Matilda Winter Carnival kicks off this Saturday

MIKE VAN RAALTE
Staff Writer

MATILDA—Organizers for this year's Matilda Winter Carnival encourage everyone to come out and participate.

"We've got lots of events for people of all ages," said Committee Vice-Chair Cindy Peters. "It's to give people in the community something to do during January."

The Carnival kicks off Saturday night at the Matilda Hall in Dixon's Corners, with the crowning of the Matilda Carnival Queen, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Open to any Matilda resident 16-years of age or older, the pageant features seven local residents vying for the title this year: Jodi DeJong, Marguerite LaFaver, Nonnie Benson, Carole Kirkwood, Tammy Henderson, Sara Tibben and Morgan Allin.

Judges evaluate the contestants on a variety of criteria, including: participation, versatility, enthusiasm, interest in others, sincerity, self-confidence, credibility, enunciation, posture and attire.

Participants receive cash prizes of $110 for participating; the winner receives $200 extra in cash plus $300 in prizes; the runner-up $150 cash plus prizes; and Miss Congeniality (selected by the contestants themselves) receives $100 plus prizes.

The winners promise to represent the community at a variety of fund-raising activities held throughout the year.

Former Brockville Mayor Steve Clarke will M.C. the pageant, and celebrity judges include John Burke, Global Television's senior Parliamentary Correspondent; Sandra Lawn, the former mayor of Prescott; and Darryl Dingman, who works for CFJR radio in Brockville.

The pageant traditionally has been the best-attended event of the Carnival, with more than 500 people cramming Matilda Hall and overflowing into the aisles.

Peters advises residents to get there early to ensure a good seat.

On Sunday, Carnival organizers will be hosting a Pancake Breakfast and Face-painting from 10:30-1:30 p.m at Matilda Hall..

The brunch will feature family entertainment from Ottawa entertainer Paddy Stewart, at 11:30 a.m. & 12:30 p.m.

"He does a lot of action songs, and games to get the kids involved in his show," Peters said.

From 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. , organizers have scheduled a Family Fun Afternoon at the Brinston Memorial Park, with skating, games contests, organized by volunteer families, and snowmobile rides sponsored by the Mainsville-Pittston Snowmobile Club (events will be moved to Matilda Hall if weather is poor).

Monday night, the committee has scheduled Country Entertainment with square-dancing and line-dancing demonstrations. Contests will be held, and everyone is welcome to participate.

"Pretty well anything goes," was the way Peters described Amateur Talent Night, scheduled for Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Matilda Hall.

"It's open for all ages, and we're hoping for a good response."

The carnival continues Wednesday afternoon, from 1:30 - 3:30 p.m., with an Afternoon Tea and Social Hour, featuring local country band "Diamond Country."

On Thursday, a Bingo tournament is scheduled, with a $1,000 jackpot available. Doors open at 6 p.m.

Friday's pre-teen dance begins at 6 p.m., with admission $2. It's followed by the Teen Dance, from 9-12 p.m, featuring the local high school rock band OMEGA. Admission is $3 per person.

Saturday's events include the Dr Tom Maxwell Memorial Car and Snowmobile Rally, plus a supper, entertainment and dance.

Registration for the car-and-snowmobile rally begins at 11:00 a.m.

From 2-6 p.m., the show will feature Mary Perry and Grenville County County.

Supper will be served from 4-6 p.m., and entertainment from Bob and Yvonne Sprague will follow from 6:30-8:00 p.m.

The Rock-a-Billy-Boys will provide the music for the dance, scheduled from 8 p.m.-1 a.m. at Matilda Hall.

Admission is $12 for the whole day's activities; $5 for the dance only; $7 for the supper only ($3 for kids/ 5 and under free); and $3 for the rally only.

A Family Sleigh Ride and Weiner Roast is scheduled on Sunday from 1-3:30 p.m at the farm of Ron Smail in the east of Brinston (watch for signs). Admission is free, although the committee will be accepting donations.

A hymn sing will follow at 7 p.m. in Matilda Hall, and at 7:30 p.m., a Ecumerical Church Service will be held to finish off the week's activities, sponsored by the Matilda Helping Hands.

It's the 19th year now for the Winter Carnival, an event which seems to get bigger and bigger every year.

Region's First Baby
Chase Daniel Maclean took a while getting here, but at seven pounds, six ounces, he's the apple of his mother Carolyn's eye. Here the two pose for a picture at the Winchester Hospital on Monday morning.

Area's first new year's baby delivered at 2:30 p.m. Jan. 1

MIKE VAN RAALTE
Staff Writer

WINCHESTER—He came a little late, and he sure took his time about getting here.

But he's healthy, strong and full of life.

Chase Daniel MacLean decided not to make his appearance until 2:30 p.m., Saturday afternoon.

It was a full week later than originally scheduled, but it gave the local celebrity a little extra notoriety in the maternity ward.

Chase was the first baby born in the Winchester Hospital for 1994, weighing in at seven pounds, six ounces.

On Monday, his proud mother, Carolyn MacLean, 21, of Finch, described her rather lengthy delivery.

"He was due for Christmas, but that didn't happen. I first went into labor on Thursday night. I had contractions for two days and came into the hospital Friday night at 8:30 p.m. The delivery was performed by Dr Elizabeth Rivington of Morrisburg the next afternoon."

MacLean took a little medication on Friday night, but nothing on Saturday, the day the baby was born.

It was her first delivery, and for now at least, she's thinks her last.

