Luther Wells Passes at Home, Following Lengthy Illness

Many friends in Morrisburg and throughout Eastern Ontario learned with regret of the sudden death of Luther Dunn Wells, a former resident of this village, which occurred at his home at Ingleside, Ontario on Sunday morning. Mr. Wells had been ill for several years, but his death came unexpectedly.

Born at Gilman Corner in Quebec's Eastern Townships, he was a son of the late Lee R. Wells and his wife, the former Ella Graves, of that place. As a young man he learned the art of stone-cutting and lettering. After pursuing this trade at several centres in Quebec and in Cornwall, he came to Mirrisburg as an employee of the late C.C. Stubbs. He later purchased the business, which he conducted until the coming of the St. Lawrence Seaway when he moved to Ingleside, operating under the name of L.D. Wells and Sons. A meticulous workman, he insisted on quality in all his work and this quality earned for him an enviable reputation throughout the Eastern Townships, and later throughout all of eastern Ontario. Mr. Wells had recently sold his monument business to Mr. Ross McConnell of Winchester.

An ardent hunter and fisherman, he maintained a camp in northern Ontario, while his health permitted, and was invariably successful in the hunt. An amateur entertainer, he also enjoyed playing the banjo at dances and private parties, and had made a host of friends who will genuinely regret his death.

Surviving besides his wife, the former Ruth Lee, are two sons, Lee and Larry and two daughters. Lorraine and Gail. Two brothers, Ralph and Vernon and six grandchildren.

Funeral service was held on Tuesday afternoon at the McArthur Brothers and MacNeil Funeral Home, 428 Second Street East, Cornwall, with services conducted by Rev. Reginald McDonald, a family friend. Interment was in St. Lawrence Valley Union Cemetery, directly opposite his home.

On Saturday last, August 15th, OPP divers at Morrisburg recovered the body of 16 year old Bernard St. Pierre of R.R. 2, Chesterville, a few hours after he drowned in the St. Lawrence River near the Morrisburg dock. It was the second drowning of the summer at this location.

Bernard was the youngest son of Leo Paul St. Pierre and his wife, the former Cecile Gagnon. Besides his parents, he is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Ronald Mondoux, (Yvonne), a teacher at St. Mary's School here; Mrs. Paul Cardinal, (Suzanne) of Vanier City; and two brothers. Robert and Roger, both of Winchester.

The body rested at the Marionville Parish Hall Funeral Home and the funeral was held on Tuesday August 18th at 10:00 a.m. in Ste. Therese Church there.

Father Snyder sang the funeral mass and interment was in the parish cemetery.

Mets Face Elimination From Scene Tonight

The Morrisburg Mets will have their backs to the wall here on Friday night when they meet the Ottawa Vanier Vikings in the fourth game of their playoff series. While the Mets were able to beath the Vikings both at home and away during the regular schedule, they have not so far come even close to a win in this post-season series. A contributing factor, of course, has been the loss of several of their regular players, some with injuries while others have gone on harvest jobs in Western Ontario.

To fill these vacancies, the Mets have called up several players of juvenile age and without exception these youngsters have turned in a good game whenever called upon and have not looked out of place with their elders.

Last Friday night here the Mets lost by a 15-7 count, and on Wednesday night at the Vanier Arena, the Mets again went down 18-7.

In each of the playoff games to date, Delbert "Doc" Jones has risen to great heights of goaltending expertise, confounding some of his attackers with seemingly miraculous saves.

In Wednesday night's game at Vanier City, Hughie Gillard and Brian McNairn each counted a hat trick for the Mets, with Jim Notman getting the other counter.

For the Vikings, it was John Cundell with five, Greg McAlear, Brian Copping and Jerry Desjardins with three each; Marcel Larocque with a pair, and Vic Budge and Rob Beamish with singles.

For once, the Mets took fewer penalties than their opponents, visiting the sin-bin only 16 times as against 21 penalties for the home team.

The Mets will be desperate for a win on Friday, being in the unenviable position of having to win or fold up for the season. Despite the rather sorry showing in the playoff series, the local team continues to be the best drawing team in the league.

