SECOND CLASS MAIL REGISTRATION NUMBER -0842

VOLUME 108, NO. 48. MORRISBURG, ONT., FRIDAY, DECEMBER 11th, 1970 SINGLE COPIES 10c

FIFTY PER CENT TURNOUT

Council Re-elected In Monday Voting

Morrisburg electors displayed more interest in their civic election on Monday, than did their neighbours in some other municipalities, with approximately 50 per cent of the possible number of votes being cast. Some other municipalities had a much smaller per centage — as low as 20%.

When the counting was finished late Monday night, the voters had elected the same council which has served them for the past two years.

Reeve C. F. McInnis had been acclaimed earlier when his was the only nomination received for that office.

Deputy Reeve Edwin T. Jones defeated his only challenger, John D. Owen.

Earl Baker again led the poll for the three available council seats, with 467 votes. E. Bruce Tuttle followed with 368 and Robert Bright had 308. All occupied similar positions in the present council Former Councillor Bill Dillabuogh had 168 votes.

One new member will be on the local Hydro Commission, with Thomas Jones replacing Lawrence Colligan, who had been a member for the past two years. John Thompson was re-elected as the other member of the two-man commission, and the other loser was G. Lorne Brown.

In local voting for a trustee on the Regional Board of Education, Dale Beckstead defeated Willard Steinburg by 258 to 193 votes. Mr. Beckstead also had sufficient support in other centres to assure him of the seat on the Board.

Separate School supporters voted for a trustee on the elementary S. S. Board, Peter VanMoorsell, 104 votes to 3 for Lionel Bazinet. However, Peter's almost unanimous choice here was not duplicated throughout the very large area, and Mr. Bazinet was elected.

The other ballot for Separate School supporters was for a representative to the Regional Board, and here Pat Beavers, although winning handsomely in his home town, 99 votes to a total of 7 for his two opponents, lost out in the area by some thirty-odd votes. Winner was Fernand Landry, of Crysler, who although he won the area, polled only a single vote in Morrisburg. In this election there have been rumours of a possible recount, but these could not be confirmed at press time.

Separate School supporters turned out in greater numbers than their neighbours with 90 per cent of those eligible casting their ballots for their trustee choices.

Here was the way the vote was apportioned in the village by polls (names are in alphabetical order, as on the ballot.)

Mrs. Larmour read the lovely Christmas story entitled "On That Night".

At the conclusion of the program the officers in 1971 were installed by Rev. Bruce who then concluded the meeting by pronouncing the Benediction.

December Meeting Hospital Auxiliary

The December meeting of the W.D.M. Hospital Auxiliary was devoted mainly to the consideration of a constitution proposed by the relevant committee and presented by Mrs. Eric Casselman. This constitution, with its by-laws, has been prepared in consultation with the the administrator, Mr. Stel, and is geared to that under discussion by the Board of Directors of the hospital in accordance with the regulations of the Ontario Hospital Association. Further discussion of the by-laws was laid over for the January meeting.

Representatives from Chesterville, Golden Valley, Melvin-Annable, Morewood, Ormond, Summers - Cass Bridge, Williamsburg and Winchester were presented with copies of the proposed constitution and their questions showed interest and a good background of information.

The business portion of the meeting was under direction of the president, Mrs. Colin MacGregor. Mrs. D. Carlyle was authorized to order special tote bags for Pediatrics so that each small patient would be provided with his own receptacle for his personal belongings by courtesy of the auxiliary.

The suggestion, made by Miss Gladys Payne and endorsed by the other members, that there be provision made for a Quiet Room in the projected plans for the hospital addition was favourably received by the Board of Directors. This room was felt to be a necessity to accommodate patients and their relatives in acute distress.

Winchester unit accepted responsibility for the Tuck cart during December and the Chesterville unit will supply volunteers for Tuesday and Thursday afternoon duty in One East through December and January.

Reports on the success of the Blood Donor Clinic showed a registration of 230 donors with only 13 rejects. The 217 units of blood collected were supplied to the Open Heart Surgery Blood Bank for our area.

Eighteen registered for the course in Home Nursing presently under way. This course is sponsored by the St. John's Ambullance and conducted by Mrs. K. Carkner, Mrs. G. Flucke, and Miss Tullis of the hospital staff.

Mrs. Lyle Marcellus of the Historical committee tendered her key to the Historical Records to Mrs. MacGregor who reported that a key to these interesting records is avail able at the office, on request.

