CRUMBS from Graham's Loaf

Waiting outside the door of this luxurious roadside motel is a pony. It is headed towards Chesterville, loaded with a bale of hay and a large dead salmon. We understand the pony express riders from here always take a salmon along when they have a long trek in view. It is used as a source of nourishment and advertisement; the emphasis is on the former for the first couple of days. After that the ancient fish is its own best advertisement. Along with the above burdens, the galloping horseman has promised to deliver this missive into the hot waiting hands of the B's in the b.s in time for this week's edition. Incidentally, we are poised on the outskirts of Fredricton, N.B., on the banks of the lovely St. John river. Our location must account for the excellence and number of salmon.

The denizens of Crumb Castle have had an uneventful trip, aside from a moment last night when the world stood still, father groaned on the bathroom floor and the v.p. searched wildly for the phone of the nearest doctor. We had slipped into a toothsome establishment in Gorham, N.H., and had taken on a large feed of fried onions. Whether the clams were resentful, or this Crumb's appetite greater than his common sense, we will never know. In any event, father suddenly became sicker than a dog after the fall hog killing. There was a noble whoop and holler before we rose in relief and staggered back to bed. We felt like those chickens we advertised a while back in the Bargain Table, "with inwards out."

The mountains of Maine are quite a sight to see, we understand. This morning, a fog blanketed the whole scene, we snuk along under headlights and admonitions from the child. When the sun burst out, we were well into the rolling land of the eastern downhill slide. By the time dinner sounded good, we were back on the reckless track again and filled up on delicious lobster stew at Old Town, Me. The sea beasts are so fresh down here they breathe salt in your face with every bite. Every menu carries its quota of sea harvest; for those who like beans, they are served too, but you have to open your own can.

Speaking of cans, Fred Cass's boys can take a lot of credit for the condition and number of roadside camping spots in Ontario. Suddenly one realizes there is a world of difference between a clean camping site and one not too well looked after. The good places are too few for the number of poor dirty spots one can find. While it is impossible to police the public all the time, there is a natural law that says the human animal has to be serviced or he will revert to the old system of finding a bushy tree. A few more conveniences and there would be less obnoxious litter around some very fine lookouts and campsites.

This business of travelling for a holiday is fine as long as one's health and pocketbook holds out. At the moment we have suffered attacks from both quarters; our health has recovered to such a degree we feel bold to take on some more clams. The pocketbook, of course, is being replenished by the hard-working slaves back home. When we left we showed the mailing room lady how to load the wheelbarrow to take the loot to the bank. We have every confidence it will only take another 12 months to get over this financial spree.

250 attend 85 anniversary of S.S. No. 11, Winchester

Over 250 people attended the 85th anniversary of S.S. No. 11, Winchester, (Ninth) on August 5 from 10.30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

After the lunch hour former teachers and pupils enjoyed a fine get-together. Two of the oldest teachers able to be present were Mrs Annie Mae Shaver Munharvey, of Lawrenceville, N.Y., and Mrs Elva Shaver MacMillan, of Chesterville. The oldest pupil present was Alex B. McConnell, of Morewood, who is now 93.

The president of the Home and School Association, Mrs H. Crump, read a letter from the Minister of Education and the Hon. F. M. Cass. Other letters were read from former teachers who were unable to attend.

Mrs H. Crump introduced the chairman, Frank Casselman, who thanked all for coming and making the day a memorable one. There was a two-minute silence for the boys who attended the Ninth and lost their lives in the two World Wars.

"O Canada" was sung and Mrs Hume McConnell read a history of the school prior to 1911. Pupils of the Ninth compiled and read the full history of the old brick building; those reading it were the Misses Janice Casselman, Mary Casselman, Gail Marcellus and Willie Dam.

Mrs M. Thompson was pianist for the occasion. Miss Lorna Crump favoured the audience with a tap dance. Elaine Crump sang a solo, "Bless this House." Miss Betty Stewart offered two guitar solos which were enjoyed by all. Frank and Arthur Casselman rendered two duets, with a trio by Frank, Arthur and Earl Casselman.

The speaker of the day was Mrs Myrtle Childs, Ridgetown, a former pupil and teacher, who was introduced by Frank Casselman and thanked by Mrs H. Crump. Mrs Childs is reeve of Ridgetown, Ont. All enjoyed Mrs Childs' very fine address and wished her every success in the future.

The National Anthem brought a very enjoyable day to a close.

Miss Pritchard guest speaker Elma W.I.

The president, Mrs Egerton Barkley, opened the August meeting of Elma W.I. with the Institute Ode and Collect. Roll call was an exchange of recipes for supper dishes.

Members voted to sponsor a weiner roast for the 4-H Club and it was decided to hold an Institute picnic at Farran Park on August 16.

The topic, Agriculture and Canadian Industries, was under the convenership of Mrs Harold McIntosh and Mrs Harold Pemberton.

Mrs McIntosh introduced Miss Nancy Pritchard of the Home Economics Service for the Eastern Counties. Miss Pritchard spoke on home economics as a career, its advantages and disadvantages and the various duties of a home economist, with the chief interest being the organizing and maintaining the 4-H Clubs. She announced that summary day for the garden clubs will be held in Morrisburg on August 31.

