WILLIAMSBURG FARMER FOUND DEAD IN BARN

His many friends in Morrisburg and throughout the district learned with deep regret of the death this (Friday))) morning of Jack M. Hill, a well ynown and highly respected district farmer in his 44th year.

Mr. Hill had been apparently in his usual health when he went tto the barn to perform his regular daily chores this morning. When he failed to return to the house about 9 o'-clock, his abs)ence was investigated and he was found dead in the barn. Coroner Dr. C. A. Louden of Morrisgurg was called and found death was due to coronary thrombosis and said no inquest would be held.

Jack Marcellus Hill was born on April :1st, 1909, at Dunbar, a son of George Hill and his wife, the late Fannie Marcellus. He was educated in local schools and was married in 1948 to Doris M. Strader, who survives with two children, Mary Lynn, 4, and Shaler, 22 months. Also surviving are his father, George Hill, Williamsburg; 3 sisters, Mrs. Trevor Crowder (Rose), Morrisburg; Mrs. Phil Strader (Clara Smiths Falls and Mrs. Howard Hanna (Mae) of Addison, Ont.

Mr. Hill was a member of Williamsburg Lodge I.O.O.F.

The funeral service will be held on Sunday at 3 p.m. from his late residence to the Williamsburg United Church, with Rev. George Dunlop, the minister, in charge. Interment will be in Maple Ridge cemetery.

WILSON — JOHNSTON

Baskets of white carnations formed the setting for a pretty January wedding in the Williamsburg United Church last Saturday morning at eleven o'clock when Miss Helen Mary Johnston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Johnston, Williamsburg, became the bride of Cfn. John Donald Wilson, R.C.E.M.E., only son of Mrs. Roy Travers and the late Mr. Donald Wilson of Kingston. Rev. G. Dunlop officiated, assisted by Mrs. Maefred Merkley, the church organist.

The bridal attendants were Mrs. James Marlatt, Ottawa, sister of the bride, as matron of honour, and Cfn. Clarence Koss, of Barrie and Winnipeg. The ushers were Mr. P. Travers step brother of the groom and Mr. F. Robinson, brother in law of the bride.

For her wedding the bride chose a white wool street length dress trimmed in gold, with brown accessories. She wore a dainty toast-coloured feather hat, and a corsage of red roses.

The matron of honour, Mrs. Marlatt, wore a powder blue satin street length dress with black accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

Immediately following the wedding ceremony, a reception was held in the church hall for 25 guests. For receiving, Mrs. Johnston, the bride's mother wore a pale blue wool suit with black accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. Mrs. Travers, the moter of the groom, chose a gray gabardine suit with black accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

For the reception, the hall was beautifully decorated with red roses and baskets of carnations, while the bride's table was centered with a 3-tier wedding cake. The toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. E. Travers and responde to by the groom. During the reception, musical selections were played by accordionist Clarence Koss.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson left on a honeymoon trip to Syracuse, N.Y., and other points in the United States. For going away, Mrs. Wilson wore a two piece brown suit with black accessories. On their return they will reside in Kingston.

MORRISBURG BROWNIES HOLD FIRST CONCERT

Morrisburg Brownies Salvation Army Pack held their first concert Friday evening in the Public School Auditorium. A large number attended to see the first public performance of the children since the pack was formed in September 1952 by Envoy Margaret Myers.

Rev. G. Oliver Davies opened the concert with a short prayer, asking the blessing of God on the children and their undertaking. Envoy Myers introduced prominent officials from out of town. These included Mrs. Wood and Mrs. Sullivan, of Cornwall; Alex Ross, District Scout Commissioner and Salvation Army Field Secretary Co. G. Best, of Toronto. The last two spoke briefly, while Colonel Best acted as chairman for the evening.

During the entertainment, G. C Cougler and W. Guay, on behalf of the Lions Club, presented the Brownies with a toadstool. This, looking like a large lamp standing about two feet high, and shaped like a toadstool, is used in Brownie ceremonies.

Several choruses, all well done, featured the early part of the program. This was followed by a Brownie enrolment, when new members were inducted by the visiting officials and investiture of several members with Brownie decorations for work well done. Other choruses were rendered and a play depicting the woes of a Brownie who lost her smile, a Brownie requisite, her endeavours to find it and the joy when this was successful. Much of this play showed many costumes tastefully made. Mrs. H. Shennette acted as pianist for the evening.

The audience, judging from the applause, was well pleased with the efforts of the Brownies, who looked very charming in their uniforms.

WHAT MAKES DELINQUENTS?

Exaustive study on the why and wherefore of juvenile delinquency is being carried out in a gleaming white building in New Jersey, the first research centre of its kind in North America. Over a three-year period this clinic carefully studied the lives of 600 boys and girls and their parents. Devoted to the task of rehabilitating wayward children, workers at the diagnostic centre have found that young criminals don't just happen—many factors contribute to their downfall: Lloyd Lockhart, feature writer, reports on the results of the clinic's research in the February 7th issue of the Toronto Star Weekly.

ANNE HIRST
Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: My wife wants a divorce, to marry a man she met three months ago . . . We've been married ten years, and have two children. I went to see the man, and he told me he would marry her if she were free.

"My wife inherited money. The house we live in is hers; she has a car, and a nice income. She says she will give me all this if I will let her go. The man makes a small salary, and supports his mother and sister, with whom he lives. My wife still claims she will be happier with him.

HAD HIS FUN

"The first several years we were married. I drank and ran around . . . Then I gave it all up, and ever since I've been trying to make up for it. I love my wife dearly. I've told her if she will stay with me I would try to forgive her. I can't believe she really loves him after such short a quaintance.

