LET'S GO TO THE ISLAND

Let's have some of those old-fashioned picnics, like in the olden days, when row boats were loaded with happy children, ice cream freezers, roast lamb and mint sauce and all kinds of goodies.

Make plans now for those enjoyable Sunday School picnics so the children can stretch their legs and have such a good time that Johnny will want to attend Sunday School more often than on the Sunday just previous to the picnic.

THE ISLAND, its face lifted is all dolled up, with seats and tables painted and all is ready for the fun.

Bring swimming togs and fishing tackle along and lets help the Mayor catch that lazy Maskinonge, waiting to be hooked.

Forget motor cars for a day now and again, and cruise visitors around to enjoy the beauties and thrills of the eddies and swift currents on this grand old St. Lawrence, the KING of the rivers, before all this passes away by order of OTTAWA and WASHINGTON.

Fill up your baskets and Bill or Norman will row or putt you over.

First boats leave at 9 a.m.

GUDRUN JACOB GOES TO FINALS IN TABLE TENNIS

Gudrun Jacob, 18-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Jacob of Morrisburg was a competitor in the Ottawa and District Table Tennis Championships, played in Ottawa on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week at the Y.M.C.A. Gudrun advanced to the finals in the singles for ladies, and lost out 2 games to 1

In the mixed doubles, playing with Mr. Currie of Ottawa, they lost out by the same count.

Gudrun played in tournaments in her home city of Dusseldorf, Germany, before coming to Morrisburg two years ago, but since coming here she has been hampered by lack of practice. She has her own table and plans to get in a lot of practice before next year's championships, at which she hopes to make a better showing. Gudrun is anxious to get in touch with other table tennis devotees, who would like to practice with her. Her telephone no is 6, Morrisburg.

MISS BETTY L. McINTOSH IS BRIDE OF JAMES K. MARCUS

Pink and white snapdragons and carnations nad ferns formed the floral setting in Williamsburg United Church on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, when Elizabeth Lee McIntosh became the bride of James Kenneth Marcus of Toronto.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Strader McIntosh, Williamsburg, and the groom's parents are Dr. and Mrs. James F. Marcus of Kincardine.

The groom is a graduate of Western University, Osgoode Hall.

The Rev. Gerald Fee, minister of the church officiated at the ceremony, at whhich the wedding music was played by Gordor. Hallman of Bright, Ontario. Donald McIntosh, brother of the bride, of Toronto, was soloist and sang "The Lord's Prayer" during the ceremony and "I'll Walk Beside You" while the register was being signed.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by Miss Helen MacLallin of Montreal as maid of honor and Miss Barbara Marcus of Kincardine, sister of the groom, and Miss Ann Donevan of Oshawa, cousin of the bride, were bridesmaids.

The best man for the groom was Bill Wilson of St. Catherines and the ushers were David Donevan of Oshawa and R. C. Barber of Ottawa.

For he rwedding the bride wore a floor length gown of heavy ivory satin, fashioned with long fitted bodice buttoned down the back, an inset lace yoke, cowl neck, and long tight lace sleeves coming to points over the hands. Her bridal hat of matching lace, embroidered with seed pearls, held in place her heirloom rayon net veil, extending in a long train. She carried a cascade bouquet of white sweet peas and bouvardia.

The maid of honour was wearing a floor length gown of pink riplette crepe, low round neckline and flared skirt. She carried a cascade of mauve sweet peas with matching headdress and mitts.

The bridesmaids wore blue of the same material, ballerina length full skirts, short puffed sleeves and carried cascade bouquets of pink sweet peas with matching headdresses and mitts.

Following the ceremony, a reception for more than 125 guests was held on the lawn at the home of the bride's parents. The bride's table was set with a lace cloth and bowls of pink and white roses. It was centered with a three-tier wedding cake, nicely decorated and topped with a miniature bride and groom, and flanked by white tapers in silver holders.

Receiving were the bride's mother in copper tan dress with matching accessories and corsage of talisman roses and the groom's mother with navy dress and white accessories and a corsage of red roses.

Mr. F. J. Donevan proposed the toast to the bride, Mr. B. Wilson, the best man, the toast to the bridesmaids. Mr. R. L. Barbert the toast to the groom's mother and Mr. Sam Telford proposed the toast to the bride's mother.

Serving at the bride's table were Misses Helen Deeks and Helen O'Shaughnessy, and Mrs. Lyle Hess. Others assisting in the serving were Misses Jean Locke, Moyra Ann Casselman, Rhea Dell Wert, June Phifer Jean McMillan, Margaret Rose McIntosh. Mrs. Donald Barkley and Mrs. M. W. Locke poured tea.

Following the reception the happy couple left on a honeymoon trip to Quebec City and other Eastern points. For travelling the bride wore a suit of turquoise gabardine, natura coloured sailor straw hat with matching accessories and a corsage of red roses. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Marcus will reside in Toronto.

Out of town guests were Dr. and Mrs. J F. Marcus and Miss Barbara Marcus, all of Kincardine; Miss Helen MacLellan, Montreal; Mrs. T. Miller, Knowlton; Bill Wilson, St. Catharines; Miss Jean Cocskeran, Toronto Mr. and Mrs. Arlie Mizener, Miss Alice Mizener, Miss Eileen Robinson all of Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Retcliffe, all of Hamilton; Mr. and Mrs. Irving Cochrane, Mr. and Mrs. James Knack, Miss Margaret Edmonson, all of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. James Hall of Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. J. Luther League Holds Convention At St. Paul's Church

The Eastern District Luther League convention was held at St. Paul's church, Morrisburg, on Saturday and Sunday last.

The Saturday evening session was featured by a drama festival with three groups competing. A fourth group, Pembroke Intermediate, consisting of children 12 years of age and under, while not in the competition, gave a very pleasing performance. Plays staged were Sister Sue, by Dunbar cast; Wildcat Willie, Pembroke Intermediates; Polly Put The Kettle On, St. eter's Luther League, Ottawa; The Truth Telling Machine, Pembroke Senior.

Acting as adjudicator, was Miss Julia Murphy of Ottawa, who had the difficult assignment of picking the best play, the best actress and the best actor.

