DEEKS — McINTOSH

In a pretty double wedding ceremony in St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Williamsburg, on Saturday, Miss Mary Ruth McIntosh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin McIntosh of Williamsburg, became the bride of Mr. Douglas Deeks. Rev. J. L. Kirchhofer conducted the ceremony against a floral setting of gladioli, mums, asters and dahlias. Mrs. Maefred Merkley was the organist, playing the wedding music and accompanying the guest soloist, Mrs. Dwight Deeks, of Toronto.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was very charming in a floor length gown of double net over taffeta. The skirt was fashioned with frills of net and taffeta over lace, and a chantilly lace jacket with long sleeves, was worn over the fitted bodice with a Peter Pan collar encrusted with seed pearls. Her finger tip veil of tulle illusion was trimmed with seed pearls and was held in place by a tiara encrusted with seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of white baby mums and red roses.

Miss Sheila Fraser of Morrisburg, was the maid of honour and Miss Golda Rae, of Inkerman and Ottawa was the bridesmaid. They were similarly gowned in net over taffeta with frills of net falling from waist to floor. They wore jackets of net over taffeta, feather hats to mach their dresses. Miss Fraser's dress was in a shrimp shade and the gown worn by Miss Rae, was blue in color.

Mr. Phil. Casselman, of Williamsburg was best man and the ushers were Robert McIntosh, brother of the bride, and Douglas Barkley of Chesterville.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the bride's parental home, north of Williamsburg. Later, the happy couple left on a honeymoon trip to North Bay, Sudbury and other points west. For travelling, the bride chose an ensemble of multicolored brocaded taffeta with pink accessories, a corsage of pink roses and a navy bengaline duster.

On their return they will reside at Williamsburg. Guests from a distance who attended the wedding, came from Toronto, Ottawa, Cornwall and Mountain.

LEGION FAREWELL TO MR. AND MRS. MAX HARRIS

Mr. and Mrs. Max Harris, who for the past six years have owned and operated Locketon Lodge Hotel, at Williamsburg, were tendered a farewell party by members of the Williamsburg Branch of the Canadian Legion and the Ladies' Auxiliary. Mr. Harris was largely responsible for organizing the Williamsburg branch, and Mrs. Harris gave valuable assistance to the Ladies Auxiliary while it was being organized 2 years ago.

During the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Harris were presented with a lovely silver tray bearing the inscription: "To Comrade Maxwell Harris, first president and organizer of the Williamsburg Legion Branch, and to Comrade Sonya Harris, for her many favours". The accompanying address was read by Bill Strader, and an expression of thanks was voiced by Mr. Harris, on behalf of his wife and himself.

The same evening, Mr. Harris was presented with a car rug by Walt. Garlough and "Doc" Bailey on behalf of the hotel employees.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris, who completed the sale of the hotel to Raymond McIntosh two weeks ago, are now residing at their home in St. Catharines, Ont.

JOHN FARRELL DIES SUDDENLY AT HOME ON SUNDAY

The sudden death of John Farrell, widely knowr and spected resident of this district, at his home on Riverside Drive, Morrisburg, Sunday, September 25th, caused much sorrow to his many friends.

He suffered a sudden seizure just after rising, death coming almost at once.

Born at Perth, Ont., in 1907, he was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Farrell. He attended schools at Perth and High School at Chesterville and later learned the trade of millwright. He farmed for about 30 years at Grantley, and in 1934 he married Miss Stella McDonald at Chesterville, who survives. They moved to Morrisburg a few years ago and since then he followed his trade in different places.

Survivors, other than his widow, are five daughters — Mrs. Ivan McNairn (Alice), Miss Teresa Farrell, Lakefield, Ont.; Catherine Farrell, Patrici aFarrell, Mary Farrell, all at home; also two brothers, Vincent Farrell, Perth, Ont., William Farrell Ottawa; and four sisters — Mrs. Pat McGarry, (Marie), Oshawa; Mrs. Raymond Erwin (Kathleen), Bathurst, Ont.; Mrs. James Rose (Doreen) Niagara Falls, Ont.; Mrs. Orvile Dowdell, Ottawa; and one grandson.

The body rested at his home in Morrisburg, till Tuesday, September 27th, when funeral services were held at St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church at 9 a.m.. The pastor, Rev. W. L. Terrion chanted the Mass of Requiem.

Following the funeral mass, interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery, Chesterville.

Pall bearers were J. Moran, W. Servage, D. Lynch, G. Clackett, D. vie, R. Hart.

Among relatives and friends from a distance who attended were Mr. and Mrs. P. J. McGarry and daughter of Oshawa; Mr. and Mrs. R. Erwin, Bathurst; Mr. and Mrs. V. Farrell and son, Perth; Mr. and Mrs. W. Farrell, Ottawa; L. Dupuis, Valleyfield; Mr. and Mrs. K. McMahon, Cornwall; H. McDonald, Montreal; J. McDonald, Tweed; Mr. and Mrs. W. F. McDonald, Stittsville.

BIESENTHAL — KIRCHHOFER

St. John's Lutheran Church, Black Bay Road, Petawa, Ont., was the scene of a pretty autumn wedding last Wednesday afternoon which Miss Mary Elizabeth Kirchhofer, of Pembroke, became the bride of Theodore Biesenthal, also of Pembroke. The bride is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. L. Kirchhofer, of Williamsburg, and the groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Biesenthal, of Pembroke.

Autumn flowers decorated the church for the ceremony, which was conducted by the bride's father, Rev. J. L. Kirchhofer. The organist was Mr. Fred Johnson of Pembroke, who played softly while the marital vows were being exchanged.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Frank Russ of Hespeler, the charming bride wore a turquoise pieu de chrome strapless ballerina-length gown with bolero to match, and black accessories. She wore a corsage of yellow and pink rosebuds, trimmed with lily of the valley and lace leaves.

Mrs. Fred Lindeman attended her sister and chose a dusty rose embossed bengaline ballerina gown with cowl neckline and a corsage of red roses, lily of the valley and rose lace leaves. Her accessories were in black.

