Mrs Ralph Winters read an address and Mrs Elwood Carbino presented Miss Shea with a wrist watch.

A social hour was enjoyed, followed by a tasty lunch.

Fleming–Morris

With the Rev Canon Gordon Caryer celebrating the nuptial service of Holy Communion, Sheila Alva Jane Morris and Hubert Thomas Fleming were married at Holy Trinity Anglican Church, Chesterville, at 10.30 o'clock Saturday morning, September 1. The bride is the daughter of Mr and Mrs Sydney Morris, of Chesterville, and Mr Fleming is the only son of Mr and Mrs John Fleming, of Crysler. The double-ring ceremony was performed against a background of varicoloured gladioli.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charmingly gowned in a white, floor-length dress of lace, with tiered skirt, high neckline and lilypoint sleeves. Her fingertip veil was held in place with a band of sequins and pearls and she carried a cascade bouquet of white gladioli and roses.

Miss Dorothy Derrough, of Ottawa, and Miss Sheila McPhail, of Chesterville, were bridesmaids and Miss Sharon Morris was maid of honour for her sister. Little Diane Bailey, daughter of Mr and Mrs W. Bailey, was flower girl.

The bride's attendants wore dresses of identical style in waltz length of nylon net with scalloped necklines, in yellow, pink and turquoise. Their nosegays of 'mums and roses and their bandeaux were in colours to match their gowns. Their only adornments were pearls and earrings, the gift of the bridegroom. The flower girl's dress was of smocked white nylon and she wore a bandeau of contrasting colour.

Miss Addie Campderros was the soloist, singing Malotte's "The Lord's Prayer" as the congregation kneeled at the beginning of the communion service, and "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register. J. A. Morris, of Prescott, uncle of the bride and former organist at Holy Trinity, was organist.

The groomsman was Mr Jack McRae, of Crysler, and the ushers were Mr Ronald Droppo, of Chesterville, and Mr Cecil Warner, of Ottawa. Mr Robson Sutherland assisted Canon Carryer as server during the nuptial communion.

The reception, for over 90 guests, was held in the Community Hall. In the receiving line, the bride's mother wore a grey corded silk duster dress with a corsage of pink roses. Mrs Fleming wore a brown figured silk dress with avacado accessories and her corsage was of bronze roses.

Guests were present from Crysler, Prescott, Golden Lake, Perth, Galt, Toronto, Ottawa, Cardinal and Gouverneur. The toast to the bride was proposed by the Rev Canon Carryer, with the groom replying, and Mr McRae proposed the toast to the bride's attendants. Mr Morris thanked the clergyman, the soloist and all others who had assisted with the wedding details.

The happy young couple left from the bride's home for a honeymoon trip to New York City, wearing matching tailored suits of grey. They will reside on their farm near Crysler.

The groom's gift to his bride was a luggage set; to the bridesmaids and maid of honour, pearls and earrings; to the flower girl and soloist, bracelets; to the groomsman and ushers, wallets, and to the organist, cuff links and tie clip.

Prior to her marriage, the bride was presented with a gift by her fellow employees of the LeBreton office of the Bell Telephone in Ottawa, and was honoured at a shower sponsored by Miss Sheila McPhail, Miss Stella Merkley and Mrs Blake Feeley at Chesterville.

Schools Bulging at Seams with 350 Pupils

Chestervile schools opened their doors this week to a record influx of pupils to begin the new Fall term. The new students to the high school have swelled the Grade Nine group so that two classes will have to be formed. The public school rooms are filled to capacity with the teachers teaching three and four grades in some cases. St. Mary's Separate School is registering more pupils than ever before in its history and the final count is not yet at hand. They have almost 65 on the rolls at time of writing, a jump of nearly 20 over last year. Chesterville Public School started out the first day with 147 registered with another half dozen or more expected. Chesterville High School has nearly 20 more this year, with most of them concentrated in the junior form. One hundred and sirteen registered the first day. More are expected.

The two primary schools have only one staff change between them with Mrs Essie Cameron joining the Separate School staff. Chesterville High School have retained Mr Connerty and Mr Cyr of last year's staff and Miss Thom as part-time teacher. Newcomers to the staff are the principal, Mr Rivard, teaching Middle School Math and M. S. Science; Mr McNeil, Latin, Junior Math and Science; Mr C. A. Graham, Shop, Science and Math in Upper School; Mrs Thompson, P. T., English; Mrs H. K. Graham, part-time Home Economics. Miss Thom teaches Commercial and Mr Connerty, English. Mr Cyr has French, P. T. and Math.