Mrs Pemberton conducted a contest on agriculture which was won by Mrs D. A. Dillabough.

Mrs Donald Dillabough presented Miss Pritchard with a gift in view of her approaching marriage in October and Mrs D. J. Dillabough voiced appreciation to the 4-H Club leaders, Mrs Harold McIntosh and Mrs Donald Dillabough, for their untiring efforts in making the projects so successful.

Lunch was served and a social hour enjoyed.

Hon. Fred M. Cass, Q.C., M.L.A. for Grenville-Dundas and Ontario Minister of Highways, is probably one of the most widely travelled men in Canada today. His post as Minister of the Ontario Department of Highways takes him to many corners of ths North American continent to inspect new road designs and to tell others of the fabulous growth of Ontario's highway system in recent years. However, it's events in his own riding that he enjoys participating in the most. One such event took place recently at Upper Canada Village when the historic bateau "Marguerite" docked after her voyage down the river from Old Fort Henry at Kingston. Complete with crew in the costume of the day the bateau, a full-scale reproduction of an 1812 St. Lawrence craft, was given a royal salute as she entered the waters of Upper Canada Village, and there to meet her and help guide her into the Village harbour was Fred M. Cass shown steering the bateau in the above picture. A member of the crew, striped shirt, white pants et al is shown with Mr Cass as the boat approaches the shore. The bateau is to be a feature attraction at the restored village.—Engraving courtesy of the Winchester Press.

Carl Smith, Chesterville, obtained the high score in the 1961 Dundas County livestock judging competition for the second year in succession. The competition was held Friday, August 4, at Kemptville Agricultural School, with 80 contestants participating.

Miss Janice McMenomy, Inkerman, won the C.N.E. shield for high standing Junior with a score of 421 out of 450 and Leslie Dawley, Winchester, was awarded the Fennell Feed Company trophy with a score of 414 in the Senior section. Carl Smith, whose score was 422, had previously won this trophy.

Contestants in the competition placed and gave reasons on three dairy cow classes and one class of beef. Placings only were made on a class of swine.

Making the official placings and taking the reasons on the classes were Harold Lannin, Winchester, Dwight Dawley, Winchester, Harry Holmes, Winchester Springs, Allan McRoberts, Winchester, and Ray Smith, assistant agricultural representative for Dundas.

During the day, the members of the 4-H Calf Clubs also took their written 4-H Calf Club test.

Prize money and refreshments at lunch time were provided by the Dundas County Junior Farmers, who sponsored the competition.

The classes and facilities were provided by the Kemptville Agricultural School.

Grade 13 results—still too late

Grade 13 examination results have been mailed from Toronto four days earlier than last year. The Department of Education is on the right track, says the Ottawa Journal, but the marks are still coming much too late.

There will be barely one month between the time studuents will have received their grades and registration for most universities. That is not enough time for the students nor is it enough time for the universities. College admission is a much more complicated, competitive business now than it was years ago when the matriculation results could come leisurely out at the end of August. There should be at least two months between the time when a student learns whether or not he passed Grade 13 and the beginning of the university term.

The Department has of course a big task in supervising the marking of papers written by 31,000 students. But there are universities with that number of students where everyone's grades are available within a few weeks. More teachers should be reading the exam papers in Ontario. Indeed, grading Grade 13 examinations might be considered part of the regular duties of most Grade 13 teachers.

Standards need not suffer, in bringing in more teachers. If men and women are considered qualified enough to teach Grade 13, surely they can be recruited with confidence to mark the papers. The important thing is that the impersonal aspect of Grade 13 examinations be protected. Teachers should grade papers written by students of other school districts.

With the exception of perhaps English and history, marking the examinations is a rather mechanical process. The marker need not possess extraordinary judicial powers. The Department of Education should move with the needs of the times.

Role of the pharmacist

In a recent editorial, the Sudbury Star noted that during the controversy over the high cost of drugs there has been a tendency to make a "whipping boy" of the practising pharmacist. The Star thinks this is quite unfair and has the following to say on the subject:

"The high prices of drugs to the purchaser from the retail pharmacist has been headline news in the past year or so on both sides of the Canada-U.S. border. Inquiries, investigations and committee studies have been launched in an effort to find out whether it is fact or fiction that public health has become the tool of profiteers.

"The line of inquiry has thus far been turned in the direction of drug manufacturers rather than pharmacists and it is wise to keep the picture in perspective. The skill and knowledge of the graduate pharmacist cannot be measured in dollars. Nor can a dollar value be placed on the alleviation of human misery or the treatment and cure of illness through the use of drugs.

"An interesting point was raised at the annual meeting of the Ontario Retail Pharmacists' Association in Niagara Falls. The delegates pointed out the possible dangers that could arise in the purchase of drugs from discount or mail order dispensaries. Among these are the misinterpretations, lack of knowledge of the age or condition of the person for whom the drugs are ordered and 'easy access to controlled drugs by addicts or peddlers.' There are occasions when a pharmacist finds it necessary to check with the prescribing physician for verification of the ingredients or clarification of ambiguous direction.