"It's a good thing he wasn't much later," she said, matting down Chase's spiky brown hair.

MacLean said she and the baby's father, Daniel MacMillan, jointly decided on the baby's name after looking through one of those books.

"I'd say he looks more like his dad; he has the same ears. But everybody's saying different things."

She's still trying to figure out how the boy got his bright-blue eyes, considering both parents have brown eyes.

The dark hair, she figures, will lighten-up as the boy gets older, much like her's did years ago.

Other than the exhausting delivery, Chase has been, for the most part, the model child so far, his mom said.

"I thought it would be a lot worse than this. But I really haven't had a lot of experience yet."

She'd like to get him to stop sucking his thumb and scratching his face, however, so she's attached a special sleeve over his hand.

And it's apparent Chase is having a little trouble adjusting to his celebrity-status.

He was less than amused during picture-taking time, making nasty faces and loudly voicing his disapproval.

Most merchants pleased with Christmas sales and "bonus bucks"

C. THOMPSON
Leader Staff

MORRISBURG—Christmas sales were moderately good this year, say local retailers who are reporting varied successes in the 1993 season.

At a time when many retailers are happy just to pay their bills, sales have been ranging from excellent, to good, to break-even with previous years.

According to Brian Wheeler, owner of Mr. Grocer's. "It was a good Christmas. Sales were definitely up."

Wheeler estimates a 10 to 15 per cent increase in sales over last year, and that "more people buying locally" may be the cause.

Brent Kerr, manager at the Biway, says that over-all sales were up five to six per cent, and clothing sales were up a substantial 12-13 per cent.

"It was great, the place was just a zoo on the 23rd, and the 24th. The 23rd was one of the busiest days the store has ever had," Kerr said.

One reason for sales was a good selection of items. "This year we had the stock. There were a lot of toys this year we don't normallly carry. This and our usual discount prices on children's clothing was a draw for our traditional shopper," Kerr stated.

Working mothers, and stay-at-home mothers with children form a good part of the store's clientele.

"And we had quite a selection of ladies and men's wear which were our two best selling items," Kerr commented.

While sales in snowsuits were acceptable, sales in boots at the Biway were down somewhat due to insufficient snow in November and December, when people usually purchase their winter footwear.

While Jane Ewing, owner of the dollar discount store, Pokey's Place, didn't have a previous year to compare with, she was happy with the response since the store opened. "Since we opened, we're more than pleased with the support shown, and we did very well over the Christmas season too. From December 1-24, was a peak period for us."

The store carried Christmas bags, baskets, dishes and serviettes. During the first week in December, Pokey's was sold out of several Christmas items.

Pleased with "Bucks"

Jeannette Smith, manager at Biba, had compared figures between 1992 and 1993, and reported comparable sales for the last month.

Smith was also happy with the response to the Bonus Bucks program. "I think the Bonus Bucks were really good, the people reacted well. We're still getting them in now," she said.

The program is based on coupon discounts, where rebates to the customer are based on a percentage of his or her purchases.

Gord Lane, owner of Seaway Pharmacy, says Christmas sales ran "neck and neck with last year."

Lane said, although it was hard to "pin down how effective the Bonus Bucks program was, it had to be to get a response, and we had a good return on them."

"It was a good economical way of advertising, and I'd like to see it year-round, or perhaps also in the summer," Lane added.

According to Tom Morrow, owner of the gift shop Pier 31, sales averaged those of previous years, but business came at different times. "It was a funny year. Usually the first of December starts off and gets b... ier until Chr... year, it w... had a rea...

Residents invited to a "chipping bee" at Waterfront Park

C. THOMPSON
Leader Staff

MORRISBURG—If everybody "chips in", residents can lower the town's garbage costs and help the environment at the same time.

The Village invites residents to do both by bringing their Christmas trees to the parking lot at the Ball Diamond. Coordinated by Clayton Sampson, project officer at the Environmental Resource Center, there will be a "chipping bee" on Friday, January 15, at the Waterfront Park.

"It's a volunteer thing to get people to bring them down, and we'll chip them on the spot," said commissioner of Public Works Cam Martel.

Here the town chipping machine will be used to grind the used trees into compostable chips. The event will be a first for the Village, and perhaps offer an opportunity for socialization.

"It'll be a chance to meet and say hello to your neighbour. If you didn't have a chance to do that over the holidays, people can get together then," Martel said.

The Village has already advertised, that trees are not to be taken to the compost site at the end of Industrial Road. And chipping Christmas trees is an environmentally friendly way to dispose and make good use of the material.

After the trees are broken into chips, the chips are composted in the Village compost pile. As they have done in the past, residents are invited to help themselves to excellent compost for gardens, backfill, etc. The practice is a definite improvement over the old method of taking trees to the landfill site, as they took years to decompose.

Martel reported a successful past year for the Village in terms of overall waste management. "We had cooperation from the townspeople especially regarding the number of changes we did, in an effort to save the site."

The Williamsburg landfill site has a limited life span of seven to eight years, which could be extended with care to 15. The Township started charging tipping fees last spring in an attempt to raise funds to cover garbage costs. The Village is under the same tipping fee schedule as Williamsburg, and has been paying $200 a dump truckload to dispose of its garbage at the site.

"We'll be looking at the situation in 1994 to see if we can improve at all this year. and if we can extend the life of the landfill site by seven to eight years, it will be a big savings to the community," Martel said.

Tipping fee costs for last year were not available by press time. Even when figures are known, the picture will be incomplete, since fees have been in effect only since April. However, there should be a more accurate assessment at the end of this year.