Between the second and third plays, two bats, or the same one returning twice, took over, and really stole the show. The play was just unner way, when the first one appeared, the curtain was drawn and the audience took over. With the aid of brooms, dust mops, etc., this one was finally ejected, but before the play was onder way, the second visitor appeared and met the same fate.

The adjudicator had some useful criticisms to make and offered much helpful advice. She had found the plays very interesting. The stage was small and she had wondered just how they would manage. She congratulated the players on the way they had used it. It was very well done, she said, and the size of the stage was soon forgotten.

The prize for the best play went to Pembroke Senior Group with The Truth Telling Machine, though Polly Put The Kettle On, had some moments.

Pembroke took the prize because of team work and what each contributed to the action of the play.

Betty Boettcher, of the Ottawa group took the prize for the best actress. The adjudicator said she had a beautiful voice and tone, and had shown good action and sincere emotion.

Polly Lincoln Washington, played by Miss Betty Edgell of the same group, received special mention for her part of the coloured maid.

Picking the best actor among the men, she said, was difficult also, but she gave the award to Garry Remus, playing the part of the Rev. Mr. Sparrow in The Truth Telling Machine.

In closing, she said she had had a pleasant and interesting evening and she hoped the casts would continue to work at plays and that they would select good ones and strive to build them up to a climax.

Silver cups were presented to the best group, best actor and actress, and a special one to the Pembroke Intermediate group, though it wasn't in competition.

CHAPTER THREE

Eyes narrowed, he looked at it all. Then he set about cleaning up the place. He would have to make a trip to town for grub and bedding. He was in the middle of his house, cleaning, when he heard a wagon coming. He stepped to the doorway, a carbine in his hands. Then he recognized the man driving the team. It was Tex.

"I got word that somebody had kind of messed up your place, Webb, so I figured I'd come over."

In the wagon was a month's supply of grub, a bottle of whisky and a bedroll.

"The bed is one that a feller left at my place and never came back for. One of the Jones boys that had bad luck along the trail. You kin pay back the grub when you git around to it."

Tex put up his team and helped Webb clean up things. He did not say how he happened to learn that somebody had violated that range code which says that a man is lower than a snake who will abuse the privilege of an unlocked door. Webb did not ask.

Tex spent the night with Webb and they sat up until late, smoking and talking. After breakfast, Tex pulled out for home. It was when Webb saddled up and rode around his place that he discovered what other damage had been done.

His fence around the hay meadow had been cut. His alfalfa crop was tromped down, two haystacks torn up and ruined by the rain, his few head of horses, about 15 head, were missing. Save for the horse he rode, he was afoot. He would be forced to sell part of his cattle or buy feed to replace the hay that had been wantonly destroyed.

He sat his horse, staring at the broken fence and the ruined hay crop. Not a pleasant homecoming. He knew that more than a few of the ranchers in the country considered him guilty of Bob Anderson's death.

He thought over the proposition Tex had made to him the night before as they sat smoking in the cabin. Webb had turned it down. Now he wondered if he hadn't been too hasty. Ab Abbot was going after Webb Winters. Webb no longer belonged to the Scissor-Bill Pool. What chance had he, lone-handed, against the Triangle outfit?

He was staring with brooding eyes at the broken fence when Joe Blake rode up.

"Damnation, Webb, who done this?"

"Not knowin'," Webb replied, "I couldn't say."

"They shore tore things up. What'll you do about hay this winter?"

"As the sayin' goes, I'll do like they do over the river. Do without."

"Shore tough, Webb."

"It could be worse, I reckon." Webb's voice was quiet.

There was an awkward silence. Webb hardly seemed aware of the other man's presence. He kept looking at his broken fence, thinking of the proposition Tex had offered.

"I rode over, Webb, to tell you how ornery I feel about what that lawyer drug outa me on the witness stand. Looked like I was tryin' to send you to the pen."

"Did it?" Webb kept looking at the tangled barb wire.

"I don't want you to pack no grudge again' me, Webb."

"Let 'er go as she lays," returned Webb.

"The Pool wagon starts next week," Joe Blake went on. "Are you ridin' with us?"

"I quit the Scissor-Bill Pool the night I got accused of killin' Bob Anderson. I'm done with the lay-out for keeps."

"How'll you git your cattle gathered?"

"I'll do my own worryin' about that."

"No need to take it thataway. Me and my men will rep for you. Glad to do it."

"I'm gatherin' my own stuff, Blake. I don't want help from the Scissor-Bill Pool in any shape, form or manner. Tell 'em that when you meet tonight."

There was another silence. The two men looked hard at each other.

"I'll tell 'em," said Joe Blake. "I got to be ridin' along. Some of my horses got scattered while I was in town, subpoenaed for the trial."

"Charge it to profit and loss, Blake. So-long."

Webb rode away. Joe Blake's black eyes followed him. Then Blake rode off, a faint, twisted grin on his thin-lipped mouth. The expression on his face was not very pleasant.

* * *

Sheriff Hank Roberts pulled on his chaps and twisted a cigarette into shape. His wife poured him a last cup of black coffee, regular round-up coffee, strong enough to satisfy any man. He buckled on his cartridge belt and slid his old .45 into its holster. A worried frown brought his shaggy, gray brows together.

"You never could tell a lie and make it stick. Have I ever spilled a secret? You've always told me just about everything you were doing. What's wrong this time?"

"You and Mae been argerin' lately?"

"She stayed with me last night while you were gone. What's that got to do with it? Hank, you're not going after Webb Winters again?"

"No. That is, not exactly. But he's travelin' in tough company and somebody is likely to git hurt down there before the last shipment is made this fall. The Triangle wagon started yesterday on their beef work. The Scissor-Bill Pool starts today. Tex and Webb are workin' together with some strangers from the badlands. I'm goin' down to look the layout over. What was Mae sayin' about Webb Winters?"

