Parnham Allison, 80 Passed Away Dec. 24 Member of Pioneer Family

Chesterville and district lost one of its most respected citizens in the passing of Parnham Allison at his home on the Finch Road on Tuesday, December 24th. Mr. Allison was in his 80th year.

A liftetime resident here, Mr. Allison was a grandson of one of the original settlers of the Bethune Bush district. His health had not been good for some time prior to his death but his passing came as a shock and sorrow to his host of friends.

Born on the home farm in Bethune Bush, Mr. Allison was the son of the late Andrew Allison Jr. and his wife, the late Sophia Hill, of Bouck's Hill. Married in 1898 to Margaret Johnston, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Wesley Johnston, the young couple moved to their own farm on the Finch road a mile and a half east of Chesterville in that year. Mrs. Allison passed away in 1940.

Two children survive their parents, a daughter, Grace, Mrs. Douglas MacAllan, of Toronto, and a son, Harry, on the home farm. Mr. W. B. Allison, of Bethune Bush, is the sole surviving brother.

Mr. Allison was a hard-working and conscientious farmer all his active years. He made it a point to keep up with modern practices and in the early 1900's his was one of the first farms in the district to be underdrained. In those years also, he realized the value of pure bred cattle to the working farmer and to that end began to develop an excellent herd of Holsteins. In those early days when ROP testing was not a common thing his herd was tested regularly, a practice his son has continued.

The passing of Parnham Allison has severed another link with the pioneer past of our community. The mass of floral offerings and the silent tribute of the many who attended his funeral at Trinity United Church on December 26 witnessed the high regard in which he was held. The service and interment in the family plot at Maple Ridge were under the direction of his minister, the Rev. R. A. Mitchell.

Affairs of the community were always of importance to Mr. Allison. He was a member of the Chesterville High School Board at one time and for thirty-five years his familiar figure was seen in the halls of Trinity United Sunday School as treasurer and secretary. He was a member of the board of stewards and an elder of his church at the time of his death.

Thief Attempts to Steal Winchester Doctor's Car

An attempted robbery of a 1951 Chevrolet, owned by Dr. H. G. Barton, of Winchester, backfired with the unexpected appearance of the owner.

Called at 3 a.m. on Christmas morning, on a maternity case, Dr. Barton went to his garage and, on opening the front door of his car, saw an unknown man lying under the dash, apparently trying to cross the ignition wires. With the thought of robbery not entering his mind, the doctor was taken back when the culprit jumped up, yelling, "Take it easy, chum," and ran off in the direction of the Public School.

Constable Gilbert Raistrick was summoned, and an inspection if the car found a screwdriver lying on the floor. The identity of the would-be thief has not, as yet, been discovered. —The Winchester Press.

UNAPPRECIATED WOMEN

If women are not physically appreciated they fade. It's the unplucked flower that fades, not the plucked one. They have the unmistakable look of the woman who has not been chosen; unused spinsters are like machines who rust from disuse.

IN COURT EACH WEEK

When "Court of Opinions" is in session, listeners to the CBC's Dominion network are assured a half-hour of light-hearted discussion on interesting topics. As a rule, bearded Lister Sinclair, the noted Canadian writer, is at odds with skeptical Kate Aitken, the popular women's commentator; the programme's moderator, Neil Leroy (centre) has his hands full keeping order in court. Each week two guests add to the lively comment of these three regulars. None pretend to be experts; they're just well-known people with a wide range of interests who enjoy debating with each other on all manner of subjects. The results are always interesting and always informative.

TALK OF REPRISALS FOR NEW U.S. RESTRICTIONS

New United States restrictions on imports of Canadian dairy products have brought angry talk of retaliation from dairy officials.

The curbs Tuesday on Canadian powdered milk and buttermilk were "most deplorable" said the National Dairy Council, which represents Canada's dairy industry.

The council's executive secretary, W. K. St. John, suggested that any Canadian retaliatory action be taken against the heavy flow of U.S. vegetable oils—mainly soybean oil—which go into margarine, the dairy industry's biggest competing product.

A government trade official sald the new restictions are "deeply regretted." But government sources suggested that outright retaliation is another matter.

When earlier U.S. restrictions were placed on imports of cheese, butter and other dairy products more than a year ago, the Canadian govern- made it clear it considered them a breach of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, and reserved the right to take retaliation against American products.

But officials said Tuesday the government may treat the latest curbs carefully, at least until the U.S. embargo on Canadian livestock and meats is lifted next March 1.

The U.S. agriculture department's announcement caused surprise in Ottawa. The new curbs were opposite to the promise made by a U.S. delegate to a GATT conference last fall that he would seek to have the cheese and butter restrictions eased or lifted.

Quotas under those restrictions were increased slightly last July, but Canada and other dairy countries considered the action insufficient.