ENGAGEMENT

Mr and Mrs Dalton McDermid wish to announce the engagement of their only daughter, Lois Irene, to George Glendon Smith, youngest son of Mrs George Smith and the late Mr Smith. The wedding will take place at St. Paul's United Church, Berwick, September 29 at 2.00 o'clock.

Break-in Nets Cash Thursday Last

Chesterville has been plagued of late by light fingered gentry who have been breaking and entering but not getting very much. Last Thursday at noon their luck changed and they left the premises of S. Barrie and Sons with a large haul of cash and a few small cheques.

The Barrie brothers, Alex and Bert, had gone home to lunch at 12.15 on Thursday leaving the safe locked and the cash register secured. Between that time and 12.40 some party or parties entered the building, used a pinch bar to pry out the drawer of the cash register and remove most of the money contents. A large sum of money is missing and some small cheques. Overlooked were some rolls of silver and a handful of loose change.

Police Chief Leonard Shane is of the opinion access was gained to the building through a side door that could be sprung open. It is thought that the robbery was planned ahead of time to allow for such dispatch in entering, stealing and leaving in so short a time.

Police have opened some leads through questioning and are continuing the investigation.

The Barrie robbery climaxed a series of break-ins or attempted break-ins. They included entering the Beamish Store, Fyke's Garage and an attempt into Campbell's Barber Shop.

As we go to press Police Chief Shane informs us that OPP officers have arrested a person by the name of D. E. Douglas, of Merrickville, who has admitted breaking and entering the Fyke Garage along with about 30 other premises in Eastern Ontario.

ENGAGEMENT

Mr and Mrs Jacob B. Smirle, of Crysler, announce the engagement of their daughter, Joyce, to Mr Carl William Styles, son of Mr and Mrs Murray Styles, of Morrisburg, Ont., on Saturday, September 22 in Knox Presbyterian Church, Crysler, at 2 p.m.

OPINIONS . . .
Ours and Others

A Fine Fair — And a Show of Irresponsibility

Last week's Chesterville Fair was one of the best ever held on the fair grounds with one large exception: the advertised midway attractions were not on hand.

Directors of this fair and any other small fair are at the mercy of the travelling shows. They make their selling spiel at the beginning of the season and in good faith the fair people allow them the concession. The programme they present in games, booths and rides usually is adequate and supplies the necessary entertainment needed for the fairgoers.

The show people are solely responsible when they do not appear on schedule. The sad part of it is that there is little redress the fair board can hope for from the guilty parties. Small fairs cannot demand hard and fast contracts from the shows, and if they demanded them, there would be no show for certain. Each year the directors take the show on faith and this year their faith was misplaced. The Jack Morris Shows ratted on the agreement and did not turn up.

It was the first time in 25 years of Chesterville Fair that such a situation has arisen. Let's hope it is the last.

About Policing Here

Some days we can't make a dollar, municipally, and when we do take some constructive steps, questions arise which make us wonder who can win.

Last week a matter of policing arose that makes us ask a few questions. A well-known firm of this town felt the light-fingered touch of a thief at the noon hour on Thursday. That was the day off for our local policeman. The proprietors of the business robbed immediately discovered this fact, and called on the services of the Ontario Provincial Police at Cornwall where they reported the robbery and asked for assistance. The answer: We are not able to give any help, you have your own policeman.

We are interested in knowing where local policing and provincial policing join up. At the moment the OPP at Cornwall are helping the investigation with certain of their specialized services such as finger print study, but how come the OPP can use the services of our local man to serve summons, etc., but still not feel it their duty to take a hand in the possible apprehension of a thief?

It is fortunate there is a close working agreement between Winchester Police Chief Raistrick and our Chief Leonard Shane. Mr Raistrick was here in quick time. What would happen if both men had been off duty on the same day? Do the responsibilities of council extend to covering such a contingency? Perhaps a couple of answers would help.

Hospitality of Quebec

Members of the weekly newspaper fraternity and their wives from across Canada sampled the hospitality of Quebec last week and found it good. The occasion was the annual Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association convention held at the Manoir Richelieu at Murray Bay.

Quebec is far-famed for her open-handed welcome to any who visit 'la belle province." And the old world atmosphere of the north shore towns from Montreal east lends an excitement to travelling hard to equal in any other part of Canada.

Delegates to the convention were introduced to some of the continent's finest cookery during their stay at the Manoir, but we must admit a French-Canadian breakfast, habitant style, just about threw us. After a reasonably lively evening and an early morning wake-up call it made us shudder to see our pride and joy of eight and a half wolf a large plate of baked beans and call it an enjoyable breakfast. We trembled through orange juice and an innocent omelette and refused the eggs poached in maple syrup.

