades to the poor,
Out fishin';
All brothers of a common lure,
Out fishin';
The urchin with the pin an' string
Can chum with millionaire an' king,
And happy as a lark, they sing,
Out fishin'.

A feller's glad to have a friend,
Out fishin';
A helpin' hand he'll always lend,
Out fishin';
The brotherhood of rod an' line
An' sky and stream is always fine;
Men come real close to God's design
Out fishin'.

A feller isn't plottin' schemes
Out fishin';
He's only busy with his dreams,

His livery's a coat of tan;
His creed: To do the best he can;
A feller's always mostly man,

"Yes."

"Well, what has kept you here so long?"

Use Your Local Newspaper To Solidify Your Business

Speaking at a dinner tendered to a large group of Kingston men recently, H. E. Stephenson, of the McKim Agency, Montreal, told the audience some simple but potent truths regarding the building of business. In an informative address he stated that the best way to sell a product was to tell the truth about it, because the public read newspaper advertising as a guide to their daily purchasing. Then he went on to give some advice to these Kingston business men, advice which is applicable to the business men of any community. He said:

"If you have a local newspaper, use it, even if you are located in one corner of the county and can only get value from a part of the circulation. Tell your story from time to time and you will profit by it.

"The newspaper is an important factor in kniting together a community, and to the extent that you strengthen it you will be making this paper a stronger medium for your own and the manufacturers 'advertising.

"Too many merchants endeavour to sidestep seeing the newspaper advertising man or publishers for fear that they may expect you to cough up for some advertising; and too many publishers keep away from the merchant because they feel that is the merchant's attitude. This is absolutely wrong, as the interests of the two are so bound up with the growth and prosperity of the district that they should work together at all times.

These extracts from Mr. Stephenson's address are but echoes of what has been said time and again by big business men who have proven to their own satisfaction, the business-building power of advertising in the columns of local newspapers. They have been proven true by those who have climbed to the top of the business tree, and can be applied with just as much force to the average business man who desires to see his business grow and prosper.

TRIBUTE TO CANADA.

Christian Science Monitor.

Canada looks back upon 1932 with pride. The nation retained world leadership in the export of wheat, printing paper, asbestos; was second in gold ,platinum, cobalt; was third in wheat flour; fourth in automobiles and wood pulp; fifth in rubber tires. Canada winds up the year with a favourable trade balance of $50,000,000, compared with an unfavourable trade balance of $10,000,000 in 1931. There have been troubles, but they are being surmounuted. Canada is a huge country, with only about 10,000,000 population—but the Canadians are an exceedingly hardy handful.

When hens begin to keep track of the number of eggs they lay trap nesting will be greatly helped. Harold Scott, of Acton's Corners, was collecting eggs last week and on one of the eggs, laid by a White Leghorn hen, found a complete figure two on one end of the shell . The figure is very clear and distinct and is formed of the same substance as the shell.