Mr. Wilbert Bimm was the best man and the ushers were Vincent Moreau and Fred Lindeman.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in St. John's Lutheran Church Parish Hall at Petawawa. For receiving, Mrs. Kirchhofer, the bride's mother, wore a two-piece ensemble of pink lady brocaded taffeta with pink lady velour hat and a corsage of deep pink rosebuds. Mrs. Biesenthal, mother of the groom, wore a charcoal crepe dress with nk hat and gloves and a corsage of red roses, forget-me-nots and white button mums.

The bride's table was centered by three-tiered wedding cake, surrounded by cedar bows and red rose buds, forming a diamond shape on the table. The toast to the bride was proposed by David Metzger of Hanover.

Out of town guests included Mrs. M. Marsden, of St. Lambert, Que.; Mr. Frank Russ of Hespeler; Mr. William Schoenau of Oshawa and Mr. David Metzger of Hanover.

On their return from their honeymoon they will reside at Pembroke.

MISS JANET BRODIE IS BRIDE OF HARRY M. CLANCY

At St. James Anglican Church on Saturday, September 24th at 3.15 p. m. the marriage took place of Miss Janet Brodie, of Ottawa and Morrisburg, only daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Brodie of Morrisburg, to Harry M. Clancy, of Ottawa, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Clancy of Napanee.

Rev. G. Oliver avies officiated.

White gladioli decorated the chancel of the church. The organist, Miss Eva Cassell, played the nuptial music, and accompanied the soloist, Mr. Gordon Thom, who sang "The Lord's Prayer", during the signing of the Register.

Given in marriage by Mrs. Jenkins Burkholder, of Montreal, the bride, who was unattended, wore a two-piece dress of sky blue jacquard silk with pink accessories, and a corsage of pink sweetheart roses and Scotch heather.

William Moore, of Napanee, nephew of the groom, was best man.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride on High Street, where thte decorations were pink and wiite gladioli.

Mr. and Mrs. Clancy left later on a wedding trip, the bride travelling in an Irish linen ensemble with navy blue accessories.

Out of town guests were: Mrs. J. Burkholder, Miss Eleanor Burkholder, R. N., Mrs. L. A. Haizelden and daughter, Susan, of Montreal; Mrs. Raymond Moore, the groom's sister, Mr. and Mrs. William Moore of Napanee; Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Maddock, Mr. and Mrs. Foster Payne, Alan and Bob, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Osterhaus and Miss iDane Osterhause of Ottawa

SOME NEWS HELD OVER

Due to two consecutive breakdowns in our typecasting machines this week, this issue of The Leader is short of several news items. They will be printed (we hope) in next week's issue. Repair parts have had to be ordered in Brooklyn N.Y., and Chicago, Ill., and are due to arrive by air express at Toronto and Montreal tomorrow. We have had to labor long and late to bring you this issue, and trust that you will forgive the missing items.

A somewhat similar situation hit The Iroquois Post this week, when that paper's linotype machine went on the fritz, but good. We hope that the epidemic ends right here in Morrisburg — we don't want to see any more of our esteemed contemporaries coming out late.

PRIVATE SALE

ANNE HIRST
Your Family Counselor

Dear Anne Hirst: About 8 months ago I married a woman with two daughters; I have three boys. Everything her girls do is OK, but my sons don't dare say a word about anything. She made life so miserable for the oldest lad (who was wonderful to me) that he has joined the Navy. My youngest should have a little loving, which my wife promised before we married, but now she only bawls him out. When I am away she has even locked him out of the house!

"I have to cater to her all the time I am home . . . My trouble is, I think a lot of her . . . I have been one of your readers for many years, and you have helped a lot of people. Please help me.

ASSERT YOURSELF

* You seem to be the victim * of a calculating female who * sighted a soft berth for her- * self and her family, and now * that she feels her future se- * cure she is showing her feet * of clay. She knows how her * charms hold you, and has not * a single fear you will ever * deprive yourself of them. * Their influence is understand- * able in a newly-married man.

* But how long will you allow * her to maltreat your son? * Your oldest escaped, but what * of the little fellow who longs * for affection and is exposed to * almost inhuman cruelties? No * red blooded male can stand * by unmoved. In your mo- * ments alone you must be hor- * rified by her persecutions.

* Assert yourself. This woman * must be made to treat your * children with affection and * consideration, or she and her * daughters may find themselves * without the home and protec- * tion they sought. Indeed, it * may be too late for her to win * the trust of your youngest boy; * he must already hate and fear * her — and perhaps includes * you in his resentment, as the * one who brought her there. * This is your problem and your * first responsibility.

* Your wife married you un- * der false pretences. For her * to continue in her degraded * course is monstrous. Consider, * too, in your plans for the fu- * ture, that one who must be * forced to be kind to a child * seems a sinister influence in * any home where children are. * Is it time for you to talk to * your lawyer?

"GOD PUNISHED HER"

"Dear Anne Hirst: That woman who is trying to break up a sick wife's home reminds me of another wicked female I once knew. She was happily married, but she took a position with a married man who had an invalid wife. He got interested car and everything else — after his wife died. So she divorced her husband.

"And the man who was waiting for his wife to pass away suddenly died himself . . . Now this woman is sobbing on my shoulder because she is without a husband and has lost this man, too. She is considering remarrying her husband if he will have her . . . I guess she didn't like my comment, for I haven't heard from her since.

"God Himself punished her . . . This is what will happen to the one who wrote you. I certainly hope she takes your advice and gets wise to herself before it is too late.

MRS. R. T."

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM
by Gwendoline P. Clarke

Life is full of surprises—some good, some bad. I never know from one week to the next what this column will contain. So here we go again, with a little of each.

