EDITOR OF "PRESS" PASSES ON.

Mr. J. H. Ross, editor of The Winchester Press for 21 years, died at his home in Winchester after a lifetime spent in the newspaper business. Mr. Ross was 77 years of age and was one of the well-known editors of country weeklies in Eastern Ontario.

THE LUCKY WINNER OF THE FINE NEW SLEIGH

Mildred Merkley, daugnter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. G. Merkley, of town, is to be congratulated on being the first girl or boy to hand in to this office the correct name of the original of the photo published in last week's Record, which was W. O. Dixon at an early age. Many guesses were turned in beginning within an hour after publication and continuing for several days. A peculiar circumstance was that the first letter received was from a "borrower" of The Record, but unfortunately for the kiddie the guess was not correct, but it shows advertisers that ads. in The Record will pull from all directions. "It doesn't cost to advertise in The Record—it pays."

ERNEST McCAULEY BEREAVED.

Hugh McCauley, of Eddyville, Ont., father of Mr. Ernest McCauley of this place, passed away on Monday at the age of 89 years and was laid to rest Wednesday afternoon at Pendleton, the service being taken at the home by Rev. Mr. Legault of Newington, a former pastor of the deceased. The following family survive: Ernest of Chesterville, Garnet and Clarence at home, John of Winchester, Mrs. Albert Dixon of Ottawa, Mrs. Jas. Wylie of Winchester Mrs. Gagnon of Bourget, Willie of Saskatoon, Sask., and Mrs. Empey of Vancouver, B.C.

DIED SUDDENLY SUNDAY.

Sunday morning at his home in Finch township, Nicholas Beehler, a prominent and well-known farmer of the Berwick district, died suddenly. Up to the day of his death he was apparently in his usual health, in fact had been to the barber's in Crysler the evening before in good spirits. The funeral took place Tuesday at Crysler.

In the list of officials of the Hockey Club printed last week, the name of Charles Munro on the transportation committee should have read Charles Marcell.

CHESTERVILLE'S DEBENTURE DEBT.

WHAT IS THE DEBT OF CHESTERVILLE, AND FOR WHAT PURPOSES WAS THE DEBT CREATED?

Outstanding Debentures.	No. Outstanding.	Yearly Payments	Principal	Interest	Total
1. High School Improvement	1	$ 307.07	$ 249.01	$ 58.06	$ 307.07
2. Victoria St. Paving	2	$ 299.95	1671.66	427.99	2099.65
3. Pipe Line Extension & Sewer	11	$ 557.81	4514.78	1621.90	6135.91
4. Community Hall	20	$ 1076.26	1400.00	9633.15	21525.20

1. The High School Improvement debentures were issued to provide funds for the needs of the High School Board, the Council being compelled to provide such funds by the Ontario Statutes.

2. The Victoria Street Paving debentures were issued to provide funds to pay for the paving of Victoria Street. This street was paved in 1930 and no provision was made by the Council of that year to provide funds to pay the cost of this work. This neglect had the effect of adding for interest and legal expenses the sum of $345.18 to the cost.

3. The Pipe Line Extension and Sewer debentures were issued in part to pay the cost of extending the water mains and of providing hydrants so as to extend fire protection to every property in the village except two outlying farm properties. The part of the proceeds of this debenture issue that was used to pay the cost of fire protection extension has already been justified. Because of this extension, property has been saved to individuals and assessments to the village.

Of the proceeds of the Pipeline Extension and Sewer Debenture issue the sum of $968. (or 17 1-3 per cent) of the issue, was required to pay the cost of digging up a sewer on the east side of King Street North and relaying it to a true and useful grade. This sewer had become inoperative by reason of its having originally been laid to a faulty grade.

4. The Community Hall debenture issue was authorized by a more than two-to-one vote of the taxpayers of this village and the debenture by-laws were approved and the debentures endorsed by the Ontario Municipal Board. All this, obstruction, notwithstanding. The Community Hall project may be wrecked by petty jealousies and unsympathetic management and thus become a tax burden. But, if the people of this village and district rally around those who would make the most of the facilities provided in this splendid municipal building and the surrounding grounds, the project can be made to be self-supporting during the currency of the debentures and to become a revenue producing asset thereafter. Already a substantial percentage of the cost of the new Hall has been subscribed by upwards of 130 interested donors, many of of them living outside the village. Furthermore, if, during the years to follow, the management of this project is what it ought to be it will be to the advantage of all those who have services of any kind whatsoever to sell, by reason of the crowds that will be attracted to our village, to say nothing of the community spirit and civic pride that may be engendered and fostered thereby.

5. There are three outstanding Hydro debentures of $344. each, payable one in each of the following years, 1936, 1937 and 1938. These Hydro debentures are payable from Hydro funds and not from from village taxes; and there is a surplus of $9,000 of Hydro funds invested in Government bonds.

CHESTERVILLE'S DEBENTURE DEBT IS LOWEST PER CAPITA IN FOUR SURROUNDING COUNTIES.

Any truth-seeker may learn from the village records just what the debt of Chesterville is, to what use the funds were put, and what boards or councils were responsible for the expenditures.

Following is a table showing the relative position with regard to debenture debt of 10 urban municpalities in the four eastern St. Lawrence counties. These figures are taken from the 1933 report of the Ontario Department of Municipal Affairs:

Municipality	Population	Taxable Assessment	Debenture Debt	Debenture Debt Per Capita

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture

Crops For Silage.

