Conflicting Evidence Given at Iroquois Inquest Yesterday

Father and Two Witness State They Did Not Hear Warning Signals of Train.—Crew Testifies Bell Ringing and Whistle Sounded.

At the inquest yesterday into the deaths of Wilda Ellis and Earl Perry at Iroquois, where they came to their deaths when the auto in which they were riding was demolished by the engine of a Canadian National freight train Friday evening, the engine crew testified that the bell of the engine was ringing and the whistle had been sounded as the train approached the fatal crossing.

William Ellis, father of the girl killed, said he was looking out a window of his home. He heard a crash, and did not recall that he had heard a train whistle or bell previously. B. Perry, brother of the youth killed, said he was on the street near the Ellis home. He did not hear the train approaching, and similar evidence was given by Miss Doreen Hutt, Iroquois, who was talking to B. Perry at the time of the fatality.

Jubilee Singers Entertain at Trinity United Church

Musical Coloured Group Well Remembered From Last Year's Concert and Church is Filled.

The United church was fortunate in having Friday evening a return visit of the Jubilee Singers. These coloured artists, who were here early last November, created such a lasting impression that this year nearly every seat in the church was occupied and a considerable number of chairs were brought into requisition. Their numbers sustained the most concentrated interest, and won unlimited applause, to which the singers responded graciously and most generously.

Miss Gaskin, the pianist, is an accomplished accompanist; Miss Bratton, the soprano, has a voice of sweetness and culture. Her solos "Mammy" in part one, and "Mammy's Little Coal Black Rose," in part two, were splendidly given. Miss Fowler, Mezzo, has an outstanding voice and was well received when she sang, "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia." Miss Edmondson, the contralto, has a winsome personality, which was revealed in her rendition of "Stay in Your Own Back Yard"—a solo replete with pathos. In the second part of the programme Miss Edmondson sang "Lonesome Road," which also revealed dramatic instincts and artistic ability.

Mr. Jones, tenor, has a voice as clear as a bell. Mr. Tate, the other tenor, who introduced the caste and announced the numbers, is a decided artist. His dramatic interpretation of different numbers kept the audience convulsed. Mr. Chiles, the baritone, also was clever in the same way. His singing of "Old Man River," was received with spontaneous applause. Mr. Russell, the bass, a gentleman of generous dimensions, revealed a voice of wonderful range. His solo, "On the Billowy Sea," was beautifully given and loudly encored. He responded with "The Old Bass Viol," which was also warmly received.

The Male Quartettes were enthusiastically encored. Some of their numbers were "Crying Holy Unto the Lord," "Lil' Liz', I Love You," "My Love's Own Song," and "You Can Tell the World."

The programme was divided into two parts. In part two, the singers appeared in Darkey costumes, and sang plantation songs, with much action and characteristic emotion.

The Ladies' Trio, "Mighty Lak a Rose," was one of the outstanding numbers. This was followed by an "A, B, C" selection. Both numbers revealed beautiful harmony.

Other numbers by the entire group were "Swing Along," a chorus with action; "Rock and Mountains," "Old Ark's Moverin," "Little Wheel Turnin' in Ma Heart," "You Better Run," "Balm in Gilead," "Battle in Jericho," "Blind Man," "Golden Slippers," "Lord I'm Hungry," "Gospel Train." This last named was given with action and was loudly applauded. Other numbers were "Look Away to Heaven," "Climbing Up the Mountain," "My Lord What a Morning," "Chiming Bells," "Way Down South," "Good Legion," "Listen to the Lambs," and the closing selection, "In My Father's House."

The entertainment opened with the singers and the audience singing "Oh, Canada," and closed with the National Anthem. An evening long to be remembered was fittingly concluded.

What About Hockey?

League Delegates Should Soon Be Chosen to Represent Local Entry.

Probably the unusually mild weather has had a depressing influence on hockey talk locally this season. However, it is getting time steps were taken for reorganization. The locals seem to be fairly well set for players although they will be without the services of Jack McAvoy and possibly Hitsman and Rombough. There are several smart players who developed plenty of speed and hockey ability in the town league last year when they captured the Inter-Town Cup from Winchester in the play-off. These boys should be ready to step up this year and take their places with the seniors of last year. Soon a meeting will be called by the St. Lawrence League and it would be well if representatives were chosen to represent the locals when the call is made.

Search Proves Fruitless For Bodies of Two Youths

Rough Water Halts Search For Students Feared Drowned Near City of Brockville.

Brockville.—Search for the bodies of Vernon Lawrence and Horace Stoel Clarkson College freshmen believed to have been drowned in the St. Lawrence near Old Man's Island, opposite here, when their canoe capsized last Saturday in a heavy east wind, was temporarily halted yesterday owing to rough water on the New York side of the river. It will be resumed, possibly with aeroplane assistance, when the river becomes more calm.

Dragging carried out has failed to reveal any trace of the missing youths who disappeared from a cottage nearby and whose battered canoe was washed up on the shore.

The same canoe figured in another near fatality last summer when Rudolph Meng, a friend of Lawrence, one of the missing students, clung to it for an hour after it had upset before being rescued by the crew of the ferry Elmer W. Jones, plying between Brockville and Morristown.

Mother Dies But Saves Baby Held in Her Arms

Mrs. A. Emard, of Russell, Thrown From Cab as Truck Takes Ditch. —Glaring Lights Blamed.

Thrown violently through the door of the cab, with a 16-months-old baby in her arms, when her husband's truck ran into a ditch a mile west of St. Isidore de Prescott, on Saturday night, Mrs. Adele Emard, of Russell, was fatally injured. Her baby escaped without a scratch.

Mrs. Emard died at St Isidore an hour and a half after the accident. She had suffered a broken back and abdominal injuries. Dr. H. H. Kirby, coroner for the district, is opening an inquest at Fournier at 7.30 o'clock to-night.

Alfred Emard, the bereaved husband, told authorities he was driving to Fournier with his wife and baby to visit relatives for the week end. He said headlights of an approaching car blinded him, and caused him to drive partly into a ditch. The frame of the truck was twisted, and, the door of the cab flying open at the side at which his wife was sitting with the baby in her arms, Mrs. Emard and the child were hurled out onto the frozen ground.

Mrs. Emard was carried to the home of M. Seguiin, nearby, and Dr. W. McDiarmid, Maxville, was summoned. A priest was also summoned and administered last rites before death occurred.

