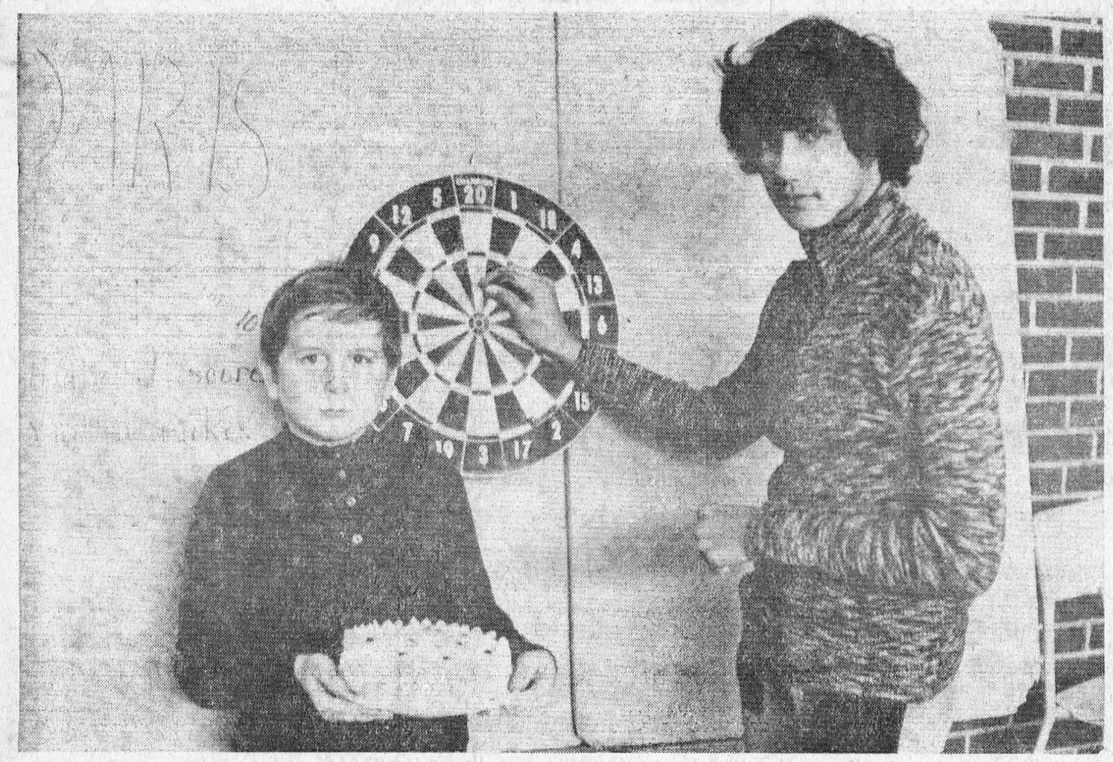
P.S. STUDENTS BOOST CUP OF MILK FUND



Once again the students of the Morrisburg Public School are raising money for underdeveloped nations through the Ottawa Jounral's Cup of Milk Fund.

Some of the various fund-raising activities put on by the pupils were sales. such as White Elephant and Bake Sales. Many cakes and other items were raffled off. There were also a number of original ideas, such as Grade 8's "Splash the Sap" in which someone stuck their head through a hole in a plastic sheet and were fired upon with wet sponges. Grade 4 staged a Magic Show and Roll-a-Penny Contest.

Grade 7 did their share with a pizza sale, horror house and various other games. Grade 6's Super Sale was another smash, with their fortune telling and magic show. The magician of their grade had a glass disappearing act, and pulled a rabbit out of a hat

Grade 5's Comic Sale proved successful, along with a freshie sale. Grade 3's most popular game was the dart throw (pictured above), and the bowling game. Kindergarten, 1 and 2, had a very good toy raffle.

The last and most exciting was the floor hockey tournament with "Marauders winning. The lucky captain .Lee Beaupre, led his team to an 11-10 victory over the Raiders. The awards went to: Calvin Elliott, most valuable player; Lee Beaupre, first place trophy; Jeff Fowler, B Division Trophy; Robbie Reynolds, most gentlemanly player; Chris Greer, best goalie.

The students would like to thank the parents for their assistance in raising the sum of $614.02 for the Cup of Milk Fund.

Atom Tournament Won by Kemptville

The Third Annual Atom Tournament was held Saturday at the Morrisburg and District Community Centre. Kemptville swamped Spencerville 11-2 in the final game to win crests and a trophy which was presented by James Jordan, President of the Morrisburg Minor Hockey Association who put on this tournament.

In the first round, Iroquois shutout Long Sault 3-0; Kemptville edged Morrisburg 2-1; Spencerville shaved Cardinal 6-5 and Cornwall swamped Athens 7 to 0. In the Consolation round, Morrisburg slaughtered Long Sault 9-1 while Athens and Cardinal battled back and forth, with Athens leading 4-0 at one time, with Cardinal fighting till they tied the game, but Athens managed another goal for a 5-4 win. This put Morrisburg and Athens together for the Consolation Winners, with Morrisburg emerging the winner by a 6-2 victory with goals by: Jim Whelan 2: Curtis McMillan 2, and singles by Scott Corden and Doug Johnsen.

Athens scorers were K. Warren and M. Lewars. Captain Jim Whelan of Morrisburg, scored 7 goals during the day for his team.