I'll start off by telling you something that particularly appeals to my sense of humour. You may remember that some time ago we sold all our milking cows. We were through with dairy farming . . . but definitely. Partner being so stiff with arthritis it seemed the only safe and sensible thing to do. But he relented to the point of keeping one cow, due to freshen in September—just so we wouldn't have to buy milk all the time. So what happens? Yesterday our Jane calved right on schedule, in a secluded corner of the pasture. During the morning Partner went over to see if she was all right, and what do you suppose he found? Twin calves, no less — and both of them heifers! So that's how we go out of dairy farming. One of the calves was frisking around, the other was busily getting her first meal.

My other main item of farm news is not so good. Rusty, our promising watch-dog puppy was hit by a car yesterday and has a broken leg as a result. Partner was down at the lane gate with the tractor. Both dogs were with him. Apparently Rusty ran on to the road just as a fast-moving car was approaching . . . and he had it. It wasn't the driver's fault; Rusty just didn't have sense enough to get out of the way. He never has been car-conscious. However, although his leg is definitely fractured the 'vet' thinks if we keep him quiet the bone will knit of its own accord. We hope so anyway—he is just a happy, affectionate, over-grown puppy—and an excellent watch-dog.

All this happened while I was at the Exhibition. Yes, I was there again. It being Press Day I thought it would be as well to put in an appearance. And I really had a wonderful time. And do you know what . . . I had a few words with Marilyn Bell! She is really and truly just a nice, unaffected little girl. Newspaper and radio reports to that effect haven't been exaggerated one bit. I had no idea I was likely to meet her; it was just that Elsa Jenkins, head of the Women's Division, C.N.E., conceived the bright idea of asking Marilyn Bell to be in the receiving line at the Press Women's Tea. I had already been to the Grandstand Show for the express purpose of getting a glimpse of Marilyn but meeting her at the tea was a hundred percent better.

What else did I do at the "Ex"—just a few of the things we didn't have time for on opening day. The Art Gallery . . . that is well worth a visit, if only to see M. J. Boylen's private collection of Krieghoff's pictures of pioneer days. There were also many pictures loaned by the Art Gallery of Toronto. And do you know I bought a dozen beautiful Christmas cards, reproductions of famous paintings. If any readers are interested in getting similar cards white to the Art Gallery of Toronto, for their complete list, available from October 1. The address is Grange Park, Toronto 2B, Ontario. The cards are no more expensive than the usual line of good cards that you are probably used to buying.

Of course I had to take in the Dog Show at the 'Ex'. Such yapping and barking you never heard! Apparently the smaller the dog the bigger the bark. Big dogs like German Shepherds, Dalmations and Collies were lying quietly in their appointed places surveying the passing public either with resigned boredom or with watchful interest, but without making a sound. I looked around for a breed that would give me a clue as to Rusty's parentage and I am quite convinced that he is partly of the Doberman Pinscher type, although his mother was supposed to be a purebred collie. Oh well, it's a wise puppy that knows its own father.

Now what else? Oh yes, I took a ride up to the top of the new Shell Oil Tower—the view from the top was really wonderful. It was a bright, clear day and you could see across the waters of the blue lake for miles. In the Exhibition grounds cars and people looked like miniatures. The elevator works with surprising ease. Once at the top you can stay on the observation platform as long as you please and there are two public telephones placed there for your convenience. Just for fun I phoned Daughter from the top of the Tower just to let her know where I was. Actually I was on my way out of the grounds when I decided to visit the Tower Once at the top I was so entranced with the view that I forgot all about time — and almost missed my train . . . in fact I would have only the train was late too. Good old C.P.R. — always so accommodating!

Modern Etiquette

Q. How is all service made at a dinner table, from the right or left?

A. From the left, and using the left hand. Glasses are refilled from the right, and without being picked up or moved. The dishes may be removed, however, from either right or left, whichever is more convenient, and they should not be stacked, but removed singly.

Q. Should the first page of a letter be numbered?

A. No; this is neither necessary nor proper. You may number the succeeding pages if you wish.

Q. When the brief form of introduction is used, as, "Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Smith in what way can it be made apparent who is being introduced to whom?

A. The more important person's name should be accentuated so that it will be as clear as though the words, "May I present," were used.

Fashion Greets Sandman In Sleepy-Time Garb

Double-duty pajamas, at left, recently introduced, are suitable for at-home informal wear or for use as de luxe sleep garb. Tuxedo inspired, ensemble has brushed rayon top with long, cuffed sleeves. Trousers are made of acetate jersey. At right, French-embroidered ruffles lend an old-fashioned air to this calf-length ensemble for the little ladies. They're of nylon tricot, with pink top and blue knickers, or vice versa. Items of slumber elegance such as these will be high on the "want" lists Santa soon will be receiving at his North Pole dress shop.

Pipe Smoking Through The Ages

Smoking is a far more ancient custom than is generally supposed. Its origin has been traced back to the religious ceremonies of priests in districts of countries we now know as Mexico and Central America. Stone effigies of priests of the Mayas, whose civilization began before the birth of Christ, show them engaged in the act of ceremonial smoking. They used a form of pipe and blew the tobacco smoke towards the sun and the four points of the compass.

The practice spread but did not reach England until some time in the 16th century.

Sir Walter Raleigh is popularly supposed to have been the first pipe smoker in England and it is said that Ralph Lane, Governor of Virginia, presented him with an Indian pipe in 1586. It is certain however that pipes were smoked in England before this, for William Harrison in 1573 writes in his "Chronologie" of 'the taking in of the smoke of the Indian herb' and goes on to describe how it is taken — 'by an instrument formed like a little ladell'. This obviously describes a form of pipe with a narrow bowl.

Although not the first to smoke a pipe, Raleigh, by his example, did much to popularize the art among men of fashion who were soon carrying the necessary ponderous equipment. A good deal of fun was made of the smoker's apparatus and a contemporary pamphleteer writes: 'I beheld pipes in his pocket: now he draws forth his tinder box and his touchwood and falleth into his tacklings: Sure his throate is afire, the smoake flyeth so fast from his mouth.'

