SPORTSMAN'S DINNER GIVES BOOST

Community Centre Fund Reaches $22,000

Winchester's annual Sportsman's Dinner, staged last week at North Dundas District High School, was termed very successful by the organizers and although no definite figures have been released it is understood the project netted approximately, $600.00.

Basil Dawley, while introducing Master of Ceremonies Ken 'General' Grant told the large gathering the fund has now reached the $22,000 mark, but pointed out that if an artificial ice plant is to be made possible another $60,000 will be required.

Mr. Dawley thanked school principal Howard Manchester for making the spacious gymnasium available and then turned the program over to C.F.R.A.'s 'good humour' man.

TIME TO REMINISCE

Mr. Boucher spoke of his many years of hockey activity from his many playing days till the present time and expressed the view that N.H.L. expansion is moving too fast.

He also made mention of the new World Hockey Association and suggested the demand for players will soon far exceed the supply.

Looking at the brighter side he said expansion programs made it possible for many more young players to make hockey a career.

Ottawa's Jack Gotta gave a humourous summary of his climb from a small footballtown in Michigan to his present post and predicted Ottawa would be a Grey Cup contender in 1972.

Mr. Etchevery, in defence of his team that won the Grey Cup last year and finished last this season, suggested the possibility that winning the top award with such a great number of new players last season proved this year's downfall. There is a difference, he said between coaching a group of unknowns and then coaching the same group after they have been declared champs.

Following the interesting program the celebrities chatted with fans and signed autographs for young and old alike.

Always when hockey fans gather many members of the once-famous Inkerman Rockets are present and last Thursday was no exception.

Lloyd LaPorte delightfully introduced members of his team to Ottawa 67 star Brian Barker and the other prominent men from the world of sport.

The handsome, youthful appearance of Barker seemed to emphasize just a little more the receeding hairlines, greying temples, and expanding waistlines of the Inkerman team that wrote a page in sporting history a long time ago.

As a fitting climax guests were entertained at the curling club through the kind courtesy of Ault Milk Products Ltd.

PICTURE

Robert Inglis is a Winchester boy who loves football but before last Thursday night he was not aware that being a fan could have so many fringe benefits.

Robert and his brother Albert attended the annual Sportsman's Dinner with their dad, Royal Bank Manager Al Inglis and were delighted with the opportunity to see some of their favourite sports personalities.

The real pay-off came when Robert was the lucky winner of one of the albums given away by Marlene Shepherd, "Miss Ottawa Rough Rider."

Master of Ceremonies Ken Grant explained that the winner of the third album would receive 'something special' - and he did.

The happy lad is pictured above holding his new long-play record which has obviously lost its significance as he accepts the 'something special' promised by the "General".

Albert appears contented with the gentle hug, and if the boys could judge the Miss Grey Cup pageant, Marlene would be a sure winner.

John Lundrigan Favours Regional Government

John Lundrigan, M.P. for Gander-Twillingate, told Morrisburg and District Canadian Club that Regional Government is a must if regional development is to succeed.

The speaker who is manpower critic under Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield was critical of many phases of the present governmental system.

He expressed the view that the trouble in Quebec is caused by unemployment rather than racial problems.

Further on the unemployment situation he said, "I deplore the loss of potential in an economy where the bulk of unemployment is among those 24 years of age and under.

He also voiced concern for what he called "Deterioration of Canada's relationship with United States".

He explained the problems faced by Newfoundlanders and stressed the affects the Russian 'fishing navy' has on the economy of his home province.

She's 90!

but who would guess?

You drop in to extend greetings to one of the town's favourite citizens on her 90th birthday.

Nothing unusual about that you say?

Possibly not, but if you're a stranger you may find it difficult to believe the little lady, bubbling over with energy, who ushers you in, is indeed the person being honoured on this very special occasion.

Mrs. John Moffatt observed her 90th birthday at her Main Street residence last Monday and over a hundred guests called to offer congratulations.

Mrs. Moffatt has watched Winchester move through several generations and she herself has played a leading role in the steady growth of the peaceful Eastern Ontario village.

Mrs. F. J. Rennison (Muriel) and Mrs. H.S. Lannin (Norma) assisted their mother in receiving the guests. Happy to be with friends, neighbours and relatives, the celebrant enjoyed her day completely.

In addition to her two daughters, Mrs. Moffatt has two grandchildren and three great grandchildren who happily joined in the festivities; also attending were her two sisters, Mrs. E. R. Steele, Winchester, and Mrs. Arthur McInnis, Iroquois. Her sister, Mrs. C.G. Simon, of Thunder Bay, who was a guest of Mrs. Moffatt last month, was unable to attend.

Unit No. 4, Winchester, U.C.W. of which Mrs. Moffatt is a member, catered for the Birthday Tea. Mrs. Moffatt is a Life Member of the U.C.W. an Honourary Board Member of Winchester United Church where she is most active and regularly attends Winchester W.I. meetings of which she is also a member.

Many find it difficult at such times to adequately express thanks on such joyous occasions.

This kindly lady, who claims everyone is her friend, penned the following beautiful lines as she dreamed of happy days long gone and began her 91st year with cheerful optimism.

I thank you each and every one
For joining me this day
You've added to my happiness
In a very special way
Now as the days come and go
My dreams will give me pleasure
And bring you back to me again
In memories I treasure.

Vandals Remove Warning Signs From Giant Hill

The giant man-made hill at Winchester Community Park can open doors to various types of winter fun but this can only be possible if rules and regulations are observed and obeyed.

Signs have been erected in the area and residents are alarmed to learn that vandals have already been at work uprooting the carefully placed warnings.

Two important clauses should be emphasized and they are clearly defined on signs: "USE AT OWN RISK", and "NO MOTORIZED VEHICLES".

If used as directed the village mountain will be a tremendous asset during winter months. If abused there is the distinct possibility drastic measures will have to be taken.

FROM THE ONTARIO DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

a point of view for the '70's

Children come to school with certain competencies that should be acknowledged and accommodated within the school program. We know that they can move and talk; that they have a natural curiosity; that they need to feel significant as individuals in this strange new world. The first responsibility of the school is to provide an environment that will nourish and broaden thes aspects of growth. Are we ready to accept each child as a person and not as a receptacle for knowledge or as merely an apprentice to adulthood?

The results of recent intensive scientific child study allow teachers to arrange appropriate conditions for children's development with greater certainty than ever before. We don't know all the answers but we have more than enough to make a substantial beginning. We have no end of information about what pulls children down, what tears them up, and what makes them less human than they have to be.

We know what elevates children's behaviour, what spurs them to be more than their very best, better even than they thought they could be. Knowing is one thing - putting this knowledge into practice is quite another. Let us consider how we might deploy our resources - human and material - to support this best possible growth for every child.

The physical surroundings should reflect our concern for and understanding of children. It should be possible within the school to provide the differentiated kinds of space that the child encounters at home. Perhaps one of the most signal erors in recent years has been the development of completely open-plan schools. In many cases these have forced teachers into patterns of organization as inflexible in practice as the design they seek to replace. Acres of carpet do not solve the problem! It is both an educational and architectural responsibility to see that the shape of schools is determined by educational trends rather than by architectural fashion. When teachers are asked what they desire most in school design the replies are virtually unanimous. They ask for space; space for children's activities, for display of work and for storage of equipment. The provision of space, the judicious use of colour, coupled with the considered introduction of a variety of floor coverings, should present an environment that is both practical and aesthetically pleasing; and where the child feels at home.

