Local Couple Celebrate 50 Years of Married Life

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Merkley Married At Chesterville, April 27th, 1887, By Rev. Mr. Knowles.—Received Friends at Home, Tuesday.

Tuesday of this week, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred. W. Merkley, of this place, was the scene of a very happy event when this well known and exceedingly popular couple celebrated the golden anniversary of their wedding, which took place on April 27th, 1887. Friends and relatives took advantage of the occasion to show the high esteem in which this ever-young couple is held in the community, which took the form of many handsome bouquets, silver and cut glass, telegrams and letters of congratulation, with an outstanding tribute from Mr. Merkley's former business associates, the firm of Frost and Wood, of Smiths Falls, who expressed their pleasure for the opportunity of showing their appreciation of an outstanding sales record to one of their staff who for 43 years had an unbroken record of achievement with the company. Mr. Cockshutt, of Brantford, and Mr. Vanexan, sales manager of the company, came in person to tender their felicitations on the occasion and to present to Mr. and Mrs. Merkley an exceedingly handsome five-piece silver service.

In talking over other days, it was remembered that on an occasion in 1912 a machinery delivery, products of the Frost and Wood Company, was made in Chesterville of no less than 155 pieces in the one day. Another high for Mr. Merkley was the sale of five car loads of farm machinery during one season.

It was also recalled that it is not all pleasure selling and delivering the machines. With everything all set the night before for the big delivery on March 15th, 1912, the worst snow storm within any local man's memory blew up and by morning every last machine was buried in snow and had to be dug out of the drifts.

When Fred. W. Merkley just fifty years ago took for his wife Catherine Dowd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Dowd, of this place, the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Knowles, pastor of the Methodist church, at the home of the groom's brother-in-law, James Cameron, who at that time lived on Mill street. For 12 years the young couple lived on their farm a short distance west of the village, moving to town 38 years ago to take up residence in the house which has since been their home.

Eight children were born of this union, two boys and six girls. Captain Earle Merkley was killed in the Great War; those now surviving being Ethel and Evelyn at home; Eva, Mrs. Jones, of Montreal; Pearl, Mrs. Kinsman, of Toronto; and Ida, R.N., of Iroquois Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Merkley have both been much interested in all community activities, the former at different times being a member of the municipal council and active in every project which promised for the welfare of the village. Mrs. Merkley's participation in the work of the former Methodist church and since in that of Trinity United church is well recognized and was fittingly remembered on Tuesday when members of the different societes called to pay their respects and presented a handsome bouquet of roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Merkley are both in good health and the community wish is that they long be spared to grace the village which has been their home for so many years.

Newlyweds are Honoured In Reception and Presentation

More than 125 members of The Boyne community and other friends attended a reception and presentation at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Ward Johnston, Monday night, in honour of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Johnston, who were married recently.

The couple were presented with a china cabinet and many other beautiful gifts on behalf of those present by Harold Merkley and Howard Kittle, after an address had been read by R. C. Dillabough, of Chesterville.

Mr. Johnston thanked his friends for their kindness.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Howard Kittle and Mrs. Harold Merkley, assisted by Mrs. Ward Johnston, Mrs. Hudson Johnston, Marjorie Holmes, Madeline Darling, Mrs. R. C. Dillabough, Oscar Olsen, Graham Durant, Harold Merkley and H. Kittle.

Carried First Rural Mail From Chesterville P.O.

Saturday last, death laid claim to a well known and familiar figure in this district when Hugh Robinson passed away at his home a mile west of Chesterville after an illness extending over some time. He was in his 82nd year and passed all his life in this district.

He was born at Grantley on the homestead where his son Mason now lives, and resided there until 1913 when he moved to Chesterville and was the first carrier of the mail on Route One when the service was instituted, continuing until his last illness.

In 1885 he married Margaret Hill, to which union were born four sons and two daughters: Wm. Z., Seattle, Wash.; G. Bernard, of Morrisburg; Claude H., Camrose, Alta.; Mason O., Grantley; Mrs. Lloyd Johnston, Edmonton, and Miss Gladys Robinson, Wetaskiwin, Alta. His wife passing away in 1909, two years later he married Hannah Smith, who survives together with Miss Helen, of Palmers Rapids, and Hubert, at home. Two brothers, Rev. Wm. J. Robinson, of St. Paul, Minn., and James A. Robinson, of Sangudo, Alta., also survive as well as 11 grandchildren.

The funeral held Monday afternoon in Trinity United church was very largely attended, when the service was conducted by Rev. R C. Tait, assisted by Rev. Mr. Cook, of Ottawa, and Rev. H. M. Beach, of Finch. A duet, "In the Garden," was sung by Miss Olive Casselman and Mrs. Allison Graham. Beautiful floral tributes were received from the Wife and Family, Will, Cathryne and family; Claude and children; Mason, Edna and family; Pearl and Galdys; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Shay, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Ward Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Shay, Mr. Howard Sullivan, Nellie and Lou.

Among those from a distance attending the funeral were: Mrs. Elmer and Bert Garland, Richmond; Mr. Eric Trimble and Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Trimble, Munster; Mrs. S. C. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Craig Hobbs, Mr. Ernest Webster and Mr. Wm. Hill, Ottawa.

The pall bearers were Messrs. Carman McIntosh, Acel Merkley, Bert Barrie, Wesley Fulton, Arthur Beckstead and John McMillan. Interment was made in Grantley cemetery.

"Black Horse" Keeper Reminisces

Tells of Experiences in Ottawa Fire at Ottawa Fair in January, 1914.

MR. JACK WAGG, formerly of Claremont, Ontario, one of the senior horsekeepers in the famous Dawes "Black Horse" stables, Montreal, was in the building at the Ottawa Winter Fair, in January, 1914, where 33 horses were killed. Wagg, who has been associated with horses all his life, was working for his father who was showing at the Fair. In those days the horse entries were so numerous that he estimates at least 300 more were exhibited than at the present time. This taxed the accommodation so much that every available inch of space was utilized for stalls.

Wagg had started, at five a.m., to prepare his horses for the ring, and, on several occasions, he had to go down to the boiler-room for hot water. His task completed, he decided to go for breakfast, knowing that his brother would take over from him at 8 a.m. On his way up the stairs to the dining-hall he nesitated and then turned back to make sure that each horse was properly covered. He had gone but a few yards when a terrific explosion took place. The noise and chaos was appalling. Flames leapt up, beams fell, splinters, smoke and dust were everywhere and to add to the confusion, hundreds of frightened animals were straining to get away. Wagg thought at first that an earthquake had occurred, but he afterwards learned the boiler in the building had exploded.

The force of the explosion was so great that it blew a mare, which was n a stall on the floor immediately above the boiler, right up through the floor above, out through the roof straight up into the air and she landed, a mangled mass, on some railings around a gallery inside the Coliseum.

The floor above the horse stalls was occupied by the poultry exhibit. Their crates were burst asunder; the poor birds immediately killed and, after the heavier material had fallen, a veritable storm of bloody feathers filled the air.

While none of Wagg's charges were injured, they had a herculean task in getting them out of the building. Screaming, straining, frightened animals were everywhere—horses, cattle, and poultry. Thirty-three horses were burned to death, or blown to pieces, and Wagg says that the sight of so many scared beasts will never leave his memory.