"We're looking at replacement of the site with Williamsburg. We hope we can make it last, because it will be megabucks to build a new site," Martel added.

Both the Township and the Village of Morrisburg have composting and recycling programs. Morrisburg has a household recycling contract with Town Cartage Limited of Brockville, which is finished at the end of 1995.

In addition, the Township has purchased a compartmentalized roll-off recycling bin to be placed at the landfill site, which should make their recycling more efficient.

Snow removal on target

While attempting to control waste management costs Martel said that the Village snow removal budget is on target this year, due to smaller amounts of snow in November and December. The Village will stay within its $80,000 budget for "Winter control" despite a projected overrun of $10,000 last year.

However recent repairs to Village water lines have eaten into the sewer and water budget. "We seem to have had more sewer breaks during the cold snap. Some of the old pipes underground are giving in," Martel said.

The Village crew has worked on breaks at Broder Crescent, Church Street, and on Lakeshore Drive, and Martel says repairs are very expensive. "Fixing a water break can cost anywhere from $800 to $3-4,000 depending on what's involved," he said.

That's why Council intends to do a thorough job on whatever sewer and water projects they decide on. "That's what we did with St. Lawrence Street. We did everything when we were down there to save going back down. We don't want to go back down there and tear it up," Martel said.

The Village is currently undergoing a needs study on the water and sewer system. After examining the needs, Council will determine a plan for immediate and long-term upgrading.

Playhouse big winner

Christmas sales

and most of the coupons were redeemed. "I'd say it was a good promotion."

Nick Theodosiou, owner of New Centennial Restaurant, said business was about the same as last year, although there might have been a difference because Christmas came on the weekend.

New Centennial was closed on Christmas Day, and open on Boxing Day. The restaurant is always busy on Fridays, which was Christmas Eve this year, and at this time many stores were closed. "But what we lost on Saturday, we made up on Wednesday and Thursday."

Cook's Corner owner Lynn Irven hadn't yet gone over the books but felt business was down slightly, although numbers of customers appeared to be up. "Some people doing fruit cakes last year spent $50-$60 per person. This year the size of the order is down. People are pricing more this year."

But since more customers were coming in the door, the numbers could balance out, once all figures were in.

Irven said the Bonus Bucks appeared to have little effect on sales. "People kept them for retention. They were using them because it's a good time for baking anyway."

While sales varied from store to store, it was generally agreed among most retailers, that the season was at least as profitable as its 1992 predecessor.

Canadian Astronaut
Dr Dave Williams was in the local area over the Christmas holidays visiting his mother. He's preparing for an upcoming mission to the Russian Mir Space Station.

Williamsburg's own

Former Doctor prepares for space mission

MIKE VAN RAALTE
Staff Writer

WILLIAMSBURG—When Dr. Dafydd (Dave) Rhys Williams takes control of a "Vomit Comet," it's not just for recreational flying.

He's into serious diving — testing how his body handles micro-gravity.

Scuba-diving isn't just for sport either: training underwater remains one of the best ways of simulating micro-gravity on earth.

As one of Canada's eight astronauts, Williams is preparing for an upcoming 30-day mission.

If everything goes to schedule, he could be flying to the Russian Mir Space Station within the next three to four years.

Last week, the Life-Sciences specialist was in Williamsburg visiting his mother, Isobel. She bought an old stone farmhouse on Whitteker Road two years ago.

Speaking by telephone, Williams seemed totally enthralled with his new profession.

"It's certainly pretty exciting," he said, pointing to the cutting-edge research-and-exploration with which he's involved.

"Just being part of the work process is a real thrill."

Williams has finished one year of basic training, and now he's learning more about the operational aspects of space travel.

Before embarking on any flights, he'll spend an additional one to two years on mission-specific training, preparing himself for the upcoming flight.

There's also a number of outstanding issues the Canadian Space Agency must negotiate with the Russians—especially the specific payload (cargo) sent, and the primary and alternative astronauts chosen.

Civilian background

Growing-up in the 1960s in Quebec, Williams had dreamed of becoming an astronaut, but never really took the idea seriously.

He'd studied science and neurophysiology at McGill, and later became a family-physician in the Kitchener-Waterloo area, specializing in emergency medicine.

While working as an emergency physician at the Sunnybrook Health Science Centre, Williams noticed a Canadian Space Agency advertisement in a local newspaper.

On a lark, he responded to the call, and later beat out hundreds of other applicants, including several with medical backgrounds.

He's now an expert in the field of space medicine, having specialized since June 1992 in the diagnosis and prevention of injuries to astronauts.

A transforming industry

William's background isn't so unusual for astronauts anymore.

What was once an industry dominated by those with operational skills—especially experimental test pilots with military backgrounds—has become one taken over by civilian specialists with expertise in the sciences.

It's now about a 50/50 ratio, Williams believes, and the trend is likely to continue.

Today's astronauts conduct numerous experiments while in space. They must develop expertise in how to use complicated equipment, and they must have some familiarity with the latest developments in a wide range of scientific investigations.

"You have to be willing to learn a lot of different things," he said, depending on the payload.

For his mission, Williams expects he'll be experimenting with fluid physics and metallurgy, as well as a number of life-sciences (tele-medical) projects he and other Canadian scientists have been developing.

"That's our specialty. Within Canada there's a tremendous expertise in the life sciences. We're trying to put together the best package we can."

And there's tremendous potential practical spinoffs from the research.