"Will you advise me?

SAD HUSBAND"

Any woman would be foolish indeed to marry a man she has known only three months —particularly when she must break up her home to do it. I hope your wife will stop seeing the man immediately, and devote herself to being a loyal wife and a good mother.

A man and woman can fall in love at first sight. But it takes months and months before they can really know each other, or be certain that they will be happy for the rest of their lives.

Has either of you considered your children? Their welfare should come first in any such decision. They are so young that it is probable the court would give them to their mother to raise, unless it could be proven she is unfit. Could this man take your place in their hearts? Could the youngsters be happy in a strange environment?

In discussing all this with your wife, I hope you will not take the supercilious tone which your phase, "try to forgive," indicates. You, of all people, should understand. You made your wife suffer heartache and humiliation through your intemperate drinking and your infidelities. True, you reformed. But wouldn't a little humility be more becoming now? It might even sway the balance in your favor.

"Cling only to him so long as you both shall live," is a promise lightly held these days. But particularly when children are involved, marriage should be a sacred trust . . . Anne Hirst will try to help you stay married, if you tell her the difficulties that stand in the way. Address her at Box 1, 123 Eighteenth St., New Toronto, Ont.

"Double" Trouble For Film Stars

Most film celebrities have "unlisted" phone numbers, but visitors to Hollywood, not knowing this, look in the phone book —and some seventy-five people constantly get calls which are not intended for them.

Bob Hope is listed in the book as a doctor. But that doesn't prevent phone calls telling him how bad or how good he was in such-and-such a picture. A request usually follows for Jane Russell's number. Dr. Hope replies that he is a medical man and not a comedian.

The Willam Holden in the book happens to be a Los Angeles policeman. The William Holden of film fame has never met the man with the police badge. "But if I do," he says. "I hope it will be purely a social meeting."

A contractor name John Payne has met his actor namesake. For several years contractor Payne has been forwarding fan mail to actor Payne, and by way of appreciation the star invited the contractor to be his guest on a film set. The "nonentity" took one look at the 'celebrity," who was wearing heavy pirate makeup on this sunny day, and commented: " I'll stick to building houses."

Listed in the directory are the names of Ann Sheridan, Bette Davis, Doris Day, Esther Williams, Marie Wilson, George Sanders, James Mason, and many more. None of these people work before the cameras, and all of them get calls meant for the stars.

One actress in Hollywood who ventured to have her name in the book was a character actress named Giselle Werbeserk Piffl. For years no one ever called her except her friends or business associates. Then one day a practical joker phoned and said: "Is this Giselle Werbeserk Piffl?" "Yes," replied the actress. "This is Joe Glutz," said the joker. "Didn't we meet at a party in New York??" "I've never been in New York," replied the actress coldly. "Beg pardon," said the man, "it must have been ANOTHER Giselle Werbeserk Piffl."

But a man named Chips is still getting calls after all these years from practical jokers. "Is that Mr. Chips?" they ask. He says that he is. "Good-bye, Mr. Chips," they reply, and ring off.

HIS TRIBUTE

He was a Hollywood executive, and a very unpopular man. In fact, they used to say that he would keep an actor or a writer on the jobs two weeks longer than necessary in order to be able to fire him on Christmas Eve.

When he died, the few people who showed up at the funeral tried their best to say something nice about the deceased. They could think of nothing. Back at the studio, after the funeral, they wound up in the barber's shop, where all important. Hollywood post-mortems are held. They were still trying to say something nice.

Finally the head barber came to their assistance. "You know," he was not a hard man to shave."

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM
by Gwendoline P Clarke

"What in the world are you doing?" That was Partner's question when he came into the kitchen a little while ago. The reason? I had our big kitchen table literally covered with little piles of newsprint. By my side was a big carton filled with paper — the overflow was strewn all around my chair. And at the end of the table there were, by actual count, seventy-one brown paper envelopes. In case you haven't already guessed, this was the completion of my clipping orgy. I had been clipping steadily for the last two days and now the clippings were ready to go into the envelopes. Of course I soon found there were more headings than envelopes, so more envelopes had to be hunted. It has been quite a job but I am well satisfied now it is done. And, because I had everything so well sorted, I was able to give away all kinds of good reading material. With the stuff that was unsuitable to pass along I had one glorious bonfire.

My sorting took me through a big pile of farm papers and magazines and I found all kinds of interesting little articles that I don't remember having seen before at all. In my reading, two facts I noticed particularly in thumbing over the pages — the number of things that happen on farms to upset and worry the farmer; and the wonderful hobbies and handicraft that farm folk take up in their spare time.

Among the worries the first thing I read about was the outbreak of Newcastle disease among poultry. Then came the Red River flood and the loss and suffering of the Manitoba farmers, stories of hardship and courage reminiscent of pioneer days. In Ontario Dutch elm disease and the spruce bud worm causing considerable concern. But all these troubles — except the Red River flood — paled into insignificance with the advent of foot and mouth disease. It was heartbreaking to read once again of the terrible slaughter and of the embargo that affected farmers right across Canada — and still does. Anthrax was next in the limelight and then the decline and fall of the hog market. Synthetic dairy products and the possible adverse influence of the Farmers' Union occupies the spotlight today.

Perhaps you may think I found all this reading somewhat depressing. On the contrary — getting it like that, all in one dose, as it were, I just sort of sat back and said to myself — "My goodness, farming must be all right after all. Farmers have met with all those set-backs and disasters and yet most of us are still here pitching." It ties in so well with a little piece I jotted down after hearing it over the radio — "I am not afraid of tomorrow, for I have seen yesterday, and I know today."