"The main concern of the pharmacist is not how much money he can make from the sale of drugs. Careful and accurate preparation of a prescription and protection of the person for whom the drugs are prescribed are his first considerations.

"In the volume of words that have been published in the past year on drug prices the public vision may be blurred in recognizing the true value of a pharmacist in the community. They have earned public respect and confidence."

The BIBLE TODAY . . .

An emergency situation in Indonesia 18 months ago called for a crash program of printing the Scriptures. It was decided to import 500,000 copies in 22 languages. A review of this program in the light of the increasing demand brought the decision to produce 30,000 Bibles in Javanese, 50,000 in Toba Batah as well as 50,000 New Testaments in Indonesian; 50,000 of the Klinkert-Bode version of the Bible will be printed in Bahasa Indonesian.

After long consultation, the Indonesian Government has decided to allow part of the War Damage Reparation Fund to be used for the printing, in Japan, of 500,000 Bibles in Indonesian.

The negotiations between the Japanese and Indonesian governments are already in progress and it is expected that soon the Bibles will be available.

These measures will begin to meet the immediate need for Scriptures and provide supplies during the time it will take to develop the plans to print the Scriptures in Indonesia.

Hope to set new records at Ottawa Exhibition

Central Canada Exhibition directors at Ottawa are setting their sights on new records at the Exhibition which opens Aug. 18.

With a break from the weatherman there'll be higher attendance, and that's about all that's needed to make this year's show the greatest in the long history of the Exhibition.

There are record entries in most departments, so many in some that as soon as judging is completed entries will have to be moved out so others can move in.

One of the greatest attractions is the tremendous Inter-City Parade arranged for Saturday, the second day of the fair.

There'll be a score of floats, bands and majorette groups galore, ancient cars, giant balloons and a host of other interesting things. The gates will be open, free, until noon to allow viewers into the grounds to see the parade go by the grandstand and watch the presentation of awards.

Agriculture Minister Hamilton will officially open the Exhibition at a dinner Friday evening.

At the grandstand there'll be open air wrestling Saturday night. Then next Monday, Tennessee Ernie Ford, Anita Bryant and the June Taylor dancers take over to headline the nightly grandstand show that runs until the last night, Saturday, August 26.

There will be a car give-away each day of the Fair and a 25,000 silver dollars award on the final night of the show.

Back again this year will be the World of Mirth midway, one of America's greatest travelling shows. And among the other attractions will be three flower shows, a top flight horse show, a big Ladies' Day programme on Tuesday, August 22, free band concerts, a dog show and obedience trials, and hundreds of interesting and educational exhibits, including those of the Women's Institutes and Ottawa Public Schools.

It will be a great Exhibition, bigger and better than ever before, say the officials.

30,000,0000 VOICES ON ONE CIRCUIT

A Bell Telephone Co. physicist recently discussed a device which may one day transmit on a single telephone circuit as many as 30,000,000 conversations.

Such a system could provide more economical use of the channels available on the crowded radio-frequency spectrum.

To accommodate 30,000,000 telephone conversations by radio now would require the use of the entire radio-frequency spectrum, if each conversation were transmitted by a separate transmitter at a single point.

The new device is the optical maser—the first true amplifier of light—a new development of physical science.

A maser is a device for amplifying or generating microwaxes—very short waves. An optical maser, sometimes called a laser, amplifies or generates light waves.

Masers have opened up great possibilities both in research and in technological applications. They are used to increase the range of radio telescopes, which can probe the universe for far greater distances than optical telescopes.

Other possible uses for masers in the future are in optical telescopes, high-definition radar, and surveillance photography from satellites. Optical masers in satellites, using infra-red radiation, could photograph the ground during complete darkness.

ELIMINATES COMPETITION

A duck owned by David Lazar earned the title of "happiest pet" at a Tonawanda, N.Y., playground pet show. Then he demonstrated that he also was the "hungriest."

As the pets lined up for awards, the duck broke loose from its master and gobbled up a frog, two worms and a cricket.

All the victims were contestants.

FRENDLEE FARM CHATS

There's been quite a bit in the papers during the past six months about bomb shelters. Every time Uncle Nikita gets a little overwrought and starts rattling his missiles our defence boys begin worrying about where they'd put us all if he suddenly heaved a block-buster over the top of the world. Cousin Jack down Washington way has been getting slightly belligerent himself of late and has said, more or less in the words of the old Happy Gang song, "We ain't goin' to take it settin' down." So a lot of people are rather uncomfortable.

The best idea for self preservation that the defence fellows have been able to come up with is the private bomb shelter built in one's own basement. There's really nothing to them. You just write in to one of the government departments for the blueprints (no box tops required).

These plans tell you how to build the structure out of cement or cement blocks so that it will repel the effects of the bombs and protect you from fallout until things sort of settle down. You wouldn't need to stay in the place more than two or three weeks. The plans list the equipment you would need to install and the groceries you would stack on the shelves.