It is interesting to note that the word 'pipe' is derived from the Latin 'pipare' meaning 'to chirp' and was applied first to a wind instrument. One James Cartier concluded an exploration of the St. Lawrence estuary in 1536. In his description of the voyage, he mentions that the Indians carried a skin bag suspended from their necks which contained some dried herb and a piece of stone or wood 'like a pipe'. It would seem, therefore, that Cartier's description was the nearest he could give to this tubular piece of wood or stone which resembled the musical instrument.

Raleigh's pipe were made of clay and as the demand grew, manufacture on a large scale was started in this country. There are references to pipes made of silver and of walnut shells with a straw but these were possibly made in more remote parts of England where the right clay was not readily available.

The growing popularity of the clay is illustrated by the report of a German traveller, Paul Hentzner, of a visit to the Bear Garden in Southwark in 1598. He says: 'At these spectacles and elsewhere the English are constantly smoking tobacco, for which purpose they have pipes made of clay. They draw the smoke into their mouths and puff it out again through their nostrils like funnels with much of phlegm and defluxtion from the head.'

Nevertheless there was a good deal of opposition to the habit which was condemned as 'loathsome to the eye and harmfull to the brain'.

Towards the end of the 19th century, English firms started to manufacture briar pipes in that country and London became the centre. French workmen who had experience of the 'new' material were brought over to teach the craft. They found the British very willing to learn. They soon became experts and the words 'London Made' became famous throughout the world as a symbol of pipe perfection.

A high degree of skill is required in the making of a pipe, where each bowl is turned individually.

The briar root, often weighing ten pounds or more, is first dug up and then sawn into blocks, the trade name for which is 'Ebauchons.' These blocks are then boiled for twenty-four hours to remove all traces of sap and so prevent cracking. After seasoning the blocks are roughly shaped and passed to the craftsman who turns the bowl. This latter is a highly skilled operation as is also the shaping of the stem, which may be round, square or flat. The bowls are next sandpapered and are ready for selecting and grading.

After grading, the rich colour of the briar is brought out by fine oils and the hidden beauties of the grain disclosed. Finally the bowl is polished on a lathe head running at high speed. In all, more than thirty skilled operations are necessary to produce a pipe.

The Amazing Jake Englehart

By IAN SCLANDERS

In 1905, when Sir James Whitney became premier of Ontario, he discovered that the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, a provincial government venture which had been launched three years earlier, was in a sorry mess. He needed the ablest man he could find to unravel its tangled affairs, complete its construction, and put it on a paying basis. He appealed to Jacob Lewis Englehart, of the little southwestern Ontario town of Petrolia, a founder and vice-president of Imperial Oil Limited.

"Jake," he is reported to have said, "will you come to the rescue and run the T. and N.O. for me?"

"I'll be happy to," Englehart is reported to have replied. "What is it?"

The thinning number of men who remember the amazing Jake Englehart still tell this apocryphal story because it flashes a light on three facets of his complex character: he was always willing to help a friend, he reached decisions instantly, and he was not afraid to tackle anything. These traits might have ruined an ordinary individual. But Englehart seldom failed at what he tried.

When he established his own oil company, as a rawboned youth of 19, older men laughed at him and predicted his bankruptcy. They stopped laughing when within a few years he had built, and successfully operated, the biggest refinery in Canada.

At the age of 33, he was the organizing genius behind the move that brought 16 leading oil men, businessmen and political figures together to form Imperial Oil.

The biographical volume says he was born in Cleveland, O., on November 2, 1847, a son of S. John Joel and Hannah E. Englehart, and that in 1866 he formed J. L. Englehart and Company, "refining, producing and exporting Canadian petroleum," with a refinery at London, Ont., and an office at New York. The volume does not say what his father did or how Jacob Lewis Englehart, at 19, had acquired enough cash to come to Canada and set himself up in business. But the American Civil War, which in 1866 was just newly over, had given many Northerners opportunities to make money. Englehart may have been one of them. Or he may have been backed by his father. In either case he required a relatively modest amount of capital. Refineries, in 1866, were cheap, tiny contraptions which looked like overgrown ink bottles. The largest of them had a capacity of only a few hundred barrels a week.

They were risky investments because many of them blew up. But those which didn't explode yielded high profits, for throughout North America people who had always burned a mixture of whale oil and lard in their lamps were clamoring for the wonderful new lighting fluid, kerosene, developed by Dr. Abraham Gesner of Nova Scotia. Southwestern Ontario was then one of the chief sources of the petroleum from which kerosene was distilled. That's how the industry was when Englehart came to Canada.

While his first refinery was being erected in London, Englehart traveled through the oil fields persuading small producers, mostly farmers with oil wells in their pastures, to let him handle their output and sell it through his New York office. Before his refinery started operating in the fall of 1866 he had an assured supply of crude petroleum to feed it.

He had this in spite of competitors who followed him around spreading word that he was "wet behind the ears," too young to be trusted, and, what was worse, a city slicker from the States. Ironically, a practical joke and his one appearance in police court enhanced his popularity with the producers in the back concessions and defeated the efforts of his competitors.

Englehart, at the time of this affair, was a guest at the Tecumseh House in London and one evening as he was going out for a stroll he noticed two wooden spigots from beer kegs on the hotel proprietor's desk.

On the street a couple of minutes later he encountered the head of the game protective association, and, on an impulse, informed him gravely that he suspected the proprietor of the Tecumseh of breaking the game laws, as he had seen two woodcocks in his office. Without checking up, the president of the game association rushed off and laid a charge against the hotelkeeper. Englehart was summoned as a witness.

Called to the stand he confirmed his statement that he had seen two woodcocks on the proprietor's desk.

"I have them here," he said, producing the spigots from his coat pocket.

Everybody roared with mirth—except the president of the game association. And in the back concessions, where a good joke was appreciated and hunting restrictions were disliked, the incident cemented Englehart's prestige and his reputation of being a "real man even if he looks like a schoolboy."

Englehart was to rock London on two other occasions—but not with laughter. On April 9, 1869, his refinery exploded with what newspapers termed "a report that rocked the town." But, if the blast shook windows, it injured nobody and the damage was estimated at only $2,000. Less than seven weeks later it was ripped by another explosion. This one caused $6,000 damage.