The Christmas decoration of the hospital was left in the capable hands of Mrs. Jessie Summers and Mrs. Gordon LaRose who were given authority to add to their already good supply of decorations, as need ed.

A beautiful doll with changes of clothing, dressed and donated by Mrs. George Crawford of the Chesterville unit, was on display and tickets on sale are now available from auxiliary members. Please send in your stubs by Dec. 21st.

A fine supply of knitting was on hand for the showcase which moved the auxiliary to authorize the secretary, Mrs. Carlyle, to thank the donors by note. Mrs. Wm. Smith of Morrisburg accepted the responsibility of keeping a record of knitters and assisting with these acknowledgements.

A highly successful food sale at the close of the meeting netted the Morewood unit $26.00 after which coffee and cakes were enjoyed in the cafeteria, presided over by Miss B. Legris, Director of Nursing.

News and Views From Seaway Dist. High School

SENIOR AND JUNIOR BOYS' BASKETBALL

It was a bad day for both Seaway teams, as the B.C.I. Rams ruled the courts. The seniors, playing against a strong B.C.I. team, lost by a score of 72-40. Phillip Dillabough was Seaway's top scorer. The juniors did not fare as well though as they lost by a score of 67 to 19. Greater experience plus the teams present determination will ensure better results.

EOSSA BASKETBALL FINALS

Monday, November 23, saw the Seaway Junior Girls basketball team set off for Smiths Falls to compete in the Eastern Ontario Secondary School Association finals. There were six teams involved in the tournament, three Junior and three Senior.

In the Junior Division Seaway won over Smith Falls 35-22. Anne Summers and Jeannette Verhoeven were high scorers for Seaway. Our next game was Tuesday morning when we were defeated by Kingston (KCVI) by a score of 43-21. High scorers of this game were Jeannette Verhoeven and Angela Lafortune. The final game of the Junior Division would determine the winner. Kingston met Smith Falls and, surprisingly enough, Smith Falls won by a score of 43-19. Because each team had won one and lost one, total points were calculated. Smith Falls was the champion with a total of 75 points followed by Seaway with 66 and Wingston with 62. Unfortunately, we cannot all be winners.

In the Senior Division, Smiths Falls also took the trophy over Brockville Collegiate and the Loyalist Seniors from Kingston. The final game between the Loyalist Seniors and Smiths Falls resulted in overtime, creating excitement among the spectators. Naturally, Smiths Falls won.

Although we didn't win the tourn ament was a chalenge enjoyed by all. The suport of the Seaway Senior players who came along as spectators, was much appreciated. Special thanks goes to Mrs. Organ, our coach, who helped us reach the E.O.S.S.A. Finals.

We'll try again next year!

We Need Regular Elections

The municipal elections have come and gone for another two years, and have brought vindication and success for some, disapponitment and defeat for the others. As after all elections, these have been discussed and mulled over during the past week. And again, we have heard that old lament that "so-and-so" was the cause of an election,— that he put the municipality to a considerable expense,— etc., etc.

This old saw persists, in spite of the very obvious fact that "so-and-so" didn't have any more to do with "causing" the election, than any other candidate who qualified, and sought approval of the electors. Your vote is the most precious possession you have in a democratic country, and with the vote goes the right of any qualified person to seek public office.

The fewer elections that we have, the less democratic will be our local government, and we should guard our voting privileges as our life, not condemn or criticize those who seek only to exercise the rights given to them by our forefathers.

CLIP THIS NUMBER

At the bottom of this column is an advertisement which every family should clip out and keep close to their telephone. We were rather harshly reminded of that fact this week, when long-time friend, T. W. "Fore" Bouchard collapsed while talking to the editor in his office. It took us some little time to contact the ambulance, but fortunaely, the service responded very promptly, and "Fore" was soon on his way to Winchester Hospital, where at last report, he was somewhat improved.

Automated Bacon for Breakfast

Newest electric appliance alongside the toaster and the percolator at the breakfast table, according to Hardware Merchandising Magazine, is one designed to make frying bacon as easy as making toast — clean, automatic and done in individual taste. Canadian Westinghouse says its new 'Baconer' eliminates spattering or accumulation of hot grease. The bacon slices, up to seven or eight per frying, are draped over the Teflon nonstick cooking surface of the gadget and cook automatically to the desired crispness — determined by pre-setting an automatic dial. The bacon fat drains off into a separate grease tray. When your bacon is done, the appliance shuts off automatically.