Caughnawaga Braves refused to meet the St. Regis Indian team in the playoffs, and as a result will likely be suspended from lacrosse next year.

Free Milk Suppied For Young Pupils

The Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry County Board of Education wrestled for nearly an hour Monday with the problem of whether to supply milk to all elementary school children in the tri-county area.

A survey made in January among elementary schools indicated 28 pprincipals in favour of milk distribution, 13 against and three indifferent.

The Board discussed four possibilities: to discontinue supplying milk altogether; to supply milk to kindergarten, Grade 1 and 2 pupils; to make milk available to all pupils who wish to purchase it; to supply free milk to all elementary school students.

Estimated cost of the fourth option is $160,000 per year.

On a split vote, requiring acting chairman Sam McLeod to vote, the Board decided to supply free milk to students in kindergarten, and Grades 1 and 2. Milk would also be available to other students at a charge.

A committee of citizens of Roxborough Township was given the use of the former Avonmore Public School Building as a temporary medical clinic.

This citizens' group has been successful in its efforts to obtain the services of a doctor for the area, and the board of education agreed to make a classroom and the former school office as a temporary clinic at no cost to the board, and with no rental charge.

The board's solicitor will draw up the agreement. Plant superintendent Thomas Cruickshank was authorized to make an offer of sale of the property to the township.

Cleaning Up The Countryside

During a three-months trial period, Ontario glass companies are paying half a cent each for the return of of no-deposit soft drink bottles. They will use the glass in manufacturing new bottles for their customers.

The companies' offer is part of an all-out campaign to halt the growing menace of broken glass along roadways, in parks and on beaches. The problem isn't new, or confined to non-returnable containers, of course. People have been discarding bottles along country roads and fields for many years.

Gordon Hill, president of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, says discarded and broken bottles often cause injury to farmers or their animals. They also cost the farmer plenty in time spent clearing them from fields, or repairing tires and machinery cut or broken by them. Mr. Hill says the OFA will step up its campaign against no-deposit glass containers, and urge the provincial government to ban them entirely.

The broken bottle is more than a hazard for today and tomorrow for children walking barefoot, swimmers, motorists and farmers. The discarded bottle has a long-lasting effect on the environment as glass does not decompose as so many other man-made substances do in time.

YOU CAN HELP in the campaign against the pollution of our environment by broken glass. Buy soft drinks in returnable bottles only; make the manufacturers aware that you do not want throwaway bottles that encourage people to litter.

Boozer-Cruisers Cause the Most Trouble on the Road

The social drinker, says Ed Belitsk, editor of Canadian Automotive Trade, isn't the one who causes problems on the highways. "It's the hard-core, dedicated drunk", he says. CAT recently reported a study of 1,000 drunken driving convictions, which showed that 25 per cent had a previous criminal record, 37.5 per cent had a record of previous arrests for public drunkenness, and 25 per cent were driving while their licence was suspended or who didn't even have a licence.

Remember Me

I'm the fellow who goes into a restaurant, sits down and patiently waits while the waitresses finish their visiting before taking my order.

I'm the fellow who goes into a department store and stands very quietly while the clerks finish their little chit-chat.

I'm the fellow who drives into a service station and never blows his horn, but lets the attendant take his time.

You might say I'm a good guy, but do you know who else I am?

I'm the fellow who never comes back.

It amuses me to see business spending so much money every year to get me back . . . when I was there in the first place.

And all they needed to do was to give me some service, and to extend just a little courtesy.

HISTORY COMES ALIVE SUNDAY AT FORT WELLINGTON

Old Fort Wellington in Prescott will come alive on Sunday, August 23, with British Red Coats, highland warriors, French marines and ancient artillery crews when the Prescott Chamber of Commerce stages its annual historic military pageant.

Spectators will be able to see 300 years of military history in this country represented at the pageant, covering French, British and Canadian periods.

Senior regiment on parade will be Les Compagnies Franche de la Marine, an exact recreation of the first soldiers from France to serve on this continent.