If Wagg had not returned to make sure that his own charges were comfortable, he would have met a fate similar to that of the poor animal that was blown through the roof. He lost a favourite Boston bull-terrier, however, and although he searched the building thoroughly for its remains, no trace of it was ever found.

Mr. Wagg says that whenever he sees anybody going into a horse stall smoking a cigarette, or carelessly throwing matches about, he always remembers the terrified efforts of those horses at Ottawa to escape.

That is why—to use his own words: "I have told all the boys here the story and that is why we are all so careful—our horses mean so much to us."

WANT A GOOD LAWN? HERE'S HOW TO GET IT

JUST AS SOON as the soil is dry and firm enough to walk upon after the snow has disappeared is the time to commence operations for ensuring a good lawn. The first thing to do is to remove all the dead grass by giving the lawn a thorough raking and attention should be directed to fixing up the bare patches by sowing fresh seed. The seed should be broadcast evenly on the bare patches after they have been raked to a depth of two inches. The seed should then be covered lightly with a sprinkling of fine soil and packed down firmly. The patches should be kept moist, but not flooded, for at least two weeks through the application of a fine spray, so that the seed is not disturbed in the newly seeded areas. When the time for cutting arrives, which is as soon as the grass is long enough to allow the mower to function properly, regularity in the process should be observed, and it is a mistake to allow the grass to grow over two inches at any time.

Reliable grass mixtures may be obtained from seedsmen but for those people who wish to mix their own, L. C. Young of the Dominion Experimental Farm at Fredericton who, as a Canadian authority on grasses, has lectured on home lawns in the United States, recommends for the average lawn a mixture of four parts Kentucky Blue grass and one part Red Top at the rate of three to four pounds per 1,000 square feet of lawn. If it is desired to include White Clover, one-eighth part should be added to the mixture. Where the above mixture does not give satisfactory results owing to local conditions, Rhode Island Bent Grass should be used at the rate of two to three pounds per 1,000 square feet. For shady areas, one-third the quantity of Rough-Stalked Meadow grass should be added. Failure to grow grass in shady places is due more often to conditions of low fertility and lack of moisture than to the shade itself.

Cheese Outlook is Bright At Start of Local Board

Price of 12⅞ For First Sale is Three Cents Above First Sale in 1936, Auguring Good Season.

The first sale of cheese at the re-organization meeting of the Winchester Cheese Board, held there on Saturday night, at a price of 12⅞ cents per pound, three cents higher than the price paid at the first meeting a year ago, was taken to indicate that the cheese industry in Ontario was commencing one of its most successful years.

With no depressing surplus on the British market, the unusual demand for fodder cheese and the steady improvement in the quality of the product was said to augur well for a continued rise to peak prices in 1937 by various buyers who addressed the meeting.

I. Preston McIntosh, of Winchester Springs, presided and was re-elected chairman. The meeting was unanimous, also, in returning to office John Thompson, South Mountain, first vice chairman; Frank D. Millen, VanCamp, second vice-chairman, and Walter Moffatt, Winchester, secretary-treasurer.

According to the annual report, the Winchester board transacted business during 1936 to the amount of $240,200 and had the highest price at one sale when the bid was 15 1-16 cents a pound.

Home Improvements on Instalment Plan.

THE Home Improvement Plan is extended to every home owner who is a reasonably sound financial risk.

You are a reasonably sound financial risk as broadly defined for the purposes of the Home Improvement Plan if you can pay in monthly instalments over a period of three years the loan which you obtain from a bank to be spent on repairs or improvements to your home.

If, for example, you borrow $300 for some job you want done on your house, you can arrange to repay it in one year, if you wish, and the limit of time for repayment is three years.

Adoption of Instalment Plan

It is simply the instalment plan of buying repairs or improvements to your home. In that respect it is virtually the same well-tried plan by which thousands of people buy automobiles, refrigerators, furniture, radios, and so on.

If you want to make certain repairs or improvements that cost $300 you are given three years to repay the loan you get from a bank. In that instance the monthly instalment is slightly more than $8, something over $2 a week.

If you can pay $2 a week plus the interest charge of 6.32 per cent, the lowest rate of interest ever charged for a service of this kind, you are a reasonably sound financial risk for the loan of $300.

Red Tape Eliminated

The banker and the tradesman, whether he be carpenter, plumber, tinsmith, bricklayer, electrician, and so on, probably know your reputation for honesty, and you will find it an easy matter to get the loan on your own personal note, or promise to pay the money. You don't need an endorser, and there is no question of a mortgage.

Red tape is almost entirely eliminated by the Home Improvement Plan.

As has been explained, the Plan is not intended for the person who is unfortunately out of work, and hasn't a steady wage, salary or other income.

If you can assume the obligation, you can borrow up to $2,000 on repairs and improvements to any one property.

"Can I get a loan if there is a mortgage on my property?"

The answer to that question is "Yes." However, if there is not only one mortgage, but also a second one, and your equity in your house has just about vanished, the banker will have to give your application very serious consideration, and it may be in that case that the loan might be refused.

The ordinary mortgage arrangement does not prevent you from taking advantage of the Home Improvement Loan.

Tax Arrears No Obstacle

"I haven't got all my taxes paid; a little behind on last's year's instalments. Can I get a loan in that case?"

And again the answer is "Yes."

The mortgaged house and the other house with arrears of taxes against it are not excluded from the Home Improvement Plan.

The Wanakita C.G.I.T. met at the home of Miss Sybil Dillabough on Saturday, with the president, Gretta Fetterly, in charge of the business meeting and the pianist was Mary McCaskill. The devotional exercises were conducted by Ruth Swerdfeger, Marjorie Loughridge, Dorene Campbell, Rita Faulkner and Myrtle Thompson. A brief discussion on "Popularity" was held and several games were played. The hostess served a dainty lunch and the meeting closed with "Taps."

but . . . . . is it?

With your car safely in the garage, seems as though you are prepared for anything that can happen. Don't even need a telephone any more.

BUT . . . ARE YOU CERTAIN?

Sickness, fire, accident, whatever it may be — and some of these things come occasionally to all of us — is your car quick enough, sure enough? Maybe the roads are blocked. . . . Maybe a tire is flat . . .

In emergency what you need most is a TELEPHONE. Don't wait for something to happen to find that out!

Alderman McCann has filed the following motion for action in Ottawa City Council on Monday next:

"That any motor vehicle found running on streets of the City of Ottawa with defective brakes shall be banned from further service for a period of three months and must pass police inspection before further use."

The alderman, in his notice of motion previously, mentioned excluding such vehicles for a period of six months.

Western Ontario Counties Swept by Destructive Flood

City of London Partially Under Water Boats Being Used to Rescue Hundreds From Mounting Thames

Conquered by flood waters from rampaging rivers and streams, Western Ontario became a battleground for man's desperate efforts to stem the unleashed forces of disaster which already have cut a wide swath of death and destruction through five counties.

Hardest hit of all, the City of London was partially under water and 10,000 residents were forced to leave their homes and seek shelter in public buildings. Boats were used to rescue hundreds of persons who were trapped by the mounting waters of the River Thames.

Meanwhile, the Thames River continued to rise at the rate of six inches an hour and at nine o'clock on Monday night was estimated to be 30 feet above normal.