Chronicles of Ginger Farm

by Gwendoline P. Clarke

With all this heart-breaking news of floods in the West and fires in Quebec it would seem that in Ontario we have little to grumble about—especially now that we have at last got some seeding done. Probably in some parts seeding has been completed but we are just nicely in the middle of it. On Saturday we had to quit because of strong gales—no sense in spending $200 on clover seed and then have the wind blow it over to the next farm as you try to sow it. Today it will have a better chance as there is only a slight breeze. But now we have a new worry. Last night there was "a black frost" and Partner is afraid it may have killed the grass just starting to grow in the pasture fields. If so it will make it bad for farmers who are short of hay and are just waiting for the grass to grow and the weather to warm up so they can turn their cattle out on pasture. We are lucky—we still have enough hay in the barn to last until June 1, if necessary. But believe me, the cattle won't think much of that June 1 idea! The other day, when they were out to water, they discovered to their joy that the gate to the back garden had not been properly fastened. One young heifer promptly finished the job and when I looked out of the window all the cows were happily munching away at the succulent green grass as if they hadn't a minute to lose. As indeed they hadn't, as I was soon on my way to call Partner, then between us, and Tippy, the cows' ill-gotten gain was cut short — and quickly. But the mischief was done. Now every time the cows are let out they crowd around and bawl in disappointed protest at finding the gate securely fastened—and with a chain around for extra protection.

Well, last week I did a bit of gadding. Tuesday I went to Toronto especially to shop. I was planning to attend a Women's Institute affair at Guelph on the Friday and of course, I hadn't a thing to wear! So I shopped, and I shopped—and how I loathe shopping—and although I knew exactly what I wanted I couldn't find it, nor could I find anyone to wait on me half the time until I approached a floor manager and got a little action that way. Finally at the end of anything but a perfect day I came home with only one purchase—a pair of crepe-soled canvas shoes! Came Friday and I set out for Guelph in a dress that was too thin; a coat that has long since forgotten when it was new, and my old black felt hat. But somehow, old clothes didn't seem to matter once we got there. We? Oh yes, the June Bug took along other W.I. members too—and she really buzzed along the road very nicely. We arrived in good time and were rewarded for our trip by hearing Mrs. Raymond Sayre, International President of the Associated Country Women of the World. Mrs. Sayre is the type of person who speaks from the heart—and to the heart. There were no frills to her address—she just made you feel she was an ordinary farm woman like most of us in her audience—knowing and understanding our problems, and yet making us realise the power that women have—and particularly farm women, to mold world affairs. Watch for an account of her address in your farm papers. I cannot attempt to do justice to it in this column. One thing I must mention . . . Mrs. Sayre quoted the answer given by a Jewish American scientist to someone who said to him—"I suppose atomic power is now the greatest power in the world. Isn't that so?"

"No," answered the scientist, "there is one power greater yet—the power of Almighty God."

That is something we are inclined to forget in this materialistic and scientific age, don't you think? Yet we should remember it to our comfort if we are inclined to dwell fearfully on the devasting power of atomic force. After all, the cleverest men of our day and age are still only puppets when a Higher Power taeks over. We have proof of that in the swirling waters of the Red River flood. Sandbags can lessen the damage but only the subsiding of the waters can bring real relief to the flooded areas.

Do you know another thing that struck me quite forcibly at the Guelph Conference—the astonishing number of grey headed women! Fifty years ago most of them would have been wearing lace caps and staying home with their grandchildren. But on Friday, there they were, well over a thousand strong. And they were smart! Most of them had evidently had better luck shopping than I had. My friends and I sat in the balcony, and looking down we could almost count the brown-haired heads among the grey and white.

Another thing I like about that kind of outing—so often kind-hearted souls come up to me and say—"You're Mrs. Clarke, aren't you? We always read and enjoy your column." Often they are strangers to me—how they recognize me, I don't now—but it always gives me a sort of lift to meet any of you people who put up with my meanderings week by week, and I hope you will always come and say "Hullo" whenever you and I happen to be in the same place at the same time.

Reasonable

Down near Sumter, South Carolina, an energetic young salesman recently spent an entire morning trying to sell old Josiah Crabtree a motor bike.

"Ain't no use arguing, young fellow," he finally said. "If I had one, I might fall and break my neck. Besides, I would rather put the money in a good milk cow."

"But think," persisted the youth, "how silly you'd look trying to ride a cow down to the village."

"Maybe so," Josiah admitted, "but I would look a heap more foolish tryin' to milk one of your motor bikes."

ANNE HIRST
Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: Mine is a strange problem. I am married to one of the finest women ever put on this earth. She is kind and good, sweet and intelligent and a wonderful housekeeper, too. Attractive and delightful! We do everything together, and since our marriage three years ago, she has become dearer and dearer to me.

"I was married before—to a woman who was just the opposite. She was lazy, unclean, nagging and, above all, unfaithful. She has married again, too. She visits here frequently.

"Anne Hirst, my own mother brings her to her home, takes her around as though she were still my wife. I learn that my mother is encouraging her to believe we may get together again! My mother has pulled some of the lowest tricks imaginable. Yet, while we were married, these two heartily disliked each other!

"What now?

"It is a terrible thing to say, but I am growing to dislike my mother more every day.

"My wife sees and knows all this, but never complains. We hardly ever go home any more, because I can't stand this deceitful tning my mother is doing—and my wife trusting her so. They have got to learn that my present wife comes first, last and always with me. I worship her, and I can't stand this any longer.

"I've thought of selling our home and getting away from them all. What do you think?

W.C."

* * *

* I think you would be foolish
* to allow your mother's behavior
* to drive you away from your
* home.

* Instead, stop visiting her. If
* she complains, tell her why.

* You ask me why your mother
* acts so. Perhaps she is jealous
* of your devotion to your present
* wife, and would like nothing bet* ter than to break up your mar* riage. So she enlists the sympa* thy of your first wife, who, noth* ing loath (I take it) joins her
* plan.

* However, what does it matter
* why your mother does this? The * fact that she does is shocking
* enough. The sooner you let the * family understand how futile are
* these efforts, the sooner they will
* cease.

* Be grateful that your wife is
* so superior, and enjoy your mar* riage together, unclouded by all
* this confusion. It is revolting to * have to distrust one's mother, but
* after all, a mother, like everyone
* else, must earn the trust of her * children.

To "R.N.": Avoid this temptation as you would flee from the plague!

If you are working in the same organization with this married man, get yourself another position. Since you "love him more every day," that is the smartest course. Believe it or not, once he is removed from your daily sight, you will find it easier to forget this ill-advised infatuation.

You do not say whether he has shown any interest in you or not. If he has, it is no compliment to you; if he has not, the declaration of affection which you are tempted to make would embarrass him terribly, and tend to make you ridiculous.

