Cash and Credit

A person without money or property usually has little credit, even if his integrity is well known.

Credit is based on capital, and capital is the result of saving. Credit is not a gift; it is a growth. It comes through earnest effort long continued. Some day you will need it.

Saving is the first step to good credit.

Henry Whittaker Passes Away

On Monday night Mr. Henry Whitteker of The Ninth, passed away after an illness of several weeks. He was a well known farmer of the Morewood district. Besides the widow, a family of eight survive, six sons and two daughters who have the deepest sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Grady, Riverside.

Death which is so solemn and so sad at all times was extremely so in this case when it crept suddenly into the happy home of the Grady family, Riverside, and carried away both father and mother. Although under perfect medical care pneumonia with all its treachery could not be overcome, and on February 13th at 4 p. m. Mrs. Grady was called to her eternal reward followed by her husband 15 hours later.

Mr. John D. Grady was born in 1850 being a life long resident of the Township of Finch and held in high esteem by all who knew him. He took a very active interest in municipal affairs, having been councillor, deputy reeve and reeve. His amiable disposition won for him a host of friends who will mourn his death for many a day. In 1874 he married Catherine Spotton and together they enjoyed 49 years of wedlock. Mrs. Grady was 74 years at the time of her death. All who knew her, knew her to be that loving nature that made her an ideal wife and perfect mother.

They leave to mourn their loss five sons and three daughters—Thomas of Connaught, John of Berwick, Mrs. Denis Kearney, Limerick; Mrs. George McMahon, Chesterville; William, Margarite, Michael and Bernard at home also 12 grandchildren. Mr. Grady is survived by three brothers Michael and Morris of Chicago and Patrick of Omaha; also four sisters—Mrs. Desmond, Chicago; Mrs. Doherty, Boone, Iowa; Mrs. John Smith, Omaha, Nebraska; and Mrs. Wallace, Seattle, Washington. Mrs. Grady is survived by one sister, Mrs. Jno. Devanney of Crysler.

The funeral took place on Thursday morning from the family residence followed by an exceptionally large cortege of friends to St. Mary's Church, Crysler. Requiem High Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father Leahy after which interment was made in the family plot at Crysler. The pall bearers were—Messrs. Patrick Moran, Walter Whittaker, Frank Galvin, Patrick Graham, Gordon Murphy and Robert Bogart. Floral offerings received—Fioral Crosses by Family, Spiritual Boquet from Mr. and Mrs. Jno. McDonell, Elred and Edmund McDonell of Ottawa.

Spiritual offerings from—Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Devanney, Mrs. Wm. Devanney and family, Miss Sadie Galvin, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Graham, Mr. Frank Galvin, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Moran, Mr. and Mrs. George McMahon, Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Manley, Rev. Father Leahy, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Allen, Mr. and Mrs Dennis Kearney, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Clements, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Coyne, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Carroll, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Curran and family, Mr. Mike Grady, Mr. Bernard Grady, Miss Margarite Grady, Mr. Wm. Grady, Mr. Michael Ruddy and family, Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. Henry McMahon, Mr. Bernard Coyne and family, Mr. S. O'Grady and family, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Beehler, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Grady and family, Mr. and Mrs. John Grady and family, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick O'Donohue, Mr. Michael O'Grady, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Foley, Mrs. Mary Devanney, Mr. and Mrs. Jno. O'Donohue, Mr. and Mrs. Brian Hutchingaem, Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. Michael Grady and family, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. John Ruddy and family, Mrs. Andy Doherty, Boone, Iowa; Cassie Devanney, Elmira, N. Y.; Miss Kathleen Ruddy, Ottawa; Miss Gertrude Shields, Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Galvin.

Who Voted For It?

Chesterville, Feb. 20th.

To The Editor.

Dear Sir:—

Where does the Council of this village get authority to raise such a large sum without the consent of the taxpayers of the village to do so, to be expended on two streets in the village? Now, anyone living in the village knows that roads coming into the village need repairing worse than the streets mentioned in the resolution or by-law passed by the village council. I believe that they know that it is not strictly in accordance to law to do so, but I think by advertising it in the local paper and when no objection made to expending the money that it will make it lawful to go on and do so. I, for one, object to them spending that amount of money on those two streets, when other streets in the village are almost impassible. When a man accepts a public office he is supposed to look after the interests of the people as a whole, not after his on special interest, and a man that don't do so should not be looking after a public office for he is not a fit person to hold such office.—John King.

The Gateway to Opportunity

To-day not all young people are aware of the value of a savings account as the foundation of future security and prosperity.

A savings account not only provides for the proverbial "rainy day," but very often it is the open gate to an opportunity to get into business, to buy a home or to make a lucrative investment.

No other provision for the future is so sure of results in security and contentment as a savings account.

Veterans Ask Fund Be Divided

Signatures of the Chesterville veterans of the Great War are being sought to a petition asking the committee in charge of the funds obtained at the time of the citizens' reception and dinner to the returned men in 1919, to be divided equally among the men who lived in Chesterville and saw service in France. The funds have remained in the bank to the credit of the committee in charge more than three and a half years without any disposition being made of them. At one time a proposal was made that some suitable souvenir should be presented to each man in comemoration of his services to his country but was never acted upon. Recently it has been proposed to donate the whole amount as a community gift to the Public Library where all could share in it to advantage. If this were done each book could have pasted in it a record, perhaps with all the men named, which would be a constant reminder in our homes as long as the books lasted. The plan of a donation to the library is not favored by the Veterans and it has been said that if such were contemplated legal action would be taken to prevent it. We think that would be hardly likely, because, when the reception was tendered the men, the announcement of it did not suggest that it was to provide funds for any particular purpose other than to welcome the men back to civil life.

The subject is rather a delicate one to discuss, as the stand taken by the Veterans leaves out of the question any recognition of the services rendered by their comrades who sleep the long sleep in the land where they fought and died.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. Did This Happen in Dunbar?