The things in this school environment should be relevant, varied enough to challenge each pupil, and tastefully positioned or stored within reach of the children. The very presence of a rich variety of materials is in itself a stimulus to learning. Not only should there be the stuff of childhood -- sand, clay, water -- but plenty of time to use them not just for the very young but for older children as well. There is more than one way to play with sand and water! We need to provide alternatives to the tradition of communicating almost solely in print. Paint, clay, music, movement, drama: all must become respectable, accepted forms of expression in school. Choice is ever present. Children are encourabed to risk uncertainty, to make mistakes, and to learn from them. There will be many opportunities to think for themselves, to order, to categorize, to label, to discover patterns and relationships in language, in mathematics, indeed to the whole continum of learning. Children respond to these multiple opportunities for success with a behaviour that generates new patterns of co-operation and better strategies for learning than ever before.

The things of learning have little relevance until they come alive through the influence of that Number 1 resource, the classroom teacher. It is this dynamic human interrelationship of teacher and pupil that will shape the success of the failure of our schools. With increasing mechanization, increasing impersonalization, more management through rewards and gimmicks and outside controls, only the teacher can provide the love, the generosity, the attention, the time that sustains and nourishes humanness. Teachers who become the architects of this responsive environment wield enormous power and bear responsibilities that befit true professionals. To qualify as the Number 1 resource of children, teachers must accept the advice of Dr. Albert Schweitzer who said, "Only those who respect the opinions of others can be of real use to them." Schweitzer's statement is being strongly supported by research. In fact, reliable evidence of a child's progress is available only when a relationship of mutual trust and respect exists between teacher and student. Different teachers manage this in different ways but the attitude is always unmistakable. John Blackie, in his book 'Inside the Primary School,' describes it this way: "The children feel free and relaxed and at the same time in the care of someone they respect and to whose authority they can trust themselves".

The power in this partnership of people and things has yet to be fully realized. We have not acknowledged the potential of cooperative effort. Current attempts to individualize the program for thirty children have not succeeded because the teacher alone has felt compelled to know everything and to do everything. Overwhelmed by this expectation the teacher has resorted inappropriate practices such as the mechanistic use of programmed materials, slavish adherence to a text, or the implementation of 'packaged excellence' from commercial sources. Meeting the needs of individual students effectively requires the most complex structure our schools have ever known. This complexity demands a conviction, a depth of understanding and a faith that teachers have rarely had to employ.

One outcome of current efforts to develop this complex structure has been the strengthening of professional attitudes toward fellow teachers, toward parents, toward children, toward anyone who has a potential for helping. Indeed, the planned involvement of parents in the school program has several positive advantages. It enriches the curriculum with specialized knowledge and abilities; it develps a spirit of mutual trust and respect that welds together two of the most significant influences in a child's life, the home and the school; it can also provide additional hands, eyes, and ears to assist busy teachers to make prompt responses to children's needs. Ultimately, teachers may work as much with other adults as they do with children; pooling ideas, sharing experiences, appreciating the strengths and weaknesses of colleagues. Teachers and children who are presently involved in programs that are based on respect, responsibility and the full utilization of a wide variety of resources, including both people and things, are charting the course that may well lead us to classrooms that "let a child be now the very most that a child can be -- so that twenty years later, and all through his years, he can be the very most a human can be!"

Miss Rushton, maid of honour, wore a floor length gown of purple velvet, styled as to that of the bride's a matching picture hat, and carried a white maribou muff with miniature purple and white mums.

Mrs. Raistrick, the bride's mother, wore a long sleeved white dress, brown accessories, a fur stole and yellow roses encorsage. The groom's mother wore a dusky rose coat and dress ensemble, black accessories and a corsage of red sweetheart roses.

After the ceremony, a dinner reception was held at The Country Kitchen, Winchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander are residing in Ottawa, Ontario.

Women's Christian Temperance Union Meets At Williamsburg

On Thursday, November 18th, the W.C.T.U. met at the home of Mrs. G.L. Barclay, Williamsburg, and the meeting was opened with the hymn 'How Great thy Faithfulness'.

It was decided to have a social evening to give the delegates to Youtharama an opportunity to report on the Conference which they attended. It was agreed also that members take part in the project "Coins for Conquest" to raise money for the refugees in India.

Afther the business Mrs. Barclay took charge of the devotional choosing as her topic, "Man Shall Not Live By Bread Alone". Mrs. Keyes read an article on Canadianization which told a protest on the movies by a group of women.

Mrs. W. Adams related a very interesting true story about faith. Because the natives of Guyana (British Guiana) had faith they received a much needed piano for a school, through the never tiring work of Mrs. Adams. She stressed the idea that one should never give up hope.

The meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. H. Robinson.

Dave Boyer

"Man Who Lived Two Lives" At Presbyterian Church Monday

Dave Boyer, a man who literally lived two lives, will be special guest at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church next Monday when a sacred concert of music will be presented by the Winchester-Mountain Christian Businessmen.

The interesting life story of the gifted musician began when he was born into a religious family in Baltimore Md. in 1934. His father, the Rev. Ralph Boyer, was the founder of the York Gospel Center in York, Pa.

Two of his brothers became missionaries, - one Eugene, being the voice of the 'Back to the Bible Broadcast' in the French speaking world.

David however, was the black sheep of the family and rebelled against his parents and their Christian beliefs. Very talented he developed his own style on the sax and at the age of 17 was appearing on the Paul Whitman Show.

By his own admission while attending college he marjored in booze, pot and chicks.

Drinking became an obsession and he cut all ties with his family, changed his name to Joey Stevens and completely rejected christianity.

On his 19th birthday he auditioned at the 500 Club and during his career in music he appeared with such stars as Frank Sinatra, Sammy Davis Jr., Liberace, Patti Page, Al Martino, Vic Damone and Martin and Lewis.

It was during this time that he, like many other stars, etched his name (Joey Stevens) on the sidewalk out front of the club.

Following a stint in the army during which time he married, he returned to the club. Booze and drugs had taken their toll, however, and his marriage broke up.

In 1965, slowly dying from his habits he decided to commit suicide but begged God for forgiveness and strength to live.

"Serene peace", he says, "flooded his soul at that time and he decided to surrender all the Man of Calvary.

"Joey Stevens died that day", he said, "and Dave Boyer was reborn".

He now spends all his time working with young people who have the same habits he once had.

Last New Year's Eve he was the featured vocalist on Rex Humbard's Cathedral of Tomorrow New Year's Eve telecast which was seen nation wide.

Recently he returned to Club 500, erased the name 'Joey Stevens' from the sidewalk and wrote David Boyer instead.

MARIJUANA - FAD OR FACT?

Canadian Doctor To Submit Report

Dr. S. J. Shamsie, Director of the Regional Children's Psychiatric Program and Psychiatrist-in-Charge of Children's Services at the Royal Ottawa Hospital has accepted an invitation from the Fifth International Congress of Psychiatry to present the Canadian drug scene at the International Symposium on Drug Dependence.

Dr. Shamsie is the only Canaidan to participate in the session.

Following is a copy of the Dr.'s recent paper which is entitled "DRUG ABUSE - A FAD?"