Cornwall Youth is Killed By Hit-and-Run Motorist

H. D. Eastman, 17, of Cornwall, Had Just Won Male Beauty Contest at Massena Roadhouse.

Cornwall.—An hour after he had been chosen in a roadhouse male beauty contest as the most handsome man present, Howard Douglas Eastman, Cornwall drug store messenger, was fatally injured in a motor accident near Massena, N.Y., early Monday morning. New York State troopers are still seeking the hit-and-run driver who struck the youth, but have few clues to work on.

Eastman, with four companions, went to Massena the night before in a light roadster driven by Douglas Arbuthnot, Northfield. They attended a roadhouse dance and were en route home at two o'clock in the morning when sleet, freezing on the windshield of the car, caused them to stop at the roadside.

While they were cleaning the glass, a light truck driven by Joseph Martin of Cornwall, collided with the rear of the roadster, tearing off a fender and causing other damage. Martin stopped and was standing on the highway discussing the mishap with the roadster's occupants when an automobile travelling at high speed, approached from the west. Before they could jump from its path, the speeding car struck down Eastman and Martin. The latter escaped with bruises and minor cuts but Eastman suffered a fractured skull. The car did not stop.

Nelson Mabee, Canton, N.Y., a passing motorist, took the injured youth into his car and started for Massena, about two miles distant, for medicial attention. The road was very icy. He had gone but a short distance when his car collided with an eastbound sedan driven by George Harrop, Cornwall. Mabee's car went into the ditch, and the sedan was so damaged that it could not proceed.

Eastman was then transferred to another passing car, driven by J. P. Moore, of Philadelphia, and taken to Massena police station, where he was given first aid. He was subsequently brought to a Cornwall hospital in an ambulance, and died at 8.30 that morning. His skull was so badly fractured that doctors had no nope of recovery from the time of his admission to hospital.

Eastman, who was 17 years of age, is survived by his mother, Mrs. Archibald Eastman, Mille Roches, five brothers and three sisters.

He had been employed as a drug store messenger here for the past two years.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

Winter Fair Dates.

November 20 to 28—Royal Winter Fair, Toronto.

November 30 to Dec. 7 — International Live Stock Exposition, Chicago.

December 3, 4 and 5 — Ontario Provincial Winter Fair, Guelph.

Royal Winter Fair.

With a record entry of quality stuff represeting all phases of Canadian agricultural products and live stock, the "Royal" is all set for a record attendance. This show is in a class by itself. The showing of dairy cattle ranks with the best dairy shows. Then there are the beef cattle, sheep, swine, poultry, grain, roots, vegetables, butter, cheese, dogs, cats, fruit, flowers, all big shows in themselves. There is keen competition in all these classes. Entries from far and near compete. It is the final round-up to compete for Dominion championships. There is entertainment afternoon and evening in the Coliseum that attracts large crowds. Dairy cattle, swine, market classes of cattle and some horses are judged the first week, and the fore part of the second week finds the beef cattle and the Clydesdals in the Arena.

When Potatoes Breathe.

In the storage of potatoes it has always to be remembered that the potato is a living organism and that there are two periods when respiration may become of practical importance. One of these is immediately after digging, and the other a period of several days following a sudden rise in storage temperature. To prevent sweating special attention should be given to the ventilation of potatoes handled in bulk immediately after digging, and also after sudden rises in temperature following a period of steady cool storage. The lower the storage temperature, the higher will be the initial rate of respiration at a sudden higher temperature. Sudden rises and falls in storage temperature should be avoided always. The early fall is the time to provide all possible air circulation by keeping ventilators and doors open until there is danger of freezing. On warm days doors should be closed and opened only at night when the air is cooler. The amount of ventilation required is that which will keep the potatoes dry. From early December onwards all ventilators and doors should be closed and protected to prevent the potatoes from being frozen.

Thirty-two teams, of two members each, representing all the boys' and girls' clubs of the provinces, are expected to participate in the contests at the Royal Winter Fair under six projects—dairy cattle, beef cattle, swine, poultry, seed grain and seed potatoes. Each team will have earned the right to compete by having attained the highest standard in the local club and by winning the provincial elimination contest.

Double Apple Exports.

It is expected that the export of apples from Ontario this year will be easily double the small one of last season. Greenings, Snows and McIntosh are the varieties being chiefly exported at present. Spy and other winter varieties are mostly stored for later export.

Great improvements have been made in the export of Ontario apples in the past ten years, largely through the efforts of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association, directed by Secretary P. W. Hodgetts, and their overseas representative, Andrew Fulton.

Large exports of apples are reported from Nova Scotia. To Oct. 16 overseas shipments through Halifax and Port Williams totalled 403,297 barrels. Last year, as of Oct. 23rd, shipments totalled 299,743 barrels. Thus shipments this year, on what is said to be a smaller crop, have been very much greater than a year ago.

Winners of Boys' Inter-Club Competitions at O.A.C. Meet

On November 7th, one hundred and sixty-six farm boys, representing eighty-three Boys' Club projects, vied for the honour of representing the Province of Ontario in the Inter-Provincial Contests, conducted under the auspices of the Canadian Council on Boys' and Girls' Club Work at the Royal Winter Fair.

The competitors were the high boys in their respective clubs and were selected on their ability to judge livestock, grain or potatoes and pass an examination based on practical questions pertaining to their project.

During 1935, there were enrolled in the Province 5,746 boys and girls in 425 clubs.

Club work is definite project work, for boys and girls between the ages of 12 and 20, and is under the supervision of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

The Dairy Calf Inter-Club Competition was closely contested by seventeen teams, and the honours of winning first place was captured by Ivison Tamblyn, Orono, and LeRoy Brown, Orono, members of the Durham County Dairy Calf Club; while Lloyd Earl and Kenneth Kennedy of Merrickville, of the Grenville Calf Club secured second place.

The Beef Calf Club Compteition, with seventeen teams contending, was won by John Rickard, Newcastle, and Thomas Baker, Hampton, of the Durham County Beef Calf Club; and William Hill, Mitchell, and Arnold Robinson, St. Mary's, of the Perth County Club, finished second.

The competition for Swine Clubs was won by the Peterborough Club, represented by Ralph Hanbridge, Omemee, and Gordon Stalker, Peterborough, with Stanley Lunney, Zephyr, and Hugh Teefy, Cherrywood, of the Ontario County Swine Club winning the second award.

In the Grain Club competition Stanford Brown, Millbrook, and Gerald Anderson, South Monaghan, of Durham County annexed top place, and William Scott and George White of Perth, of Lanark County, followed closely.

