R. Villeneuve raised the matter of covered arenas, with particular reference to the two newcomers to the league, Osgoode and Metcalfe, who do not have covered ice surfaces, and stated that Maxville might be forced to withdraw its team unless provision was made for the two new teams to play home games indoors. The chairman assured Mr. Villeneuve that he believed that the Metcalfe Hockey Club plans to use the Finch rink for home games and a spokesman for the Osgoode delegation interjected that his club would play their home games either at Winchester or Chesterville.

Mr. Helmer thanked the club delegates for his election and stated that an additional meeting would be adan additional meeting would be advisable to draft the league schedule, which might be a double one in view of the number o teams entered.

Sunday Fire At Berwick Destroys Store and Home

Last Sunday, a fire of undetermined origin broke out in the store and butcher shop of Archie Hunt in Berwick and before it could be checked the flames had gutted the building destroying the store and living quarters attached.

Discovered when the blaze was out of control, the assistance of Finch and Crysler fire brigades were to no avail and in an hour over $6000.00 damage had been done, with the loss partly covered by insurance.

Built 20 years ago, this store was the third to be destroyed on that particular site.

Car Takes to Ditch In First Snow Storm

Saturday afternoon we had our first real taste of winter weather when a heavy snow storm set in about noon and continued for several hours until about four inches of soft snow was laid over the countryside. Cars were coated with it so windshield wipers could not cope with it making driving a very dangerous occupation. Mr. Foster Fulton, Mrs. Fulton and children of Shawinigan Falls, and Miss Ann Fulton from Macdonald College, Ste Anne de Bellevue, were coming west between Newington and Finch when visibility became so bad that the road could not be seen clearly and the car slid into a ditch, turning on its side. Fortunately no serious injuries were received by the occupants.

REMEMBRANCE DAY AT MOREWOOD

Remembrance Day was fittingly observed on Tuesday morning by the citizens of Morewood and district.

Mrs. Harry Empey whose son was killed overseas also of the R.C.A.F. placed the wreath from the citizens. After two minutes silence the service concluded with the National Anthem.

The service was held under the auspices of the Women's Institute with Mrs. J. Steen and Mrs. B. Loughridge in charge.

MANY HUNTERS AWAY FOR FRESH VENISON

With the deer season opening on the first of the week the hunters of the community who were counting the days grabbed their rifles and lit out for the bush. A light snow that fell over the week-end would be welcome for tracking. The Hutt club, who incidentally numbers among its members "Uncle" Ken Hutt of the Ridge who was eighty last July, have reported to this office the bagging of a fine spike-horn buck on the first day out.

SIX-HOUR BLACK OUT WHEN POWER FAILS SATURDAY EVENING

This district was without Hydro Power for six hours on Saturday afternoon and evening, when a transport clipped the high tension wires from Morrisburg to Williamsburg. The accident happened during a snowstorm, and Hydro workers found it necessary to replace the pole before the power could be transmitted to districts north of Morrisburg. Business men in the district and theatre operators were greatly inconvenienced as a result of the power failure, but little could be done about it unthe damage was repaired. A number of business places not having the facilities to light up called it a day and went home. The customers from the country were not numerous and stores closed early.

Remembrance Day Ceremony on Sunday

Sponsored by the Chesterville Branch 434 of the Canadian Legion, a memorial service was held in the Community hall in honor and me ory of the fallen of the two World Wars. The attendance was not as large as had been hoped for but the service was a moving remembrance to the ones that are fallen.

The singing of the hymn, "O God, Our Help In Ages Past" opened the service, followed by prayers for the wounded and bereaved and of thanksgiving, given by Rev. W. E. Wright. Mr. P. S. Boyd read the Scripture lesson which was followed by an address by Rev. H. E. Huestin, of Morewood. His topic was "We Are Bought With a Price".

The Placing of the Wreaths followed immediately after the service in front of the Hall at the foot of the Broken Column Memorial with Dwight Swerdfeger sounding the Last Post.

Wreaths were placed on the memorial by Mrs. Dan McMillan on behalf of those mothers who had lost sons; by Reeve Boyd for the Village of Chesterville; by Mrs. Fay Shaver for the Women's Institute; by Mrs. Edward Barrett for the Catholic Women's League; by Mrs. Geo. Merkley for the Red Cross and by James Fleming for the Chesterville Legion.

Dr. C. P. Martin Tells Rotarians "Nobody Can Set a Limit to a Good Example"

On the occasion of the annual Remembrance Night meeting, last Monday night, the Rotary club listened to a stirring address on "Anniversaries" delivered by Dr. C. P. Martin, Robert Reford Professor of Anatomy for McGill University.