Have you thought of his wife? In her place, what would YOU think of a girl who tried to steal YOUR husband? Think it over. It should make you see yourself as other people would see you, if you do not control your emotions.

* * *

If differences arise between you and your family, don't let them affect your private life. Ann Hirst's understanding has helped thousands of husbands and wives to keep their marriage fine. Write Anne Hirst at Box 1, 123 Eighteenth Street, New Toronto, Ont.

FEATHER BUNS

● Combine ⅔ c. water, 3 tbs. granulated sugar, 1 tsp. salt and ¼ c. shortening; heat, stirring constantly, until sugar and salt are dissolved and shortening melted; cool to lukewarm. Meanwhile, measure into a large bowl ½ c. lukewarm water, 1 tsp. granulated sugar; stir until sugar is dissolved. Sprinkle with 1 envelope Fleischmann's Royal Fast Rising Dry Yeast. Let stand 10 minutes, THEN stir well.

Add cooled sugar-shortening mixture and stir in 1 well-beaten egg and 1 tsp. lemon juice. Sift together twice 2 c. once-sifted bread flour and ¼ tsp. ground mace. Stir into yeast mixture; beat until smooth. Work in 1 c. once-sifted bread flour to make a very soft dough. Grease top of dough. Cover and set in warm place, free from draught. Let rise until doubled in bulk. Punch down dough and cut out rounded spoonfuls of dough with a tablespoon and drop into greased muffin pans, filling each pan about half-full. Grease tops. Cover and let rise until doubled in bulk. Bake in a hot oven, 425°, about 20 minutes. Yield — 20 medium-sized buns.

Still, a few general hints might not be amiss. And as over a quarter of our food budget—according to the official records—goes for meat, here are some facts worth knowing and remembering.

1. Tender cuts, such as steaks and chops, should be seared to brown the surface fat and preserve juices. Long cooking destroys flavour and wastes meat.

* * *

2. In cooking meat for stews, simmer just below boiling in a small quantity of water. Add salt after the first half-hour, not before.

* * *

3. In grinding meat for patties, meat loaves and the like, use the coarse knife of the food chopper and run meat through twice. This gives a better flavour to the meat, and your meat loaves will slice without crumbling..

* * *

4. In pan-frying round steak, first score the meat lightly with a very sharp knife. Then brush with vinegar. This softens the connective tissues and makes the meat more tender.

* * *

5. In baking meat loaves, pour off the juices every half-hour. This allows the bottom of the loaf to make instead of stew, and also gives a golden brown crust.

* * *

Now for some recipes. There are a great many Hollanders coming to this country, and very fine citizens most of them are turning out to be. But although they take readily to our Canadian ways, we may be sure that they've brought along with them recipes for some of their favorite dishes. One of these undoubtedly is that of a family dinner main dish, which they call "Gevulde Kool" but which I'm passing along to you under the name of

STUFFED CABBAGE

1 small head cabbage
¾ pound minced pork
¼ pound minced beef or veal
2 thin slices of bread that have been soaked in water
1 teaspoon salt
Pepper, nutmeg
2 tablespoons butter.

Method: Remove eight to ten outer leaves from the cabbage and cook them in boiling salted water ten minutes. Reserve the remaining cabbage for salad or other uses.

Drain cooked cabbage and put a leaf or two on a square of double-folded cheese-cloth. Mix the meat with the bread and season with the salt, pepper and nutmeg. Put a thin layer on the cabbage arranged on the cloth.

Cover with a leaf or two, add another layer of meat and continue till leaves and meat are used, finishing off with leaves. Gather the four corners of the cloth and tie. Lower into salted water and simmer an hour and a half.

Remove cabbage from cloth, place in a greased baking dish, dot with the butter and cook at 400 degrees F. till light brown. Yield: four to five portions.

Here's a grand way of using rhubarb, especially if you're fond of candied ginger. If you're particularly fond of it, you can increase the amount given as much as you wish. This is a very delightful pudding, with bread as the bulk ingredient and a delicate rhubarb flavour. The quantities given yield from six to eight servings.

GINGER-RHUBARB PUDDING

1 egg
½ cup granulated sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
¾ teaspoon vanilla
2 cups coarse soft bread crumbs
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1½ cups finely diced fresh rhubarb
1 to 2 tablespoons chopped candied ginger
¼ cup chopped nuts
1 tablespoon butter or margarine.

Beat the eggs slightly; beat in the sugar and salt.

Stir in the milk, vanilla, bread crumbs and lemon rind. Add the prepared rhubarb, chopped candied ginger and chopped nuts and combine well.

Turn mixture into a baking dish that has been brushed with butter or margarine.

Dot top with butter or margarine.

Place baking dish in a large pan and surround with hot water.

Oven-poach in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, until pudding is set—about one hour.

Serve hot or cold.

I started off this column with some hints for "beginning" housewives; so I think I'll finish with the sort of recipe that's liable to come in extremely handy, especially in such emergencies as unexpected visitors.

This is just a plain cake, but it's very good; and has the great advantage that it's quickly made. If baked as layers, just 25 minutes does the trick; double that time if made in loaf form.

QUICK PLAIN CAKE

¼ cup shortening
1¾ cups pastry flour
¼ cup corn starch
3 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup white su r
1 egg
¾ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Method: Cream shortening; sift in the dry ingredients. Add egg, milk and vanilla; beat until smooth. Pour into two 9" layer cake pans, or loaf pan 8" x 12", lined with waxed paper and oiled. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 25 minutes for layers, 50 for loaf.

'Tis An Insult To The Irish

Irishmen the world over are said to have protested vigorously when the City Health Officer of San Francisco made a few scientific but apparently unpalatable remarks, about the famous Blarney Stone recently.

A chunk of Blarney Stone weighing fifteen pounds had been triumphantly conveyed from Ireland to San Francisco so that it could be featured in a Catholic festival.

The City Health Officer, apparently oblivious to the fact that he might make himself very unpopular, took a "swab" of the much-kissed surface of the stone, had it analysed and announced that it was swarming with germs.

It was not healthy, he added, for a lot of people to kiss the stone. Not having kissed it himself, he said no more than this, but his words brought down upon his head a deluge of Irish scorn.

