Community Tenders Farewell To Rev. Rogers

On Sunday morning, the 10th of February, Rev. Allan Rogers conducted his last service at St. John the Baptist Anglican Church, before his departure to become the rector of St. Paul's Church, Overbrook, Ottawa. The church wardens had decided to have, on that same day, a Pot Luck supper in the Parish hall to which were invited members of the congregation and the general public of the village of Iroquois and of Matilda Township, so that they might bid Mr. Rogers "Farewell" and to wish him success in his new appointment.

Over 100 guests attended the supper, approximately half being of denominations other than Anglican. Amongst those attending were Rev. Brian Gee and his family, and the new United Church minister to Matilda, Rev. Joyce. There was lots to eat and everyone enjoyed the supper.

After supper, the wardens, Mr. Carl Banford and Mr. Gerald Cornell, along with former warden Mr. James Styles, on behalf of members of the congregation, presented Mr. Rogers with a purse of money as a token of their esteem. Mr. Styles gave a resume of Mr. Rogers' six years with the congregation, stressing that not only did he minister to their spiritual needs most efficiently, but he was a dear friend and good neighbour to everyone in the community. Following the presentation, the audience gave Mr. Rogers a standing ovation singing "For he's a jolly good fellow".

Mr. Rogers responded by saying he was greatly touched at the honour paid him by having this special supper and gift, also the many expressions of appreciation he had received. He said that he had never worked in a parish in which he so quickly identified himself with the members of the community and that he enjoyed working with them. He very much regretted having to leave. He felt that he was one of us.

Mr. Rogers is taking a week's vacation before assuming his new duties. He flew to Barbados on the 16th of Feb. where he hopes to see his brother stationed in Trinided with Air Canada. He will return on Feb. 23rd and proceed immediately to Overbrook.

Morrisburg Old Timers Tie R.C.M.P.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police came to Morrisburg Friday night by bus, in hopes of defeating the Morrisburg Old Timers, but went home without capturing a win.

The Police led 3-0 after the first period on goals by Ed Bleackley, Dave Larabie and Bryon Sutcliffe.

Allie Cameron and Bill Duval narrowed the lead to 3-2 early in the 2nd period. Rick Somerville gave the Mounties a 5-2 lead when he scored a pair. Earl Brown narrowed the lead to 5-3 to end the 2nd period.

The Old Timers found their legs in the third, with Allie Cameron scoring at 5.20 and Bill Duval tieing the game at 6.35 at 5-5. Fred Laforge put the hometowners ahead at 8.45. Larabie and George Spracklin gave the Police a 7-6 lead, but Earl Brown tied the game at 18.50, 7-7 and despite the Mounties having a man advantage, they were unable to beat Rick Droppo who stopped the high flying Mounties, time and time again.

Referees Gary and Ralph Duvall ticketed each team with 5 minors each.

Heart Fund canvass over top

The annual Heart Fund Sunday Blitz, Feb. 10th, went over the top of last year's canvass with receipts of $484.15 being turned-in by the young people who canvassed both the village and concessions. A special "thank you" is extended by the local branch of the Canadian Heart Fund (Ontario Heart Foundation) for this grateful expression of generosity on the part of our citizens. Many people, including some of our residents, will benefit from the use being made of these contributions for cardio-vascular disease research and preventive medicine. And our special appreciation goes out to the youth canvassers: Joyce Smollett, Mary Lynn Waddell, Coleen Holder, Joy Parks, Brenda Loucks, Janie Barnhartd, Anita Bron, M. Kay Styles, Rondalyn Adair, Cheryl Styles, Meridee Adair, Cindy Mason, John Dewit, Norman Ladouceur, Melvin Yee and the adults who assisted them, Lorraine and Harry Norton, Anne Yee, Rose Marie Lavallie and Bill Barnhartd.

Thanks to all,

GUARANTEED INCOME? A Hope or A Promise?