Potato Club honours were secured by the Alliston Potato Club of Simcoe County, represented by Fred Gunning and Douglas McKenzie of Alliston; while Morris Darby and Edward French, both of Waverly, also from Simcoe County, finished in second place.

Following the competitions, the competitors, coaches and officials were guests at a dinner in the O.A.C. cafeteria, at which time the boys were addressed by the Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture, and Dr. Geo. I. Christie, President of the College.

Trophies donated by "The Farmer" to the winners of the Dairy, Beef and Swine Club contests were presented by th editor, Mr. C. H. Hodge, while the Ontario Field Crop and Seed Growers' Association trophy was presented by Mr. W. R. Reek, Superintendent of the Ridgetown Experimental Farm, to the winning Grain Club team. Mr J. T. Cassin presented the Ontario Potato Growers' Trophy to the winners of the Potato Club Competition.

The day after a somewhat stormy by-election meeting, the prospective candidate, looking rather battered, was discussing the position with his agent.

"I think you're getting at them," the agent said hopefully. "They seemed more inclined to listen to you last night. You are becoming more popular.

"Popular!" snapped the candidate. "Why, they simply pelted me with rotten eggs."

"Yes, I know; but remember that they used to throw bricks," said the agent, consolingly.

The Rich Uncle: "Well, Bertie, how are you getting on with your French?

"Splendidly, Uncle. We have got interesting bits to translate now, like 'My extremely kind uncle never allows my birthday to pass without giving his loving nephew a present.'"

His car caught fire and was destroyed. It was insured. He went at once to the insurance agency and demanded money. He was given a blank form to fill in and was told that he could not get any money, but that his car would be replaced.

"Oh!" said he, "if that's the way you do business, give me back my premium I paid the other day on my wife's policy!"

Two Young People Die In Iroquois Crossing Smash

Wilda Ellis, 17, of Iroquois, and Earl Perry, 18, Cardinal, Are Instantly Killed As Freight Strikes Auto.

Earl Perry, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Perry of Cardinal, and Miss Wilda Ellis, 17, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Ellis, of Iroquois, were killed instantly at Iroquois at 7.55 o'clock Friday night when the automobile in which they were driving to a theatre at Cardinal was struck by a freight train at the Victoria street level crossing within sight of the girl's own home.

The automobile, which young Perry was driving, was caught under the freight locomotive and was pushed more than 200 yards along the track, with the boy's body in it. Miss Ellis was apparently killed as the train struck the car, and her body fell from the automobile about 50 yards down the track.

Calling for Miss Ellis in his car early in the evening, to take her to a show in Cardinal, the young man had driven away from the Ellis' home shortly before eight o'clock. He had only a few yards to go before crossing the railway tracks. It is not known whether he observed the oncoming train, a freight which did not stop at Iroquois station.

The locomotive struck the car on the side and pushed it ahead as the crew applied brakes to stop the train.

Both young Perry and Miss Ellis were born in the distict and had spent all their lives there. Perry had been working in the glucose department of the Edwardsburg Starch Company's plant at Cardinal since leaving Cardinal continuation school.

It was seen that both young people must have died instantly, but Dr. Sneddon was called, and he in turn notified the coroner.

Letters to the Editor.

RECENTLY there was a letter from one of our subscribers on a subject that might have been thought to be of interest to a large number of people who help pay the school teachers of the country. The writer of that letter would have been pleased to get the views of others expressed in a letter to The Record. That's the point we are trying to get at—writing letters to your community newspaper. There must be many of our readers who would like to express their opinions on different subjects, and The Record would be delighted to have them use its columns for that purpose. Letters do not need to be faultfinding to be interesting, but on the contrary will be much more appreciated when they can commend their neighbours, their township officers, their school teachers or give just praise to anyone whether young or old. Letters need not appear with the writer's own signature attached, but one point that is always insisted upon is that the writer's name must be made known to us before any letter will be published. Write to The Record about anything you may have on your mind and we will be glad to print it.

Nobody seemed to take much notice of Green. He tried to get in a word now and then, but somebody with a stronger voice always took command of the conversation.

At last the talk turned on the subject of dogs, and Green felt sure that his chance would come, for he owned a dog of which he was proud.

"There are some dogs," remarked Robinson, "that have more intelligence than their masters."

"That's right," said Green; "I've got one like that."

And Hardly Streamlined.

He was a stout man, with large, broad feet, and although several pairs of boots were shown to him he refused them.

"I must have square toes," he explained to the assistant.

The young man sighed. "But square toes are not stocked now, sir," he insisted. "Pointed toes are fashionable this season."

The stout man gave an angry stare. "That may be," he retorted, "but I happen to be wearing last season's feet."

WONDERFUL WEATHER.

This district has been enjoying wonderful fall weather up to the present time. Here we are in the last week of November and the ground has only once been covered with a very light fall of snow which occurred during last Sunday night and promptly disappeared during the following day. Considerably more moisture would be appreciated to assure no scarcity during the months to follow.

Unusually Mild Winter Predicted by Indian Chiefs

Although the Meteorological Bureau reports that a cold wave is sweeping eastward from western Canada, there is nothing to worry about. It's going to be a mild winter, and there won't be much need for overcoats. Rubbers may come in handy, but mufflers will be out. This is the prophecy of Chief Sam Snake of the Ojibway Indians on the Rama Reserve, and his words are concurred in by Black Hawk, the tribal prophet, who himself has seen 72 winters and has been busy forecasting them for at least 50.

Chief Sam Snake bases his weather prophecy upon nature's natural barometer, the fur-bearing animals and birds. Last year he proved to be about 90 per cent correct; but this year he aims at a straight 100. He bases his findings upon a number of nature's signs.

In a telegram received by H. C. Bourier, general passenger agent, Canadian National Railways, the chief stated that the geese on their southward journey flew higher than they have for years, a sure sign of an open winter. The foxes and other fur-bearing animals have not donned a heavy coat this fall and the beaver and muskrat do not think that a winter home will be a necessity. Even the fish have not taken to deep water, as they would ordinarily do, if heavy frosts were promised.

Prophet Black Hawk goes even further than Chief Sam Snake. He predicts that in the north snow will not fall more than a foot in depth. This fact is indicated by the deer, which are scratching their horns on trees and bushes just 12 inches above the ground. Through some strange intuition, Prophet Black Hawk finds that deer invariably select as their scratching mark the depth that subsequent snow will fall. And to clinch his statements, the prophet claims that there will be practically no snow fall in the vicinity of Toronto and along the shores of Lake Ontario.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mrs. David Coulthart and family wish to express their sincere thanks and appreciation for the acts of kindness and sympathy extended to them during their recent bereavement.