For eleven years the Field Husbandry Division has been conducting experiments with the ensiling of various crops. Of the crops tested, corn is undoubtedly the best for ensiling. Sunflowers are recommended on heavy clay soils and in cool climates where corn does not do well. Mixtures of oats and peas, or oats, peas and vetches make very good silage. Red clover is an excellent silage crop but alfalfa is rather difficult to ensile and should be used for hay where possible. Buckwheat, cut in full bloom, yields 7 or 8 tons per acre of fairly good silage. Experiments are being continued with these and other crops.

Paris Wins Society Class at Guelph.

With a total score of 458 points, the Paris Agricultural Society was awarded first place in the keenly contested Agricultural Class for grain at the Winter Fair. Esquesing Society of Georgetown was a close second with 455½ points As the possible was 500 these are considered very high scores.

This class has aroused very wide interest as the members of each competing Agricultural Society must co-operate in this venture. Each exhibit included five lots of grain and seed and no member contributed more than one lot. As 12 societies competed, the display included samples from 60 of the best seed growers in Western Ontario.

Other winning societies are given in order: Peel County (Brampton) 488½ Carrick (Mildmay) 447, Teeswater 439, Scott (Uxbridge) 437, Richmond Hill 434½, Markham 426, South Huron (Seaforth) 424.

Livestock Figures.

In Ontario the horse population shows a reduction of 800. Mare and geldings are 2,700 less, due, it is believed to the reduced fodder supplies available last winter, but colts and fillies are up 1,900 reflecting the stronger demand and higher prices prevailing for horses. Cattle have dropped 25 300 head, decreases occurring in bulls, milk yearlings, calves and steers over 2 years. Milk cows are down 1,075 head in Eastern Ontario but up 5,000 head in the aggregate for the province. Beef cows have increased 2,000 head and beef yearlings 1,400. For the fifth successive year, sheep and lambs record a decrease, being placed at 945,700 on June 1st, 1935, as compared with 962,300 on June 1st 1934. Brood sows are up considerably in each section except Southern Ontario, but other pigs over six months showed a heavy falling-off in numbers, with the result that the total swine population over six months decreased by 3,000 head Swine under six months are on the upward strend again and are 50,400 higher than a year ago. The number of sows intended to farrow in the next six months is well above last year. Hens and chickens show a rise of 164,200, being 21,731,200 this June and 21,567,000 in June, 1934.

Dressed Poultry for the Christmas Trade.

Thousands of birds are destined for the Christmas market as dressed poultry but, to obtain the highest prices, most of them should be well finished by the pen or crate method since the quieter the birds are kept the better the quality of finish. The length of the finishing period may vary from two to three weeks, depending on the condition, age and feeding of the bird.

For the finishing work, the selection and grading of the birds according to vigour, condition, size, age and sex are extremely important. It is usually advisable to discard the non-vigourous birds and invest extra capital and labour only in those that will return profit.

Before the birds are placed in the crates for feeding, they should be treated for lice and starved for at least 24 hours. It is advisable to administer a dose of laxative to clean them out in the form of Epsom salts dissolved in water at the rate of one pound to 100 birds. The solution is used for mixing the first feed.

The importance of proper dressing cannot be over-emphasized. In killing and preparing poultry for market the birds should be starved for at least 24 hours before being killed, have access to clean drinking water, be properly bled so that no blood remains in the extremities, be undrawn with the head and feet left on, be dry plucked although a few feathers may be left around the head, be dry cooled, with feet and vent clean, all blood removed from the mouth, and the crop empty. It is preferable that the heads should be wrapped. All the body heat should be out of the bird before packing, and every care should be taken to keep poultry from freezing before it is delivered.

Cutting the Fuelwood.

Farmers who are fortunate enough to own a woodlot son will be cutting fuel for next year. Late fall and early winter is the ideal season for working in the bush as the ground is frozen and there is usually very ltle snow.

Before starting the work it would be advisable to look over the woodlot and decide the location of the season's operations. The future should always be considered in woodlot management as the cutting done now will determine the composition and value of the woods 10, 50 and 100 years hence.

Owners who have not fenced part of their bush from stock should consider the advisability of doing so, as the value and often the preservation of the woodlot depends on whether stock are shut out, as small seedlings and saplings of deciduous trees (maple, ash, beech, etc.) will be browsed and the evergreens will be broken by stock. The fence might be constructed in the winter by utilizing trees as posts. The wire should be fastened to strips that are nailed to the trees.

The fuelwood could be cut from the part that is left in with the pasture. Often the fuelwood may be cut and the woodlot left in better growing condition if care in selecting trees is taken. Large trees that are interfering and holding back promising young trees might be utilized as often their value is decreasing The less valuable species (weeds) such as ironwood, blue beech, poplar, pin cherry should be largely eliminated from the woodlot as they will if left continue to seed up the bush and take up space that might be growing valuable white ash, sugar maple, pine, spruce, etc.

The trees are generaly too crowded in a second growth stand. A thinning that removes defective, crooked, weed trees and trees that are shaded by their more vigourous neighbours would result in a marked improvement of the woods. These polewood stands are often clean-cut for fuelwood when a judicious thinning would yield fuelwood and increase the value of the woods.

If the owner is not doing the cutting himself he should mark the trees that are to be cut by blazing or daubing with paint. Care in felling is very necessary, as the small trees have a high potential value.

A bulletin on The Woodlot will be sent on application to The Forests Branch, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, or it may be obtained from the County Agricultural Representative.