The United Church of Canada has come out in favour of a guaranteed income for all Canadians and while they say they don't expect it to happen immediately, they are hopeful that the government will start moving in that direction.

Now we don't have any opposition to every one of this country having an adequate income so that he or she can live without fear of being starved or adequately housed, but we do not take to the universal attitude that ALL Canadians should be guaranteed a set amount of money. We feel that those needing help because of an inability to provide should be helped. There are people who cannot, due to health or mental reasons, lack of adequate education or training, help themselves. The elderly and disabled are also in the category of those who we should see are well looked after.

This country has swung just about as far as it can towards a complete socialistic society with a specific group of people paying most of the shot. These same people are not going to sit still much longer for a further erosion of their earnings. This week the President of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce pointed this out in saying that the middle income group are generous and he hopes will continue to be generous in their thinking. He hopes they will continue to let our governments use our money for essential social services but also feels that we are on the verge of having these people rebel should anything further happen to weaken their dollars, already hard hit by inflation.

As working Canadians hear of the abuses of some of our already existing social services, such as unemployment insurance and health plans and see people not working when jobs are going unfilled, they are steadily becoming hardened and disgruntled. Should they rise up, as they someday must if they are to protect their hard-earned rights, then our governments will discover the silent majority.

We Canadians seem to be a slow, deliberate people who, for the most part, believe in hard work as a means of achieving our goals. But we also are known to only take so much before we rebel in high gear.

Guaranteed income is a nice sounding phrase but that is all it is. Should the day ever come when any government shall deem themselves above the authority of the majority of the people then Canada will surely be in a sad mess. We think we have problems now but they will be minor to those of the future.

Perhaps we have become a bit soft in our approach to some of the social problems faced in this country but hard-working people will only stand for so much. When a man and wife now both work to provide what they want for themselves and their children and suddenly find themselves supporting in almost like style those who are not willing to work and who find every means to avoid it, they will not stand still. Nor do we blame them.

We do not think that the United Church of Canada, in its most recent statement, gave all the qualifications it should have to such a suggestion. And there must be qualifications if any such idea is to be acceptable to the rest of Canada.

Those in need should indeed be helped...but only those in need. And it should be their right to expect and receive help but a "guarantee to all Canadians?"

This summer's job program will place increased emphasis on matching jobs and students and will attempt to give students an opportunity to work and see other parts of Canada.

In addition to these programs, the Department of Manpower and Immigration will further assist students to find jobs by opening 251 special employment centres in April. Last year these centres placed more than 200,000 students in summer jobs.

Bill Smiley

I WONDER WHO REALLY WON?

by Bill Smiley

I've just been reading a book about the Battle of Britain, written by Peter Townsend. He was a World War II fighter pilot and was in the battle himself.

He's also the chap the royal family wouldn't allow to marry the then Princess Margaret, because he'd been divorced. He was probably lucky. Later she married that pipsqueak photographer called Jones or Smith or something. He is now Lord Something-or-other. His wife is Princess Northing-or-other.

Anyway, it's an excellent book, for anyone interested in battles that have changed the course of history. Townsend has consulted a mass of material from both German and British records, and gives a balanced picture of the B. of B., looking at it from both sides of the English Channel.

By the way, is anyone interested in the battles that changed history, besides me and a few history buffs? There are quite a few of them, and one must wonder what would have happened to history if the battles had been lost, not won.

At least one of them has probably affected you, personally.

If the Persians hadn't been slowed down at Thermopylae and trounced at Marathon, they'd have wiped out the Greeks. Think what that would have done to the restaurant business in Canada. Not to mention Jackie Onassis' $20,000 a week in spending money.

If Drake and his fleet had not beaten the Armada, half the people in Canada would be talking Spanish, eating garlic and going to bullfights.

How would you like to be out a bullfight this afternoon (it's 15 below outside), sitting in the shady side of the arena, and shouting "Ole", at a bullfighter and a bull frozen, literally, into the classic stance of the bull-ring?