Mr. St. John said the new restrictions are "a further blow to an already serious dairy outlook." Canada's dairy industry had large surpluses which it had to export if it were to survive.

About 10,000,000 pounds of buttermilk and whole milk powder were sent to the U.S. this year, he said, and Canada had "record high" stockpiles of dried milk.

Local I.O.O.F Holds Christmas Party

The I.O.O.F. Christmas party, held on December 17th for the members, their families and friends, was attended by many and enjoyed by all.

The programme, which consisted of sketches, dances, songs, etc., was very ably done by the young actors and actresses. Taking part in the programme was Gerald and Lenny Faubert; Mayse La Prade and Anne Kelly; Ann Crawford and Brenda Merkley; Carl Smith; Anna Marcellus; Linda Hutton and Ronnie Doering; Johnnie, Francis and Harold Ball, and Graham and Ron Sullivan. The programme was under the direction of the N.G., Harold Greer.

After the programme a substantial lunch was served.

DAY OF QUISLINGS

By Joseph Lister Rutledge

There are happenings in human affairs that seem to have in them the capacity to debase. We feel it even where the events touch us only distantly, and where, as far as we know, they have not sprung from anything that we have done or thought of believed. There is a case in point in Czechoslovakia. There fourteen men who through treachery and depravity had wormed themselves into the top political places in that country and its communistic regime, were charged with treason. It was not that alone that was debasing. It was that these fourteen, having betrayed once, were now begging the world to believe, with indecent eagerness,, that they betrayed again, and demanding that they be given credit for their baseness by being hanged for their crimes. They did not have long to wait for this satisfaction.

The mind revolts at this sort of thing. It refuses to believe such confessions or the honesty or truth of such abasement. We can understand a Judas going out and hanging himself. He was a man of good intent who had been a traitor to goodness. But who can so involve the mind as to feel abasement for turning against evil? Surely it is not within the capacity of human minds to see evil as good and still betray it. It is easy to recognize the pattern of self-accusation, the abasement that has been evidenced under similar circumstances by far better men than these. We have seen it happen time and time again, and have recognized it for what it is, the intrusion of some devlish compulsion, physical or mental, that has broken down the fibre of men's character and made them the dupes of evil. We recognize a sinister force, which we do not understand but whose purpose it is not difficult to see.

One thing should be clear, even to the tangled thinking of men who would give their tacit support to a cause that could countenance such evil. It is that nationalist element, which is used to make infiltration easy, is of no use to those who would make communism an international policy except as pawns in their game of international politics. The Quislings have their brief day of apparent power, which they use to break down the good in nationalism that might slow the progress of communism's world-wide sweep. When they have served that ugly purpose, as Rudolph Slansky and Vladimir Clementis served it, there will be more indecent charges of treason and other hurried trips to the gallows. What has happened in Czechoslovakia will soon be happening in other iron curtain dependencies. The Kremlin recognizes only one law, one patriotism, one creed, and that a Russian creed.

Canada as it is Today

In the past twenty years great things have been happening in Canada, of which the world is increasingly aware. Within the past eight or ten years the development of Canada has been particularly significant.

This country has prospered mightily. The second world war gave us a push along the road to industrialization, and post-war demands for the things we supply have kept our economy at a high level. We discovered resources of oil and iron ore, of uranium and nickel and other minerals.

But, what is this Candad of ours? Is it merely the biggest country in the Americas, the third largest in the world, with an area of 3,700,000 sq. miles stretching from the United States to the North Pole, and extending over 48 degrees of latitude and 84 degrees of longtitude? Is it merely a land of rocks which form the lid on a treasure house of nickel, uranium, gold, silver, asbestos, radium, iron, and scores of other minerals; of wide prarries that produce the world's fourth greatest crop of wheat; of inexhaustible forests, and of the earth's largest area of fresh water lakes?

Canada is all of these, and more. Nature bestowed gifts upon her with a lavish hand, but the treasures lay unused throughout milleniums until only yesterday. Canada's pride today is that so great development of nature's bounty has been accomplished by a mere 1-169th of the world's population in so short a time.

So industriously have Canada's people explored the wilderness, probed the rocks, tilled the plains, and built dams to operate their factory wheels, that their country is among the world's leaders in supplying the world's needs.

Canada is the first in the production of nickel, newsprint, asbestos and platinum. She is the world's second largest producer of gold, aluminum, wood pulp and hydro-electric power. She is the third in zinc, silver and uranium, fourth in producing copper and lead, and she is the third trading nation of the world.

Canada's scanty population has been achieving mightily through inventive genius and enterprise. These have developed the benefits that are ours because of our strategic geographical position, our abundant and varied natural resources, our wealth of cheap water power, our thousands of miles of transportation facilities by rail, highway, waterway and air.

Our people have kept our credit and exchange sound in the markets of the world.