Then I turned to hobbies, handicraft and new ways of doing things, all the way from feeding hens to oil painting. Suddenly I thought — maybe this is the answer — farm people are so busy experimenting to save time and labour, and then using the time they save to take up other interests, that they don't have a chance to worry too much about problems that they, personally, find impossible to solve. Or it may be that the farmer is filled with optimism after attending various annual farm meetings such as we mentioned in this column last week. As for hobbies and handicraft — among farm women their number is legion . . . and a better type of occupational-therapy couldn't be found. But from what I read I think the top honours should go to a woman in British Columbia who had no less than seventeen hobbies, most of which she had learned by sending for material and a book of instructions.

If you wonder how she had so much time on her hands listen listen to her own explanation. "It passes the winter months after I have given our two children, 11 and 8, their school lessons. They cannot go to school during the rainy months because we are practically surrounded by water. We put our cash into this farm when my husband came out of the army but the real estate agent forgot to tell him the place would be under water during the winter. My husband works at Port Alberni and wades through the creek every day to get to the road where he leaves his car. Learning how to do new things takes my mind off our worries."

Well . . . under those conditions I am sure you will agree it would take at least seventeen hobbies to keep one completely on an even keel. But how many of us would have the courage to start even one?

Modern Etiquette

Q. What should a woman do if a man offers his hand being introduced to her?

A. Accept it, of course, and without hesitation — even though it is her place to offer her hand if she wishes. She would show ill-breeding if she were to ignore any spontaneous act of friendliness.

Q. When are plates removed from the dinner table for ensuing course?

A. The plates for each course should not be removed until the slowest eater has finished that particular course and laid down his fork.

Q. How far in advance of the wedding may gifts be sent to the bride?

A. Usually ten days or two weeks prior to the day of the wedding. This gives the bride ample time to acknowledge them.

Q. I see more and more women smoking on the streets. Is this considered proper now?

A. Maybe sometime this will be accepted by good society, but at present it still is in the "improper" category. Also, a man walking along with a woman on city streets does not smoke.

Q. When the person behind you at the theatre persists in talking, is it permissible to ask them to stop?

A. Yes, but do this as quietly and pleasantly as possible. If they seem to resent your request and ignore it, then speak to an usher.

Q. Is it permissible to use both the knife and fork when eating fish?

A. Usually the fork is the only implement necessary.

Q. Is it all right for a girl to give her fiance an engagement gift?

A. Although it is not customary or obligatory, there certainly is nothing wrong with it. Her gift might be cuff links, key chain, or cigarette lighter or case.

Q. When one is a guest at a dinner served in a hotel dining room, or restaurant, should one leave a tip for the waiter in addition to that left by the host?

A. No; this is only the obligation of the host.

Q. Is it all right to cut hot biscuits at the table with the knife?

A. Never; break them apart with the fingers.

EATING MONEY

Looking through a pet shop window in Pretoria, passers-by saw eight puppies playing with cheques and banknotes. One of them had a five pound note in his mouth; the floor of the shop was strewn with banknotes, cheques and loose silver.

The owner of the shop had left £600 in a bag under the counter. The puppies had got out of their baskets to have a run, found the bag and started to play with the money.

Fortunately the owner lost none of the money. Cheques and bank notes chewed by the puppies were replaced by his bank.

STATUES SEE THEIR ANNUAL SHOW

The Italian "Teatro Olympico" in Vicenzia, Italy, is one of the world's most elegant and least used theatres. Built in 1582 and filled with delicately carved wood and statuary, it is opened once each year for a period production in costume. Seen at left, a statue of a Renaissance Italian figure seems enthralled by the play. Contrastingsymbols of modern times are the spotlights beaming between the statues. Actors on stage, seen at right, take bows.

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

● Painting, music and theatrical art, particularly the first two, would seem to be a far cry from the rough-and-tumble hurly-burly of hockey. And in a sense, the gulf between them is as wide as the Grand Canyon. Yet, all four are, in a sense, tied up in a package.

Mostly, when sports scribes take their typewriters in hand to deal with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, they dig deeply into the book of synonyms to find a variety of terms that will embrace acid criticism, and biting sarcasm, directed at the C.A.H.A. and its methods. Strangely, it's seldom that any good word is spoken for the body, possibly because the "A" in the title standing for Amateur has become something of a byword, the amateurs remaining in hockey, beyond school age, being as rare as the dodo bird.

But the C.A.H.A. is quietly doing a first-rate job for struggling young Canadians in a field quite apart from hockey. This is in the form of C.A.H.A. scholarships, promoted by the Canada Foundation, and awarded annually since 1949 to provide advanced study abroad for young Canadian painters, composers and theatre students. Competition for the awards is on a national basis, and this year seventy-five applications were received from students in eight of the provinces. Since the beginning of the awards thirteen scholars have been aided in their studies in England, Scotland, France, Italy and the United States.

It is something of a coincidence that, in the present year, one of the winners was an athlete of note, who mixes long-distance running with musical ambitions. This is Paul Collins, who received his basic musical training at Nova Scotia's Acadia University and followed this with advanced study in musical composition at the Julliard School of Music, New York and Yale University. He has earned his education mainly by working at odd jobs and through winning several scholarships.

Collins is well known in sport circles, having been a member of Canada's marathon team at the 1952 Olympics in Helsinki and at the British Empire Games in New Zealand in 1950. The C.A.H.A. scholarship to assist the financing of advanced studies at the faculty of music in Edinburgh University will apply to Collins, rated by many expert observers as the best long-distance runner in Canada today. Perhaps he is the only athlete who combined sport and musical ambitions who ever made an Olympic team from Canada.

