Osborn---Hummell

Avery pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday afternoon, September 18th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Hummell when Feidella, their younger daughter, became the bride of Mr. John Charles Osborn, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Osbora of Ipswich, Suffolk, Eng. The house was tastefully decorated with an arch of palms, gladioli and asters in pastel shades. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Edward Tacey of Bishops Mills, Ont. The bride, who looked charming, was given away by her father, entered the living room to the strains of the wedding march "Sabbath Chimes," played by Mrs. Enos Munro, cousin of the bride. The bride wore a gown of white satin with lace and georgette trimmings with long tulle veil in cap effect trimmed with orange blossoms, she carried a bouquet of sunset roses and baby's breath and wore the gift of the groom, a necklace of crystals. The bride was attended by her elder sister, Miss Mae Hummell, who wore a gown of maize georgette with lace trimmings and carried a bouquet of red and pink roses. Mr. Donald Hummell, brother of the bride, acted as best man. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a white gold brooch, to Mrs. Enos Munro, pianist, a white gold brooch. Following the ceremony, refreshments were served by Misses Evelyn Merkley, Lera Smith and Verna Kittle.

Mr. and Mrs. Osborn left for a short honeymoon to Smiths Falls and Ottawa, the bride travelling in a costume of grey. On their return they will reside at the Atlantic Apts., 6022 Sherbrooke st., West, Montreal.

The out-of-town guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. Percy Hummell, Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Christie, Montreal; Miss Ruth R. Osborn, Montreal; Mr. Walter Osborn, Ottawa; Mrs. Minnie Johnson, Gouverneur, N.Y., and Mr. and Mrs. C. MacCullough, Ottawa.

Mrs. Robert Steven Passes at Cornwall

On Sunday morning, September 22, 1929, Henrietta Coulthart, beloved wife of Robt. Steven of Cannamore, passed away at the General hospital, Cornwall.

Mrs. Steven was born in Winchester township in the year 1864 and was the daughter of the late Jas. Coulthart and of his wife, Christina Steven. She was educated in Morrisburg High school and finally qualified for the teaching profession in which she spent several years. On the twenty-fifth of December, 1888, she was married to Robt. Steven by whom she is survived, together with three sons and four daughters. The sons are: Jay E., and Orvis K., both of Cannamore, and James A., of Northfield, Ont. The daughters are: Miss Christina, at home, Mrs. Hugh Ross, Finch, Mrs. Cecil Weaver, Williamsburg, and Mrs. Cecil Atwood, Prince George, B.C. She is also survived by one brother, Mr. Walter Coulthart, of Morewood, and two sisters, Mrs. Agnes Munroe, Chesterville, and Mrs. Christina Carlyle, Lethbridge, Alta.

The funeral was on Tuesday morning at ten o'clock and was largely attended by friends from far and near. Among those from a distance were Mr. Robt. G. Steven, Mr. James Colquhoun and Mr. Jas. McGibbon, of Dundee, Que.; Mr. John Ross, Powers Court, Que.; Mr. C. A. Govin, Trout River, Que.; Mr. David McGibbon, Mr Allan McGibbon and Mrs. Wm. Layott, of Cornwall; Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Carson and Mrs. Lottie Wood, Ottawa; Dr. and Mrs. McDougall, Russell.

The pall bearers were: Messrs. W. C. Hetherington, Ira Barrington, A. W. Reveller, Thos. McGregor, J. E. Faulkner and Hector Carruthers.

The service was held in Morewood United church with Rev. R. W. Armstrong officiating, who spoke on "The Meaning of Death," from the words, "No man dieth unto himself." Interment took place in Morewood Presbyterian cemetery.

The late Mrs. Steven was a devoted member of the United church and was interested in all phases of community life. She was held in high esteem by a very large circle of friends and will be greatly missed both in her home and in the community.

Grandmothers Entertained By Women's Institute

At the regular monthly meeting yesterday Chesterville Women's Institute was "at home" to the grandmothers of the community when a large number accepted the hospitality of the younger generation.

Mrs. Chamberlain, who is a guest in town, received the prize for reminiscences, in which she mentioned the, at that time, wonderful wedding trip of fifteen miles which she and her husband had taken by horse and buggy, in contrast to the continent-wide motor trips of to-day.