The Franche Marine were formed in 1622 by Cardinal Richileau and accompanied the first settlers to this part of the world as garrison troops. They served at settlements, forts and outposts along the St. Lawrence and Great Lakes waterways prior to the British conquest of North America.

Their drill, battle tactics and inspection ceremonies are identical to those performed by the regiment in 1760.

Dressed in authentic, colorful uniforms of the period, the "soldats" are armed with period muskets and artillery and bring realism to their show when they fire blanks from these weapons.

Another famous regiment appearing on the show are the Fraser's Highlanders, known as the "Fighting 78th". They were the largest British regiment in North America in the 1700's and played an important role in the Battle of the Plains of Abraham.

The Fraser's will be there with their pipes and drums and dancers to demonstrate drill, battle tactics and music of 1763, the period to which they have been recreated.

Both regiments are from Montreal and serve as garrison troops during the summer months at the fort on St. Helen's Island on the Expo site.

Other units taking part in the pageant will be the Fort York Guard from Toronto, the garrison troops of York of the 1812 period, and the famous Fort Henry Guard from Kingston.

Adding to the afternoon entertainment will be highland bands and the girls marching band from the local high school.

Hon. John Turner, federal minister of justice, will officially open the afternoon part of the program by firing one of the cannons from Fort Wellington.

The demonstrations of drill and battle tactics will be held from 2 until 4 p.m. on the large six-acre fort field.

The second part of the program starts at 4:30 inside the ramparts of Fort Wellington with demonstrations of highland dancing and piping on the spacious lawns of the old British fort.

This will be followed by a two-hour band concert starting at 5:30 featuring the Governor General's Foot Guards. During the dancing and concert a chicken barbecue will be served by the Chamber of Commerce.

Probably the most impressive part of the day's program will be the retreat ceremony which starts at 7:30 with all units participating. This will be the traditional ceremony for the closing of a fort for the night during which the flag is lowered, an evening hymn is played, cannons and muskets are tested, and the colors marched off.

No admission is charged for any of the day's events. The pageant is sponsored by the Prescott Chamber of Commerce to promote Fort Wellington, a national historic site, and to give Canadian and American visitors an opportunity to see the color and pageantry that is now part of Canada's history.

Persons planning to attend the pageant and evening ceremonies are advised to bring lawn chairs or blankets. There is plenty of space available at the Fort Wellington to watch the shows, but seating is limited.

Parking space for several thousand cars is available right at the site, and there is no charge for parking.

A Grave In The Corral

Anybody who owns animals of any kind knows how happy they can make you, and occasionally how sad. We felt both emotions over one engaging little character inside a very short period of time — nine days — this summer.

The prime happiness for me came a couple of days after I'd been away two weeks on a long trip. While away I often wondered about a mare we have which was due to foal in mid-August.

The mare is four years old and belongs to our university-age daughter, who is working at Lake Louise for the summer to make money to help her go back to school in the fall. That means we were in charge.

There was the further factor that we were to own the foal. Anyway, all the time I was away I was hoping that the foal wouldn't be born until I got back.

I flew in on a Sunday night. My wife met me at the airport and we drove out to the farm. Next morning, first thing, I went down and had a look at the mare and thought by the size of her that the foaling was still three weeks away. That shows how much I know. The next morning when I went down I got the surprise of my life.

At first I couldn't see the horses at all. There had been a hard rain about 6 a.m. so I went over to a little shed I'd just put a new roof on, and checked inside to make sure it was keeping out the water. It was. Then I walked over toward a little poplar bluff where there is a spring-fed pool.

First I saw the hindquarters of the mare, as she drank at the spring. Then out from behind her on long, straight legs, tottered the prettiest little filly foal I'd ever seen!

She was chestnut, the color of her quarter-horse sire, and she had a couple of white feet and a white star on her forehead.

I had some tools in my hand. I just dropped them where I stood and ran up the hill to the house a couple of hundred yards away, to get my wife and our smaller daughter.

Then we all went back down and looked at her closer. She was clean and dry and sound. The mare had managed the birth perfectly on a flat place on a hillside that I found a half-hour later.