As a continuing indication of its interest in well balanced Canadian citizenship, the C.A.H.A. has authorized a renewal of its scholarship assistance to advanced students of drama, painting and musical composition. Scholarships ranging in value from $500 to $2000, with an aggregate value of $4000, are offered. And so, out of the winter-long battling on the ice rinks from coast to coast, come the funds to aid annually four young Canadians whose ambitions are far removed from sport in any of its varied forms.

SPORTS-&-c

by A SIXBIT CRITIC

Baseball's Hall of Fame now has sixty-four members — and the $64 question now is why have so many been included on the roster at the expense of others far more deserving.

In the list of those excluded we are not referring to guys like Joe DiMaggio, who had strong support in this year's voting in and around New York and by little, we understand, outside the Metropolis. DiMag has plenty of time to make the grade and is a cinch to do so long before the 25-year period is over. But time is running out on fellows like Rabbit Maranville, Dazzy Vance and Chief Bender; in fact the latter is no longer eligible since it is more than a quarter-century since his active playing days ended.

Which seems to be rather screwey, at that, seeing that so good an authority as Connie Mack says that the Indian was one of the greatest pitchers of all time —and if anybody should be a good judge of pitchers it's the same Mister Mack. Yet Chief Bender is on the outside looking in, and will continue to be there until they revise the rules—or get a more sensible system of voting. Yet safely inside the Hall are the likes of Joe Tinker, whose life-time hitting average was a juicy .264 and who—if it hadn't been for that famous ditty about Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance would now be forgotten.

In this connection we recall a story they used to tell about Chief Bender when he was mowing them down for the Philadelphia Athletics. Although he used to be greeted with mock-Indian war-whoops by the fans, the Chief was a college-educated man and a good conversationalist. After rain had washed out a ball-game one day, somebody asked Bender how he had spent the afternoon. He replied that he had been at an Art Gallery admiring, once again, his favorite painting. When asked what the picture was he replied "Custer's Last Stand."

"Just why do you like that picture so well, Chief," a bystander inquired of Bender. "Well," Bender replied, "it's the only time I saw the Indians getting anything like an even break."

Which is more, in our humble opinion, than Chief Bender ever got from the Hall of Fame jury.

Still, we cannot find it in our heart to squawk about the Hall's portals swinging open to admit Dizzy Dean, for Dizzy — before his arm went wrong — would bear comparison with any pitcher that ever toed the mound from Old Hoss Radbourne on down. More than that, the Dizzy one had an abundance of the quality so sadly lacking in present-day baseball—to say nothing of modern-day hockey, football and a few other pastimes. That quality is color. He flamed with color—and was a flaming competitor, too, who pitched his darndest in the toughest going, and who didn't scare worth a cent, no matter how awesome the opposition.

But, somehow or other, we have a feeling that Dizzy is getting a bit tame and civilized—probably association for so many years with radio and television people, who wear shoes all the time, has cramped his style. When he was apprised of his election to the Hall of Fame Mr. Dean said—or so it is reported—"It's doggone nice for an old cotton-picker from Arkansas to be up there with them fellers."

Which is a nice gentlemanly, modest speech of acceptance. Much too modest to ring true. As Arthur Daley of The New York Times points out it would have sounded much more authentic if Dizzy had said: "Well, it took them writing fellers a heck of a long time to smarten up. They shoulda knew from the start that Ol' Diz was the greatest pitcher who ever lived!"

Nor does Mr. Daley exaggerate too much when he ascribes such a speech to the Dean that once was. Some years ago Dizzy wrote a sort of autobiography which included the following statement:

Anybody who's ever had the privilege of seein' me play ball knows that I'm the greatest records pitcher in the world. And them that ain't been fortunate enough to have a gander at Ol' Diz in action can take a look at the records.

And, if you never saw him in action, just look at the records. You won't find a grain of Modesty among them, but there's enough other stuff to prove that his recent honor was no mistake —even if it wouldn't have done any harm to keep him waiting another year or so in order to include the likes of Chief Bender.

Casseroles can be dressed up with almonds, mushrooms or other good things and made into special party dishes or they can combine leftovers of yesterday's dinner and be plain family fare. But, in either case, they are a convenience and a time saver for the home cook because they can be prepared beforehand and popped into the oven to heat while the salad is being tossed or an extra vegetable cooked.

Many casseroles combine meat, fish or chicken with both a starchy and a green vegetable, and constitute a meal-in-one dish that needs only a salad and a sweet to make a well-rounded meal.

A short-cut for casseroles that call for white sauce is the substitution of canned soup for the sauce. It saves time and adds flavor to many casserole dishes. Cream of mushroom, cream of celery, cream of chicken and tomato are perhaps the most popular soups to use in casseroles, according to Eleanor Richey Johnston, writing in The Christian Science Monitor. For toppings, potato chips, corn chips, plain and cheese crackers, corn or rice flakes or bread crumbs are equally suitable, the one chosen often depending on the taste of your family as well as the main ingredient in your casserole. When thinning the soup, you usually get the right consistency by adding about ½ can of milk or less to your can of soup.

A basic recipe, with several variations, for casseroles made with canned soup follow.

TUNA-MUSHROOM CASSEROLE

1 can condensed cream of mushroom soup
½ cup milk
1 can (7 ounce) tuna, drained and coarsely flaked
1¼ cups crushed potato chips.
1 cup unsalted cooked green peas, drained.