Quebec combines many charms to earn her hospitable reputation; not too many restrictions trouble the conscience if a person is in a mood for merry-making; the quietest villages in the dominion will open their doors in pleasure to allow one to vegetate in the sun and eat home-made meals; and the scenery along the mighty St. Lawrence! Worth a trip any time.

Chesterville to Montreal to Murray Bay—a trip to a different world, all in our own eastern Canada.

Making Big Money!

Why people say "shell out" when they pay their debts may seem strange—until you remember that sea-shells have been used for currency for centuries.

The most common type of shell is money-cowry found in the Indian Ocean. It was once accepted as coinage in Bengal, 3,840 shells being worth one rupee. The annual importation of money-cowry was valued at £30,000, which was "shelling in" in a big way.

In Portuguese West Africa, the shell of the land-snail is used as money. It is usually cut into rings, which are strung together.

The North American Indians had their own form of shell currency—wampum. Wampum came in two colours, white and purple, each colour having its own value. It circulated in some parts of America until the 18th century, and so completely took the place of ordinary coinage in trading between the Whites and the Indians, that its value was fixed by law!

There have been many other forms of money—rocksalt in Abyssinia, hoes in the regions of the Upper Nile, iron and cloth in Central and West Africa, stone axe-blades in New Guinea, sperm-whale teeth in Fiji and brilliant red feather bands in Santa Cruz.

But perhaps the queerest currency of all is the millstone—money of the Caroline Islands. There is no metal on Yap, so the natives decided to use stone for currency. Then they agreed not to have their own stone, but to import a special kind from the Pelew Islands, 200 miles away. The idea was that if their money were to have any real value it must not be too common. It was felt, also, that great labour should be spent in hewing it to shape.

The natives of Yap certainly go for big money—the shape they decided on was a millstone! The stones vary in size from one to 12 feet across. The islanders make holes in their income—but only so that they can carry it about on a pole.

Value increases with size, but the quality of the stone is also a factor in deciding the amount of the owner's bank balance. The Yaps call their giant coins "fei."

Fortunately for Yap women on shopping days, the millstone-money is not usually carried about. When a deal is completed, the native acquiring the coin just leaves it where it is, even if it happens to be with the previous owner. In fact, one wealthy family on Yap have never even seen their wealth. The large amount of "fei" they possessed was lost during a storm and lies at the bottom of the sea. But since everyone knows it is there, it is regarded as quite as safe as it would be in the Bank of England!

The Yap monetary system may seem silly to anyone outside the island—but, after all, it's not very much different from our so-called "civilized" methods.

Not many people outside the treasury see the gold we store away to give value to our money. It costs us a lot to dig up gold and all we do with it is to bury it again in vaults at further expense.

The Yaps do have the pleasure of seeing their hard cash lying about the island.

Light Along The Way

In one part of his letter to the Corinthians the apostle Paul suggests what followers of the Master ought to be doing, and just how they should do it. He says: "Therefore, knowing the fear of the Lord, we persuade men, but what we are is known to God . . . For the love of Christ controls us . . ."

It is the duty of all who would call themselves Christian to know the fear of the Lord. That is, they are to continually seek His will for them, to seek Him out under all circumstances so that they are conscious of His living presence all the time. This consciousness will result in proper service; it will set them aside from other men in that they will have a different conception of life and an understanding of using daily tasks and associations to the glory of God. So Christians persuade men; not so much in "preaching" or "arguing", as in the example they are able to set forth in their daily living.

Some, having diligently tried to do this, have evidently become despondent as no real results seemed evident. Paul points out that this i s not so important. The important thing is to be true to "the fear of the Lord": true to one's faith and its teachings, for this is known to God regardless of how blind man ma y be. It is not important that Christians receive the acclaim of men, or even that they know the joy of "reward" for their endeavour. What, alone, is important is that in the sight of God they be loyal to His Son.

Paul describes how a Christian does all things when he says: "the love of Christ controls us." The Christian is ready to recognize his own worst enemy: his self. It is the devil that is within that needs the most attention. So he is continually battling to make himself a more righteous and humble person, doing all things in and through love, that in God's sight he may be righteous, and in the relations with his fellow man a useful instrument to persuade others to live in the fear of the Lord.

On the Bookshelf

Chesterville Public Library Board has no reading committee. No one reads the books and decides "this is fit to read" or vice versa.