The Mule and the Man.

OVER THE HILL trailed a man behind a mule drawing a plough. Said the man to the mule:

"Bill, you are a mule, the son of a jackass, and I am a man made in the image of God. Yet, here we work, hitched up together, year in and year out. I often wonder if you work for me or I work for you. Verily, I think it is a partnership between a mule and a fool, for surely I work as hard as you, if not harder. Ploughing or cultivating we cover the same distance but you do it on four legs and I on two. I therefore do twice as much as you.

"Soon we'll be preparing for a corn crop. When the crop is harvested I give one-third to the landlord for being so kind as to let me use this small speck of God's universe. One-third goes to you and the balance is mine. You consume all of your portion with the exception of the cobs while I divide mine among seven children, six hens, two ducks and a banker. If we both need shoes, you get 'em. Bill. you are getting the best of me, and I ask you, is it fair for a mule, the son of a jackass, to swindle a man—the Lord of Creation—out of his substance?

"Why, you only help to plough and cultivate the ground, and I alone must cut, shock and husk the corn while you look over the pasture fence and hee-haw at me.

"All fall and most of the winter the whole family, from Granny to the baby, picks cotton to help raise money to pay taxes and buy a new harness and pay the interest on the mortgage on you. And what do you care about the mortgage? Not a d———, you ornery cuss. I even have to do the worrying about the mortgage on your tough ungrateful hide.

"About the only time I am your better is on election day, for I vote and you can't. And after election I realize that I was fully as great a jackass as your papa. Verily, I am prone to wonder if politics were made for men or jackasses, or to make jackasses of men.

"And that ain't all, Bill; when you're dead that's supposed to be the end of you. But me! The parson tells me that when I die I gotta go to Hades forever. That is, Bill, if I don't do just as he says. And most of what he says keeps me from getting any kick out of life.

"Tell me, Willyum, considering all these things, how can you keep a straight face, and look so dumb and solemn?"

Wide Range of Articles Covered in New Treaty

Necessities and Luxuries on Long List of Items on Which Tariff is Cut. —Canadian Exports Likewise Are Favoured by United States.

Hundreds of products forming the bulk of Canada's import trade with the United States will be affected by the new reciprocity treaty with the aggregate running into scores of millions of dollars.

In its set-up, the treaty grants to American manufacturers and producers set rates below the usual Canadian intermediate tariff on a wide range of enumerated articles which are set forth in schedule 1. But, in addition to this, it grants the intermediate rate on hundreds of other articles of every-day use in Canada which now pay the general or highest rate in Canada's three-decker tariff structure.

Articles Affected.

The list of goods affected by the treaty embraces luxuries as well as the necessities of life. The following American products were given tariff concession: Electric refrigerators, enamelled kitchen and other hollow ware, electro-plated ware, vacuum cleaners, washing machines and sewing machines, table cutlery; sanitary ware including baths, basins and other such equipment; automobiles of all prices; stoves and ranges of all kinds; radios and radio parts; miscellaneous electric equipment, including lamp shades; numerous manufactured products of wood; sporting equipment; all types and kinds of cotton piece goods — cotton, whether natural, bleached or coloured — as well as practically all manufactured goods of cotton, including cotton clothing and wearing apparel; fabric of linen and all goods manufactured therefrom; fabrics of either silk or artificial silk, including cut-piled cloths and ribbons as well as all articles and clothing made from silk or art silk; knitted wear, including all under and outer wear; socks and stockings of every material; gloves and mitts.

Practically all lines of hats and millinery are included; linoleum and other floor coverings, including rugs and carpets; boots, shoes, including footwear of rubber; rubber tires of vehicles; manufactures of fur, jewellery and silver and gold products; brushes of all kinds; prepared and preserved meats whether canned or not; preparations of cocoa and chocolate; canned fruits and vegetables and canned fish; fruit juices; greeting cards and printed music; sheathing and wall board; prepared roofings, wall paper; surgical dressings; gasoline; building stone of all kinds, including granite and marble; table ware of glass; toilet articles of all kinds, and periodicals and magazines.

Duty Burden on Industry.

A Government-prepared memorandum for the press commented as follows:

"This list is comprehensive and indicates what might be termed the horizontal character of the reductions in duty. While the result will manifest itself in reduction of prices to consumers, consequent upon the lessening of tariff taxation, it does not follow that domestic industries will be adversely affected. Apart from the items enumerated in the schedules on which reductions in duty are granted, Canadian industries will retain as regards the United States the same measure of protection as had obtained against the industries of nearly all foreign countries, many of them not only highly industrialized but with standards of living vastly below those prevailing in the United States."

The tariff changes in schedule 1 (set below the intermediate rate) total 180 of these, 68 represent rate reductions to the United States; 20 dutiable products were placed on the free list; Canada guaranteed not to increase the intermediate rate on 77 others and guaranteed to continue the free rates on 15 others.

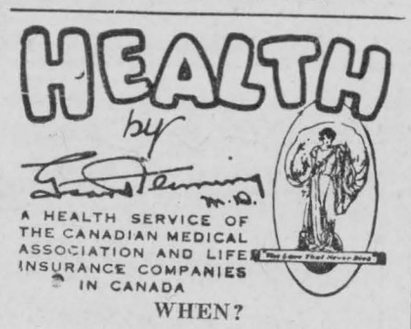
"It might appear that numerically Canada has given concessions on a greater number of items than those on which she has received concessions. This, however, is not the case, as the benefits accruing to Canada fully balance in value those obtained by the United States. The large bulk of Canadian exports fall within a limited number of classifications of the United States tariff, while those in the United States cover a wide range of products of a diversified nature which are enumerated in greater detail in the Canadian tariff schedules."



WHEN?

THERE is a time for everything, and there are times when medical care offers most in the prevention of disabilities which are a handicap, taking much of the joy out of living.

This statement is prompted by the findings of a recent study which shows how very few women return to their doctor three or four months after the birth of a baby for a final examination.

This examination is one which should never be neglected. It assures the future health of the mother because it allows for the discovery of the minor abnormal conditions which may be present as a result of childbirth at a time when prompt treatment will correct them.

It seems difficult for most people to grasp the idea that medical care may be required although they feel quite well. Not so long ago, people went to their dentist only when they had a tooth-ache. Now we consider that the person who waits until his teeth ache before visiting his dentist is a rather stupid individual.