Empty soup in small casserole; add milk and mix thoroughly. Add tuna, 1 cup of potato chips and the peas; stir well. Sprinkle top with remaining ¼ cup potato chips. Bake at 350° F. for 20 minutes.

CRUNCHY CHICKEN CASSEROLE

Follow proportions and directions for making tuna casserole, using cream of chicken soup, cooked cubed chicken, cornflakes and unsalted cooked lima beans (drained).

SALMON - CELERY CASSEROLE

Follow proportions and directions for tuna casserole, only use cream of celery soup, salmon and cheese crackers with unsalted cooked green beans (drained).

LOBSTER - MUSHROOM CASSEROLE

Follow proportions and directions for tuna casserole, substituting lobster for the tuna.

A good combination for a special dinner casserole is cauliflower and ham. This is the way to combine them in a casserole.

CAULIFLOWER - HAM SCALLOP

1 cauliflower
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
3 tablespoons flour
1½ cups milk
Salt and pepper
1 cup chopped ham
½ pound Canadian cheese, sliced
1 cup soft bread crumbs

Separate cauliflower into flowerlets; cook until slightly underdone. Make cream sauce with butter or margarine, flour, milk and seasonings. Add cheese and stir until cheese is melted. Place cauliflower in a casserole, sprinkle with the ham and cover with the cheese sauce. Make wide border of the crumbs around the edge of baking dish. Bake at 350° F. 20-30 minutes, or until crumbs are lightly browned. Serves 6.

If you have leftover cooked meat or if you've bought a small amount of luncheon meat, fix a casserole this way:

LUNCHEON MEAT WITH CORN

½ pound luncheon meat
1 No. 2 can whole kernel corn
¼ cup chopped parsley
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
3 cups medium white sauce
1 cup rice cereal
2 teaspoons melted butter or margarine

Cube meat and mix with drained corn and parsley. Season. Put layers of corn mixture and white sauce in greased baking dish. Crush cereal slightly; mix with melted butter and sprinkle over F. about 20 minutes. Serves 6.

If you like a casserole dish using fresh ground beef, here is one your family will enjoy.

HAMBURGER CASSEROLE

1 pound hamburger
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
1 cup milk
2 medium onions
3 medium potatoes (about 2½ cups peeled and sliced very thin)
1 can peas or 1 package frozen peas, cooked
Liquid from peas plus water to make 1 cup
3-4 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons butter
Salt and pepper to season

Add crumbs and milk to meat and mix well. Chop 1 onion very fine and add to meat mixture. Shape meat mixture into 12 balls; roll in flour to coat lightly. Melt butter in skillet and add other onion which has been sliced thin; cook gently until onion is transparent. Remove onion and save. Add meat balls to skillet and turn until they are browned on all sides. Arrange meat balls, peas and potatoes in 2 layers in greased 2-quart casserole. Add butter remaining in skillet and the liquid. Sprinkle with seasoning. Cover and bake at 350° F. until potatoes are tender (about 40 mins.). Serves 6-8.

PRUNE - SWEET POTATO CASSEROLE

Cook 4 medium sweet potatoes; remove skins and cut lengthwise in slices about ¼ inch thick. Place alternate layers of sweet potatoes and prunes that have been cooked unsweetened and pitted (you'll need 1½ cups). Sprinkle each layer with brown sugar (½ cup). Salt. Add ½ cup prune juice and 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Pour over top ¼ cup melted butter or margarine. Bake uncovered at 350° F. 40-45 minutes. Baste with sirup in dish.

The ship is getting an extra-special going-over in preparation for her Coronation Year sailings.

Maids In England—Looking like typical Canadian majorettes, these pretty English girls give a Western atmosphere to the American Air Force European championships football game at London's Wembley Stadium. They went through their paces before the game and at half-time with expert baton twhirling, struts and cheers.

Both are students and participate in a special programme for paraplegics college students. Looking on are two fellow wheelchair occupants, Mae Truxell and James Lee.

A Bet About Horses Started The Movies

The greatest entertainment industry in the world started as a private bet between two Americans.

More than seventy years ago Governor Leland Stanford, of California, bet a friend 25,000 dollars that a horse at full speed took all four feet off the ground at once.

To prove his theory he employed Eadweard Muybridge, an enterprising British photographer, to record with a camera a series of pictures of The Engineer, one of Stanford's thoroughbreds, galloping.

It took Muybridge six months to coordinate horse and cameras to prove Stanford's point. He did it by setting a row of cameras so that they all clicked within a fraction of a second of each other. As the horse galloped past he set off the first camera, and the others worked automatically.

He put the series of pictures in a stack, and later, thumbing them through, to his amazement Muybridge saw that The Engineer appeared to be running as the photographs flipped.

Muybridge's discovery started the manufacture of animated books of pictures. In 1881 he invented the zoophraxiscope, which was the forerunner of the moving picture camera.

This machine was years ahead of its time, and was not appreciated at its true value. But it worked on exactly the same principle as the cinematograph which followed it.

The zoophraxiscope guided Thomas Edison, and other pioneers of the motion picture, in their experiments.

King Henry Wanted His Horses Big

King Henry VIII had very definite views about the horses of his day. They were not big enough.

He took it upon himself to improve the species by dictating that every horse in England under a certain size was to be rounded up and killed. Under the supervision of Government inspectors the yeomen of the day spent a whole month massacring small horses, and except for the few wild stallions which escaped Henry's dragnet, every light fast horse in the country was wiped out.