In the winner side, Kemptville defeated Iroquois 2 to 0 and Spencerville and Cornwall battled to a 4-4 tie, with 5 minutes sudden death producing no goal (despite Spencerville having a penalty) so Spencerville was awarded the win as they scored the first goal. This put Kemptville and Spencerville in the final game. Dean Boyd and Brian Murray scored 3 goals apiece to lead Kemptville to a lop sided 11-2 victory. Allan Read added a pair, with singles by Darrel Lines, Art Evans and Greg Workman. Dale Byrd scored both goals for Spencerville. Spencerville was presented with crests by James Jordan while Morrisburg was presented crests by Rev. F.L. Howald, Recreation Director of Morrisburg.

Mel Tomalty 3 and 7: John Hutton 3 and 2; Little Doug Casselman 2 and 3; and singles by Tom McCable, Bill Dillabough and Bill 'Cookie' Lawlor. Seaway H.S. Enjoyed Successful Carnival

Seaway students held their Winter Carnival on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week. Despite the lack of snow the Carnival was a success and a welcome relief from exams which were just completed last Friday.

The Carnival opened on Wednesday afternoon with a tug of war outside on the football field in which all students participated Then students proceeded inside to the gym to watch a cracker eating contest. The penny arcade opened in the gym after this contest. Students were enticed to try their hand at the different games and booths set up by each class. Wednesday night, in spite of the bitter cold, about 130 students went on a hayride and then back to the school for hot chocolate and games

Thursday afternoon a combination of our senior and junior girls' basketball teams played the teachers' team (incidentally all male) The teachers emerged victorious from the contest. Judging of the baking contest which was restricted to entries by males, also took place Thursday afternoon. Thursday evening a skating party was held at the Iroquois rink and then students moved to the school gym to watch an exhibition basketball game between Seaway's Senior Boys and the Seaway Valley Psycho Paths, a team composed of former Seaway basketball stars. The game was very close all the way with the final score was 29-27 in favour of the Psycho Paths.

Friday afternoon the student body witnessed a mock beauty contest in which boys, dressed as girls, were judged on the basis of their costumes, poise and answers to questions.

Judging of the class decorating took place on Friday and the penny drive which had been run on the three Carnival days was also concluded.

The winner of the Carnival Class competition, determined by points earned b each home room class in the various events, was announced at the dance Friday night. The winner was class 4-18. A very good crowd attended the dance which featured "Cain".

The Carnival Queen contestants were introduced at the dance and last year's queen, Shelly Douglas, crowned Seaway's Carnival Queen 1972. Sharon Berry. The two princesses were: Sherri Fader and Valerie Pulfer.

BASKETBALL

Last Friday, January 28, the Boys Junior and Senior Basketball teams travelled to the Berean Christian School, Brockville, for two exhibition basketball games. The Juniors were unable to compete with the Superior ball handling of the "Christians" as they came out on the short end of a 54-23 score.

It was a different story in the Senior match with the Senior Spartans led by Louis Rooney's game high of 15 points. The final score was 38-36 in favour of the Berean School with Seaway giving up the winning basket with only two seconds left in the game.

Sorry!

The scheduled teacher-teacher hockey game between N.D.D.H.S. and Seaway was cancelled due to lack of hockey talent on the part of Seaway teachers. It is hoped that we can make up for the cancellation in another sport such as basketball or broomball.

Pretty Wedding at St. James on Sat.

St. James Anglican Church, Morrisburg, was the scene of a quiet, but pretty wedding on Saturday, January 29th, when Brenda Charlene McMillan became the bride of Carl Victor Brooks. Rev. C. Earle officiated at the 3 p.m. ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McMillan of R. R. 1, Berwick; the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Brooks, 5F Victoria St., Morrisburg.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a short hooded gown of white polyester, trimmed with maribou fur around the bottom of the gown, the hood and the long sleeves. Her bouquet was of red and white ribbon roses.

The gown worn by the maid of honour was styled similarly to that of the bride, in purple crimpoline, trimmed with white rabbit fur. She carried a nosegay of yellow ribbon roses.

A reception was held for thirty guests at the Pioneer Hotel Williamsburg, and later the young couple left on a short wedding trip, the bride dressed in a gown of rose crimpoline. They are residing at 4F Victoria St., Morrisburg.

SKATING PARTY WAS ENJOYED AT IROQUOIS

Iroquois Rink came alive on Sun. Jan. 30th. as youthful and not so youthful parishioners of St. Cecilia's and St. Mary's Parish flashed their blades. The weather was favourable and a touch of wind gave the skaters the extra thrust that some of them seemed to need to keep them going around the ice. The hungry crowd flocked to the Civic Centre after their skate. A variety of special dishes tasted good after being out in the fresh air. A note of thanks is due to the Parish Council who sponsored this event and especially to Mrs. A.J. Bray and her helpers who convened the Pot Luck Supper. The next big event for the parish is the Valentine Wine and Cheese Party, Sat., Feb. 12 at St. Mary's School. This, too, should be a good time for all!

A $150 Million Persuasion Program

The federal government is planning to spend $150 million over the next seven years to help small farmers . . . help them get out of business or get bigger that is.

When the Minister of Agriculture announced the program recently, he said it was designed to ease out uneconomic farm units and help the small farmer who wants to stay in the farming business.