Do Editors Make Good Reeves

Back to the election talk again. Former Chesterville publisher Keith Graham is back as reeve of his favourite village again, after a short layoff from that office, while he d.posed of his newspaper business to a couple of long time employees. Keith, we are told, won a resounding victory over two opponents. And over in Iroquois, publisher Ken Kirkby was acclaimed to another two-year term of office as reeve of that village.

Many politicians are credited with the saying that you can fool all of the people some of the time, and some of the people all the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time. If that maxim is accepted it follows that the people must believe country editors make good reeves. They keep reelecting them to that office. We join in extending congratulations to these two worthy gents of the fourth estate, who find time in a very busy schedule to work for their communities.

Five big oil companies, including the one which sailed tanker "Manhattan" through the Northwest Passage are currently evaluating the use of submarines. A fleet of 18 submarine tankers of 175,000 tons each would be needed to move two million barrels of oil a day. The price tag would be three billion dollars, which would include an underwater loading terminal 50 miles off Prudoe Bay, on the north Alaska coast.

Hansel and Gretel

A tuneful operatic version of the children's fairytale, Hansel and Gretel, will be presented on CBC television during the Christmas season: Wednesday, Dec. 23 at 8 p.m. A program for the entire family, with its storybook sets and costumes, and its beautiful music, Hansel and Gretel stars Judith Forst (left) and Christine Anton (right) in the title roles, and Maureen Forrester (centre) as the Witch, seen here outside the gingerbread- and-candy house of the Witch.

S.D.&G. FOSTER PARENTS GROUP

The second seasonal meeting of the S.D.&G. Foster Parents' Group met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Smith, at Riverside Heights on Wed. 11th Nov.

Interested Foster Parents were on hand from Martintown, Cornwall Northfield, Finch, Iroquois, Morrisburg and Riverside Heights.

Mr. Peter Carter, Social Worker with the Cornwall Branch of the Children's Aid Society, showed a most interesting and informative film, depicting the many and varied aspects of the work of the childrens' Aid Society. A question and answer period followed, in which most of those present participated.

It is evident from the interest and participation, that many foster parents have many questions requiring answers. It is for this reason that the S.D.&G. Foster Parents' Group has been formed and it is hoped, that as time goes on, more foster parents will be joining the F.P.G.

A similar meeting is to be held in Glengarry County in the near future, with a tri-county meeting in Cornwall early in the new year.

Warm fellowship was enjoyed over coffee and refreshments.

ORAL CANCER LINKED TO HEAVY DRINKING

Several research projects have shown a link between oral cancer and heavy drinking.

Although oral cancer has been attributed to other causes as well, the studies indicate that the alcoholic has a much greater chance of developing the disease than moderate or non-drinkers.

Although there are no exact statistics, the contention is based on growing convictions by oral pathologists. The researchers concede that they do not know why heavy drinking is linked to oral cancer, but speculate that excessive amounts of alcohol could cause irritation of mouth tissues. Also, they say that malnutrition and defective functioning of body cells — frequently associated with alcoholism may render the mouth tissues more susceptible to cancer.

The moderate drinker — the person who regularly has a cocktail or two before dinner — apparently should not worry about increased chances of developing oral cancer. But it's difficult to say how many drinks a day would be dangerous, say the researchers.

The disease has also been linked to heavy smoking, but oral cancer does occur in persons who neither drink or smoke. One study has estaiblished that the disease has doubled in women in the last 15 years and is related to an increase in cigarette smoking by women.

Humor an Antidote for Handling Problems

A writer who has dealt amusingly with the trials and tribulations of raising six ebullient children wondered recently if she hadn't just "gone through the things that are funny" now that her children are grown. She is Jean Kerr, author of "Please Don't Eat the Daisies," and a new book of humorous stories, "Penny Candy", published by Doubleday.

Mrs. Kerr acknowledged that as one gets older it's not as easy to view the world in a light-hearted manner, and she's thinking about tackling more serious subjects in the future. She also admitted that even when writing the bounciest of stories, humorous writers don't always feel cheerful. Says Jean Kerr: "I would never write a word if I really waited to be cheery or happy as a lark."

Keeping Cheerful

On the other hand, Mrs. Kerr points out that the writer had better not despair either. She notes that her stories could have turned out "leaden" rather than light-hearted when she thought about getting away from it all and fleeing "to New Zealand with all my children." But, she asserts, "you can get past it if you try." You can "con yourself" into being cheerful. "And you can remind yourself," she says wryly, "that some people were happy even during the War of the Roses."