And what about the battle of the Plains of Abraham? If the Limeys hadn't won that one, I'd be happily back in Ireland right now, cutting peat in a bog, instead of sitting here wondering how in the name of energy I'm going to meet my fuel bill.

Go farther back. If Joan D'Arc (later St. Joan), hadn't lifted the siege at Orleans, there'd be no French, no Separatiste Party, no Canadian problem.

Another dandy was the Battle of Culloden, where Bonny (retarded) Prince Charlie was beaten by the English. Instead of the Scottish invading England in kilts, they were forced to invade with their brains, and they took over the financial affairs of the British Empire. Which, as we all know, are somewhat less than remarkable.

Back home again, there's the Battle of Queenston Heights, which nobody knows much about except the residents of Queenston, and few of them. But this produced a great, pure, Canadian image, Laura Secord chocolates, without which Canada could probably not have maintained its integrity, nationality, and rotten teeth.

The Yanks have theirs. The Alamo, for example. One of the most stupid affairs in history. (If anyone ever tells you that you are going to fight to the last man, throw away your gun and begin running in all directions, preferably at once.)

There was, of course, the Charge of the Light Brigade, which didn't change the course of anything. But it did serve as a lasting memorial to the utter stupidity of the British ruling classes. And from that war we did get the Cardigan sweater and the Raglan coat. Not to be sneezed at. Or on.

Perhaps you have sensed my purpose in this little essay. Or, perhaps, like me, you haven't.

Well, like, it's been a bad day, y'know, and y' take an' put your average Canadian up against something, and he'll come up with something, eh?

Oh, yeah. I remember. I was wondering what would have happened if we'd lost the Battle of Britain. It would have been a Jolly Good Show.

Hitler was prepared to make generous terms, and divide the known world with Britain. Pretty good deal, I'd say.

But the obstinate, stupid British decided to fight. And even worse, they won. The Luftwaffe did not destroy the R.A.F., which had the privilege of being attached to me (or was it the other way around?) during the war.

Result, Britain is sliding down the sluice into economic anonymity. Germany is master of Europe, financially.

It pays to lose wars. Germany and Japan, the big losers in W.W. II, are riding an incredible winning streak in peacetime.

Italy won a short war in Abyssinia, bombs against arrows, machine-guns against spears. She's in her usual mess.

France "won" two wars and is in chaos. Britain "won" two wars and couldn't borrow a quarter for a pint of bitter.

America "won" two wars and the dollar is about as health as a wet tissue

Maybe we should have lost the Battle of Britain.

Report From Queen's Park

Don Irvine, M.P.P.

In the spring of 1973, the Ontario Government took the initiative in calling for a National Energy Conference. As you are aware, the federal and provincial energy ministers finally met last month.

How many times have you heard that Ontario does not have an energy crisis because we enjoy the economic benefits that go with living west of the Ottawa Valley - that geographic boundary which the federal government years ago decreed would terminate the Trans-Canada pipeline. A lot of Ontarians don't realize that there are about 700,000 people living in the south eastern corner of this province who--when it comes to oil pricing are paying as much as the people in Quebec and the Maritimes.

When Premier William Davis set out what he considered the four essential principles for a comprehensive energy policy for Canada - a single domestic base price for oil: self-sufficiency; maintenance of the environment; and conservation of resources - Ontario had as much at stake as any other province dependent on Middle-East oil. In fact, the number of Ontario residents, affected by the rising costs of imported oil, is equivalent to the populations of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island combined.

Only time will tell if the conference has achieved a degree of success. When it wound up, Prime Minister Trudeau's summary indicated that there was a degree of concensus on a single Canada-wide domestic price and an extension of the current price freeze to the end of March. The key to the successful realization of a single price structure is in the federal taxes imposed on exports of western crude oil to the U. S. Some of the proceeds of this tax would be used as a subsidy to consumers east of the Ottawa Valley line to cushion them against the higher cost of imported foreign oil.