Living in the days of realism, when the arts and humanities have been submerged because science takes the premier place, it stands to reason there are all types of books available.

Of a play of Shakespeare T. S. Eliot said: "You get several levels of significance. For the young listener there is the plot, for the more thoughtful the character and the conflict of character, for the more musically sensitive the rhythm, for the more literary the words and phrasing and for those of greater sensitiveness and understanding a meaning which gradually reveals itself."

Thus it is with reading, and once a reader's interest is awakened and sustained he or she reads avidly of anything and everything, and each individual gains from reading that which appeals, perhaps the majesty of the language, humour, action, suspense, but, in every case, on whatever level much is gained and learned.

"Lovely Crusader"

"Lovely Crusader" by Cecil Woodham-Smith, "An excellent shortened version of the full length definitive biography of Florence Nightingale." This volume was purchased for the library especially for the High School girls who will find in it so much more than the lengendary ideas of "the lady with the lamp."

The story of the life of Florence Nightingale can indeed serve as an inspiration to any and all who face life with a bit of a handicap. Of a delicate constitution and often very ill, Florence Nightingale with courage, persistence and vision was to bring about world-wide reform of hospital conditions and take the nursing profession out of the hands of the "Sairy Gamps."

"The Man in the Gray Flannel Suit"

"The Man in the Gray Flannel Suit" was written by Sloan Wilson. This is a story of life in the present day, the gray flannel suit the uniform of the businessman.

It is the story of the kind of life lived by people in the atomic age and who must adjust themselves to peacetime conditions after living out days dressed in olive drab when the main object of their days was to kill or be killed and others did the thinking for them. The central theme of this story is the struggle of a man to adapt himself from the olive drab to gray flannel.

While to some readers this book will seem "modern", essential goodness and kindness win through, there being so much of goodness and kindness in the average person.

"Justice by Midnight"

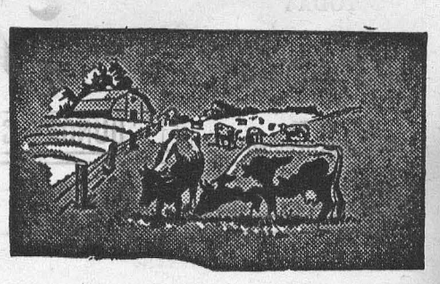
"Justice by Midnight," by Jeffrey Farnol, is the last book from the pen of that writer of romantic fiction. Jeffrey Farnol wrote many books, all good, and delighted millions of readers because he gave glimpses of the humour and pathos, the courage and failings and the hidden depths of feelings of men and women in every walk of life.

This is a tale of justice by "Captain Midnight." Set in the uneasy England of James II, Anthony Armdale becomes the terror of autocrats who consider themselves above the law. Riding on the magnificent horse Black Nick, he is a Robin Hood and, if you like gallantry and romance, you will have enjoyed a few hours in the past with this book.—S.C.

Lady of the house to maid: "I saw you kiss the milkman this morning. I'll take the milk in myself after this."

Maid: "Won't do you any good, Ma'am. He promised to be true to me."

FRENDLEE FARM CHATS



By Lillian Allison

Well, to use the words of an old, cowboy song, "I'm Back in the Saddle Again." Or, perhaps I should say I'm back on the tractor again. And I don't mind a bit.

Monday being a holiday, Dad was at home part of the time. It seemed too bad to let him rest on Labour Day so I suggested he and I bind some grain while Harry continued with the stooking.

It was quite natural to climb up into the driver's seat again. Even after an absence of six weeks I hadn't forgotten how to start the motor and the faithful, grey "horse" moved off towards the grain field. Dad put the canvas in the binder, filled the oil holes and we were off.

I never look at that mass of gears, wheels, chains, etc. that makes up a grain binder that I don't marvel at the genius of the man who invented it. It's amazing to see the cut grain fall on the moving canvas to be carried up three or four feet between two other canvases, pushed through the "innards" of the machine and at the proper moment kicked out—a bundle of grain with a twine tied securely around it. It certainly is a miracle, particularly when we remember that there is no motor to drive all those gears and chains. And it is a miracle too that the average farmer knows how to adjust and repair this complicated conglomeration of bolts, nuts and cogwheels.

For a while we tore around the square of grain until it became monotonous. The old binder just seemed to sing. We were turning that standing grain into sheaves at an amazing rate. I began to count how many more rounds would finish the field. Then Dad yelled, "Whoa!" The binder was kicking out sheaves that weren't tied. There was a lot of starting, stopping, backing up and threading of the intricate machinery before he got it going right again.