One paper that reported the explosions was the Wyoming News Letter, published at Wyoming, in the heart of the Ontario oil fields. It was in this same year, 1869, that the News Letter ran an editorial advocating a new oil company "with a capital of $500,000" to enable Canada to carry on "an export trade of larger proportions." Englehart never forgot this editorial and 11 years later when Imperial Oil was born it had precisely what the News Letter recommended —a capital of $500,000.

But other things were to happen first. Englehart rebuilt and expanded his London refinery and in 1870 got an order from Germany for a $30,000 shipment of kerosene. When the shipment reached its destination it was rejected on the grounds that it was not up to specifications. The cost of bringing the kerosene back to London, refining it again, and returning it to Germany, would have been ruinous. Englehart met the emergency by sending refining equipment to Germany and reprocessing the kerosene there —a procedure which reduced his losses.

Meanwhile he had been acquiring oil wells at Petrolia, where drillers were striking oil wherever they sank a hole and where oil even flowed down the deep ruts of the main street. And—perhaps convinced by the German experience—he decided that in addition to his London refinery he needed a second refinery close to the oil wells. So, in the muddy, booming, excited little town of Petrolia,, he bought a refinery and enlarged it until it was reputed to be the biggest and most efficient in the world. He also laid a system of pipes through which oil could be pumped right into his plant.

"He was a nice man," says Stothers, "but all business—all business, no fooling. Used to bach here one time; him and Ed Kirby, the first mayor, bached together in a frame house."

He was baching with Ed Kirby in 1880 when his dream came true—the dream of an oil company with financial resources large enough to improve petroleum products, create new outlets for them, place the Ontario oil fields on a solid foundation and meet the competition from American fields. After months of negotiations in which he played a leading role, Imperial Oil Company Limited—now Imperial Oil Limited—was formed. Englehart became vice-president and assumed an active role in managing the new corporation.

The new company absorbed refineries belonging to some of the 16 original shareholders, and used the equipment to enlarge Englehart's London and Petrolia plants. These became the first Imperial refineries.

Englehart was at the plants six days a week from morning till night. Refining was still a hazardous trade. Englehart instituted a system by which funds were set aside to compensate men injured at work, but he also reduced hazards and preached safety rules.

Once he saw a man running through a dangerous part of the refinery. He fired him, but re-hired him two weeks later and from his own pocket paid him the wages he had lost.

Up north he pushed a railroad into almost virgin bush country! Englehart spent a lot of time there after he accepted the chairmanship of the T. and N.O. from Sir James Whitney. It was a new adventure for a man who was a pioneer at heart. The salary that went with the job, which was supposed to be very much a part-time job, was $5,000 a year. Englehart made the job very nearly a full-time job and gave his salary away to north country settlers who needed help.

Dare-Devil Stuff

An anonymous young man is planning to defy death this autumn by plunging over Niagara Falls enclosed in a steel barrel specially made for the purpose. He won't disclose the date of his proposed exploit in case it is stopped by the police.

Dare-devil Bobby Leach, one of the few men to survive "shooting" the roaring, foaming Falls, would have laughed at this ban on making the 168-ft. drop over the brink. No police restrained him when, watched by 300,000 people, he strapped himself in a cigar-shaped steel barrel which had been carefully cushioned inside and took the plunge on July 26th, 1911.

When the barrel dropped it was at once caught by a giant wave which hurled it twenty feet into the air. It was then held for eighteen minutes in the whirlpool below the Falls. Between the time he went over the rapids until he was hauled unconscious out of the water, thirty-nine minutes elapsed. His knee-caps were found to be broken.

Leach's hair grew white from his terrible experience, but he little dreamed of the strange end which fate had in store for him. At the age of fifty-eight he broke his leg when he slipped on an orange peel in an Auckland street. The leg was amputated. He died some time after the operation.

An attempt to "shoot" Horseshoe Falls, Niagara, in an oak barrel killed George Stathakis in 1930, the barrel being smashed on the rocks at the cataract's foot. The man's body was imprisoned in the wreckage in a cavern behind the thundering torrent of waters and days passed before it emerged.

A friend was so confident that the attempt would fail that he summoned an undertaker some hours before the barrel went over.

A Bristol barber wore a padded suit in an ill-fated attempt to go over the Horseshoe Falls in a wooden barrel strengthened by iron bands thirty-five years ago. An iron plate weighing one hundred-weight and sixty pounds of lead were used to keep the barrel vertical.

It was dashed to pieces at the foot of the Falls. The intrepid barber, who was killed, had thus made his last gamble in a life of adventure, for he used to boast that he had shaved customers in a lion's den and had an apple cut in two on his throat with a sword.

More Forest Fires were reported by an alert public last year, than by any single government detection agency.

OIL BURNING HEATER

BUILT IN FAN

CIRCULATES HEATED AIR

PROVIDES UNIFORM TEMPERATURE

Here's the ultimate in oil burning heaters — in beauty and efficiency. The smartly designed compact cabinet completely encloses all equipment including tank, electric fan and constant level valve. The electric fan speeds up circulation of heated air and provides a uniform temperature in all parts of the house. There are no chilly spots. Fuel economy is another feature of the Findlay Heater. Model of similar design (15A) without fan and with tank in rear, is also available. You'll get better value with a Findlay. See them today!

ADEQUATE WIRING
for Better Electrical Living

Adequate wiring in your home assures convenient, economical electrical living at its best. If you are planning to build a new home, have your local Hydro or your Electrical Contractor explain why it is to your advantage to have sufficient circuits, switches and convenience outlets in order to derive the full benefit from today's many electrical aids to living.

Too often the unsatisfactory operation of electrical appliances is due to inadequate wiring. Many older homes, and some newly built homes, are not wired to efficiently operate more than a few electrical appliances.

Specify "Red Seal" wiring to the standard of The Electric Service League of Ontario, a non-profit organization maintained to assist you with wiring problems. See your local Hydro Manager, or send for the FREE BOOKLET, "Facts About Electrical Wiring For Your Home." Write to: The Electric Service League of Ontario, 4 Carlton Street, Toronto 2.