Association Officers Address Trinity United Young People

The Young People's Society of Trinity United church met on Monday evening with an attendance of 110. The social committee had charge of the programme. Among those present were the officers of the Dundas Grenville Young People's Association of whom Jean Scott, Ethel McMillan and Willis Robinson gave short addresses on their work.

An orchestra consisting of Olive Casselman, Madge Campderros, Marjorie Hanna, Harold Williamson, Jack Fulton and Rodney Hummel, supplied the music for the evening. A short play was presented by Lillian Riddell, Harry Allison and George Riddell. Jack Cross read the first edition of the "Young People's Recorder." This paper was like any other newspaper of to-day, containing Christmas Greetings, a Dorothy Dix section where the young people of Chesterville sought advice; a Lost and Found column, advertisements, poems, an editorial, Mainly About People, etc. As may be imagined, this was very amusing and entertaining.

The meeting closed with "God Save the King."

Christmas Decorations and the Danger of Fire

To the Fire Chief has come the following notice which has also gone out to all retailers emphasizing the fire hazard associated with Christmas decorations. We are reprinting it so that the timely advice may be widespread.

"Following our usual custom at this season of the year, I beg to draw your attention to the danger to life and property from Christmas decorations, scenery, cotton to represent snow, etc. Displays of this nature, and the lighting arrangements in connection therewith, add very considerably to the ordinary risks of fire.

I would also point out that should an accident of the kind occur in a crowded store or meeting, the rapid spread of fire in such inflammable material is almost certain to occasion a panic with attendant risks to life and limb. A few simple precautions may reduce the danger to a minimum and these should be considered essential where large numbers of people and particularly children are to be gathered.

See that inflammable material is clear of and not hung over heating and lighting devices, steam pipes, stove pipes, electric light bulbs, etc.

See that your electric circuits are properly fused and not overloaded by the addition of temporary lights.

Examine your fire extinguishing appliances and see that they are sufficient, in good order, and readily accessible.

See that all exits are plainly marked and not obstructed.

Have all temporary decorations removed and safely disposed of as soon as they have served their purpose.

Remember that nothing can render these displays absolutely safe, and that if accidents are not to mar the festive season, constant vigilance and care must be exercised.

GIVING THE BEAR A HINT.

"SOME kettle, I'll say!" remarked the tenderfoot as he inspected the utensil that his guide was scouring. "Pure cast-iron half an inch thick and weighs half a ton!"

"That kittle was made when men et strong vittles an' needed somethin' strong to cook 'em in," replied the old-timer. "Hulled corn, hominy, maple syrup, b'iled dinner, b'ar's meat and soft soap—I've seen 'em all in this old kittle. No, not all at once! My great grandad brought that kittle on his back when he fust come into the wilderness, an' up to when I was a boy folks used to borrer it fer ten miles around.

"I'll never forgit one trip I made after that piece of iron," continued the old-timer as he hung the kettle on the branch of a tree. "A family that lived 'bout five mile away had it. Ma wanted to make some bean porridge or somethin' an' sent me to fetch the kittle home. 'Twas late in the fall, so the days were short. I had my gun along and fooled round huntin' as boys allus do, an' I got ketched in the dark comin' home. Then it begun to snow, an' I got turned round entirely. I finally made up my mind I'd got to sleep out.

"Wal, I was stubbin' along through the snow when I run up agin a fallen tree trunk. Feelin' around it, I found 'twas holler at the butt, an' I says to myself, 'I guess this'll do fer a tavern, only I'm afeared they don't set a very good table.' And in I went. I found plenty of room, an' I must have crawled in more'n twenty foot or so before I hit the back end. 'Twas nice an' warm in there, and I was jest gettin' sleepy when I felt the tree trunk begin to shake, and somethin' come a-crawlin' into my bedroom!

"It worked along till 'twas right near me an' then settled down with a satisfied grunt. 'Wal,' I says to myself, 'I sure am bottled up now with a b'ar fer a stopper!'

"'Twas 'bout time fer b'ars to den up fer winter. I didn't hardly think this chap had gone to bed fer good, but he might stay fer a week, an' I was liable to get hungry. I might have shot him, but he was wrong end to, and 'twas perty close quarters.

"Finally I got an idea. I'd gone in draggin' the kittle arter me, so 'twas between me and the b'ar. I had a full horn of powder, an' I poured it all in the kittle an' put the cover on. Then I set up as well's I could with my feet braced ag'in the end of the hole an' the kittle layin' on its side with the bottom agin my back an' the cover agin the b'ar.

"I had to work perty careful, I can tell ye. Then I lit a match, reached round an' dropped it in the kittle—I'd left the cover open a mite on the top side. I didn't b'lieve the old kittle would bust; I 'spected she might kick a leetle, and it seemed to me the b'ar might take the hint and leave there sudden-like. Wal, sir, right after I dropped that match I got the durndest jolt I ever had in my life. I never realized before that powder was so quick actin'.

"The smoke made it kind of close in the log, an' I couldn't feel the b'ar, so I crawled out. The moon was up then, so I could see somethin'. He'd left a good plain trail right off down a steep hill, an' jest as I got started to foller it I heard some one yell an' found 'twas dad. You bet I wa'n't sorry.

"It seemed he an' maim was settin' before the fire when they heard somethin' that sounded like a thunder clap, and while they was a-wonderin' about that—whoosh, smash, slam-bang! a b'ar bust the kitchen door in an' lit ker-wollopse under the table with his neck broke! They was some s'prised, but they had an idea 'twas some of my tricks; so dad come out to look for me.