If someone is going to hit a gate post I'd rather not be the one. So I insisted Harry drive the tractor to take the binder to the back field. It's quite a feat to get a machine 14' wide through a gate that is 14'3". He got it there without hitting anything however and I walked. Then I took over to cut the first round around the field of grain by the river.

It shortens my life by about three years every time I cut the outside round with the binder. In the first place I hate to drive through the grain and smash it all down. Then in the next place I'm always scared to deat h of hitting something.

It's easy enough to drive the tractor close to a fence. The posts are right beside me. The difficulty comes when I have to watch behind to see that a binder wheel that sticks out six or seven feet beyond the tractor isn't about to crash into a post or get tangled with the wire.

That isn't all. Those big reels that go round like a huge windmill are rather breakable too. And when I come to trees along the fences I have to keep out from them so I won't break the reels. Besides I have to keep an eye on the tractor to be sure I'm going in a reasonably straight line.

That is a lot to watch but I could manage if only I could drive slowly. But no, sir. It takes speed to make all the gears in the binder work properly. I have to pull down the gas lever and tear right along.

Well it had to be done so I gritted my teeth and headed into the golden grain. I kept out of the fence all right. But calamity almost struck when I forgot about the reels and drove under a cedar tree by the bush fence. Then after a long, nerve-shattering trip around the outside I gave a sigh of relief, turned the machine and started back the other way.

The old binder was running like an alarm clock. We made the long round in minutes quite pleased with ourselves. It seemed a shame to quit so when Harry left to go to milk we told him to tell Mother we wouldn't stop for supper until seven o'clock. Then we started merrily on another round.

Suddenly the grain began to pile up on the lower canvas. Dad twisted things, turned rollers and looked everywhere for the trouble. At last he found it. A strap had broken on the lower elevator canvas. We were done for the day.

But we weren't done yet with the canvas. After supper he worked for an hour getting it ready for repairs. Then I took over. I worked until 9.30 with the big, awkward thing stitching overall denim over the holes and thin places with the sewing machine.

Yes, "I'm Back in the Saddle Again."

GIVE-AWAY LOTS A SORRY LOT

A breakfast food promotion of 54 years ago is still making headaches for Portland, Maine, tax officials. The breakfast food firm gave away house lots to users of its products.

The lots were laid out on a 300-acre tract without benefit of either sewage or water. The lots were sizes 20x50 and 30x50, mostly the former, too small for houses. Streets were laid out only 16 feet wide.

Newspaper advertisements billed the area as within 25 minutes of City Hall and only 10 minutes from the trolley cars—just right for commuters.

However, few commuted or even built. Over the years. the lots were returned to the city as tax problems and some are still coming in. The city fathers have decided it is wiser to wait until all are in before putting the property up for sale—and in the meantime, Portland has problems of taxless property.

Whatever good the promotion did for the company, it didn't do it for the land values. As Robert E. Jensen, of Westbrook, a part owner of 169 lots said, "the land's not worth any more now than it was then." He gave his land back to the city, too.

CHECKING THE ALLOWANCE

Trouble with your youngster's allowance?

One dad has a solution. He picks up extra cheque books at the bank, distributes them to the kids. Each week the amounts of their allowances are credited in the cheque books.

When the youngsters want money they write cheques, with the parents representing the bank. It gives the kids some banking experience, and gives mom and pop a record of how the money goes out.

CUT RUG STRIPS WHEN IT'S DAMP

If you like hooking rugs, but don't like the lint that results when you tear or cut materials into strips for hooking, here's how to eliminate the lint: Wash the materials you plan to use in warm water rinse, and while wet, cut or tear the strips in desired widths.

Fabrics usually tear easily when wet and this saves cutting time and wear and tear on your hands frof scissors. Hang the strips to dry before hooking them into your rug pattern. Not only is this method quicker and easier, but you'll have a fresh clean rug when you are finished.

METER BEATER

Police, of North Bergen, N.J., sought a man who borrowed a sledge hammer from a construction worker the other day, smashed a parking meter into bits and sped off on a motorcycle, saying "I've always wanted to do this."

Police said the worker, Joseph Picone, was repairing a sidewalk at the time of the incident.

Picone and another witness were so startled they failed to note the registration of the man's motorcycle.