Today, Canada is on the threshold of further advancement. It isn't what we did yesterday, but what we are ready to do tomorrow, that makes for greatness. This country occupies a central position between four of the world's great powers, and there territories actually adjoin two of them: the United States of America and the Soviet Union. With the other two, Great Britain and France, she has strong bonds of tradition and affection.

With 625,000 different species of insects already identified, entomologists believe that at least that many more remain to be discovered.

SONGS DE CHEZ NOUS

Helene Baillargeon and Alan Mills are all decked out in authentic period costumes for their programme of folk music "Songs de Chez Nous" heard every Monday on the CBC's Trans-Canada network. These well-known Canadian folk song singers, backed by the Arthur Morrow Choir, present an interesting half-hour programme of music that illustrates both the English and French heritage of our country. Seldom-heard songs are presented along with old favourites in order to acquaint listeners with music that is truly Canadian.

Easy, Sensible Reducing Plan

This holiday season may not be the time to talk about giving up sweet, rich foods in the interests of better health; but at the risk of offending our cooks, here is a prescription for easy, sensible weight reduction. Miss Margaret E. Smith, Ph.B., M.Sc., nutrition director of the Health League of Canada,, believes that simply by eating the essential, natural foods and abstaining from the non-essential, a notable slimming will occur within a period of three months—and the wise eater will feel much better able to cope with the world.

Here is the simple plan: Write down the names of the foods which contain animal protein—milk, eggs, lean fish, Canadian Cheese, cottage cheese, buttermilk, lean meat—and use regular amounts of these. Write down the following non-essential foods and shun them—cream, bacon, sugar, jam, corn syrup, all chocolate or cocoa used in drinks, desserts and cakes, carbonated water of all kinds, candies, pies with a top crust, ice cream and rich cake, particularly when it is roofed with whipped cream.

"These two lists may suggest to the thousands of restaurant diners in this country what to look for on the menu and what to avoid," adds Miss Smith. "Sometimes otherwise sensible men and women lose their wits entirely when confronted with a menu. It is worthwhile remembering that to eat well is not necessarily to eat expensively."

AFTER 600 YEARS

The heraldic "achievements" (helmet, gauntlets, sword and other accoutrements) of the Black Prince, which have hung over his tomb in Canterbury Cathedral for six centuries, have now been placed in an illuminated glass case on the north side of the choir.

Although many older visitors to the Cathedral will miss the familiar articles from their old position. the new arrangement makes is possible for them to be clearly seen for the first time since they were placed high over the splendid tomb, so long ago.

A laugh is worth a hundred groans in any market.—Lamb.

Along The Way

By Stylus

Clement Moore can roll over and sleep peacefully in his grave once more, for the twins have stopped shouting: "All the children were snuggled in their beds, while sugar plums danced through their heads." Rudolph the Red ("and if you ever saw it you would even say it blows") can disappear behind the curtain too! The bubble lights have boiled over, and the model plane that Santa flew down the chimney is almost completed. I think the turkey skeleton made the fire yesterday, and most of the needles have come unthreaded from the Christmas tree. It looks, at last, as I'm going to be able to settle down "to a long winter's nap", and a much needed one, now that Christmas is over!

The cheerfully lighted tree soon lights the path of reflection that looms into view with the end of the year. I sit here wondering what '52 has meant for you, Neighbour. It means so many different things to each of us. The years come, and the years go. Heads become grayer and faces more lined in spite of beauty treatments and the like. The older one is the faster time seems to slip by. What does it all mean?

Does the realization that half your life, or more, is already gone give you a jolt, Neighbour? I find myself wondering why I have let time slip by so easily without making more of it. So many opportunities come, opportunities to do things, for those who are creative; to read, for those who enjoy the magic world of knowledge and the story of man's prowess; and, above all, to make friends and be helpful to others in the community. How is it that time catches us sitting back with little more done than the daily routine?

Time—the essence of man's life. As we spend our time so we live. One hundred years from now it will be all over, Neighbour, and somebody else will be doing the chores. I wonder if they'll remember us? Doesn't it depend upon how we spend our time? Of course, the chores have to be done, the house cleaned, and the washing ironed. But, what then, Canada is a land of opportunity, it is a land of freedom. But freedom is only freedom when it is measured out to all alike; and that depends upon how well each of us assumes our responsibilities to one another. To put it differently, it depends upon how we spend the time we have left after the washing is out and the stable cleaned.

I am always grateful to live in a democracy, but I think we need to take a great measure of responsibility if our democracy is to be a dynamic, wonderful thing. Our governments, big and little, national and municipal, are too easily controlled by those who possess power or money. This could not be if we all assumed our proper responsibility to our communities and our country. The greatest defence democracy can have is our acceptance of this responsibility. If we will get together in this land of ours, and purge our communities, establishing in them only the finest form of living, then no enemy will ever destroy our democracy, from within or without. No one can do this for us, however. If evil is ever to go, it must be because we decide it is to go. If better things are to come(be they roads, schools, hospitals or community centres), it will be because we went after them. Yes, Neighbour, how we spend our time decides the life we live.