Zesty Steak Sauce, Pickle Recipe Call For Some Sampling

BY DOROTHY MADDOX

You can make a moderately priced steak more tender and more delicious with a fresh lemon barbecue sauce. Serve your steak with baked potatoes, a tossed green salad and a large loaf of onion-cheese bread and you'll have a feast—whether you broiled your steak outdoors over charcoal or in the kitchen range.

Lemon Barbecue Sauce

One-third cup fresh lemon juice, 1 cup (8-ounce can) tomato sauce, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon mustard, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, 2 tablespoons honey, dah Tabasco, ¼ cup salad oil, 2 lemons, thinly sliced.

Combine all ingredients and pour over steak for several hours before broiling. Pour off sauce, saving it for later; broil steaks as desired. Baste with sauce occasionally and serve any that is not used.

Cauliflower Pickle (Yield: About 7 pints)

Two large heads (5½ pounds) cauliflower (approximately 4 pounds, trimmed), 12 (1 pound medium) onions, 2 tablespoons salt, ¾ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon ground turmeric, 2 teaspoons whole mustard seed, 1 teaspoon whole celery seed, 1 small dried whole red pepper, ½ teaspoon whole cloves, 1½ cups white vinegar, 1½ cups water.

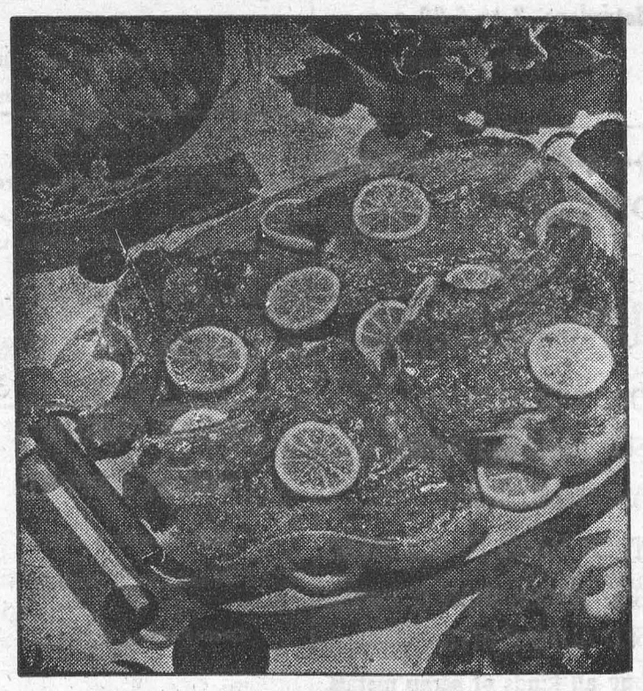
Remove leaves from cauliflower. Wash and tear into flowerettes. Scald onions, peel and slice.

Mix with cauliflower and salt. Let stand overnight. Drain. Rinse in cold water. Taste; if too salty, soak one hour in cold water. Drain.

Combine sugar, turmeric, mustard seed, celery seed and red pepper in an 8-quart preserving kettle. Tie whole cloves in a bag and add. Stir in vinegar and water. Boil 5 minutes. Add cauliflower.

Boil ONLY until crisp-tender, 5 to 10 minutes.

Pack, hot, into sterilized jars. Fill jars with boiling liquid. Adjust lids. Seal at once.



Lemon barbecue sauce adds zest to this sizzling steak treat, a "something-special" to serve to your family and guests.

TABLE TALKS

by Jane Andrews.

Once again, in hundreds of thousands of homes, the problem of sandwich-fillings faces the housewife. How to fill those school and work lunch boxes with sandwiches that are — nourishing and, at the same time, are a bit different.

Perhaps some of the following suggestions may be helpful. I hope so!

There are many good sandwich fillings which include hard-cooked eggs. These are easy and quick to mix, as the eggs may be hard-cooked at breakfast time and are cold and ready to chop by sandwich-making time.

HAM-EGG SANDWICH FILLING

2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
¼ cup canned deviled ham
2 tablespoons mayonnaise or salad dressing
2 teaspoons prepared mustard

Combine all ingredients. Makes 4 sandwiches.

CHEESE AND EGG SALAD FILLING

1 cup grated process Canadian cheese
2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
¼ cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
½ teaspoon vinegar
2 teaspoon grated onion
½ teaspoon prepared mustard
¼ teaspoon salt

Combine cheese and chopped eggs; add mayonnaise; add all other igredients and mix well. Makes 5 sandwiches.

If you have leftover chicken (or want to open a small can of chicken or turkey), try this filling that makes 8-10 sandwiches.

CHICKEN OR TURKEY FILLING

1 cup chopped, cooked chicken or turkey
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons salad dressing
2 teaspoons chopped parsley
¼ cup finely chopped celery

Blend all ingredients. Add more seasonings and salad dressing if desired. To vary this filling, add ½ cup grated carrot and 1 teaspoon finely grated onion.

PEANUT BUTTER VARIATIONS

If your children ask for peanut butter sandwiches every day, you may want to vary their fare while still giving them peanut butter! Here are several ways to make new fillings with peanut butter:

Pineapple: combine ½ cup crushed pineapple with ½ cup peanut butter.

Prune: combine 2 teaspoons lemon juice with ½ cup chopped cooked prunes and ½ cup peanut butter.

Raisin: combine ⅓ cup milk or cream with ½ cup chopped seeded raisins, ½ cup peanut butter and 2 teaspoons lemon juice.

Cranberry: combine ½ cup cranberry sauce with ½ cup peanut butter.

Carrot-raisin: combine 1 cup shredded carrots, ¼ cup chopped seeded raisins, ½ cup peanut butter and ¼ cup salad dressing. * * *

For a simple soup with a fancy name, try this combination of two canned soups.