The mother, busy with her new baby, does not realize that she may need medical advice. Even if she does not feel just right, she will likely persuade herself that there is nothing wrong and that everything will come all right in time. Time is a great healer of sorrow, but times does not in itself heal physical disabilities.

Childbirth is a normal process, but, nevertheless, it does call forth an unusual effort, with the result that some damage may result. The more complete the care given before and at confinement, the less will be the damage. The only way to be sure, in each particular case, that recovery has been complete, is to have the mother pass through the regular examinations.

A great deal is said, and quite rightly, about maternal mortality. All will agree that pregnancy should be made safe. But pregnancy should be made more than safe; it should be made as comfortable as possible for the mother. Furthermore, our goal should not only be "Healthy Babies" but equally so "Healthy Mothers." The post-natal examination is an essential part of the service which aims to keep the mother healthy and to ensure that her health is not destroyed or minimized as a result of her pregnancy.

One time to secure a medical examination is after the birth of a baby, to make sure that the mother has returned to a normal condition.

STOUT LAD!

Indicating that the tenacity displayed by Scout Jack Cornwell, V.C., (posthumous), at the battle of Jutland, is a family characteristic, Scout Tim Cornwell, 15, a younger cousin of Jack, performed an unusual feat of endurance in Scotland this summer during a "Train Cruise" of English Scouts. Returning in the evening with a party of 80 from a climb to the summit of Ben Nevis, he learned that his Scoutmaster's hat and coat had been left behind in the snow at the crest. Early next morning Tim Cornwall organized a party of Rovers, repeated the climb, and returned with the lost articles.

"I have no doubt about the future of Scouting so long as the standard is kept high, and so long as Scouts mean what they say, and do what they set out to do." —Dr. Cyril Norwood, former Headmaster of Harrow.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

Conducted By
MISS HELEN LACEY, B. H. Sc.

HOME-MADE CANDY.

HOME-MADE candies must be popular since so many candies on the market are advertised as home-made. So, why not be smart and make your own candies for your next party or save these recipes and make your own Christmas candies. And, speaking of Christmas, it isn't far off what with pictures of Santa Claus already appearing in the papers.

MARSHMALLOWS.

2 tablespoons gelatine
¼ cup cold water
¾ cup boiling water
2 cups sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
Icing sugar

Soak the gelatine in the cold water until softened. Boil the sugar and water to the soft ball stage. Add vanilla and salt to the gelatine. Pour the sugar syrup slowly over the gelatine, beating constantly with a dover beater until cool and thick. Butter a shallow pan and dust with icing sugar. Turn the marshmallow mixture into the pan and smooth the top. Dust with icing sugar. Allow to stand over night. In the morning cut in squares and roll in powdered sugar.

TAFFY.

2 cups brown sugar
1½ tablespoon vinegar
¾ teaspoon salt
½ tablespoon butter
2 teaspoons vanilla

Mix sugar, vinegar, water and salt in a saucepan. Heat slowly, without stirring until the sugar is dissolved, add butter. Boil without stirring to the brittle stage. Add vanilla just before turning out. Pour into a buttered pan; mark in squares before it hardens.

POP CORN BALLS.

3 quarts popped corn
1 cup sugar
1-3 cup corn syrup
1 cup water
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cook sugar, syrup and water to the soft crack stage. Add flavouring and salt. Pour over the popped corn. Stir so that all kernels will be evenly coated with syrup. Shake the corn into balls, wrap each ball in waxed paper.

RAISIN FUDGE.

2 tablespoons butter
2 cups sugar
2-3 cup milk
2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ package seeded raisins
½ cup nuts

Melt the butter, add sugar and milk. Heat to boiling. Add chocolate, cut in small pieces. Boil without stirring to the soft ball stage. Remove from the heat, add vanilla and stir until almost creamy. Add raisins and nuts. Turn into buttered pans and mark in squares.

FRUIT ROLL.

Chop equal quantites of raisins, prunes, dates, figs and marshmallows. Knead thoroughly. Roll in small balls and coat with granulated sugar.

DIVINITY FUDGE.

2½ cups granulated sugar
½ cup corn syrup
½ cup water
2 egg whites
½ cup chopped nuts
½ teaspoon flavouring

Mix sugar, syrup and water in a saucepan. Heat gently, stirring constantly, until the sugar is dissolved. Boil whites stiff in a large bowl, gradually beat in ½ cup of the syrup. Boil the remaining syrup to the brittle stage; add gradually to the egg mixture. Continue beating until the mixture begins to stiffen; add nuts and flavouring. Drop from a teaspoon on to waxed paper and when set remove to a plate.

A small amount of corn syrup added to candy will help prevent it from becoming sugary.

Never stir candy while it is boiling, also, never leave the spoon in the dish while the candy is boiling.

* * * *

When candies are made from brown sugar and molasses, they may be stirred while boiling to prevent curdling of the milk by acids contained in the brown sugar and molasses.

* * * *

Creamy candy should be cooled before beating. Beating candy while it is hot causes large crystals to form, resulting in sugary candy.

* * * *

The soft crack stage of syrup is reached when a small amount of the syrup forms spirals or threads in a cup of cold water. These spirals or threads are brittle under water but soften as soon as removed from it and stick to the teeth when chewed. The hard crack or brittle stage is reached when the spirals or threads do not stick to the teeth when chewed.

In a certain district in East Africa is a Resident Magistrate. When he is away a doctor acts for him.

Recently each agreed that he had broken the law by riding at night without carrying a light. Both thought that the law would be vindicated if each appeared in court before the other.

The Magistrate sat first and fined the doctor five pounds. When it was the doctor's turn to administer the law, he fined the Magistrate twenty pounds.

The Magistrate looked aghast, but the doctor justified his severity by emphasizing that an example was needed, since obviously the offence was becoming a common one; this was the second case that very day.

The Sheep Killers

I NEVER KNEW how long I had been asleep, because none of us thought to look at the clock. I was roused by my mother's voice calling from the foot of the stairs, "Boys! Boys! There's something after the sheep!"

I didn't need a second call to get me out of bed. for, vague though the summons was, I knew too well what it meant. I lighted my little kerosene lamp, rushed over to the bed where my younger brother was sleeping and shook him into wakefulness "Bart! Bart!" I called. "Mother says something is after the sheep!"

In an incredibly short time we had pulled on our clothes and were dashing downstairs. Mother stood at the foot with a lighted lantern in her hand.