For men and women have been kissing the Blarney Stone ever since the days of Queen Elizabeth. Germs or no germs, they have considered it a great privilege to lie on their backs, lower themselves head-first into a hole, and press their lips against the cold, tough surface.

Why? Because the legend says that whoever kisses the stone will receive the gift of smooth-tongued eloquence. The rhyme says:

"There is the stone there, that whoever kisses,
Oh! he never misses to grow eloquent;
'Tis he may clamber to a lady's chamber,
Or become a Member of Parliament.

"A clever spouter he'll soon turn out, or
An out-and-outer—'to be let alone.'
Don't hope to hinder him, or to bewilder him—
Sure he's a pilgrim from the Blarney Stone."

The ancient stone itself is set high in the outer wall of Blarney Castle, near Cork. It is said that the word "blarney" found its way into the dictionary during the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

Cormat Dermott McCarthy, an Irish rebel, having concluded in 1602 an armistice with the English, was ordered by Queen Elizabeth to surrender Blarney Castle to her Lord President of Ireland, Sir George Carew.

But McCarthy was an exceedingly smooth talker, and every time the Lord President went to the castle to arrange for its transfer McCarthy overwhelmed him with such eloquence that he always returned without completing his mission.

Sir George became the laughing-stock of the English Court, and one day the Queen sent for him, demanding to know why he had failed.

Sir George made his excuses, describing McCarthy's persuasive promises and arguments, whereupon the Queen cried angrily: "This is more Blarney! What he says he never means!"

It came to be believed that McCarthy's eloquence was derived from the magic Blarney Stone in his castle walls, whose touch "makes a liar of the first magnitude, but a smooth and graceful liar."

Americans made a tempting offer in dollars for the Blarney Stone before the war. The offer was refused. Undaunted, the Americans bought a quarry near the castle and exported "Blarney rock" to the United States.

During 1938 they sent ten tons

The GREEN THUMB

A Cutting Garden

A corner of the vegetable garden or some place at the back of the lawn is often set aside to grow flowers especially for indoor bouquets. When a large supply of blooms is wanted frequent cutting leaves the regular borders a bit shy. Any of these flowers suitable for cutting purposes will thrive on the same sort of cultivation that the vegetables get. Certain flowers, indeed, like gladioli, sweet peas and others of which the foliage is not very attractive are best grown with the vegetables.

Will They Thrive Here?

One reads or hears of lots of beautiful flowers, shrubs and even vegetables that many not grow well in many parts of Canada. These things were developed for the Southern States or England where the climate is milder or the growing season longer.

One wastes money and time in trying them in our vigorous clime. To guard against the discouragement, one is advised to stick to those flowers, shrubs and vegetables that are specially recommended for Canadian conditions. The latter are the varieties and types listed in the Canadian seed catalogues. These have all been tested under Canadian conditions and they are the only ones recommended by the Canadian authorities.

Sound Nursery Stock

Shrubs, vines, trees and similar things which we buy as started but dormant plants are known as nursery stock. Healthy stock should be pliant and moist, with plenty of stout buds. It will come along quickly with hardly a check if handled carefully. These things should be kept cool and moist and if they cannot be planted in their permanent location right away they should be 'heeled in,' that is temporarily planted in a trench with the soil heaped up well above the roots. When replanting it is advisable to supply plenty of water and keep watered for the first few weeks. Planting is best done in the cool of the evening or on dull days, and some shade from hot sun is advisable with tiny things.

A Short Cut

To get an early start with such tender, hot-weather-loving things as cucumbers, melons, squash and tomatoes there are little waxed paper caps now on the market. A little bed about a foot across is made of rich soil, preferably with some manure in it, the seed is planted and over this goes the cap firmly held down with earth around the edges. The plants will germinate quickly and the cap will protect them even when the mercury falls several degrees below freezing. Later when weather warms up the caps are discarded.

What's The Answer?

Once outside the city, a Sunday walker would never know, unless he had read about it in the papers, that he was living in the Atomic Age; he would swear that he was still living in the Motor Age. And as he walks along any country road he will wonder whether the atomic scientists, working with a billion dollars' worth of equipment supplied by the taxpayers, will ever be able to turn out so universally useful, so revolutionary, a contraption as the one Henry Ford turned out half a century ago, working alone in his bicycle shout out there in Detroit. Will these same atomic scientists, given ten years, sufficient funds and an army to guard their work from prying eyes, produce so great a boon to mankind as the electric light that first glowed in Edison's crude laboratory over there in Jersey? Will the gentlemen who can split atoms deserve so well of their country in the long run as the pioneers who only split rails? These are questions born of a spring day, and the answers seem as uncertain as the sunshine.

A Berkeley, Calif., exterminator announced his remarkable success in catching rats by feeding them frozen pudding flavored with sherry. He gets the rats so drunk that he can reach them with his bare hands, he says.

Male Tact

"I've decided on a name for baby," said the young mother. "I shall call her Euphrosyne."

The husband did not care for the selection but he was tactful.

"Splendid," he said, cheerfully. "The first girl I ever loved was called Euphrosyne."

There was a brief silence. Then: "We'll call her Elizabeth after my mother," his wife said, sternly.

'Breeding' Atomic Fuel May Prove Forecast—Speaking at Pocatello, President Truman forecast the possibility of a vast peacetime use of atomic energy for agriculture, industry and transportation. He spoke as the Atomic Energy Commission is spending some of its $90,000,000 budget to design and build a new atomic pile near Arco, Idaho, to test a theory that scarce atomic fuel can be made to "breed" more atomic fuels. Diagrams above show how "breeding" might be done, as described by Morton M. Hunt in Steelways Magazine. It's known that when a uranium-235 atom is smashed, some escaping neutrons will be lost, but some will strike atoms of useless, non-fissionable uranium-238, transforming it into a new artificial element, plutonium-239, which is fissionable. AEC scientists hope to save those lost neutrons so that PU-239 will be "bred" in large enough quantities to produce a steady supply of heat usable for power. Diagram at upper left shows how some PU-239 is produced when U-235 neutron hits a U-238 atom. Diagram of simplified pile, or reactor, at upper right, shows how heat, produced by fission, is removed by liquid circulated around the unit. Sketched below is the reactor's place in a theoretical atomic power plant. Incoming uranium ore is refined at (1), then moved into the reactor (2). Heat generated is removed by liquid metal to boiler (3), making steam, which drives generator and turbine (4). Useful power thus made goes to consumers (5). As atomic reactor accumulates breakdown products (plus useful plutonium), fuel is removed to reprocessing plant (6). Salvaged uranium and plutonium go back to (1). Wastes extracted, if useless, are stored (7) until radioactivity dies down. If useful, in medicine or industry, wastes are prepared and shipped out by plant (8).