A small farm is described as one that has less than $25,000 assets. What the government would like is to see every farmer with at least a fifty or sixty thousand dollar operation. The minister described the plan as a "more humanitarian approach to a problem . . . ".

If you are a farmer, well below retirement age, and are interested in stying in farming, but lack sufficient acreage to develop a profitable business, special credit facilities to buy the necessary land will be provided through a land transfer program

Or if you wish to retire or quit farming you can qualify for an adjustment grant which will be added to the selling price of your land. It could be a lump sum or an annuity. Also the plan gives the farmer the option of retaining the farm house and a piece of land around it for as long as he wishes.

But there is also the farmer in the middle. The one who, because of the high cost of labor and machinery, or maybe because he just likes it that way, doesn't want to expand his present operation. He is making an adequate income for his needs, and doesn't want to get any further in debt or doesn't want to retire. So why the big fuss over these small farmers. Is it costing the federal government 20.5 million a year to carry these people? Because if the program is implemented that's what the average cost will be to get rid of the small farmer.

We think that if the agricultural businessman needs help — then by all means help him, but if he doesn't — well then stop bugging him to fold up an operation to which this country owes so much of its development.

CRIME WILL PAY! — $1.75 AN HOUR! Later this winter, an important pilot program will be undertaken among the inmates of Vancouver Island's William Head Penitentiary, John Schreiner reports in The Financial Post. A modest building program is planned inside this federal minimum-security institution. The tradesmen will be drawn from the inmates. For the first time in the history of the federal penitentiary service, the inmates will be paid what the outside community might call a living wage. The Financial Post reports that they will be paid $1.75 an hour — the federal minimum wage. Prior to this, the maximum remuneration paid to a prisoner for work inside a penitentiary was 85c a day.

A. C. Forrest, editor and publisher, and Patricia Clarke, associate editor of The United Church Observer, in a signed editorial in the monthly journal, have suggested that the United Church of Canada change its stand on abortion (that it should be a private matter between a woman and her doctor)). The editors based their conclusion on two general principles: "One is that each person is responsible for his actions, and for their con sequences. The other is that life, unintelligent or unwanted though it may be, is sacred, and is not to be sacrificed because its continuance could be an embarrassment, a nuisaance or a great burden."

SOME MARITAL PROBLEMS FOUND PREVENTABLE

There are many reasons for discord in the marriages of the over 40 set, but some are definitely preventable, according to Dr. Eugene Cohen, Chief of the Endocrine Clinic at the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center here. He maintains that the mature woman can avoid considerable marital grief, if she makes the necessary adjustment early enough to the physical changes that will occur in her life.

Dr. Cohen doesn't believe, as some do, that "things will w o r k themselves out" once a woman has "lived through" all the physical symptoms of the menopause. At the first signs of difficulty, he says estrogen replacement the r a p y should be considered because her own body's supply of this hormone has diminished. "This is far more preferable," he maintains, "than permitting the situation to continue for two, three or four years." These signs of difficulty, according to Dr. Lawrence Sonkin, another member of the Endocrine Clinic, include: hot flushes, sweats, tingling and crawling sensations of the skin, muscle pains and spasms. Often, Dr. Sonkin explains, these can destroy a woman's sense of well-being, so she becomes depressed and fatigued and feels she has lost her ability to cope with life.

Looking for Comfort

"Her husband meanwhile doesn't like coming home to an irritable and depressed woman," Dr. Cohen points out, "so he begins looking for comfort elsewhere." At the same time, he notes, their children —then adolescents or young adults —are having their own problems. "And if the menopausal woman isn't able to cope with these either, further family discord results."

Dr. Cohen cautions that although estrogen therapy — given after the menopause — may still relieve a woman's physical symptoms, it obviously cannot repair the harm done to her relationship with her husband and children. "Once you have discord between a husband and a wife, it's like a crack in a dish," he says, "very difficult to patch up." Some cases, he notes, have gone so far as to require special psychiatric assistance.

Relief from Symptoms

Although there's a frequent tendency to view the symptoms of the woman over 40 as psychological rather than menopausal in origin, many mature women are now seeking out medical attention, Dr. Cohen and Dr. Sonkin report. This, they say, is either because the woman herself is aware that her symptoms are menopausal; or because her friends — having already gone through the experience — recognize the symptoms and suggest a visit to the doctor.

The therapy in each case, Dr. Cohen points out, is always individualized. "Some women need very little estrogen to get complete relief from their symptoms, while others need greater amounts. Their own doctors will determine that."

Yours Sincerely . . .

BY MRS. WELLWOOD ADAM

Some people like crowds, others don't; in some of us comes a feeling of excitement, but to others a feeling of fear when jostled or pushed. Does this happen to you, I wonder?

Only now and again, I like to be in a crowd. For instance, a half filled church, even a half filled secular meeting, doesn't do much for me at all, yet a solitary hour of walking gives me much delight . . . so much to see, so much to think about.