Ordinarily I'm ready to go along with anything that will add a few years to my life. I never drive at 90 mph. for instance and I never swim beyond my depth (which is approximately 18") but I'm a little pessimistic about the bomb shelters. I can see a number of problems immediately.

In the first place there isn't room in our cellar. Oh, the cellar is large enough all right but ther's a big cistern in one corner, a potato bin in another, a sump pump in another. There are water tanks and a heater in another corner. We need two corners for coal and wood and the door outside is in the final corner.

These shelters cost a lot too. I haven't the price list at the moment but the way I feel now $100. would be a definate handicap.

Then building one would be something like building a boat. Who wants to build a boat in the winter when there are three feet of snow on the ground? We don't boat then. It isn't until the hot July weather that we long to splash along over the waves but then it's too late to start building. I imagine we'd just never get around to begin to build a shelter until it was too late.

The experts tell us that if a big missile suddenly came over the top and headed in our direction we'd have only fifteen minutes to get into the hide-out. Now if I happened to be asleep I'd never make it. It usually takes about that long to remember who I am and where I am and what I did with my slippers. I'd be late too if I happened to be driving the tractor in the back field. If I got excited and stalled it I'd be there for the duration for the pesky thing doesn't start easily after it is stalled.

Supposing everything went well. The shelter is there in the basement, the siren blows. I'm hanging out the wash, Harry is feeding the pigs. We make a mad rush for safety. He gets there first and takes a pull on the door. It's been a damp week and the door sticks. I push him aside and grab the knob with both hands — and the thing comes off in my hands.

Or suppose we get safely in and close the door. Suddenly I realize Harry is searching in the dark for something. "Where's the matches?" he inquires.

"There aren't any," I reply. "There wasn't a match to be found when I wanted to burn the trash last week until I remembered the ones in the shelter." I just happened to have one in my apron pocket. Later when the lamp begins to flicker I suggest that he get the extra can of oil and refill it. "There isn't any," he confesses. "I couldn't get the bonfire to go last spring and this was the only coal-oil on the farm. I intended to put the can back but—"

It's a similar story when we look for the canned beans for breakfast. I remember borrowing them when we had the threshers and a few other times until there are none left.

Somehow I can't think fallout shelters would be very satisfactory. It seems to me the chap who wrote the letter to the editor had a better idea when he suggested cages to lock up our mad leaders.

Somehow I can't think fallout shelters are necessary. I can't think there will be a third World War. Both sides are sitting on powder kegs and neither dare strike a match to blow up the other in case his own keg would blow up first. If only we could find a way to exchange those powder kegs for food and homes and educations for the millions around the world who have nothing, the need for fallout shelters in our basements would soon disappear for communism would lose its appeal.

But please don't let me discourage you if you're planning a shelter.

Railroad service unchanged at Avonmore

Residents of Avonmore will keep their railroad station, at least for another year.

The Board of Transport Commissioners turned down a Canadian Pacific Railways application to remove the station agent at Avonmore and replace him with caretaker service.

Although the application was dismissed, CPR has the right to renew its bid after one year if conditions warrant.

E. M. Miller, one of the villagers who sat in on the hearing, said the chief argument against the closing of the station was the inconvenience factor involved.

He said the point was stressed that if the station was closed and put on a caretaker basis, freight, telegraph, ticket and C.O.D. service would end, forcing villagers to travel some distance for the same service.

The situation faced by Avonmore villagers is similar to that of many small communities across the province. In an effort to cut down on expenditures, railways have been putting small stations on a caretaker basis, or in effect removing the station agent.

In Avonmore, as in other villages, businessmen are dependent to some extent on the railway for delivery of goods, particularly feed dealers.

Avonmore residents had to, and did prove, that revenue in the town was sufficient to keep the station operating on an agency basis.

Should revenue, however, drop in the next year, the CPR can once again make application to the Board of Transport Commissioners to have the station agent removed.

If revenue should become greater during the next 12-month period, then the station will be kept open.

BUS STOP

A London bobby testified that he spotted 27-year-old Patrick Garrigle hanging by his fingertips from a window ledge above a busy street and asked him what he was doing.

Garrigle replied: "I am waiting for a bus."

The court ruled instead that he was trying to break into an apartment and sent him to prison for six months.

Nature's clock

As you read this, an invisible body is plunging headlong through the universe toward that minute point in space known as earth. As it enters the planet's atmosphere, the cosmic ray finds itself irrevocably on a collision course with a whirling universe infinitely larger than itself. In an instant, it is fused into the barrier which blocks its trajectory —the impact barely enough to send another, nearly similar body whirling out of orbit. In that infinitely narrow slice of time, the inert universe violated by the visitor from outer space is transformed into a new and wonderful thing.

This process has been going on with faster-than-machinegun frequency since the beginning of this earth's time. A hurtling, microscopic neutron, speeding in from outer space, collides as it enters the earth's atmosphere, with an inert atom of nitrogen. It displaces a reluctant proton, and a new atom carbon fourteen with the property of radio-activity exists. It may see the passage of a fraction of a second, it may endure thousands of years. Its death is signalled by the emission of an almost insignificant pulse known variously as "beta particle, electron, or radiation." In the end it becomes, again, nitrogen.