Possibility of a shortage in both water and Hydro-Electric power became imminent, and appeals were issued to householders by municipal authorities to conserve both. The city was left n darkness when the street lights were turned off.

The city itself was virtually isolated as far as highways were concerned and flood waters, washouts and a serious wreck near Beachville crippled railway outlets to the east of the city.

Insignificant creeks became wild rivers, and peaceful rivers were transformed into mighty torrents. Continuous rains fed the invasion, which swept away homes, bridges, roads and dams in a mad career of disaster.

Every village and hamlet suffered in the onslaught, the worst flood in 15 years. Woodstock, Stratford, St. Thomas, Ingersoll, Tillsonburg and St. Mary's reported dams gone, homes destroyed, main streets submerged, and low-lying areas completely inundated. Railway lines were washed out at Ingersoll and Stratford, disrupting schedules, and a derailment at Woodstock resulted in death to four men.

The advance of the swollen waters was incredibly swift. Rolling agricultural lands were swept from sight, roads disappeared, and the hungry tide closed over everything in its path. Numerous dams were reported to have collapsed before the tremendous pressure, while others were said to be cracking under the strain.

Homeless residents in a hundred communities, small and large, saw their possessions swept away. Red Cross organizations, answering the call of service, swung into action and opened centres where food, clothing and shelter were afforded the refugees.

In a few hours Western Ontario became wastes of sullen waters. Frantic calls for help went out from tiny settlements cut off from the rest of the world.

Brockville Mill Destroyed In Third Big Fire of Month

Fire of unknown origin early Tuesday destroyed the large mill of the Brockville Lumber Corporation in the city of Brockville. The mill office, with living quarters overhead, was badly damaged.

Firemen fought the blaze desperately for three hours to prevent the fire spreading to a large shed full of lumber adjacent to the mill.

The business was owned and managed by F. B. Vandusen, of Brockville. Some insurance was carried on the buildings and contents, but no estimate of the loss was available.

The fire was the third big blaze in the town within two months, the skating arena and Lachapelle's Boat Works being destroyed previously.

"Who's that close-mouthed fellow over there?"

"He ain't close-mouthed. He's just waitin' fer the janitor to come back with the spittoon."

The Vital Question.

A keen golfer had a charming girl on his right at dinner, and gave her graphic descriptions of his achievements with the clubs, hardly allowing her time to say more than "Really!"

During the dessert he remarked: "I'm afraid I've been monopolizing the conversation and talking nothing but golf."

"Oh, never mind," said the girl. "But you might tell me: What is golf?"

Funeral of Burton Hummel Held at Winchester Springs

The funeral of Burton Hummel, who died Wednesday last, was held on Friday from the family home to Winchester Springs United church. He was the 20-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Hummel, of Williamsburg township, and was born in the vicinity of Winchester Springs.

He was well known, and his sudden death was a shock to the family and many friends of the district.

Service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. R. S. Smith, assisted by Rev. H. H. Gilbart.

Chief mourners, in addition to his parents, were three sisters, Mrs. Calvin Dillabough, Chesterville; Mrs. Delbert Young, Toyes Hill; Miss Lera Hummel, at Toyes Hill, and three brothers, Myles, Earle and Lee Hummel, all at home.

Interment was in the family plot at Maple Ridge cemetery, where Rev. Mr. Smith also officiated.

2 Broadcasts of Coronation Planned by Canadian Radio

23-Hour Programme Will Include BBC Description of Processions and Ceremony.—Will be Rebroadcast.

Canadian radio listeners will have two chances of hearing a description of the Coronation ceremony in Westminster Abbey on May 12th and the King's message to the Empire, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation has announced.

The British broadcasts of both these events will be relayed in Canada over the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation network and rebroadcast again later in the day.

The Corporation has prepared a 23-hour programme for Coronation Day and will be on the air continuously from 4 a.m., May 12, to 3 a.m. the following morning (both times Eastern Standard).

From the British Broadcasting Corporation the Canadian radio body will take the description of the Coronation procession, the Coronation service and the return of Their Majesties to Buckingham Palace besides the King's speech to the Empire, and other features.

Supplementing these will be a Canada-wide programme with contributions from Ottawa, Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Fort William, Calgary, Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Vancouver and Victoria.

A special broadcast for Canada will be "A British radio party from New York." In it such British and Canadian stars of the stage and music hall as Beatrice Lillie, Reginald Gardiner, Dr. Tertius Noble, Muriel Dickson and Peggy Ashcroft will be heard at 5 p.m.

Radio fans who rise at four a.m. on Cornation morning will hear the programme start with the Peace Tower bells from Ottawa. At 4.15 will come a studio announcement from the BBC in London and at 4.30 the description of Their Majesties leaving Buckingham Palace.

The BBC will be on the air until 9.20 with the actual Coronation broadcast and then the Christ Church Cathedral bells from Victoria, B.C., will be heard.

Fort William will follow with "A Children's Coronation Chorus" at 9.30 and the Canadian pogramme will be well under way.

The Governor-General, Lord Tweedsmuir, will speak from Ottawa at 1.10 p.m.

Immediately following will come "The Empire's Homage" from London in which Canada will take part, and after it King George will speak at 2.00 p.m. The Empire's homage and the King's speech will be re-broadcast over the Canadian network at 9.00 p.m.

The re-broadcast of the Coronation ceremony on the Canadian network will take place from 2.30 to 4.45 p.m.

Other features on the programme will be: A royal salute of 21 guns from Winnipeg at 1.00 p.m.; a recital by John Masefield, poet laureate, at 5.45 p.m.; "Poems in Praise," from Halifax at 6.30 p.m.; "Songs of Empire," from Toronto at 10.00 a.m.; and the Army and Navy Veterans Band from Montreal at 2.10 p.m.

At 11.00 p.m. the Corporation will say goodnight to eastern Canada, but the programme will go on over the western network until 3.00 a.m., Eastern Standard Time, which will be midnight in Vancouver.

Winchester Businessmen Decide on Holiday Closing

At a meeting of Winchester businessmen in the town hall, on Monday night, action was taken with regard to the closing of stores on Wednesday afternoons for the months of June, July and August and on the various statutory holidays.

James J. Gray said it was thought advisable by the majority of business men in Winchester that uniform closing should be put into effect to do away with the confusion of other years. Ashley E. Goodfellow was chosen chairman of the meeting and Chas. E. Cross, secretary.

The following days for regular closing are: New Year's Day, Good Friday, Victoria Day, May 24; Dominion Day, July 1; Civic Holiday, in August; Labour Day, in September; Thanksgiving Day and Christmas, Coronation Day, May 12, with the following other holidays being left optional: Easter Monday, King's Birthday, Remembrance and Boxing Days. In cases where any holiday falls on Saturday, it is to be observed the following Monday.

No action was taken to have daylight saving in the village.