WITH

ROD & GUN

By C. E. W.

The welcome arrival of the lovely warm May days and evenings should cause the ardent Isaac Waltons to brush the webs nd dust from their fishing rods and go after the big ones.

After the holiday this week, we expected to be swamped with entries in the fish contest, but nary a one since then have we had. However last week end Keith Smith brought in a good sized pickerel, weight 5 lbs., 10 oz., length 25½", girth 14", that he picked up in the St. Lawrence with a silver flash plug.

The cold weather hasn't stopped the early spring mudcat fisherman from trying his luck, and according to all reports his efforts are being most amply rewarded. Although to date no mudcats have been weighed in, the grapevine reports some very good catches. Some of you guys had better get wise and weigh one in. We can't give out a prize if we have no entries.

A recent resolution by the local Fish and Game Protective Association, re Sunday hunting provoked quite a discussion at the zone meeting of the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters, when it was read. Almost every delegate present was in agreement with our resolution. And those who were not for it were not definitely against it, either. They thought that the matter should be given considerable thought and discussion.

Story-telling seems to go hand in hand with hunters and anglers whenever they meet, so here is our contribution for this week. "Very disgruntled after spending all day in a rowboat, sitting in the hot sun, wasting two bucks worth of bait, with nary a fish falling for his line, Fred decided to call it a day. On the way home, he entered a fish market and said to the dealer, "Just stand there nd throw me five of your biggest trout." Rather perplexed, the dealer asked, "Throw them to you—why do you ask me to throw them?" Without even a trace of a smile, the disappointed Isaac Walton replied, "I may be a poor fisherman, but no one can ever call me a liar, and I must tell the little wiman I caught them".

The only game fish in this district, on which the season is still closed are black bass and maskinonge. The season on these 2 game fish opens on July 1st. At the present time the black bass are spawning and should be given the full protection of every angler. Besides breaking the law the molesting of the bass at this time of year, lessens the chance of bass fishing making a comeback in this area.

While we're on that subject, Overseer McConnell is making life a bit unpleasant for the poor sports who want to grab the bass off the spawning grounds. Every spring a few more of them are learning the hard way that the natural resources of our great province are not theirs tto squander at their will. Generations yet unborn have a share in them too. The law is designed to conserve these resources, so that we, our children and our children's children may enjoy them. Do your part by being a good sport. Keep within the law and take only what you can use. Don't be a game hog.

.. Better angling till next week. ..

$110 STILL WAITING FOR LUCKY MAN AT FOTO-NITE

There is a small fortune waiting at the Cameo Theatre for some lucky person on Foto-Nite (Tuesday or Wednesday) of each week. This tidy sum presently amounts to $110.

In last Wednesday's programme, following an interesting stage contest, with T. Rockley Parker acting as M. C., the number drawn by a member of the audience was no 807, and registered under that number was Mr. Herbert Byers, of R. R. 1, Cardinal. Mr. Byers was not in the theatre, had not attended the previous evening, and so was ineligible for the money. The offer was upped to $110 for next Wednesday.

Also at next Wednesday's show, Mr. Carl Madsen definitely promises there will be a most beautiful child contest. He has raised the age limit in this contest to 7 years, so there should be plenty of entries. Get your entries in early for this interesting contest. Really worthwhile prizes are there waiting for the most beautiful child.

SPORTSMANSHIP IN "CANADA UNLIMITED"

From a Liverpool, N.S., dock, schoolmaster Thomas Pattilo and a friend pulled away . . . determined to test the tuna as a game fish. Near the fishing fleet they dropped an eight-inch homemade hook and 30 fathoms of codline.

Suddenly a tuna struck . . . their dory shot through the fleet. Angry fishermen watched them swamp a small boat, then slashed their line. But Pattilo was undaunted. Later in 1871 he tried again . . . and landed a gleaming, 600-pound blue-fin. Tuna fishing, for sport, had been born.

Good sportsmanship and teamwork made Canadians the first to try the tuna as a game fish. And teamwork with sportsmanship helps you, too. Together they keep your opportunities for work and play in Canada . . . unlimited.

May Solve Ontario's Hockey Problem—The outdoor rink shown above is an architects drawing f the kind of outdoor, artificial ice rinks which have become so popular in recent years, all over the United States, especially in New York City where the Rockefeller Plaza is a skating surface of this kind. The building at the end is a dressing room, refreshment booth, and refrigeration plant. Ten of these rinks are being built in Toronto and there will be two of them in Hamilton. The refrigerating pipes are embedded in the polished composition floor so that it makes a splendid surface for roller skating and summer dancing.

THE FARM FRONT
by John Russell

Canadian farmers, and especially those in the poultry business, owe a real debt of gratitude to W. A. Brown, C.B.E., who recently retired to private life after 39 years with the Dominion Department of Agriculture. For many of those years he directed the activities of the Poultry Marketing and Production Service, and it was under his guidance that the poultry industry developed from something of a sideline to farming, into the highly efficient and widespread organization it is today.

* * *

An Ontario man, Mr. Brown, was born 65 years ago in Meaford and attended the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph aad the University of Maine. He turned down several promising offers of academic work to join the Department of Agriculture, in 1911, as a poultry specialist.

* * *

He pioneered in national poultry breeding policies, and had the satisfaction of seeing them established in Canada long before they became common in any other country. (Of course, there is still Russia to be heard from. Probably they'll be telling us that one of their scientists did all that Brown did, and more, several hundred years ago. But that's by the way).

* * *

Other projects sponsored by this leader in our poultry industry were national grading standards for eggs and poultry. When they were established in Canada in 1915 they were unknown in other countries. A refinement of this basic principle of national grading is shown in the establishment of registered egg grading stations, all operated on the same method, from coast to coast.