Carbon fourteen is formed in the upper reaches of the earth's atmosphere in appreciable quantities. It differs in its properties from ordinary carbon only in its unstable radioactivity.

Carbon fourteen combines with oxygen to form radioactive carbon dioxide, which is absorbed by plants, which are eaten by animals. Every living thing absorbs a quantity of radioactive carbon, the carbon fourteen and ordinary carbon being identical to the proportion of carbon fourteen in the atmosphere.

The amount of radioactive carbon formed in the upper atmosphere per unit of time is known to be constant, at least so far as the past forty or fifty thousand years are concerned. Thus scientists can deduce the amount of carbon fourteen which organic matter should contain while it is still alive. After the death of the organism, however, the absorption of carbon fourteen ceases. Those amounts which have already been absorbed begin a gradual process of deterioration.

Carbon fourteen has what is called a "half life" of some 5,600 years; that is, a given amount of radioactive carbon will have lost half its radioactivity in 5,600 years.

If a piece of organic matter is found to contain half as much carbon fourteen as another sample, simple arithmetic shows the former to be 5,600 years older than the latter. And if the "younger" sample is only days or months old, the first must be 5,000 years old.

This, basically, is the principle of carbon fourteen dating. It has been used to settle arguments about ancient legends, has dated the mastodon and the Dead Sea Scrolls—has pointed a significant finger backward through time which has been invaluable to archaeologists, geologists, and even oceanographers in determining when history happened.

The carbon fourteen clock has told us that there were mastodons in Ontario 6,000 years ago and 34,000 years ago; that a piece of willowood found near Herbert, Sask., came from a tree which shed its leaves for the last time 10,000 years ago; that a piece of charred one taken from a site close to Avonlea was burned around 450 A.D. The carbon fourteen clock can go back to 38,000 B.C. Its hands have pointed to man's existence as early as 13,500 B.C.

The carbon fourteen clock is a staggeringly complicated, delicately fragile concoction of tubes and instruments culminating in a five-ton iron box. The problems involved in making the clock keep time are almost overwhelming. In order to accurately measure the radioactivity of carbon fourteen taken from the archaeological sample, all other radioactivity must be shut out.

Two injured in collision at Cass Bridge

Two Winchester district residents escaped with minor injuries after the half-ton pick-up truck in which they were riding collided head on with a tractor trailer on Cass Bridge on Highway 31, three miles south of Winchester, about 8 p.m. Friday.

Ronald Steele, 21, of Winchester Springs, the driver, and Catherine Gibson, 16, of Winchester, were thrown clear of the smaller truck after it hit the tractor trailer, smashed into the bridge, rolled once on the pavement and hit the bridge again.

The 1958 truck was a total wreck.

The two occupants were taken to Winchester and District Memorial Hospital. Mr Steele was admitted for observation with shoulder injuries and Miss Gibson was released after treatment.

Damage to the tractor trailer, driven by Arthur G. Cavanagh, 34, of Cornwall, was estimated at $300.

The accident was investigated by Constable Roy Guse, of Morrisburg OPP. Constable Guse said the road was wet and slippery at the time of the collision.

NEW STATUS FOR POTATO

The potato will more and more come to market already processed, and growers have no objection at all, says The Financial Post. Commercial Canadian fruit and vegetable growers like the stability that the processed food business gives to farm operations. That's true of many products besides the once plain potato, now coming back to favour in several forms, such as chips, flakes, sliced, canned.

Potato consumption now is 25% in processed form, and that figure could rise to 80% in a generation, some trade leaders say. One part of this trend shows: Rise in chip output from 10.5 million pounds a year eight years ago to a current estimated 30 million pounds.

The Ontario Safety League reports that in Japan, taxi drivers who have not caused a traffic accident during a period of at least two years are given a certificate, a badge and a sticker to be posted on the windshield. Of the 20,000 taxi drivers in Tokyo, 2,745 have been thus commended.

Miss Margaret Nugent

Margaret Nugent, for the past few years a resident at Glen-Stor-Dun Lodge, died at the lodge in her 95th year.

Born in Berwick, she was the daughter of Mr and Mrs John Nugent.

Miss Nugent worked in the United States for many years, but in 1946 returned to Canada and resided in Ottawa with her nephew, Henry Nugent.

Surviving are nephews and nieces from Finch, Ottawa, North Bay and the United States.

The funeral was held Friday from Brownlee Funeral Home, Finch, with burial in Maple Ridge Cemetery.

Cameron–MacMillan

St. Lukes' Presbyterian church was the scene of a very pretty mid-summer wedding when Miss Jean Eileen MacMillan became the bride of Mr Sheldon Hugh Alexander Cameron. Miss MacMillan is the only daughter of Mr and Mrs Ellery MacMillan while Mr Cameron is the only son of Mr and Mrs Hugh D. Cameron all of Finch.