A great many people from this community attended the funeral of the late Mr. Hugh Robinson on Monday afternoon at Trinity United church, Chesterville. Burial was made in the Grantley cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Wallace and Miss Vera Haggerty were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McMillan at Chesterville.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Christie, Miss Nellie Darling and Mr. Willis Darling attended the reception Monday evening at Mr. Ward Johnston's, of The Boyne, in honour of their son, Wilson, and his bride.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE MEETING HELD IN LIBRARY YESTERDAY

The Women's Institute met in the Library yesterday afternoon for the April meeting with a good attendance. A very fine paper on "The Philosophy of Life," written by Miss Frances Fulton, was read by Mrs. W. N. Fulton. Afternoon tea was served by Mrs. R. Campderros, Mrs. Jas. Hanna, and Mrs. M. Durant, and a social hour enjoyed. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

INQUEST NEXT WEDNESDAY INTO WINCHESTER TRAGEDY

The inquest wll be held in Winchester town hall next Tuesday, May 4th, at 10 a.m., into the motor car crash which occurred during a funeral procession in Winchester on April 1, which claimed the lives of Glen Summers and his father, Almon G. Summers, of Cass Bridge, and A. E. Thoms, prominent Ottawa real estate agent. Dr. Peter McLaughlin, chief distict coroner, will conduct the inquiry.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mrs. Hugh Robinson and family wish to thank all their friends and neighbours for their sympathy and many acts of kindness during the illness and at the death of the father and husband.

IN MEMORIAM.

Droppo — In loving memory of a dear father, Hermon Droppo, who passed away May 2nd, 1934.

He had a cheery smile, a pleasant way
A helping hand to all he knew;
He was so kind, so generous and true.
On earth he nobly did his best,
Grant him, Jesus, heavenly rest.

—Ever remembered by Jack, Maggie and children.

FEEDING CATTLE AT A PROFIT.

THERE is still a wide margin of profit for the farmer who is willing to finish his cattle suitable for export requirements. A farmer in Manitoba recently sold a load of steers at a net profit of $1,147.65. He paid $3.55 per 100 pounds for the steers delivered at his home on November 10, 1936. and sold them the other day at $9 per 100 pounds. He estimated the feed costs at $580; the cost of the cattle was $793, a total outlay of $1,373, and the sale amounted to $2,520.65. The original weight of the cattle averaged 855 pounds, and they were fed oats and barley chop, minerals, one ton of oil cake, prairie hay, and finally three tons of alfalfa. With the exception of 200 bushels of his own raising, all the grain used was purchased at threshing time.

26 DOZEN EGGS PER HEAD IN OSHAWA.

THE City of Oshawa, Ontario, eats more eggs than any other city in the Dominion. This fact is revealed in the recent studies of the consumption of various food products in different cities and rural districts of Canada, carried out by the Economics Branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture, in co-operation with the Provincial Departments.

With regard to the annual consumption of eggs, the City of Oshawa led with 26 dozens of eggs per person. Calgary was next with 24 dozens per capita. Saint John, N.B., and Quebec City scored a draw with 17 dozens per head, and the inhabitants of Montreal were responsible for 16 dozens per person. The Chinese in Canada ate 12 dozens of eggs per head during the year, and the Japanese consumed 16 dozens per person.

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT THIS CANADA OF OURS.

Fans.

LAID sacredly away in that trunk in the garret which contains the treasures of older days there is surely a lady's fan. It was a beautiful thing, usually the gift of a devoted admirer. It might be a creation of beautifully fretted ivory slats carved out of the tusks of a great African elephant, or just a simple little thing of painted silk, but sometimes it was a gorgeous affair made of lovely ostrich feathers with precious stones inserted cunningly. Perhaps no lady's equipment of a generation ago is more symbolic of romance, and the temptation to dwell upon it is irresistible to the good novelist.

Fans have always had a place in ceremonials and are used even now in the East. They are carried on state occasions on papal processions in Rome. In Canada they may still be found in country churches, manufactured of straw for utility purposes on a hot summer day.

But the fan as an accoutrement for the lady is well nigh gone. Our imports last year amounted to only $2,500. They came mainly fom Japan, Italy, China, Austria and Hong Kong, and many also from the United States.

Painless.

Dentist: "There's no need to make all that fuss, sir. Why, I haven't even touched your tooth yet."

Patient: "No, but you are standing on my corn."

ABOVE THE EAGLES' NEST

I HAD NOT SEEN Dan Townsend for a number of years until I met him one evening in New York. He had been an old-time chum of mine; he was a little older than I, and his brother Bill was a younger. As boys we had hunted and fished together, had tramped the mountains that surround the village where we lived, and had been as inseparable as boys know how to be. I had always admired Dan; he was one of those strong, clean-limbed fellows to whom any ordinary feat of strength or agility was as easy as breathing. If he had gone to college he would have been a great athlete. And young Bill, though he was slighter of build than his brother, was scarcely less capable.

Even in our boyhood days the Townsends had gained a reputation for recklessness as regards personal danger No one in the village was astonished when they refused to settle down and presently drifted out into the world, with an occasional brief message from some out-of-the-way spot to tell how they were getting on. Once they went to South America on an expedition to expore the interior of Brazil; at another time they were on their way to Tibet. Finally they began to be known for the unusual pictures they got of wild life, and later they became famous for thrilling views of all sorts—the kind of pictures that make you wonder how the photographer could have got them without breaking his neck. They got the best of the war pictures of troops in action, and afterwards apparently no view seemed to them worth while photographing unless getting it involved more than ordinary spice of danger.

We had not seen each other for eight years; so we went to dinner together. Afterwards, when we were talking about the risks that photographers sometimes take in photographing wild animals, I asked Dan what had been his most thrilling experience.

"Genuine thrills haven't been so common as you might think," he replied; "but I did have one that fairly scorched while it lasted. Bill and I were taking some pictures in one of those detached mountain spurs of the southern Sierras; we were eating and sleeping at a ranch situated almost at the foot of a peak known as Bald Head. The face of the mountain formed a tremendous cliff that sloped inward from the summit; the back was a gradual slope and easy enough to climb. For several days we had noticed a magnificent pair of eagles soaring around the mountain, and the ranchman told us that their nest was on a narrow ledge perhaps sixty feet below the top of the cliff. With a powerful field glass we could see it from the ranch house; in it were two eaglets almost large enough to fly.

"'We've got to get a photograph of that nest,' declared Bill one day.

"The ranchman laughed in derision. 'Slim chance!' said he. 'Cliff projects at the top so you can't see the nest at all."

"'Of course we couldn't get good pictures from the top,' Bill told him; 'but Dan can let me down by a rope until I'm in a suitable position to grind the camera. The nest would make a fine subject!'

"'What do you suppose the old eagles would be doing while you hung there over the cliff?' asked the ranchman. 'They'll be doing a plenty, let me tell you.'

"The truth is I wasn't enthusiastic about the idea myself, but Bill waived all objections aside. 'Those eagles won't do anything worse than flutter around and squawk,' he said impatiently. 'Let's go!'

"His idea was to sink an iron bolt into the rock and fasten the rope to it. We learned from the ranchman that there already was a bolt fixed in the granite of the summit, though he did not know who had put it there or why. 'Some other fool member of the suicide club, maybe,' he remarked grimly. 'But you'd better use a new peg; that one's probably pretty well rusted by now.'

"The next morning, carrying with us camera, rope, stone drill, steel pegs and a shotgun that I had insisted on taking as a last resort in case the old eagles became too resentful, we started up the back of the mountain.