I have heard suggestions in some quarters that the Ontario government should defray the higher costs of its citizens in eastern Ontario. There are two things wrong with this reasoning. Firstly, Ontario has no oil resources upon which to realize royalties which could be used for this purpose. Secondly, and more to the point, the constitutional jurisdiction in this matter rests squarely with the federal government. It is the only one with power over international and inter-provincial trade.

In addition to that portion of the funds being used to subsidize the price of foreign oil, a percentage will be allocated to Saskatchewan and Alberta - who produce the oil. It is only fair that the producing provinces should receive reasonable rewards associated with ownership of the resource.

Looking to the future, considerable expense will be incurred in the exploration and development of new energy resources. The enormous amounts of money required to do this job must also be made available. A national energy policy that serves the nation's interest means not only that its rewards and benefits must be shared, but that costs as well must be divided. Ontario recognizes and accepts this fact and is prepared to play its part.

Along with the other harbingers of spring, comes the federal income tax collector. This year the Ontario government is doing something about reducing taxes, at least for the people who live in this province. In his last budget, Provincial Treasurer John White added two new tax credits, to go along with the one you were able to claim last year. This year everyone in Ontario will be able to claim a sales tax credit as well as the older property tax credit. Senior citizens will have available to them an additional credit to apply against any taxes that they might owe. Two out of every three Ontario citizens will share in the $300,000,000 that the government of Ontario will be distributing. An old age pensioner who is not liable for income taxes, could receive as much as $250.

In my next column, I will deal in much greater detail about this subject so that the residents of Grenville-Dundas can be assured of getting their "fair share" of this money.

St. Lawrence Branch to host Ontario Agrologists

The St. Lawrence Branch will host the Ontario Institute of Agrologists Conference in 1975. This was announced by the local Branch President, Herb Norry, at a Ladies' Night meeting held in Kemptville recently.

"This will be a major undertaking by the St. Lawrence Br.", stated Jim McCullough of Morrisburg who is one of several already planning this event.

Ed Pearson, Agricultural Representative for Grenville County, entertained the group with recollections and a film of horse racing which has long been his avid hobby.

A new member, Dennis McKnight of the Kemptville College staff, was introduced by a colleague, Graham Hooper. Membership growth in the St. Lawrence Branch shows the highest percentage increase in the whole Province of Ontario.

Members of the Institute of Agrology are striving to be of increasing service to the agricultural industry and the public.

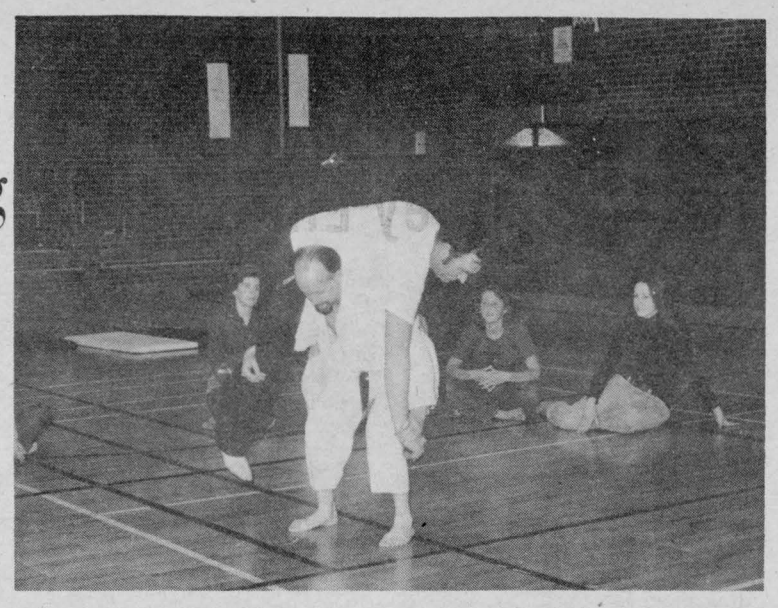
Typing instructor Joan Morrell of Iroquois gets a point across during lesson, in St. Lawrence College continuing education program at Seaway District High School.