Rev. A. Williamson officiated at the ceremony and Mrs Earl Bicks was organist. Miss Pamela Rutley sang "The Lord's My Shepherd" and "O Perfect Love."

Miss Beverley Rutley was maid-of-honour and Junior bridemaids were Miss Mary MacMillan, neice of the bride and Miss Brenda Couch, Galt, neice of the groom. Mr Donnie Smirle of Berwick was best man and the ushers were Mr Dalton MacMillan, brother of the bride and Mr Don Lamoureaux of Smith Falls.

The bride's gown was a floor-length model of white peau de soie, fashioned on princess lines with long sleeves and a v-neckline. The skirt extended into a short train. Her finger-tip veil fell from a crown of seed pearls. She carried a purple orchid on a white Bible. Her only jewelry was a teardrop pendant the gift of the groom.

The bridesmaids wore matching floor-length gowns of mauve organza and carried baskets of yellow roses, shasta daisies and snapdragons.

Mrs MacMillan, mother of the bride wore a jacket dress of beige silk shantung with a corsage of bronze mums.

Mrs Cameron, mother of the groom wore a two-piece dress of leaf green silk shantung with a corsage of yellow roses and bronze mums.

Following the wedding, a reception was held in the Community Hall, catered to by the ladies of the Ladies' Aid. A toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. Williamson and ably responded to by the groom. Mr Don Smirle proposed a toast to the bridemaid and Mr Ellery McMillan also spoke briefly.

For travelling, Mr Cameron wore a figured tangerine dress fashioned with a beige overskirt, tangerine hat, brown shoes, gloves and purse. Her corsage was of bronze mums. Mr and Mrs Cameron motored to the East Coast for their honeymoon. On their return they will reside in Smiths Falls where the groom is employed by the Bell Telephone and Mrs Cameron is on the staff of Elgin Public school.

JUST A JOKE

Montreal police for a moment thought they had a new gangland victim on their hands.

They were called to a north-end intersection when passers-by notified them a man was tied to a pole.

To their relief, Montreal's underworld had not been at work.

The victim was a hapless husband-to-be, tied up by some friends as a pre-wedding party stunt.

Mr Eubald Lalonde, of Moose Creek, spent a day in the village this week.

WANDERING MINSTREL

Seraffyn Mork, 33, a former Shakespearean actor, is probably the only professional wandering minstrel in the United States. You would never mistake him for anything else.

Not everybody has a beard, wears a doublet, green and gold hose, a cloak and suede boots, and carries an ivory-handled poniard and lute.

"The costume seems to be a universal passport," chuckled Mork between appearances at an inn at Lennox, Mass. "I can go anywhere and do about anything while wearing it. But it is not a gimmick. It establishes just who I am."

His travels have taken him across 25 nations. An honours graduate from Harvard, he speaks French, German, Danish and Russian and "some Welsh and Sanskrit."

Quebec W.I. was formed in 1911.

BELL LINES

by George Thompson

your telephone manager

Miss McCloskey finds she uses the telephone more than ever before! than ever before.

You probably aren't conscious of it — but chances are you're using your telephone more than you were, say, 10 years ago. How can we tell? Because we're a lot busier here at the telephone company handling your calls. For example, 10 years ago Bell customers made an average of 11,180,000 calls a day. In 1960, we were handling an average of 21,668,000 calls a day throughout our territory—93% increase! Much of this results from new customers, of course. But quite a bit comes from the fact that you're picking up your phone more often because you can call more people, and more people can call you. We're happy to know your telephone is working harder for you—saving steps, making life easier and more pleasant.

We thought it might be a good idea to remind folks in Chesterville once again about our new FREE Concealed Wiring Service for homes under construction. Our installers will place multi-wire cable between the walls throughout a new home provided this service is requested before the walls and partitions are closed in. Then, when the house is completed and the customer has chosen the location, or locations, for telephone service, our installer will locate the hidden wire with an electronic instrument and connect the telephone, or telephones, with the wiring. An inconspicuous plastic face plate will be affixed to the outlet from the wall and the only wire showing will be the lead to the telephone. Most folks agree that this new free service is a real boon to the home owner and adds to the value of his home. For full information, ask your builder to call our Business Office and ask for Concealed Wiring Service.

While anyone in Chesterville can have a white telephone simply by ordering it from the telephone business office, in Poland it seems a white telephone is a special mark of prestige and honour. We heard a story recently about a director of communications in an unidentified Polish town who received 40 white phones for distribution. Everybody wanted one. The whole town was in an uproar and the director a target for protest. He finally set up a special committee to decide who would get the telephones. All but one of the telephones were placed and a heated argument is still going on as to who gets the last one.

Remember, when you're travelling this summer, wherever you go, go first by phone.

LEGALLY DEAD

In the eyes of British law, widow Chrissie Fraser is dead—no matter how strenuously she denies it.

She has to stay that way until the High Court can be persuaded to say she is alive.

The legal demise of Mrs Fraser, 59, a Scots-born South African, dates from July 18 when a coroner's inquest wrongly identified her with a corpse found in a London hotel bathtub.