"The peak was well named; the summit was much like a smooth bald head and sloped steeply down to the edge of the overhanging cliff that formed the forehead. We examined the old iron peg. From the constant scolding and cries of the young birds that floated up to us, we knew that the nest was almost directly below the peg, which, though it was rusty, looked substantial enough. However, it was too near the edge of the cliff to suit me; so I drilled a new hole in the smooth rock some distance up the slope and plugged a fresh steel bolt an inch in diameter into it. When I had snubbed the rope around it, Bill glanced once at the two old eagles, which were hovering about in some alarm, and then began to descend.

"I slowly eased him over the edge of the rock; he carried the camera securely held by a strap that passed over his shoulder, and his hands were free to use it. Beneath him was a sheer drop of a thousand feet.

"The eagles came sweeping by the face of the cliff as Bill disappeared over the edge, and somehow I found a good deal of comfort in the thought of the double-barrelled shotgun which lay within easy reach.

"'I can see the nest already,' Bill called. 'About seventy feet down. Make a first-class picture. Keep the rope going till I give the word to stop.'

"I let the rope slip slowly around the bolt and finally as Bill yelled 'Whoa!' held it tight. I heard the faint whir of the machine as he started to turn the crank Now and then the angry screams of the outraged eagles mingled with the sound; the birds paid no heed to me, but gave all their attention to Bill.

"Presently the whirring of the camera ceased, and the birds seemed to redouble their shrill outcry. Then I heard Bill shout, 'Dan! Quick, the gun!'

"The rope was merely snubbed on the steel peg; so, hastily tying it with a half hitch, I grabbed the gun and scrambled down the slope to the edge of the cliff as fast as I dared. When I peered over, the sight that I saw startled me. The larger of the adult eagles was perched on Bill's head, buffeting him viciously with its powerful wings and striking with its savage beak. I did not dare shoot, so I let out a wild yell. After a swift upward glance the eagle flew off and gave me the chance I wanted. The mountain peak roared with the report of the gun, and Bill's assailant crumpled under the impact of the shot.

"Then I happened to look at the rope, which I supposed was firmly fastened to the peg perhaps thirty feet behind me. It was slowly slipping over the cliff; the hastily tied knot was yielding under the strain of Bill's weight! I made a dash back up the smooth rock to the steel bolt. But just as I reached it a tremendous blow on the shoulder sent me sprawling; the other eagle had darted upon me like a thunderbolt.

"You remember that time we were hunting grouse on Bear Mountain," Townsend asked abruptly, "and you slipped off that big rock into a dense tangle of grapevine? A partridge boiled out right under your nose, and you fired without aiming and brought down the bird. Well, I did the same thing with the eagle as it flashed by after it had bowled me over. It was luck, of course, just as your shot was, but I got that bird with my left barrel; and then I started to slide.

"I clutched frantically at the rope and succeeded in catching it with my right hand; but then there was much more strain on the rapidly slipping knot, and before I was fully aware of what was happening the rope pulled clear of the peg and I started down the slope as if it were greased.

"Without doubt that was the most thrilling situation I ever was in. Another second and I seemed likely to go shooting off the front of the cliff and follow Bill in a dizzy plunge to the jagged rocks of the talus slope a thousand feet below. My brain did a good day's work during the next second. A multitude of thoughts flashed through it; then I seemed to be viewing the whole affair from a distance. I could see Bill dangling helplessly at the end of the rope and dragging me to a highly unpleasant finish far below. I could see the eagles' nest with the young birds in it, stretching their heads up in mingled fear and excitement. I could even see the shotgun, which I had dropped as soon as I had killed the second eagle, sliding swiftly down the face of the cliff."

Townsend paused and grinned cheerfully at me across the table. "There's the thrilling situation," he said. "How do you like it?"

"It's thrilling enough," I agreed. "But kindly don't prolong the agony. If you weren't here in front of me, alive and whole, I'd declare up and down that you and Bill pitched a thousand feet to the jagged rocks."

"It was that panoramic view of mine which was our salvation," Dan went on. "Among the other objects I saw was that rusty old peg just above the face of the cliff and directly in my path of descent. As I was shooting past it I grabbed it with my left hand and by a miracle managed to keep my grip on the rope, though you can imagine what it did to my hand; at least six feet of rope was jerked through my fingers before I could stop it.

"Now you have situation number two. Bill and I were safe for the moment; but I was stretched tightly on my back; my left hand was gripping the bolt; my right was clutching the rope to which Bill was hanging. I could save myself by letting poor Bill, who had trusted his life to me without a second's hesitation, go plunging down that thousand-foot drop, or I could hold on until I was exhausted. Then the two of us would go together.

"'Bill,' I called, 'how are you, old man?'

"'All right, except that my head is cut up a little. What's the good word?'

"'We're in trouble,' I yelled back. 'Keep your body still and don't start up the rope till I tell you.' I knew my damaged palm and fingers could never hold the rope during the jerking of a hand-over-hand climb.

"I was gripping the rope some six or eight from the end. Our only hope of escape lay in somehow getting the loose end around the peg. I managed to work one foot under the rope and then kicked it up over my head. It flipped back on the ledge, but missed dropping behind the peg by at least a foot. However, the failure was encouraging, for it showed me that I might be successful. Finally, after a good many attempts I did get the loop over the bolt; but now it was necessary to let go the peg and grab the short end of the rope before it pulled clear as Bill and I again started downward.

"To tell the truth I was afraid to let go the peg, but I had almost come to the end of my endurance. I knew that the longer I waited the poorer were my chances of success. I took a deep breath and in one motion let go and grabbed where I knew the rope ought to be. You can imagine what a wonderful sensation it was to feel my fingers close on that rope! The rest was easy. 'All right, Bill!' I called. 'Come on up now if you feel like it.' "In three or four minutes Bill's head appeared over the edge of the cliff. Fortunately, his hurts were not serious, and he still had the camera.

"In a few words I explained what had happened.

"'Close shave,' he remarked. Then he noticed the dead eagle. 'We've about ruined that family of birds, haven't we?' he said. 'Too bad; but the young ones are ready to shift for themselves anyway.'

"I might add that the pictures turned out well and won much favourable comment."

PERILS OF TYPOGRAPHY.

(From Nature.)

A CORRESPONDENT has sent us a copy of a programme for 1936-37 of a science society, of a university, which contains two amusing misprints. The title of a paper to be contributed by a member of the Zoological department of the university was sent in as "Life History of the Ling Cod." The secretary appears not to have recognized "ling" as a food fish of the cod family, so he altered the word to "living." The printers put the finishing touch upon the title by changing the last word also, so that the title appears as "Life History of the Living God," which must surely represent the most ambitious subject of a paper by a zoologist ever announced.

"KEEPING UP WITH THE JONESES"

Montreal Gazette.

WHEN the first four ships arrived at St. Jean de Luz after running the Spanish blockade, it was discovered that three of their captains were Joneses. For purposes of distinction they were unofficially named after their cargoes, one of which was potatoes. Hence Captain "Potato" Jones, whose sturdy picture is appearing in the newspapers. Masters of liners and lesser ships will now find it harder than ever to keep up with the Joneses especially "Potato," for he in particular is in the spotlight.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

- By -

MISS HELEN LACEY, B.H.Sc.

LET THEM EAT CAKE.

WITH summer coming on, most of us will be serving simpler desserts such as blanc manges, gelatine sponges and charlottes with plenty of ice cream. With such dessert, cake of some kind is almost a necessity.

EXPRESS CAKE.