In a "Proverb" contest, Mrs. James Masterson and Mrs. James Smith were tied for first place, each receiving a prize.

Prizes were given to the two oldest grandmothers born in Chesterville, who were Mrs. John Munro and Mrs. Ebenezer Merkley.

Miss McGee read a very interesting early article by Laura Rose Steven in which the attention of the Institutes was brought to the very great injustice being done to the country women, when they could not drive horses along the roads without fear of meeting automobiles, at the sight of which the horses became unmanageable, consequently the women were compelled to remain at home. It was suggested that the use of the main roads beprohibited to automobiles.

Antiques belonging to Miss Harrison were used in the decorations of the rooms.

After community singing a very dainty lunch was served by the committee in charge—Mesdames Pankratz, F. W. Merkley, Lacey and Hughes and Miss Harrison.

Reception at Sunnyside

A very pleasant event took place on Thursday evening last at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Burd, when a reception was held in honor of their eldest son, Charlie, and his bride, who looked quite girlish dressed in pencil blue flat crepe. About eight o'clock the guests began to gather to spend another social evening and enjoy the pleasure of meeting one of their sons and his bride. The house was beautifully decorated with autumn blossoms, wedding bells and evergreens. About twelve o'clock the music and dancing ceased for awhile and about a hundred and thirty friends and neighbors were served with very dainty refreshments, after which dancing was kept up until the "wee sma'" hours of the morning. The bride and groom received many beautiful and costly gifts consisting of linen, cut glass, silver ware, cheques and furniture, showing the high esteem in which the young couple is held.

GOLDFIELD

Mr. Jas. Froats, Inspector of Public Schools, visited the school here the first of the week.

Mr. Malcolm MacLean, who attended Cornwall Commercial College, secured a position there this week.

Mrs. J. Pollock received the news of the death of her sister, Mrs. Samuel Johnston, of Hawthorne, Ont.

Miss Blanche McMahon, of Ottawa, is spending a few days at her home here.

Miss Margaret Nephew returned to Montreal at the end of the week.

Mr. Hector Gillies spent a few days the latter part of the week in Montreal.

Mr. McKinnon and Miss McKinnon and Mr. and Mrs. John Gauthier and children, of Alexandria were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McMahon the first of the week.

Properly Fitted Glasses Add to Your Comfort

Properly fitted glasses mean much to the profit and enjoyment of all ages. But to middle and old age this applies in a special way. As one grows older there is more time for reading and thought and less energy for physical work and athletic sports.

If in doubt as to the fit of your glasses come to Hunt's Drug Store, have your eyes scientifically examined, then enjoy the pleasure and profit of reading.

Make new friends in books and be the more prepared to talk intelligently with your friends.

Burd---Baker

A very quiet wedding was solemnized on Wednesday, September 18th, at the manse, Finch, when Miss Elsie Velma, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baker, was united in marriage with Charlie Burd, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Burd, both of Crysler. Rev. A. D. McIntyre performed the ceremony which took place at three o'clock in the parlor which was richly decorated with autumn bloom. The bride was accompanied by her sister, Miss Margaret Baker, nurse-in-training, Cornwall, while Mr. Carl Burd, brother of the groom, nobly did his part in acting as groomsman.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my dear mother, Mrs. George Summers, who departed this life Sept. 27th, 1928.

Days of sadness oft come o'er me,
Tears in silence flow,
For memory keeps you ever near me
Though you died one year ago.
Time may heal a broken heart,
Time may make the wound less sore,
But it cannot still the longing
For the one gone on before.
Dughter, Mrs. Willis Utman.

Rats Spreading West

A matter of 15 years ago rats had become a major nuisance in the Red river valley. They seemed to come from the south and the United States, where the annual damage from rats is estimated at $200,000,000, got the blame for the invasion. For some mysterious reason the rat menace vanished. There are still rats in the province but the trouble they cause is relatively slight. Now it is Saskatchewan that is complaining. The rats are moving westward across the neighboring province.

Moose Meat By Air

Proud of shooting a fine moose in Quebec, D. B. Chandler, an American sportsman, shipped 28 pounds of moose meat by air mail from Montreal to his home in Dallas, Texas. Officials of the general tourist department of the Canadian Pacific Railway looked after the shipment. This is the first time a hunter has used the air route to send a trophy home, they said. The head, which has fine antlers is being mounted by a Montreal taxidermist.