Coroner Robert Milne ruled that he still hadn't evidence to identify the body in the bathtub, therefore he can not amend the finding that Mrs Fraser is dead.

The only way Mrs Fraser can legally return to life is to obtain a ruling in the High Court.

A relative said: "She is very upset. She is not a wealthy woman and cannot afford an expensive court case."

Until she is pronounced alive again Mrs Fraser's financial and legal affairs will remain frozen.

JOKE WITH A YOLK

Postmen are good sports. And that egg—stamped and hard-boiled—is on its way to California by first class mail.

Postmaster Lewis Moore said somebody dropped the egg into a Nashville mail box with two six-cent stamps glued on and addressed to W. T. Brien of Berkeley, Calif. It's message read:

"Judgment by the gods: Arriving, whole, you are a good egg; broken, you're cracked; not arriving, U.S. postmen are poor sports."

"I've never seen anything like it come through before," said the postmaster. Then he carefully hand-cancelled the egg and tossed it into a mail sack for the trip to Berkeley.

The egg bears no return address.

BAKING WITH HONEY

HONEY IN BAKED GOODS gives a pleasing flavour and cakes made with honey remain moist longer than those made with other forms of sugar, according to the Food and Nutrition Department, Macdonald Institute, Guelph.

Honey is sold in both granulated and liquid forms, as well as in the comb. The colour classes for honey are: White, golden, amber and dark. Colour is in indication of flavour and, generally, the darker the honey, the stronger the flavour.

Liquid honey is convenient for use in baking but granulated honey may be melted in warm water if necessary. Use water that is no warmer than the hand can stand.

Date Honey Bars

These bars keep well and may be made two or three weeks before use. Beat 3 eggs and gradually beat in 1 cup of liquid honey. Combine, sift, then stir in 1½ cups of sifted cake flour, ½ tsp. salt and 1 tsp. baking powder.

Using a food chopper, grind 2 cups of dates and 1 cups of nuts; stir into batter. Place the batter in a greased and floured 9x13-inch pan. Bake in a 350° oven for approximately 30 minutes. When cool, cut into 42 2½x1-inch bars. Store in a tightly covered tin.

How to Substitute Honey for for Sugar in Baking

Honey has approximately the same sweetening power as sugar but it has a higher moisture content. Consequently, when you replace one cup of sugar with one cup of honey in baking, you need to cut down the liquid one quarter. For example, in a recipe calling for one cup of sugar and one cup of milk, use one cup of honey and three-quarters of a cup of milk. With some honey, you may even cut the milk by half, advises the Home Economics Service of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. This might mean a bit of experimenting but you can use half the milk to begin with, bake one or two test cookies, and then add the remained of the milk if necessary.

Amber-coloured honey adds a distinctive flavour of its own and is very tasty in soft cookies such as hermits and spice cookies. Honey develops a chewy quality, however, so for crisp cookies, use only enough honey to replace five percent of the sugar. Even this small amount adds to the flavour of sugar cookies or vanilla wafers. In chewy cookies such as fruit bars and brownies, you might replace amount for amount. Honey is also excellent for fruit cakes, as it keeps them from drying out.

One thing to watch in baking with honey is not to use too high a temperature, since over-heating destroys sofe of the very fine flavour.

Honey-Nut Bread

3 cups whole-wheat flour
3 tsps. soda
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. nutmeg
1 cup chopped nuts
2 cups sour milk
½ cup liquid honey

Heat oven to 350 degrees.

Mix dry ingredients and 1 cup nuts in mixing bowl. Blend milk and ½ cup honey and stir into dry ingredients, stirring just enough to blend. Pour into greased 9x5x3-inch loaf pan and bake 45 to 50 minutes or until a toothpick stuck into centre comes out clean.

Muffins to Eat with Honey

Especially good with fresh comb honey, or liquid if you prefer.

2 cups flour
3½ tsps. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
¼ cup shortening or cooking oil
1 egg
1 cup milk

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Beat egg and blend with milk. Make a depression in the flour and pour in milk and egg mixture and cooking oil or melted shortening. Mix with the least possible amount of stirring so that dry and liquid ingredients are just mixed. Spoon into well greased muffin tins. Do not fill more than two-thirds with mixture. Bake in 375 degree oven 20 minutes. Serve hot with honey.

World's largest bicycle factory

In a program recently broadcast in the BBC General Overseas Service "Made to Order" series which tells the stories behind some of Britain's exports, Patrick Feeny, with the help of members of the staff of Raleigh Industries, Nottingham, described the manufacture of a bicycle.

"The factory, occupying 62 acres of land, with more than six miles of overhead conveyor belts, and employing 6,742 people, is the largest bicycle factory in the world," said Feeny, "and of its total production of over one and a quarter million bicycles a year, more than 70 per cent is for overseas markets."