Continuing Education



Lifting a 200 pound person is easy when you know how to do it, as judo instructor Art Martell of Williamsburg demonstrates. Judo is part of St. Lawrence College continuing education program at S.D.H.S.

Community response to part-time studies is the reason for the success of continuing education departments in Colleges of Applied Arts and Technology in Ontario and the Cornwall Campus of St. Lawrence College is no exception.

When the college started offering part-time studies in 1967, thirty adults enrolled in the one course being offered. Today, over 3,000 area residents are enrolled in a long list of continuing education courses.

"Continuing education offers many people a second chance to get a post-secondary education", says Eugene Cardinal, Chairman of the department. "In other cases, we offer people an opportunity to upgrade their skills and keep abreast of changes in business and technology. Our arts and crafts and general interest courses help people spend their leisure time in creative, satisfying activities."

Through the department, part-time students can enroll in certificate of diploma programs in Applied arts, Technology, Business and Academic upgrading. They can also enroll in a wide range of general interest, non-credit courses.

In Applied Arts, certificates can be earned in Graphic arts, Photography, Etching and Printmaking, Ceramics and Sculpture, Painting and Drawing, and Social Service Administration.

In Business, Accounting, Manufacturing Management, Computing and Information Processing, Retailing, and Real Estate certificate programs are available.

Engineering technician, Engineering technologist and Stationary engineer certificate programs are offered in Technology. The Retraining department offers Academic upgrading certificates at the grade eight, grade ten and grade twelve levels.

Some popular general interest courses are: Ceramics, Gourmet cooking, Welding, Judo, Amateur radio, Scuba diving, Weaving, Sewing and Painting.

Until now, credit courses for certificates or diplomas have been available only at the Cornwall campus, however, it is hoped that a few credit courses will be offered at some of the College's satellite compuses in the three United Counties in the near future.

Eleven satellite campuses in Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry are now offering residents a variety of general interest courses. Satellite campuses are located in Alexandria, Lancaster, Iroquois, Morrisburg, Ingleside, Crysler, Moose Creek, Glen Robertson, Dalkeith, Maxville and Avonmore.

"We expect to expand and improve on our services in the satellite campuses over the next few years," Mr. Cardinal said. "As people in the area make their needs known to us, we will act to satisfy them."

Recently, a new set of courses was started in Iroquois. "We expected 50 people to register and over 90 showed up," Mr. Cardinal said.

He said his department is anxious to hear from area residents and noted that a coordinator was recently added to his staff. Two coordinators now look after the continuing education needs of residents outside the Cornwall area. Guy Leger looks after Glengarry and northern Stormont and Tom Butkovich coordinates activities in Dundas and southern Stormont.

The continuing education department is also responsible for the College's Training in Business and Industry program. T.I.B.I. courses are offered in cooperation with employers to upgrade and improve the skills of their employees.

Five companies are currently involved in I.I.B.I. courses covering such topics as supervision, millwright training and fluid power.

A "pet" project of the department this year is its program of arts and crafts for senior citizens. The program began last fall and is operating successfully in four locations in Cornwall and at the Maxville Manor. The department hopes to expand this program to cover the three counties and to run it year round.

At the moment, continuing education is looking forward to the summer semester when it expects to offer a variety of new courses, Mr. Cardinal said.

Photographs on view at Morrisburg Branch of Seaway Valley Libraries

Starting this week, a striking display of photographs is on view at the Morrisburg branch of Seaway Valley Libraries. The collection of 98 pictures is mostly in colour and shows "People of many lands". The collection will remain in Morrisburg until March 15.

"People of many lands" drew thousands of visitors to Ottawa, when it formed the annual summer show of Canadian photography in the National Film Board gallery. The author is free-lance photographer George Hunter.