Right now, Williams and his associates are working on on ways of relieving disuse-muscle atrophy, a muscle shrinking disorder which happens to the astronauts when they don't move around enough over a long period of time.

They've been looking into applying charged electrodes to the surface of the skin, which can be turned on when the astronaut sleeps.

This innovative project, if it works, could be applied to patients suffering from knee injuries for example. The electrodes would be placed under the cast to prevent shrinkage and speed up the healing process.

One practical application of Space Agency research already being used by the medical profession came from the diagnostic equipment used in the field. The technology behind the portable heart-monitor, carried around by paramedics, came originally from Space Agency research.

Tight-knit profession

With less than 400 astronauts worldwide, Williams said he personally knows most of the major players worldwide.

He's constantly in touch with researchers in Canada, the United States (NASA), Russia, Europe and Japan, sharing research discoveries and exchanging ideas.

Williams isn't into making predictions of where the Space Program will be in twenty years time. Nevertheless, he argues nothing's out of the question, be it colonies on the moon or trips to Mars.

"You think of the changes in aviation this century. Eighty-ninety years ago, those clunkers could barely get off the ground. Now we have planes flying faster than the speed of sound."

Williamsburg Council

Reeve outlines 94 agenda

MIKE VAN RAALTE
Staff Writer

WILLIAMSBURG—All things considered, 1993 wasn't a bad year for Williamsburg council, said the Reeve Johnny Whitteker.

Looking back on the year which just ended, he spoke optimistically of the future while explaining the difficulties the township faced resulting from social-contract transfer-payment cutbacks.

"We've had to postpone a number of projects," said the veteran of more than forty years in municipal politics. "But I'm hopeful we can get to them in '94."

One project he referred to specifically was the street-light initiative, originally scheduled for 1993.

In the end, council had to postpone putting up lights at the eight intersections along Hwy # 31 in Williamsburg because they ran out of money. But the reeve assured township residents the project remains high on his list of priorities for 1994.

"It's more for those passing through than for local residents. It's dangerous if you don't know where you're going."

The township did receive rural numbering.

Some of the signs were constructed parellel to the road and others perpendicular. But they all served their purpose, Whitteker argued—helping township workers in times of emergencies.

Blacktopping township roads remains high on the reeve's list of priorities for 1994.

Williamsburg Township already has a much higher percentage of total roads blacktopped then many other surrounding municipalities.

But Whitteker thinks more paving should be done, both for safety reasons and for long-term cost-savings.

The reeve said he's excited the township managed to secure funding to construct 31 low-income housing units from the Ontario Housing Ministry.

"Some will be one-bedrooms, others will be two. They'll be mostly for the seniors."

The proposed location for construction is a 2.5 acre parcel of private property south of Church Street, to the west and opposite the playing fields, adjacent to the funeral home.

Williamsburg was the only municipality in Stormont-Dundas to receive new non-profit units.

Not only will the project provide local jobs for the community, Whitteker said, it will provide much-needed low-income housing.

Pointing to the year ahead, Whitteker couldn't help but throw in a personal endorsement to the federal Liberals, the party for which he's long supported, and once ran provincially.

"There's a new sense of optimism here, with a new government. Things are looking up."

Matilda's new official plan highlights busy year

MIKE VAN RAALTE
Staff Writer

MATILDA—Providing a steady, guiding hand and avoiding dangerous pitfalls which could get the Township in trouble:

That's the role Reeve Charles Barkley envisions for himself and other members of council as they head into 1994.

Speaking candidly from his farm in Matilda Township, Barkley reviewed the year which just ended. He also discussed what he sees on the horizon in the year ahead.

"We've done fairly well, I think," the reeve said, referring to the township staff. "We're holding our own, considering the stretching dollars."

One project he's glad council has behind them is the updated New Official Plan, which will take effect in 1994.

Council ratified the comprehensive rezoning legislation two weeks ago, after holding an open house in the clerk's office at council chambers.

Updating a previous by-law passed in 1980, it incorporates all amendments added since that time.

The bill was drafted-up by J.L. Richards of Ottawa.

It rezones some agricultural land to rural, which allows some development, and it takes into account tighter Ministry of Natural Resources wetland restrictions.

The Reeve also points to the work council has done on behalf of the township's seniors, including helping to create a spinoff of the Outreach program.

A satellite of a similar project in Williamsburg Township, the organization will provide care for seniors in Matilda.

Council remains hopeful they will be able to secure provincial funding to convert Stampville School to a Seniors' Centre.

The township already has secured money for an extension to Matilda Hall. They're hoping to transfer that money to the Stampville project.

Extensions to the Brinston Drainage pipeline will continue as scheduled. The Township has finalized funding arrangements with the involved neighbors and the project has been given the go-ahead.

Other that these ongoing projects, the Reeve said the Township's major priorities will be maintaining and upgrading the existing infrastructure.

"This being a rural area, the roads, they're always a major concern."

Barkley said he's proud the township managed to avoid cutbacks and tax hikes at a time of government grant and transfer-payment cutbacks.

But he's not anticipating any major spending projects for 1994.

"It's not a time of expansion. We've got to ride this thing (the recession) out. It's getting harder and harder.""

Join the majority

Each year, towards the end of the month of January, one particular week is set aside as National Non-Smoking Week. This observation has now been going on for seventeen years, and has become the largest, most successful such educational campaign in the world. Its aim, of course, is to bring even more forcefully to the attention of even more people the very grave danger to your health of the smoking habit.