Discussing the audience she has sought to reach, Mrs. Kerr declares, "I think of myself as writing for someone like myself — that is to say, someone with children who's happy enough to be married and isn't planning a divorce or anything, but who doesn't find that life is peaches and cream every minute of the day."

Fan Letters

Whether or not Jean Kerr feels cheerful herself when she's writing, her books have apparently brightened the lives of many. She gets mail, she says, from countless people who write that when "the kids get to be too much, the rain gets to be too much, and the dishwasher breaks down," they will read one of her stories and "it immediately cheers them up." She reports she gets similar letters of appreciation from people in hospitals. Jean Kerr also seems to strike a responsive chord in the younger generation because children, she says, write her frequently.

One of her most recent enthusiasts is her own 11-year-old son, Gregory. After reading "Penny Candy," he asked his mother to autograph his copy. When she wrote an affectionate inscription and signed it "Mom," he requested that she be more formal and sign it "Jean Kerr," as she would for any other fan. He also told her, by way of reviewing the book, "You're awfully lucky, Mom, to have all those funny kids."

Her Ideal

Jean Kerr notes that the greatest influence on her writing is the work of the late humorist Robert Benchley. "I adored Benchley," she says, "and I still reread him. My kids now try to read Benchley aloud to me . . . and I think they can't be all bad if they read Benchley aloud." Mrs. Kerr characterizes Benchley's humor as having a kind of "sweetness." "You never get banged on the head with it," she declares. "He just does it all with a feather.

Mrs. Kerr is also the author of "Mary, Mary,' one of the longest-running hits in Broadway history. Her husband, Walter Kerr, is drama critic for the New York Times.

Stress from all directions

OTTAWA — If you check the newspages for the last few days, you'll see a few stories about the semi-annual meeting of the ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance in Brussels.

You may have to look pretty hard, because it wasn't a spectacular meeting.

The ministers of the NATO countries are still mildly enthusiastic about getting together with the Russians over a detente in Europe, but no more so that they were last time they met in the spring.

There's a reason behind that controlled enthusiasm, and we thought you might be interested.

In recent months, Willy Brandt, the Chancellor of West Germany, has been turning on the heat to make friends with the Russians.

● First he signed a non-aggression pact with Moscow, and that one brought forth some snide comments from international experts about the last non-aggression pact the Germans and Russians signed. It was about 1940, seems to me.

Anyway, Willy Brandt then started talking to the Polish government and came right to the verge of agreement on recognizing the line formed by the rivers Oder and Neisse as the permanent eastern boundary of Germany.

Despite these impressive steps, the non-aggression pact signed with Moscow has yet to be ratified by Germany's parliament.

And the ink is still waiting to come down on the dotted line that would sew up the Polish border talks.

I wonder if this is all connected with the four-power talks in Berlin. They've been operating on a stop-and-go (mostly stop) basis for the last 25 years — and they came to another impasse just days ago.

And although the signs have been promising, there hasn't been any real progress at the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) in Helsinki, Finland.

It looks very much like the U.S.S.R. and the U.S. (each with their client-camps in attendance) are reaching another bargaining summit.

Both sides want a settlement in Berlin, because that's the crux of east-west difficulties in Europe.

But neither side wants to give the other an advantage.

The Russians also want a European Security Conference. They first proposed it nearly two years ago.

The fact that the Russians are proving difficult over reaching a Berlin settlement is the main reason why there's a certain NATO coolness to the conference.

NATO and Canada have been saying for 18 months now that a European Security Conference is a good idea, but first we should explore the subjects to be discussed.

As External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp has said many times, there's no point in holding a conference from which the world expects great agreements, and then making no progress.

What he had really been saying is that Berlin is the central problem in Europe, and we'd better make sure there will be a solution to Berlin in the offing before we start raising world expectations.

The only change in Mr. Sharp's tune at NATO in early December was the note of trade that he was playing in the capitals he visited.

And on this note, it must be mentioned that Canada's most imminent danger is the fact that both the European Common Market and the U.S. seem to be headed for new protectionist trade policies.

Mr. Sharp made his pitch for Canada in London, Brussels, and The Hague — and at the NATO conference tables — for adherence to freer trade policies.

After all, the free world agreed in President Kennedy's time to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade which meant a progressive lowering of tariff barriers so we could get down to the business of making money with free trade.

And when you come down to it, perhaps that's one of the main reasons that Canada is still in NATO — to keep a foot in the strategic door with some of our major trading partners.