Yet, one continuous crowd, out of many, I have really enjoyed watching many times, has been in Piccadilly Circus in London, U.K. About 20 or so bus routes use it as well as sidewalks constantly full of people, and there are tremendous groups of people in and out of the subways. Thousands of cars and other vehicles pass in and around the statue of Eros, the graceful little winged Greek God of Love. A writer, many years ago wrote a description of a crowd as being "the knight, the gallant, the upstart, the gentleman, the clown, the squire, the lawyer, the citizen, the bancrupt, the doctor, the ruffian, the cheater, the puritan, the cut-throat" . . . I cannot remember the rest. Perhaps a modern description could be, as one of today's discerning writers has put it" the married, the single, the cynical, the carefree, the pleasant, the distraught, the down-on-luck, the long-haired, the short-haired hippies, the city dweller, the tourist." . . . just people passing by. Smart-looking, untidy, sure of themselves, the not-so-sure, . . . the crowd.

Christ spent a lot of His time in crowds, and any eastern crowd today is still the same, colourful, restless and moving, as in His day. Moods of crowds differ, they can be full of unleashed fury, or they can be brimming with feelings of joy, satisfaction, and He must have been well aware of it.

So crowds, as we all know, are made up of individuals. There was one man, in a crowd, who asked Christ to influence his brother to hand over a rightful share of an inheritance, showing that he wanted material help, rather than anything through the Spirit. And then, there was a woman who managed to get nearer to Him in another crowd, and she touched His robe. She got the healing she had longed for, and this really gives out comfort to so many of us. Especially to me, for it surely proves that the Almighty One regards the individual, in, or out of, a crowd, when his or her need is overpoweringly great sometimes. Perhaps you will agree? Or agree to disagree?

TIPS ON SAFE RECREATION

Snowmobiling is similar in many ways to boating. In fact, the snowmobile has often been called the winter outboard. Both forms of recreation have many pleasures and problems in common.

Once you have made a few rounds of the lake in the family outboard with throttle wide open and returned to the dock, what do you do next? There is a wide variety of boating activities to be enjoyed; fishing, water skiing, cruising and picnicking. The Ontario Safety League states that there is just as great a variety of ways to enjoy your snowmobile, many of them very similar. Burning up your snowmobile engine with high speed circling of fields or tracks is the least of snowmobiling pleasures. A day-long safari exploring winter woodlands and countryside with a winter picnic at noon and travelling back to home base through a winter twilight is one of the most delightful experiences a snowmobiler can possibly enjoy.

The Ontario Safety League warns that there are certain precautions to be taken on safari. Whenever going any distance from the source of supplies or repairs, it is advisable to use the "buddy" system, two machines or more. If the snow is too deep for comfortable walking, take the precaution of carrying a pair of snowshoes, just as important in an emergency as a lifejacket in your boat. Adequate fuel supply is important as distances are deceptive when the going is good. A practical suggestion is to carry sufficent gas and oil mixture to refill your tank so you can travel back to home base if it should run dry. The two most important one-the trail repairs are changing spark plugs and drive belt, so take along a spare set with tools ot install them. If you are not following marked trails, carry a compass and topographical map of the area in which you are snowmobiling and be sure to have a basic knowledge of how to use these navigational aids if the need should arise. Be exceedingly cautious of ice travel unless you have an intimate knowledge of both ice conditions and water currents.

The Ontario Safety League advises snowmobilers to take to the snow and stay off roads for safe enjoyable snowmobiling.

USING STATISTICS

The use of government statistics can be bewildering, but Dr. E.T. Pryor, demographer and Chairman of the Dept. of Sociology at the University of Western Ontario in London, has a simplified approach to a complex field that can be helpful to the layman or amateur.

Writing in the Vanier Institute of the Family's quarterly, Transition, Dr. Pryor describes the sources of information available to people who have an interest in the family. These sources are (1) Vital Statistims — the federal figures of provincial and local data on births, marriages, divorce and death (taken from our certificates); (2) Federal Census: both the large 10-year census and the "mini" census in between, with its questions on family composition; and (3) other sources, including surveys of family income, housing, health, etc. There are other government agencies with family information, but it is usually not available for use by the avenage person.

Looking at Vital Statistics and Census data, we can see them as vital statistics being a recording of vital events — births, marriages, divorces and deaths as they take place, and the census as a kind of "snapshot" of families at a particular time and place. These two sources contain the bulk of the available statistics on the family.

When you want to obtain family data, there are a few questions to ask. Dr. Pryor writes: (1) What is the problem? (2) What data or tables would help give an answer? (3) Is the information collected and available? And (4), Where do I look?

One must check the kinds of information provided in government statistics to see "if your problem fits". Many questions simply have not been asked, and there are no figures on them.

Government statistics may be "cold", but are the foundation from which we infer more human aspects of society. They can be indicators of shifting values. Changes in numbers of working mothers, proportion of religiously 'mixed' marriages, proportions of men vs. women attending universities are all indicators of values and decisions which involve behaving in a certain way. Statistics can also help us with many social problems, for sheer numbers on poverty or unemployment, for instance, can indicate the magnitude of problems

Demographic statistics can also help by providing "bench-marks" of present needs and for projecting future demands on government services.

The questions concerning the family are many and the answers are difficult, but Dr. Pryor points out that government data on the family could be a starting point towards some solutions.

Can You Look After Winter Maintenance

Every farmer should have a farm shop, sufficiently equipped with power and hand tools to do his machinery. The fact that comfortable farm shops are lacking around the county indicates that much work that could be done this winter, will be put off until next spring when lost time due to break downs becomes costly.