Originally from Saskatchewan, George Hunter is one of Canada's, and the world's, leading photographers. In the last two decades, he has visited over eighty countries, bringing back photographs from every nation. He criss-crosses Canada seven or eight times a year, and he moves outside the country, across oceans, at least three times annually.

George Hunter's photographic career reaches back to a special trip, when as a boy of fifteen his school class in Winnipeg elected him to go to London, England, to photograph the coronation of King George VI in May 1937. After he graduated from school, Hunter went to work for The Winnipeg Tribune. The National Film Board came next, and in his five years there, 1945 to 1950, he served as Canada's official photographer to the United Nations.

A visit to Stockholm changed the direction of his career in the summer of 1950. He met Karl Gullers, a photographer of great talent and great popularity, and Gullers inspired Hunter to try life as an independent, taking, in effect, the world as his subject. After leaving the National Film Board, Hunter flew his own aircraft for ten years, though for the last dozen years, he has relied on rented planes and helicopters. Hunter's specialty is out-of-the-way and difficult-to-reach pieces of landscape. In the air he works through an open space simply by removing a door on his side of the aircraft and secures himself by a specially designed safety harness.

On the ground, Hunter operates out of a custom-built photo cruiser. It's the size and weight of a Greyhound bus; it tows along a cream-coloured Jeep Commando for manoeuvring in closer quarters; it comes equipped with a twenty-five foot hydraulic-operated ladder mounted on the roof for high-angle shooting; and its living quarters provide ample room for comfortable relaxing on the road.

Does Hunter have any favourite shooting areas?

"In Canada" he says, "you have to move around the country fast and often because things change so quickly these days. If you aren't around a city like Calgary or Ottawa, say, for six months, then the transformation is really amazing. And it's the same out in the country. Changes happen very fast."

Hunter has his favourite pieces of Canadian landscape, and they make up a long list. The west coast of Vancouver in British Columbia. The foothills near Pincher Creek, Alberta, and Mount Assiniboine in the same province. The prairie grain fields during harvest time (I haven't missed a single autumn shooting out there in years"). The lake area northeast of Flin Flon, Manitoba. Lake of the Woods, Quetico Park and Muskoka in Ontario. The Laurentians of Quebec, The Gaspe, and the farming district on the west side of Lake Memphremagog. The south shore of New Brunswick, all of Cape Breton in Nova Scotia, and the entire north coast of Prince Edward Island. Not to forget the Labrador and the Trinity Bay area of Newfoundland.

"Almost every part of the country", Hunter says, "Has some magic to it when you look through a camera".

DOLLARS & GOOD SENSE

Now that most consumers have adjusted to the world of credit cards, someone is planning to make them obsolete.

The U.S. Savings & Loan League has developed a plan based on a card that works quite differently. Although you will still hand a credit card to the cashier to pay for your purchases, the transaction will not be the same at all.

The cashier will punch your account number and the amount of purchase on a keyboard connected to a computer. If your balance is sufficient, the computer will approve the purchase and deduct the amount from your balance, calculating interest on that amount up to the moment of withdrawal.

The system, now being explored by some California savings and loan associations, eliminates all the paperwork of credit cards—and speeds up the checkout time for those shoppers who like to use checks and everyone behind them.

The plan guarantees payment to the merchant since the money is automatically withdrawn from the customer's account at the time of purchase.

The banks aren't about to be scooped, though. They're watching the progress of this plan closely and are ready to move in quickly once it gains acceptance.

Readers' questions are welcome and should be sent to Box 5875, London, Ontario.

Atom B's win 6-2 over Chesterville

Jamie Thompson with three goals paced the Atom B's to a 6-2 win on Sat. Singles went to Alan Burgess, Frank Lee and Shannon Adams.

The Bantams took a 4-2 win over Winchester last Tuesday. Steven Brennan tapped in two rebounds from shots by Jackie Beckstead and Barry Casselman. The other Iroquois goals were by Mike Styles and R. Wagner.

On Thurs. night, our Bantam squad played a tight game against a Cardinal "B" team. The game was a scoreless tie until the last 17 seconds when Mike Styles scored to give Iroquois a 1-0 victory.