"The log I'd crawled into wa'n't more'n a quarter of a mile from home an' the butt happened to be sighted right for the house. That was the strongest mess ever cooked in the old kittle, an' I guess it'll stand makin' a rabbit stew for supper. Suppose we try it."

First Boxing Manager: "Now, at the end of the second round your man hits mine on the chin, and he goes down for the count."

Second Manager: "Now, Bill, make it the eighth or ninth; we gotta play fair with the public."

Gossip: "Remarkable type, our host—quite self-made. He can't speak six words without betraying his Cockney origin."

Foreigner: "I understand. He has what you call kissed the 'blimey stone' no?"

OLD-FASHIONED WAY TO COOK CHRISTMAS TURKEY

THERE are many excellent ways of cooking and stuffing the Christmas turkey, but the one described has the advantage of simplicity according to time-honoured custom. When the turkey is drawn and cleaned, the inside is rubbed with salt and pepper and stuffed with dressing of the old-fashioned sort which long experience has proven most satisfactory. The recipe for this sage and onion dressing is:—

- 2 cups soft bread crumbs
- 2 cups cracker crumbs
- ½ cup melted butter,
- 1½ cups scalded milk
- 2 eggs slightly beaten
- 3 onions (medium) finely chopped
- 2 teaspoons powdered sage or poultry dressing
- 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon pepper
- ⅛ teaspoon celery salt

Melt the butter in hot milk, add the slightly beaten eggs, pour over the bread crumbs. Add the onions and other seasonings. Then fill the cavity with this dressing, and also the cavity under the skin of the neck where the crop was removed. When completed, sew up the opening, taking care to draw the skin over the neck and tie it.

Truss the turkey by forcing the tip of each wing back of the first wing joint triangular shape, and tie the ends of the legs to the tail. Place the turkey in the roasting pan so that the back rests on the pan and the legs on the top. Dredge with flour and sprinkle with salt and pepper and place in a hot oven. When the surface of the bird is well browned, reduce the heat and baste every 15 minutes until the turkey is cooked. This will usually require three hours, depending, of course, on the size of the bird. For basting melt four tablespoons of butter or bacon fat in a half cup of boiling water. Pour this into the roasting pan. Add water when this evaporates, so as to keep a sufficient amount for basting. Turn the bird several times during the roasting, so that the sides and back as well as the breast will be browned. When it can be easily pierced with a fork, remove the turkey from the roasting pan, cut the strings and pull them out. When garnished, the turkey is ready to present a regal repast.

SCOUT CODE ABOVE INDIAN CASTE

A further tribute by the Chief Medical Officer to the work being done voluntarily in the quake-destroyed city of Quetta by Indian Rover Scouts: "Yesterday I went in the morning to watch a group of Rovers take a sweeper's body from a house. The sweeper had been an outcast yet the Rovers, high caste Hindus and Mohammedans, did the work which the authorities did not desire to ask the soldiers to do. It was a magnificent effort on the part of the Scouts." Photographs of the Rovers at work show them, in gas masks, carrying bodies from the wreckage, digging graves for hundreds of victims, and giving a last salute to the unknown dead.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

—By—

MISS HELEN LACEY, B.H.Sc.

LAST MINUTE HINTS FOR CHRISTMAS.

ALTHOUGH such things as Christmas puddings, fruit cakes and cranberry jelly can be prepared well in advance of the actual Christmas season, there are certain delicacies that cannot be made until almost the day before Christmas.

CHRISTMAS COCKTAIL.

- 2 cups cranberries
- 2 cups water
- 2 whole cloves
- ¾ cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice

Wash cranberries and cook with the two cups of water and the cloves. When tender, strain thoroughly. Add sugar to the liquid and cook long enough to blend thoroughly. When partly cooked, add lemon juice. Serve with small ice cubes if possible.

Serve this cocktail as a beginning for your Christmas dinner.

RASPBERRY COCKTAIL.

If you plan to serve cranberry jelly or sauce with the turkey on Christmas, you will not want to begin the meal with a cranberry cocktail. This raspberry cocktail has all the requirements as far as colour is concerned and you may prefer the flavour, as it is excellent.

- 3 cups orange juice
- 1 cup lemon juice
- ¾ cup sugar
- 1 cup raspberry juice
- 1 quart water

Make a syrup of the sugar and the water. Boil five minutes. Cool and add fruit juices. Serve ice cold in glasses, adding cracked ice if desired.

This recipe will make 2½ quarts.

CHRISTMAS SALADS.

Salads are often included on the Christmas menu nowadays. A jellied salad can be made the day before and so is ready to just turn out on crisp lettuce leaves a few moments before serving.

JELLIED PINEAPPLE SALAD.

- 1 package lemon jelly powder
- 1 cup shredded pineapple
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 cup boiling water
- ¼ cup blanched browned almonds
- 1 orange, diced

Add boiling water to the jelly powder. Stir until dissolved, add lemon juice and pineapple and cool until it begins to stiffen. Stir in chopped burnt almonds and diced orange and pour into moistened moulds to chill.

Unmold just before serving on crisp lettuce leaves and garnish with whipped cream dressing and a small piece of maraschino cherry.

GRAPEFRUIT SALAD.

Individual grapefruit salads served after the meat course will touch the spot.

Peel grapefruit and remove sections whole. Arrange like the petals of a daisy on crisp lettuce. Place a teaspoon of grated cheese or a small ball of cream cheese rolled in chopped nuts at the centre to carry out the idea of a flower. Serve with cream salad dressing.

A small piece of maraschino cherry on each grapefruit petal will add a touch of colour.

LITTLE ENGLISH CHRISTMAS CAKES.