Ferguson–Newton

The wedding of Miss Gwendolyn Jeannette Newton, daughter of Mr and Mrs Maurice Newton, Arden, Ont., and Mr Gerald Frieman Ferguson, son of Mrs Emily Ferguson, Finch, and the late Alpin Ferguson, took place at the Manse of the United Church, Perth. Rev Dr W. R. Alp officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, looked radiant in candle light brocaded satin gown, styled on princess lines. Her elbow-length veil was held in place with a band of white flowers. She wore blue lace gloves and carried a white Bible, the gift of the groom. From the Bible cascaded white carnations tinted to match her gloves.

The bride was attended by Miss Doris Larocque, as maid of honour, and she wore a gown of white brocaded net over taffeta, bouffant skirt, fitted strapless bodice, a pink feathered clip headdress and a nosegay of pink 'mums.

Also attending the bride were Miss Winnifred Larocque and Miss Carol Baker, gowned in white tired net over taffeta and white nylon silk organza. Their feathered clips and bouquets matched and were blue and lavender resepctively. Miss Freda McLean, a junior bridesmaid and niece of the groom, looked winsome in pink nylon and carried yellow and pink snapdragons.

Ray Ferguson, brother of the groom, acted as best man. John Newton, brother of the bride was ring bearer.

Following the wedding a reception was held in the Terrace Room of Moon's Grill, Perth. The bride's mother received the guests wearing an amber, ribboned nylon dress with beige velvet hat and accessories to match. She wore a corsage of golden roses. HE GOT THE RAT!

Arne Friestad, Hailey, Idaho, didn't like the way a pack rat was chewing up a saddle he kept at the Grover Crocker ranch.

So when he spotted the rat on a platform in the barn he fired at it with a .410-gauge shotgun—not noticing that there was a box of dynamite on the same platform.

The explosion blew the roof and sides from the barn and hurled Friestad outside, knocking him unconscious.

At hospital, where he was treated for cuts and bruises, Friestad said he was sure he got the rat.

BOY BUILDS BRAIN FROM PINBALL MACHINES

Glenn F. Chestnut Jr. built a thinking machine. It won him an honorable mention in a nationwide scholarship competition.

Chestnut, a Louisville, Ky., high school senior who plans to be a scientist, made it out of electric coils from old pinball machines.

"The idea already had been thought of," he says. "I built it after I read an article about it."

Chestnut gave this illustration of how the machine works.

"You take a simple problem like 'all mice are rodents and all rodents are animals.' Then, using a simple code system you throw a number of switches on the control board. One of several lights will flash on to indicate that 'all mice are animals'."

He designed the code used to present the problems. The letter S could represent mice, P rodents and X animals

To put the problem of "if all mice are rodents and all rodents are animals, what are mice?" to the machine, the youth could punch the following code on the switches:

If all S (mice) is P (rodents) and all P (rodents) is X (animals), what is S (mice)?

A system of lights on the machine's panel would indicate that S is equivalent to X, or that all mice are animals.

The relays are wired so that the machine won't give an answer to a false syllogism like:

All dogs have four legs. John has four legs. What is John?

HOW WE GET GINGER

The plant from which we get ginger is a native of the East Indies. The leaves are narrow, lance-shaped, growing up to twelve inches in length. The plant's yellow and blue flowers are clustered in a dense oval spike in a tall, leafless stem. These leaves and flowers grow from a horizontal rootstock.

It is this root which forms the ginger that we eat. In its ordinary form the ginger which we use as a flavouring spice is a year-old rootstock. It may be skinned or unskinned. What we know as preserved ginger consists of young rootstocks preserved in syrup.

The Rock of Gibralter is believed to have been settled first by the Moors in 711 A.D.

EVERYBODY EATS-- TRY THESE!

By Helen Graham

TOMATOES

USE THEM for breakfast, dinner and supper, while they are cheap and plentiful. Tomato juice for breakfast is most refreshing, and what is tastier than homemade juice? "It is such a bother to make," you say. If that is your feeling you can preserve your tomatoes as usual and when you want juice, strain the tomatoes a jar at a time. Season to taste with cloves, celery salt and a little cinnamon. Easy, isn't it? The chances are it will have more vitamins than the tomato juice you make in the regular way.

Tomato Egg Salad

3 hard-cooked eggs
½ cup finely chopped celery
¼ cup mayonnaise
4 peeled tomatoes
Lettuce
Parsley
Cucumber slices

Combine chopped eggs, celery, mayonnaise and seasoning. Cut each tomato in three slices. For each serving alternate the tomato slices with the egg salad, having a slice of tomato on top. Garnish with parsley and cucumber slices.

You may use salmon salad instead of the egg salad if desired.