Our Novice team defeated Cardinal by an 8-0 count on Sat. Frank Lee led the way, scoring four times. Alan Burgess scored twice and singles went to Andy Lee and Bobby Kirker. Kevin Ault in net earned the shutout.

In a rough afternoon contest, the Kemptville Novices took home a 3-1 victory, their last goal being scored into an empty net. Frank Lee was the lone Iroquois marksman.

The Atom "A" team handed Morrisburg a 3-1 defeat last Thurs. Tim Patterson from Scott Brennan accounted for the first Iroquois goal. Steve Kirker and Patterson each scored on unassisted efforts to give us our other markers.

Brian Froats earned another shutout as the Atoms came home from Kemptville with a 4-0 victory. Steven Kirker led the way with two goals while Brennan and Patterson added singles.

Mike VeltKamp, Tony Picotte and Ricky Albers each put two goals behind Prescott's netminder to give Iroquois Tykes a 6-1 win on Sat. Later on the same day, the Tykes defeated Morrisburg 4-0 on the strength of single goals by Jim Aspin, Darren Smith, Kevin Barkley and Jeff Whittaker.

The Pee Wee "A" squad competed at the Morrisburg Tournament on Sat. where they lost their first game to North Franklin by a 4-3 score. Bruce Armstrong scored two and Kim Adams one. The second encounter against Athens ended in a 2-2 tie, but Athens were declared winners by virtue of scoring the first goal. Bruce Armstrong scored both Iroquois goals.

In an exhibition tilt against Cardinal on Monday, Kim Adams had 2 goals and 1 assist to lead the Pee Wees to a 6-4 win. The other goals came from Robin Adair, Randy Casselman, Martin Hamilton and Graham McMartin. In their first play off game, the Iroquois Midgets were beaten 7-0 by a tough Cardinal squad.

Association Celebrate 100th Anniversary

Hon. William A. Stewart, Ontario's Minister of Agriculture and Food, recently congratulated the Ontario Veterinary Association on its 100th Anniversary, which was observed at the association's annual meeting at the Constellation Hotel in Toronto, Jan. 27 to 31.

"Ontario's livestock industry has always depended upon the practicing veterinarians of this province to maintain close control over animal diseases and minister to animal health problems that can arise on the farm," he said. "We can be justifiably proud of the contribution they have made to Ontario agriculture. It is no accident that our livestock and poultry industry is so efficient, that our animals are in such demand on the markets of the world, that we have brought under control many of the livestock and poultry diseases which continue to ravage herds and flocks in other countries.

"As a stockman, as a farmer, and as Minister of Agricultue and Food, I am pleased to pay warm tribute to the O.V.A. and wish its hundreds of members across the province the very best for 1974 as the association embarks on its second century of service to the livestock industry of Ontario."

Walter Baker, M.P. Reports

Walter Baker, M.P. (P.C. - Grenville-Carleton) recently charged the Trudeau government with "wasting taxpayers' money and threatening the careers of civil servants in its recent decision to ease language training in some sectors of the public service and to give priority to those in positions designated bilingual."

Mr. Baker said that with this change in policy "the situation with respect to language training is now more confused than ever" and he termed it "an impossible course."

"What the government has set for itself," he said, "is an impossible time limit for a bilingual civil service. The results are that those public servants already on language training programs now find their programs cancelled and will suffer because of it and others are discriminated against because they are unable to obtain the language training they may need for promitional advancement."

"Instead of the government's present position of reconsidering the quota system and the time frame for language training," he said, "the government should tackle at once, the problems of advancement for those public servants who have real problems learning a second language in order to provide fair treatment for all civil servants concerned."

"There is a growing feeling in the public service," said Mr. Baker, "that designation, coupled with requirements to fill positions is tempting supervisors to fill positions too hastily. As a result, many public servants feel that technical competence has been sacrificed at the expense of language requirements."