That day was spent getting the mare and foal out of that field into a corral where we'd been saving good grass for just this event. From then on, a few hours of every day centred around the corral, with the little filly getting stronger and tamer.

She would come up and tentatively sniff my fingers, and taste them, and then she'd toss her head and canter away, nickering and having a great time.

On the first Sunday she was alive a lot of our friends dropped in to see her. We set up chairs under a shade tree near the corral and sat idly all afternoon, watching her and having a cool drink or two.

In my mind I could see her and our younger daughter, eight, growing up together — one learning to ride and the other learning to be ridden. We called her Star.

Then on the day that she was nine days old, a beautiful evening with no clouds in the sky and the soft country silence all around, a friend of mine dropped by the corral — and the little filly was down, panting but not moving otherwise.

He called me immediately. Within minutes the vet was on his way, too. We'd had her inoculated a few hours after birth, so the illnesses that sometimes hit foals had been countered as well as any man can do. When we got the frantic mare tied up and the vet had a good look, he just shook his head.

The little filly's neck was broken and from marks around and above her right eye, where the bone also was broken, the only thing he could assume, he said, was that the mare had kicked her.

Nothing else — no fall while running or jumping — could possibly explain the fractured skull and the broken neck.

It was a sad evening, a sad burial party by the light of a flashlight there in the corral. So many hopes had been nurtured in those nine fine days that were to be the only ones that frolicking little Star would ever know.

Demands of the Young Affect the Old . . .

FEMINISM

by Alison Goddard

Even though the advertisement assures women they have "come a long way," the feminists insist their sex is just taking its first baby steps toward equality.

So — on August 26 they plan a day of protest. That date is special because it marks the 50th anniversary of the ratification of the Constitutional amendment guaranteeing women the right to vote. Earlier feminists, the suffragettes, fought for this.

Their modern successors range from the militant groups (WITCH, SCUM and others) to the more conservative NOW, organized originally by author-Mrs. Betty Friedan. She became high priestess of the movement with the publication in 1963 of her best-seller, "The Feminine Mystique," an indictment of the traditional image of the American housewife.

Unfortunately, the image of the feminist cause has been distorted somewhat by the anti-family, anti-men and anti-bra adherents. But the movement is picking up both momentum and converts daily among middle-class, middle-aged suburban housewives.

AIMS

Essentially, the feminists seek social, political, economic and domestic equality. They hope to achieve this with the repeal of abortion laws, establishment of day - care centers for women who choose to combine marriage and a career (almost 11-million women with children under 18 are working mothers), a sharing of parental and domestic duties, and an end to laws that discriminate against women. These range from "protective" laws in many states that effectively exclude women from better jobs and higher pay to laws that deny women independent credit or exclude them from obtaining a mortgage to purchase a house. In some states husbands can sue for divorce if the wife fails to keep the house clean; in one state a woman's clothes legally belong to her husband.

CHANGING ROLES

Both the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which prohibits discrimination in employment on the basis of sex, and the civil rights protest movement helped boom the feminist cause. Also important are the nearly 30-million women now in the labor market, the majority in relatively low-paying jobs.

American women represent 51 per cent of the population. By the year 2000, according to experts, they will be in an even greater percentage, particularly among senior citizens. In their grandmothers' generation, the averaging woman's life ended with her reproductive capacity. But now women live well beyond the menopause, with a life expectancy of over 74 years.

Here's To Lobster Land

CRAPAUD, P.E.I. — There's nothing quite so fragrant as the opening of lobster season. You can nose out any prosperious lobster port from more than a mile away when the fishermen of the Island's south shore are readying their traps.

The Ward family made it a vacation project to find out why, and I must say our discovery somewhat dampened Jane's enthusiasm for lobster. We chose the nearby port of Victoria for our research.

About a week before the season opens, huge pungent crates began arriving on the dock. They were crowded in among the lobster-pot piles of Irish moss, bits of rope, tourists, and yarning fishermen, and they made quite a contribution to the old factory conglomeration.

Bait for the lobsters, that's what was in those crates. And the bait was codfish heads that had commenced to rot. The lobster hunter spears rotting cod-head and attaches it firmly inside each trap. Lobsters find this tidbit irresistible, which doesn't say much for their taste. But when you consider the end result in Newburg, it makes the lobster a marvel of conversion.