Here's what happens to your body, with every cigarette you smoke:

In just three seconds, a cigarette makes your heart beat faster, shoots your blood pressure up, replaces oxygen in your blood with carbon monoxide, and leaves cancer-causing chemicals to spread throughout your entire body. As the cigarettes add up, the damage adds up. Because it's the cumulative effects of smoking, adding this one cigarette to all the cigarettes you've ever smoked, that causes the trouble.

So the younger you start, the greater your danger. (For instance, if you're fifteen, you'll have smoked a lot more cigarettes by the time you're 30 than someone who started at 20.)

Also, people who start young tend to become heavy smokers, and heavy smokers run a greater risk. Again the cumulative effect: the more cigarettes you smoke, the faster they add up.

There is only one person who can liberate the one who is so addicted to nicotine that he or she allows it to overcome reason, and damage his or her health. And that one person is the addict.

But despite the widespread knowledge of the harmfulness of smoking, many youngsters still start, and many adults and even seniors continue each year. Society, it seems, still just refuses to heed the warnings. Smoking remains our nation's number one health problem. Do you know of any other disease which spends so many millions of dollars in their annual advertising budget? Did you know that the risk of contracting lung cancer is more than fourteen times as great among smokers as among non-smokers?

Some smokers may be discouraged at facing the remainder of their life (or even a week, or a month) abstaining from smoking; some find that they can cope with one day in spite of jeers and jibes from associates. For them, "Weedless Wednesday" was initiated many years ago, to at least make a start towards quitting the smoking habit for good.

But why wait for non-smoking week to get on the bandwagon and join the majority? Why not make the decision now to join the majority? Don't wait until next week. Do it now! You'll be so glad you did!

The ship that's worth a dime

Faced with a record deficit and a prolonged economic downturn, the Nova Scotia government is considering where to cut next. So Tourism Minister Ross Bragg is wondering if his government should repair the rotting wooden frames of the schooner Bluenose II, or sell the vessel for scrap now that she's no longer seaworthy.

The Bluenose II is a 30-year-old replica of the original schooner launched in Lunenburg, N.S. in 1921. Transatlantic passenger liners may have been grander and dreadnought battleships mightier. But the old Bluenose was sleek, sturdy and silent.

And she was a winner, picking up an unprecedented five International Fishermen's Trophies in the gales of the North Atlantic. She also set a record for the biggest catch of fish brought into Lunenburg. No wonder she ended up on the ten-cent piece.

Of course, in the 1990's, a "beautiful ship" sounds like a contradiction in terms. Ugly box-like ships zig-zag the deep with hardly an hour to spare, loaded with thousands of identical "TEUs" (20-foot equivalent units, or to put it more simply, containers). They usually fly flags of convenience, since it is convenient to register in a country with no ports to speak of, and sometimes not even a single inch of coastline. The god-like master mariner of old seems to have been replaced by the transnational accountant.

It is easy to forget that Canada used to have the world's fourth-largest merchant fleet, and built some of the most exciting ships ever to venture forth on the seas. Like the paddle steamer Royal William (out of Anse au Foulon, Que.) whose 1833 voyage to England was the first transatlantic crossing mostly under steam. Or the clipper Marco Polo (out of St. John, N. B.) for a while the fastest ship anywhere in the world. When ships like that vanished, a way of life could have disappeared too. Booms and gaffs and spars and canvas could suddenly have become redundant. Except that the Bluenose, and her successor Bluenose II have managed to be more than poignant footnotes to history. They have kept Canada's rich sea-faring heritage alive.

Visitors to maritime museums in Scandinavia can get a glimpse of thousand-year-old Viking dragon ships. HMS Victory and the Cutty Sark are still on view in the National Maritime Museum in Greenwich, England. The second Bluenose, the one idling in a Halifax drydock waiting for a decision, should not be allowed to fall victim to cost-cutting.

She could perhaps be made seaworthy again. Or perhaps she should be replaced by a future Bluenose lll. If the Nova Scotian government can't pay for her upkeep, then Canadians could join in a fund-raising campaign. The campaign slogan could be "say Buddy, can you spare a dime?" If every Canadian paid just ten cents, that would just about cover the cost.

The January 4th 1994 edition of The Leader reported that no impaired charges were laid over the holidays according to the Morrisburg OPP. Corp. Eric Riddell said bad weather over the Christmas weekend kept a lot of drinkers indoors but the fact that there we no charges laid New Year's came as a pleasant surprise.

The results of a survey by the Morrisburg Public School Committee on the attitudes of parents towards late French Immersion programming were to be announced soon. The survey was conducted late in the fall of 1983 and it asked parents of Grade 6 students how they felt about bringing in a late French Immersion program for Grade 7 and 8 students, starting in September, 1984.

Winchester District Memorial Hospital had received $11,000 from the charitable foundation of the Royal Canadian Legion's Ontario Command for the purchase of an ultrasound real line scanner. The presentation was the final step of a suggestion started by the Morrisburg Legion's past president, Lorne Brown in the spring of 1983.

Ross Beckstead was given a plaque commemorating his 65 years in the Williamsburg 349 of the Grand Lodge. Accompanying him in a photo which appears in this issue of The Leader are Brother Harold Pemberton PG, and recording secretary Brother Roger Tupper PG.

A group of Morrisburg church women started a drive to raise money to purchase a cardiograph machine for use at the St. Lawrence Medical Clinic here. Location of such a facility in Morrisburg was going to save time and travel to a hospital for this type of diagnosis. The ladies were going to be offering tickets for sale on a draw for several prizes, and a generous response from the public was anticipated.