The performing brown bear had escaped from the menagerie, and he roamed eagerly around the countryside in search of prey. Suddenly he espied a sweet maiden standing beside a tree, waiting for her sweetheart. Stealthily creeping up behind her, the bear seized her in his tremendous paw and pressed her to him in a mighty hug. For five minutes he held her thus, and was about to drop what he thought was her lifeless body to the ground when he heard her murmur:

"I don't think you are quite so strong as you used to be, Harry."

That night a miserable bear crept back into his cage. The modern girl had broken his spirit.

Great Chance To Secure Young Pure Bred Bulls

The Oxford County Livestock Improvement Association supplies grade owners with a registered inspected six months' old bull of good breeding and individuality for $55. The grade owner who purchases a purebred for the first time will receive a bonus from the Ontario Government of $15 and may turn in his grade as part payment on the remaining $50, thus replacing his grade with a young pure-bred at a very small cash outlay.

Advice to Lovers

The pastor of a southern church recently advised his young men not to do their courting on Sunday, when the girls are all dressed up, but to call around when the girls are not expecting company. This recalls the story of the young colored man who asked his girl's father for her hand. "Did ye evah see dat girl eat? the father questioned. "Yes, sah." "Huh," continued the father, "did ye evah see dat girl eat when no one was lookin' at her?"

Chesterville Junior Red Cross

The eighteenth regular meeting of the Chesterville Pep-timists Jr. Red Cross and was held in Room A, Friday morning February 9th. The President and Secretary took their respective chairs and the membership buttons were distributed. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted. The Auxiliary then sang for the first time there new song. It was agreed that the song should be made a permanent item of every programme. The meeting then listened to an interesting lecture on "The effect of Alcohol on the Human System", given by the Director. The kinds of alcoholic drinks, methods of manufacture, the acquiring of the drinking habit, the various effects on the nervous, respiratory, circulatory, and digestive systems, and the general curse to mankind were fully dealt with. After the lecture, the meeting was open for suggestions and discussion. It was moved by Willa Ellis, seconded by Arthur Haley that the Auxiliary resolve itself into 9 committees, each to serve for a week for the purpose of putting on 4 "Daily Health Reminders" per week, on one of the blackboards. Mr. Boyd moved an amendment, seconded by Ralph Durant that each committee put on 2 per day or 10 per week and when all committees had served, their Reminders were to be submitted to a Judging committee of Miss McGee, Miss Smith and Miss Casselman, who should decide upon the winners; each of the winning committee to be awarded a Merit Badge in recognition of their work, The amendment carried.

The Auxiliary also decided to appoint a Visiting Committee whose duty will be to report at each regular meeting as to the cases of illness of all absent members.

The Secretary reported 44cents in the Mite box for this week and the meeting closed at 12 o'clock.

The nineteenth regular meeting of the Chesterville Pep timists J.R.C. Auxiliary was held in Room A. on Friday morning February 16th, after the usual routine of opening, the Auxiliary divided into the two groups chosen for the "Team Contest" for purpose of review. Walter McLean and Jessie Harper were captains. Each member had to write a question on any Health topic (which he or she could answer) and sign it, then the teams exchanged questions and ten minutes was given for answering. The answers were also signed, the Director then judged the answers, and where they were insufficient or incorrect, he explained them fully. Jessie's team were pronounced the winners by a score of 15 points as against Walter's 6¼ points.

The meeting adjourned for lunch, after which Raymond Campderros, as chairman of the Visiting Committee gave his report on the 10 members absent through illness. Jimmie Cramer then read a letter he had received from a boy correspondent in Wooler School, Northumberland Co., England. A great deal of interest is taken in the correspondence and the boy and girls are very proud indeed to receive letters from our friends across the seas. The Mite-box report showed only 3 cents and one stick of gum—this latter contribution being voted to the Secretary's use, on condition that she take advantage of it outside the school hours. The meeting closed at 2.30 p. m.

Next week we shall publish "Our Song" and the "Daily Health Reminders" up-to-date.

"Jay" Walker is Find for "Getting Hit" by Auto

It was not so long ago that every motorist who had the misfortune to injure a pedestrian was regarded as something in the nature of a criminal. Even at the present time the motorist is more often than not blamed for an accident to a pedestrian which was entirely the fault of the latter. It is therefore, worthy of note that William Bereivich, of Kenmore, Ohio, was fined $5 and costs the other day for "getting hit" by an automobile. It was found that Bercivich caused the accident through "jay" walking and driver was exonerated.

Berwick Again Champions

Friday night on the local rink in the first of the play-off games between Berwick and Chesterville for the Championship of the Central Ottawa Valley League, Berwick won from the home team by 4 goals to none. John Dennenv of Cornwall, handled the game in his usual satisfactory manner. Berwick had a full line up of their champion team of last season with Lorne Hutt back on the defence. The game was a good one by both teams with perhaps the best exhibition of real hockey seen locally this season. The injection of Hutt into the Berwick line up made them a very much better team and the whole bunch playing under his direction had that pep and confidence which they formerly lacked. The locals played a good clean game, a game that would have been effective against any team with a defence a little less air-tight than that of Berwick. In previous games Chesterville has often been fortunate in getting away with the first counter, but Friday night Berwick beat them to it with the only score of the first period, and when they had added the second after eight minutes playing, they took every advantage of their position, pulling back a three man defence and letting Chesterville buck up against it. Chesterville tried gamely to break through on one, two and three men rushes, but with the back checking of Berwick's fast forward line the attack crumbled before it could bore in to get a close shot, while Inman took care of the long shots with the greatest of ease. The third goal in the second period and the fourth in the final, were the results of Chesterville's defence being drawn out in their eagerness to support their forwards in breaking through for a counter. On each occasion Berwick broke away with puck and had little difficulty in placing it in the net.