In many cases, especially with small farmers who don't have large equipment, a small area can be separated from the machinery storage area, insulated and converted to a shop with relatively little trouble. For a farmer with large equipment, the shop should receive a little extra planning since ease of handling and sufficient space becomes very important.

Now is the time to do some planning as to the requirements you would like in a farm shop and in some instances, if space is already available, the shop could be built during the winter months. It is also a good time to make an inventory of the hand tools and shop equipment that you will need for the coming year. If the correct tools are on hand and readily accessible, time and effort for maintenance and repairs are lessened.

Following is a list of power tools often found in farm shops. Check them over and see if you have them or need them — Welders, electric arc welder with carbin arc attachment, oxyacetelene welder with cutting attachment; saws, metal cutting band saw, table saw, radial arm saw with stand, 7½" portable circle saw, portable electric sabre saw; drills, 3/8" portable electric drill, ½" portable electric drill, 15" drill press. Other, air compressor, impact tool kit, 8" bench grinder, 5 ton hydraulic jack, battery charger, soldering gun, propane torch, service light with 30' cord, heavy duty extension cord.

Following is a list of suggested hand tools for a well equipped shop Depending on the jobs you plan to do yourself, you might want to add to or delete from the list:

Wrenches: Open end, box end, or combination, at least 2 full sets; socket sets ½", 3/8" and 1/4" drives U joints, deep-set sockets; torque wrench, if you plan to do engine overhaul work; adjustable end wrenches (crescent wrenches) to or 3 sizes; pipe wrenches, 2 sizes, ignition wrench set; Allen wrench set; special wrenches, spark plug wrench, differential oil plug wrench wrendhes required for special problems, such as metric sizes for European made machinery.

Pliers: regular, 2 or 3 pairs, different sizes; needle nose, adjustable locking (vice grips); special types, electricians', fencing, snap ring, etc.

Hammers: claw, ball peen, 2 sizes copper faced, sledge.

Carpentry tools: depending on how much wood working you plan to do.

Other tools: taps and dies set, hacksaw, clamps, chisels and punches, bolt cutters, files, gear pullers, feeler gauges, vices, woodworking, metal and plumbers; anvil and fire extinguisher.

Low quality tools should be avoided but industrial quality is not necessary, with power tools for the farm, motor quality is the most important part.

A good supply of bolts, nails and other hardware is a definite asset if the different sizes can be segregated. A stock of new machinery parts, belts, chains, sprockets and other pieces that are likely to fail can save time-consuming trips to the dealer.

Proper selection of your tools, good layout of the shop and good organization can make repairs easier.

O.P.P. REPORT

Suddenly — without warning — out of nowhere — These are typical expressions used by some drivers who have just been involved in an accident. Although the driver may have thought that this accident was caused by an unlucky event, it was probably the result of a long period of preparation and rehearsal.

Quite possibly this same driver had been taking foolish chances the road ahead was not clear. Poswhile passing other vehicles when sibly he was uncertain of the route he was to take which necessitated him to make a sudden turn in front of oncoming traffic. He may also have failed to bring his vehicle to a complete stop at all stop signs. He may have been driving at a faster speed than weather or traffic conditions would dictate. These unsafe acts inevitably led to nearmisses, which eventually ended up as an accident.

If you find yourself a victim of some of these bad driving habits, now would be a good time to start overcoming them so that you will never have to say, "But officer, from nowhere . . ." this is, if you are still alive.

Ontario Provincial Police in Dundas County patrolled 14,869 miles while working 1,094 hours. During this period 58 charges and 98 warnings were issued under the Highway Traffic Act of Ontario.

Officers from Morrisburg and Winchester Detachments investigated 1 theft, 1 disturbance and 28 miscellaneous complaints. Three persons were charged with Theft Under $50.00 while 1 other person was charged under the Liquor Control Act of Ontario.

Officers were kept busy on area roads investigating 11 property dam age accidents and 3 personal injury accidents in which 3 persons received minor injuries.

KEEPING IT CLEAN

A MAGIC EXHAUST PIPE?

A host of alternatives to the gasoline-powered internal combustion engine with its inherent pollution-producing defects are being considered by cool-headed businessmen all over the world.

One, William Lear, multimillionaire inventor of the Lear jet and the first practical in-car stereo, believes steam power or gas turbines are the answer to the pollu tion-free car.

He's working on a steam-car now, although steam may not be the proper word any more, since water has been replaced by freon or other fluids.

Lear feels the steam car can operate cleanly and more efficiently. The only handicap at the moment is the lack of a condenser that will efficiently cool the fluid at high speed.

In the U.S., Japan and Europe, other designers are working on all-electric cars. But they are handicapped by heavy batteries, low power and short range.

Engineering students at University of Toronto built a propane-electric car not too long ago for a smog-free car race. Their vehicle accelerates to about 15 mph on electric motor and then the propane-fueled V-8 cuts in to drive the car and recharge the batteries.

Another alternative — fuel cells, which use chemical reaction rather than combustion — is being explored by a number of firms. Most of them now base the cell on a hydrazine-oxygen reaction, an explosive mixture that could be replaced by a safer solution.

With automobiles producing half the pollution in many North American cities, some answer to the problem is needed. Maybe one of these projects will provide it.

And maybe none of them will.