Many friends in Morrisburg and area learned with regret of the death of one of the district's best-known men, John Harvey Johnston. He died at the Kingston General Hospital on January 1st following an illness of 11 weeks. He was a past president of the Morrisburg and District Canadian Club, and he was a member of the Lions Club and a former Registrar.

Although the Morrisburg Junior B Lions won only one game, lost a pair and tied one, they remained in second place in the league standings, 10 points behind Cardinal. The only game the team won was a 10-7 upset over the Cardinal Broncos.

Floyd Fisher had listed for sale a three bedroom frame bungalow in good state of repair with tiled floors, oil space heating, modern kitchen, bathroom, living room, laundry room and a workshop on Lakeshore Road for $15,000.

The January 2nd edition of The Leader reported Christmas had been brighter for the youngsters of needy families in Morrisburg and the area through the efforts of the local Lions' Club and Boy Scouts, merchants and other groups who contributed towards a collection of toys.

Winners at Morrisburg Public School, of a Safety Poster Contest sponsored by the Morrisburg OPP were Bonnie Lynch, Tom Brown, and Edward Cameron.

The Leader was entering its 102nd year of existence and in 1964, the family of Art Laurin would have been at the helm for 50 years.

At Brinston's Allied Food Market, Maple Leaf Tendersweet ham was 55 cents a pound and Planter's mixed nuts in seven-ounce cans were 65 cents each.

The January 5th issue of The Leader reported the Morrisburg Tigers hockey club defeated a powerful team from Cardinal 3-2 in overtime. Ray James scored the winner with the other Morrisburg counters scored by Del Robinson and Chuck Lapierre. The Tigers were featuring the fastest hockey seen in Morrisburg since the hockey record of the famous Maroons crowned with the Benson Trophy in 1929 and in 1930. Morrisburg had enjoyed an enviable hockey record for more than 35 years.

Skyward with Kathryn Crawford and Ray Walker was playing at the Cameo.

For the price of 10 cents, one could learn the secret of lovely skin with Outdoor Girl olive oil beauty products.

Motorists were pleased to learn that it was the intention of the Provincial Highways Department to fill all dangerous ditches along the highways. A white line was to be maintained on hills and curves and there was a possibility it would be painted on some straight stretches.

Letters to the Editor

Editor, The Morrisburg Leader,
Morrisburg, Ontario

Dear Editor — I'm writing about the outcome of the recent GATT trade negotiations affecting agriculture, and especially the future of Canada's supply management marketing systems.

First, I regret that the world did not and would not accept the vigorous arguments advanced by Canada for a strengthened and clarified Article XI in the GATT. We have long believed that a new Article XI, i.e. an internationally sanctioned system of border controls on imported products - was the most direct means by which to safeguard our unique marketing systems. This Canadian position was put forward over seven long years of GATT negotiations.

For most of that period, we had important international allies on our side: the European Community (EC), Japan, Korea, Switzerland, Norway and Israel. But the United States was always unalterably opposed.

Eighteen months ago, the EC joined the US in arguing against Canada. Later, Norway, Israel and then Switzerland fell silent. This past October, Japan abandoned the cause for Article XI. Korea did the same in early December. Canada was then left isolated - the only nation in the world that continued to battle for a strengthened and clarified Article XI. We continued to pursue the fight all alone, to the closing hours of the GATT negotiations. It is regrettable that the world unanimously rejected the Canadian position.

When our new government took office on November 4th (with barely six weeks to go before the December 15th GATT deadline) we rapidly immersed ourselves in the trade issue. In our election platform we had identified a conclusion of the GATT talks as critically important to Canada's economic position overall, but we also undertook to work aggressively for a strengthened and clarified Article IX, recognizing the importance of agriculture as a base industry. And that we did!

We carried our message to the EC, the US, the Swiss, the Japanese, the Koreans, the Australians, the Cairns Group of Nations and the Director-General of the GATT. We enhanced our delegations in Brussels and Geneva with the addition of Ministers, Deputy Ministers, other senior officials and Members of Parliament. I personally went to the bargaining table on three separate occasions, as did our Trade Minister, Roy MacLaren. The Prime Minister personally put our views to the President of the United States.

We hammered hard on all fronts, quite literally day and night, in the limited time our new government had available. But when the crunch came in the final votes, no other nation was prepared to support us to strengthen and clarify Article XI. Among 116 nations, Canada stood alone.

Fortunately, we were not caught flatfooted and unprepared at the end. Recognizing the direction in which the world was headed (toward "comprehensive tariffication" as a replacement for border controls), we went to work exploring the mechanisms that could be available to Canada under a tariff regime to maintain a domestic environment within which our marketing systems could still survive. It would have been imprudent and irresponsible of government not to examine all possible options in the clear light of where the rest of the world was determined to go. So we did our homework to be fully prepared for the final GATT outcome.

In the end, we achieved a very strong tariff shelter for Canada's supply-managed sector. We also instituted limited access to the Canadian market for imported products - at or very near the minimum allowable under the new GATT rules. These provisions, to come into effect in 1995 through 2001, together with other factors, such as the value of the Canadian dollar (which favours exports over imports) and the high quality of Canadian products, should sustain a domestic atmosphere in Canada within which our diary, egg and poultry industries can be successful.