Is your cookie jar filled? If not, try this recipe. It is a large one and as the cookies keep well your worries about small cakes will be at an end for a while.

- 2 cups light brown sugar
- 2-3 cup butter
- 2-3 cup sour milk
- 3 eggs
- 1 teaspoon soda
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon cloves
- 1 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 cup raisins
- 1 cup nut meats
- ¼ pound citron peel
- Flour to stiffen

Cream the butter, add the sugar, add beaten eggs; mix well; add sour milk. Mix soda, salt and spices with the nut meats, raisins and citron peel dredged with flour and add to the first mixture; add flour to stiffen. Drop very small teaspoons of the batter on a greased cookie tin far enough apart so they will not touch when baked. Brush with sweet milk and sprinkle with granulated sugar just before putting in the oven.

—Merry Christmas—

When cakes stick to the bottom of the pan and refuse to come out, turn the pan upside down and lay a cloth wrung out of water on it and allow to stand thus for a few minutes. After such treament the cake usually falls from the pan.

* * * *

A variation of your favourite fudge recipe can be had by adding a few chopped dates just before beating.

* * * *

To prevent baked custards from becoming watery, always place in a dish of hot water and always use a slow oven.

* * * *

To make muffins without holes or tunnels (as they are called) do not beat the batter. Mix just as little as possible. Muffin batter should have a lumpy appearance before baking.

Questions should be addressed to Miss Helen Lacey, Chesterville Record.

"I told the doctor about my absent-mindedness."

"What did he say?"

"Asked for his fee in advance."

Mountain Guide: "Be careful not to fall here, it's dangerous. But if you do fall, remember to look to the left. You get a wonderful view."

Association Officers Address Trinity United Young People

The Young People's Society of Trinity United church met on Monday evening with an attendance of 110. The social committee had charge of the programme. Among those present were the officers of the Dundas Grenville Young People's Association of whom Jean Scott, Ethel McMillan and Willis Robinson gave short addresses on their work.

An orchestra consisting of Olive Casselman, Madge Campderros, Marjorie Hanna, Harold Williamson, Jack Fulton and Rodney Hummel, supplied the music for the evening. A short play was presented by Lillian Riddell, Harry Allison and George Riddell. Jack Cross read the first edition of the "Young People's Recorder." This paper was like any other newspaper of to-day, containing Christmas Greetings, a Dorothy Dix section where the young people of Chesterville sought advice; a Lost and Found column, advertisements, poems, an editorial, Mainly About People, etc. As may be imagined, this was very amusing and entertaining.

The meeting closed with "God Save the King."

Nettie's Kind of Folks

"WASN'T that Charlie Folsom that you were walking up with this noon?" Mrs. Hovey asked her daughter, Nettie.

Nettie nodded. She had pushed away her plate and was regarding with interest the crowning feature of the noonday meal — a double-decker strawberry shortcake.

"What'd he say?" pursued Mrs. Hovey as the sacrificial knife hovered over this culmination of her morning's labours.

"Say?" repeated Nettie absently. "Oh, he said that Fanny would be home week after next; his aunt had written, and she's coming, too, to visit the Folsoms."

"It beats all," observed Mrs. Hovey bitterly, "how some folks has time to visit. I ain't been a-vistin' since that time I went to Wellport to my Aunt Sereny's funeral, and that's—"

"Come, come!" urged Mr. Hovey impatiently. "Carve the possum, carve 'im!"

Mrs. Hovey gasped ruthlessly, and the scarlet juices laved the satiny crust. When she had served the impatient Mr. Hovey with a generous piece, she finished her interrupted remark:

"Five years ago come August."

"They had no more funerals," said Mr. Hovey.

"I got cousins in Wellport," Mrs. Hovey continued, sampling the shortcake critically; "but how'm I to know if they're alive or dead?"

"Write to 'em," suggested Mr. Hovey. "You'll know if they answer, and you'll know if they dont."

"Nettie," asked Mrs. Hovey eagerly when the epigrammatic Mr. Hovey had taken his departure, "did you ever think it might be him?"

"Him?" repeated Nettie, mystified. "What do you mean, ma—who might be what?"

Mrs. Hovey lowered her voice.

"Charlie Folsom!" she whispered. "The mysterious unknown!"

"Charlie Folsom!" exclaimed Nettie. "Mother, you're dreaming!"

"The silk stockings, and the Christmas box that time you was clerking in the city, and the printed silk scarf, and the blue book"—by which term Mrs. Hovey was wont to designate the blue morocco Lucile that had been her daughter's latest Christmas gift—"were they dreams?" demanded Mrs. Hovey.

Nettie patted her mother's plump shoulder. "Now don't go to getting notions into your head!" she said gaily.

"Why shouldn't it be Charlie?" her mother challenged.

"It just isn't Charlie, for one thing," said Nettie. "And for another, I don't want it to be."

"May you know some one you would like it to be!" suggested Mrs. Hovey jealously.

"Maybe I do," Nettie admitted. "But it wouldn't do to say till he has told me."

"All I got to say," returned her mother, with heavy dignity, "he's taking his time!"

Nettie was obliged to concede that point. The gifts she had received at Christmas for the past four years had borne the sole inscription, "From a Friend." Nor did the long intervening months supply the least inkling who that mysterious friend could be.

On her way down to the Ladies' Outfitters, where she worked, Nettie stepped into the bookstore; she had a few minutes to spare, and she was in search of a modest graduation gift. The counters were checkered with varicoloured volumes, and through the shining glass of the show case gleamed the delicate covers of gift books. The proprietor stepped affably forward; he was a wizened little man, like a thin, duodecimo volume that had received hard usage.