PUREE MONGOLE

1 can condensed tomato soup
1 can condensed green pea soup
2⅔ cups milk
1 cup ½-inch bread cubes
2 tablespoons butter

Mix soups together in saucepan; add milk, stirring until well blended. Heat thoroughly. Sauté bread cubes in butter until delicately browned; serve as a garnish. (Thinly sliced celery may also be used as a garnish.

You may also combine canned soup with a canned vegetable for an unusual cream soup. Here is a colorful corn soup.

CORN CHOWDER

½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons butter
1 No. 2 can corn (cream style)
1 cup milk
1 can condensed tomato soup
1 teaspoonful salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Cook onion and pepper in butter. Add corn, soup, milk and seasonings. Heat to serving temperature. * * *

Instead of saying, "Eat your spinach, children," try putting it in the luncheon soup for a special treat.

CREAM OF SPINACH SOUP

1 cup raw ground or finely chopped spinach
4 cups milk
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon salt

If you grind the spinach, catch liquid which runs from grinder and add to spinach. Heat milk in double boiler. Blend flour and fat and add to hot milk. Add spinach and salt. Cook and stir until thickened — about 10 minutes.

If you have a cup of leftover cooked peas, try this savory soup.

LUNCHEON SOUP

3 tablespoons butter
¼ cup diced onion
3 tablespoons flour
4 cups milk
2 teaspoons salt
1 cup cooked peas (partially mashed)
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce (optional)

Melt butter in saucepan; add diced onion and cook until tender — do not brown. Blend in flour; gradually add milk while stirring. Cook over low heat until smooth and thickened, stirring constantly. Add seasonings, peas, and sauce. Serve garnished with chopped parsley or grated cheese. Serves 6.

How Can I?

Q. How can I remove oil stains from leather?

A. By dabbing the spots with spirits of sal ammoniac. After allowing it to remain for a while, wash with clean water. If necessary, repeat the treatment, but be careful not to injure the color of the leather.

Q. How can I give myself an invigorating bath?

A. When one is tired, and every muscle seems to ache, try taking a warm bath at bedtime to which has been added 1 cup of Epsom salts and 2 tablespoons of mustard.

Q. How can I separate glasses that have stuck together?

A. Pour cold water into the inner one, and place the outer one in warm water. They will separate readily.

Q. How can I save time when cleaning the bird cage?

A. Cut eight or ten thicknesses of heavy white paper and place at the bottom of the canary's cage. Every morning a sheet can be removed, leaving a nice clean floor. This will save much cleaning of the cage.

Q. How can I easily remove ink stains from school children's fingers?

A. These stains can be removed by rubbing with a cloth moistened with household ammonia, and rinsed in clear water.

Waited Years For Sleeping Beauty

Up to the time she was twenty-seven, beautiful Patricia Maguire lived a normal, healthy and athletic life in her Chicago home. Then, in February, 1932, she "fell asleep," in a mysterious sleep from which doctors and specialists failed to arouse her.

Checking up on her background, the doctors found that Patricia was engaged to be married, was perfectly happy and had had no unusual or disturbing illnesses in her life.

At first the doctors were noncommittal when Patricia's parents and fiance wanted to know when she would wake up. "She may awake soon — or it may be a long time," was the gist of their evasive answers. So specialists were called in and on their recommendations numerous cures were attempted. Patricia, however, quietly slept on, unaware of the fuss going on about her.

After a while, the story of Chicago's "Sleeping Beauty" became widely known. Seeing her picture in the papers, and deeply disturbed that so lovely a girl should be sleeping her life away, many men fell in love with her. Some of them wrote passionate letters declaring their devotion, and telling her about themselves — their lives, their aspirations and hopes.

They promised to wait until she was better, and then they would call on her and propose marriage. They sent flowers frequently, followed by other letters.

But Patricia couldn't read the letters or see the beautiful flowers that filled her bedroom, and so knew nothing of the devotion lavished on her by her admirers. Oddly enough the admirers didn't know Patricia was already engaged, nor that her fiance visited her at least twice a week, and 'phoned her parents daily to ask how she was.

As time went by, Patricia didn't improve except to grow more beautiful as she slept. Occasionally she would open her eyes, but apparently they registered nothing. Once she scribbled a message on a slate, which nobody could decipher. In 1934 she stirred as though she might wake — only to lapse swiftly into a coma again.

To maintain her physical condition and keep her healthy, Patricia was given a special liquid diet which was fed to her six times a day through a tube. She was massaged regularly, and visited once a week by a manicurist and by a hairdresser. Steadily she grew even lovelier — but stayed asleep.

Then it was that the keen eyes of one of the visiting specialists diagnosed further trouble — an abdominal tumour. But before they could operate, Patricia contracted pneumonia.

At thirty-two, lovely Patricia Maguire died. And the romance of the twelve men who loved her — her fiance (thirty-four-year-old jewellery salesman Jimmie Burns) and eleven others, none of whom knew of the others' existence — came to a tragic end. In vain they had waited, some nearly six years, for Chicago's "Sleeping Beauty" to awake. But their identities, though known to Patricia's married sister, Gladys Hansen, were never revealed, a pledge each had extracted from Mrs. Hansen after she had acknowledged their letters and flowers.

After her death, Patricia's brain was examined by specialists and it was found to have withered through disuse. Perhaps just as well that she died, for had she recovered consciousness she would probably have been as simple as a very young child.

Let's Face It, Men!

If anybody takes up the ideas of an American plastic surgeon, home perm outfits will soon be followed by home face-lifting kits.

Lines and wrinkles are rubbed out by stretching the skin with little cloth tabs that are backed wih a modern adhesive. One tab is placed at each side of the head just in front of the ear. They act as "pegs" for a facial rubber elastic belt.

This is worn for one or two days, then removed by dissolving the adhesive in the same kind of solvent used for disposing of nail varnish. After a rest for the face, the treatment is repeated. Husbands — let's face it — this is going to be far worse than curlers!

"Doreen thinks no man is good enough for her."

"She may be right."

"She may be left!"

SALLY'S SALLIES

"It's a break for you, darling; I couldn't carry any more."