Oil Engines For Railways

A step which is regarded as the most significant in railway operation in many years has just been taken by the Canadian National Railways in placing in service a new type of locomotive known as the oil-electric. The new locomotive consists of an oil engine which drives an electric generator, the electricity in turn being used to propel the train. In a test run hauling a regular Canadian National passenger train from Montreal to Toronto the new engine is said to have behaved beautifully and came in exactly on time. No speed record was attempted, as the train was handled on regular schedule, but the engine is said to be capable of seventy miles an hour and develops two thousand six hundred horsepower.

Advantages claimed for the new oil-electric as compared with the steam locomotive include economy of fuel and operating expenses, absence of smoke and cinders, elimination of fire risk, and the immense saving which can be effected by doing away with all water towers and sources of water supply required by steam engines. Experts who witnessed the trial run believe that this type of locomotive marks a new era in railway development. Canadian National Railways are owned by the Government of Canada and operate the largest railway mileage under one system in the world.

Lillico---Gillies

A very pretty wedding of interest to many was solemnized on Wednesday, September 18th, at the home of Mrs. Catharine Gillies, Finch, when her youngest daughter, Ettie, was united in marriage with Robert M. Lillico, eldest son of William Lillico, of Hawthorne, Ont. Rev. Dr. Robert Johnstone, of Knox Presbyterian church, Ottawa, performed the wedding ceremony, which took place in the spacious drawing-room, richly decorated with autumn blooms and bridal streamers.

The bride, who looked charming in a gown of beige crepe romaine and lace with slippers and stockings to match, entered the room to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by her brother, Alexander, and was given in marriage by her brother Donald. She carried a bouquet of bridal roses and baby's breath and wore a dainty wreath of orange blossoms. She wore the gift from the groom, an emerald ring.

The bride was attended by Miss Sybella MacRae, R.N., of Montreal, who was becomingly dressed in flesh crepe romaine and carried a shower bouquet of gladioli and baby's breath in pastel shades, she wore the gift from the groom, a necklace of sun tan pearls.

Mr. John Ritchie, of Ottawa, was best man, and wore the groom's gift, a pair of gold cuff links.

The bride's gift to the groom was a white and green gold watch chain.

The bride's mother was dressed in french navy crepe and wore a corsage bouquet of snapdragon and pansies. The mother of the groom wore a dress of Elizabeth navy crepe with lace inset and a corsage of yellow roses.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. Jas. Anderson, sister of the groom, sang sweetly "O Perfect Love," accompanied by the bride's brother, Alexander, at the piano.

Mrs. Jas. Anderson received a necklace of pearls and Mr. Alexander Gillies a pair of white gold cuff links.

Following the ceremony, a buffet luncheon was served in the dining-room after which the young couple left on a motor trip to Niagara and Detroit.

The bride travelled in a costume of brown frisquette and brown tweed coat trimmed with mink, with shoes and hat to match.

Those present at the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lillico and Mr. Wm. Lillico, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. James Anderson, of Hawthorne; Mr. George Barrett, of Leitrim; Mr. John Anderson, Miss N. C. MacKay and Mr. John Ritchie, of Ottawa; Misses Sybella and Margaret MacRae and Mr. and Mrs. Ruggles Wood, of Montreal.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful gifts showing the high esteem in which the young couple are held.

Oil Fortune For Prince?

Reports are appearing in English newspapers that the Prince of Wales stands to make a fortune out of oil production on his High River ranch. Some newspaper reports have estimated the possible profits as high as £5,000,000. This is regarded here as sheer guesswork. The oil developments in the Turner Valley, which practically adjoins the Prince of Wales' ranch, in the last few years have been on a very large scale. Turner Valley now produces more oil than all the rest of Canada put together and production is increasing every month. Enough is known to justify the prediction that one of the great oil fields of America, if not of the whole world, is being developed there. The fact that the Prince of Wales' ranch adjoins the proven structure has given rise to the speculations as to the fortune which may await the royal rancher as a result of his investment in Alberta, some years ago. At present no wells are being drilled on the ranch but one is being drilled about half a mile away.