* * *

As chief of the poultry services, the procuring and marketing of the tremendous quantity of eggs and egg powder shipped to Britain during the Second World War were largely Mr. Brown's responsibility. That the job was well done is shown by the fact that over 505,000,000 dozen eggs were shipped in fresh, dried or frozen form, valued at $191,000,000. In addition, $45,000,000 worth of dressed poultry was sold to the United Kingdom and the United States.

* * *

The high regard with which Canadian egg products were received on the British market is a fitting tribute to Mr Brown's untiring efforts. That they met with such praise goes back, in large measure, to his pioneer work in establishing national grading standards a generation ago. And I am sure every reader of this column will join with me in wishing Mr. Brown many years in which to enjoy a well-earned rest.

* * *

Thousands of farmers—and other folk, too—have gone about mixing their own concrete, and then wondered why the job didn't prove any too satisfactory. The Experimental Farm at Swift Current hands out some valuable advice on this important matter, and starts off by saying—DON'T use too much water in mixing concrete, and DON'T FORGET to screen pit-run gravel.

* * *

Think of a brick wall. Here large pieces of baked clay (bricks) are held together with mortar. A mortar that is too "sloppy" oozes out, and a weak wall will result. In many ways, concrete is similar to a brick wall. Coarse material is held together by mortar. The mortar in this case is a mixture of sand, Portland cement and water. This is mixed along with the coarse material all in the one operation.

* * *

The strength of the mixture when it has "set" will depend upon the amount of water used in relation to the cement. Note this point. It is the amount of water used in relation to the cement that is so important.

* * *

The dealer from whom you buy your cement will be able to get useful bulletins on mixing and using concrete for you. Ask for "Quality Concrete" and "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete." These are published by the Portland Cement Association.

* * *

It pays to screen pit-run gravel. Then use the coarse and fine material according to the directions. If too much fine material is used in relation to the coarse material, more cement will be required. At the Swift Current station, most pit-run gravel contains too much sand. It was found that a man's wages could be paid screening the gravel. A good workman would handle enough material in an hour to save nearly one sack of cement.

* * *

Properly graded aggregates (sand and gravel), the right amount of water and cement, will give a dense and strong concrete at a minimum cost.

He Wrestles With His Daughter's Killer

Every day, Captain Jim Roose, late of the Foreign Legion, wrestles with the lioness which caused the death of his ten-year-old daughter—and his brother.

As well as grappling with the lioness, as part of his act at a French circus, he puts his head in her mouth, persuades her mate to take a piece of meat from between his lips and lick his face.

During the war Jim Roose was a prisoner. His brother managed the show for him, and his daughter used to come and go in the cages and play happily with the lioness, who returned her affection.

But one day the little girl's hair was bleached. She entered the cage as confidently as ever—but the lioness failed to recognize her. Mistaking her for a stranger, the beast leapt . . . and within a few moments the little girl was dead.

Some time later the lioness savaged Jim's brother, who also died from his injuries. When Jim came back from the war he grimly resolved to carry on the show in the true circus tradition. He re-trained the lions and now tries to forget that the lioness was the killer of his loved ones.

The rum-and-brandy method of catching is being used in New South Wales, where rabbits are made drunk and then gathered up.

SPORTS-&
by A Sixbit Critic

Amateur hockey in Southern Ontario is in a rather bad way, and it isn't—as some allege—because the rising generation prefers to take its physical exercise via radio or television. The condition is caused simply by the scarcity of proper playing surfaces.

* * *

We recall one "crooshial" game down in Ottawa many years ago when the Toronto St. Pats upset the highly favored Senators with the players practically skating on bare boards, and a weird hockey spectacle it was, at that. But, by and large, a certain amount of ice is necessary if the "world's fastest sport" is to be a success.

* * *

And, of recent years, the weatherman has been clean neglecting to provide natural ice in reasonable quantities over a very large section of this fair province of ours. The result is that the kids in such sections don't get the necessary practice, so that big-league scouts—out to get the replacement material—now head north and west, and pay little attention to what was once the greatest breeding-ground on earth for hockey stars.

* * *

Many Ontario centres have been attempting to combat this condition by building covered-in artificial ice arenas. But this appears to be a rather risky proposition. With building costs what they are today, the "nut," or original investment, is pretty steep, especially when the home team that is expected to bring in the necessary dough for carrying charges is liable to get knocked out of competition before the season is well started.

* * *

Elsewhere on this page will be seen an architect's drawing of something which may turn out to be the solution of this problem—the problem of a small or medium-size community providing the kids with ice for skating and hockey without going into hock for the next three generations or so. It is the outdoor artificial rink.

* * *

Although new to Canada, this type of rink is by no means a Johnny-come-lately. As far back as 1889, there was one built in that dear Paris, although you can't prove this by us, and the much publicized and photographed one at Rockefeller Plaza, New York, is also of this nature.

* * *

The rink—that is to say the playing surface—consists of a polished concrete slab, and the ice-making is done once a week or so by a booster freezing unit, then kept in skating condition by auxiliary units that are part of the plant. Of course, if the mercury drops low enough, natural freezing takes the place of artificial at a considerable saving.

* * *

We are not able to say—except approximately—just what the actual cost would be, as compared to a regular type enclosed artificial ice arena. However, a committee from one Southern Ontario community recently went into the matter, and this is what it found out.

* * *

To build a complete, covered arena would cost them anywhere from $80,000 to $125,000—figures far too high for them even to consider at this stage. But they could have an outdoor affair of the kind we have been discussing for around $30,000—with the "booster freezing unit" setting them back about $35,000.

* * *

Even this would appear to be pretty steep, but it isn't as bad as it looks at first sight. That's because the aforementioned committee found that there is a strong possibility that they wouldn't have to buy the booster freezing unit at all. As we understand it, these units are portable, and can be travelled around the country, visiting a number of places to do the necessary "new" freezing—the permanent auxiliary units keeping the ice in proper condition between visits.