With an increasing number of young Canadians using marijuana, it appears that Canada is heading towards a society where marijuana will be as socially accepted as alcohol - even though the legal position regarding the use of drugs is not expected to change in the near future.

This is the opinion that Dr. S.J. Shamsie, a leading Canadian adolescent psychiatrist will present to delegates attending the Fifth World Congress of Psychiatry to be held in Mexico City November 28 to December 1.

Dr. Shamsie, Regional Director and Psychiatrist - in - Charge of Children's Services at the Royal Ottawa Hospital has accepted an invitation from the World Psychiatric Association to present the Canadian drug scene at the International Symposium on Drug Dependence.

In his paper, entitled "Drug Abuse - A Fad?" Dr. Shamsie notes that it is unlikely that the large number of young people who are using marijuana are going to stop just because they reach adulthood, especially if no new facts come to light regarding its effects on health, relative to alcohol and other psychotropic drugs already accepted by society. The laws in most countries always lag behind social changes and only catch up years after they have been accepted by society.

According to Dr. Shamsie, "the only effective way to stop the use of marijuana would be to provide factual evidence that it is a serious health hazard. Even then the battle would be hard to win as we are learning from the meagre success of anti-smoking campaigns."

The increase in the use of marijuana in Canada began after 1962. In that year, R.C.M.P. reports indicate that 20 cases connected with the use of the drug were reported by the police. By 1968 the number had climbed to 2,331 and in 1969 there was a further increase to 4,215. No similar increase in the use of opium derivatives such as opium and heroin has been reported.

The use of marijuana in Canada started from the universities and quickly spread to high schools.

Dr. Shamsie believes that the sharp increase in use of the drug can be explained in part by the influence of instant communication and the power of the mass media on daily life. Fashions and fads which formerly took years to develop evolve in a matter of a few years. Other factors which account for the increase in the use of marijuana by the young are:

-assurance by medical authorities that if used moderately and infrequently it has no serious harmful effect on health

-it has easy and ready accessibility at a reasonable price.

-when used, it produces instant relaxing and euphoric effects.

Now that the issue of drug abuse in adolesence has begun to drop from the headlines, Dr. Shamsie notes that it is possible to view it in its proper perspective. The number of young people who have used it and do use it occasionally is increasing. It seems likely in coming years marijuana, like alcohol, tobacco, coffee and other drugs, will become socially accepted. "Its use will not be confined to the young, as we must remember that the young of today will be the adults of tomorrow and they may wish to offer marijuana or hashish to their guests rather than cigarettes or alcohol."

Gordon Blair Says

Governments Cannot Make People Healthy, Wealthy, Wise

"I think as a society we have unreasonable expectations of governments and it simply is not in the cards for governments to make people happy, healthy and wise."

This was an opinion expressed by Gordon Blair Federal M.P. for Grenville-Carleton when he addressed the E. O. D. C. Fall Conferecne at the Talisman Motor Inn, Ottawa.

Mr. Blair was speaking at a panel discussion on 'How can Business and People Influence Governments' and he expressed the belief that attempts by government to regulate society in the best interests of everyone result in the creation of great bureaucratic structures; strangulation of many simple procedures by red tape; and the imposition of increasingly heavy taxes.

Mr. Blair's second observation concerned public affairs.

"I have for many years felt", he said, "that business fails to make the impact it should on government and on public affairs because its important voice is heard all too infrequently in the political process."

He suggested business was partly responsible because for a long time the maxim has prevailed that politics is not good for business.

"There are many people", he told his interested audience, "in our society working for private enterprises, large or small, who are effectively restrained from making the important contribution they could in public affairs."

The popular M.P. emphasized that business should be concerned with the policy formation process in a democracy and fight for their ideas. "All too often", he went on, "business is underrepresented if represented at all, in these important discussions. Businessmen are restrained by the ancient attitude I have already referred to; they often have very little time; sometimes they are put off because they are outtalked by others more experienced in political debate."

He pointed out that there are signs these attitudes are changing and that business will take a much more active role in the formation of public policy.

"No one," he remarked, "can forget business contribution to the discussion of the White Paper on Taxation."

He told those present he has for many years striven to interest businessmen in the day-to-day activities of political organizations of all parties and said he knew where they have responded to the challenge.

In concluding his remarks Mr. Blair said both business and government must overcome the tendency to open up old sores.

"The futile arguments about bureaucracy, efficiency, political influence in the evil sense of the word and others are really beside the point in this modern age. What is apparent is that the community has suffered because for one reason or another, business has not or has not been able to make a full contribution to the political process. This contribution is needed as are also the ideas of business as to how political dialogue can be improved."

DUNDAS FARM REPORT

Now It's Computerized Farming

(By R.D. Kelly, Agricultural Engineer.)

COMSOLVE

Comsolve is part of the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food 'Farman' program designed to meet the business needs of today's farmers. It is the introduction of the computer as an aid to the Agricultural Engineer. It is designed to aid farmers in solving machinery management and engineering problems.

Farm Problems It Can Solve Today -

Four programs are available for use at present.

1/ Design of Livestock Building Ventilation Systems - the computer presents information on fan size and supplemental heat requirements for various animals, buildings, and temperatures.

2/ Grain Corn Havesting - the computer aids in sizing and comparing combines and pickershellers and in determining the break-even with custom operation.

3/ Silage Corn Harvesting- the computer calculates silage corn harvesting costs and evaluates ownership of machinery versus custom operation.

4/ Tractor Size - the computer determines the maximum size of the tractor, in engine horsepower, required to do the farm job considering the limits of time, soil type, field size and manpower.

Operation of Comsolve -

The Agricultural Engineer reviews the problem with the farmer. The necessary information is entered on a report form and then phoned to a computer terminal. The operation feeds the 'input' information through the terminal to the computer and receives a printed answer or 'print-out' for the problem. A summary of the information is phoned to the Agricultural Engineer who may add additional information before forwarding it to the farmer.

At present there is no charge for this service. By relieving the Agricultural Engineer of many time consuming calculations, his services are available to more farmers with their problems of farm machinery, management, and engineering in general.

Future of Comsolve

The plan is to develop additional programs as well as utilizing any others that are available to aid in the solving of engineering problems on the farm. Typical problems being considered for the future are:

- a comprehensive machinery, processing, and storage system for grain corn.

- manure handling systems - structures and equipment for solid and liquid handling and a cost comparison.

Using Comsolve

Individual consultation is useful in providing the detailed answers required to meet the business needs of today's farmers. Contact your local Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food office for Comsolve.

OPP Reminds Drivers Of Winter Regulations

Here's a winter driving reminder. It is required by law to have clear driving visibility-front, sides and rear - whenever, the vehicle is in operation. This means it is illegal to drive with windows steamed up, frosted over, or covered with snow. Weather conditions may make this difficult at times, but remember, . . . you can't avoid an accident if you can't see the hazard.

Another timely tip is to have your exhaust system checked over. When driving, keep a window partially open to prevent drowsiness from deadly carbon monoxide fumes. If you find yourself getting drowsy, stop your vehicle, get out and walk in the fresh air. This would prevent your being involved in a serious accident or overcome by fumes.

Ontario Provincial Police in Dundas County patrolled 12,975 miles while working 980 hours. During this period, officers laid 28 charges while issuing 75 warnings under the Highway Traffic Act of Ontario.