Time for the Small Town Communities to Wake Up

Are the public spirited business men of the small town communities, having many natural advantages, going to grasp the significance of the changing trend towards the decentralizing of industry with its resultant opportunities which are now in the formative stages? Will they realize and take advantage of the possibilities of an advancing economic situation with its accompanying geographical shifts of business enterprises, taking the first step forward by organizing Chambers of Commerce, which may seem impractical to those who have not given the problems facing industry today serious thought, but whose services through such organizations, made up of hustling members, fully alive to the present day opportunity, if rendered whole heartedly co-operative, consistently helpful and practical, ought to prove a boon of the utmost importance to the future welfare, development and prosperity of the small town communities.

Manufacture, which has heretofore centered in crowded cities, is seeking relief from congestion that seriously threatens the industrial existence of many manufacturers today. Eventually necessity will force certain industries to direct their attention to communities, geographically located to the source of raw materials or to the centralized distribution points for marketing manufactured products. Preliminary investigations are now under way for strategic locations, which have electric power available on a scale equivalent to that of the power supply of the metropolitan centres and adequate transportation facilities, advantages, now obvious, but which during the pioneer period of industrial experiments and growth, the small town communities were unable to offer industry. In the past factories have had to locate where the power could be obtained to operate them. When power supply was concentrated, a dense population developed around the power sites, creating a situation which has involved enormous expenditures of capital for transportation of raw and finished products, and forcing industry to centralize in densely populated manufacturing centres. Today the small town communities have power. Industry is no longer restricted. The trend, however, does not indicate that the settled industrial districts are to be abandonded and that large factories will be removed to smaller towns, but that the natural expansion of manufacture in the future will be directed into smaller industries scattered in territorial areas, economically able to serve industry. It seems the huge, inflexible plants are becoming more or less a handicap, as a result of the intense competition that has caused a steadily mounting rise in the costs of production and distribution. The general course of the times appears to be away from building large industrial units; to erect factories near raw materials; to build others, manufacturing semi-finished products nearer choice markets; to locate the main industries at strategic points with a view to effecting economies in operation, promoting also the welfare and contentment of labor. These changes in factory adjustment or erection, subdividing industry, will tend more or less to replace the construction of the extensively enlarged additions to the present big scale operations of the larger manufacturing plants.

The rising cost of living in the congested urban areas, the burden of taxation in the densely populated cities, the high costs of land for factory sites, uneconomic hauling, trade duplication, the expense of shipping materials in different stages of fabrication, back and forth by freight, as manufacture became concentrated, the daily disadvantages of a constantly growing congestion and other contributing factors adding to the production costs are awakening the executive heads of some of the more extensive industries to the more favorable conditions existing in the small town communities, such as lower land costs, lower taxes, lower labor costs, lower rents, the flexible transportation of the modern highways, the improved railway service, electric light and power facilities, cheaper living and better working surroundings.

With the development of these industrial possibilities in the agricultural sections, population will spread, town property and farm land increase in value, tax burdens are more equitably distributed, purchasing power is strengthened, better credit accommodations are available, farming methods are improved, a greater field is developed for local employment, besides the absorption of farm labor during slack seasons, a broader home market for a variety of farm products is then established, and many other advances essential to the up-building of a truly modern town take place with the establishment of industry. The tendency of industry to spread out and take root in the small town communities should be hailed as a Lifesaver, as a remedy, in part, to offset the recurring depressions in these farming regions of the past.

It now behooves the business men of the small town communities, which are favorably adapted for manufacture, to organize and through Chambers of Commerce become actively interested, wide awake in a business-like way, and welcome legitimate enterprise on its merit; to realize that localized prosperity is in the making as a result of the changing trend in industrialism. This movement seemingly indicates that it will develop impetuously within the next few years a new era in machine development, distribution of manufacture and re-location of population, relatively independent of the densely populated cities. In this advancement of industrial progress there will be many opportunities presented for acquiring industry and its consequent benefits, heretofore unparalleled in the history of the agricultural community.