The game advertised for Monday night at Berwick was defaulted by Chesterville, thus giving Berwick the round by 4 to nothing and the opportunity to go up against Perth in the next round.

Monday night Perth won the championship of the Rideau group when they beat Smiths Falls 7 to 0

Hockey Matters

During the past week three league games in the Central Ottawa Valley league have been played. Thursday night Chesterville won at Berwick 8 to 3. Saturday Berwick won at Finch 3 to 2 in overtime. Tuesday night Berwick repeated on their own ice against Finch by a score of 6 to 3. For the balance of the season Berwick appears to be in the best position by bringing out all their seasoned veterans, including Lorne Hutt and Andy Ouderkirk. Finch and Chesterville are both crippled, each losing their best centre man. Pneumonia has laid low Mel Leslie of the locals and Billy Ouderkirk of the Finch bunch. Neither team has a man to take centre ice of the same calibre.

Finch will be here tonight for a game followed on Saturday night by Berwick which will be the last home games but one of the schedule.

Aultsville Trims Locals 3 to 0

Monday night Ross Beckstead of Aultsville, brought to town a bunch of hockeyists that put the local team over the jumps to the tune of 3 to 0. The game was one of the best seen here this season, with lots of pep right from the first whistle. Neither team scored in the first period during which the visitors had a considerable margin on the play but lacked the man with any kind of a dangerous shot to net the puck after their forwards carried it down. In the second period Aultsville scored twice, adding the third in the last period, while holding Chesterville scoreless all the way.

Chesterville were considerably handicapped without their star forwards, Leslie and Loughridge, who were both on the sick list, the former having developed pneumonia and will likely be out of the game for the balance of the season Gladstone McLean the Finch Centre man was pressed into service but was not any more effective in breaking up Aultsville's stone wall defence than our own lads.

Birthday Party at Morewood

The Womans Missionary Society Auxiliary of the Presbyterian church, Morewood, held a most interesting gathering, in their Hall on Jan. 24th in the shape of a birthday party. A large number assembled and after a social time together sat down to a sumptuous tea. A beautiful birthday cake was the central ornament of the table while the birthdays were marked by each placing there a little bag containing as many—or more—cents as the person's age. After supper a programme of music and speeches from three visiting Ministers of the Presbytery was much enjoyed. The Auxiliary feels greatly encouraged by the generous response to their invitation and gratified that the affair was such a success.

SEED ORDERS

(Experimental Farms Note.)

The new seed catalogues will soon be received with their ever attractive descriptions of novelties and staple varieties but, while these catalogues are eagerly looked over, it frequently happens that the ordering of the seeds is left until spring. By that time, however, the seeds which we most desire may be exhausted as the best stocks of the best varieties are usually limited, hence the desirability of ordering soon to ensure getting what is wanted.

Some novelties are well worth the high price asked for the seed, while others are no better, if as good as the old reliable sorts It is best to let the Experimental Farms and Stations do most of the testing of these, and delay ordering until a report is received from one of these Stations as to their merits. Usually it pays well to order the most expensive strains of staple varieties. There is a great difference in strains as thorough selection and rogueing in the fields ensure much more satisfactory results than where this is not done. The cost of good seed is small compared with the value of the crop obtained.

There are many lists of best varieties of vegetable and flower seeds available through the Experimental Stations and Agricultural Colleges, and it will be found to be well worth while getting these before deciding on what to buy

When one has seed of a good strain of some particular variety of flower or vegetable it is desirable to sow the same seed another year after testing it for germination as sometimes it is not possible to get the same strain two years in succession.

Order early; Order the best seed of the best varieties;

Consult Experimental Farm Lists of best varieties

The Life of the Party

By MARTHA MACWILLIAMS.

©, 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"I'll give you a paper of pins if that's the way love begins.
If you will marry me—me! If you will marry me!"

Billy Train chanted through the kitchen door. Emma Lee looked up from the apple she was peeling as she answered him:

"I won't accept a paper of pins—that's not the way that love begins.
And I will not marry you—you. I will not marry you!"

"Goodness, how dee-termined. Sounds like you thought I was in earnest," Billy commented. "You ought to know if it was that way I'd have sung the last verse."

"M-m-m!" from Emma—nothing more. Billy ran on undaunted: "That would have fetched you sure as shootin'. See—hear rather—it goes real pretty—this way:

"I'll give you the key of my chest so you may have gold at your request.
If you will marry me—me—me!
If you will marry me!"

Silence even tenser from Emma. It provoked him to further chanting. "You know how it runs, but you're that obstinate you won't sing it. I know you're dying to hear it—so off we go:

"I will accept the keys of your chest, that I may have gold at your request.
And I will marry you—you! And I will marry you!"

Both Emma's hands went up—a round apple hard and juicy sailed straight toward her tormentor's face. He sidestepped neatly—the apple landed on the grass plot fully thirty feet beyond him. Eyeing them narrowly, he said mournfully: "Hard luck, but real. Unless I had found out your temper and how straight you can throw I might have persisted in my notion of marrying you. Now—well, it will take an order of court and a whole strong-arm posse to bring such a thing to pass."

"Indeed!" Emma tried hard to scowl but her eyes danced in spite of her. She knew Billy through and through, by heart. He had courted her on all possible and impossible occasions for at least a year. In fact ever since the day after he came to Hillways, his uncle's place next door to the cottage, which Lees had built four generations back, and which had escaped alien ownership. It had been modernized, of course, since the Lees each and several, born farmers, witha' good traders, were farm folk, held in high esteem by all the countryside. Billy had told Emma three hours after they met that a country girl with modern improvements had been his hopeless ideal until he found it realized in her.

"'Sposen we were to kiss and be friends!" Billy ventured advancing and bending over Emma. She sprang up, shaking a stained fist in his face, and saying: "'Sposen we don't 'Sposen again you clear out. Unless I get these villainous apples ready for the driers, however am I to find time for the picnic?"