How about it? Can we count on you to make 1953 the best yet? I hope so,—and oh, by the way,—a Happy New Year to you all!

P.S. Thanks for sending along those contributions for Mary's Fund, the Unitarian Service Committee and the Save the Chidren Fund, they did a lot!

Cheese and Hog Men Of Stormont Seek Protection

A joint meeting of the executives of the Stormont Federation of Agriculture, Stormont Cheese Producer's Assoc. and Stormont Hog Producer's Association held at the Ontario Department of Agriculture office, at Cornwall, Saturday afternoon resulted in three resolutions to be placed before the federal and provincial governments. The various farm groups hope by this means to forestall sudden upsets such as affected the cheese and pork industries last year.

The cheese men drafted a resolution asking for continuance of the guarantee of cheese prices on the same basis as at present; that is, 24 cents guaranteed by the federal government with a further guarantee from the Ontario Marketing Board to borrow funds to buy and store cheese at a 30-cent price. It was pointed out that the governments had not yet been called on to pay any money under the guarantee plan.

In addition, the cheese men passed a resolution commending the Ontario Cheese Marketing Board on its work during 1952. The first measure will shortly be placed before Transport Minister Chevrier, Stormont MP, and Peter Manley, Stormont MPP, as well as the Ontario Federation and other interested groups.

The Hog Producers drafted their resolution to call attention to losses in the industry due to the presence of large numbers of young pigs which must be brought to market weight on expensive feed and would not be ready for sale until after the three-cent drop in support price expected at the end of the year. Continuance of the present support level of 26 cents per pound was asked.

The meeting, under the chairmanship of A. J. McIntyre, Avonmore, was taken up with discussions of various current problems. George L. McIntosh, federation president, began proceedings with a few remarks on the recent work of the federation on behalf of the cheese and hog producers including an interview in Ottawa with Mr. Chevrier.

Dealing first with the problems of the cheese men, the group heard remarks from Charles Shaver, Aultsville, Stormont Cheese Producers' Association president; Peter Manley, MPP; Hector Currier, Moose Creek; Ross Rupert, Northfield; Dave Rutley, Finch; Herb Maginnis, Wales, and a number of other officials in the organizations.

Endorsing the work of the Marketing Board during the past year, Mr. Shaver pointed out that there had been only a guarantee on prices from the governments concerned, allowing the board to borrow money for the support purchases. It was not yet known what amount, if any, would be distributed to producers at the end of the fiscal year, since producers had received 30 cents per pound for cheese instead of the lower figure feared last spring.

George Pollock, Berwick, president of Stormont Hog Producers, presented a rather gloomy picture of current prospects for the hog men, due to the expected drop in support price from 26 to 23 cents at the end of the year.

"Hog production will be down 33 per cent in the province and 42 per cent in Stormont," he said, according to an association survey made this fall.

Kenzie McGillivray, of Finch; A. J. McDonald, Eamer's Corners; Herb Maginnis, Wales; Donald McDonnell and several others took part in the discussion on the cheese industry, and made several suggestions given to be taken to the annual meeting at Toronto by the Stormont delegates.

Much more attention to packaging of cheese was urged, along with further improvements in advertising and investigation of the possibity of setting up a sales organization with sales manager and travelling personnel. These suggestions will be placed before the parent organizations in the near future.

RABIES QUARANTINE AREA EXTENDED IN NORTH PRAIRIES

An outbreak of rabies in northern Canada has brought a federal government ban on all movement of dogs out of the designated area and an order that all dogs be confined. Only permission from proper authorities will allow the movement of dogs.

The areas designated in the order issued by Dr. J. G. Taggart, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, and dated December 20, 1952, includes the portions of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba lying north of the 55th parallel. Pitlochrie, Sask., is on the 55th parallel which passes somewhat south of Lesser Slave Lake in Alberta, cuts through the south end of Lac La Ronge, Sask., and Sandy Narrows. Sheridan, Manitoba, is a few miles north of the 55th, and Oxford House, Man., just south of it.

Only sled dogs will be allowed to move inside the area and care must be taken that they do not run at large. Owners or custodians of dogs violating the order will be liable to a penalty under the Animal Contagious Diseases Act.

All dogs that can be reached are being vaccinated. Additional supplies of vaccine were moved into these areas and all people briefed concerning precautions for their own safety, and to prevent the spread of the disease. Briefing is being done in person and by radio, in the English and Indian languages. It is planned, in this way, to set up a barrier to keep the disease from spreading southward.