Plunges From Sky To Cure Deafness

Hurtling earthward Sunday, from a height of 6,000 feet above Ottawa, failed to effect an immediate cure to a nine-year-old deaf-mute boy whose parents had enlisted the aid of pilots on the advice of the family physician. It is hoped by those concerned in the experiment, which is believed to be unique in Canada, that a series of such experiences may prove beneficial and restore his speech and hearing.

The subject of the aerial operation was Harry Hemphill, living at 263 Bell street. Arrangements were made with officials of the Ottawa Flying Club to have him taken for his first airplane ride in the hope that his afflictions might be overcome by the shock of riding in the clouds.

Captain L. E. Maynard, club flying instructor, was busy with student-pilots, so the task of taking the boy up fell to D. D. Findlay, of Carleton Place, a war-time ace and member of the club.

Little Harry did not know the reason behind his family's offer of a ride, but he was delighted with the prospect of going up in an airplane. Taken to 6,000, the machine dived at high speed in a series of descents, until it finally made a good landing.

The boy, taken from the passenger's cockpit, gave every evidence of having enjoyed the sensation, but he was still unable to speak or hear. Other trips may be arranged by his parents.

USE THE DIRECTORY
and avoid "wrong number"

TELEPHONE numbers are tricky things to remember. Often when you think you know a number you have really transposed the two inside figures. It is so easy to say 3264 instead of 3624! The result is that you get "Wrong Number". You are annoyed and so is the other person. You have wasted your own time and his.

It is safer and quicker to use the directory before you call a number, because "Wrong Number" is one of the chief causes of a million calls a day in Ontario and Quebec which go wrong — tie up traffic — cause irritation — block business.

Some of these are operators' errors, and some are mistakes by the person making the call. He may ask for the wrong number — he may speak indistincty and be misunderstood.

We want you to have the best possible telephone service. We are constantly striving to provide it by reducing our own errors and by improving equipment.* But it takes three people to complete a call.

Use the directory — speak slowly and distinctly — avoid wrong numbers — save time — help business efficiency.

To keep a step in advance of demand, and to improve facilities, will involve an outlay this year in excess of $27,000,000.*

Old-Age Pensions and Returned Soldiers

The old-age pension legislation of the Dominion has been supplemented by the necessary co-operative legislation in most of the provinces and persons of 70 years and over will, if necessary, receive some financial assistance in their declining days. But there is a class of men, many of whom have become prematurely aged by reason of their service to their country, who may not reach the legal age which would entitle them to benefit by this philanthropic measure at a time when they are in need of it. A great many of those who returned from the war apparently uninjured are beginning to feel the effects of the strain. Leaders like Earl Haig, who died last year at the age of 67, and Baron Van Horne, who died recently at 68, undoubtedly shortened their lives by their extraordinary mental efforts, but those under them suffered physically as well as mentally. Major-General Griesbach, at the annual convention of the Dominion Army and Navy Veterans' Association, very properly drew attention to the case of ex-service men who have grown prematurely old in consequence of intangible injuries received during the war, but for whom no pension scheme had been devised. The association tried, but unsuccessfully, to have the old age pension legislation so drafted as to embrace ex-service men at five years earlier than the age limit applied to the general public. This defect should be remedied: General Griesbach says, and as president of the association he is in a position to know, that many of these men are now and in increasing numbers likely to be, through no fault of their own, thrown upon the country without means of support before they reach the legal age of seventy. We believe that the country will endorse the proposition to lower by five years the old age pension limit for ex-service men if they need to take advantage of the scheme.

Truancy From School First Step to Crime

Truancy from school is the first step in the path of crime, according to Senator Roger B. Wales, of the New York Crime Commission, who addressed the American Prison Association in Toronto.

"I do not speak of the occasional truancy of the boy who skips school to see a ball game, but of the truant who is out of adjustment with his school life," the Senator said. "It may be because he has fallen a grade or two behind his friends, or it may be due to one or more of several other causes.

"Such a boy is adapted to something useful in life, but so far no one has ever found out what it is. Of course, not every truant becomes criminal, but most criminals were at some time truants."