By Friday the wharf at Victoria was chock-a-block with lobster pots, all baited and ready for Monday, when the season on the south shore opened.

Ansel, Hedley, George and the others loaded up their boats Friday night, then headed out to place their traps first thing Saturday. All week the harbor — and any other harbor on the south shore — had been churned up continually by cutters from the fisheries department. The cutters were making sure none of the lobstermen took an illegal head start on the season.

When the first catch comes in, it does startling things to the local price of lobster. Going price for live lobster at the shack at the end of the wharf has been $2.20 a pound ever since we arrived. I'm told it will drop to about $1.75 when the local crop comes in. The lobster we've been getting up to now is imported from Nova Scotia.

The fishermen sell lobster for 95 cents a pound to retail outlets — $1 a pound to the tourist who happens to be there when a boat load comes in. During a good season a man can make $5,000 or $6,000 for the year, but the work is back-breaking.

The boats go out at 6 a.m. each day and return around 5 p.m. Most men have 200 or so traps to work, each one buoyed and anchored in 60 feet of water or more.

Try hauling up 200 stone-weighted lobster traps whilst hanging over the side of a boat. I'll bet a chiropractor could make a bundle out here, that is if anyone thought to tell these tough-working men they had a problem.

The traps are usually loaded with starfish, crabs, and the odd cod, and if the fisherman's lucky a lobster or two. Each trap has to be emptied, perhaps repaired on the spot, then re-baited. The task isn't too unpleasant on a sunny summer afternoon, but try it in spring or fall when the wind whistles down the Northumberland Straits.

A man has time to sit and yarn on the dock, or to take a run at trout in the local streams when he has a mind. Land away from the seashore current sells for about $100 an acre, if you know the right place to go. They're complaining about inflation because it costs three times that much on a beach.

No wonder the Americans are moving in and buying at a frightening rate, but who can blame the Islanders for selling when money is so hard to come by here.

The other day a friend and I drove to the east end of the Island and played golf at Burdenell, one of the most beautiful courses I've ever seen. Memberships go for $50 a year, $90 for a husband and wife.

We were joined after nine holes by a nice young chap who hammered his way around the course in birdies and pars whilst we chased lost balls.

He'd introduced himself as Doug Herring, and explained that he got to play about four times a week. Later, while we lolled over a beer, he told us he was a fisherman.

Enviromental Conference to be Held At Ontario's Science Centre, Toronto

Eight U.S. states and two Canadian provinces will join Ontario in a Great Lakes Environmental Conference to be held here September 9-10 dealing with air and water pollution in the most heavily industrialized and populated region of North America.

All eight governors of the states bordering the Great Lakes — Michigan, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, and Minnesota — have said they will either attend the conference or send senior representatives.

Quebec and Manitoba will also send representatives as will the Canadian and United States federal governments.

Ontario Prime Minister John Robarts called the conference to discuss "common environmental problems" faced by state and provincial jurisdictions surrounding the Great Lakes.

"The public in both our countries is showing an increasing awareness of the problem and is expecting an unprecedented degree of co-ordination of day-to-day activities by our jurisdictions," he said in a letter to governors and premiers.

The two-day conference will be held at the Ontario Science Centre in Toronto.

First day of the conference, on September 9, will be a closed technical session in which senior officials involved in environmental management in each jurisdiction will meet to discuss current problems, existing channels for the exchange of information, and developing new methods of co-operation.

This closed technical session will produce the agenda for the following day at which time the leaders of all governments involved, or their personal representatives, will meet in public to discuss and indicate their support for a coordinated program of environmental management of the Great Lakes basin.

"At this session", said Mr. Robarts in his letter to governors and premiers, "we might carry forward policy matters discussed by officials the previous day and emphasize the need for and means of achieving close co-operation to deal with the preservation of the environment we share in the Great Lakes basin."

The Great Lakes basin has a population of about 32,000,000; one of every three Canadians and one of every eight Americans live there. The population is expected to reach 57,000,000 in the year 2000.