* * *

Now we wouldn't like anybody to get the notion that we're trying to peddle this idea in any way, shape or form. We don't even know the name of the people who make the rinks, or the freezing units. Our entire knowledge consists of what we have been told, or have read in the papers. Still, when it is said that no less than 10 of these outfits are going to be built in Toronto, and two in Hamilton, it would seem that they must have some merit. And we think there are many places in Ontario that would do well to look into them before committing themselves to expenses they might later regret—or sitting back and grousing, "Aw, heck, the kids around here are just too lazy to take an interest in playing hockey; they'd sooner go to the movies."

Sitting Bull—El toro took a tumble during this bullfight in Mexico City, and landed in what appeared to be a sitting position. Whirling his cape as he gracefully avoids the bull's sharp horns is Antonio Valesquez, one of Mexico's top matadors. Bullfighting was a feature of the recent Spring Festival in Mexico City.

"Drive and Walk with Care As Motor Traffic Increases"

—Minister of Highways

Travel by motorists and pedestrians promises to reach a new peak volume this year.

The seasonal upswing in holiday motor travel has begun. More vehicles than ever before are operating on Ontario streets and highways. Pedestrian hazards are increased.

Extreme care must be exercised by all to prevent accidents.
Pedestrians are urged to walk carefully.

Its tonics, stimulants, invigorators, iron, vitamin B_1, calcium, enrich blood, improve appetite and digestion so food gives you more strength and nourishment; put flesh on bare bones. Don't fear getting too fat. Stop when you've gained the 5, 10, 15 or 20 lbs. you need for normal weight. Costs little. New "get acquainted" size only 60c. Try famous Ostrex Tonic Tablets for new vigor and added pounds, this very day. At all druggists.

Around the Home...

TOM GARD'S NOTE BOOK

Human nature being what it is, we seem to require an extra stimulus to carry out the annual spring cleanup. A program of concentrated action always gets results and members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce are conducting just such a program this year. What a country we'll have when each one does his bit in this national campaign. Examine the slogan "clean up, paint up, plant up, light up" more closely, and you'll be amazed at the number of jobs now awaiting your attention that must be completed before your place is shipshape. What's more important, you'll be amazed at the improved appearance of your property with two or three days of concerted effort.

Why not begin by making a small gadget to ease the burden of washing outside windows. The cleaner illustrated is as effective as it is simple to make.

Discourage Flies

I dropped in unexpectedly on an old friend of mine the other day and found him making his own window screens for the summer cottage. I was so impressed with the ease with which he turned them out I decided to make some myself for the house. The chief handicap confronting most people is their fear of tackling a new job. In case you have promised to screen that bedroom window this year, you'll find a handy list of material and sizes in the booklet "Around the Home".

Flower Pot Covers

The beauty of potted plants can often be strikingly enhanced by enclosing the flower pot in an attractive plywood container. The corners are fastened with small finishing nails, or laced together with leather thongs or shoe laces. If laced, drill the holes at two-inch intervals, top and bottom holes about one inch from the ends.

B.C. fir with an attractive grain or pattern is excellent. The wood then can be left natural—or painted to harmonize with the colour scheme of the room. Further decoration can be provided by using floral transfers on the four sides.

MANITOBA RELIEF FUND
THE CANADIAN RED CROSS SOCIETY

The Morrisburg Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society has received the following communication from Toronto headquarters:

"To bring you up to date, following is the situation re Winnipeg flood The Red Cross Society is looking after the emergency welfare and relief at Winnipeg and hs spent to date about $400,000 for food. clothing, shelter, transportation. We do not know what the aggregate expense will amount to as that depends upon length and intensity of flood and aftermath. We will probably have to take care of evacuees for some weeks after the flood subsides and until their homes are pronounced fit by the sanitary authorities for re-occupation.

Any contributions received by the branches for flood relief should be sent to the Divisional Office as a designated fund and it will then be expended for the purpose by the National Society ni Winnipeg.

"We are not publicizing any campaign for funds for emergency relief because there is now prominently before the public the appeal of the Manitoba Flood Relief Fund, headed by H. W. Manning ,which is asking the upblic of Canada for 10 millian. This Manning fund is strictly limited in purpose to rehabilitation of evacuees by purchasing furniture and furnishings for the homes when re-occupied and not for emergency welfare and relief which is the responsibility of the Red Cross. However when the Manning Fund has finished its appeal, the Red Cross could, if there is a serious shortage in their disaster fund, then make an appeal for funds, but such an appeal is not contemplated at the present time.

"We repeat again however, that any contributions now received by the branches for Winnipeg relief should be promptly sent to the Divisional office and will be expended in our disaster relief operations. In view of Red Cross own expense, branches definitely should not contribute to Manitoba Flood fund from Branch funds."

Any donations of flashlights with bulbs and batteries, new heavy work socks, new work gloves, new rubberized or plasticized gloves, also new or used hip length waders are still urgently needed.

Local citizens wishing to make donations of cash, or any of the above items, are urged to get in touch at once with the local branch president Mr. Arthur Hickey.

THINKING ABOUT HOME IMPROVEMENT?

Look Into a B of M Loan For This Special Purpose

This is the time of the year when people nad communities are getting ready for the spring clean-up. It's the time for new paint jobs, new decoration schemes, important repairs to roof and structure. Most householders have a long list of improvements they would like to see in their homes .. and so have their wives, thinking perhaps of the kitchen and laundry room.

It isn't always easy, however, to find immediately the ready money you need for these improvements, even though you can meet the cost comfortably out of annual income. And if that's your problem, Kenneth MacLuckie, manager of the B of M branch at Morrisburg, suggests it's worth thinking about a B of M loan for home improvement.

You'll save on your bills by paying cash, and you'll save yourself trouble by dealing with all your repair bills at once. Such a B of M loan for home improvement is repayable in easy instalments, and the interest rate is agreeably moderate. It comes tto only 27 cents a month o na loan of $100 repaid over twelve months. So call on Mr. MacLuckie tomorrow and get your spring clean-up away to a good start.

GOOD CITIZENSHIP IS A LOT OF LITTLE THINGS

SMILE AWHILE
It's easy to smile when things are going well. It's a little bit harder to do so when they aren't. But you'll learn, if you try it, that a friendly grin will bring cheer to others, and magically, to yourself! Start the day with a smile ... and repeat it so regularly that it becomes a habit. You'll find the day's work easier, your worries lighter, your friendships stronger. It's "Good Citizenship".