The Mailman's Menace

Probing the death of a rural mail-carrier who was struck by an automobile on a provincial highway, a coroner's jury at Shelburne, Ont., has made a significant recommendation. The man was struck while he was delivering mail to a box on the left-hand side of the road. The jury's recommendation is that these boxes all be placed on the right-hand side in order to ensure the safety of the rural carriers. This, of course, is not a new subject for discussion. The attention of the department at Ottawa has, time after time, been called to the situation which now exists, the placing of boxes on both sides of the highway. The mailman is forced to follow a zigzag course in making his rounds, going from side to side of busy provincial highways. The department has apparently made no move to eliminate the menace. Perhaps it has not realized its seriousness. It is certainly to be hoped that the death of this man, and the clause in the jury's verdict, will prove to be the force which will bring about the needed change.

Wayside Shops And Assessments

Amherstburg Echo—The number of gas and service stations and wayside shops that have sprung up along not only principal but also remote highways, indicate that business is moving out from larger centres and locating in places along which the people they desire to serve are moving. And it doesn't require a second look to see that these little shops are busy during the summer season. The re-location of business, and its division into small units suggests the very interesting question of whether these establishments are eligible for business assessment.

The Square Deal

When the first merchant said "Your money back if you are not satisfied," he probably laid the foundation for the whole theory of what is called "service." By his confreres he was no doubt regarded as a radical or a bolshevik. The notion that after a bargain had been struck, the money paid over and the goods delivered, it would still be possible for the purchaser to repudiate the bargain and get his precious money back while the merchant received again his not so precious goods was revolutionary. There were those whose consciences prompted them to believe that it sounded the doom of trading since everybody would want his money back.

But as matters turned out, their alarms were groundless. Few people on thinking the matter over, were desirous of exchanging their goods for the money they had paid for them. They were glad to have the goods as the merchants were to have the money for them. Nowadays it is an accepted principle that a reputable merchant will refund the purchase price of goods if they prove unsatisfactory, it being understood that in the meantime the goods have suffered no more by usage than the money paid [illegible] thought of it before he did. But they only thought.

Keep foods safe below 50° the year 'round

GENERAL ELECTRIC Refrigerator

Uniform, efficient refrigeration is just as much a necessity in winter as it is in summer. Food, to be wholesome, must be kept constantly below 50 degrees (the danger point at which bacteria multiply rapidly) . . and above freezing point, as frozen milk, butter, eggs and vegetables are harmful.

For your health's sake install a General Electric Refrigerator. Then no matter how cold it is outdoors or how hot your kitchen becomes, food is always kept at the right temperature, and waste is eliminated. An easily accessible temperature control regulates the speed of freezing ice cubes or frozen desserts.

The General Electric Refrigerator gives you year-round refrigeration economically, automatically. Its hermetically sealed mechanism is mounted on top and never even needs to be oiled. Of the 300,000 owners not one has had to spend a single dollar for service or repairs.

Early to Bed and Early to Rise

What time do you get to bed at night? And—more piercing, this!—what time do you get up in the morning? The answers to these pointed queries will reveal almost as much as a study of one's handwriting, or the leaves in a tea cup, or the lines of the palm. The habits of a household in regard to sleep indicate rather effectively the character and occupation to be expected in its members.

It is really deplorable to find small children out of bed till all hours of the night. Once in a while, on the occasion of some special happening, it might be permitted, but altogether too many parents say, lightly, "Oh, no—Jean never goes to bed until we do. She just won't, that's all! She must be extra sensitive—she seems afraid when we put her to bed and leave her, so we never do. It doesn't hurt her. You can see she's not a bit tired or sleepy. And she never gets up in the morning till 9 or 10. She gets plenty of sleep."

We are counted very old-fashioned when we insist on the the day-time nap, the early-to-bed, and the reasonalbe time for rising in the morning. Yet it makes a great difference to children. It must. Of course they can get along in this other way—children are very adaptable, and their machinery is all new, and will stand a great deal. But presently come the difficult years of adolescence—and where is all that reserve of nerve force that should have been accumulating during the long, leisured years of childhood?

It is really a crime the way children are starved for sleep. Their own natural interest in events, and desire to participate in any festivity, will make it difficult enough in ordinary circumstances to get them to go to bed at proper hours, but when it finds a parental negligence to tolerate all sorts of indulgence, there is little chance of sensible discipline in this—or indeed in any—direction.