Mr. Robarts said in his letter that the time allotted governments to find solutions to pollution problems shorter with each succeeding year.

"For example, in recent weeks great concern has been expressed over the effect of phosphates in the lower Great Lakes and the continued use of this substance in detergents has been called into question.

"More recently, the discovery of mercury pollution has caused two states and our own province to ban fishing in some sections of the Great Lakes system."

He said the response of the eight U.S. governors to the conference has been enthusiastic and each has replied that he will attend personally or send senior officials to participate.

The Honourable George Kerr, minister of energy and resources management for Ontario and chairman for the closed technical session says the conference "will be the beginning of international co-operation aimed at re-establishing healthy natural living and recreational conditions in the heavily industrialized Great Lakes region."

Among topics to be discussed are the inter-jurisdictional aspects of air and water pollution, the exchange of information and liaison between jurisdictions and the recent International Joint Commission report on the pollution of Lake Erie, Lake Ontario, and the international section of the St. Lawrence River, and other pollution problems associated with thes waters.

GOVERNOR GENERAL TO OPEN NEW HEADQUARTERS FOR BLIND OF AREA

Excitement is running high at Letson Hall these days. The residents and staff of Ottawa's CNIB Centre are getting ready to meet the Governor General. His Excellency the Right Honorable Roland Michener is coming to officially open the new residence and service Centre for the blind at 320 McLeod Street.

"It's exciting enough moving into new quarters," said one old-time resident, "but to have the Governor General come to see us — that's really something to tell my family!"

Letson Hall, a modern, well-appointed building, replaces the antiquated facilities of the Ottawa Home and Welfare Centre for the Blind. It was named for one of Ottawa's outstanding citizens, Major General H.F.G. Letson, CB, CBE

The new building offers blind people of Ottawa and Eastern Ontario area expanded rehabilitation services — adjustment training courses for the newly blind, more residence care for senior citizens; an enlarged occupational shop to provide work for more blind persons and a large auditorium to cater to the active recreation program.

Letson Hall will be officially opened on Thursday, August 27th, at 3:30 p.m., after which the Governor General and Mrs. Michener will tour the new residence. Also taking part in the official ceremony will be Major General and Mrs. Letson, R.G. Devine, Chairman, Ottawa-Eastern Ontario Building Funds Committee; A.N. Magill, Managing Director, CNIB and B.H. Wilson, Chairman, CNIB Ottawa Carleton Board.

Doris Clark

Where's the finish line?

DEAR DORIS — The boy in question is 21. His mother deserted him and his father and he has practically brought himself up.

He was a school dropout, has held odd jobs. He gambled on the horse races, and when out of money he would go get some from his father and his grandmother.

For his age he is very immature; his aunt and grandmother believe him to be mentally retarded. Surely somewhere there is a place for him — even if it is a few years late to pick up the loose ends.

Thank you for your good advice in the column. It has helped me more than once in raising my own six, which I had to do on my own.

Widow

DEAR WIDOW — More than a few years late! Early neglect has left lasting scars.

Yet he can use help even now. A family counsellor could help you find out, first of all, whether your young friend is retarded or just immature. If he has a potential, he can be steered into training he can use. Most of all he needs encouragement and love from his father — not the kind of encouragement which gives him money for gambling, but the kind which insists upon self-support, perhaps night classes to complete his education, and help in making and keeping friends.

DEAR DORIS — I need your advice for my own peace of mind if nothing else. If the groom, the best man and ushers and the bride's father are wearing tuxedoes, what does the groom's father wear?

The bride's mother is just wearing a coat-dress affair, although the bridesmaids and the bride are all wearing long dresses.

My son says his father just wears a dark suit and I wear a coat-dress because we are not official wedding party. Is this correct?

— I like my daughter-in-law to be and don't want to hurt her feelings in any way.

Mother Of The Groom

DEAR MOTHER — Neither bride's nor groom's parents are members of the bridal party, but the fathers dress as the men in the bridal party do.