2 cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons mixed spice
½ cup chopped nut meats
1-3 cup melted shortening
2 eggs
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup sugar
¼ cup citron or orange peel
½ cup seedless raisins
¾ cup sour milk
1 teaspoon soda dissolved in one tablespoon hot water

Sift together flour, baking powder, salt, sugar and spices. Add raisins, nuts and orange or citron peel and mix well. Add melted shortening, sour milk and eggs and beat well for two minutes. Beat the soda mixture into the cake last of all. Pour into two greased layer cake tins. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until risen to full height (this batter does not raise much), increase heat to 400 degrees F. until cake is set and nicely browned. Cake requires about ½ hour to bake.

CRUMB CAKE.

2½ cups flour
½ cup soft butter
2 cups brown sugar

Mix three above ingredients together thoroughly and take out ¾ of a cup of the mixture for the top. To the remainder add:

¾ cup sour milk
1 egg
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Beat until smooth. Pour into cake tin and sprinkle crumb mixture over the top. Bake in a moderate over 40 minutes.

COFFEE CAKE MAKE WITH YEAST.

1 cup milk
4 tablespoons butter
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 egg
1-3 yeast cake
¼ cup lukewarm water
½ cup raisins
2¾ cups flour

Scald the milk; add butter, sugar and salt; cook to lukewarm; add yeast dissolved in the ¼ cup lukewarm milk and flour to make a stiff batter. Let rise over night. In the morning add beaten egg and raisins. More flour may be needed to make mixture into a stiff batter. Spread in greased baking pan; cover and let rise. When light, brush over with beaten egg and spead with the following:

1½ tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
2 tablespoons flour

Melt the butter, add sugar and cinnamon and mix thoroughly. Add flour.

Bake in a moderate oven 45 to 60 minutes.

BANANA CAKE.

2 eggs
1 cup sugar
2-3 cup butter
3 tablespoons sour milk
1 1-3 cups flour
1 cup banana pulp
1 teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream the butter, blend in sugar, add egg yolks. Mix and sift dry ingredients and add alternately with sour milk. Add banana pulp and lastly stiffly beaten egg whites and vanilla. Bake in a moderate oven.

GOLDEN GATE CAKE.

¼ cup butter
¾ cup sugar
2 egg yolks
4 tablespoons orange marmalade
1 tablespoon grated orange rind
2 tablespoons finely chopped candied orange peel
½ cup chopped nuts
1-3 cup water
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
2 egg whites

Cream butter and sugar together, add the egg yolks, marmalade, peel, grated rind and nuts. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Add liquid and dry ingredients alternately. Fold in well-beaten egg whites. Bake in a well-greased loaf tin. This cake is best when fresh and is an excellent one to serve for an afternoon tea.

BUTTER CREAM ICING.

4 tablespoons butter
3 cups icing sugar
1 egg white
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream the butter, add sugar slowly and mix well. Add unbeaten egg white. Cream again, then add salt and vanilla. Beat all together until very light and fluffy.

Variations:

1. Beat in a little heavy cream and chopped nuts.
2. To produce a mocha icing, omit vanilla and add 1 teaspoon strong coffee and 1 teaspoon cocoa.
3. Maple icing is made by boiling a little maple sugar, allow to cool and add to butter cream.
4. Orange icing is made by adding grated rind of orange and lemon and a little orange pulp.

The Story of Father Divine and his Heavens in Harlem

Who Is This King of Glory?

FATHER DIVINE, who has proclaimed himself God Almighty on more than one occasion, and whose enthusiastic followers in Harlem recently hailed him as "Dean of the Universe," insists he was reborn only a few years ago and can't remember who he was before then. As a matter of fact, however, the true story of his life, a story of arduous struggle from obscurity to national prominence, is more impressive than his story of divine rebirth.

He is around 60 now, a short, dignified coloured man with a bald head. His early life is obscure, but in 1899 he was unquestionably a serious-minded young man named George Baker who earned an honest living in Baltimore mostly by cutting lawns and doing odd jobs on the docks. He worried a lot about God, but didn't feel any closer to Him than any other member of the Rev. Mr. Henderson's Baptist Church, where he taught in the Sunday School and sometimes made little speeches at prayer meetings. People liked his large words and sounding phrases even then, though he wasn't the superb orator he is now.

It was a travelling mulatto evangelist, Samuel Morris, who showed Baker the way. Morris had interpreted the verse, "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the spirit of God dwelleth in you?" personally, as meaning that his body was God's body and he was God. The announcement of this conviction caused him to be thrown bodily out of Mr. Henderson's church. George Baker was the only member of the congregation not enraged at Morris; and when the latter landed on the pavement outside. Baker helped him up and invited him home.

For several years thereafter the two held meetings once or twice a week at Baker's home. The ten or twenty people who came did not precisely believe that Morris was God; yet there was always in the back of their heads the notion that if he was not the Father Eternal, the Father Eternal would strike Morris dead. Baker would take charge after Morris made his awesome declaration, and talk about God, saying, much as Father Divine says to-day, "The individual is the personification of that which expresses personification. Therefore he becomes to be personally the expression of that which was impersonal, and the prepersonification of God Almighty! God's presence is real and tangibleateable. It has been tangibleated; it can and will continue to materialize and repersonify, for the great materialing process is going on. Peace! It's wonderful! I repeat, it is indeed wonderful!" The followers made a refrain of that. a sort of ecstatic ritual. "It's wonderful," they chorused. "Peace! It is indeed wonderful!"

By 1907, Morris had been born again and was calling himself Father Jehovia. Baker, still modest, announcehe too had been born again, and that his new name was The Messenger, a title defined by Morris as "God in the Sonship Degree." But their meetings remained modest affairs, and finally, in 1912, Baker decided to go out on his own and preach from town to town. He toured the Southland by easy stages, and in 1915 arrived in New York. Taking a four-room flat in Brooklyn, he and the seven or eight disciples he had acquired on his travels set up a combination meeting house and employment agency. The disciples soon got jobs, and turned to The Messenger every cent they made. They were sure he was God; and now and then a new disciple was gathered in. If he hadn't a job, The Messenger would get him one. The thing grew, slowly, but fast enough to convince The Messenger that he had a very valuable idea.

His followers were happier, perhaps, than they had ever been before. The community flat was crowded; they slept three and four to a room, but they had always been that crowded or more so. There was nothing immoral about it—the sexes were segregated for The Messenger demanded renunciaton of all kinds of love among his disciples except the love of God. And they really believed their leader was God. For The Messenger didn't work, and yet he always had a roll of bills in his pocket; there was a fine dinner every evening; they wanted for nothing. When they wondered, and asked The Messenger to explain, he would smile on them from the head of the table and say, "God will provide." It was, as they often chanted, wonderful. From The Messenger's point of view it was indeed wonderful. His disciples earned $10 to $12 a week, a total monthly income of at least $500; and he paid out of that only $40 a month for rent and perhaps $150 for food. He also bought them cheap second-hand clothes when they needed them.

His disciples numbered 16 or 17 by the fall of 1919, and he needed more room. For $2500 he bought a 12-room house at Sayville, Long Island, signing the deed Major J. Divine. George Baker had been born a third time. He was born a fourth time almost as soon as he was established in Sayville, becoming the Rev. J. Divine. Then, almost immediately, he became Father Divine (God). He has been God ever since.