"By letting me help—my middle name is apple-peeler," Billy answered with a heavy sigh. Two minutes later, equipped with knife, tray and one of black Matia's biggest cook aprons he was proving that he could peel—in any company. Emma watched him covertly, now and again dimpling roguishly aside. If only Billy knew! The joke almost overcame her. Picnics were nothing to her—picnics common or garden variety. This afternoon's would run on into a moonlight—and she had promised by letter, in black and white, to save all the one-steps for a partner she had never seen.

Further an amateur poet, part editor of a springhtly local daily published in a town near a hundred miles away. In Aunt Beth's town, in fact, and Aunt Beth knew him well. She had had the home paper follow her when she made her long visit to the cottage. Something whimsical in it had moved Emma to make a brief yet sparkling comment, which had been answered in kind. After that—the deluge. Once a week at least their letters had crossed. The result, at first due to accident, had proved piquant and provocative enough to have made the crossings later a matter of design. Oddly enough Emma had refused to ask questions regarding the unknown's personality. She liked his name—Palmer Brice—it looked well, printed or written, and was printed frequently. This she knew through clippings from other local dailies which had come in his letters, some of them humorously severe, others touched with the sincerest flattery of imitation. Emma was not in love with him—how could she be, she asked herself with Billy on the doorstep half the time. But in such matters choice was precious. Since Billy's advent there had been total eclipse of school-boy sweethearts and such. Billy was a born pre-emtor, he no sooner knew of anything ahead than he pre-empted Emma for the occasion.

"The last—praise be!" Emma said rising, as the shapely quarters plashed down in the big bread trap.

"Amen," Billy echoed devoutly. "Now wash your hands and play me a tune—two—three tunes, in fact. My sense of rhythm needs limbering up—I shall need all of it to make you proud of me tonight."

"Oh, I reckon you'll get through somehow. Cotillions and the Virginia reels aren't much but romping set to music," Emma said, pursing her lips deliberately.

Billy put up his hands. "Am I to be—rationed?" he asked in a stage whisper. "False one, who, who is my supplanter? Must be one — you wouldn't miss one single dance, even if you could."

"It's easier to show you than to tell you," Emma said over her shoulder, running away and leaving a badly puzzled wooer behind.

Enlightenment came ten minutes after the picnic had got its second wind, turning from a daylight function to a moonlighted one. There was a moon, without a cloud, yet rather an elegant superfluity, so well did the winking electric bulbs strung along tree trunks and big overhead branches illuminate the almost riotous revel.

"Some class, this moonlight," Billy commented, his eyes fast upon Emma one-stepping like a fairy with a newcomer, utterly strange—that is to say, at first glance. Recognition dawned faintly with the third. By about the tenth Billy had hard work to keep from hugging himself. Palmer Brice in the correctest of summer evening garb, with a red rose in his buttonhole, was surely a sight. Didn't look his forty-five years by much more than half—must be the wig which lay lovingly upon his bald dome of thought. Also and further, he danced—rather jerkily, to be sure—but doing it any way was sufficiently amazing. That he had burst a college professor chrysalis and become a perfect butterfly nobody could deny. "But—just you wait!" said Billy to himself. "Seems to me somebody said once, 'All things come to him who waits.'"

Billy waited gayly, picking out partners with vile disregard of their dance cards, nodding saucily to Emma over their shoulders as there were scant contacts on the floor, sang, making violent love to the few wall flowers as he whirled past them or now and again seizing some squealing small girl and literally carrying her in triumph through a number. He was the life of the crowd—everybody said so. Until midnight, with the second spread satisfying hunger and thirst, he did no more than smile at Emma. Palmer Brice stuck to her like a leech—they danced nothing but the one-steps—intermediates they sat out, even the basket cotillion. Yet the stranger sank gratefully into a seat aside from the supper throng, saying hushedly: "Pardon—but I'm a bit tired. Got up at daylight, did my day's work so as to get my evening's play—"

"Just like you, Prexy," Billy said, approaching them with a laden tray. "Conscience will be the death of you yet, unless you take me for a guardian. Don't break my heart by saying you've forgotten Bad Billy. How I did devil you when you were cramming me to save me from flunking."

"I—you—why, yes—I do remember," Prexy stuttered. Billy set down the tray with a flourish and somehow managed awkwardly to dislodge the wig. After one look Emma's eyes told him all he cared to know. So, until homing time he kept on being the life of the party.

An Irishman's Will

In the name of God amen! I, Timothy Doolan, of Barrydownderry, in the county of Clare, farmer. Being sick and weak in my legs, but of sound head and warm heart—glory to God—make this first and last will, and old and new testament. First, I give my sowl to God, when it plazes him to take it. Sure, no thanks to me, for I can't help it then; and my body to be buried in the ground at Barrydownderry chapel, where all my kith and kin that have gone before me, and those that live after, belonging to me, are buried. Pace to their ashes, and may the sod rest lightly over their bones. Bury me next my godfather, Felix O'Kaherty; betwixt and between him and my father and mother, who lie separated altogether at the other side of the chapel yard. I lave the bit of ground containing ten acres—rale old Irish acres to my eldest son Tim, after the death of his mother, if she lives to survive him. My daughter Mary, and husband, Pat O'Reagan, are to get the white sow, Teddy, the second boy might have got the pick of the poultry but he's gone. I bequeath to all mankins, fresh air of heaven, all the birds of the air they can shoot—I lave them all, the sun, the moon and stars. I lave Patrick Rafferty a pint of potheen. I can't finish, and may God be merciful to his sowl.

MR. PEASLEE HELPS THE DEACON'S RHEUMATISM

Caleb Peaslee was making a neighborly call on Deacon Hyne, who for three weeks had been immovable with rheumatism.

"Seems to me," the deacon complained, "you might drop in a might oftener, Kellup. Here I be, handfast to this rockin'-chair, an' the best you can do is to look in once a week mebbe to see whether I'm livin' or dead."

