Celebrated Their Diamond Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. James Mattice, of Novar, Ont., have just celebrated the 60th anniversary of their marriage, and are still hale and hearty. They were married at Chesterville, Ont., in September, 1863, but have spent the last forty-five years in Muskoka. Their diamond wedding was the occasion of a gathering of the family from far and near. An address was read to the aged couple and suitable presentations made. At the wedding supper which followed there were speeches from the aged groom, members of the family and by Messrs. A. A. Cooper and H. E. Rice, of Huntsville. The surving family numbers four daughters and three sons—Mrs. Louis Snider, Toronto; Mrs. Andrew Stahis, Novar; Mrs. N. Schneider, Regina, Sask.; Mrs. R. McGown, Gladstone, Man.; Mr Z. Mattice, St. Catharines; Mr. Wm. Mattice, Novar, and Kenneth Mattice, Haldanehill, Ont.

Disregarding the Sabbath Day

The Central Canadian of Carleton Place, commends the reference in a sermon by a clergyman of that place on the desecration of the Sabbath by a family taking advantage of the day to have their effects moved in a motor truck to another town. Sunday last motorists and others passing through the good town of Morrisburg were regaled by the sight of a carpenter busily engaged in the shingling of a build ing in the east end of that town. The C. C. further adds. "Rev. Cannon Elliott the same day spoke of the current contempt of young boys for the sacredness of private and public property. Destruction and profanity are fast growing evils, he said, and declared that matters had reached such a pitch in the way of insolence and insurrection that the Council was to be appealed to in order to eliminate the offences. If this means failed the Judge would be asked to intervene. We understand all the clergymen are to take up the question in their pulpits."

Judgment Rendered in Landry vs. Steven

His honor Judge O'Riley delivered judgment in the above case on the 3rd inst, giving judgment for the full amount of note and interest originally sued for by Steven together with costs. This case has occupied the attention of the public for over a year and many will be interested to hear the final result. Jules and Alphonse Landry did in the spring of 1921 each purchase a number of milch cows from R. Steven, their father, Venos Landry, being security for same. The note given by Alphonse was renewed in Jany. 1922, father and son joining. The note given by Jules was renewed on the 25th April, 1922. In about July, 1922, Alphonse Landry made an assignment, and his Estate paid the creditors nothing. Then the Landry family sat up a plea that Venos Landry, Sr., was a man 84 years of age and did not know what he was doing when he joined with his son Alphonse in giving Steven a renewal of note The note given by Jules and the father was paid promptly. The evidence showed plainly that Mr. Landry, Sr., knew well what he was doing and had the protection of his wife and two of his sons when going on these notes his wife consenting for her husband to make his "mark". Mr. Landry, Sr., died about a year ago. The suit was defended by the heirs. G. J. Gogo appeared for the Landry Estate, W. B. Lawson for Mr. Steven.

Euchre Social and refreshments, in aid of St. Mary's Church, K. of C. Club rooms Friday evening. Euchre begins at 8.30 sharp. Admission 25c.

MOREWOOD

(Too Late for Last week)

The funeral of the late J. H. Loughridge was conducted on Friday, Sept. 28th, at his late residence by his pastor Rev. S. H. Cooke, assisted by the Rev. Jobb. He was borne to his last resting place in the Morewood cemetery by six of his life-long friends.

The late Mr Loughridge was born in Morewood about sixty-seven years ago. Shortly after his marriage to Miss Agnes Marcellus, daughter of Mr. Robert Marcellus, he moved to Cannamore. About thirty five years ago he returned to Morewood to his late home where he died. Mr. Loughridge was a member of the Methodist church a long number of years and filled many of its important offices.

Walter, Bradford, Iden and Lyle of Morewood and Mrs. Ernest of Oregon, Mrs. McIntosh of Iroquois, Mrs. Summers of Winchester, Mrs. Wilson of Ottawa, Mrs. Carruthers of Cannamore and Mrs. McLean of Morewood.