Guests present to hear the speaker included James Fleming of Chesterville, Foster Fulton of Shawinigan Falls, Que., Joe Fortin of Ottawa, Dr. Howard Justus of Chesterville and Howard Willans of Ottawa. President Lawrence Doering was in the chair and the speaker was introduced by L. A. David.

Beginning his talk the speaker pointed out that memories vary a great deal and the usual case is to find people good at forgetting and poor at remembering. Also the human mind has the unfortunate ability of following the "law of maximum inconvenience". "We remember the wrong things too well, too often," said the speaker. In his opinion, Dr. Martin stated, education to-day stres-

Built 20 years ago, this store was power of decision and capacity to decide. Perhaps, he thought, if hand and brain were trained more closely together, it would be of more benefit to the student.

In speaking of anniversaries, the doctor came to the 11th of November and called it one of the days mo worthy of remembrance. Said the speaker, "the first Armistice day was held as a token to the sorrowing homes that had suffered the loss of one million men in the First Great War. It is also to remind us of the responsibility to those that fell to keep up the standards for which they gave their lives."

In exploring the reasons for the unrest in the world today, Dr. Martin made the following statement: "Mankind has lost her grip on spiritual things and on the moral law." Speaking as a scientist he said that while science may be the answer in the ultimate to some, to thinking men it still cannot supply the reason of morals and example, and science has no answer to the Man on the Cross who, more than anything else, needs remembering to-day.

In concluding Dr. Martin called his listeners' attention to the fact that individuals have brought about all the great changes in human history. "If we, as individuals, set first things first and recognize a deeper law, we might change the world. There is no limit to a good example. Unless individuals get back to spiritual and deeper things we are heading for another disaster. The Christian gospel is the only hope for this world, and no other. Loyalty to that hope, and with His Grace and help, we will accomplish much and in so doing be faithful to the memories of the ones who died in World Was I and II".

The thanks of the club were ably expressed by Dr. G. H. Barton.

AIMOST AN OUTCAST
by R. V. Whelan

Occasionally, I am asked if there was ever a time when I really worried about how a skunk would react to my attempts to study it at close range. However, although I recall one occasion during which I braced myself and thought of ways in which I might be deodorized, it was really through no fault of mine that I had that moment of worry. "Fools step in where angels fear to tread" and a hen was responsible for bringing me uncomfortably close to being banned from contact with my fellowman—at least until I smelled better.

Here is how it all came about: Discovering a skunk in my henhouse one evening was an event which both pleased me and caused me some concern—pleasure, because it provided an opportunity to study the creature at close quarters, and concern, lest it wipe out my source of egg supply in midwinter when fresh eggs were expensive. However, my fears concerning the ability of the hens to look after themselves were allayed by the fact that they ignored the skunk, and went as far as to kick straw over it as they scratched for grain. As a matter of fact, as the days passed by, I found it necessary to scatter grain into the straw on the floor every time I entered the hen-house, and relied on the hens to scratch the skunk from under the straw as they searched for the grain and thus avoided stepping on the sleeping animal.

About a week after the skunk took up residence in my hen-house, I decided to take some color motion pictures of the creature at close range, I provided myself with some cooked meat and threw the creature a small piece to keep it busy, while I set up my equipment. I set up two photo flood lamps to provide the necessary lighting—one above the skunk and another on the straw to illuminate the lower parts of its body. As the pictures I wanted to take were to be "shot"at two feet, a steel tape was used to measure the distance accurately from the skunk's head to the camera lens. I experienced trouble making this measurement because every time I touched the skunk's nose with the steel tape, the skunk backed up a foot or so, taking the meat with it. Finally, after a number of attempts had been made to take the pictures. I gave the animal a large piece of the cooked meat. However. as I lay sprawled out on the straw-covered floor with the camera against my cheek, I noticed that the photo flood lamp on the floor needed adjusting and I swung around to make the required adjustment. While all these preparations had been going on, the hens sat on their roost watching the proceedings—first with one eye, and then the other, in the way that all hens do to size up situations.

Now, as I reached to adjust the light, to my horror I saw one of the hens quickly jump to the floor, run to the skunk, deliver a hard blow on the skunk's head with her beak, pick up the meat and carry it into a corner.

Just picture me, lying flat on my stomach, two feet distant from a skunk who has just been violently robbed of its lunch by a hen. Of course the whole affair only lasted for a matter of seconds, but during that space of time, I was able to think of all three methods that I knew about, of deodorizing after skunk attack, i.e., burying for a week in earth, immersion in gasoline or tomato juice. However, I did not have to be deodorized. The skunk shook its head several times and then burrowed under the straw, to sleep off its headache no doubt.