A recent audit of our subscription list by the Canada Post Office has reminded us forcibly that we are carrying on our list quite a number of subscribers, whose dues are not paid in advance — some in fact are considerably in arrears. When such a situation arises, your favourite paper is considered by postal authorities to no longer be eligible for special postal consideration. For all practical purposes, it becomes a sales message, and is rated as such for postage. Our newest audit has added several bucks each week to our postage bill so we would ask that subscribers please check their subscription and make sure that it is paid in advance.

She was a member of Iroquois United Church, of Moonlight Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star No. 224, Iroquois; of the U.C.W., the Church Choir; the Women's Institute; the Iroquois Ladies' Lawn Bowling Club, as well as a member of two bridge clubs.

Pall bearers were JoJseph Grisdale, Clint Stewart, Ross Jamieson, Dwight Merkley, Allan Fisher and Ray Parmeter.

An Eastern Star service held at the funeral home on the evening prior to her burial, was well attended by members of the Ladge.

The numerous floral tributes and donations to the Heart Fund, and the large number who called to express sympathy, and attended the services, all bore evidence of the high esteem in which Mrs. Merkley was held in the community.

The Government of Ontario's Tax Assistance Plan is helping the elderly. Cheques have already been sent to more than 230,000 people: and many will soon receive additional assistance.

Paying taxes is tough for everyone.

But some people have a particularly difficult time. Like the elderly. They are hard-pressed by rising property taxes.

To help lighten their load, the Government has introduced a new plan. It is called 1970 Tax Assistance for the Elderly.

The plan will pay out up to $100 to help elderly people – those who receive the Federal Guaranteed Income Supplement – to help pay their property taxes, or rent.

In all, more than 230,000 persons across Ontario will receive $17 million in benefits.

1970 Tax Assistance for the elderly is an immediate step to relieve the pressure of property taxes. And an important one.

O.P.P. REPORT

What did you do with the time you saved by speeding on your last trip? You burned extra gas and rubber unnecessarily. Every mile of the way you were in danger of passing a adar set and picking up a substantial fine. You annoyed other road users by your constant disregard for safety. Every additional mile per hour increased the chance of an accident and increased the chance that any accident would result in a fatality. When you did get to your destination, you were probably irritable due to the extra strain put on you by your unnecessary speeding. On the other side of your ledger you saved, perhaps ten minutes or so. Was it worth it?

Ontario Provincial Police in Dundas County patrolled 12,641 miles while working 1,290 hours. During this time 49 charges and 83 warnings were issued under the Highway Traffic Act of Ontario.

Officers from Morrisburg and Winchester Detachments investigated 2 thefts, 1 break and enter, 2 disturbances and 27 miscellaneous complaints.

One person was charged with impaired driving while one other person was charged with dangerous driving. Five persons were charged under the Liquor Control Act of Ontario.

Officers were kept busy on area roads investigating 8 property damage accidents and 3 personal injury accidents in which 3 persons received minor injuries.

In Provincial Court 1 person was sentenced to 3 years imprisonment as a result of being convicted of uttering forged documents. Officers spent 8 hours in court while registering 49 convictions.

Goodly back stairs

I am only sorry that we didn't think to have recorded on film the meetings of our little Save the Back Stairs Committee.

There, in microcosm, was the ageless struggle of humanity attempting to stem the tide of progress: two people, man and wife, huddled night after night over the dining room table, drinking coffee, smoking, talking, drawing diagrams, calling for order, ruling interruptions from the floor out of order, and calling in passersby, even cats, to cast tie-breaking votes.

We simply liked the back stairs. One could hurry up the back stairs in bare feet and shorts, whispering "Gangway!" — and stay unseen by a minister being ushered in the front door on a surprise visit.

One could get down the back stairs in pyjamas at midnight without alerting the neighborhood — by a succession of lights going on — that Young once more was going down for something to help wash down the late show.

But there was also a case against the back stairs. In having our kitchen re-done, the best brains in the firm of Jones and Bailey, carpentry contractors, were bent to the problem of a re-building plan that would get the portable dishwasher out of the middle of the kitchen floor. They said that to do this the back stairs must go. We said NO — that the wall under the back stairs could be knocked out and a space made there for the dishwasher. That was the stage at which I reported triumphantly some weeks ago that the back stairs indeed had been saved.

However, on arriving home a few days later, I was met by my wife.

"Come and look," she said.