The high regard in which the late Mr. Loughridge was held was shown by the vast number of wreaths that covered and surrounded the coffin, also by the great crowd of people who were present at his funeral. Friends were there from Ottawa, Iroquois, Morrisburg Winchester and other places and all seemed overwhelmed with the one feeling "I have lost for a short time a true friend."

Mrs. Jack Rorrison and Jean left on Friday for their home in Carleton Place and were accompanied by Mrs. A. Steinburg and Evelyn.

Mrs. L. Gillespie and Mrs. B. Beattie of Winchester, spent a few days last week at T. E. Coulthart's.

Winchester Springs Child Meets Death in Peculiar Manner

Donald Ball, aged two and a half years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ball, Winchester Springs, met death by asphyxiation under peculiar circumstances while en route from Dixon's Corners, where his father and other adults had been picking apples, to their home. With his brother Frank, aged five the child was placed in a large box on the motor truck. On the way they were heard by the occupants of the front seat several times as if at play. Upon arrival at the house both children were found to be unconscious, and Dr. McLaughlin, who was called, pronounced the younger dead. His brother was restored. The escape from the exhaust pipe of the engine, which lacked a muffler, penetrating the slats of the truck and entering the box, is believed to have caused the death of the child.

Father and Sons Die of the Mumps

Three deaths inside of a week is the sad record at the home of Arthur White, living at Clarendon, Frontenac county and all three deaths were due, so it is stated by the attending physician, to mumps. On Monday last a son Ross, aged eleven, passed away, and another son Willie, aged six, died on Friday and on Sunday the father, Arthur White, passed away. Just one little girl is now left in the home. She acted as nurse for her father and two brothers, and states that they were unable to take the medicine the doctor left them, owing to the fact that their throats were so sore.

Seventh Son Finds Two Missing Bodies

During a performance in a Wiarton theatre on Friday night a clairvoyant claiming to be the seventh son of the seventh son was asked by a member of the audience where the bodies of Captain William Corson and Robert Parker, missing Lion's Head fishermen, could be found. The clairvoyant believed that he could locate the bodies by a unique method, and volunteered to go to Lion's Head next day. The lake was too rough on Saturday, but he came again Sunday and the body of Parker was recovered within half an hour.

Removing the centers from nine loaves of bread, the clairvoyant filled the loaves with lime, and placed them in a circle on the water where he thought that the bodies would be located. It was claimed that when a loaf passed over a body a sort of electric current would be formed and indicated by the trembling of the bread. Very soon one of the loaves showed evidence of disturbance. Grappling irons were used, and the body of Robert Parker was brought to the surface. The body of Captain Corson was also located, but could not be raised.

A Government aeroplane and large parties of Lion's Head residents had searched the waters for two weeks for trace of the missing fishermen, who on September 24, were engaged in raising their nets when the boat capsized, throwing both into the water.

The clairvoyant claims that this is the 119th body that he had located by this means.

Friend: "Make any arrests today, constable?" Constable: "Arrested two motorists, but—darn 'em! they wouldn't stop!"

The third regular meeting of the Peptimists Auxiliary was held in Room "A" Friday forenoon, Oct. 5th.

After the distribution of the members and officers' buttons. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted. We then all joined in our song. Mr. Boyd made a motion to the effect that we have a critic for this meeting, seconded by Arthur Haley, carried. Ralph Durant suggested Arthur as critic which when put into a motion, carried unanimously.

The programme consisted of very interesting and helpful talks about "Cleanliness of hands and nails". Gladys Alford explained why our hands should be clean. Rosie Harper told how often we should wash our hands. Edith Hornby explained the composition of the nails and their uses. Bruce Harper gave a talk on why our nails should be kept clean. Kathleen Bogart outlined the care of the nails. Kenneth gave a talk on hand diseases particularly "Itch" Jimmie Cramer gave some very good remarks on the danger of biting the nails. Amy Fairbrass told a story to show the value of cleanliness. Jean Brown also gave an excellent and original reading on the value of cleanliness. The critic's remarks were then heard. Our Director then gave a few remarks on certain important points which required more explanation. The mite box report was then received showing twenty-one cents for the week. The visiting committee had nothing to report as all members were present. The meeting then closed with the National Anthem.—Ralph Durant, Reporter.