For the mothers, a coat-dress outfit does not sound like sufficiently formal attire, unless it is made of lace or taffeta or some other dressy material. No need for both mothers to dress alike. You might choose a short-length afternoon gown in a pale shade, in a silk.

DEAR DORIS — To settle an argument, should we not give a gift to our nephew who is graduating this fall from college? My wife thinks we have to give his brothers something if we do.

I say the brothers haven't earned it. Neither of them even finished high school, but fooled away their time and even got into trouble with the police.

Stubborn

DEAR STUBBORN — The gift is a pat on the back, well earned. Don't we all prize some recognition when we have put work and thought into doing something hard?

This is not a case of small children all getting a present on the occasion of a visit, or birthday. The others won't be more than enough to think they should have the reward of work [illegible] didn't do.

If they need encouragement and someone to take an interest, that's something else again.

Confidential to Verdict, Please — Is it better to win an argument or to get the result you want in the end? There is no point in insisting on making the other fellow feel like a nickel.

Believe it or not, he will admire you more if you go to some pains to save his dignity than if you prove to be one of those hateful people who are always right about everything.

SUMMER GUESTS

Dear Miss Brookfield:

A few years ago we finally saved enough to buy a summer bungalow. Now we have a problem. What does a hostess do about guests who are invited for "a day at the beach" and arrive with an overnight bag? Although I've tried to resolve this problem, it keeps cropping up again and again. When I asked a friend, invited for the day, if she was planning to "stay over," she answered: "I didn't think you expected me to drive back at night." The trip is less than two hours. If I try to tell friends I can't accommodate them overnight, they just reply: "Oh, we'll sleep on the porch." We bought the house for relaxation but I find myself working twice as hard as I do here in the city. J.L.

Dear J.L.:

If an explicit invitation for the day goes unheeded, don't invite these friends back again, either this year or next. About the only solution for these guests who stay through breakfast is to have an unlisted telephone. (And don't call them.)

INSOMNIA PROBLEM

Dear Miss Brookfield:

Before marriage I was a dancer and exercised frequently. I used to get so tired that I slept well at night. Now, at 50, I have insomnia. I wake up feeling unbearably hot and find I cannot fall asleep again. Has this anything to do with menopause? Or is insomnia related to age?

Dear S.D.:

Insomnia is a common complaint among menopausal women. Either they find it difficult to fall asleep or they wake up during the night and cannot resume sleep. But insomnia is a common complaint among people of all ages. The causes can be many, and sometimes complex.

In some women, however, insomnia does seem to be related to the time of the change, according to medical authorities. In these women, the hot flashes, which result from a hormonal imbalance, may be the cause of insomnia. The hormonial insufficiency can be corrected by treatment that physicians call 'estrogen replacement therapy.' Our best advice is to quote from "A Doctor Discusses Menopause" by Dr. G. Lombard Kelly: "If a woman is quite sure that her sleeplessness is being caused by her menopause . . . she should see her physician, who will treat the cause of the trouble."

FALSE EYELASHES

Dear Miss Brookfield:

I finally bought a pair of false eyelashes and I think they look great. My husband refused to go out with me the first time I wore them' I had to remove them because he insisted they looked too artificial. Please advise him through the column that many women wear them. Maybe that will convince him. J.R.

Dear J.R.:

Hide this newpaper and buy your self a pair of inexpensive eyelashes that are neither too long nor too thick but look natural. Wear them some night. If your husband can't detect the difference you may hve a selling point. If he does, just con sole yourself with the thought that you are married to a very observant man or husband who really not ices what you look like.

The good 'Red'

Fifteen years ago, a prematurely grey second baseman arrived in Montreal.

His job was to fill the shoes of Charlie Neal, one of the best second baseman in the International Baseball League. Neal was with the Brooklyn Dodgers, on his way to a number of World Series appearances.

George (Sparky) Anderson hardly made the fans forget Neal, but in his own way, probably contributed more to the success of the Montreal Royals. His leadership on the field was the main reason for Montreal's surprising pennant win in 1959.

Sparky did the same job for Toronto after Jack Kent Cooke shelled out $25,000 to the Philadelphia Phillies at the start of the 1960 season. Leafs not only won the pennant, but advanced to the Little World Series, losing out to Louisville in the final.