It is now up to us domestically to determine how we want our marketing systems to function for the future. If the provinces, the supply management agencies, farmers and farm organizations are prepared to work constructively and cooperatively with the federal government within the new tariffication structures, we can expect to do well. We can shape the system we want to have for Canada. It's up to us to do it.

A previous Liberal government "invented" the unique and successful supply management system we have known in this country for the past 25 years - in the context of the trading rules prevailing in the world at the time.

It is now our responsibility to adapt those systems to continue to thrive and prosper in new world circumstances. Those circumstances (the new GATT) may not be our preference. But with goodwill and self-confidence, we need not fear the future. While change is always unsettling, we must see the way ahead as an opportunity, not a problem, and make sure we take ahead as an opportunity, not a problem, and make sure we take maximum advantage of that opportunity in the interests of Canadian agriculture.

For more information on GATT please call 1-800-668-1266.

Sincerely,
RALPH GOODALE

Dear Editor — Thomas Walkom's Column of December 7, 1993 (New Medicine Cuts are Poor Medicine for Health Care Ills) made some valid points about preventing disease and looking at preventive medicine, but is completely off the mark about doctors wanting to delist the "Annual Check-up" in order to make more money, or the idea that doctors in favour of a two-tiered medical system! These are certainly NOT the objectives of the Family Physicians of Ontario.

The Ontario College of Family Physicians represents over 5,000 Family Physicians in the Province of Ontario. We have long been interested in preventative medicine. This is a very important part of our training programs across Ontario. Family Physicians strongly believe that there has to be, within the provincial medicare system, regular preventative medicine assessments where disease prevention, lifestyle modification, and appropriate screening procedures are done. Having the Family Physician doing all these preventative procedures at the appropriate time is better health/wellness care and more cost effective than splitting people and their body parts into various speciality screening clinics with all the infrastructure these clinics need for support. Family Physicians do not believe in a two-tiered healthcare system, but rather a health/wellness care system which is available to all the citizens of Ontario regardless of their financial status. In the long run, to save money in the healthcare system, The Ontario College of Family Physicians feels that a periodic health assessment MUST remain in the OHIP Schedule of Benefits.

The Ontario College of Family Physicians also feels that "delisting" is a short sighted, kneejerk reaction to a very serious problem. The solution lies in reforming the current system and the way it is managed, not merely tinkering with it here and there. The Ontario College of Family Physicians is willing to work with the Government, and all stakeholders to ensure accessible care for all the citizens of Ontario. Family Physicians want to be part of the solution, not part of the problem.

Yours truly,
G. RICK MANN,
MD, CCFP
President,

Family Physicians

Dear Editor — Overwhelming heat, grass huts, poverty stricken children, emaciated animals; I was there! This summer, as part of the World Vision 30 Hour Famine, I travelled to Senegal in West Africa to see firsthand the work that World Vision is doing. The trip really opened my eyes to the harsh reality of poverty in the developing world. It not only exposed me to the problem of hunger, but also revealed to me some of the various solutions which World Vision is actually providing.

It is important to note how World Vision approaches its development projects. They do not dictate how they will help, but rather allow the villagers to decide among a number of options according to their greatest needs. Usually these needs focus on clean water, food, education and health care. World Vision assists the people by installing water pumps, initiating agricultural training programs, providing women and children with education and giving everyone vaccinations for disease prevention.

It is amazing to see how only a little of our time, money and effort goes such a long way in helping the needy. I was surprised to see how much the people of Senegal appreciated things that we in Canada take for granted, such as clean water, abundance of food, clothing, shelter, health care and social welfare.

I will never forget the great times I shared with the young children. If only one could see the incredible joy in their faces as I pulled out a soccer ball and began to play with them!

I learned many things from my experience with the Senegalese people, finally realizing that they are no different from you and I, sharing the same emotions and feelings.

I encourage everyone to get involved in the World Vision 30 Hour Famine. It Saves Lives!

More smoke than damage at fire

C. THOMPSON
Leader Staff

MORRISBURG—There was much smoke from an accidental fire at the Operating Engineers Training Institute here Monday, but minimal damage.

A fire broke out a short distance east of the main building about 10.00 a.m. and Morrisburg firemen were called to the scene shortly afterward.

"It was a construction project for the new repair building," Training Administrator Kingsley Cole said. "Some of the straw and then the forms caught fire."

There was no estimate on damage, Cole said, but this would be very little.

A trench had been dug for a foundation, and forms of two by fours filled with cement were prepared. There was also a quantity of straw on site. As a result of the extreme cold, propane heaters were being used to prevent the cement from freezing.

Carkner explained the heat from the heaters had ignited the straw in the hole, and the wooden forms and a tarpaulin had caught fire.

The first concern was to remove the propane heaters from the scene. "The construction people had a handle on that," Carkner said. "And we helped get them out of the way."

Some crew were assigned to hooking up hoses to a cistern at the building, while others were to put out the fire.

"There was a lot of smoke when we put water in the hole," Carkner said. "It made it look worse than it actually was."

"It was no trouble getting it under control," Carkner stated. "It was quite routine."

The forms were dismantled after the incident, thus removing the cause of a recurrence. Firemen left the scene after noon, following refreshments of coffee offered by the Institute.

Cole wished to publicly thank the Fire Department for their assistance in the event.

"There won't be any investigation," Carkner stated. "It's obvious to me what happened. It was an accident."