What Determines Value

It has been recently said: "Whoever knowingly or igorantly promulgates doctrines that are unsound and destructive betrays the people. Ignorance is no excuse if there is available knowledge on the subject. To proclaim a falsehood as a fact to an audience that has no immediate way of knowing it as a falsehood is as bad—it is worse than cheating at a game, or by false weights and measures in a purchase," says "The Teller."

Canadian farmers, of all classes, need more of such statements placed before them. Those who are really interested in the welfare of the farmer should realize that merely attacking some other class of society and telling the farmer things he wants to hear will never bring about improvement in the economic or social condition of agriculture.

Many men preach this or that doctrine and offer it as a solution of the farmers' problems. These men are, in many instances, ignorant of basic conditions. They do not know whether their pet remedy will succeed or not. Schemes may originate in active but undeveloped brains and grow to large proportions because the minds which nourish them are not sufficiently strong to note their fallacious characteristics

The time is ripe for farmers to look well into the plans offered them as a panacea for all their economic ills. It is well to ask a few questions: "Is your plan feasible? Will it work?" "How do you know it will bring the improvement claimed for it?" If we could keep this one question. "How do you know?" before the world, we would save many a wrong step.

One of the greatest reasons for fallacious schemes being advanced is that their promulgators do not understand just why a thing has value. Too many people think that anything on which effort and money has been expended has value. The real reason a thing has value is that it will satisfy some want and cannot be obtained for nothing. Nothing can possibly have value unless it is useful .

To a great many people the value of a thing is cost of production; a thing is worth what it costs to produce it; the farmer, the manufacturer, and every other producer should be guaranteed the cost of production; if this is not guaranteed the farmer should determine production costs and set a minimum price necessary to return a fair and reasonable profit to the average grower and refuse to sell for less. Is such a plan feasible? Will it work?

In the first place—while it is not entirely impossible—it is no easy task to determine the cost ot production. How much does it cost to grow a bushel of potatoes? How much does it cost to raise a calf? How much does it cost to raise a pig on the fruit picked up in the orchard and the skimmed milk from the separator? How do we know what these costs are? What costs of production are to be taken as typical? Those of the man who is a real farmer with good land equipment or those of the man who is shiftless or operating poorer land? Is the cost of production of milk going to be that of the dairyman keeping 3,000 pound cows or the one with a 10,000 pound-cow herd? Are we going to take production costs of the man who is in business as a specialist or the man who produces a small quantity as a sideline? For example, the commercial poultryman, or the farmer who adds a little to his income by keeping a few hens; the man who grows beans on a commercial scale or the one who has a little patch on the edge of a field?

It is no answer to these questions to say that average costs shall be taken as typical. Average costs are nobody's costs. If these are taken, what are we going to do for the farmer who cannot make money at prices based on average costs? Shall we let this unfortunate who needs more assistance than any other shift for himself?

If one idea could be grasped by farmers we would be on the road to a better understanding of economic conditions. That one idea is that the cost of production does not set the value of a thing. The value of a thing on the market is what someone is willing to pay for it. This does not imply that we should make no attempt to improve price conditions. The point to be emphasized here is that the cost of producing a bushel of potatoes or a certain machine does not set its value.

A farmer near here was complaining he could not sell his produce at all. His effort for the year brought him no return. He could not get cost of production for his produce. He had grown eighteen acres of turnips. The yield was wonderful. They were good turnips, yet nobody would pay him cost of production for them because people did not want turnips. He had produced more than people wanted. This was misdirected production. If the farmer had grown lettuce, apples or beans, he might have received a great deal more than cost of production.