Niagara Falls' Face Gets Beauty Treatment

By JAMES MONTAGNES
NEA Special Correspondent

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont—Niagara Falls is having its face lifted. To make sure that the famous falls will look as magnificent for future honeymooners and world tourists in the years to come, the Canadian and United States governments are doing a $17,500,000 beauty job on the crest of the waterfall. It is expected to be completed by 1957.

When the French missionary and explorer, Father Louis Hennepin, first saw the Niagara Falls in 1678 the drop into the Niagara River was almost 1,000 feet further than it is today. Since records of the crest of the waterfall have been kept since 1784 the falls have receded 865 feet, more than half of this in the first 78 years.

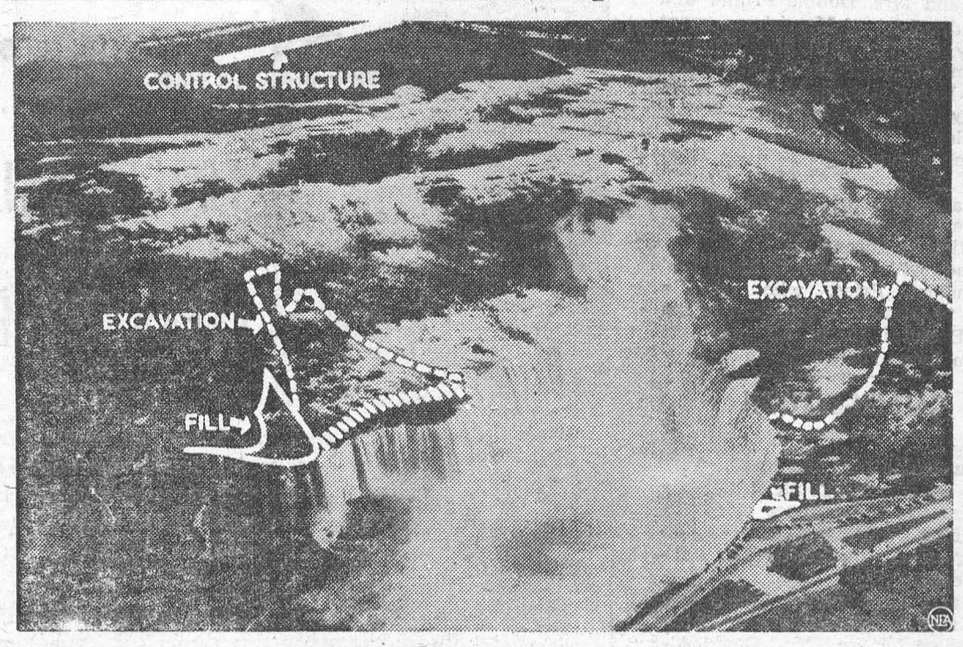
Use of the falls for hydro-electric power has slowed down the recession considerably. Once the falls was an unbroken line of water falling from Lake Erie into the Niagara River. Gradually rocks fell off and two sections were formed, the American Falls and the Horseshoe Falls. The former is in the United States, the latter straddles the international boundary.

In recent years there have been a number of rock slides which have left more spots in both falls. Ict floes have also carried away sections of the rock over which the water used to plunge.

Now under an international treaty signed in 1950, Niagara Falls is being given a new appearance, so that the Horseshoe Falls will present an unbroken front of water tumbling 160 feet down from the rapids in the upper Niagara River to the lower Niagara River which carries the water in a foaming torrent down to Lake Ontario.



AERIAL VIEW OF FACE-LIFTING: Diagrammed photo shows the work now under way at Niagara Falls to beautify this major tourist attraction. Near top is location of the 13 sluices that will form the control structure, while on both flanks are excavation and fill to be done by 1957.

The project consists of first building a control structure on the Canadian side above the falls, so that the amount of water falling over the crest can be controlled. Then the rapids near both shores will be excavated to make for a more even flow over the crest, and sections near the shore will be filled in to provide better vantage points from which to see the plunging waters.

A start on saving the face of Niagara Falls was made during the Second World War when a weir was submerged on the Canadian side of the river about 1½ miles upstream from the falls. This weir not only provided more water diversion for electric power generation, then greatly needed on both sides of the international border, but it also maintained the natural level of the water. In fact it increased the flow over the American Falls, enhancing its appearance considerably.

When engineers on both sides of the river began studies of how to obtain more electric power from Niagara Falls and at the same time fight erosion, water surface and river-bed surveys were so difficult that conventional methods were out of the question.

The steep clig surfaces and the turbulent waters meant that kytoon balloons and helicopters had to be used to provide skyhooks from which to hang survey equipment. In one section on the American side of the river trees and a narrow channel required an even more ingenious method of surveying. Searchlights with 800 million candle-power were used and engineers found their figures by taking measurements of water reflections from the searchlight beams.

On both the Canadian and United States sides of the Horseshoe Falls rock and earth will be excavated, 4,000 cubic yards on the U.S. side, and 64,000 cubic yards on the Canadian side. This will allow the waters to flow over sections which have till now been only partly under water.

Near these excavations small areas will be filled in as well and have concrete retaining walls so that visitors will be able to better see the unbroken crest of the Horshoe Falls.

WHAT PRICE ONE EGG?

Ever divide your production costs by the number of eggs produced? It's the price you pay to get one egg. Cut those costs with balanced feeding. Follow the XL (EXCEL) feeding programme — for economical egg production. Better feed means higher egg production — lower costs per dozen eggs. And the lower the costs, the greater your profits!

Cut Your Costs with XL (EXCEL)

Make your layers pay. Your birds need the added essential nutrients in XL (EXCEL) feeds — the proteins, minerals, vitamins. Cut your costs this way:—

Have us mix — 3 bags your grain —
1 Bag XL (EXCEL) 32% Egg Producer Concentrate.
or 4 bags your grain —
1 Bag XL (EXCEL) 35% Laying Concentrate.
Then — watch egg production go up and costs go down!
If you haven't your own grain — feed XL (EXCEL) Laying Mash.