Nettie's eyes, moving over the lumes beneath the glass of t case, suddenly widened covered the Lu inscribed simply "From a Frend." In a sudden illuminating moment Nettie saw the gifts in a new light. There was the pair of green silk hose that year when the Spicers' Christmas had run to stockings; there was the box with its homemade dainties, the winter that she had been working in the city; there was silk scarf printed with blue flowers—the nearest thing to a floral offering that Jed had ever made; and there was the blue morocco Lucile. Perhaps that last gift had been instigated by the known literary proclivities of the Spicer family.

"Anyway," thought matter-of-fact Nettie, "it's only fair to acknowledge my Christmas gifts, and I'll do it this very night."

It was early in June. In the dusk, the flowers in her mother's little round flower beds seemed as vague and as motionless as those prnted ones on her scarf. Nettie, composing her Christmas acknowledgments in the ordered daintiness of her room, herself a very pink of neatness, passed a distracting moment of consideration. She did not know how to begin her note. "Dear Mr. Spicer" sounded too formal, and "Dear Jed" too intimate —at least just yet. "Call him 'Jed,' as you always do," whispered Nettie's mentor, her young common sense. So Nettie wrote:

> I want to thank you, Jed, for the pretty Christmas remembrance you sent me. I have enjoyed Lucile, and I would have acknowledged it sooner if I had known it was you. Your friend,
> Nettie Devore.

The slight ambiguity of the last sentence did not trouble Nettie, who was not at all concerned with rules of rhetoric, but merely with those of generous appreciation. The whole note read very convincingly to her (she had decided it wiser at this time to say nothing of those earlier gifts), and she sealed, stamped and addressed it in her friendliest spirit.

Jed read Nettie's note of thanks at noon on the following day; the Spicer family, with the exception of Fanny, the elder daughter, who was attending school at a distance, were assembled at that hour. Throughout dinner, although Evalina had set her curious wits to work and Mr. Spicer was mildly inquisitive, Jed maintained a determined silence as to the contents of the dainty communication. Mrs. Spicer complacently bided her time.

At the end of the meal Jed retired to his room and a moment later Mrs. Spicer received her summons. She gave Mr. Spicer and Evalina a compelling look and vanished.

"Maw," said Jed, "here—read this!" He thrust Nettie's note into her hands.

Mrs. Spicer took the dainty sheet of paper between a pinch of gingham apron, adjusted her spectacles and silently perused it.

"If that ain't just like Nettie!" said Mrs. Spicer admiringly. "That's what I like most about her—she's fair."

"What do I do?" asked Jed helplessly.

Mrs. Spicer considered. "If I was you, Jed," she counselled, "I should just happen in at Nettie's, friendly like for a chat."

"And then what?" pursued Jed eagerly.

Mrs. Spicer gave him a knowing look. "Nothing 'tall—'cept just to let things happen."

"I'll do it this very night!" declared Jed, the man of action.

But when the others had gone about their various occupations, Mrs. Spicer took down her huge dishpan, deposited therein a cake of soap and a handful of borax, made a suds, and proceeded to do up Jed's Sunday shirt. Her heart sang with joy above her homely task.

"One thing " she said to herse even outg whose habit of mind would not permit her to enjoy unalloyed happiness, "that swing ought to be oiled; it squeaks terrible!"

"That ain't the swing; it's the crickets," remonstrated Mr. Hovey comfortably.

"I guess I can tell a swing from a cricket, if some folks can't!" said Mrs. Hovey distantly.

Jed had been pleasantly aware of the crunching of Mr. Hovey's rockers and the creaking of Nettie's swing. The warm, fragrant night, and the drowsy night sounds, the yellow flare of light in a neighbouring window, the shadowy passers-by—all made up a homely symphony through which even the familiar motif of Mrs. Hovey's complaint ran like a queer minor melody.

Presently Mrs. Hovey rose and went inside. There followed a clinking sound, as of glass and ice, a spurt of water from a faucet and a vigourous stirring, as of a stout silver spoon. When she reappeared, she bore a great pitcher of lemonade; Mrs. Hovey, no less than Mrs. Spicer, possessed the mother instinct. When she went away, she prodded Mr. Hovey significantly.

Mr. Hovey rose reluctantly. He was not a man of vision. A fiercely whispered controversy sifted out through the screen.

"Why'n't you say so, then," growled Mr. Hovey, "and not prod and nudge and badger a man out'n his chair? Where do I set?"

"We'll go and visit the Spicers!" decided Mrs. Hovey, with triumphant inspiration.

Jed was saying, "But, Nettie, I—I —was afraid to own up. You were so —so—"

"Go on, Jed," urged Nettie encouragingly.

"So pretty!" blurted out Jed.

"Of course I'm pretty," said Nettie in matter-of-fact tones, much as she would have said, "I am quite well, thank you." "I'm not clever like Fanny or gifted like Evalina; we must just take the gifts as they come, and this happened to be mine." She smiled reassuringly. "But it's fast colour, Jed; it'll wash, only of course, after a long, long time, it'll fade a little Jed."

Jed could not think of what to say to that; so, in accordance with his usual and eminently successful method, he said nothing. For had not his long silence vindicated itself? It had taken Nettie all of those four years to know herself, and to know Jed, and also, perhaps, to realize how imperceptibly romance merges into everyday happiness.

Meanwhile the ancient bond between the houses of Hovey and Spicer was being bonded anew.