A man called at the office of a manufacturer one day and told him that he had a machine down at his factory which cost him $2,000 to build. Ten per cent. was a fair profit, therefore he would sell his machine for $2,200. The prospect naturally wanted to know what kind of a machine this was, "What good will this machine do me?" he asked.

"What can I do with it? What kind of a machine is it?" The salesman replied. "A soap bubble blowing machine." No one wants to pay $2,000 for a soap bubble blowing machine." It has no value. It won't satisfy wants. The amount of effort expended upon it does not give its value. A thing has value only in so far as it satisfies wants. If this man had expended his efforts in making hosiery or flour he could have sold it for cost of production plus. People pay money for things they want. The intensity of the demand and the eagerness of the seller to sell determine price. This cost of production theory of value is fallacious because it fails to take into consideration misdirected production.

Beans are things people want in certain quantities. If the farmer could get cost of production plus a "fair profit" for all the beans he could grow and thereby make as much profit as by growing other things, there would be no incentive for him to vary his production and give the consumers something besides beans. Price variations discourage production when there is an over-supply and stimulate it when there is a shortage. Price guarantees would render such regulation ineffective. If all bean growers could determine their cost of production and refuse to sell for less, everything in the bean market would be ideal—for the bean grower. Suppose this condition did prevail, would consumers take all the beans grown? If not, what would be done with the hold-over? How would acreage be restricted so that the supply would be just sufficient to supply the market at a price that would pay cost of production plus a fair and reasonable profit? How would the farmer not a regular bean grower be prevented from entering into bean production when he deemed it advisable? Would he hold his beans in storage just because the price wasn't sufficient to pay the high costs of production of other growers? Is it feasible—will it work?

It is not suggested here that the cost of production studies are not valuable and that the farmer should not make an attempt to determine his production costs. He should do this. It will give the farmer the exact figures. It will show him what his enterprise is yielding him. It is maintained, however, that production cost does not set value. No one can set prices unless monopoly prevails. Monopoly does not, and never will, prevail in agriculture so long as it is conducted on the present individual basis; nor do farmers holding just principals want it to prevail.

Great things can be done in agriculture by attempting to regulate production to suit market demands as is being done in industry. The kind of food products people want should be produced and they should be produced in the most economical manner. The cornerstone of improvement of agricultural conditions is a study of market demands. And because every Sterling Bank Manager is constantly kept in close contact with markets, he can co-operate with the individual farmer to his benefit. A study of economics is one of the finest things to which any officer of this institution can apply his mind; for in so doing he is making himself more capable to help perform that function, the performance of which means so much to the progress and prosperity of our clients.

Presbytery of Brockville

The Presbytery of Brockville met at Cardinal on the 28th ult. with a fair attendance of ministers and ruling elders, Rev. R. M. Glassford of Winchester, Moderator, presided.

Rev. R.M. Hamilton, Home Mission Convenor, reported that Iroquois and Bishop's Mills are to receive grants of $ 00 each from the Home Mission Board, while the cases of South Mountain and Heckston were referred to the sub-committee of the Executive to be decided after the Superintendent and Convener visit the field.

Rev. W. A. Morrison reported that Mr. Strange had declined the call extended to him by Bishop's Mills, East Oxford, and Oxford Mills. The sympathy of the court was extended to this congregation and power given to the interim Moderator to proceed with a new Call when the people are ready.

The Clerk was instructed to draw the attention of congregations to the resolution regarding a Thank-offering towards the Budget on Thanksgiving day, and the recommendation of a self-denial week, passed at the last meeting in Prescott

The Moderator presented a Call from Williamsburg, Winchester Springs and Colquhoun in favor of Mr. Edwin Smith, M.A., F.R.A.S. of Oshawa accompanied by a guarantee of Stipend of $2000 free manse, a month's holidays and free telephone in the manse. This call was sustained and Mr. Smith by letter accepted, and will be inducted on October 16th at 2 p.m. The Moderator will preside. Mr. McCurlie will preach, Mr. Jamieson address the minister and Mr. Clarke the people.