Officers from Morrisburg and Winchester Detachments investigated 1 theft, 1 disturbance, and 25 miscellaneous complaints. Four persons were charged under the Liquor Control Act of Ontario while 2 other persons were charged under the Narcotic Control Act.

Area highways were quiet with officers investigating 4 property damage accidents.

In Provincial Judge's Court one person was given a 3 year suspended sentence by Judge H. B. Hunter for pointing a firearm. Officers spent 17 hours in court while registering 43 convictions.

Robert Allen Freeland Dies

The late Mr. Freeland is survived by six sons: Ronald, Reginald; Douglas and Earl of Winchester; Carl, Manotick; and Harry of Ottawa.

Funeral service at Vice and Craig Funeral Home, Winchester, was conducted by Rev. R. E. Votary at 2:00 p.m. Wednesday, November 24th.

NDDHS NEWS NOTES

-By Sheila Coyne

Early this year a group of ten to fifteen students tried out for the "Reach For The Top" team. They were tested by Mr. Carl Ward, on questions from past programs. Last week, our team consisting of Rob Moffat, Doug Stel, Steve Allen and Lorna Stewart, won their first game against North Grenville High School. They were awared book prizes for the school and will be competing again sometime in January. Congratulations are extended to the team for a fine showing.

Parent-Teacher interview night held last Wendesday, was very well attended. Thanks are extended to all who took part.

Chocolate Bar sales areover for this year and we would like to thank all the people in the district for supporting this drive. The money raised will go to the various clubs in the school. Many prizes were given out to the best salesman. The winner of the $50.00 cash prize was Pat Fleming.

All the teachers, students and staff have been busy at work these two months. Many clubs and organizations have been formed and as the year progresses we will keep you informed about many of their activities.

On the sports' scene, NDDHS, is doing quite well this year. There are so many games going on each week that it would take an entire column just to tell you about them all. Two highlights of the past week in sports were the Junior football total point play-off games which we lost to Thousand Islands. The girls' basketball team won their last game against Seaway. Congratulations girls!

There was a good crowd at the Band Concert last Friday night. The Band is working hard this year in prepartion for their spring tour. We hope all you people who enjoy music will attend some of our concerts. The Christmas concert should be especially enjoyable.

Goes down in the far-off west.

Hawks Extend Lead

Metcalfe split week-end games losing 5-3 to Prescott on Friday night and edging Cardinal 4-3 on Sunday afternoon.

Hawks romped to two easy victories over Maxville outplaying the Glengarry team 8 to 3 and 11 to 4.

Although no official statistics were released by the league this week Winchester now holds 3-point lead over second - place Metcalfe in the North Division and competitions promises to be extremely keen between these two clubs as the season progresses.

The 19-goal weekend scoring spree gave Winchester marksman a lift in the scoring race.

Metcalfe Jets Split Games On Weekend

Rupert MacDonald, Randy Wills and Dean Holmes scored for Metcalfe in a losing cause against Prescott on Friday night but team manager Bill McVey points out his team was slightly handicapped because of school commencement exercises. Jets scoring punch on Sunday was supplied by Dean Holmes with two, (one the winning goal); Robert Lowe and Ken Kelly with one each.

Both teams have games again this weekend when Winchester will host Morrisburg Friday night and then travel to Cardinal the following night.

Metcalfe has back-to-back games with Maxville playing at home (Embrun) on Friday night and back at Maxville on Sunday afternoon.

The time of the Sunday game has been advanced to 1:00 p.m. in order that players and coaches and fans can return in time to watch the Grey Cup game on television.

The 'Hockey Bus' will leave the Royal Bank at Metcalfe for Maxville at 11:00 a.m. and if a second bus proves necessary adequate arrangements will be made.

TODAY'S CHILD

BY HELEN ALLEN

"He loves people"

Smiling his way into your heart is Donny, eight months old.

He is a lovely baby, Anglo-Saxon in descent, a well-developed boy with blonde hair and almond-shaped blue eyes.

His left eye is slightly smaller than the right, but this does not spoil his good looks, and, in any case, is gradually improving.

Donny is an energetic, inquisitive boy with a delightful personality. Everybody is his friend. He loves children and the rougher they are with him, the more he squeals and laughs with glee. He is a strong baby, who can already stand well. And he has a small vocabulary of understandable words.

Donny is an affectionate little fellow who loves to be cuddled. There is muscular dystrophy in his background, but extensive tests show he is a normal baby. This cherub needs warm, outgoing parents who will have lots of time to give him and who can be comfortable with his medical history. To inquire about adopting Donny, please write to Today's Child, Box 888, Station K, Toronto. For general adoption information, ask your Children's Aid Society.

Constructive Criticism

We have always been of the opinion that criticism should not be voiced unless it is of the constructive variety. Keeping this philosophy in mind we feel justified in making comments concerning last week's Sportsman's Dinner.

In all fairness we salute those whose efforts made the event possible, and have only words of praise for well known sports and news media personalities who were present. Often projects of this nature improve from year to year mainly because those who willingly organize just as willingly seek new suggestions from all concerned.

It is in this light we submit the following. Call it criticism if you like but we prefer to think of the lines in terms of constructive ideas.

First, since it was a sportsman's dinner, and since sportsmen are notably hardy, healthy individuals, a hot dinner complete with pretty waitresses would, we feel, have been much more appropriate this time of year.

With such a distinguished group of "heroes" from the sporting world present it was regrettable their devoted fans, the youngsters, were present in very limited numbers. Also we refuse to believe so many men, obviously keenly interested in sports, are married to women who prefer to eat at home rather than join their men for an evening out.

We respectfully suggest that those planning the event for next year carefully study alternate viewpoints in the hope of coming up with even more productive results.

There are two fields of thought, both of which deserve dutiful consideration. Should we, for example, further increase the admission price and stage an all-out promotion program emphasizing the fact that the event is indeed an opportunity for everyone to donate freely in the interests of the community?

On the other hand, would it be more feasible to completely change the format making it a family affair with prices scaled down to make it possible for every family in the community to participate?

We have boldly stated our views, not in a critical nature, but in the hope that such suggestions may prove helpful to those who conscientiously plan.

If you feel you have some constructive ideas why not make them known, not on the street corner, but to the men who spend tireless hours at the planning board.

BILL SMILEY WRITES

Born 30 Years Too Soon - Again

My tired old eyes almost popped out and ran down my cheeks the other day, like a couple of peeled grapes, when I read about the increases in pay to our armed forces.

"My God," I groaned to my wife, "will you listen to this? A buck private is going to get $480 a month." She wasn't impressed.

But she perked up her ears and turned down the corners of her mouth with my next remark: "And a colonel will be drawing $1,960 a month." My brother, her brother-in-law, is a colonel.

Out came the pencil and she started some rapid calculation. In about half an hour, while I sat there shaking my head with a mixture of shocked disbelief and incipient nausea, she blurted, "Do you realize that young pup is going to be making $22,520 a year?"

I nodded morosely. I had done it in my head, give or take a few hundred dollars, in eight seconds.

"Why – why, that's impossible," and her voice went up an octave. I just took the paper over and pointed to the cold, black print.

It was like swallowing a horse-pill without benefit of water, for both of us. While I had been slogging along serving humanity as a weekly newspaper editor, sometimes hitting a high of $6,200 a year, and later as a teacher, he had been gallivanting around to all sorts of glamorous and exciting places.