It has been known that rabies existed among the predatory animals, mainly wolves and foxes,, in the North-West Territories, (where similar restrictions already exist), for at least six years.

A growth in the wild life population of the north, abetted by a decrease in trapping activities, has sent the wild beast farther south in search of food, infecting domestic dogs as they prowl and forage for sustenance. Provincial and federal authorities are cooperating closely to control the disease.

Commenting on recent reports concerning the rabies outbreak in the north, Dr. T. Childs, Veterinary Director General of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, did did not deny the seriousness of any such outbreak, but termed some of the reports "exaggerated." He said control measures were being effectively applied and although the inaccessibility of the area hampered operations considerably, the work was progressing satisfactorily and there was no serious cause for alarm.

Authorities active in the preventative operations report no new outbreaks among the wild animals during recent weeks. The disease has not yet appeared in north Manitoba but precautions are being taken there to strengthen the vaccination barrier.

Provincial authorities in Alberta and Saskatchewan are disposing of rabid animals by poison.

John J. Shaver Mourned at Prescott

The funeral was held from the H. K. Locke Funeral Home, Prescott, of John J. Shaver, prominent carpenter and contractor, who died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Percy Foulds, Ottawa, after a lengthy illness. He was 87 years of age.

Born at Finch, Ont., he went to Prescott as a young man and was a partner in the one-time Grenville Construction Company, which, among other buildings, erected the present Prescott High School. He was also employed at the Dominion Lighthouse Depot during the last war period. He was a life member of Central Lodge, AF and AM, Prescott, and a member of the Board of Session of St. Paul's United Church, Prescott.

He is survived by his wife, the former Catherine Merkley, of Finch, three daughters, Mrs. Percy Moulds, and Mrs. Arthur Morrow, of Ottawa, and Mrs. Clare Brownell, of Detroit, Mich., and two sons, Alonzo, of Detroit and Osborne, of Finch.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. M. B. Jose, of Prescott, assisted by Rev. H. M. Beach, of Finch. Interment was in Sandy Hill cemetery.

BRIGHT JOB OUTLOOK

Bright employment prospects—a bigger labour force—fewer unemployed. That's the outlook as Canada gets ready to step into 1953, says a Financial Post report.

Only one thing might upset this forecast: a spell of unusually bad weather during the winter. Until now, the mild fall has been an important factor in increasing employment, particularly in construction.

Keeping in mind that our civilian labour force at 5.4 millions is 75,000-85,000 larger than it was at this time last year, it's just that much more encouraging for business all along the line. And encouraging too, is the fact that 30,000 of those new jobs came as the result of new industrial plants and expansion.

Total increase for the year is officially estimated at between 75,000 and 85,000; and these figures are conservative.

The most striking growth in employment has been in manufacturing. The index of manufacturing employment now stands higher than it did in 1943 at the peak of the wartime ecort.

He Knew

A small boy's parents were expecting an addition to the family. When the time was drawing near, the father called the child aside to tell him.

"You know," he began vaguely, "that old stork that brings babies has been flying around our house—"

"Help!" the boy interrupted, "I hope he doesn't scare mother—she's going to have a baby, you know."

Building Your Own House

Evelyn Gibbs, once editor of the BBC's "Woman's Hour" and now a free-lance writer and journalist, broadcast recently about the people in Britain who are building their own houses. One evening last June she visited a site near Reading and saw little houses going up in pairs and the secretary of the Housing Association was sitting on the roof of one in earnest consultation with some of the people who give their services, in the form of professional advice, to the amateur housebuilders. He told her the history of the Reading Family Housing Association as he showed her around. The group first met three years ago but did not start building until February, 1952, the intervening time being spent on forming the Association, making plans, acquiring land and getting the necessary permits. Now the fifty members intend to build fifty houses and the local authorities have co-operated very fully in many ways. The members have each put twenty-five pounds into the funds and also subscribe two shillings a week and out of these funds have come the money for the equipment. Each member has signed a covenant undertaking to put in a minimum time each week and to continue working until all the buildings are finished; they are liable to lose financially if they do not keep this contract. The Association's members come from many trades and professions, carpenters, joiners, plasterers, plumbers and electricians amongst them, but unfortunately they have no bricklayers. The office is a wooden hut on the site where two war-disabled members order materials, time people on and off the job, and keep progress records.

The houses cost about a thousand pounds and are all built to one plan. A professional architect who was generous enough to reduce his fee was employed on the job and before working out his plans had a long preliminary meeting with the members and their wives to hear their views. The houses are semi-detached, with a big centrally heated living-room, smaller room and kitchen on the ground floor. There are three bedrooms, bathroom and W.C. upstairs and plenty of built-in cupboards on both floors. A garage is attached to each house. The tenants themselves decide such individual matters as the placing of electric points, colour of tiles and type of cooker to be installed. When Evelyn Gibbs paid her second visit progress was marked. Roofs were on eight houses and the next pair were up to roof level for the Committee had decided to push on quickly with outside work and leave indoor finishing for the bad weather. The members worked a steady twenty-eight hours a week minimum in the summer and even in autumn were keeping up to twenty-three with the help of artificial light they had installed themselves.