We went to the kitchen. That day the carpenters had been knocking out the wall to find a burrow for the dishwasher. There, where the wall had been, was a mess of nothing — except four water pipes rising heavenward toward the bathroom.

I took in the situation at a glance. "I suppose we need water in the bathroom," I mused.

She nodded.

"You don't mean . . . " I said.

"Yes," she said. "There is only one way now to get rid of the dishwasher. And that is to knock out the back stairs."

Well, easy come, easy go.

One other thing had been found in knocking out that wall. This was a tightly-rolled copy of an August 3, 1923, newspaper, with a headline on the front page saying that U.S. President Warren G. Harding had died the day before and that Calvin Coolidge had become president.

One could only wonder about those long-gone workmen of 1923, with the death of a president on their minds. Had they spared an uneasy instant to reflect that by placing those water pipes in that wall they were signing the death warrant of the new back stairs they had just installed? (In all reality, to answer my own rhetorical question: Not ruddy likely.)

So out came the back stairs. Three weeks later, the brand-new kitchen was ready for use and we could stop cooking our meals in an electric chafing dish. Where the back stairs had been, stood the refrigerator and the dishwasher, with a large and roomy cupboard above the dishwasher.

Also, off the upstairs landing where the back stairs once had egress through a swinging door, there was the smallest sewing room in the world.

"Let's look at it this way," my wife said courageously. "We have not lost a back stairs, we have gained a sewing room." When the job was done, Mr. Bailey, the crew chief, stood and looked around with some satisfaction.

"You know," he said. "I can't remember what the old kitchen looked like."

The Youngs, who had used the sugar bin, flour bin, painted wooden drainboard, casement windows and gnarled linoleum there for years, said in unison: "We can."

DEPARTMENT OF LANDS AND FORESTS

Weekly Report

PUBLIC EDUCATION ACTIVITIES

4-H Clubs, Separate School Board Science Schools, Cubs, and Boy's Brigade. What does the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests have to do with these organizations? Actually, quite a lot. Throughg our forestry extension work, we attend meetings, give tours, and organize projects and activities for these groups.

In the Larose area, the Department has helped to organize four 4-H forestry clubs and continues to aid them at their meetings with films and demonstrations by our forestry technicians and conservation officers. Projects such as leaf or wood collections are encouraged and field trips are made several times during the summer. Two members of the Clarence 4-H Forestry club won first and second prizes for their collections at the Ottawa Winter Fair.

Other educational acdivities carried out by our staff include tours and lectures for boy scouts and other organized youth groups. We have a weekly tour of 30 to 40 students from grades 7 and 8 for the Ottawa Separate School Board. Also, during the spring, every school in the area is visited by members of our staff for a brief lecture.

It is hoped that through these activities enough interest is generated so that the public, especially the younger generation, will develop an appreciation of the values of the values of forest and wildlife and will therefore strive to preserve wildlife and to manage forests wisely in the future.

COLD WATER — Cold water is not for swimming. Every fall, some hunters overload, mishandle and capsize boats — and then perish in the near-freezing water. If your boat capsizes, do not risk a long swim in cold water. Stay with the boat. Your heavy clothing can protect you like a diver's wet suit. Tighten it at neck, waist, wrists and ankles. Wear mitts and parka hood as long as you're in the water Better still; Be especially careful with boats in rough, fall weather.

New Laws for Snowmobilers

From the time that first snowflake falls, and doesn't melt, thousands of Ontario residents start getting ready for the snowmobiling season.

If you're a snowmobiling enthusiast, there are some new laws you should brush up on before heading out this winter.

The scope of the laws regarding snowmobiling are outlined in a comprehensive new pamphlet now available from Department of Transport. "Motorized Snow Vehicles in Ontario" is a compact guide to the operation of your machine. The Motorized Snow Vehicles Act is also free upon request from the High way Safety Branch, Ontario Department of Transport, Ferguson Block Queen's Park, Toronto 182.

Here are some of the new laws you should know about in brief.

- Snowmobilers must now report any collisions on or off the high way which involve personal injury or damage exceeding $200 to property other than that of the owner or driver.
- The driver of a snowmobile must hold a driver's licence to take his machine on highways where snowmobile operation is permitted.
- The owner of a snowmobile is to be held responsible for any infractions committed by persons using his machine . . . this owner responsibility is in addition to that of the operator.

Try to avoid driving your snowmobile on roads where the snow is hard-packed, icy, or where the road way is dry and handling is difficult. Fully 78 percent of the 185 collisions which were reported on Ontario highways last year happened under these conditions. Drivers who mixed alcohol and snowmobiling accounted for 21 percent of the 185 collisions.