The Clerk was appointed Presbytery's correspondent to the Presbyterian Witness.

In the evening the Presbytery proceeded to the induction of Mr. McCurlie. Rev. W. A. Morrison conducted Divine Worship preaching an appropriate sermon from I Chr. 13: 12 "How Shall I Bring Home the Ark of God"." Mr. Omond narrated the steps taken to fill the vacancy. Mr. McCurlie having answered the customary questions satisfactorily, was by prayer offered by the Moderator, and the extension of the right hand of fellowship solemnly inducted into the pastorate of Cardinal and Mainsville. Mr. Merrilees addressed a few words of earnest counsel to the minister, and Mr. Omond fittingly addressed the people. This charge has been vacant since the translation of Rev. C. C. Salisbury who accepted a Call to Hemmingford, Que.

After the induction the ladies invited he Presbytery and congregation to a dainty lunch, and all left with high hopes for a long and successful pastorate. Mr. McCurlie begins his work under the most favorable circumstances and pastor and people are to be heartily congratulated on the situation.

On Wednesday, Oct. 17th, at 7.30 p. m. the Presbytery will meet to induct Rev. J. D. McKenzie lately of Montague, P. E. Island, into the pastoral charge of Morrisburg. Mr. J. W. Clarke of Hallville will preach. Mr. Glassford will address the congregation and Mr. Hamilton the minister. This will fill all the vacancies in the Presbytery, with the exception of Bishop's Mills and associated fields.

Sounded Difficult

Down in Texas the short cotton crop forced a large number of country negroes to the cities. One of them applied for a job at one of the large employment agencies.

"There's a job at the Eagle Laundry," said the man behind the desk. "Want it?"

The applicant shifted uneasily from one foot to the other.

"Tell you how it is boss," he said finally. "I sure does want a job mighty bad, but de fack is, I ain't ne ver washed a eagle."

BONDS
Are Mortgages on Fixed Assets

When a township issues debentures (or bonds) it gives a mortgage on the whole township for security to the buyers of the bonds for the loan of their money for a definite number of years at a satisfactory rate of interest.

If the amount required is large it is divided into small mortgages, (that is, bonds or debentures) of $500 or $1,000 each, with the same security behind each, so that investors with small sums may take advantage it.

Bonds or debentures are rated the safest kind of an investment.

Bull Acts Human Like

The story comes from Westport that a farmer near that village made a few gallons of "home-brew," not so much for his stomach's sake as for his pocket's sake, and left the mess in a cooler out in the back yard to cool. While in this stage the farm bull came along and the odor of the seductive fluid attracting him to the danger spot, the attraction, as in the case of many a two-legged animal, was too strong to be resisted. He tasted and drank and drank on until the whole of the contents of the cooler was in his stomach, with the inevitable consequences. When the farmer came along some time later he saw an empty cooler and a bull lying prone on the ground motionless and helpless, whether dead or not was not then apparent. For four days the bull lay there without change, and then it staggered to its feet, showing that it had not been dead, but only dead drunk. Reader, this is not a fish story, but a true one.

"I will tell you a story at which you will laugh yourself to death." "Can't you save it until my mother-in-law arrives?"

Hall's Catarrh Medicine

Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions. Advice to Farmers

The barn is no place for the automobile. Build a garage.

Conserve your water supply. You may have drought or fire, and need water in large quantities.

A pipe, cigar or cigarette has no place in the barn. Neither have greasy rags or old coats with matches in the pockets.

Join the nearest rural fire fighting unit. If there is none, organize one.

Buy a fire extinguisher, but place it where you can get at it in case of fire, and keep it properly charged

Have two ladders long enough to reach the eaves of your highest building.

The oil lantern is a menace, and a nuisance. Electric torches are cheap, safe and reliable.

Keep gasolene away from buildings and preferably underground.

Provide plenty of fire pails and use them for no other purpose than fire. Maintain fire barrels in all barns.