She took another journey to a Rutland village where seven men are building bungalows for themselves. Although this enterprise is on a smaller scale both societies are affiliated to the National Federation of Housing Societies and have adopted their rules. In Rutland the members include two bricklayers who are giving tuition to their colleagues. The men are all building bungalows of the same size but the plans vary with each man. Evelyn Gibbs came away from her visits full of admiration for these people who were personally tackling Britain's acute housing problem. It meant giving up every moment of leisure for a considerable while but she found them all "deeply absorbed, oblivious of time, with that carefree concentration many of us get from messing about with boats." She could not help thinking too, of the long hours of work at home before the actual building began, the writing of letters, working out of amounts and mastering rules and regulations. But the end of it all was something overwhelmingly worth while, the possession, within foreseeable time, of homes of their own.

MORE PEOPLE NEEDED

People create jobs. Where there are no people threre are no jobs.

In a country like Canada where there are great undeveloped resources to work on, the more people we have the more jobs there will be.

Still we haven't enough people to defend our shores or to defend the trade routes that are necessary to our prosperity.

We should be strong enought to have a voice in world affairs proportionate to the value of the territory we have to guard.

But all the voice we have or are likely to have is in proportion to our military strenght.

We need enough people to develop our country and to defend it.

In no other way can we hope to retain our country, our freedom or our self-respect.

FLYING BOATS

Flying boats are not yet relics of the past, for these machines may play an important part in the jet age.

In California the Consolidated Vultee firm is designing the world's first supersonic flying boats, with the already well-known swept-wing and Delta-wing features.

Nine radio-controlled models, with spans between five and ten feet and powered by midget pulse-jet engines, take the air daily, and have their performance recorded by a battery of cameras. Their weight, power, and acceleration are all true to scale.

Noteworthy features of these beautiful little machines are their long, sleek hulls, which lie low in the water for stability, and thereby avoid the need for wing-tip floats.

The wings—some of them swept back at an angle of 50 degrees to delay the onset of supersonic shock waves—are blended into the hulls to offer the least possible drag.

While ploughing in a field at Ellesmere in Shropshire a man found 349 Roman silver coins.

OPPORTUNITY IS KNOCKING

The regional director of the American Meteor Society at Geneva, N.Y., recently announced that the organization will pay a dollar a pound for meteorites brought to it. And, in addition, there will be a bonus of 5 dollars for those found on New York State soil. So far, only seven meteorites have been turned in. Altogether, the society says there are probably thousands of them lying around, either on the ground or right under it.

Near Murfreesboro, Ark., about 60 miles south of Hot Springs, lies the only diamond mine in the United States. For the nominal fee of $1.25 anybody can enter the 80-acre field where the diamonds are, stay there all day and keep any diamonds he finds. One lucky visitor, a geologist, recently found a valuable one. The Arkansas stones are said to be of good quality, and a local expert advises that they are 28 per cent harder than any other diamond.

A CAMERA PROBLEM

Scientists who design cameras for Britains photographic jet aircraft have a problem to solve—they have to make a camera fast enough to take pictures from a low-flying plane travelling more than 800 feet a second.

As the film whirls through the camera it will have to cover all the ground and provide an overlap so that a continuous picture is available. The cameras must wind on the film, re-set the shutter, make the exposure—all in a fraction of a second—to keep up with the speed of the plane.

Several ideas have been tried. The first involved a "master" and a "slave" camera. By an ingenious system the opening of the shutters of these cameras was carefully timed so that the "master" took a continuous picture until it was necessary to wind on more film, when the "slave" took over.

Another system employed a shutterless camera with a fim moving continuously as a speed calculated to be the same as that of the ground below as it moved across the lens. But this meant that the pilot had to fly at a pre-determined speed and height.

Neither of these methods have provided the complete answer, so research is still continuing.

In Korea jet reconnaissance planes of the U.S. Air Force are using an automatic scanner to control speed of their shutterless cameras. This amazing device analyses the ground speed of the air craft and works out the speed at which the film must pass through the camera.