Forty percent of collisions occurred during the weekend in hours of darkness.

Don't venture out on ice-covered lakes until well into the winter months. Even then, currents from streams flowing in or out of the lake will make the ice thinner in some places. Another hazard for snowmobilers is barbed wire . . . several cases were reported last year of snowmobilers who didn't see farmer's fences until it was too late.

New licence plates for motorized snow vehicles went on sale October 1st across Ontario. The new, chrome yellow and blue plates are good for two years and the the registration fee is $4.00.

The ogres will clash

DETROIT — The golden ys of boxing may be long one, but early next year the biggest fight gate in the history of the sport will witness the long-awaited clash between Cassius Clay and Joe Frazier.

The last obstacle to this meeting evaporated here in the home of Joe Louis when Frazier easily polished off light heavyweight champion Bob Foster. Like Louis, Frazier is not a classic boxer, but rather a slugger.

For the last three years, boxing's glamor section — the heavyweight division — has been in a tailspin. The American-dominated World Boxing Congress suspended heavyweight champion Cassius Clay, alias Muhammed Ali, in 1967 for refusing to be inducted into the United States Army.

It was one more example of politics mixing in sports with the usual disastrous results. Whether or not one approved of the U.S. involvement in Vietnam or the U.S. draft, the boxing authorities had no business taking away Clay's title. The majority of the world boxing fans agreed and paid little attention to the so-called elimination series that "crowned" Frazier world champ.

Unfortunately for Frazier, the riches that go with the heavyweight championship of the world evaded him with the exception of the one Jimmy Ellis fight.

With Clay's re a in October, the match at boxing fans have been waiting for is just around the corner.

And while their styles are vastly different, both fighters have similar backgrounds.

Clay came out of the 1960 Olympics in Rome as heavyweight champ and the raw potential of being a top prize fighter. A group of sportsmen in Louisville, Clay's hometown, got together and decided they wanted to give the young black man a chance to stay clear of the mob that still controlled the fight game. They put together a company, signed Clay to a contract, and started him on the way to wealth and the championship.

razier was the 12th of 13 children of a South Carolina pig farmer. His father lost an arm when Joe was a youngste'. So the boy had to pitch in and help. This gave him his tremendous strength today.

He, too, went the Olympic route, getting his big chance when Buster Mathis was injured prior to the Tokyo Olympics in 1964. Frazier pinch hit and won the title.

Then he returned to his new home in Philadelphia to find a group of businessmen with plans for him that paralleled the Louisville program for Clay.

The company, called Cloverlay, put Frazier on a salary, paid all expenses of his training, and set aside 55 per cent of each of his purses in a fund. Only the salary came out of that fund so today Joe is well-fixed. Cloverlay had to pay the expenses out of their 30 per cent, with the manager retaining 15 per cent as his end. Without the big paydays, Cloverlay is in the red and needs the Clay fight to show a small profit.

Joe now is paid $1,000 a week, 10 times more than his first payday as a fighter. But he is putting extra money into the company through his part-time work as a rock singer on the nightclub circuit.

In the ring, Clay and Frazier are opposites. Cassius is the classic boxer, fast and hard to hit. Frazier is a plodder. Due to short arms, he has to move in close to become effective. His left hook is his best punch and he reminds many fight fans of Rocky Marciano. Like the Rock, Frazier gladly will take two punches to land one.

Clay never has been hit hard and many fight fans argue he will quickly fold if hit. But since turning pro in 1960, Cassius Marcellus Clay has effectively evaded all punches. His blinding speed and tricky moves have left big hitters like Sonny Liston and George Chuvalo swinging at air.

If Frazier can land his favorite left hook, fight fans will have their answer. Both fighters have never lost a pro fight. This is one match that requires no drum-beating. If it doesn't draw a million at the gate, plus millions more via theatres and television, then boxing is really dead!

Forced idleness - - Ugh!

An authority on old age says that 95 per cent of elderly people are "overplaced." By this she means that they are consigned to nursing homes or hospitals where everything is done for them, when in many cases they would be better off at home.

In their own surroundings, they still have challenges which preserve many aspects of independence, like preparing their own meals, keeping things clean, or helping with the dishes.

Frequently a move is precipitated by a trip the family is planning. Grampa is deposited in a spot where no one will have to worry about him. All too often when the trip is over, no move is made to bring him home; and he gradually loses initiative, self-respect, and any urge to keep going.