Look out for spontaneous combustion in wet grain, feed or hay. The Ontario Fire Marshal Department has published a pamphlet on the subject which may be obtained free of cost.

Allow no weeds or long grass to grow about the buildings.

Put up "No Smoking" signs about the barns and other buildings. This department will supply them free if you will write for them.

Keep matches in a metal box away from children.

Examine chimneys and stoves frequently.

Most losses on farm property are due to the following causes, given alphabetically: Adjoining buildings, ashes, defective flues, incendiarism, lamps, lightning, matches, over-heated furances, rubbish, sparks and stoves and stove pipes. Carelessness figures in all but arson.

Housecleaning—And Fire Prevention

Once more our local clocks have gone back to sun time, schools have opened, and late summer visitors are going back to their city houses. For those who stayed at home, there is that cheerless period of house-cleaning, when we envy the savage and his more simple mode of living. However, in our climate we must live indoors, a portion of the year, and Fire Prevention week comes just in time to focus our attention upon fire risks which we are all too liable to omit when there is a question involved of "tearing up the whole house." Now we have no such excuse, for at just this time each householder can have a thorough examination made of his furnace, of his chimneys, and of all the complicated system of heating upon which he is dependent throughout the winter months. With so much activity centered around the furnace, he can keep right on and inspect the entire cellar, looking out for fire risks in possible storage of unused furniture or bundles of paper placed too near the furnace. Most particularly should he pay attention to the disposition of ashes from his heater fire. Wooden boxes or cardboard containers used instead of metal ash cans are practices only a little less insane than pouring kerosene on a fire to make it start up quickly. Yet it is surprising the number of people who do these very things.

The most spectacular and impressive fire I ever saw was caused by ashes having been taken out of a furnace after raking it down for the night, rather than the safer method of taking them out before the final raking. While still extremely hot these ashes were left for the night in a wooden box in the cellar. About 6.30 next morning there was an illumination so beautiful and impressive that all the sky seemed to utter an unforgetable warning on the value of eternal vigilance.

Stocking Up

Our Friends, the Trees

I have lived to see the enormous prices set upon furniture made from walnut, oak, cherry, and bird's eye maple, says Gene Stratton-Porter in "McCall's Magazine" for April 1923. While writing this article, I read of a black walnut tree just sold in Indiana, from the stump of which alone, four thousand dollars' worth of fine veneer was to be made, and if the trunk were solid and proved to be as finely marked as was hoped, it would swell the value to unbelievable figures for a tree.

Who can estimate the appalling waste in the burning of those indiscriminate log heaps! I used to marvel at the gorgeous smoke ascending in wreaths and banners of lavender, pink, blue, red, gray from those green logs!

I have not been accustomed to consider myself among the oldest inhabitants; a fair degree of civilization had reached Indiana when I was born, yet, in my childhood I was accustomed to Indians at the door to wild turkeys, wild cats and bear and deer in the woods not far from Michigan at my home. We used to see wild pigeons in such numbers as to break down the branches of the beech, maple and linden trees on which they perched at night.

I was born at a period when, almost daily, huge wagons lumbered down our road, many of them drawn by oxen plodding a few miles each day on the way westward. The plains were covered with buffalo. We used the skins for sleigh robes and they cost from ten to thirty dollars a piece, depending on the size and condition. There was an abundance of game of every kind, the fish fairly crowded the rivers.

One of the commonest sights of my childhood was the ascending smoke in all directions from the burning of uncounted log heaps. And Oh! the pity of it! Those log heaps consisted of as fine trees as God ever made, felled where they stood and rolled together and burned to get them out of the way. Oak, hickory, beech, ash, elms, that almost swept the sky, wild cherry, bird's-eye maple, black walnut—trees that to-day would be sawed into thin sheets and used for the veneering of less expensive wood, trees for which any lumberman would pay from six to twelve and fifteen hundred a trunk, felled and burned in order to clear the ground upon which they stood for the cultivation of corn and potatoes. The resources of the country were considered so vast that it never occurred to any one to select the most valuable of these hardwoods, and store them for the use of future generations.