Aide-de-camp to an Air Vice-Marshal in Europe. Boar-hunting in Germany. Commander of a fighter squadron in France. Liaison officer in Paris. Desk job in Ottawa. Back to Europe. Back to Canada to head a fighter squadron at Val d'Or, guarding us against the Eskimoes, then a soft touch at Colorado Springs in the States, watching the panic button, and skiing weekends.

There was only one bright spot in my mind as I reviewed this circuit. He's now stuck in Syracuse. Who wants to live in Syracuse?

But my wife wasn't finished. "Why didn't you stay in the air force?" I gave her some lofty reply about being my own man, and not wanting to wallow around in peace-time on the taxpayer's money. I didn't mention that the air force wouldn't have had me if World War III had broken out twenty minutes after World War II ended.

Then, in the gloomy silence that followed, I started thinking back. When I joined up, we got $1.30 a day, or $40 a month. I sent home $20 a month to my mother. We got paid every two weeks, so I had a handsome $10 to blow. I'll never forget the time I lost my $10 bill about twenty minutes after pay parade. It was at Manning Pool in Toronto, with about 10,000 airmen on hand. The next couple of weeks were slim pickings. But I made it, by borrowing. That's when I started borrowing, and I've never caught up since.

But it wasn't so bad, really. Beer was 10¢ a draft and a dollar went a long way. I didn't smoke. Girls didn't expect you to take them out for drinks, dinner and the theatre. They just expected you to take them out.

Hotel rooms were no problem, on weekend leave. One of us would check into the old King Eddie in Toronto, and take a single room. Price was $3.00, with 10 per cent off for servicemen. Then about five more would sneak up and six of us would share a single room, sleeping three on the bed, crossways, the others on the floor. Average cost, 45¢ each. We didn't need much sleep anyway.

Wages went up with each increase in rank. As I recall it, when I was commissioned, I got about $6.50 a day. This was wealth beyond the dreams of avarice, in those days. The Australian and U.K. officers envied us bitterly. They were paid about half that, to maintain the standards of an officer and gentleman.

I don't envy the servicemen their increase. They have a job that is especially thankless in peacetime. But if I were quite a few years younger, I'd be running, not walking, to the nearest recruiting station.

But my kid brother is another matter. I'm smarter than he is, though he'd never admit it. I could always beat him up. He's got his only child married off to a wealthy Englishman. He's going to have a fat pension in just a few years.

It's only fair to serve notice on him that he may have long-term, perhaps permanent, guests, when he retires and picks out his villa in Spain.

First Snow

The Seventh Column

We are pleased to include our annual "Snowmobile Issue" this week and feel confident readers will enjoy the well blended variety of news, advertising content and helpful suggestions. Last Friday many were beginning to express opinions that the outlook for this season might be anything but encouraging. Smiles reappeared by Sunday, however, when the mercury dropped and soft white snow blanketed the area. A careful scrutiny of the almanac indicates "good trails" in the near future. May we suggest a special effort to make them safe trails as well?

Football coaches help sportswriters fill columns in most dailies and both Sam Etcheverry and Jack Gotta proved interesting and amusing guests at the Sportsman's Dinner. Being considered by many as an old-timer, our attention centred more around the quiet gentleman seated with his wife near the end of the head table. In his heydey the name Frank Boucher was blazed in sports headlines across the nation, when he proved conclusively that the rugged sport could be played in a gentlemanly fashion. Young players to-day might be well advised to remember that Frank Boucher played entire seasons, competing against the most talented and rugged players in the world and, although always a leading playmaker and scorer, he rarely was penalized.

Those concerned regarding the merits of continued faithful service with their present employee might find encouragement in the report of a man who retired with a comfortable fortune of $60,000 after 30 years of devotion to duty. He had amassed this fortune through courage, enterprise, initiative, attention to duty, faithfulness, efficiency and careful investment of his savings, and the death of an uncle who left him $59,999.50.

Thinking in terms of thousands brings up the subject of radio announcers, and who could possibly overlook last Thursday's Master of Ceremonies at the Sportsman's Dinner. There were those who thought General Grant's suit was "out of this world." There were others who suggested that was where it should have been.

Osgoode Township High School Commencement Exercises were staged last Friday night and 87 young men and women marched proudly across the stage to receive their be-ribboned diplomas. The spacious gymnasium bulged with parents who were equally proud, and justifyably so. One man out in the audience, who had viewed the scene with great satisfaction, made a rather quaint observation at the close of the thrilling event. "It's grand to see the happiness in the eyes of parents on an occasion such as this," said Dr. Lynn Morrow, "but I hope they all realize I feel mighty good too; after all, I saw most of them first."

Early reports indicate a busy and interesting season on area curling lanes. Already Morrisburg has played host to two Winchester rinks and the only comment available from our local boys was that the refreshments were excellent. Being of an inquisitive nature we put through a call to the club on the St. Lawrence. To "protect the innocent" we refuse to comment further.

Clergymen concerned with inadequate collections might give some thought to the minister who began his sermon one Sunday like this: "There is a certain man among us today who is flirting with another man's wife and unless he puts five dollars in the collection plate his name will be read from the pulpit." When he checked the collection he found fifteen five-dollar bills and a two-dollar bill with this note attached: "Will pay the balance on payday."

"Our Hawks look good this year." This was a statement made recently by Coach Steele in reference to the Winchester Junior "B" hockey team. Watching the team move further out in front of the pack each week, we think Joel was being extremely modest. The fiery young coach encountered "rough water" during the building years but his faith in the boys is paying off. Barring injury this could be Winchester's big year.

Maybe you're wondering about the value of our modern system of education. If so consider this statement made by an executive member at a recent ladies' meeting: "I decided it was time to have a frank talk with my daughter, and believe me, I sure learned plenty."

Gordon Blair Reports

Last week was enlivened by the publication of the so-called Gray Report and the even more surprising reprinting of an official cabinet document on foreign ownership. Immediately, most people realized that the recommendations attributed to the Gray Report were hardly earth-shaking. The idea of some kind of a take-over review board - a screening agency against foreign investment - has been in the public domain since the Watkin's Report of 1967 and even well before that. What the episode brought to the surface was the continuing strong debate about the place of foreign investment in Canada.

FOREIGN OWNERSHIP ISSUE DIVISIVE

The seriousness of the debate on foreign ownership was revealed to all of us who saw CBC television on the Sunday evening before the Conference of the Federal-Provincial Governments. First, we observed the self-assured young professors from the University of Toronto arguing for restrictions against foreign investment. Then we heard from the most engaging foursome of young new Provincial Premiers, Hatfield (New Brunswick), Regan (Nova Scotia), Schreyer (Manitoba) and Loughheed (Alberta), all of whom opposed restrictions. It is obvious to most that there is no magic, immediate solution for the major problems of this country by adopting extreme nationalistic policies. Changes in emphasis and policy over a long period may be necessary, but it should now be abundantly clear to everyone, that the issue is divisive. It is affluent and well-off who generally appear to favour restriction and the disadvantaged areas who favour freedom for development. There are thus many serious overtones in this debate. Faced with all the other problems created by American action against our international trade, it is no wonder the the Government has proceeded carefully and slowly and has not responded to sometimes hysterical, emotional appeals to take action against foreign investment which might do considerable harm to production and employment.