I know a mother who has one little girl—a child of five. Her husband is away from home a great deal, and the mother, because she feels nervous and lonely, keeps the child up at night with her until between 10 and 11, and during the day takes her about to any affairs informal enough to admit a child of that age. Why doesn't she get herself a busy pup or house cat or parrot—and let the child be a child instead of a watchdog and gramophone combined?

The child is also afraid of being alone; has a proper fit of shaking, crying and trembling when a thunderstorm comes on; declines to go into a dark room or clothes-closet or hall, because of hold-up men, burglars and other unchildish bogies. The mother has not only robbel that child of her rightful sleep—she has utterly destroyed the sweet childish serenity and faith in mankind that can never be recovered, and represent a loss beyond estimating!

The ability to lie down anywhere, amidst the ordinary movement and drop immediately into a deep and refreshing slumber is a priceless and not too common treasure. What it means in refreshment to the weary body and tense brain can be judged by those who are tortured night after night by slow, weary, restless hours which exhaust the frame already too greatly fatigued. Sleep is a habit—a good habit. It pays to cultivate it.

Every child up to school age should have an afternoon nap. It may be only 20 minutes—it may be one hour or two. According to the needs of his constitution the child will sleep, once he gets started. People say, "Why, what's the use of putting Bobbie to bed? He wouldn't sleep a wink—he would scream and scream until I let him get up." Or perhaps they declare the child would refuse to lie down—get up in spite of them.

Refusing is a habit, too, and when children find they can get their own way if they make fuss enough, is it any wonder they make the requisite fuss? Parents might see it from their own point of view—they too will get their own way if they insist sufficiently, and keep at it long enough. They give in—the youngster doesn't. And there you have it in a nutshell.

When parents decide that a certain line is right, then they are greatly to blame if they yield because of the howls and roars of a child. Singular number. Where the family includes a number of children there is not so much of this uproar-domination. One child frivoling about the premises until all hours of the night might be endured by indulgent parents—but who could stand three or four of them at it!

Recently a woman went to call on a friend who had spent the summer abroad, her small daughter accompanying her. "I just knew the trip would be ruined with that spoiled little tyrant along," declared the caller afterwards. "Why, all the time Lena was trying to describe her various thrills and delightful little side trips, that young scamp persisted in tooting a whistle some one had given her on board ship. She should have been in bed, taking her afternoon rest—a child of that age."

Rest—yes. Even if she did not sleep, the regular time for relaxation in the cool, darkened room would be a great benefit to her. And as to the mother—sometimes I wonder what mothers can do when they are never free of the distractions and interruptions of small children! When do they write their letters, and paint their chairs and cut out their dresses and entertain their callers? How can they attempt anything worth while unless they have some certainty of a little time free to carry it through?

As for the getting-up hour, it is largely ruled by the going-to-bed time. People who must be at work early, must be afoot in good time. The youngster who regularly has to turn out and go to the pasture field for the cows may yawn a bit at the washing and dressing end of it, but when he looks to the east and sees the mystery and beauty of the sunrise, or even the paling of the moon before the ruler of the day appears, and absorbs something of the still peace of the world at dawn, he is well repaid . . . And he will be ready for his bed at a reasonable time when the day is over!

Dressed Poultry Packages

For shipping dressed poultry to market the most popular package is the box holding one dozen carcasses. That is the opinion of Mr. F. C. Elford, Dominion Poultry Husbandman, as expressed in Bulletin No. 20 of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa. Standard boxes are made in different sizes so as to pack birds of different weights. It is recommended that such boxes are used and such packing employed as will ensure the birds fitting tightly, so as to avoid shifting about in the journey to the market

For birds weighing 2½ to 3 pounds the inside measurements of the shipping boxes are 19¾ inches by 15¼ inches and 4 inches deep, birds from 3 to 3½ pounds to be shipped in dozens require a box 21½ inches long, 16 inches wide and 4½ inches deep. Large, well finished birds weighing 4¾ to 5½ pounds require a box with outside dimensions of 26½ inches by 18 inches by 5¼ inches.

Whichever of these boxes is used should be lined with parchment paper and for fancy quality it is well also to wrap each bird in this paper. The appearance of the birds when the box is opened largely determines the prices that they will bring.