I may add that the pictures were secured the following night, but precautions were taken to see that the hens were unable to take any action which would make me an outcast from society.

SIDE-TRACKED

Many strange stories are told along the northland railways. Some are downright hair-raising—some are impossible—some only improbable. All emanate from the fertile imaginations of men who ride the steel, but all probably have some basic truth around which an ultimate yarn has been built. In these stories, names and locale mean nothing. They are suited to the narrator's fancy at the time. This story I hear from an old "hogger", at the Geraldton Fair.

It appears that, some years ago, a way-frieght was hammering its way northward around the curves, over the trestles and through the deep cuts which slice through the pine-covered hills. The crew had been warned that they might meet a re-routed passenger train if a wash-out on the main-line had not been repaired by the time the passenger arrived at the Junction. It was midnight.

Suddenly a glow spread over a hilltop around which the road-bed curved sharply some distance ahead. The engineer braked hard and slid his freight back into a convenient siding. He waited.

Time passed. The engineer became impatient. He was late. But the glow seemed to increase slightly so he stayed put—waiting for that passenger train of which he had been warned—waiting for the headlight to round the bend.

Half an hour passed. By this time the entire crew had assembled up by the cab. A conference was held. It was decided that two of them would walk up and around the curve to see what was up—maybe the passenger had stopped because of a hot-box—might be it was derailed—or moving slowly because of some mechanical fault.

The two men started out . . . it was quite a distance to the bend . . they finally made it . . . they rounded the curve, and there, in all its pristine glory, riding steadily on up its sky-high grade was— The Moon!

The old hogger left it at that. He didn't try to describe the feelings of the engineer or the rest of the crew. Anything they may have said would have been quite inadequate. Besides, it wouldn't be printable.

HANDS AT WORK . . .

LEARNING REFRIGERATION

ONTARIO'S productive capacity is the measure of her future prosperity. To assure this province a prominent place in domestic and foreign trade markets, skilled hands are needed. Increased production of refrigeration units will mean a greater need for skilled servicing. Veterans, basically trained in schools and ON THE JOB, will fill this need as they are absorbed into industry. For those who have mastered skilled occupations, higher wages, job security and better working conditions are within easier reach.

Through plans sponsored by the Department of Veterans Affairs and other agencies, hundreds of young workers are being trained for refrigeration servicing. Graduates of training schools are ready now to take their places in industry. Craftsmen of the future, they will have a share in Ontario's progress—an important part to play in her industrial development.

WHY NOT SIT DOWN

On October 8th from Twin Falls, Idaho, came the story of E. J. Wills. Mr. Wills, lost for five days in Idaho timberlands while on a hunting trip, said he walked around a tree more than 20,000 times "to keep from wandering farther away."

Wills, 61, who lost only six pounds during the period, was found by a searching party.

He told rescuers, "I counted the times I walked around the tree—20,799."

Safeguarding telephone wires for trouble-free Service

THE WORK of burying telephone wires or placing them in overhead cable continues year after year. Today, over 4 million miles of telephone wires, 95% of our total, are in cable, safer from storms. Service interruptions caused by weather are fewer, and still our constant aim is to provide even better service.

Not only is our service becoming more dependable, but it's growing, too. We are filling orders for telephones just as fast as new equipment is available. More telephones plus more dependable service — and always at the lowest possible cost—mean greater telephone value for every user.

NOW THEREFORE the Commission makes the following regulations:

Furnace Fodder

The recent work of the entomologists has focussed the attention of all of us on some of the strange doings of the insect world.