To his white neighbours, however, he was for some years merely the Rev. J. Divine, an exceptionally clean and dignified coloured man with soft doe eyes and gentle manners. He told them he was operating an employment agency. People liked him, and soon he got jobs in or near Sayville for all the early disciples. And now Father Divine began to attract a new kind of disciple—coloured people who earned as much as $100 a month, and slept and ate in their employers' houses, and had bank accounts. He invited them to Sunday dinner at his house, preached to them, and never took up a collection.

Typical were Thomas and Verinda Brown, a butler-and-cook couple earning a joint salary of $150 a month, plus room and board, who occupied for three years a prominent place in Father Divine's Heaven. They were what Father Divine called Angels, a title conferred upon any person who assigns all his property to him, hands over all earnings, and takes a new name. Verinda was called Rebecca Grace, and Thomas became Onward Universe. Now they are Thomas and Verinda again, completely disillusioned, and back working for the same family they were with when they met Father Divine. They estimate that during the time they were angels they gave him, freely and of their own accord, $5660. This included salaries, savings accounts. seven Florida lots, and 15 suits belonging to Thomas. "He that would enter into the Kingdom of God must have nothing he can call his own," Father Divine would say.

Then, as now, he preached against doctors and dentists. This helped to keep down outside expense. "Father is the Doctor," became the refrain of one of the heavenly songs. Since he established his Harlem Heaven, records of venereal, tuberculosis and cancer clinics show that scores of Negroes who once received treatment no longer receive it. Death. says Father Divine, cannot come to the true believer. If it comes, it proves he is not a true believer.

By the spring of 1930, Harlemites began to go to Sayville to see for themselves this strange preacher. A few newspaper stories appeared, and then white people, too, began to arrive—a widow from Charlotte, N.C., a doctor from Chicago, a young accountant from Kansas City, a Boston automobile dealer who presented Father Divine with a Cadillac, abandoned his business and became the Father's secretary. To-day, as John Lamb, he is one of some 40 white Angels who are carving careers for themselves in Father Divine's service.

By midsummer that year Father Divine, still never taking a collection, was serving free Sunday dinners to hundreds, in shifts, and a new technique was introduced. The hungry visitors would sit down and Father Divine would first bless the tea and coffee. Then, for about 30 minutes, everybody was urged to have four or five cups. When the diners had reached a bloated condition, great platters of spaghetti, potatoes, Lima beans and other starches would be blessed and served. After another half hour, impressive hams, roasts, chickens, and turkeys would appear. Usually, these dishes, having been blessed and offered to everybody, would leave the table almost intact, to be blessed and served again at successive meals throughout the day, and to turn up again on quiet week nights for the Angels' dinners.

As Father Divine's fame increased, so did the suspicions of outsiders. The Sayville police thought he might be using the mails to defraud, and their investigators sent him letters containing cash, money orders and cheques, but every enclosure was returned with a note saying "Father will provide." In the end they ceased trying to work up a case against him. Nobody could with authority challenge his claim that his money came to him from the sky.

By the fall of 1931, however, Father Divine's followers had increased to such an extent that the authorities, deciding he was a public nuisance, arrested him and brought him to trial. He was convicted, and the Justice imposed a $500 fine and a year's jail sentence. Four days later, the Justice died of heart failure. He was a robust man of only 55 years, and it was obvious to Father Divine's followers, white and coloured, that Father Divine had struck him down. When the Appellate Division reversed the decision in January, 1933, it was accepted as further evidence of divinity.

During the five weeks he was in jail without bail, the Sayville Heaven and the Extension Heaven in Harlem efficiently managed by a few trusted Angels. By now, 300 Angels were turning over to him everything they earned. He was ready to expand still further, and, leaving a few elderly Angels to look after his Sayville property, he moved to a new Heaven in Harlem at 20 West 115th Street. This is his headquarters to-day, and the show place of the cult.

Until the move to Harlem, Father Divine had taken no money from anybody but Angels; but now prospective followers were coming in hundreds, and it was necessary to create a class known as Children — people who go to the meetings but are not ready to turn over everything to him. The provision of Extension Heavens for those Children and Angels who do not live with their Employers has made Father Divine the outstanding lodging-house keeper in Harlem. He operates, in addition to Heaven, three apartment houses, nine private houses, 15 or 20 flats, and three meeting halls with dormitories on upper floors. Angels receive board and room free; Children pay $1 to $2 a week rent and 15 or 20 cents for each meal—slightly less than they would pay for similar accommodation elsewhere. (Only Angels and a few privileged guests have free meals now.) Each Extension Heaven is in charge of an Angel; if it does not pay its way it is abandoned, or a new Angel is placed in charge. Baltimore, Newark, Jersey City and Bridgeport also have Extension Heavens, visited regularly by Father Divine, who is usually accompanied by two or three busloads of Harlem disciples.

The Extension Heavens led naturally to other businesses operated by Angels, and dealing with the Harlem public on a profit-making basis. To-day Father Divine has about 25 restaurants, ten barber shops, ten cleaning pressing establishments, 20 or 30 huckster wagons selling "Peace Father, Clams and Oysters," and "Peace Father, Fresh Vegetables," and a modest coal business. He publishes two weekly newspapers: "The Spoken Word," at five cents a copy, and "The New York News," at three cents. On all these undertakings there is a profit. Father Divine does not have the same labour costs that competitors have.

Figure conservatively that 1,000 Angels are either working for outside employers and turning over $10 a week, or are operating businesses which show that much profit, and you have a gross weekly income of $10,000. Figure, again conservatively, that the profits from rent-paying Children pay for the living expenses of Angels living in the various Heavens, and you have a net income of $10,000 a week. The mystery is: What does Father Divine do with it? He has no visible assets; all deeds and leases are signed by Angels. Worldly minds think he has a substantial cash treasure, but painstaking efforts to locate it by a lawyer armed with a court order were entirely unsuccessful. Yet a short time before, Father Divine had paid $10,000 in cash for a farm, and had also appeared in court and pulled two $500 bills from a huge roll as bail for an Angel in trouble with the police. The Bureau of Internal Revenue has meditated over the fact that he has never paid an income tax, but the Deputies in charge have not decided just how to approach him. The police, however, consider Father Divine a good influence — he preaches against robbery and violence of all kinds.

Around 300 people attend the nightly meetings held in Heaven. They are mostly coloured. A casual observer notices immediately the more spectacular of the followers—people who writhe and twitch, emit equeals and bits of gibberish, fall on the floor and leap in the air. Some of the followers are undoubtedly crazy. In two years, 18 of Father Divine's Angels turned up in the psychopathic ward at Bellevue Hospital. Only two were released after observation; the rest were committed to state insane asylums. But most of the followers are quet, hard-workng folk. They recite testimonials. sing, and join in the rhythmical stomping that sometimes goes on for an hour at a time when Father Divine is not preaching. And, out of meeting, they work — directly or indirectly — for Father Divine (God). "It is indeed wonderful!"

A HEALTH SERVICE OF THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION AND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN CANADA

TONSILS AND ADENOIDS.

IS the removal of tonsils and adenoids a recently devised operation?