A NEW TEAM

The conference appears to have opened up new approaches. It was striking to see an almost completely new set of faces. Bennett of British Columbia is the only premier left from the old guard. All the other provincial premiers are relatively young men and new in office. They are prepared to try new ideas, but it remains to be seen how effective their new approaches will be. The ancient urge is still upon the provinces to try to tell the Federal Government how to run its affairs and to extract the highest possible financial toll from the Federal Treasury either in subsidies or waivers of Federal tax rights. Fortunately among the new young premiers there were some present who clearly saw that this ancient and sometimes outrageous clamour against the Federal fiscal position poses a real threat to national unity. It is too early to tell how this new team of provincial premiers will compare with their predecessors, but having seen them all together, I think most Canadians are pleased with their first performance and believe it holds out high hopes for the future.

PRIME MINISTER'S CONFERENCE INCONCLUSIVE

The three day conference between the Federal and Provincial Governments produced considerabled negative comment. There was much controversy; not many positive decisions were made. Such conferences are bound to reflect all our usual Canadian disagreements - regional or political. It would have been foolish for anyone to think this would produce a quick set of solutions for all of the problems.

Illegal Deer Hunting Costly

Two area men recently had a ver costly day in court. The men, charged with knowingly possessing deer during the closed season were fined $500 each on that charge, and $250 each for hunting on Sunday. One paid an extra $250 for jacklighting deer, while the other paid $250 for having an unencased firearm at night. Court costs were also levied in this case making it an extremely costly experience.

Educational Research Contract To Ottawa

An Ottawa project has received the second Ontario Department of Education contract for educational research, Education Minister Robert Welch announced today.

Mr. Welch said the Department will provide $44,800 for the research evaluation of the French as a second language programs of the Ottawa Roman Catholic Separate School Board. The contract is one of a series that will be made by the Department for Department-initiated educational research under a new program announced in July.

The Ottawa project involves the Department of Education, the Ottawa Roman Catholic Separate School Board and the University of Ottawa.

The project is the direct result of a major updating of the program of teaching French to English-speaking pupils in primary grades begun in 1969 by the Ottawa R.C.S.S. Board.

Under the program, pupils can attend French kindergarten classes one-half day along with their usual half-day English kindergarten classes. In Grades 1 and 2 pupils may take 75-minutes of French per day, total immersion in French, or no French at all.

The research component of the project includes an assessment of the academic , intellectual, linguistic, emotional, social, attitudinal and motor development of the children enrolled in two French instruction programs in the English schools of the Ottawa R.C.S.S. Board.

Mr. Welch approved the funding of the project's research component after receiving analysis of the research findings in the interim report and encouraging reports on the project's potential benefit to other school boards in Ontario.

Mrs. R. Michener Extends Patronage To Oxfam Appeal

Her Excellency, Mrs. Roland Michener has extended her patronage to the OXFAM- CANADA SARI APPEAL for the Pakistani women in the refugee camps of India.

To date, there are nearly 3 million female refugees in India, 170,000 of whom are registered in OXFAM camps. Their numbers are increasing daily and members of the OXFAM Field Team have strongly stressed the need for saris. The OXFAM SARI APPEAL is an attempt to meet that need.

Some women are wearing saris which hardly cover their nakedness. Others must have an additional sari so that they can change and bathe - a basic and fundamental need in their desperate condition. It is true that the monsoon season is ending. But winter is coming and these people must be clothed.

OXFAM appeals to the women of Canada on the basis of One Dollar per Sari - a small sum of money which will pay large dividends in warmth, cleanliness, and protection - and perhaps more important, in human dignity.

Your donation can be made to OXFAM SARI APPEAL, 280 Bloor St. West, Toronto 180, Ontario. Please mark cheques "Sari Appeal".

Ont. Dairy Industry Valued At Million Dollars A Day

Cow & Computer

365 million dollars! This is the approximate yearly value of Ontario's dairy industry. Milk testing is essential to the industry. And like so many facets of modern agriculture, testing is now a highly automated operation.

The Ontario Milk Commission operates the Central Milk Testing Laboratory in Guelph. Milk samples from each of the nineteen and one half thousand producers are collected twice a month. Samples are then forwarded to the lab where they are analysed by IRMA — the infra-red milk analyser. This gives a precise measure of the butterfat content of the milk. The results are fed into a computer and entered in the farmer's record. Results are also forwarded to the Ontario Milk Marketing Board where the figures are used to help calculate the returns to the farmer. And this is only one of the many steps towards high quality standards for nature's wonder food. (Photographs by Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food)

Issue Warning Concerning Possible 1972 Corn Blight

Eastern Ontario corn could be hit by an epidemic of southern corn leaf blight in 1972, and farmers should be taking precautions now to guard against it, according to Dr. A.T. Bolton of the Canada Agriculture Ottawa Research Station.

In 1971, the disease was severe enough in the region to cause concern to growers. It was more severe and widespread in the area than in 1970, when it caused considerable damage in the United States.

A survey of seven eastern Ontario counties -- Carleton, Prescott, Glengarry, Stormont, Dundas, Grenville and Lanark -- showed the disease in 40 percent of the fields examined.

In several fields, all plants were infected and in many, more than 50 percent of the leaf area was dead by the first week in September.

Infected ears were found in several fields, usually where the disease was severe on the leaves. However, less than one percent of the ears examined showed definite leaf blight symptoms.

The organism which causes the disease is a fungus (Helminthosporium maydis) which probably originiated in the corn growing areas of the southern U.S. During wet weather, this fungus produces spores which can be carried great distances by the wind. They can also be splashed onto other leaves and into the tips of ears by rain.

There is evidence that the disease overwintered in Ontario in 1970, and it could do so again this year.

Southern corn leaf blight causes narrow oval brown spots on the leaves, usually less than an inch long although they may run together to develop large dead areas.

These dead spots, called lesions, can also develop on the stalks and husks.

When the fungus attacks the cobs, it produces a black rot which begins at the tip and progresses .. downward among the kernels.

Prior to the 1970 epidemic in the U.S. southern corn leaf blight did not occur in the more northerly corn growing areas.

However, changes in seed production techniques and the discovery of plants that do not produce pollen have brought about the development of a new strain of the blight. This new strain is also better able to withstand lower temperatures.

It gradually worked its way northward until, in 1970 it caused severe losses in the U.S.

The disease was not found in eastern Ontario until September 1970, and then only a few fields in limited amounts.

In 1971, the disease appeared in early September and spread very rapidly.

The reason for the late appearance in 1971 is not known, but it is certain that yields were not reduced as much as they would have been had the disease appeared earlier.

The concern is now for the 1972 crop.

While there is no way of being certain the disease will be serious next year, scientists know it can overwinter locally and that there is an abundant source of infection.

If conditions are right, it could be widespread.

There are several precautions farmers can take to prevent spread of the disease:

1. They should be careful not to carry out shelling operations during July and August as these are the months when the plants are most susceptible to the disease. If shelling is necessary during this period it should not be done when it is windy. All cobs husks, and silks should be destroyed or buried. The survey found that the disease was most severe on farms where there was a corn crib in or beside a new corn field, especially where there was evidence of shelling operations.

2. Another source of infection was corn fields that were not completely harvested in 1970 or early 1971. Fungus overwintered on the foliage, infected volunteer corn and spread to nearby fields.