With dressed poultry as with many other articles of merchandise the pasteboard carton is taking the place of wooden boxes. Mr. Elford recommends a carton 6 inches high, 6 inches wide and 11 inches long for a 5 or 6 pound roaster, or two broilers.

Farming Fifty Years Hence

A vision of what farming conditions may be like some fifty years hence was presented by a veteran farmer in the course of an interesting interview with the Onlooker in St. Thomas Times-Journal.

"Some time ago while visiting with a farmer whose years put him in the class of those who are about ready to call it a day and retire from active work, and as is natural in such meetings, we soon fell to talking about farming in general, later confining our conversation to guessing what would be the conditions under which farming would be done fifty years from now," says the Onlooker. "My host was a mentally smart man, and his ideas on future farm conditions may be worth recording.

"'Everybody,' said he, 'can see farming as it is at present. The ranks of the regular farmers are growing thinner each succeeding year, due to various reasons, chief among which are the attractions of city life for the young folks, and the uncertainties of decent remuneration for the farmer's labor. Machinery, it is true, is taking the place of many men on the farms today, and no doubt it will increase in proficiency as the seasons roll by. But machiney can't run untenanted farms and most machinery cannot operate itself. I have been giving the matter considerable thought of late years, and there is one idea that persists in my mind about farming operations of the future, and if either of us could live long enough I think we should see something like this: Large corporations such as now conduct the manufacturing plants, chains stores, and the like, will interest themselves in the business of farming. Instead of a hundred or so acres under the direction of one farmer and what help he may be able to obtain as now prevails, thousands of acres will be purchased and operated under the directing head of a general manager. He in turn will have deparmental heads working under him, one for each deparment of the farming industry, such as live stock, swine, dairying, grain and vegetable growing, fruit cultures, and everything else that goes with farm life. Efficiency would be the slogan under which the whole undertaking would be operated. There would be no waste land lying around growing weeds. There would be no lost effort, no false moves, no uncertainties, no guesswork. The marketing of the finished product would be in the hands of a competent man who knew his business thoroughly, and each and everything grown or raised on such a farm would bring a maximum price. Regular hours, as far as possible, would be the order of the day, the latest and best machinery would make harvesting and planting rapid and thorough and the use of the latest scientific methods would be adopted to combat pests that attack fruit, grain and animals, and there would to some extent be methods adopted to fight the uncertainties of the weather.

With every department under a separate head, no one mind would forget many important details, neglect others and shelve still more till what appeared a more opportune moment. The man who handled pigs would have nothing else to worry about but pigs. The grain man and the fruit man would likewise be free to use all their energies on their one responsibility. And the market manager would take the chief worry off the minds of them all. What do you think of it?'

"I thought it so good I am passing it on. Who knows but the prophetic vision of this elderly farmer may appear in truth before we realize it. He assured me if he had his life to live over again on his farm he would devote more of his time to management, hire the necessary help at a decent wage and devote his own time to managing, marketing and taking care of the little details that take up so much of a farmer's time, and, while necessary, take valuable time that should be diverted to other channels. He claimed he had often lost money by forgetting details in the larger tasks, while occupied laboring at less important jobs.

"Farm life is undoubtedly changing. Pools and co-operative organizations are trying hard to secure for the farmer a decent figure for his labor and investment; governments are working and experimenting to educate farmers and their help so as to make farm life more enjoyable and profitable ,and notwithstanding it all, the great cry is being broadcast that farms are being vacated and the industry going backwards.

"Would the old farmer's prophecy prove a remedy?"

Radio Sets in Cells

In each of the 1,800 cells of the new extension at Sing Sing prison is a radio receiving set, after the manner of the ultra-modern metropolitan hotels. The installations have been made it has been officially confirmed, following reports by prison employees, and in the future convicts with terms of from two years to life may listen to concerts, to news of the outside world, sermons, and bedtime stories.

The guests of the State of New York may listen in, but they may not tune in. They must listen to what comes over the air from the central receiving station in the prison auditorium, whether the programme be to their liking or not. The privilege was extended after the new rules, curtailing motion picture theatre visits from seven nights a week to two, went into effect.

Johnny: Daddy, what made you marry mother?

Father: Oh, because I was a fool, I suppose.

Johnny: Poor mother!

Father: What? Why poor mother?

Johnny: For marrying a fool.