Where there's smoke, there's fire

The Morrisburg Fire Department had their hands full Monday morning, putting out a fire at the Operating Engineers Training Institute. Fire chief Art Carkner said the fire was started from propane heaters intended to prevent cement from freezing, which ignited construction materials. Thompson photo

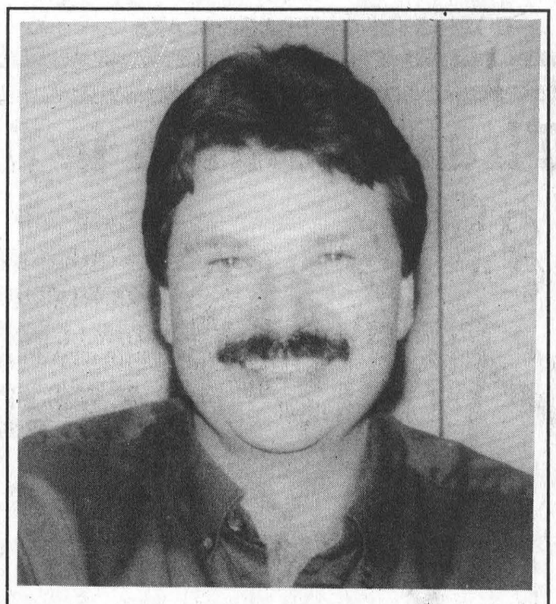
Coach's Corner

Chuck Barkley, Atom C



Chuck Barkley

MORRISBURG—Do you coach your own child?

Coaching you child's hockey team is one of the greatest challenges you can face as a coach. By establishing clear roles and objectives, and using effective communication, you will ensure the experience is rewarding for you, your child and other participants.

At the start of the season, establish that you will treat your child like all the other players. Communicate this to your child and ensure he/she understands that your relationship is coach-player at the arena, and parent-child once you leave. Respect these roles by leaving the coach at the rink: don't continuously talk about what happened at the arena.

Atom C Lions coach Chuck Barkley has been coaching his sons for years.

While he's experienced a few problems during that time, it's rarely from the children.

"It's usually from parents who don't feel their children aren't getting the ice time they should," Barkley says. "But we don't have time to get into stop-watch coaching. I just set them up and send them out just like I would anyways. The parents normally understand."

The CAHA recommends coaches never compromise their roles by overplaying or favoring their child: this is unfair to other players and will cause dissension among players and parents. On the other hand, they say, never place realistic demands on your child just to show everyone that you are not playing favorites. Remember, your child is like all players, and extra pressure can damage self-esteem and take the fun out of hockey.

Here are more suggestions:

- give your child the same objective feedback you provide to all players: be honest and specific and leave your emotions out of it.
- don't live your life through your child: let them experience the game on their own.
- use assistant coaches to provide your child with different perspectives on the game.

Barkley doesn't recommend coaching your son if at all possible.

But circumstances sometimes dictate that parents serve as volunteer coaches, as is the case with Barkley, who has three sons.

"There's such a short supply of volunteers, and it isn't possible to coach and have your son play on another team."

The CAHA recommends coaches develop skills through the National Coaching Certification Program (NCCP) and Initiation programs and encourage other parents to do the same.

Next week, Nutrition and Healthy Lifestyle with Novice A coach Mark Gervais.

At least $100,000 property damage

MATILDA TWP—On December 30th, at 5.00 a.m. an accident involving a tractor unit caused approximately $100,000 damage by a conservative estimate.

Driven by Gerard Bruce, RR 1 Smiths Falls, the unit was heading southbound on County Road 1, the Sixth Concession, in the vicinity of Pap's Store, when a mechanical error caused the dump trailer at the back to rise in the air. The trailer hit four sets of hydro wires crossing the County Road, and the wires were trapped in the extended box. As the vehicle continued south, it broke eight hydro poles, damaged two homes and a business.

The tractor trailer unit is owned by Goldie Mohr Ltd, a Nepean company, and the investigating officer was Frank Wert. No charges were laid, since the accident was caused by a mechanical problem with the truck.

When the first snowmobile was going back down, the passenger fell off, and was hit by the second machine. Tricia Smith had minor injuries, and was taken by ambulance to Winchester Hospital. The first driver, Hansma was charged with impaired operation of a motorized vehicle.

The OPP warn snowmobile operators, to be aware they suffer the same penalties as those operating a car or truck, if apprehended operating the snowmobile while impaired. They will be subject to similar fines or license suspension.

Trucks and vans undergo annual safety check in 1994

TORONTO—A new range of vehicles will require annual safety checks for the first time in 1994. The safety inspections are part of Ontario's mandatory annual commercial vehicle inspection program, which began in 1992.

"This program is designed to enhance road safety by ensuring annual vehicle inspections," said Transportation Minister Gilles Pouliot. "It is one of many steps we are taking to make Ontario's roads the safest in North America."

Starting January 1, operators of trucks, vans and trailers with gross weights, registered gross weights or manufacturer's gross weights of more than 4,500 kg will require annual safety inspection stickers.

The new weight requirement includes small trucks, cube vans, pick-ups, and truck and trailer combinations—regardless of whether they are licensed as trucks, cars or farm vehicles. Only house trailers, campers and motor homes of more than 4,500 kg are exempt from the requirement.

Ontario's program was introduced in concert with those of other jurisdictions across Canada, to meet the national Safety Code standard. As the program was phased in, the number of vehicles affected by the program were those weighing more than 22.000 kg, and those weighing more than 10,000 kg were included in 1993.

Inspections are available from licensed garages or service stations displaying the rectangular green Ontario motor vehicle inspection station logo.

For more information about the program, call your local Drivers and Vehicles office.