In a pessimistic moment earlier this year Walter Hickel, former U.S. secretary of the interior, remarked:

"We've subsidized the automobile to where it's an environmental hazard even if pure oxygen comes out of the exhaust pipe."

He may be right.

But most of us depend on our cars. And the best we can do, until something better comes along, is keep them in shape. The pollution controls required on new cars do a good job on a properly tuned vehicle.

It's not really magic; just a compromise. But it's the best we've got. For now.

THE TEACHER'S VIEW

It is indeed a privilege to use this column as a means of informing many people of an activity in which some students are engrossed

Much has been said about the misuse of after school hours by the students. I do think it apropos at this time to say something about the voluntary attendance at the regular Saturday morning classes which I initiated about two years ago. Because most secondary schools, up to now, have been unable to budget for the installation of some computer equipment, I, along with the cooperation of the computer staff of Mr. Jim O'Brien at St. Lawrence College of Applied Arts and Technology, have been holding classes for my students of Data Processing every Saturday morning. Even though our classes are from 10 a.m. to 12 noon at the College, most of the students have actually been coming to these classes at about 9:30 a.m. and have been staying beyond the noon hour

Some of the students enrolled in the Data Processing courses at the school have found it difficult to attend Saturday morning classes because of commitments at home or because they have weekend jobs. Those who are attending Saturday classes, voluntarily, have shown a marked increase in their knowledge and awareness of all phases of Data Processing. These extra classes have complemented the regular classes at Cornwall Collegiate and Vocational School. Certainly many students have increased their grades and some students are now definitely planning to enter advanced courses of study in the field of computer science.

I believe that the students' contact with computers is a motivating force of the greatest importance. To date it has been a rewarding experience to see students, who at first harbour many doubts about data processing, eventually become ardent believers.

Since we now have individual time tabling and a full credit system, it is possible for any student to enroll in these courses at CCVS.

Teacher, CCVS.

Fix-It Tip

Are you planning to varnish a floor? Varnishes are available in a variety of glosses—high, medium and low. The selection depends largely on your personal preference. Although the newer urethane varnishes may cost a little more, they are usually longer wearing, so consider the kind of wear the floor receives and choose the varnish accordingly.

DEPARTMENT OF LANDS AND FORESTS

WEEKLY REPORT

SNOWMOBILING — G. HOWARD FERGUSON FOREST STATION

Did you know there are over 15 miles of bush roads and trails for your snowmobiling pleasure within a mile of the town of Kemptville?

The G. Howard Ferguson Forest Station of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests occupies an area just north of Kemptville, bordered on the south by No. 43 highway, on the west by No. 16 highway, on the east by the South Br. of the Rideau River and on the north by the Rideau Golf Club and the main branch of the Rideau itself. Throughout this area the roads and trails wander and criss-cross through many acres of natural woodland and man-made plantations. For your convenience a parking lot has been established just off No. 16 highway approximately one mile north of Kemptville. Maps showing the roads and trails may be obtained from the main office at the Station.

STOP signs have been erected for your safety at hazardous points and crossings. Please respect them.

As you are roaming along the roadways and trails enjoying your outing and freedom, you will undoubtedly notice, particularly in the southern portion of the station, numerous small open fields set between hedgerows of trees. These open spaces will probably look enticing and you may be tempted to detour onto one of these fields for a few figure eights, etc. It is brought to your attention, however, that these open fields contain small seedling trees and when the snow, which covers them is packed due to the passage of snowmobiles, it turns to ice and kills the seedling trees beneath the packed surface. You are requested, therefore, to stay on the roads and trails only and not to venture onto any of these open fields.

You are reminded that it is unlawful to chase or harass, by snow mobile, any wildlife which might be encountered during your outing.

Come, enjoy yourself, but please be prudent and careful.

Say Team Effort Called For

The relationship between superintendents and school board trustees was described as a team effort in which superintendents supply the expertise and trustees the common sense, during a dialogue on the two roles at a meeting at Holiday Inn, Kingston last night (Wed)

The meeting was for superintendents, assistant superintendents and trustees of county Roman Catholic separate school boards in Eastern Ontario, and was organized into a panel composed of B.E. Nelligan, Toronto, superintendent, Metropolitan Separate School Board Vernon Zinck, trustee, Carleton County Roman Catholic Separate School Board; and moderator Msgr. B.J. Walsh, chairman of Frontenac-Lennox and Addington County Roman Catholic Separate School Board.

Following the panel's presentation a reaction panel of L.P. Mahon trustee, Peterborough County Board of Education and E.G. Runacres, director, Hastings County Board of Education, gave their views.

Mr. Nelligan said conflicts rarely occur between positions, but between people. "My role as a superintendent is what the board wants it to be". After briefly tracing the history of school boards he said the duties of trustees are outlined in legislation and no power is given to trustees individually, but only as a body.

"Trustees have a duty to set policy and therefore have the right to be provided with the information to help them do this. A trustee also has a duty to represent the people".

Trustees are responsible to the electorate, Mr. Nelligan said. Superintendents, however, have a dual responsibility — to the department of education and to the board.

"Generally the duty of the superintendent is to administer policy set down both by the department and the board, and to advise on policy".

There is a tendency among boards to develop policy for the business aspect of education over policy for the education aspect, he said. "You can't legislate learning, but objectives should be set".