Mr. Peaslee stroked his nose reflectively and seemed to be counting. "Today's a Friday," he said, "and I was in yesterday and on Tuesday and on Monday; that's four times within a week with two days to come yet. I don't foller you quite when you say I only get in to see you once a week."

The deacon reddened guiltily. The time goes so slow," he pleaded in excuse. "There ain't a namable thing a man can find to do but just set here like a basswood image and wait for times to mend. It thorns me past bearin' sometimes, and I welcome anybody comin' in to take my mind off'n myself.

Mr. Peaslee pondered for several minutes. "I wonder, Hyne," he ventured at last, "if you'd be interested in hearin' something 'bout Uncle Giles Brewer. He was all but bedrid for years; never went out of the house after the fust shock took him."

The deacon moved his head impatiently. "You can tell me, I s'pose," he replied. "and I wont have any choice but to listen."

"Well," said Mr. Peaslee easily. "I'll start in, but if it pesters you too much tell me, and I'll quit Mebbe, though, you'll find something in it to rouse you up a speck."

Mebbe I will, grunted the deacon in a way that showed his firm belief to the contrary.

"Uncle Giles," Caleb said slowly, "was tied to the house for years, as I say, I used to go in to see him once in a while—not four times a week or anything like it; more likely once a month or once in six weeks. He never was a gre't hand at complainin' even at the fust but as time went on he got even more chipper, and he'd almost act as if he didn't find the days long 'nough to satisfy him. It was so plain to me that he didn't find time draggin' that I fin'ly got curious 'nough to inquire into it; I wanted to know where he got his liveliness from.

"So one day when he seemed more like an eager boy than he did like an old man tied to a chair for life I up and asked him plump and plain what made him so cheerful under a trouble that would fret me sick if I had to undergo it. And then he told me all about it.

"When I fust was taken with this shock, Kellup,' says he, 'I s'pose I was as near givin' up as a man can come and do it. For the fust two days I sot here and wondered if the night'd ever come and let me get shut of the daylight and of folks goin' and comin' spry and active same's I used to be; an' then when night come I'd lay awake and wish for daylight so I could get rid of myself thinkin'. Those two days I was hard to please.

"I s'pose I might have gone on that way day after day, gettin' wuss all the time, if it hadn't happened the third day I was sittin' here in this very winder, and I looked out and caught sight of a rooster we had here, a lame one I'd run over with the farm wagon in the spring and hurt his leg so he never got the use of it real good afterward. He could drag it along and make out to stiddy himself on it, but it wa'n't any good to scratch with nor to run on; jest about as near helpless as I was, the rooster was.

"Well, I fell to watchin' him, havin' nothin' better to do as I understood it then; mebbe I got to feelin' some sympathy for him, seein' I was as helpless as him or more so. In a few minutes I begun to get interested to see him. He couldn't scratch, but he would dig like fury with his bill, and when he turned out a worm no rooster with two good legs could grab a worm any quicker. He hopped round as cheerful as a sparrer on his one good leg, diggin' like all-p'sessed when he found good ground, and it tickled me to see him. And then when I'd got to where I was thinkin' almost nothin' about my troubles, bein' so took up with his actions, he did somethin' that drove the lesson home!

"He'd turned out an angleworm that looked to be a finger length long, and he went to callin' loud as he could, and in a minute a hen drove round the corner, and he stood back and let her have the worm, seemin' to be proud as a peacock over it too. Then he straightened up on his one good leg and crowed!

"'Kellup,' Uncle Giles said, 'I took my resolve right then and there. I thought to myself I wouldn't be outdone by no rooster; I had a thinkin' mind and two good hands left, and I'd use 'em. And I have,' he says. 'I can't plant and dig, but I can scour pans; and my wife tells me she ain't ever had so easy a time since we kept house. And I can help her a lot with the cookin'; everything that can be done settin' down I can do. And I can braid rags for rugs. I've learnt to do a dozen things I'd never have learn't if I'd keep my powers of walkin'', he says. And the way I do is this: I lay out a little mite more to do each day than'd be possible for a man that had all his limbs to use; and in that way a day's never long enough for me to git all done I want to. I ain't never hankered for night to come once since that day; and every night I sleep like a top, knowin' the next day'll be busy and full for me.

"As a matter of fact, Kellup,' he says, kind of 'shamed like, 'I aught not to be takin' so much time with you this minute; I've got to stone a peck of cherries for my wife, and, bein' extra work, it bites into my day some.' So I took the hint," concluded Mr. Peaslee, "and come away and left him."

The deacon was silent for some time. Then he spoke without raising his head. "Much obliged, Kellup," he said. "I wish you'd drop in again, say some day next week, and see how I'm gettin on. I've got a thought in my head, but I ain't got that rooster to watch."

EASLEE WOULD MAKE SURE FIRST

Deacon Hyne, peering with squinted eyes at the form outlined in the open barn door against the brilliant sunshine outside, spoke impatiently: "Who be ye anyway? And what do you want?"

"My name's Peaslee," Caleb Peaslee replied simply, "and I live on this farm next to yourn; mebbe you've heard tell of me one and nother?"

The deacon allowed himself to smile sourly. "Come in Kellup," he said. "Standin' there agin that sun as you was, I couldn't make out who you might be any more'n if you was some stranger; all I could see was a blob of black that might've been anybody in the world as fur's I could tell!" He paused and then laughed shortly. "For a minute," he went on, "I had a notion you was that wuthless Jake Otten, and I was ready to speak my mind to him; I've pastured his cattle the best part of the summer jest because he's too shiftless to fix his half of the fence, and I'm gettin' tired of it. I'm goin' to tell him so too!"

"That's a good idea, a splendid one," agreed Mr. Peaslee cordially. "He's the critter you want to tell it to, not me, you know. I heard once of a woman gettin' into a sort of uncomf'table mess 'count of tellin' something to the wrong pusson. The one I have in mind now is Mahala Winchope. Once in a hundred times you run across such a woman as she was—all smooth and pliable to strangers, but about as agreeable to live with as a wildcat.