Baked Tomatoes

Wipe firm tomatoes; cut in halves crosswise. Place in greased baking dish, cut sides up. Sprinkle with seasoned fresh bread crumbs to which have been added grated cheese (three tbsps. to ½ cup crumbs) and 3 tbsps. chopped onion. Bake in a moderate oven until soft and crumbs are browned.

Toasted Bacon and Tomato Sandwich

Bread
Tomatoes
Mayonnaise
Cheese slices
Bacon
Onion slices

For each sandwich toast a slice of bread on one side. As you will be using the broiler for this arrange your slices on a cookie sheet and toast in oven. Spread untoasted side with mayonnaise, cover with a slice of tomato. Add a slice of onion, if desired; top with a slice of cheese and two strips of bacon. Place in oven under low broiler heat or in a moderate oven until cheese is melted and bacon cooked. Garnish with parsley or a radish rose.

Dutch Tomato Relish

30 medium tomatoes
Vinegar to cover
6¾ cups white sugar
2 tbsps. whole cloves

Peel tomatoes and cover with vinegar. Let stand over night. Drain and add sugar and cloves tied in a cheesecloth bag. Simmer until thickened, about 30 or 40 minutes, stirring frequently to prevent burning. Remove bag of cloves. Pour into hot sterilized jars and seal with paraffin.

SLAPSTICK TAR BLAZE KEEPS FIREMEN BUSY

The Sunnyside, Wash., fire department regulars and volunteers put out a fire in the rear of a hot-tar truck recently, all right, but the script read like an old Mack Sennett comedy.

As soon as the fire engine roared to a stop near the truck, Elmer Smith jumped down, booster hose in hand and charged toward the flaming truck. He went six feet—straight up, his companions said—and started pawing at his boot laces. He dropped the hose, which started writhing like an angry boa constrictor.

Smith had jumped into a pool of "red hot" tar which had spilled from the truck, and got a real fast hot foot. "I mean real hot," he said.

The hose thoroughly soused everyone and everything except the fire before being recaptured and headed toward the truck again when:

"B-o-o-o-o-m," something exploded.

Everybody hit the deck, figuring the gas tank had blown up. It was only the spare tire on the truck but its blast had blown out a blaze in seat cushions on top of the gas tank.

The tar, burning tires and truck rack had just ben put out when the pump tender shouted:

"Get over here. Our truck is on fire."

It was too. Red flames two feet long were shooting from an electric relay in the cab. The blaze was extinguished quickly.

Damage to the tar truck was estimated at $200, to the fire truck $20 and to Smith's dignity—inestimable.

PRAIRIE TOWN STATION POLICES THE AIRWAVES

In a tiny brick building on the Prairie near the town of Wetaskiwin, 40 miles south of Edmonton, Alta., a man listens intently to radio broadcasts from across Canada and from abroad.

Sometimes he tunes in stations in the United States, Australia, Cuba, Mexico, Hawaii, Alaska and Costa Rica. He may listen in on police broadcast wavelengths from provincial police cars in various provinces, or from American stations and cities.

He's not concerned with the content of the programmes—his job is to check the frequency being used.

In the federal transport department's Westaskiwin frequency monitoring station, one of six in Canada, sandy-haired Lloyd Cope supervises the check on the airwaves primarily for Canada but, on request, for anywhere in the world.

During designated periods each day, Mr Cope or another operator at the station tunes in every type of radio broadcast in the country. Much of the operator's time is devoted to listening to commercial stations—amplitude and frequency modulation—and the sound from television stations.

If a station's assigned frequency gets out of line and interferes with other stations, it is warned and the matter is quickly rectified.

The monitors also check to see that stations give proper indentification and aren't using unsuitable language.

But, says Mr Cope, with the transport department for 14 years, the $150,000 building at Wetaskiwin is the largest and best equipped of Canada's police of the airwaves.

THE WEAKER SEX

One of the doctors at the Civic Hospital tells this yarn and insists it's the truth.

It appears that a group of expectant fathers were in the waiting room, some reading, others smoking, a father of six sleeping, and one in particular walking up and down.

Each time a nurse would appear he'd ask the same question: "Nurse, is there any news yet?" The answer was always "Not yet, but be patient."

This went on for several hours and the nurses were becoming quite annoyed. Finally the blessed event happened and the nurse informed the frustrated father that he was the papa of a bouncing baby girl.

"A girl . . . a girl!", the father breathed with obvious relief, "thank goodness! I couldn't bear the thought of raising a son to go through what I've just gone through."

A bronze-age axe, believed to be about 2,300 years old, has been found near March, Eng.