3. If possible, farmers should use seed that is produced by detasseling, rather than from male sterile plants. This is called normal cytoplasm seed. The seed container is marked with an "N". Farmers should look for this symbol when buying 1972 seed, says Dr. Bolton.

HALF OF APPLE HARVEST

Sweet, Juicy McIntosh Originated At Dundela

A single tree in Dundas County, Ontario, is the source of all of today's McIntosh apple orchards across Canada and throughout the world.

In 1811, while clearing land on his homestead in Dundas County, John McIntosh discovered apple trees growing wild near the ruins of an earlier attempt to settle. They were possibly seedlings from apple trees carried to Ontario by settlers moving west from Quebec. John McIntosh transplanted the trees and one of them produced a fragrant juicy apple, crisp and sweet. Seedlings from the popular tree were sold to neighbours, but failed to produce the same fruit. It was not unitl 1835 that the true variety was successfully reproduced. A farmhand taught John McIntosh's son how to take a branch from the McIntosh apple tree, and graft or join it to a tree root which would support its growth to produce another tree exactly like the original.

Today, Ontario harvests over 6 million bushels of apples a year. Half of these are McIntosh.

The McIntosh apple has been used to develop new apple varieties which share its good qualities. The Cortland, Melba, and Spartan apples are three of these, say food specialists at the Ontario Food Council, Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food.

Second Sportsman's Dinner

Stars of to-day, stars of yesteryear and fans of all ages mingled happily following last Thursday's Annual Sportsman's Dinner, and many lined up for autographs of favourites.

Brian Barker, a handsome 17-year-old lad from Long Sault and a member of the Ottawa 67's, met for the first time Lloyd LaPorte and several of his one-time hockey greats. The young star's dedication to hockey was noticeably affected by two lovely young ladies who shared the spotlight.

Miss Ottawa Rough Rider, Marlene Shepherd, and Dundas Dairy Princess Barbara Blaine added that touch of grace and beauty so necessary when sportsmen gather.

For those a "little older" chatting with Frank Boucher, one of the greatest hockey players of all time, added greatly to the evening's entertainment.

No Fault Auto Insurance— Plan Province-Wide Seminars

The Ontario Insurance Agents' Association, in conjunction with the Insurance Bureau of Canada, will hold a province-wide series of seminars on "No Fault Auto Insurance" which will begin November 26 in Thunder Bay.

"The purpose of the seminars," said Richard W. Gammon, President of OIAA, "is to explain the new 'no fault' auot policy legislation which comes into effect in Ontario on January 1, 1972".

The seminars will be run by Robert Lovell, Co-ordinator of Education Activities for the Ontario Insurance Agents' Association and by Walter Famme, an Oshawa insurance agent, a Past President of OIAA and an acknowledged expert on auto insurance, who was a member of the policy committee which drafted the new legislation.

In addition, a representative of IBC will deal with adjusting and claims procedures.

"There is a great deal of public misunderstanding about the 'no fault' concept," said Mr. Gammon. "These educational seminars are part of our OIAA educational activity to make sure that people in the insurance industry are well prepared to handle public requests for information about 'no fault' insurance in Ontario. Independent insurance agents, who are members of the Ontario Insurance Agents' Association, can be relied upon as a source of information regarding 'no fault' insurance in Ontario.

"Not only insurance agents, but lawyers, underwriters and adjustes will be invited to each four hour seminar," Mr. Gammon said. "Each seminar will cover the new auto policy, the mandatory provisions, how claims will be handled, underwriting techniques, revised policy conditions and client explanation methods."

Seminars in this district will be: Belleville, December 7th and Ottawa, December 8th.

"An announcement regarding the seminars has been sent to all persons in the insurance industry," said Mr. Gammon," and we expect a large turnout at each seminar." Tickets to attend the seminars are available from the Ontario Insurance Agents' Association, 67 Yonge Street, Suite 1228, Toronto, Ontario.

Over Production Is Farmers' Big Problem

"The farmers of Canada have an amazing ability to produce, in fact to overproduce", Ontario Federation of Agriculture President Gordon Hill told 400 delegates to the Federation annual convention in Hamilton on Monday. "I picture our agriculture as a high-powered automobile, running at half speed. It's tempting to step on the gas just a touch, but when we do that, the vehicle accelerates to quickly, throwing us out of control."

Hill, re-elected to a second term of office as President at the 1970 Federation convention, gave the welcoming address on the first day of the three-day policy-making convention.

"It was our efforts to regulate this ability to over-produce that resulted in one of the most divisive issues that ever hit Canadian farmers," Hill said. "National marketing legislation became a barrier separating the farmers of this land into hostile factions. Political opportunists used the legislation to misinform and mislead farmers, to fan farmers' discontent and to embarass the federal government.

Perhaps mercifully the government slid the bill under the carpet, allowing farmers to patch up their differences."

But Hill told the federation delegates that the problem of over-capacity was still present. "The farmers of Canada still need some kind of co-ordinating structure for provincial marketing boards."

Speaking of the low incomes of Canadian farmers, Hill said, "Our young people are leaving the farms in droves. They see the kind of incomes that farmers earn and they want no part of it. They want to enjoy the good things of life that other people their age enjoy and that means they have to seek new careers.

An industry that can't keep its young people is an unhealthy industry."

Hill talked of the federation's successes during his past year of presidency. "Our best success was in the field of truck licenses. For years the Federation has urged the Ontario government to introduce a special rate licence for farmers. This year we got it."

But Hill questioned the timing of the announcement. "Perhaps the election had something to do with it," he said. "Maybe I'm just a dreamer, but I'd like to see the day when governments react to the problems of agriculture when farmers need help, not when governments need help."

Looking at the future, Hill discussed the possibility of an assistance program for cow-calf operators in Ontario. "Beef producers in other provinces have the benefit of governmental encouragement to increase production," Hill said. "Why not these advantages for Ontario cow-calf producers?"

Teacher's View — DEVELOPMENT DAY: IS IT ENOUGH? — By Frank Loch

Frank Loch is a teacher and he is also the professional development district chairman. The views expressed here by Mr. Loch are not necessarily those belonging to this newspaper.

Every year both secondary and elementary school teachers program one entire day with activities that will increase their effectiveness in helping students to learn and grow. In this rapidly changing world, teachers need to maintain a high interest in education in they are to improve their services to students and to society.

Is this one day enought to examine all new developments in education and to settle all problems that have arisen? Definitely not! Business and industry send their staff on seminars and up dating courses, sometimes lasting weeks, and still feel they have a difficulty in keeping up with the developments within their field. It is difficult for teachers department heads, or principals to take this length of time from their duties. The regular teacher timetable also prevents professional development on a significant scale taking place in regular school time.

At no time during the day are all teachers teaching the same subject, or same grade level, or are all department heads off or an open period together. After class and a full day of teaching, it is difficult to pull on that extra reserve for another hour or two to study developments, or problems to the best of one's ability. It was to resolve this problem that the S.D.G. In-Service Education Committee was formed.

With the agreement of the S. D. & G. County Board of Education it has set up this past month a working policy for professional development (in-Service education) activities. This includes up to two short days per month per school and two half days per teacher per year. (a short day at CCVS is a special schedule which allows all classes to be taught except that the period of time is shortened) With this system teachers, administrators as well as parents and students may meet partially on school time partially on their own time to discuss educational activities, policies and innovations. The professional development day now takes on a new significance.