To carry a man in armour the heavy horses which Henry desired had their advantages. But for racing they were slow and clumsy.

There were races, of course. But they were either conducted on small ponies, refugees from the great massacre, or the "cart-horse" types which followed.

Nobody though to question Henry's decision, and in the century that followed these massive steeds came to be accepted as the typical British horse.

Then came the invention of gunpowder, and almost overnight the heavily armoured warrior became obsolete. A lighter, faster and more mobile cavalry was needed. About the same time, too, sporting people began to think of breeding horses to run faster.

Full Circle

James I was one of the first advocates of a new breed, declaring that English horses were hopelessly slow.

Various attempts were made afterwards to import lighter horses and cross-breed them with our own. But most people thought that no good would come out of it, and a petition was made to James II to do something to prevent the good old English horse, "fit for the defence of the country," from dying out.

General Lord Fairfax declared violently that the result of cross-breeding English horses with "strangers nearer the sun" would be the ruin of England's heavy cavalry. He added that it was only being done to produce "over-valued pygmy baubles" for racing men.

But the Arab horse, with the added incentive of gunpowder, won the day. The real revolution in horse-breeding dates from 1706, when a Yorkshire merchant named Thomas Darley bought a bay colt in Syria and sent it back to Yorkshire.

It turned out to be the most valuable horse that ever lived, for from the Darley Arabian are directly descended more than half the thoroughbred racing horses in the world.

To-day the wheel has turned full circle, and it is the heavy horse which is in danger of extinction.

Cook Burned Soup, So Had Him Roasted . . .

Caught off a lee coast by a black south-easter, the 2,000-ton windjammed Monkbarns clawed frantically for sea-room.

With the screaming gale threatening to whip the masts out of her, giant seas flung the ship about like a child's toy. Superintending the desperate efforts to shorten sail was the twenty-one-year-old second mate, for the captain already had his hands full down below.

There, lashed to a table in the crazily bucketing saloon, lay the first mate. Torn from his handhold by a massive wave as it thundered aboard, he had been flung into the scuppers with a smashed skull and compound leg fracture. With no anaesthetics and only a block and tackle for bone-setting, the captain fought for the injured officer's life.

Scarcely was his crude surgery completed before another furious squall assailed the labouring Monkbarns. As she reeled under this fresh blow, the cargo of steel rails in her hold broke loose with a terrifying roar. Heeling over, with her yards almost touching the water, she wallowed within an ace of capsizing.

But the superhuman efforts of captain and crew brought her safely to port, her cargo restowed, and with the injured first mate well on the way to recovery.

The story of the Monkbarns is not an epic of the gale-whipped Atlantic or typhoon-infested Pacific. It happened in the Indian Ocean, where the tropic sun is always reckoned to blaze down and iridescent flying fish skim lazily over smooth green rollers. But in the southern wastes of this watery desert, ships meet some of the wildest weather in the world. any a brave vessel has fought for her life down there and lost, says Alan Villiers in his enthralling book, "The Indian Ocean."

But the Indian Ocean can produce other hazards besides its "Roaring Forties." While the twentieth century Comet sails overhead, linking East and West in airconditioned comfort, the Royal Navy still patrols below to check age-old piracy and slavery in its costal waters.

As recently as the last century no fewer than 19,000 ferocious pirates, operating from bases along the Trucial Coast, south of the Persian Gulf, preyed on passing vessels. When they captured an infidel ship she was first "purified." Then passengers and crew were bound and dragged singly to the gangway, where their throats were slit.

Cut-throat's Great Wealth

One of the worst of these fiends was Rahma ibn Jabir, who hailed from Kuwait, now a flourishing oil port. He commanded a gang of 2,000 cut-throats, a fleet of six ships and some coastal forts. Piracy brought him fabulous wealth and a harem of 200 wives. One-eyed and hideous, scarred with sabre, spear and bullet wounds, Rahma never allowed his shirt to be removed or washed unless it either fell off or was torn off in battle! Outnumbered eventually in a sea-fight, he fired his own ship's magazine and blew himself and his henchmen sky-high.

A bloodthirsty European pirate who once scourged the Indian Ocean was a man named Taylor. When his cook accidentally burned the soup Taylor had him roasted alive, remarking that so fat a wretch should burn well!

From one prize Taylor took so many diamonds that his 300 men got 42 apiece. One of them was given a single large stone as his share. Swearing he had been cheated, he seized a hammer and smashed at the priceless jewel until it split into fragments!

In fascinating detail, Alan Villiers relates the colourful history of this vast ocean and the ships and men who have sailed upon its waters.

THE FARM FRONT

by John Russell

The honey bee may have seen its best days as an ally of the alfalfa seed grower.

A new pollinating machine was tried out successfully this year on 16 farms in Minnesota and South Dakota. Farmers who used it were bug-eyed as they watched two and three times the usual amount of seed pour from their combines.

"The Mechanical Bee' is the name that inventor Dale Hvistendahl, Worthington Co., Minn., has given his machine.

Here's how the rig works: Triangular rods in front of the machine guide the alfalfa between 24 long vertical rollers, coated with foam rubber. As the plants go through, they are crushed just enough to "trip" the blossoms and expose e pollen.

Just behind the rollers is a steel - and - canvas "pollination chamber." There, a blast of warm air from a bottled gas heater dries the sticky pollen and dusts in among the flowers.

The machine may have some drawbacks. First of all, an alfalfa plant ordinarily continues to bloom for several weeks, and only 10% to 15% of the flowers are ready for "tripping" at any one time. So it will probably be necessary to go over a field several times in order to trip most of the blossoms.