"She had a mean, spiteful temper to begin with, even when she was a growin girl, and she married a sort of easy-goin', shiftless kind of feller, 'Lias Winchope, that never had a word to say back to her when she got in one of her tantrums, except mebbe he'd say, 'Sho, now, ma!' or somethin' like that only made her wuss'n ever!

"That was the way she was at home day in and day out, but away from home it was a diff'rent mess of fish complete! Times like that she was so smooth and supple, appearin' that most anybody hearin' and seein' her would find it hard to believe that she was so crabbed and cranky and spiteful as she really was at bottom.

"She was a gre't hand for churchgoin' too and cal'lated to pull her bigness anyway in all the doin's of the church. To see her takin' holt and workin' and smilin' at any church affair a stranger in town that didn't live handy to her—never would s'pose she was sech a Tartar when she got started, and some of 'em, the minister amongst 'em, held it to that she was kind of a victim of jealously and gossip, and that the neighbors were envious of her and made the worst out of what the minister called her 'outspoken mode of speech!' I s'pose I was one of 'em he had in mind," admitted Mr. Peaslee, "'count of something he heard me say one time, but that ain't neither here nor there.

"So, as I've been tellin' you, by keepin' her sharp temper strictly for use at home and her supple ways for wearin' outside and at church she managed to keep a pretty good name among the ones she wanted to. Things run along till one time in the summer when they was goin' to have some gre't doin's in the church,—somethin' that would last four or five days as I remember,— and there was goin' to be a lot of ministers from outside towns and even some from the city. These outside big bugs had got to be housed and fed some way whilst they was in town, and there a gre't rivalry amongst the churchwomen as to who should get the pick of 'em, and Mahala by workin' and soft soapin' the minister had got two of the most looked-up-to of 'em about the same as promised to her. And she put on some airs over it, lemme tell you!

"I s'pose she might have been figgerin' on gettin' some of the wormwood worked out of her system before they got there; anyway she was more'n commonly full of bad temper toward 'Lias whilst she was getting ready for 'em; more'n once we could hear her clear over to our house, talkin' to him as I'd be ashamed to speak to a dumb animal that couldn't understand me.

"Takin' so much time to jaw 'Lias might have made her a mite behind with her work, but anyway she had one or two little chores more to do the mornin' the folks arrived so she wa'n't at the church to meet 'em with the others; and that made her mad 'nough to bite 'Lias, even though he wa'n't a bit to blame.

"She'd already given him a terrible jawin' and fairly drove him out of the cellar with her hollerin,'—she was down there after some p'serves she was goin' to use on the table whilst the ministers was there, and all at once she saw a shadow fall across the floor, and when she whirled on it she could make out a form standin' in the bright sun right in the outside bulkhead door. She made no manner of doubt it was 'Lias come back like a good natured dog for another tongue-lashin', and she had it already for him!

"She started right in, talkin' over her shoulder part of the time, whilst she was sortin' out of the diff'rent jars she was cal'latin to use. And not gettin' any answer back same's common from 'Lias made her temper get wilder and wilder till she fairly outdone herself; she tore 'Lias to tatters with her tongue and then the neighbors, and then the minister for saddlin' two strangers on to her, though she'd done all she could to get him to! And at the end she started in on the strange ministers, givin' them the rough side of her tongue in every way she could think of; and she was jest gettin' screechin' mad over 'em when the shadow moved away, and she could hear strange voices above in the yard.

"By the time she could get her face smoothed down and get upstairs the voices had moved out of the yard, but she could see the minister and two well-lookin' strangers goin' out of the gate, and she tore after 'em and overhauled 'em within a rod or two—not that it done her any good, though!

"She didn't get a chance to say her say that time; the minister said what was said, but there wa'n't much even of that! 'Sister Winchope,' says he, 'for what seems to be more'n ample reasons I intend to find a roof and food for these gentlemen elsewhere than with you; and I think I have no need to tell you what those reasons are! Only one thing do I find to say to you at present, and that is during this meetin' I shall feel it my duty publicly to pray—for you, possibly by name, though I'm not sure about that. And my sincere advice to you is that you remain at home during the time of this quarterly meetin' and yourself pray with a contrite heart to be delivered—'

"He didn't get any further in that, for he found he was talkin' to somebody that wa'n't there any longer. But one part of his advice was heeded. Mahala didn't go to quarterly meetin' then nor afterwards and I never heard of her bein' much missed. A woman like that ain't any gre't help to a church nor a community either!"

"What I've got to say to Jake Otten," persisted Deacon Hyne, "I'm goin' to say to him and not to anybody else!"

"You come near sayin' to me," Caleb replied mildly.

A Shortage of 80,000 000 Pounds

The Tea Business, like nearly everything else, has been having its hard times since the war. Unfavorable tea growing weather, labor troubles on the plantations, and the unsettled, political atmosphere generally, have so seriously reduced this year's crop, that the world is now faced with a shortage of over 80,000,000 lbs., or more than two years supply for the whole Dominion of Canada. The inevitable result has been steadily increasing prices, until today, tea is bringing higher prices than ever before in the history of the industry. In Canada, the Salada Tea Company, our largest Tea Concern, has been forced by this condition to recently increase th price of all their blends, in order to maintain their standard of quality.

Mrs. W. A. Beckstead

On Sunday the 18th, inst, Mrs. W. A. Beckstead passed peacefully away in the 69th year of her age, at her home in the Beckstead settlement after a long and painful illness. Mrs. Beckstead, during her illness manifested great patience and fortitude, and as the end drew near was found entirely resigned to the great change from an earthly to an eternal state. Being a loyal and believing follower of Christ she experienced the fulfilment of the hope expressed in the Shepherd's Psalm: "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil, for thou art with me, Thy rod and Thy staff do comfort me." She felt as her appointed time drew near that to depart and be with Christ was far better than earthly life.