It no longer is a one day affair. It now can take the role of stimulator of ideas, concepts, innovations, and philosophies. The short days can be used for further discussion, analysis and recommendations for an improved educational environment on the local as well as district level. The half days can be used by subject teachers from across the three counties to meet at least twice each year to come up with unified programmes and policies, perhaps gained from ideas at the Professional Development day.

This year's Professional Development Day was planned with these considerations in mind. The theme of the day is "Education for the 70's". The morning session will consider the "Problems in the 70's". It is started by a panel of noted educators, and then teachers will be divided in seminar groups (each school having at least one representative in each group). Beside these educators, resource people from industry, business, Ontario College of Education, Department of Education as well as a panel of parents and students will lead the groups. They will indicate the problems of education as they see them and suggest a philosophy of education that could solve some of them. A period will be left for questions and suggestions from the teachers.

The afternoon session will examine "The Innovations in Secondary Schools, Students, Administration and Curriculum". A short auditorium session with guest speaker Mr. J. Krar from Centennial High School in Welland discussing "The Philosophy of the Structure of the School and Evaluation" will be succeeded by the same type of seminar groups. Along with Mr. Krar the resource group leaders will be principals and students from fourteen of the most innovative school in Ontario and Quebec.

Teachers will be able to examine these innovations and discuss how and if they meet the challenge of Education for the 70's.

It is hoped that the information gained by teachers in these groups will be recorded and brought back to their schools. In their subsequent reports all teachers of the school would obtain the pertinent facts from each group. Within the structure discussed previously teachers and administrators could, after consultation, accept ideas or innovations they feel would improve their educational environment.

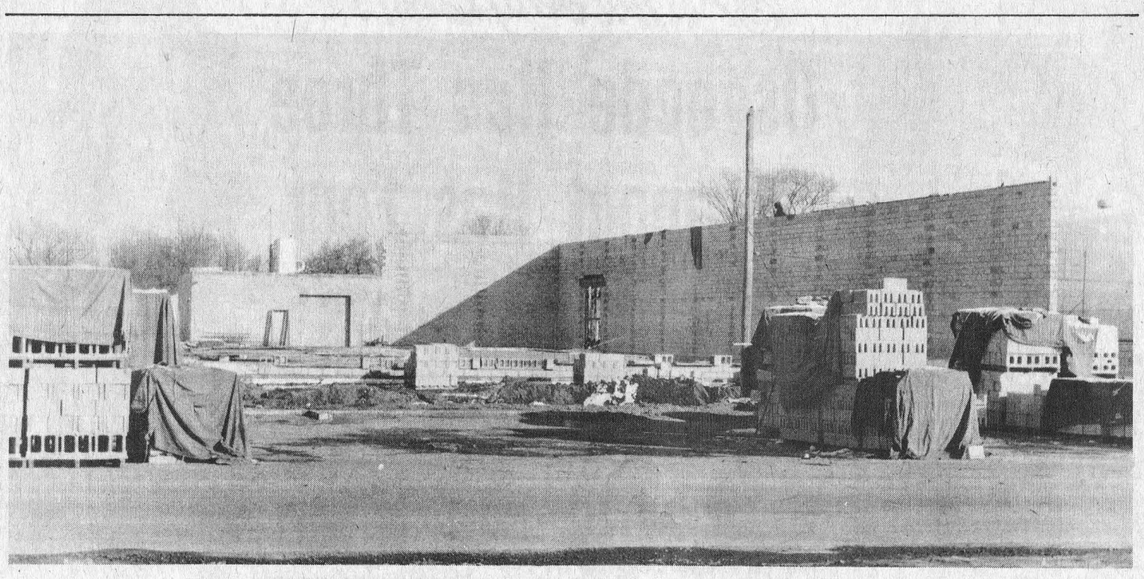
School Space Sharing In Carleton

Carleton Board of Education agreed last week to a mutual no-cost sharing of facilities with the Carleton Separate School Board.

Grades 7 and 8 students from St. Catherine's separate school, Metcalfe will be able to use the industrial arts shops at the public board's Osgoode Township High School.

In exchange the public board will be given a surplus room in St. Catherine's for the overflow of a kindergarten class from the Metcalfe public school next door.

It is understood the agreement is limited to this school year.



Community Centre Rises From Ruins

Following many months of negotiation and meticulous planning a new community centre is rapidly taking shape at Metcalfe.

It was in the early morning hours of last January 23rd that flames ripped through the original structure leaving it a mass of ruins, but within hours board officials, assembled in the nearby curling rink, were making plans for reconstruction.

It was at first hoped construction could be completed in time for the annual fall fair, but negotiations between the board, local authorities and provincial municipal boards required much more time than was anticiapted, and it was feared action might be delayed till the summer of 1972.

Area residents are pleased to see workmen taking advantage of fine autumn weather and hope no devastating storms will arrive till the new structure is closed in.

The block building housing the artificial ice plant at the rear was not damaged in the fire and the new centre will be slightly larger than the previous one.

Changes are expected in the ice surface but the playing area will not be increased. More space, however, will be available for spectators and many other beneficial innovations will make the building one of the most modern in Eastern Ontario.

Accompanying photo shows the south wall and a portion of the east end already built and material ready for completion of block work in preparation for the steel.

Increases Deferred For Ontario Hydro Customers

Ontario Hydro is maintaining rates set a year ago for supplying power to municipal utility systems and a group of 88 large industrial customers. Last November Hydro told its customers that rate increases over several years would be required to equate revenues with costs.

In a letter sent to the utilities this week, Hydro Chairman George Gathercole said, "The Commission recognizes the desirability in the present period of adjustment and unemployment of avoiding any action that would hamper or impede the special public measures that have been adopted to stimulate the economy.

"Accordingly it has been decided to maintain for the time being the interim rates that have been effective in 1971. The shortfall in revenue will be met in part by a special withdrawl from the Rate Stabilization Reserve," he said.

The reserve was created to cushion the impact of rate adjustments resulting from financial and technological contingencies such as low stream flow conditions; severe breakdowns or in-service deferments of generating stations and transmission facilities; increases in foreign debt payments associated with unfavourable movements in exchange rates, and exceptionally adverse economic circumstances.

Mr. Gathercole went on to say that the deferment of the previously announced rate increase "must be considered as temporary or short term, for, rising costs must ultimately be met out of the proceeds of rates. It cannot be employed to buck the long term increase in the cost of power."

The letter indicated that Hydro had given careful consideration to the economic uncertainties that exist, and the special measures adopted by the federal and provincial governments to stimulate employment and achieve a resurgence in the economy.

"Our most recent analysis of power costs confirms that there has been very little abatement, if any, of upward trends. The price paid for fuel for our thermal generating stations and other equipment and supplies has continued to rise. The increasing concern for the quality of the environment has required the installation of highly sophisticated anti-pollution equipment and the use of more costly fuels.

"The inexorable escalation in wage and salary rates, particulary those for construction skills, has exerted a strong upward thrust which will inevitably affect our costs for a number of years. To maintain the financial viability of our enterprise, revenues must ultimately be adjusted to equate costs," said Mr. Gathercole.

Hydro said the Chairman, intends to review the situation during the coming year.