"I don't know what it is,' she said. "but I can tell from the sound of the bells that something is chasing them! You had better get your ponies and ride over to the pasture and see what you can do."

My brother grabbed the lantern, and I ran to the kitchen, took down the shotgun and slipped the cartridge belt round me. Then we were out of the house and rushing up the hill towards the stable fifty yards away. I had purposely chosen the shotgun instead of the rifle. which hung beside it, because I knew that, if I should have to shoot. my chances of hitting the mark with the rifle on such a night would be pretty small.

Halfway to the stable we stopped to listen. We could vaguely make out the hills of the east pasture half a mile away an indistinct blur against the starry eastern sky. Suddenly a wild jangle of bells broke the stillness of the night. and we could distinctly hear the thud of sheep's hoofs. Something serious was happening over there in the pasture, and we were experienced enough in ranch life to know that it was one of two things either dogs or wolves!

The sound spurred us on at even greater speed, and we tore away to the stable and jerked the door open. I set down my gun, and Bart hung the lantern on a peg behind the stall where our ponies were standing. My own pony was a handsome brown fellow with white stockings and a white stripe down his face. I had called him Saladin in honour of his father. who was a full-blooded Arabian. Bart's pony was a gray and like Saladin a half-blood Arabian: his name was Jack We jerked our saddles from the pegs where they were hanging, threw them on the ponies and tightened the girths talking to the horses meanwhile to reassure them. We slipped on the bridles with their heavy curb bits and backed the animals out of their stalls. I picked up my gun, and we led them out of the stable, leaving the lantern hanging on its peg.

After the light of the stable, the night outside seemed doubly dark. We swung into our saddles and turned our ponies towards the east pasture, urging them into a run. It didn't take much urging either, for they seemed to know that something unusual was on foot; we were going at top speed almost from the start.

My brother and I were thirteen and fifteen years old respectively, and we had been left with our mother and sister to care for our big stock ranch in Kansas while our father went back to Massachusetts for a short visit. There was nothing unusual in that, for at that time in Kansas a boy of fifteen was as experienced and resourceful as most men. We had taken it quite as a matter of course when father had turned things over to us and gone away. There were on the ranch a hundred and fifty head of cattle, thirty-five horses and colts, and a thousand sheep. Since it was August, the weather was of course hot, and our sheep would not feed at all during the heat of the day, but bunched up under the shade of the trees in the pasture and only started out to graze towards the end of the afternoon when the heat became less intense We had corralled them as late as possible each night, but even so they had soon begun to show the effects of their shortened period of grazing. That was bad enough for any of them, but was especially disastrous with the ewes that were suckling lambs and with the wethers, which we were getting ready to fatten the following winter. We boys had felt that our reputation as herdsmen was at stake, and that something must be done to save the situation; and after several family councils at which we had gone over the pros and cons very carefully we had decided to leave the sheep out all night. Of course, we realized that there was some slight risk in it, but we also knew that, if the sheep were not corralled. they would feed nearly all night. The thing had been tried before when father was on the ranch to render judgment and had worked well. Moreover, it had been months since we had last seen or heard a wolf and our last trouble with dogs had been nearly two years before, and even then only one sheep had been killed.

And now had come this rude awakening! As we rode through the night our thoughts kept time to the beat of our ponies' hoofs on the road. What was happening? Would father ever trust us again?

We dashed up to the gate at last, and Bart, having no gun to bother him, threw himself from his horse and dragged the gate open. In a moment we were through it and and going like the wind up the slope beyond. Our eyes were becoming accustomed to the darkness now, and, although there was no moon, we could make out near-by objects fairly well. We flew past the empty corral, the gate of which was standing open. Why, oh, why hadn't we put the sheep into it that fatal night! Now we were nearing the higher ground of the hills in the centre of the pasture where our ears had told us the tragedy was being enacted. Soon we made out a dark object lying upon the ground, and, pulling up our panting ponies, we jumped off to see what it was. A dead sheep with its body still warm and showing even by the dim light of the stars that it was horribly torn and mangled! Less than a rod away lay another limp shape, which proved to be a lamb; its throat had been terribly bitten, but its breath was still coming and going feebly.

We straightened up and listened! Away to the right we heard again the wild jangle of bells and the sound of running sheep. Whatever brutes might be chasing them they made no sound, at least none that we could hear above the noise of the bells and of the running sheep. We inferred that the marauders were wolves instead of dogs, for wolves are usually silent when running sheep whereas dogs frequently give short barks. But in any case we saw at once that there was no chance in the dim light to get a shot at the animals; what we must do was to frighten them off. So as we raced away in the direction of the sound we began shouting at the top of our voices, and I fired my gun, reloaded as quickly as possible and fired again. Almost at once the sound of the bells and tramping feet stopped, and as we drew near the spot from which the sounds had last come we made out through the darkness an indistinct blur that resolved itself as we approached still nearer. into a band of perhaps two hundred sheep huddled together and panting. We called to them as we usually called when we went to the pasture with salt, "Sheep! Sheep! Sheep!" Whether they recognized us or not I don't know, but it was probable that they did, since there were several in the band that we could call individually by name and that would come to us and eat out of our hands. At all events they stood quiet while we approached fairly close to them.

We drew up our ponies and listened for a long time. Somewhere out there in the darkness were the creatures that had done all this! What were they, dogs or wolves, and how far away? Were they even then watching us from some near-by hillside? To make things doubly sure we rode around for some time and fired the gun repeatedly till we were thoroughly satisfied that the beasts, whatever they were, had gone for the night.

What should we do next? Should we stay out there the rest of the night and keep watch, or .should we go home? We knew enough of the enemy to be reasonably sure that he had finished his work for the night, so we finally decided to gather up what we could find in the darkness and corral them and then wait for daylight. We easily found the first band we had sighted and started them in the direction of the corral. which was perhaps a quarter of a mile away. While Bart kept them going I searched on either side over a fairly wide range and brought in several other bands of varying sizes, so that by the time we reached the corral we had between five hundred and six hundred sheep. We drove them in, shut the gate and rode slowly and dejectedly homeward, wondering what we should find when we returned to the pasture by daylight to count up our losses.

There wasn't much sleeping at our house for the rest of the night. We sat up for a long time, recounting to mother and Kate every detail of our tragic excursion to the east pasture, berating ourselves time and again for not corralling the sheep at night and speculating on what the total loss would be. Even after mother had finally sent us off to bed we lay there for hours, as it seemed, thinking, thinking!