The late Mrs. Beckstead was a woman of great force of character, an excellent housekeeper, and homemaker, a devoted wife and tender and loving in motherhood. For many years she was an active and useful member of the Methodist church, being connected with that congregation. She represented a type of christian womanhood of which the country stands greatly in need, a womanhood that is loyal to the best things, self-respecting, diligent in service, intelligent to high ideals.

The funeral service, which took place on Tuesday, was conducted in the Elma church by the Rev. J. B. Howe, who preached an able and impressive sermon on Rom. 8; 37-39, Interment will be made in Maple Ridge cemetery. A number of relatives from a distance were in attendance, Mr. Merrick Durant, Winchester; Mrs Geo. Vogan and son Chas. Dalkeith; and the Rev. I. N. Beckstead, Lansdowne. Mrs. Beckstead leaves behind to mourn her loss her husband, W. A. Beckstead, a daughter, Mrs. Morley McPherson, and sons Mahlon, Simeon and Fred, besides a sister Mrs. Geo. Vogan, Dalkeith, and brothers Mr. Merrick Durant, Winchester; Mr. Alva Durant, Vankleek Hill, and Mr. Geo. Durant, Iroquois. Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express in this manner our heart-felt gratitude to the many friends and neighbors, for the many favors and kindnesses shown to us in our recent bereavement.

W. A Beckstead and Family.

Winter Storms No Check on Consolidated Schools

That severe Winter storms do not seriously interfere with the conveyance of pupils from outlying rural areas to consolidated schools is indicated by the following letter received at the Department of Education from Mr. George E. Pentland, M. A. Public School Inspector for Haliburton County:

"On the morning of Wednesday, Feb. 14th, the most violent storm of the year, and one of the most violent I have ever seen, was raging throughout Haliburton County. On this particular morning I was on my regular visit to the Consolidated School at Gooderham, and wishing to see what effect a very severe snowstorm would have on the attendance from the outlying parts of the consolidated area. I was early at the school to be on hand when the sleighs came. Precisely at a quarter to nine the sleigh from the wooded country to the west arrived. On this route there are ten children, some of whom come six miles, but not withstanding the terrific wind, the low temperature and the drifted roads, out hopped the whole ten, happy, laughing and joking at the storm, which had no terrors for them in a well heated canvas covered sleigh. A few minutes later the larger sleigh from the rough hill country away to the south arrived, and of twenty-seven children along this route, out filed twenty-six, all bright, cheery comfortable and ready for the day's work. Thus out of thirty-seven children who come in the two sleighs, thirty-six were at school at ten minutes to nine. Let no man ever tell me that consolidated schools will not work in this north country."

He Wasn't a Farmer

"Dear Sir: Having one-quarter acre of ground not good for anything but growing stones, I wish to make it into an attractive and profitable garden. Please send me one dozen strawberry seeds, one bee with hive complete, one dozen plum seeds, 10 square yards of grass, one concrete path, winding; six wallflowers, with six pieces of wall; one safety lawn mower, with patent apparatus for converting it into a safety razor. Send also enough baskets to hold the strawberry and plum crops, and side and back combs for the honey. The grass should be green—not the withered kind I see in so many gardens—and the seeds of a flavor unpopular with chickens."

Bitten by Horse

Mr. Charlie Jamieson, a well known resident of Renfrew, and prominent in curling circles and other activities, met with a very painful accident. He went to the stable to take out a horse belonging to Mr. Herb Smart, and when he went up beside the horse in the stall it suddenly turned on him and without a moment's notice bit him in the face, badly lacerating his upper lip and a part of his cheek. Medical assistance was at once summond and everything done to alleviate the great pain which Mr. Jamieson was suffering. It required about twelve stitches to close up the wounds.

Cancel the Stamps

Exchange—As it is now compulsory to place a two cent stamp on all receipts for ten dollars and over, business men and others are cautioned to cancel the stamps placed on such receipts. If the stamp on a receipt is not cancelled there is nothing to hinder the holder, should he wish to do so, to remove the stamp and use it for another purpose. Besides leaving the Government open to be beaten out of the tax, the issuer of a receipt who fails to cancel the stamp leaves himself open for a $100 fine, for should it happen that the stamp be dexteriously removed and the receipt be later discovered without the necessary tax decoration, what proof would one have when challenged, that he complied with the law? None whatever.

How To Cook a Husband

A good many husbands are utterly spoiled by mismanagement. Some women keep them constantly in hot water; others let them freeze by their carelessness and indifference Some keep them in a stew of irritating ways and words; others roast them. Some keep them in a pickle all their lives.

It cannot be supposed that any husband will be tender and good, managed in this way, but they are really delicious when properly treated.

In selecting your husband, you should not be guided by the silvery appearance, as in buying mackerel, nor by the golden tint as if you wanted salmon; be sure you select him yourself, as tastes differ. Do not go to the market for him as the best are always brought to your door. It is far better to have none unless you will patiently learn how to cook him.

A preserving kettle of the finest porcelain is best, but if you have nothing but an earthenware pipkin, it will do with care.

See that the linen you wrap him in is nicely washed and mended, with the required number of buttons and strings sewed on. Tie him in the kettle by a strong silk cord called comfort, as the one called duty is apt to be weak and they are apt to fly out of the kettle and be burned and crusty on the edges, since, like crabs and lobsters, you have to cook them alive. Make a clear, steady fire, out of love, cheerfulness and neatness. Sit him as near to this as seems to agree with him. If he sputters and sizzles, do not be anxious; some husbands do this until they are quite done. Add a little sugar in the form of what confectioners call kisses but not vinegar or pepper on any account. A little spice improves them, but it must be used with judgement. Do not stick any sharp instrument into him to see if he is becoming tender. Stir him gently; watch the while, lest he lie too flat and too close to the kettle and so become useless. You cannot fail to know when he is done. If thus treated, you will find him very digestible, agreeing nicely with you and the children, and he will keep as long as you want, unless you become careless and set him in too cool a place.—By a wild Rosebud.