Mr. Zinck said the attitude between the board and the superintendent has improved greatly, especially since the large units came into effect in 1969. "Superintendents are now the choice of the board, and not an employee of the department".

Boards must look for attitudes other than academic when hiring a superintendent, he said and listed qualities of integrity, faith, perserverance, ability to plan, vision and courage as equally necessary. "Integrity is the most important for it is impossible to have good human relations without it".

The board makes policy and the superintendent executes it, but "this is not as clear cut as it sounds". Overlapping between policy-making and administrating sometimes occurs, Mr. Zinck said and the two roles must be understood if a harmonious relationship is to occur.

Larry Mahon, on the reaction panel said "I take issue with the idea that a superintendent can operate reasonably with two masters. The minister of education obviously thinks you can but I don't.

The superintendent is in an awkward position, he said. Mr. Mahon felt the key word in education was delegation. "I don't think we've grasped this yet". He said authority rests at the top but must be delegated down the chain of command through the superintendent, along with responsibility to accomplishing set objectives.

He emphasized that boards need a feedback so they will know how effective policy is. "Setting policy and measuring its effects are what I consider are the prime functions of a trustee".

Mr. Runacres agreed that "harmony and mutual respect are the whole ball game" and boards must learn how to resolve conflicts. He also said feedback should be improved and suggested that trustees talk to parents, students and teachers to gauge the effectiveness of policy.

He said trustees are accountable individually to the board and "the standing committee system is a built-in system of lobbying and favoritism".

President Nixon vs. Archie Bunker?

By RALPH NOVAK

NEW YORK (CEF)

The news that President Nixon's trip to China will be televised live in the United States raises some interesting possibilities.

The Democrats are grumbling that their presidential candidates are in for the biggest upstaging job of all time. Who, they say, will be interested in watching film clips of Hubert Humphrey in Peoria or Edmund Muskie in Pittsburgh when he can watch Mr. Nixon in Peking?

But there is the chance that there may be a backfire effect from this slickly devised maneuver of statesmanship and politics.

Imagine somebody unwittingly turning on his television set, twiddling the dial in the hope of finding Archie Bunker, Big Bird or perhaps an old Dracula movie, when he chances upon the President strolling along the Great Wall of China.

Mr. Nixon did make sure he scheduled the trip after the Super Bowl and Pro Bowl were both done with, so he wouldn't risk competing with them in the ratings.

He will, however, have to be careful to avoid preempting too many popular shows if he does not want to lose more votes than he gains. A little too much TV overexposure will have people talking to themselves: "Does he have to be on every channel?" "Is he going to shake hands with all 800 million of them?" "That Henry Kissinger is sure no Ed McMahon." "Let's hope he's off before it's time for 'My Little Margie.'" "I wonder if he knows how to say, 'I want to make one thing perfectly clear' in Chinese."

It has become a political axiom of sorts that it is a wise candidate who never gets between a voter and his favorite television program, though, and since Mr. Nixon is not one to ignore political axioms, he may well schedule his China activities to avoid conflicting with prime time viewing. This may present something of a problem, since Peking is from 13 to 16 hours ahead of continental U.S. time, so if Mr. Nixon wants to be on, say, around 4 p.m. here—thereby coming on after the soap operas but before the detective shows—he will have to visit the Great Wall at 5 in the morning. Even that, however, would be better than offending Marcus Welby's fans; you have to pay the price.

All the complications involved may in fact make Mr. Nixon wish he were back in the good old days, when Marco Polo could just jump on his camel and take off for China, without having to worry about how many reporters to take along with him.

But then again, Marco Polo wasn't running for president when he left for China 700 years ago.

The 2nd FORTY

Distressed Daughter

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

I'm terribly distressed that my parents' marriage seems to be breaking up. They married at 22, then my father went off to war for three years. Although he started out as a janitor in a textile mill, he educated himself through reading and went to college at 40. Now he's vice-president of the company. Dad always has been quiet and never communicated well with his children. I guess this can be partly blamed on an unhappy childhood. (His own mother was miserable and forever nagging at him.) Meanwhile, my mother, who's always been home with the kids, has been living under the delusion that her family is her whole life. Basically, she's an insecure person and anxious to be liked. However, she has a way of turning people off. In fact, she doesn't seem at all interested in what other people tell her. She's just in such a rush to get her own opinion in. Lately Dad has been working more and more and spending less time at home. And mom has been nagging him a lot, complaining about his lack of attention, etc. My folks are basically good people and I feel I have to help them in any way I can. I guess that what a lot of mom's problems boil down to is she feels sorry for herself, instead of trying to figure out what's wrong. How might I open her eyes at least to what's going on?

J.S.

Dear J.S.:

Your parents did all right in having a sound and sensible daughter like you. If they had some of the insight into their problems that you do, they'd be a lot better off. But people have to see things for themselves in order to do something about them. (The wish to change comes from the inside, not the outside.) You seem to have two virtually inaccessible parents. Your father is openly withdrawn; your mother is too, but talking at a great rate to cover it up. How to reach them is a real problem. You might talk with their clergyman about them. But unless they make hte first move and indicate they themselves want help, you may have to sit by and watch the situation in silence.

(Note: Here's a letter we recently received which speaks for itself pretty much. It comes from a lively "young" lady who writes with obvious conviction.)