We were out of bed and downstairs at dawn. We hurried away to the stable, saddled our ponies and turned their heads again towards the east pasture, which now showed fresh and beautiful in the morning light; its hills and valleys and the trees along the banks of Table Rock Creek made a beautiful picture. But we boys had no eyes just then for its beauties. All our thoughts were centred on the tragedy that those hills and trees might conceal!

Our first stop was at the corral, outside which were gathered perhaps a couple of hundred sheep that had come in from the hills. We opened the gate and let out the sheep that we had put in during the night. Even the casual examination that we were able to give them as they pushed by us ten or a dozen abreast showed many casualties. Here was a ewe with a bloody patch on her side, there a lamb limping painfully along, over yonder an old wether with a bloody throat. The whole band seemed nervous and excited and instead of starting off to graze, as their custom was, they lingered near the corral and kept huddled together.

We didn't stop long at the corral, however, but pushed on to the hills beyond, where we felt certain the principal evidence of the raid would be found I shall not go too fully into the gruesome details of our search that morning. On every side were evidences of the tragedy—bits of wool, pieces of skin that had been torn from fleeing sheep and here and there dead or dying sheep. We were hours in getting all the details, for the pasture covered two hundred acres, and the sheep had evidently been chased into almost every part of it. Away at the east side we found a bunch of perhaps a hundred, and in various other parts of the pasture smaller bands, all of which were wild-eyed and excited.

When the details of the night's disaster were finally complete the record stood as follows: forty-two sheep either killed outright or so badly wounded that we had to kill them to put them out of heir misery; thirty-five more that had been bitten so badly that we had to treat their wounds with tar to keep the flies away; and numberless other cases where the sheep were lame or had a bit on its jaw or on its throat. And of course every sheep was tired out and frightened and off its feed All that we had gained by their feeding at night had been lost and a woeful lot beside.

We were a dejected pair as we rode slowly back to the house to make our report to mother and Kate and to take council about the future. Of course we decided to corral the sheep at night and to keep a sharp watch on them during the day. And before leaving the pasture we had as a part of the scheme driven them over to the west side so that they would be in full sight of the house. We also kept a pony in the stable saddled and bridled and ready for instant use.

For the rest of the day we did little except to talk over the tragedy in all its details and to keep watch on the sheep. Whenever they began to go out of sight over the hills one of us boys would get on a pony and ride over and bring them back. Abut the middle of the afternoon as I was starting out on Saladin for such a trip I stopped him and stood a moment taking a long look round to make sure that there was no sign of dogs or wolves. Wolves are especially hard to see because they are almost the colour of the grass at most seasons of the year and seldom show themselves on the skyline. This time as I looked I made out two black specks away down on the bottom land of the Saline River and a long distance from the pasture. I knew in a moment that they were dogs, and I soon saw that they were making for the pasture.

Now a dog is always an object of suspicion to a sheep man. He may be the best dog in the world, but unless he belongs to the man himself he will be watched. And when two dogs travel together it is almost a foregone conclusion that they are up to mischief. With those facts and last night's experiences in mind it is no wonder that I at once concluded there was the enemy in plain sight!

The next question was what to do. I galloped back to the house and consulted the folks. Should I take the rifle and try to ambush the dogs and get a shot at them, or should I rely on my pony and try to get near enough to use the shotgun? I finally decided to take the shotgun. I had done some shooting with a rifle but not enough to be an expert with it, and mother realized that in my present excited condition I couldn't do my best. On the other hand I had hunted a great deal with a shotgun and was a fair shot with it both on the ground and on horseback. It didn't take long to settle the question. Mother brought me the gun and some shells loaded with buckshot.

Then it occurred to me that my spirited young pony Saladin was not the best kind of an animal for the job. I should need both hands for my gun when it came time to shoot, and I couldn't rely on his following the dogs, even if he were not frightened at the firing of the gun. So I tore back to the stable, where by good fortune or good management we had another pony in reserve. This was Peggy, a full blooded Indian pony and the mother of Saladin and Jack. An uncle of mine had bought her direct from the Pawnee Indians, and we had owned her for years and knew exactly both her failings and her good points. She hadn't the best of tempers, and she never hesitated to throw us boys off if she could, but she was as sure footed as an antelope, and I knew that she would follow a particular steer or any other animal until you stopped her, and moreover that she would stand gun fire.

Bart had followed me to the stable and together we pulled the saddle and bridle off Saladin and threw them on Peggy. Then I grabbed my gun, put my foot into the stirrup and as I swung myself into the saddle Peggy was off. She couldn't run so fast as Saladin, but she could run all day if necessary, and I knew I could depend on her in an emergency. As I dashed down the hill I made out the dogs: they were nearly to the north line of the pasture and were coming on at a good pace.

I decided on my plan of campaign in an instant. I would skirt round south of the hills in the centre of the pasture, which would keep me out of sight of the dogs; then as I swung round the eastern end of the hills I would watch for the dogs. and when they went down into Table Rock Creek, which flowed through the pasture. I would make a dash and try to be close enough to them when they came up again out of the Creek and on my side of it so that I could get a shot at them.

The plan worked to perfection. As I rounded the east end of the hills I caught sight of the dogs. They were inside the pasture and nearing the creek. A moment more and they plunged out of sight down the bank, evidently intending to cross. Now was my chance! I gave Peggy the word and fairly flew to the spot where the dogs had disappeared, throwing the bridle rein down on the pommel and cocking my gun as I went. As I neared the bank of the creek I scanned it anxiously for some sign of the dogs. Suppose they should follow along under the bank and come up out of range! Suppose they heard me coming and turned back! Suppose any one of a dozen things happened to prevent getting a shot at them! And then of course there was always the possibility, not to say probability, that even if I did shoot I shouldn't hit them. It is no easy task to shoot straight from the back of a pony on the dead run!

I was not more than thirty yards from the creek bank when both dogs came out at the same moment. One was a great black brute with some white on his breast; the other was a small spotted cur. They were evidently taken by surprise, for they made the fatal mistake of stopping to look at me. I have always thought that the white spot on the breast of the black one proved to be his death warrant. At any rate I took quick aim at it and fired, and with a howl he tumbled back out of sight down the bank. The other recrossed the creek like a flash, and I saw him scrambling up the opposite bank. I paid no further attention to the black one, but urged Peggy down the bank and across the creek, trying to reload my gun as I went. If anyone wants to undertake something really difficult, let him try to cross a muddy creek on the back of a plunging pony with trees and boulders on both banks and reload a shotgun as he goes! It was at that part of the chase that Peggy proved most valuable, as I knew she would. I paid no attention whatever to the crossing. but left her to choose it, only urging her on, dodging the branches and giving most of my attention to my gun, As a matter of fact I didn't get the new shell into the gun till we were up the other bank and speeding across the flat after the dog. I soon saw that my chances of hitting him were pretty poor. In spite of our best efforts it had taken Peggy and me too long to cross the creek, and now the north fence of the pasture was near at hand and there was no gate through which we could pass. So I threw up my gun and fired at the dog as he jumped the fence. There was nothing to indicate whether I had hit him or not unless it might be a little added speed on his part, but I have always hoped that at least one of my buckshot struck home.