The Home Paper

A few of the reasons why the home folks should support it:

1—Because, when you were born it was the home paper that introduced you to the world.

2 .When you grew up and graduated the home paper gave you another write-up.

3—When later on you found your life companion and were happily married the home paper gave you and yours a nice notice.

4—When sickness and misfortune invaded your home, the sad news was carried to your friends and neighbors by the home paper.

5—When you had been successful in a business venture or had been promoted, it was the home paper that heralded your ability.

6—If you sold out or moved to another location the home paper followed you with news of friends and neighbors.

7—When some unscrupulous person tried to injure your character, it was the home paper that came to your aid.

8—Because the home paper boosts your town and its institutions, its people, its schools, its churches and helps to promote good fellowship in the community.

9—Because the live merchants offer money-saving bargains and protect you from catch-penny mail order houses.

10—And last, when you are finally laid away, it is the home paper that prints consoling news of your demise and that extols your virtues so the hearts of those who mourn are made to feel thankful that the home paper stuck by you from cradle to grave.

Trying For Both

A very homely Irishman had lost his job and was having a hard time finding another when an acquaintance met him one day.

"Hello, Pat! How are ye?" he said.

"Mighty bad," was Pat's reply. "Sure 'tis starvation that's starin' me in the face."

"Is that so?" the other rejoined. "Sure it can't be very pleasant for aither av yez."

A Useless Offer

The pretty young visitor said to Harry the six-year-old pet of the home where she was calling. "Why so gloomy, Harold?"

"Dad's going to give me a lickin' when he gets home," said the youngster.

"Well what will you give me to take the whipping off your hands?" she asked archly.

"I ain't goin' to get it on the hands," replied Harold.

NORTH VALLEY

Presentation and Farewell

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Flegg on Friday night, February 9th the people of the North Valley Methodist church and Sabbath School gathered as a surprise, and spent the evening with the family, whom all regret very deeply that they are moving to Wales in the near future. While only being in our community one year they have won for themselves a host of friends, being of the very best type and above all, true Christian workers and they will be much missed. Although we cannot have them in our midst they can all feel that the Valley will always remember their kindness and willingness to ever be ready at all times to help with anything that went to build up the community. All feel that our loss is others' gain and all hope to have them come among us when they can where they will always be welcomed. Mr and Mrs. Flegg were presented with a solid oak, leather cushioned rocker, the presentation being made by O. A. Grandaw and Oren Dunbar, while the address was read by Geo. S. Brownell as follows:—

Dear Brother and Sister Flegg:—

We, the members of the North Valley church and Sabbath School have met here in your home tonight, to show the love and esteem in which we have for you. It is with much pleasure we remember your coming among us and helping with all the work of the church and Sabbath School and so ably filling the office as Superintendant. It is with regret to us that you are moving away from this neighborhood and in order to show the appreciation we have for you, we ask you to accept this small gift in the form of a chair, as a slight token. As you sit and rock may you think of the people of North Valley who will long cherish kindly remembrance of the past.

At the same gathering the Sabbath School teacher Miss Maggie Rupert, and scholars of the class of which J. Y. and Elmer were members presented them with each a Methodist hymn book. The presentation was made by Glen Hollister and the address read by Miss Dorothy Perchon which was as follows:—

Dear J. Y. and Elmer:—

We have assembled here this evening not only for having one more pleasant evening while you are yet in our midst, but also to show you the honor and respect you have won by yourselves during this one year with us. During this time we have appreciated your sterling qualities which have been brought to our notice at church, Sabbath School or else where. We feel that your characters have influenced us and we hope that in some small measure we may have exerted the same upon you. We know that our association together has been for the betterment of both and now that you are leaving our class, church and community, that which we will be deprived will be passed on to others and will be thetr gain. Now, at this closing period, as we are feeling very sorry that we may not meet in a like gathering again, we ask you to accept these small gifts, not because of their value but because it is a token of our appreciation and affection and takes with it all our best wishes for a bright and prosperous future, and the special wish that we may often meet again in the same manner as we now seperate and go our different way. Signed on behalf of your class and teacher.

Although taken by surprise both parties responded in a few brief words of thanks. The evening was spent in games and music after which lunch was served.

Miss Lula Hart of Wales, is spending a few days with friends of this place.

Why He Was Willing

Each of the Jurymen appearing before a judge explained that it would mean disaster to him to serve at that term of court—all but a little fellow at the end of the line, a hunter, who had lived in a cabin on the creek all his life.

"You have no excuse to offer?" asked the surprised judge.

"No, sir."

"Haven't you got a sick mother needing your attention?"

"No, sir; I am an orphan."

"What about your crop?"

"Don't raise anything.

"You think you can spare the time to serve on a jury two weeks?"

"I sure can, judge."

The judge meditated for a moment. Then his curiosity got the better of him.

"You are the only man who has got the time to serve your country as a juryman," he said. "Would you mind telling me how it happens?"

"Sure not," the little man replied promptly. "I heard you was goin' to try Bill Musser this term, He shot a dog o' mine once."

The Teacher

Parent—Willie, I'm shocked to hear you say such naughty words. Do you learn them at school?"

Willie—Learn 'em at school! Why, it's me as teaches the other boys.

"Said Mr. Gallager to Mr. Shean", Williams' Camphorated Mustard Cream will loosen up that cold in your chest and help your stiff neck. Rub it on, and rub it in. Your druggist has it 35c a jar.

Catarrhal Deafness

is greatly relieved by constitutional treatment. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced, your hearing may be destroyed forever. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system, thus reducing the inflamation and assisting Nature in restoring normal conditions.