As a matter of fact, it is one of the earliest surgical operations. dating back to at least Celsus A.D. 10. We have been told that in one of the Eastern countries the tonsils are removed from every infant. A slip knot is formed of a piece of horsehair and placed around the tonsil. The slip knot is then pulled tight and the tonsil is cut off and removed. These people have great belief in the value of this operation and to it they ascribe the great stature of their men.

In Canada, however, only forty years ago a child whose tonsils had been removed was a rarity, but now, when every school child receives medical supervision, this operation is very common. Well may a thinking parent find it difficult to believe that there is need for such a wide spread attack on a structure of the body.

Of what good are the tonsils? Does their removal do any harm? Surely they have been given to us for a purpose?

The tonsils and adenoids are a kind of tissue which grows in the throat to protect us against the spread of germs, but only as long as it is a healthy tissue is it protective.

The position of tonsils and adenoids readily exposes them to infection and often they become harbours of poisonous material. Therefore, the removal of these damaged and harmful pieces of tissue will not be any loss to the defences of the body. It is, as statistics show. a great benefit to the children as a whole, even though occasionally the individual may not seem to be benefitted.

It is the experience of doctors with large practises. that after a child has had his unhealthy tonsils and adenoids removed, he requires medical attention much less frequently on the average than hitherto.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

ST. GEORGE'S DAY.

Friday last, April 23rd, was St. George's day, when Englishmen the world over celebrate in honour of their patron saint. To the curious who wondered why the flag was run up the Community Hall flagpole by the Boy Scouts, we offer this note of explanation. The Cross of St. George makes up part of the Union Jack, being united in 1606 with the Cross of Andrew of Scotland by King James I. of England and VI. of Scotland. This was the first Union Jack, the Cross of St. Patrick being added in 1801. The flag of St. George of Merrie England is a a vertical red cross on a white background, and is seen in the Union Jack as the broad vertical red cross. Because of his courteous, knightly manner, St. George is also the patron saint of the Boy Scout Association.

"MOST" UNIQUE SCOUT CAMP

One of the most unique Scout week-end "camps" held in Canada, if not in the Scouting world, is that enjoyed each Saturday afternoon at the Sick Children's Hospital, Thistletown, Ont. It is a "camp" held in their ward by the crippled and bedridden boys of the Robert Louis Stevenson Scout Troop, all in full Scout uniform, gathered around their troop Union Jack flying from its indoor flag staff. The "camp" is opened with a ceremonial raising of the flag, and at the conclusion of the afternoon's .... programme .. of games, stories and the passing of Scout tests, the flag is duly lowered.

Scout International Correspondence Competition

A Boy Scout competition, one item of which calls for an exchange of letters between each member of each patrol of the 5th Hamilton Troop and each member of a Boy Scout patrol in France is a contest being carried on by that Hamilton troop. The attractive prize is two weeks at camp this summer. Each patrol numbers eight boys.

Scottish Scouts' Poppy Day Good Turn.

A recent report of public service by Scottish Scouts records the gathering last summer of 506 sacks of mountain moss for Lady Haig's poppy factory. The moss is used by war crippled men in making Poppy Day wreaths. The collecting of the moss represented many miles of hiking and climbing and pulling of moss by a large number of Scouts and Rovers.

CHURCH, CASH AND CHRISTIANITY

Fergus News-Record.

WHEN somebody writes an article on the subject "Is Canada a Christian Country?" or some such title, we do not bother reading it, because it is usually just an effort to attract attention to a worthless bit of writing. But after looking over the newspapers in the neighbourhood during the last few weeks, and after reading several church reports, we're inclined to ask a somewhat similar question, though a more personal one: "Are Church Members Christians?" At the same time, we realize that one cannot judge a man's Christianity by the amount he gives to the church, recalling the Parable of the Widow's Mite. On the other hand, when a fairly well-fixed family gives an average of five cents a Sunday to the upkeep of the church, (as many families do), then there is something wrong, and a newspaper man may be forgiven if he writes an editorial about it.

If you belong to a church which publishes a ilst of its subscribers, you can prove for yourself that families who seem to have money enough for other things don't seem to feel any responsibility for keeping up the church. You will find that more than one family of your acquaintance probably did not give more than $2.60 toward the upkeep of the building, the payment of the preacher's salary, the heating, lighting and other expense, the music and the community activities. A much larger number probably paid less than $5.20 or ten cents a Sunday for these purposes. They pay a quarter to see a game of almost any kind, and if the whole family attends, the total is several times that much, yet a nickel is the limit for the family on Sunday. One would think that any man who was a Christian would feel that it was worth at least a quarter a week to have the church kept alive in his community, not only for himself but for his children. Yet if you think that a majority of church members give more than $13.00 a year for the upkeep of the church, you are probably due for a sad awakening.

Conductor: "No, ma'am; it's me."

The following advertisement appeared in a Western newspaper:

"Found — Lady's purse left in my car while parked. Contains papers, $5 in change, etc. Owner may have the same by describing property and paying for this ad. If owner can explain satisfactorily to my wife how purse got into car, will pay for ad myself."

Is John's Face Red!

A woman, coming from a remote section, purchased a dress on her first visit to a large department store in New York. The next day she brought it back, saying it did not fit her.

"And no wonder it doesn't fit," she exclaimed. "Look here (pointing to the label) 'Made expressly for John Wanamaker.'"

IS YOUR SUBSCRIPTION UP TO DATE?

WITH all the costs that go into the making of a paper rising almost weekly, it is becoming more imperative that all subscriptions be brought up to date. Many of our subscribers have not been bothered by us during the past few difficult years and should now return the compliment and pay all arrearages. It is a big and expensive job to send everyone who owes us a few dollars a personal bill. The date to which you last paid is on your paper or its wrapper each week, and it is expected that all who can conveniently, will make arrangements to square up with as little delay as possible. We just hate to hand the names into a collection agency and let them go rough shod after these accounts, but if these accounts are not settled, what else can we do?

Just as He Thought.

LARGE DELIVERY IS MADE BY LOCAL MACHINERY AGENT

Last Wednesday, a sight was witnessed in town which made the people of Chesterville forget for the moment that there had ever been such a word as "depression," when 85 farmers from surrounding districts gathered here to take delivery of 14 tractors and five truck loads of machinery to the value of $23,000 from Chas. McMillan who is the local representative for the International Harvester Co. of Canada, Ltd.

Mr. McMillan started the day off by having these gentlemen who took delivery of their products as his guests at a luncheon. This luncheon was attended also by Mr. Youngblutt, assistant manager; Mr. Quinn, publicity department; Mr. McDowell, blockman, and Mr. Jordan, office manager, of the International Harvester Co., and Mr. Barker, of the McColl-Frontenac Oil Co. After luncheon everyone returned to Mr. McMillan's place of business where the tractors were lined up in order to prime them up and fill them with gas which was contributed by the McColl-Frontenac Oil Co., in preparation for the impressive parade that took place a few minutes later.

It was indeed striking to see these 14 tractors, some equipped with rubber tires, protruding slowly through the streets and being followed by five truck loads of farm machinery. After parading all around town, they returned to the station where photographs were taken of all the tractors and of everyone connected with this event.

In the evening, the Community Hall was filled to capacity with people who had gone there to enjoy the sound films put on by the I.H.C., and to participate in the dance which was sponsored by Mr. McMillan. Everyone attending was the guest of Mr. McMillan.