"D'ye remember," mused Mrs. Hovey, "the time when it seemed like Nettie didn't have congenial company, and Jed spoke up,—he was washin' up at the sink,—'Why don't she get intrusted in her own kind of folks?'"

"Sho! He never did!" exclaimed Mr. Spicer delightedly.

"Good enough!" approved Mr. Hovey.

"Jeddie was always fond of Nettie," apologized Mrs. Spicer, in view of this apparently heartless statement.

"Well," finished Mrs. Hovey oracularly, "she done it!"

"Just plain, common, everyday kind of folks, we are," declared Mr. Spicer.

"That's where Nettie showed sense," commented Mr. Hovey.

"Our kind of folks," said Mrs. Spicer, with a great surge of generous feeling that seemed to include the whole world.

Mrs. Hovey's ethics prescribed a proper solemnity for such occasions; so she silently mopped her eyes. Perhaps she, too, had been learning during those four years. and the handkerchief flirting at the corner of her eyelids may really have been waving farewell to those airy and inconsequent dreams that had vanished before a real and everyday happiness.

day will keep on doing so. Such regularity is discouraged by failure to heed promptly the call of nature; it is encouraged by a regular visit to the toilet at exactly the same time every day regardless of any urge to empty the bowel.

Laxatives may empty the bowel, but laxatives will never overcome constipation. Indeed they encourage constipation because they train the bowel to depend upon the stimulation by a drug instead of having a normal evacuation. The way in which people turn from one laxative to another shows how laxatives gradually lose their effectiveness as the bowel becomes accustomed to the particular drug in the laxative.

Next to regularity of toilet habit as a means to secure regular elimination come diet and exercise. Many people are helped by using more water. A glass or two upon rising and between meals is a good habit. It is not advisable to fill the digestive tract with a lot of indigestible roughage, but most people do require a reasonable amount of bulk in the diet. This is best secured by eating freely of fruits and leafy vegetables which contain a fair amount of fibre.

The abdominal muscles must be used if they are to be kept strong. This may be accomplished through your work or else such exercises as call these particular muscles into play. Defeat constipation with habit, diet and exercise. It can be done if you persist.

Teacher: "Tommy, come up here and give me what you've got in your mouth."

Tommy: "I wish I could—it's the toothache."

"What did your son learn at college?"

"Well, he can ask for money in such a way that it makes it seem a privilege to give it to him."

MESSAGE FROM HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR GENERAL WILL BE FEATURE OF SPECIAL TWO-HOUR CHRISTMAS DAY BROADCAST.—EIGHT CHOIRS ACROSS CANADA WILL SYNCHRONIZE IN SONG—OTHER DARING INNOVATIONS

A three minute-address by His Excellency the Governor General will be broadcast from Rideau Hall, Ottawa, over the national network of the Canadian Radio Commission and over the red network of the National Broadcasting Company in the United States, as part of an elaborate two-hour programme to be presented by the Commission on Christmas Day, at 3.00 p.m., E.S.T. The presentation, to be known as "Canada Celebrates Christmas," will span the continent from Halifax to Vancouver.

Important innovations will be attempted by the Commission during this programme. In one instance, especially, success will be assured only by split-second action on the part of engineers. The entire venture will be an experiment and if carried out as planned, listeners will hear what undoubtedly will be one of the greatest achievements in radio broadcasting.

Large choirs, one each at Halifax, St. John, Montreal, Ottawa, Winnipeg, Regina, Edmonton and Vancouver, will wait in readiness for the cue which will start them in synchonized singing of two carols, "The First Noel," and "Good King Wenceslas."

Children to Speak.

From one city in each of the nine provinces children, ranging from four to 12 years of age will engage in a two-way conversation with a Commission announcer at Ottawa. They will tell how they enjoyed Christmas, what it means to them, and what Santa Claus left for them. At Yamachiche, Quebec, at which place is located the Marconi Beam Wireless station, a message will be sent out to the world extending Christmas greetings on behalf of the people of Canada. It is expected that this message will be picked up by many operators. The broadcast will then switch to Edmonton, Alberta, where will be heard the landing of an airplane from the far north bringing mail and presents fr sons scattered through western inte Comm inte Ea broa

The Oldest House in Canada.

From Quebec, in the oldest house in Canada where, in 1759, Montcalm died will come a two-minute bilingual broadcast. An announcer will draw a contrast between its present occupants and their use of the house and the original occupants. Again the programme will speed onward, this time to Sydney, Nova Scotia, where a coal-miner, far below the level of the sea, will speak to the radio audience. Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, will follow with a two-minute broadcast of a service in a simple country church.

International Greetings.

At this time the vast red network of the National Broadcasting Company will become linked with the Canadian Radio Commission, since the programmes to follow will be of considerable international significance.

From Windsor, Ontaro, an American family will be heard passing the immigration office in their automobile. They will be on their way to visit relatives in Canada.

The Commission is now endeavouring to contact the father of a family who will be unable to be home for Christmas. He will speak, it is planned, from Ottawa and his wife and children, many hundreds of miles distant, will reply in a two-way conversation. At Winnipeg, Manitoba, on the River Park Slide, a microphone will bring to listeners the actual sound of a toboggan chuting down the slide, together with the screams and laughter of the riders. From the Canadian Club in the Waldorf-Astoria in New York City, will come a four-minute programme featuring the voice of some prominent Canadian. Several members of the club will be introduced and the proceedings will end with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne," which will be blended with the same song being sung by prominent members of an A club in Montreal.