"I also understand that civil service morale is low and this is a very real problem not only in terms of the hardship it causes to the individual civil servant, but in dollar value return to the taxpayers who support the public service."

Iroquois U.C.W. hold February meeting

"Contemplations From A Capsule" was the theme of st study as the Iroquois U. C. W. continued to think about this changing world and the changing times through which we live. Can you imagine a small space ship on its first sub-orbital probe into the vast sea of space that is man - his nature, his spirit, his future? Leader, Marjorie Fowler, chose four groups and to each gave a topic for discussion, ideas then to be shared with the others. The four areas were as follows: 1) The Future As Problem - increased life span; organ transplants; genetic counselling; famine and disease; the energy food crisis predicted for our country. 2) Man As Different - what are the options we may hold about ourselves - that we are animal only, that we are fallen, or that we are incomplete? Are we ourselves the long-sought missing link between animals and the really humane being which man can yet become? 3)The Legitimacy of Religion- it is right to make room for religion in the discussion about man and his future. Religion cannot be divorced from daily life. Also how do we account for human decision and freedom to determine the outcome of history and yet believe in Divine promise and purpose? 4) Control and Democratization - a discussion about the advantages and disadvantages of the three possible forms of government: government by one (dictatorship); government by the few (wise elite, scientists, philosophers, teologians, etc); government by the many (total democratization) the ideal but most tremendous assignment to deal with the magnitude of our problems.

All the ladies were deeply interested and concerned by the perplexities of our changing world and so the worship that followed brought a comforting message, "Let Anxious Hearts Grow Quiet". Presented by Nelda Gilmer, Kay Morgatroyd, Marjorie Fowler, the worship began with a quote from Benjamin Franklin, "I have lived a long time, and the longer I live, the more convincing proofs I see of this truth; that God governs in the affairs of men. And if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without His notice, is it possible that an empire can rise without His aid. "A poem by Harry Emerson Fosdick asked that our spirits be made receptive to peace, that our anxious wills be dimmed, our restless living quieted and our lives grow more serene. Prayer asked that God grant peace within our hearts, light upon our way. The story "Miracle on the Susquehanna" told how a hunter who fell into the midst of an unfriendly Indian tribe was spared because they saw evidence that the Great Spirit was with him, guiding his every step, his every move. The worship closed with the Salutation to the Dawn, the closing lines of which say, "Today well lived makes every yesterday a dream of happiness and every tomorrow a vision of hope".

President Irene Haldane took the chair for the business meeting. Plans were finalized for the Feb. visit to the Brockville Psychiatric Hospital. A letter from the local branch of the Cancer Society was read. Cookies are to be sent to the Maurice Grimes Lodge and gifts will be made for local distribution. Many items were brought for the layette to be sent to the Victor Home.

Kay Morgatroyd conducted a contest to the enjoyment of everyone.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses bringing to a close a very fine meeting.

Attendance at work contest winners

On Friday, February 1st, Mr. and Mrs. William Dodge, accompanied by Mr. L. Merkley. Personnel Manager for Caldwell Consumer Products, were invited to a luncheon at Dominion Textile Ltd., Head Office, for the final draw in an "Attendance at Work" Contest.

One person from each of the twenty participating Dominion Textile plants was selected by means of a plant draw for having perfect attendance each month for a period of three consecutive months.

The draw for Caldwell Consumer Products was held on Thursday, January 17th, with Mr. William Dodge, a loom fixer with six years service, being the lucky candidate for the final draw, which consisted of twelve one hundred dollar Gift Certificates, three dishwashers, two portable colour T.V.'s, one console colour T.V. and two return trips for two to London, England.

The reception at Dominion Textile Ltd., commenced with words of welcome by the Company President, Mr. R.H. Perowne, followed by a buffet luncheon, then a tour of Head Office, returning to the auditorium for the draws.

Mr. Dodge was the lucky winner of a dishwasher and congratulations are extended to him on behalf of all Management personnel and his fellow workers.