Of course, Anderson didn't pick up most of the credit. Pitchers like Al Cicotte and Steve Ridzick, plus first baseman Rocky Nelson, were the stars that year.

Anderson stayed around Toronto until, at the tender age of 30, he was appointed manager.

Unlike the usual freshman manager who talks of "playing them one at a time" or "it's too early to assess the situation," Anderson announced to the Toronto press: "We're going to win the pennant. If we don't, I'm going to get myself a job."

Unfortunately for Sparky, the community-owned Leafs read his statements and took him at face value. When Leafs skidded to fifth that year, Anderson was given a one-way ticket home.

Such has been the fate of Anderson — overlooked as a player and ignored as a manager.

He is the first to admit that he wasn't the greatest hitter in the world. In fact, one of his first acts as a manager in 1964 was to outline the Anderson philosophy on baseball. "A guy who can't hit .250 shouldn't be in baseball. There is no room for such a player on my team."

The press listened patiently, then pointed out that Sparky's 1962 average was a sparkling .227 and in 1963 it dropped to .218.

"That's why I'm managing," he shot back.

After his Toronto departure, Anderson was given a minor league post with the Cincinnati Reds. The natives in Florida didn't know Anderson's background and accepted him for what he was — a first-class baseball man.

The road to the top was swift and last October, the Redlegs made him manager, hours after firing Dave Bristol.

Few people in baseball relished the thought of managing Cincinatti. Year after year the Reds were supposed to be the team to beat. They had power, some pitching, the greatest catcher in baseball history and, on paper, the best team in baseball.

Yet the team never produced. Anderson was given the job and told in no uncertain terms that he must win the Western Division of the National League or look for a job.

It was 1964 all over again except this time, it was the big leagues. Instead of a $15,000 salary, he was given about $25,000 with bonus clauses for a World Series.

Heading into August, the Cincinnati Reds were running away with the Western Division, 10 full games ahead of Los Angeles.

Is Sparky Anderson being considered for the title of manager of the year?

Listen to what one Redleg told the press: "Managing our team is like being chairman of the board of General Motors. It runs itself." Of course, if things go wrong the same player will be blaming the same manager for losing.

That's the price a manager pays and Sparky Anderson seems to pay more than his share. Let's hope the Cincinnati management, unlike the Toronto owners, recognize his abilities.

DEPARTMENT OF LANDS AND FORESTS

Weekly Report

Larose Forest is located approximately 30 miles east and slightly south of Ottawa in the United Counties of Prescott and Russell. It covers approximately 40 square miles and consists of one large, irregular-shaped tract together with many smaller satellite parcels.

The bulk of the forest lies just to the southwest of Bourget, an area that prior to 1928 was referred to as the "Bourget Desert" — and not without reason. The pine forests which originally clothed this land had disappeared down the Ottawa River in the first early timber harvests. Farming on the light land was not successful and serious erosion of the fine sands followed.

It was this situation that led Ferdinand Larose, the local Agricultural Representative, to embark on a programme of reclamation. Larose felt that the forests should be replaced. In this way he believed the sandy soils would be tied down and the land might once again produce a useful crop. The present forest attests to his foresight. The trees which he saw planted in 1928 now reach up 70 feet — many are 16 inches and more in diameter.

The lands that make up the forest were purchased by the United Counties of Prescott and Russell, with assistance in the form of grants from the Province of Ontario. These grants amount to 75 per cent of the land purchase price and are repayable only at such times when the land is removed from forest production. The Department of Lands and Forests manages the land for forest products, recreation, wildlife, and other values, usually for a term of 30 to 50 years. At this point the owners may elect to renew the agreement or take over management themselves by paying the province the cost of development without interests. In this event the revenue received by the Province during the agreement period is credited to the forest. A final choice open to the owners is to relinquish title to the land and receive the original purchase price.

The Larose Forest has provided work for local residents, it has opened up recreational opportunities, controlled erosion, and regulated streamflow. Finally, it is an example of an economic forest venture calculated to encourage people in proper land use and good forest management practices.