May we take this opportunity of thanking our friends and customers for the continued patronage of another year and in wishing you the

SEASON'S GREETINGS

May the coming year bring health, happiness and prosperity to you and yours.

MOREWOOD UNITED CHURCH.

On Friday evening the Y.P.S. met in the church hall with a very fine attendance. Mrs. G. H. Smith had charge of the topic under discussion, "Home Missions," based on the work carried on in Manitoulin Island.

The pastor, Rev. G. H. Smith, gave for his morning message on Sunday morning, petition six in the Lord's Prayer, Matt. vi : 13—"Lead us not into temptation." When we pray this petition of the Lord's Prayer we do not pray to a God who is in the habit of leading His children into trouble and temptation for He never does this It is not God's will that any of us should suffer or be tempted, although these things, suffering, trouble and temptation are a part of life and no one escapes them. But God does not send them. On the contrary, He is ever on the side of scientific research and medical investigation which are seeking to alleviate human suffering and loss. It can be truly said of God that when we sorrow He sorrows, when we suffer He suffers.

The true meaning of this petition: "Lead us not into temptation," then, is as follows, (this is a prayer which we can pray instead of using the words of the petition, for in using this prayer we cover most of what this petition really means).

The Prayer—O Lord, grant us Thy help this day to avoid the many troubles that we bring upon ourselves by not crossing bridges until we come to them; and by our haste, thoughtlessness and indolence. Give us faith and assurance too, that strength sufficient for the task will be given us, when it comes, and if it comes.

"Give us strength too, to meet this day any troubles that may cross our path, sickness, accidents, losses and even death if it should visit our home.

"Give us strength, too, O Father, to bear whatever of persecution that may be our lot because of the convictions we hold, ever remembering that if we would be followers of Christ we must expect persecution.

"Give us strength this day, too, O Lord, to meet any temptation to sin. Give us the courage to go out and meet temptation and overcome it.

How much is implied in this petition, "Lead us not into temptation," and how much do we all need to pray it and really understand for what we pray—Com.

Pratt's poem on Roosevelt and the Antinoe than the ability to earn a million dollars or become a cabinet minister. These are things that will endure and give delight to future generations, while the works of politicians crumble to dust in a few years. As for our political heroes, we remember Hon. Frank Cochrane was regarded as one of the strong men in Canadian public life. Sir James Whitney once said of him that he had a backbone like a bar of iron. His most significant work, it seems to us, was to present us with Sir William Hearst as prime minister of Ontario, and the enthusiasm for this good deed has long ceased to be noticeable. We have heard the Hon Howard Ferguson spoken of in terms usually reserved for idols and saints and Hon. George Henry execrated. But how can you separate them? How can you praise the creator and abjure his creation? Mr. Henry was Mr. Ferguson's farewell gift to the people of Ontario; and who would say that Mr. Ferguson was the kind of man who would hand a friend a dud cheque just as he was getting aboard train?

Mr. Bennett, we are told, works 14 hours a day and does not play at all.

Bennett a Tremendous Worker

He does not know any games. His favourite recreation is reading. He knows hundreds of hymns by heart and has that sort of visual memory that enables him to have in his mind's eye the exact appearance of a line of print. His quotations, therefore, are exact, and a source of irritation to those whom he corrects. He has not many intimate friends, and certain peculiarities in his character, certain difficulties he finds in understanding the average man, may be traced to the fact that so much of his time has been spent in living in hotels rather than in houses. He does not readily forgive offences, but Mr. MacLean believes that those whom he does not forgive have done an injury to Canada as well as to the prime minister. It is very easy for him to identify a private critic as a public enemy. Nevertheless, Mr. MacLean had been a severe critic of several branches of government when Mr. Bennett chose him as his private secretary. He is not what would be called a strong party man, and there are long periods of time when he forgets that he is a Conservative, remembering only that he is a Canadian.

He is the most effective speaker in Canada and all his good speeches are delivered extemporaneously. The only ones he prepares exhaustively are those in which he finds it desirable to say nothing at some great length. And let us note that the happy phrase is not ours but his biographer's. He is generous personally and spends large sums annually and secretly helping young Canadians to a better education. "Once," we read, "a young doctor who had been thus assisted years before wrote and enclosed a cheque in full payment with interest for his tuition. Mr. Bennett returned it with a note and told him to help someone in his turn." He is a tireless worker, and though never athletic has a magnificent body, from which he draws inexhaustible supplies of vitality. He does not suffer fools gladly and is more apt to be impressed by the showy qualities of a man than by soldier gifts.

Best Speeches Unprepared

He is not a very good judge of character because of this defect, and is prone to set men at tasks that they are incapable of discharging. He listens to those he trusts rather than to those who are the acknowledged authority in their fields. He is a far less adroit politician than Mr. King, and particularly unhappy in his relations to the press. Mr. MacLean doubts if he has five friends among the editors of Canadian papers. He has had long training in saying "No," and seems rather to prefer saying it to friends than to opponents, and it is somewhat ghastly to find that one of his favourite quotations is "That man who fails while attempting to do right is more to be respected than he who succeeds in doing what is wrong" This we find difficult to reconcile with the statement that he has a keen sense of humour. We agree with a remark made by Mr. MacLean "If the Bennett Government is defeated at the next election—and modern democracies are poor judges of honest administration—it will be due to the complete failure of the Conservative party as now constituted to tell the people the truth at the right time and in language they understand." And we offer this on our own responsibility: This failure in turn is likely to be caused by the fact that the Conservative party is broke financially, while the Liberal party has a great war chest.