I watched him a moment and then turned back to see what had happened to the other dog. As I rode I began to have vague misgivings. What evidence did I have that the dogs had killed our sheep! There were two of them together, and they were in our pasture, and we had had sheep killed the night before. That was all. Suppose the dog that I was now going back to look at should prove to be innocent and should belong to one of our good neighbours on the other side of the Saline River! Suppose he belonged to the Toziers or the Kinzels or the Scotts, all of them special friends of ours! What could I say to them, and what would they say to father? My elation and vanity over my good shooting began to leave me. By the time I reached the creek I was thoroughly sober and rapidly becoming depressed. I rode along the bank, looking for the dog and almost hoping that I might see him slinking away through the bushes. But no such luck! I soon made him out lying in the bushes near the spot where he had made his fatal mistake of stopping for an instant to look at a wild-eyed boy and a wild Indian pony racing at him from the hills. I began to wonder which of us had made the greater mistake, for men are always touchy about their dogs, and nothing will breed trouble faster than to accuse a dog of killing sheep unless you have absolute proof.

As I approached the black beast I saw that he was not quite dead, and when he heard me he raised his head and showed his teeth, snarling in an ugly way. In my repentant frame of mind I was sorry to see him suffering there, so I reloaded my gun and put him out of his misery.

As I came close to deliver the shot something about his mouth and his ugly fangs attracted my attention. Was that blood on his breast? And if so, was it his own blood, or could it be sheep's blood? Somehow it didn't look fresh. And what was that sticking between his teeth? I would examine him more carefully when all was over.

After I had put him out of misery I found that the blood on his white breast was dry and hard, and sticking between his teeth was wool, sheep's wool, our sheep's wool!

I mounted Peggy and rode thoughtfully and thankfully home.

WEEKLY EDITORS LIST THEIR TROUBLES

THE long-suffering weekly newspaper editor fills a unique place in the community he serves. While his paper fills a definite need in the surrounding territory, his subscribers are indifferent to his adversities. During depression years his troubles increase, and the conducting of a country weekly requires a large measure of optimism.

Some of the difficulties surrounding the business were recounted at Regina at the annual convention of Saskatchewan weekly editors. Efforts to have subscribers paid up resulted in many and varied proposals being put forward, in lieu of cash.

One editor recalled he had traded a year's subscription for a reel of old garden hose, and was quite satisfied with the bargain. Further north, another accepts furs and blueberries as a substitute. Livestock and poultry were accepted mediums for barter, and several editors avowed they toured their districts in old cars equipped with chicken crates picking up several years arrears in the form of poultry.

But one northern editor led the list easily with a story giving a new angle to the situation. He had taken almost everything offered until one day a hard-pressed farmer tendered a weekly quart of buttermilk until his account was paid. The editor didn't like buttermilk, however, and suggested butter instead.

"Bring butter to pay my subscription!" said the farmer indignantly, as he stormed out of the office, "I should say not. I can sell butter for money."

After you have read to this point, take a glance at the address label on this paper which will show the last date to which your subscription has been paid, then draw the attention of the one whose duty it is to pay the bills that your your subscription to The Record should be paid without delay. The neighbours who borrow always wonder why you do not pay up.

Dunbar W.M.S. Looks Back on 49 Years Faithful Service

Sister Societies of District Are Entertained at Birthday Anniversary Meeting.

On Tuesday afternoon last at the home of Mrs. Geo. Brownell, Dunbar, the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian church, Dunbar, celebrated the 49th anniversary of its organization. Mrs. D. Dillabough, the president, occupied the chair and opened the meeting with the Doxology followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison. The covenanters sang the 19th Psalm, and Mrs. Jas. Campbell of St. Andrew's W.M.S., Chesterville, took the Scripture reading and study paper. Mrs. Earl Munro of the Winchester Springs auxiliary led in prayer, and Miss Jamieson of Chesterville, Mrs. T. E. Coulthart of Morewood and Mrs. Preston McIntosh of Winchester Springs brought greetings from their auxiliaries. At this point, the secretaries and treasurer reported from Dunbar. Hymn 579, "Go Labour On," was sung. A trio, entitled "Christ, My Pilot Will Be," was beautifully sung by Mrs. Black, Mrs. Smirle and Mrs. Munro with Mrs. Chas. Marselis accompanying at the piano. All who were privileged to hear the selection thought it very appropriate for a missionary audience.

A backward glance over the 49 years of work was given by Mrs. Dillabough, the president, which covered much work, many joys and sorrows, and thanksgiving to God for leading them along the way for nearly half a century without a break and arriving so triumphantly at the present full of courage to press onward and upward. Miss Helen Barkley, Nation ward. Miss Helen Barkley of Nation Valley contributed a piano solo, "Meditation," which was enjoyed and appreciated. Mrs. W. S. Feeley of the Morewood W.M.S. and also Student secretary of Brockville Presbyterial, gave the afternoon address. Roll call was answered with a current missionary event, each secretary calling her own roll. This was followed by hymn 582, "O Master, Let Me Work With Thee." The offering was received and dedicated. A discussion on different subjects of interest to the auxiliaries was next in order, after which hymn 540, "Lead On, O King Eternal," and the closing prayer by the Dunbar secretary, Mrs. A. McIntosh.

The hostess, Mrs. Brownell, and the Dunbar ladies served lunch. Mrs. Dillabough, the Dunbar president, moved a vote of appreciation to all visiting members. Miss Helen Jamieson president of St. Andrew's, on behalf of the other presidents and auxiliaries moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Dillabough and Mrs. Brownell for their kind invitation and hospitality, which was seconded by Mrs. Robert Rainey of Morewood.

A three-layer cake, beautifully decorated for this 49th anniversary, was cut by three charter members—Mrs. Durant of Dunbar, Mrs. Rainey and Miss Belle Moffat, of Morewood.