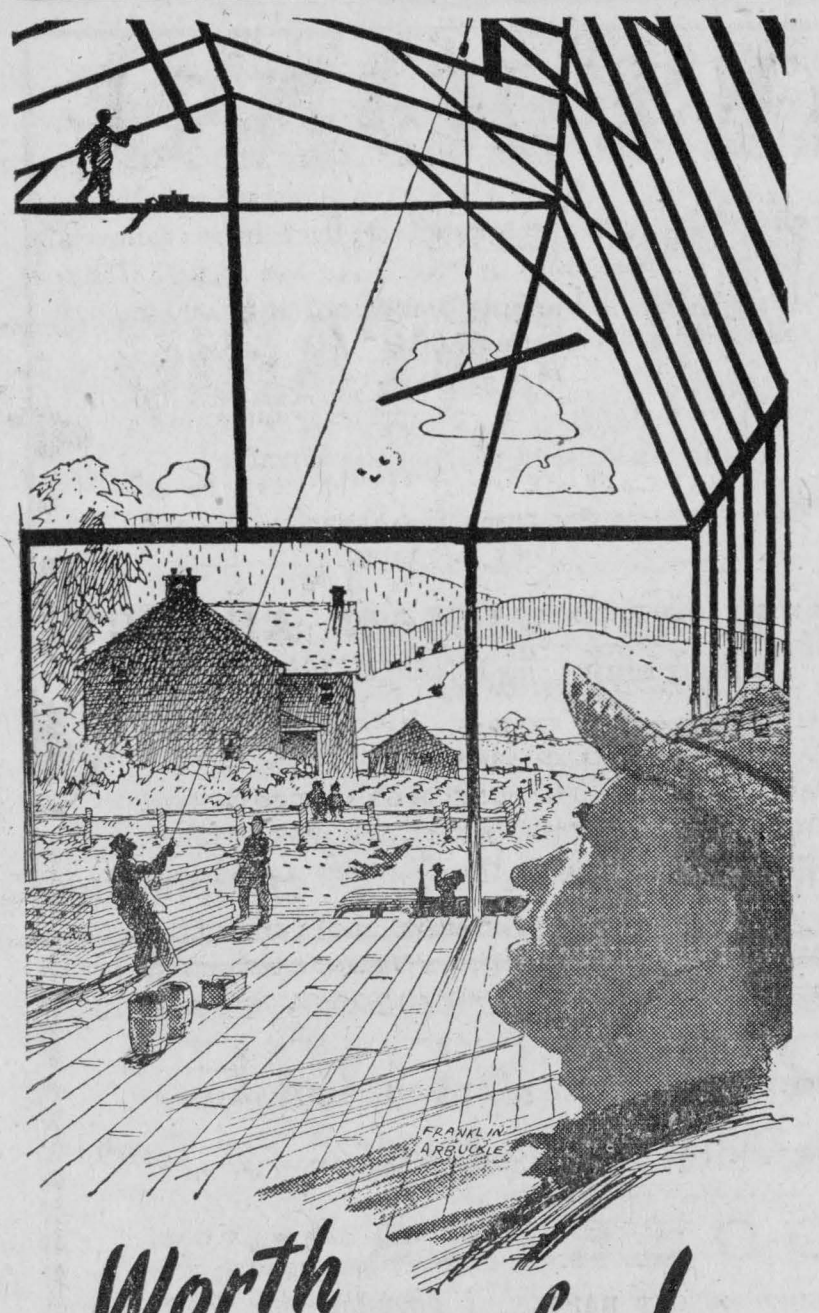
This brings to mind the epidemic of tent caterpillars or army worms which occured in the District of Thunder Bay ten years ago. One of the places that suffered the most from this visitation was the area around the town of Atikokan. Newspaper stories told of trains stalled by the mass of caterpillars crawling on the rails.

The writer was working in the woods in that area at the time, and can vouch for the fact that there was not a leaf to be seen on any hardwood tree for miles around. Walking in the woods was anything but a pleasure, with caterpillars falling down one's neck from the trees.

However, nature took its course and in due time the caterpillars turned into moths. They were not as sticky as the caterpillars, but they clustered around buildings so thickly that they had to be swept up to allow one to enter the front door.

One night, the locomotive foreman for the C.N.R., with a group of friends, was sitting outside the shop at Atikokan. They remarked on the hordes of moths flying around, and how they congregated around any light. Some one then suggested that they turn off all the nearby electric lights and open the doors of the furnaces under the boilers of the plant which was used to provide the light for the round-house and shop. This was done, and the moths flew in a steady stream to the entrance of the furnace, where the draft took them in. It was noticed that the moths were oily and burned fircely, so the men shut off the stoker.

Then would you believe it, the moths kept on coming and the steam pressure kept up till the first light of dawn, without any further effort on the part of the stokers or the firemen.



Worth working for!

Watching the men at work on his new barn, Jim thinks of the friendly talk he had with his bank manager. "I've got good land and I can work it. With a little extra money I can really make a dream come true . . ."

So Jim got his bank loan. Soon, there'll be new farm equipment . . . improved livestock . . . a well filled granary. More work for the community, more farm products, more food for home and export.

Helping people in all walks of life to profit from their own enterprise and industry is one of the chief functions of Canadian banks.