Another possible drawback. Bees carry pollen from one plant to another, and cross-polinate the flowers. However, we aren't sure that this machine spreads the pollen around enough to get good cross-pollination. When the flowers are "selfed" (fertilized with their own pollen), the seed that is produced usually grows into plants that make less seed and forage than those grown from crossed seed.

Meanwhile, farmers claim that the machine really boosts seed yields.

"I wish I had treated more," says Roy Eykamp of Kingsbury County, S. Dak.—the first farmer to use the "Mechanical Bee." He machine-pollinated only 50 of the 500 acres of Cossack alfalfa he grows for seed.

On 10 of those 50 acres he averaged 600 pounds of seed per acre—three times the yield he made on untreated alfalfa.

"Bees don't work too well in our area," says Glenn Rietz, Brown County, S. Dak. "We experimented with 80 hives this year, but those bees buzzed right past our alfalfa and worked sweet clover and wild flowers instead.

"Where we used this machine we got 62 pounds of clean seed to the acre, and this was on marginal land that cost us only $15 an acre. We didn't harvest the part of the field that wasn't treated, because it wouldn't have made 10 pounds to the acre. One 2½-acre field that we treated made 362 pounds of clean seed per acre."

Says Herbert Johnson, a Murray County, Minn., premier seed producer: "I used it only on a small, late field this year, but I figure it increased my yields between 40% and 50%."

Next year, he's going to try for seed on a first crop of Ranger.

In one Murray County test, 300 blossoms were marked with string. After tripping and pollinating by the machine, marked plants showed a 90% seed set.

County Agent Arvid C. Hagen, says that more of the marked blossoms had seed pods on them two days after they were treated.

But here's the clincher on how the machine works: All of the farmers who used it this year hope to use it again in 1953.

The first model pulled behind the tractor. But a newer model will be carried on the tractor hoist to keep down wheel damage to the alfalfa.

Hvistendahl is continuing to improve the machine, and is president of the new "Mechanical Bee" Company that will lease machines to growers on a percentage or seed royalty basis.

Looks like the theory that you shouldn't feed antibiotics to pregnant gilts doesn't hold up any more.

In some recent Purdue University tests, the strongest, healthiest pigs were from gilts that got aureomycin along with their regular ration.

Dr. W. M. Beeson reports that aureomycin also boosted the size of pigs at birth, and increased the percentage of vigorous pigs per litter.

It also pays to feed antibiotics to both gilt and pigs right on up to weaning. When Purdue experimenters did this, the pigs were heavier at weaning, and stronger at eight weks of age.

Puting all these findings together, it now looks like antibiotics pay just about any time, except after hogs reach 140 to 150 pounds. After that, they don't help much.

Something else was brought to light by the tests: "Just having antibiotics in the feed" isn't enough. They do their best work when certain amounts are fed.

For example, the researchers found that five milligrams per pound of total ration seemed to be a minimum of aureomycin and terramycin for pigs in dry lot. At half this rate, growth was about the same as on rations without antibiotic. When the antibiotic was stepped up to 7½ milligrams per pound of ration, gains jumped from 1.36 to 1.5 pounds per day.

Pigs required 10 pounds less protein supplement per 100 pounds of gain where antibiotics were fed.

The tests turned up one drawback to feeding antibiotics—carcasses of hogs that got them carried more fat.

If you want the figures, there was a 7% difference. Pigs that got antibiotics dressed out with 53% fat ( compared to lean), and those not getting antibiots had only 46% fat.

In other feeding tests, the researchers found that there are ingredients besides antibiotics that will improve pig livability when added to the sow's ration. Adding grass juice, fish solubles, dried liver, and vitamin B12, increased birthweight more than antibiotics.

We don't have all the answers yet to this business of feeding, but we're finding out more and more about how to make pork faster and cheaper.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Rev. R. Barclay Warren B.A., B.D.

Jesus Teaches God's Grace
Matthew 20: 1-16
Memory Selection: By grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God. Eph. 2:8.

Perhaps no parable of our Lord has been interpreted in so many different ways as the one in today's lesson. In the business world today such things seldom, if ever, happen. Of course the employer kept his contract and paid those who were hired in the morning according to the agreement. But what employer gives equal pay to those who were not hired until noon or even at 5 p.m.

We must remember that this is a parable of the kingdom of heaven. We should also read the last four verses of the preceding chapter. Peter said, "Behold, we have forsaken all, and followed thee; what shall we have therefore?" The parable is part of the reply. There is something of rebuke for those who feel that they have earned a reward for their labours for the kingdom. God is generous. Certainly some justification for this unusual generosity is seen in the fact that these who came later in the day came as soon as they were called. Some apply this thought to the Gentiles. Many of them hearing of God's revelation through Jesus Christ for the first time, accepted the message and received blessings and rewards equal to that of good Jews who had been trained in the religion of Jehovah from infancy. One also sees in the parable the goodness of God in receiving and rewarding a person in later life. I recall one who in youth and young manhood had rejected the claims of Christ. Now on his sick bed he repented and sought God's mercy. He felt it was like drinking of the glass of life and offering the dregs to God. But God graciously received him. God is like that But let no one, on the basis of the parable, deliberately postpone his surrender to Christ. Others in late life have shown no disposition to heed the call long rejected. "One thief on the cross was saved that none might despair and only one that none might presume."