According to one industrialist, the average life of their pensioned-off employees is often appallingly brief after retirement. There's not much to be said for enforced idleness.

DEAR DORIS — My mother is making life awful for me and my sister because she simply won't speak to us. This has gone on for a week. It started when my youngest sister ran to her with the story that I hit her.

I didn't hit her, but my mother won't believe that. All I did was take the broom away from her so that she would stop hitting us.

The only one who talks to us is Dad. My sister and I cleaned the upstairs and the rec. room and she didn't say a thing.

In The Doghouse

DEAR DOGHOUSE — I'm sorry. Here we are harping on the great importance of communicating, and your mother chooses to get revenge by keeping silence. She forgets that part of her job is to give love and encouragement to her older girls.

Pick your time and talk seriously to Dad. Really unload, so that he knows how badly you feel. If he has an ounce of fairness in him he'll go to bat for you.

DEAR DORIS — I'm a widow with one teenager at home. I have arthritis and cannot go out to work, so I hope you can give me an idea about something I might do at home to supplement my income — something that doesn't call for more than a Grade 5 education, as I was the oldest of 10 children and left school early.

Still Ambitious.

DEAR AMBITIOUS — Would there be a green thumb on those arthritic hands — and maybe a sunny window or two in the house? You can make more than pin money by developing seedlings or raising bulbs.

One woman started a good catering business with a batch of high-class homemade pickles. Another had more of a golden touch — and raised canaries and goldfish for sale.

You can set your own pace when you operate at home, and rest when you need to. I'm sending you my leaflet, "Part Time Work at Home or in Community," which might have an idea for you. (Available to readers for 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

DEAR DORIS — My husband is always yelling at me. I work part-time and he asks me what I do with my money. I buy things for the house!

I also cook and clean the house, do the washing, and he still cries: "What did you do today?"

When he is off for a weekend I ask him what did he do, and he says: "I work hard all week!"

Wife

DEAR WIFE — Some perverse people strike out in criticism and suspicion at the person they are supposed to care the most about.

Usually I try to point out that such people need love and a build-up; but there are times when the jarring effect of some indignant back talk brings home the realization that they are just not getting away with it. I'd suggest you try it.

The 2nd FORTY

Using Your Head

Dear Miss Brookfield:

My 42-year-old sister, who has been a career girl all her life, was married six months ago. I didn't like her husband from the start, and thought he was mostly interested in her money. He's showing his true colors now by talking about her behind her back and telling people — mostly her younger girl friends — that he didn't marry for love and could use some female companionship right away. My sister has always been pretty smart, but I think this time she forgot to use her head. Should I tell her what everyone else already knows? S.H.

Dear S.H.:

Use your head and don't butt in. It's your sister's problem and she has to face up to it. She made her bed and if it gives her insomnia after a while, it's up to her to correct that condition. It's sad, but true. If things are anything like you say they are, she'll find out soon enough that the matrimonial mattress is lumpy.

Easing the Change

Dear Miss Brookfield:

I've been a healthy person all my life and seldom go to the doctor. Lately though, I've been having some symptoms that I think are connected with the "change of life". Is it necessary to see a doctor about these? I am 48 years old. W.R

Dear W.R.:

Yes. The only person who can tell whether your symptoms are related to the menopause is your doctor. By all means, go see him. One doctor who's also a marriage counselor, Dr. Rebecca Liswood, recommends that women in menopause "see their gynecologists not once, but twice a year." She points out that many doctors believe that patients in this age group "feel better physically and emotionally"— when treated with certain vital hormones.

Overstuffed

Dear Miss Brookfield:

My first grandchild was born 3 months ago and he's very handsome. But my daughter-in-law (the baby's mother) keeps stuffing him with food so he's already quite plump. She does this, I believe, because her family was poor and never had enough to eat. I've told her I don't think a baby should become accustomed to so much food. She keeps telling me to mind my own business. What do you think? N.L.

Dear N.L.:

Science is on your side. Dr. Edgar S. Gordon of the University of Wisconsin points out that the foundations of adult obesity are often laid during infancy. He declares that overfeeding a child can result in the development of an abnormally large number of fatty cells. Studies have shown, he says, that obese individuals have more of these fatty cells than the rest of us. Dr. Gordon therefore asserts that keeping a baby slightly overweight "may be one of the worst things a mother can do." However, although science may be on your side, it still is her baby. Why not talk this over with your son? He might be able to do a much better job of convincing his wift than you have.