Windmills were used in the seventh century in Persia to help grind corn.

W.M.S. Evening Auxiliary Plans Rummage Sale At September Meeting

The September meeting of the Evening Auxiliary of the W.M.S. of Trinity United Church was held Tuesday in the church dining hall. Mrs F. M. Cass, the president, opened the meeting with a few words of welcome which were followed by the hymn "Blest are the Pure in Heart" and a prayer.

Mrs Mansell Brownlee, the secretary, called the roll and read the minutes of the June meeting.

On a motion of Mrs C. A. Graham, seconded by Mrs Emerson Johnston, it was decided to hold the annual fall rummage sale in the church dining hall on September 22.

Mrs Eric Casselman moved that the book "The Church in South-East Asia" be purchased to supplement the study book. Mrs Bert Gillard seconded this motion.

Mrs Dalton Quartus gave the report of the friendship secretary and Mrs Hilda Belsher named the following as the committee for the October meeting: Mrs Keith Graham, convener, Mrs B. W. Lapp, Mrs James Fyke, Mrs Gordon Lannin, Mrs Alf Jarvis, Mrs Hilda Belsher.

The worship service, led by Mrs Jack Fulton, assisted by Mrs Mansell Brownlee, Mrs Bert Gillard and Mrs Dalton Quartus, was taken from the book of Ephesians.

Mrs Eric Casselman conducted the study period based on the book "East from Burma" by Constance Hollock. Mrs Casselman, with the aid of a map, explained the geography of the areas to be studied and gave a short resume of the historical background of the countries involved. She also stressed the reason for studying this area and its importance to Christian democracies.

After the Mizpah benediction the committee, composed of Mrs Eric Casselman, Mrs Jack Fulton, Mrs Mansell Brownlee, Mrs Dalton Quartus and Mrs Bert Gillard, served refreshments.

Wouters–Kelly

Gladioli in pastel shades and ferns formed an attractive setting in St. Mary's Church when Miss Christena Mary Kelly, daughter of Mr and Mrs Patrick Kelly, became the bride of Ernest Valentine Wouters, son of Mr and Mrs Eugene Wouters, all of Chesterville, on Saturday morning, September 1.

The nuptial mass was celebrated by Rev Frank Price, assisted by Bernard Kelly, the bride's brother, as altar boy. Sister Mary Remegius was organist and the soloist was Albert Bernie, of Cornwall.

Mrs Richard Lalonde, of Cornwall, was matron of honour and the bride's niece, Carmel Genier, was flower girl.

Richard Lalonde acted as best man and the ushers were Richard Kelly, brother of the bride, and the groom's brother, John Wouters.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a traditional white gown fashioned with floor length bouffant skirt of satin, the overskirt of nylon net being embroidered with seed pearls and iridescent sequins. A lace cutaway jacket with Peter Pan collar edged with pearls and sequins and long sleeves ending in lily points was worn over the tightly fitted strapless bodice. A coronet of pearls and sequins held in place the shoulder length veil of embroidered nylon net. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and stephanotis.

The matron of honour wore a gown of yellow taffeta fashioned on similar lines, and she carried an old fashioned nosegay.

Carmel Genier wore a short dress of light blue nylon and carried a basket of carnations.

Mrs Kelly chose a dress of blue crepe and lace with black accessories and red roses en corsage. Mrs Wouters, the mother of the groom, wore a frock of black crepe with black accessories and her corsage bouquet was of red roses.

Following the reception in Locketon Lodge, Williamsburg, the newlyweds left on a wedding trip, Mrs Wouters travelling in a sheath dress of charcoal grey wool tweed with matching topcoat and light blue accessories and a corsage bouquet of Bettertime roses.

Upon their return they will reside in Cornwall.

Guests were present from Cornwall, Ottawa, Hull, Crysler and Prescott.

Investigating Break-in At Williamsburg

Thieves who broke into the Canadian Tire Corporation Store, owned by W. P. Henophy, Williamsburg, did not get much for their trouble. After failing to gain arcess to the building by means of a rear door, through which they bored a hole to try and uncatch the lock, the thieves entered a private office through a window after prying the hinges off with a bar.

After finding nothing in the open safe which was in the office, they made their way to one of the main tills in the store. In carrying it to the rear of the building the till drawer slammed shut. Instead of pulling the lever to open the till, the culprits pried open the cash drawer only to find it empty.

The break-in was discovered by Lorne Hogaboam, an employee, when he opened the store for the day and immediately called Provincial Constable Herb Meyer, who is in charge of the investigation. It is believed some tires are missing.