Our Second Greatest Tourist Lure

The home and Bird Sanctuary of the late Jack Miner, Kingsville, Ontario, has now been rated the second greatest tourist attraction in the Dominion of Canada. Niagara Falls being the greatest and has been followed by the Quintuplets, thence Jack Miner's, but now since the Quintuplets have become older, Jack Miner's activities has stepped up into second place. Each year since Jack Miner died tourists have increased doubly over the previous year until this fall (4300) - Four thousand and three hundred autos were there in one day.

Household Hints

Having the knob of a chest of drawers pull loose in one's hand is a great annoyance. Probably the screw has worn a hole too large to grip the wood. An easy remedy is to fill the hole with plastic wood, let it dry for a few hours, then screw the knob in place. Plastic wood handles like putty and hardens into wood.

Nylon fabrics can be stored indefinitely without injury if the following precautions are taken. The fabric should be clean and free of wrinkles. Put away smoothly folded or hanging on a hanger. When clean, nylon has no attraction for moths. However, if moth larvae happen to become trapped in the folded nylon garments, they will eat their way through to escape.

When choosing a colour of wall paint, be sure to pick a lighter shade than the finished effect desired. A colour that seems exactly right on a small colour chip or a brushed-out sample, will seem much darker when it covers a whole wall. Remember too, that the colour will be intensified by the reflection of three other walls.

If you want your nylons to last longer, heavier denier stockings are more suitable for daily wear. If you like the sheerest ask for 15 denier but don't expect them to wear as well as the heavier weight. Denier is the weight and thickness of the thread used to make the stockings. Therefore 30 denier is twice as heavy and twice as strong as 15 denier yarn.

Bus Ran Over His Foot — Didn't Hurt!

How would you like a bus to run over your foot? Well, that's what happened to Mr. Mr. George Denton, chairman of the British Standards Institution Committee on Safety Footwear the other day. And he didn't flinch!

He was wearing a new safety shoe. Standing near Drury Lane, London, he deliberately placed his foot under one of the wheels of a London Transport double-decker bus.

The shoe's interior 2 oz. steel toe-cap easily withstood the weight of the bus and Mr. Denton's foot was unharmed.

It is estimated officially that if safety boots and shoes were more generally used in industry, there would be an appreciable reduction in the number of factory and other accidents.

MOST BABIES ARE LATE

The human race is twice as likely to be late as early — in making its first arrival. A doctor kept records of 1,284 consecutive births at a large hospital. Only thirty-two arrived on the expected date; 425 were born before time, 827 were born after it. So punctuality is rare and odds on lateness are nearly two to one.

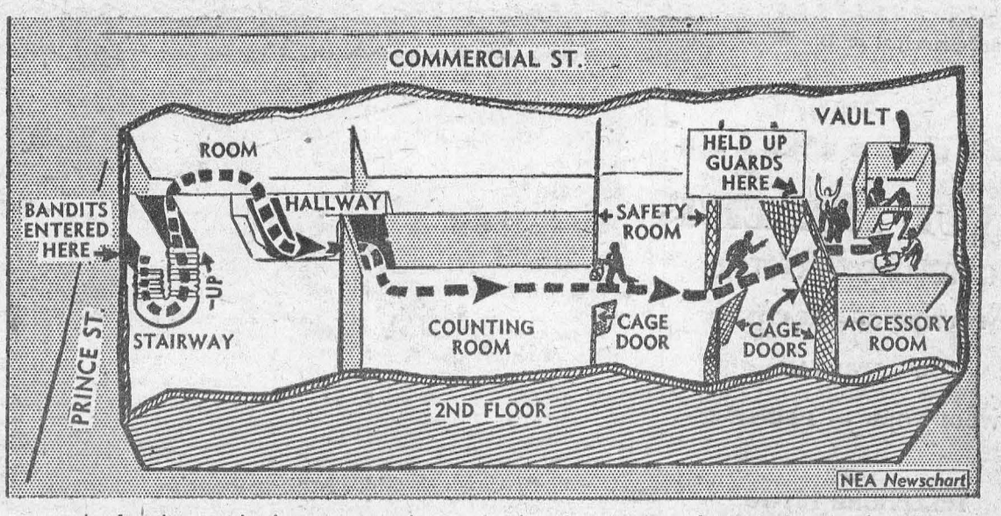
Brink's Robbery Remains Biggest Crime Mystery - - -

Three years after its commission the spectacular Brink's robbery remains unsolved and has left a pretty cold trail. The mystery began the night of Jan. 17, 1950, when the Boston office of Brink's, Inc., a nation-wide armored car service, was robbed of $1,219,000. Guards on duty in the vault said six or seven men, dressed identically in Navy peacoats and wearing identical Hallowe'en masks, held them up, bound them, and in 20 minutes, made off with the money. There was a passkey missing, but a Boston policeman demonstrated that the locks could easily be picked with a common nail file. The bandits opened five doors without attracting guards. Obviously well planned, and possibly an inside job, the Brink's robbery has so far frustrated thousands of police and the FBI, which must now drop the case because the three-year statute of limitations ends federal jurisdiction. Pictures trace highlights of the case.



Apparently familiar with their surroundings, the bandits made a beeline for the money room, unlocking doors with a pass key and slipping through mysteriously vacant guard posts.

Police Captain John Ahern picked five locks with a nail file.

Nightclub operator Carlton O'Brien was slain May 17, 1952, three days after being named as "a principal" in the robbery.

Chief suspect Joseph (Specs) O'Keefe refused to answer Boston Federal Grand Jury's questions; has a long police record.

Mrs. Mary Hooley, O'Keefe's sister, was suspected of concealing some of the loot in her home near Boston. Also refuses to talk.

J. Edgar Hoover's FBI has worked for indictments, but must now quit because of the three-year statute of limitations.