The 1,814 components in a fully equipped bicycle start life in three different parts of the factory and finally converge on the assembly department, where the bicycle is built up as it goes along the conveyor belt. The mudguards and forks are fitted, a decorative lining put on the mudguards, the pedal cranks fitted to the bottom bracket, the front wheels to the front fork, the back wheels to the back stay and the pedals on the frames. Then are fitted the chain guard, gearcase, handlebars and brakes which are tested and the complete bicycle is then ready to be inspected, crated and shipped. Behind these processes there are the larger factors of research, production planning, testing and design.

Market requirments are made known to the design department by representatives who travel the world markets and there is no standard design for the export markets but rather numerous designs each peculiar to a particular market. In the Canadian market they prefer a curved top tube and only one brake of the back pedalling type; in Africa they are mainly 28-inch wheel bicycles in black finish, while in the European markets such as Greece, heavyweight bicycles are preferred to the normal British lightweight.

In order to develop the best possible bicycle quality is constantly checked. Endurance qualities are tested by placing weights where the saddle and handlebars would be and then placing the whole machine on two drums which have bumps on them. These are turned by an electric motor at a constant speed which gives the same effect as if the bicycle were being ridden by a heavy man at 24 miles an hour over the roughest kind of road imaginable. A bicycle has even been dropped from a helicopter without breaking any vital parts.

There is a machine to test how the frame stands up to the strain of heavy braking while brake blocks and other components are tested in high temperatures in an oven and in a low temperature cabinet.

Lubrication, where oil must give satisfactory service in all types of climatic conditions, is another problem, so oils with a flat viscosity curve must be used. This means that the conditions within a given component will not vary within extremes of climatic change. Oil, for instance, will not drip out of a component under tropical sunlight, neither will it freeze in sub-arctic conditions.

"What goes into these bicycles," said Feeny, "is research by men with wide scientific knowledge, skilled workmanship, and design, conceived by men with an understanding of the different conditions in different countries. So that these bicycles can endure the hottest climates and the coldest, the smoothest roads—and the roughest."

WEED MENACES SHIPS

A beautiful purple-flowered weed called water hyacinth has become a menace to navigation on parts of the White Nile, in the Sudan. Carpets of it, thick and solid enough to walk on, have spread across huge tracts of the river. Barges have been trapped in it; cows graze on its lush green leaves at the risk of being devoured by crocodiles which lie in wait below the floating roots.

A great pest in the Congo, this weed was hitherto unknown in the Nile Valley but its rapid growth in the Sudan is causing concern. The weed is now being attacked with chemical sprays of the kind used in the Congo, where efforts to control it have cost vast sums.

Grand Coulee Dam on the Columbia River, 4,300 feet long and 550 feet high, was started in 1933 and completed in 1941.

PREFERS WIGWAM

Outside a makeshift wigwam on a birch-rimmed shore of Lac Sebastian, an 89-year-old Indian chief watches glumly while well-meaning friends build a new home for him and his family.

Philippe Xavier, grand chief of the Montagnais tribe, has no intention of moving into the new house, being built to replace a ramshackle abode erected 53 years ago for the use of the chief and his family.

He prefers the solitude of the bush, with his wigwam placed close to the spot where the rippling water plays tag with the shoreline of his beloved lake.

The Xaviers have lived in the Lac Sebastian area, 285 miles northwest of Quebec City, since 1876, making their living through farming, hunting, trapping and fishing.

In recent years their closest friends in the outside world have been Clement Dufour, a Chicoutimi fur merchant, and Jean-Joseph Simard, mayor of St. David de Falardeau, each voting money towards the project. A lumber company donated the lumber.

Old Chief Philippe insists that he be allowed to spend his remaining years in his wigwam.

High productivity and low production costs are essential to profitable farming. Neither can be attained by using old-fashioned methods and obsolete machinery. The only way they can be achieved is by utilizing modern methods and up-to-date farm machinery.
Massey-Ferguson machines and implements are helping farmers the world over to make their particular farming operation more profitable by doing more work at less cost.

Winchester village council angered by demands of High School Board Meeting last week, Winchester Village council became angered upon hearing a letter from the North Dundas High School Board re the proposed high school site at the fair grounds. The following demands were made:

1. That the council of the village be responsible for the construction of a hardtop access road to the school from Main Street, and the paving of adequate parking space at the school.
2. That the North Dundas District High School Board be given complete control of the community park located in front of the school site.
3. That council be responsible for the cleaning of ditches, etc., allowing for proper removal of surface water from the area.
4. That council be responsible for the snow plowing of the street and all parking areas at the new school.
5. That council be responsible for the construction of a suitable sidewalk adjacent to the roadway leading to the school.
6. That council be responsible for fill for the new school at an estimated cost of $4,000.

Council said that if it consented to such a proposal costs could range higher than $30,000—borne by the ratepayers of the village. It was stressed that all ratepayers in the district should bear the expense of the "extras" after the village had provided the site.

Council said that "co-operation within reason" would be given the school and that it would be afforded the same facilities that other business places are given in the village. The door was left open in a motion which was unanimously passed and forwarded to High School Board secretary Carl Rice and which stated that the council turned down the Board's demands but would meet with the Board if it wished to discuss the matter of the high school site at the fair grounds.