Operating Tractors The Safe Way

A preliminary count shows thirty Saskatchewan farm people killed in tractor accidents in 1951. In relation to the number of farmers using tractors and the death rate from the number of accidents in other occupations this figure may not seem high. The tragic side is that most of the accidents could have been prevented if the operator had followed a policy of safety first. The survey shows 60 per cent of the deaths were caused by tractors upsetting. Tractors can upset for many reasons, it is pointed out in the Weekly Letter, Dominion Experimental Station, Swift Current, Sask. A list of the common reasons is as follows:

1. Turning corners at high speeds.
2. Brakes not balanced with the result that the brake on one side operates before the other, throwing the tractor on one side.
3. Driving the tractor too fast over rough ground so that the operator in his efforts to hang on, loses control of late tractor.
4. Trying to take short cuts over steep banks and ditches.
5. Making "Jack rabbit" starts when the tractor is pulling a heavy load causing the tractor to go over backward.
6. Hitching loads to some part of the tractor other than the draw bar. This makes the possibility of the tractor overturning backward very much greater.

Several people are killed each year by being run over by a tractor. This can happen when the operator permits the following unsafe practice.

1. Hooking up implements by backing the tractor while standing on the ground.
2. Riding on the tractor draw bar or fenders.
3. Allowing others to ride on the tractor.
4. Allowing children to operate tractors.
5. Allowing children to ride on, and play around tractors.

If the operator is conscious of these dangers and always takes time to be safe, the number of people killed and hurt by tractors will be reduced.

Morewood W.I. Meet At Marcellus Home

The December meeting of the Morewood Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Russell Marcellus and was presided over by the president, Mrs. Harold Stewart, assisted by the secretary, Mrs. Donald Runions.

The roll call was "What we may do to make Christmas happier for others."

Mrs. D. Runions reported on the knitting and sewing which several members did for the Children's Aid Society in Cornwall. A letter was read from the "Save the Children Fund."

The meeting voted $15.00 to the Oddfellows towards the annual Santa Claus treat for the children. It was decided to pack Christmas cheer boxes for the shut-ins.

The annual "At Home" will be held the latter part of January. The programe convener is Mrs. Chas. Crump. Mrs. Frank Casselman gave a very appropriate motto, "Scatter gladness, joy and mirth, all along the ways of others."

The members and visitors exchanged Christmas gifts.

Lunch was served by the hostess, Mrs. C. Crump, Mrs. B. Whittaker, Mrs. R. Steinberg, Mrs. E. Barclay, Mrs. G. Crump and Mrs. A Lasalle.

THE DANGERS OF RHETORIC

There is no doubt that rhetorical questions should only be indulged in with the greatest caution, and at one's own risk. We must not forget the painful experience of the chaplain of a lunatic asylum who asked his congregation dramatically: "Why are we all here?" only to receive the devastating reply: "Because we are not all there."

Daughter had been invited to her first formal dance. She pleaded for a strapless gown, but mother wouldn't hear to it.

After arguing bitterly, they put the problem up to father.

"Let her try it on," advised Dad. "If it doesn't fall down she's old enough to wear it."

MOST VALUED of gifts bestowed by the passing of years is the memory of pleasant relations with those we serve. With sincere appreciation of your friendliness we extend wishes for

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN

Hydro Home Economist

Happy New Year Everybody! Let us face this coming year with new hope, new enthusiasm and new resolves. No matter how big or small the problems may be, try and enjoy doing them. Remember the merry heart makes a cheerful countenance which always has a winning way.

We hope our homemaking ideas will bring a kind word or happiness for you during this holiday week-end.

TAKE A TIP

Ideas for the holiday week-end:

1. One pinch of curry powder adds a zip to chicken soup or warmed gravy.
2. Leftover liver sausage may be shaped into balls, rolled in crumbs and browned in fat. Serve in boiled spaghetti heated in tomato soup.
3. Waldorf salad is made by mixing 3 cups shredded cabbage, 2-3 cup diced apple (peel left on), ½ cup diced celery and ¼ cup mixed walnuts with ½ cup boiled dressing.
4. If you have served buttered beets as one vegetable, use the juice to make tomato aspic in place of part of the tomato juice.
5. A good vitamin salad has equal parts of shredded raw beets and carrots and diced celery tossed together with a lemon and oil dressing.
6. A holiday salad uses lime flavoured gelatine made tart by substituting 1 tbsp. vinegar in place of 1 tbsp. water. Chill in a bowl until firm. Beat 1 minute and then fold cubes of pineapple and shrimp into the whipped jelly.
7. As a special dish for supper, mix raw oysters and coarsley cubed turkey in cream of celery soup or cream sauce. Serve on hot split biscuits and canned buttered green beans.
8. Too many desserts during Cristmas often call for a tangy finale at this time. Serve sliced chilled oranges or sectioned grapefruit with maraschino cherries. Another favourite is assorted cheese and crackers.
9. Holiday punch may be quantities of orange, pineapple and cranberry juices with sweet cider. Pour over crushed ice. The garnish may be a few cooked cranberries.
10. Sprinkle potato chips with grated old cheese and pop into hot oven. Serve hot with cold meats.
11. Roast ham: Stud your holiday ham with peanuts and spread with honey during the last hour of baking.
12. To save space in a rangette, cook the second vegetable in the roast pan. For instance, heat cooked mashed sweet potatoes in the neck of the roast turkey or place potatoes to bake on the shelf around the roast pan. Heat canned green beans in aluminum foil alongside the roast—or serve canned tomatoes.
13. To serve leftover turkey: (a) Cold turkey slices; (b) turkey soup; (c) salad; (d) sandwiches; (e) casserole dishes with cream sauce base. (Do not try to steam or reheat roast fowl without sauce or gray.)
14. Fruit cake may be cut into neat slices if you use a sharp knife dipped in hot water. To keep cake moist cut the cake through the centre and slice either cut side, then push cake together again and wrap in foil.
15. If you have been given an automatic percolator be sure to start with cold water and allow 15 minutes to make coffee. However, the coffee may be prepared earlier since the heat control will keep it hot without overperking.
16. To make a good carmel syrup: Heat 1 cup white sugar in a dry heavy frying pan. As the sugar melts it will form lumps which will dissolve in a few minutes if stirred constantly. As it begins to brown, turn heat off and stir until desired colour. Remove from heat and carefully pour ½ cup boiling water in. Stir over warm element. Store in covered jar when cool.
17. After-dinner mints: Soak 1 tbsp. plain gelatine in ¼ cup cold water for 5 minutes; dissolve over hot water. Pour into a larger bowl and gradually add 3 cups icing sugar until mixture may be kneaded. Divide mixture into 2 or 3 parts, flavour and colour as desired with wintergreen, peppermint or cinnamon flavouring. Cut into small circles. (Do not use oil of wintergreen, etc.)

THE NATURAL THING

A guest at a party in Huntington Park, Calif., celebrating a neighbour's acquisition of a television set, didn't like one of the programmes, so he drew a pistol and put a bullet through the screen.

* * * * *

A Los Angeles woman won her suit for divorce by complaining that her husband watched television all the time and when she protested, threw things at her.

* * * * *

When a resident of Paarl, South Africa, found that the sandals that he had bought did not fit him properly, he corrected this by cutting off the end of one of his toes.

* * * * *

When a man in Alfred, Me., concluded that his neighbour's trees interfered with the view of the ocean from his porch, he had them cut down. He then paid damages of $16,000.

Broadcasting and The Coronation

The Coronation of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II in Wesminster Abbey next June is an event which will draw the attention of millions of people all over the world. But many of those who want to see, hear or read about this historic ceremony have little idea of its real signifigance, of the place of the Crown in history and Constitution of Britain, nor indeed of Britain itself. The BBC's General Overseas Service, which reaches all corners of the globe and is now doing its utmost to give its listeners, in a series of talks and feature programmes, a comprehensive picture of the British Crown and Constitution and the traditions from which they have grown.

The broadcasts started in October with two programmes of "Welcome to Britain", telling intending visitors how to get there and how to get about when they arrived. They are continuing with features on British inns, hotels and youth hostels, for few of the people coming to Britain in Coronation year will want to spend all their time in London. The National parks in which some of the United Kingdom's loveliest countryside is preserved will be the subject of a programme and a selection of Britain's stately homes will also be described.

There will be a programme on the Court of St. James's, and four ambitious features called "Throne and People," depicting the place of the monarch in British life during the last five reigns. "Scrapbook" broadcasts will focus on 1902, Edward VII's Coronation year, 1953, George V's Jubilee year, and 1906, 1919 and 1929 to make a representative half-century of life in Britain.

"Ceremonial Way" will describe the buildings on the route that the Coronation procession will take from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Abbey, and there will be a full-length broadcast on the Abbey itself. Smaller programmes will be broadcast on the Queen's Men—the Yeomen of the Guard, the Sovereign's Escort, the Guard of Honour and offices of state which the Coronation brings into special prominence. A few days before the Coronation the Archbishop of Canterbury will talk on its religious signifigance. These and many other broadcasts connected with this historic and fortunately infrequent ceremony will be heard in the General Overseas Service, but all the BBC's many services are covering the event, and on June 2nd every service will be fully extended.

The doctor was puzzled. "You ought to be pretty well by now," he said. "Have you carried out my instructions?"

"Well," said the patient, "I've done most of them, but I can't take the two-mile walk every morning that you ordered. I get too dizzy."

"What do you mean—dizzy?" asked the doctor.

"Well," said the patient, "I must have forgotten to tell you, I'm a lighthouse-keeper."

THE DREAMER
By Thomas Nunan

WE USED TO DREAM of things he'd do
When grown to be a man,
Beguiling boyhood years away
With many an idle plan.

And now, when grown to be a man,
He knows no greater joy
Than dreaming of the things he'd do
If he were still a boy.