I have lived to see timber becoming so scarce that houses of stone, brick, and cement are resorted to through necessity rather than choice in many instances. I have lived to see the greater part of our springs dried up, the little stream drained from the face of the earth, and many of the rivers practically dry in the summer season, the lake levels lowered, the fish, game and fur-bearing animals practically exterminated.

The deer and fur-bearing animals are practically gone from the country I knew and the country farther west as well. Many Indians are nearly starving through the scarcity of fish and game. The birds have been depleted in numbers until it is quite impossible to raise fruit of any kind without a continuous fight against slug and aphis, a war which birds in sufficient numbers would wage for us.

With the cutting of our timber has come a change in our climate; weeks of drought in summer and destructive cyclone windstorms, winters alternating from a condition so open as to freeze prematurely forced fruit and grain, and winters so stringently cold that the fruit trees are killed outright.

The even temperature and the rains every three or four days which we knew in childhood are things of the past. Summer in these days means to scorch for weeks at a stretch with unalleviated heat; and in the same state in which I was born, it has become necessary for the sons of the men who wasted the woods and the waters to put in overhead sprinkling systems in order to grow their garden vegetables while windmills and irrigation are becoming common.

In my childhood my father planted grain with the same certainty of having a full crop, that he had of alternate day and night. To-day the farmer on my land has no more idea whether he will get a paying yield from the wheat, corn and potatoes that he puts into the ground than he has as to whether the next cyclone will blow his house into the lake or pass a few miles on the other side of it. We as a nation, have already in the most wanton and reckless waste the world has ever known, changed our climate conditions and wasted a good part of our splendid heritage. The question now facing us is, whether we shall do all that lies in our power to save comfortable living conditions for ourselves and the spots of natural beauty that remain for our children.

If this is to be done, a nation-wide movement must be begun immediately. Our climate could be greatly bettered if every man owning land would do what he can to restore original conditions by fighting to save the water in his vicinity, and by planting all the trees for which he can possibly spare space. More water means more rain. A heavier growth of timber breaks up culminative winds and gives bird life, under rigorous protection a chance to renew itself. Wherever there are plenty of birds the spraying and fighting of insect pests is not necessary.

In commenting on the above statements by Gene Stratton-Porter, Mr. F. J. D. Barnjum of Montreal, says:—

"The above warning applies with even greater force to Canada, for small as the remaining supply of timber in the United States now is, the stand in Canada amounts to less than one third of the supply in that country.

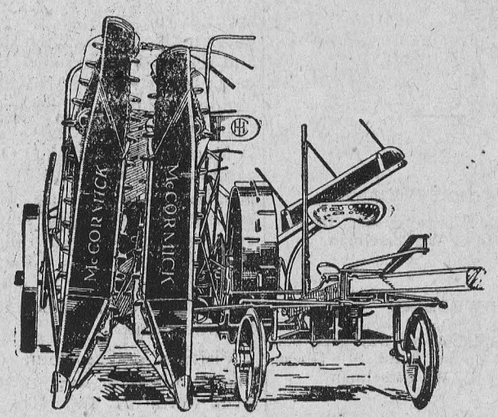
McCormick and Deering CORN BINDERS



Cutting corn by hand is very hard work, as all men know who have tried it. In fact it is out of the question to fill a silo with hand cut corn. Yet corn stalks either green for the silo or stacked dry for fodder are the best food for cattle and horses.

The use of the McCormick or Deering Corn Binder will solve this problem. You can cut and bind seven acres a day and do it much easier than by the hand method.

Money Waste

The middle aged man mindful of his past will urge you not to waste small sums. He will tell you, too, with a sigh of regret, what he might have accomplished had he, years ago, realized the multiplying power of small sums.

Stop all the waste you can, and invest a small sum each year in a fifteen or twenty year policy in the Sun Life of Canada, where it will grow to help your future if you live, and protect your dependents should you die.