DOLLS ARE DIFFERENT IN NORTHLAND

Affection is lavished on dolls by little girls around the world. Mostly by little girls—but when Mr. Stuart Downing of the Royal Ontario Museum was showing an Indian doll to a visitor, it was evident that affection for it was present in his heart, too. It wasn't a flaxen-haired beauty with a perpetual grin and go-to-sleep eyes but what was once a real baby seal in its white skin of infancy. It had been stuffed with feathers, the eyes marked with dark cloth; and no imitation Teddy Bear or other stuffed toy beloved of a Canadian child was ever more "cuddly." Some Indian children in nothernmost Quebec's coastal region had once owned the tiny stuffed seal. Eskimo children make dolls' clothing from the long, fluffy skins of lemmings, those rodents abundant in Arctic realms which are the main food supply of snowy owls, Arctic foxes, and other animals.

BIRCH-BARK CANOE CLOSELY COPIED

In the design and construction of bark canoes Algonkian-speaking tribes of North America achieved a remarkable degree of creative skill. No craft ever made is more perfectly adapted for use in the regions of lakes, streams, and forests where these Indians roamed. No craft combines beauty and utility more harmoniously. It has superb buoyancy afloat and a gratifying lightness for easy carrying overland. When the first explorers and settlers came to the north-eastern regions of North America the birch-bark canoes commanded their admiration and adoption. And while in later days machine-shaped wood or man-made fabrics have taken the place of bark in the making of canoes, the Indian design and his fundamental principles of construction to ensure speed and sea-worthiness have been closely copied, from the dipper-turning prow to the roller-riding stern. Copper nails have taken the place of spruce roots for binding the parts, and the ribs are no longer handhewn. But the Indian birch-bark canoe was the original model for the gayly painted, commercially made craft upon a thousand lakes; paddles familiar to these tribesmen for countless generations are still the approved design for maximum efficiency. With crude tools the Indians cut and fitted the bark of the white birch, bound the sections with fibrous roots, sealed them with spruce gum, fashioned the ribs and boards with grace and skill, and created a craft which was a priceless gift to the world—the canoe. Of all the countless examples of Indian skills at the Royal Ontario Museum, no display arouses or is worthy of greater interest or admiration than the Ojibwa canoes which reveal all details of construction.

PRAIRIE CHICKENS RETURN TO ONTARIO

In describing the range of the Prairie Chicken, bird books tell of the gradual trek northwestward over the Canadian plains of this diminishing species, and add, "formerly in Ontario." A revision is indicated. A specimen in the Royal Ontario Museum of Zoology was found dead by a railroad worker 50 miles north-west of Fort William in 1929, first evidence that the true Prairie Chicken or pinnated grouse was back in the province after an absence of many years. About 1932 they were reported on Manitoulin Island, welcome invaders from the Michigan mainland where numerous colonies are found. Since then they appear to become permanent settlers on the Island, and to date they are known to be present at about 30 different points. So deep is the interest in this recurrence of the Prairie Chicken in Ontario that the department of Lands and Forests has commissioned James L. Baillie, ornithologist of the Royal Ontario Museum, to take a census of the birds and report on the possibilities for eventually securing breeding stock for introduction to other areas of the province. Because of the great value of these game birds and the fact that their numbers have decreased deplorably in years past, they are legally protected and this protection will share the fate of the now extinct Heath Hen has been removed.

"THE KING OF THE FOREST"

One time a bear, with a full stomach and a sleek coat, was sunning himself in a clearing in the forest. He enjoyed a feeling of well being and was, more or less, content with the world around him. He convinced himself that he was just about top man among them. The more he thought about it, the more he felt he should assert himself, and in due time he started off to announce it.

First he encountered a moose, grazing.

"Hey you", said the bear.

The moose grunted but continued to graze.

"Do you know I am the King of the Forest?", said the bear.

The moose raised his head. "So what?", he replied.

"Well, just you remember I can do things you can't do", and the bear climbed a tree.

"Can you do that?" called the bear.

"No", replied the moose who proceeded with his meal.

"Don't you forget it then. I am King of the Forest", and off he went and soon met a buck deer.

Again, he asserted that he was King of the Forest, and again, he climbed a tree, which the buck admitted he was unable to do, so, with a final warning as to who was King, on he went.

His next encounter was with a wolf. He climbed a tree again and, for good measure, scooped a fish out of a nearby stream which he ate himself, with a final admonishment to the wolf as to who was the King of the Forest.

In due course, many different species of the forest population were approached in the same way.

Eventually the bear found a chipmunk sitting with his arms folded at the foot of a tree.

"Do you know that I am the King of the Forest?" said the bear.

"No", replied the chipmunk. "How come?"

"Well I can swim, climb trees, catch fish, and burrow if necessary", explained the bear.

"So can I", replied the chipmunk, "and lots of other things too".

The bear made a powerful swipe at a stump beside him, tore part of it up and sent splinters and wood particles flying in all directions.

"Can you do that?" he enquired.

"Heck, I've been sick", answered the chipmunk.