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

I notice you sometimes mention hormone treatment and I'd like to tell you about my own experience with it. I'm 60 years old and have taken estrogen since I hit 45. I'm still going strong and can outwork most people my age or younger. Before I found out about these hormones. I used to have very deep depressions. So many women do, but don't go see their doctors as they should. Instead they believe that life is over for them. I'd just have those spells for 3 months at a time until the doctor got me started on estrogen. I can tell you one thing: I'm sure glad he did O.N.

New Frontier Dentists

A means of bringing dental services to the Indian people along British Columbia's northern coast has been initiated by the Seventh-Day-Adventist Church.

By bringing portable dental equipment and volunteer dentists into isolated areas aboard the boat, "Northern Light," dental clinics are set up in schoolhouses or community centres.

The Canadian Dental Association has been informed that both children and adults in the area were found to be in need of extensive dental services. Many children required full or partial dentures placed in their mouths. Sufferings from constant toothaches or abscessed teeth were common reasons for the children to miss school.

More dwellers of this region wil benefit in the near future as this program is scheduled to be expanded.

All About Dentistry . .

Answers to the Questions You Didn't Dare Ask

EDITOR'S NOTE:

Some of the most frequently asked questions about dentistry are answered in this special report.—Feb. 6-12 is Dental Health Week in Ontario.

I have read that tooth decay will soon be completely eliminated. Is this really true?

Tooth decay will not be totally eliminated, at least in the forseeable future. However, most can be prevented.

One of the most effective preventives is fluoridation of public water supplies. Today, people in 165 communities in Ontario drink fluoridated water. Many communities have had fluoridated water supplies for more than 20 years.

The experience in these communities has demonstrated that fluoridation reduces the incidence of decay in children by as much as 60 per cent. Its benefits are life long.

Fluorides are being used in other ways to prevent decay, especially for people in communities that do not have fluoridation. The Ontario Dental Association recommends the use of Fluoride dentifrices, particularly for children. Additionally, fluoride can be applied directly on children's teeth at periodic intervals.

Scientists are studying a new plastic material which is applied to tooth surfaces to seal the pits and fissures in teeth to provide protection against tooth decay. The pits and fissures are especially prone to decay.

Scientists are studying other methods of preventing decay, including trying to isolate the specific bacteria which unite with foods and other debris in the mouth to form decay-causing acids.

Our family always seems to have gum problems although we see our dentist regularly. What exactly is the cause of gum disease?

Dental scientists know the process that causes gum disease, but they do not know the mechanism that triggers the process.

Plaque - a colorless and transparent film on the teeth — is a chief villain in gum disease. Plaque is composed of oral debris and bacteria. If plaque is allowed to form without interruption, it hardens into what is called calculus. As plaque and calculus continue to accumulate on the tooth, the gums eventually become irritated, break away from the tooth and begin to recede. As the gums recede, pockets are formed where additional food debris and bacteria collect. This causes inflammation. If calculus and plaque continue to grow unimpeded, the gums and bone may become so diseased that the teeth lose their vital support and must be extracted.

Dental scientists know that plaque is also a major factor in decay. Thus, it is doubly important that the formation of plaque be halted or interrupted.

The plaque-formation process is halted, first, by efficient and regular toothbrushing after every meal including snacks. Additionally, dental floss or tape should be used to clean the teeth in spaces where the toothbrush cannot reach, such as between the teeth. Your dentist will show you how to use floss properly.

Not even the best of us can keep our teeth completely clean, so regular visits to your dentist are necessary for removal of any calculus that has accumulated.

My dentist just told me to stop smoking, as I could be in danger of developing cancer. Can smoking really cause cancer of the mouth?

Smoking is a major factor in oral cancer, just as it is in lung cancer. The incidence of oral cancer is four times as great among smokers as among non-smokers. Oral cancer is particularly insidious because it is usually painless until it is too late for treatment.

Oral cancer is one of the most malignant of all cancers. About two out of three cases result in death within five years. Only persons with lung and stomach cancers have lower survival rates than those with oral cancer. Even when oral cancer is treatable, the treatment is often severely disfiguring.

There are other oral problems associated with the use of cigarettes. Smokers have a much higher incidence of gum disease than the non-smokers. Smoking stains the teeth and can cause bad breath. Smoking dulls the taste buds.

In short, smoking is as bad for your oral health as it is for your general health. People who do not smoke shouldn't start and those who do smoke should stop — immediately.

Do not make the mistake of switching from cigarettes to pipes or cigars. Pipe and cigar smokers have a much higher incidence of lip cancer than non-smokers do.

The five warning signals of oral cancer are: — A sore on the lips, gums, or inside the mouth that will not heal.

—Any swelling of the neck, lips, tongue, or palate.

—A numbness or loss of feeling in any part of the mouth.

—White patches or red spots on the oral structure.

Since early detection of oral cancer is cital to its cure, see your dentist regularly.

Short Takes

Octopus' Venom

The octopus, preying on shellfish, drills a hole with a toothy, tonguelike device and injects a deadly venom. Combined with digestive juices, this venom breaks up the fleshy tissues of the shellfish so that it can be sucked into the small mouth of the octopus.

Happy Homemaking

He is gone, but not forgotten,
And as dawns another year,
In our lonely hours of thinking
Thoughts of him are alway near.
Days of sadness still come o'er us,
Many think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sorrow
That lies in the heart concealed.
