HENRY'S Shorthand School
Ottawa, Ont.

No School in Canada offers a better training, or ensures a more successful future. Henry's leads all others, and ranks among employers as "THE SCHOOL OF HIGHER EFFICIENCY"—a fact borne out by more than 600 pupils who have, since January, 1913, left other Ottawa schools to come to it.

Therefore, it is not surprising that business men, in advertising for stenographers, should specially say, "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

Heaviest Storm of Winter

When March came in like a lamb a week ago she was evidently only the lion masquerading, which role was continued up to early Sunday morning when the mask was removed and the lion business started, when this district in common with the rest of the province swept into the worst storm experienced here in many years. About half past eight snow began to fall and the wind to raise until during the afternoon the air was filled with snow whipped about by a fifty-mile southeast wind. In a short time the roads became impassable and streets in town were piled with drifts from three to ten feet high, particularly on the east side which bore the full force of the gale. Actual property damage in town did not amount to much, bricks were loosened from chimneys, and an odd loose shingle was ripped from a roof, while the storm tugged and strained at the Hydro lines, causing interruption in the service several times, which was restored without delay.

Out in the country more serious damage was suffered, the most serious of which was the lifting of the roof from Vincent Coyne's barn in Connaught.

Many motorists who started out early in the day were caught in the storm and either stalled in the drifts or had to find other means of transport to reach their homes. Those who were caught in Ottawa and decided to remain in until Monda and return by train were out of luck when they were snowbound on the O. & N. Y., with the snow ploughs stuck in the huge drifts in the vicinity of Ramsayville.

Leading Citizen of Iroquois Buried

The funeral of the late Alban James Osborne, for many years a leading citizen of Iroquois, took place yesterday, service being held at St. John's church, of which he was a warden, the Oddfellows' service also being conducted, he having been a prominent member of that order. Stricken by paralysis on Sunday, Mr. Osborne succumbed early on Monday morning without rallying.

Born in Norfolk, England, in 1864, Mr. Osborne came to Canada as a young man and secured a position with the Grand Trunk at Brockville. He was then transferred to Iroquois, which has since been his home. Hetiring from railwaf work he established a planing mill and operated it until the time of his death. His first wife was Hannah Armstrong of Iroquois, who bore him five children. His second wife, Harriet E. May, of Toronto, survives him, with seven children of their union, their being the Misses Isabel, Frances, Winnie, Kathleen and Emily, and two boys, John and Arthur. Surviving children of the first marriage are Messrs. Robert and Bartlett of Montreal; Albert of Cardinal, and Mrs. Alfred Aaron, of Toronto. Another son, Frank, was killed in the Great War.

Mr. Osborne was a member of the Public School Board and served several terms as its chairman.

Chesterville United W. M. S.

The regular monthly meeting of the United W. M. S. was held at the parsonage with thirty-nine members and two visitors present. Reports presented by the different committees showed progress in all departments, with the membership convenors showing eight new members enrolled. Mrs. Charles Graham read the portion of Scripture and the Lord's Prayer was repeated in unison; Mrs. I. Cross gave a paper, the subject being "Call for Missionaries in Japan."

The roll call was responded to by pithy sayings on "Stewardship." Mrs. T. Houlehan was in charge of the devotional part. Mrs. Wesley Fulton was in charge of the Study Book, assisted by Mrs. J. Helmer, Mrs. R. E. Newman, Miss A. Campderros and Mrs. Marshall.

Mrs. W. Fulton and Miss A. Campderros contributed a duet "He Cares," accompanied by Mrs. G. Reaburn, which was much appreciated.

The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

Presbyterian W. M. S

The March meeting of the St. Andrew's W. M. S. was held at the home of Mrs. Frank Hummel with the president, Miss Jamieson, in the chair. The meeting was opened with the reading of Psalm 19 and repeating of the Lord's Prayer. Scripture reading was from Mark viii. Mrs. Sproule and Miss Rae led in sentence prayers. A paper entitled "Prayer" was read by Mrs. Sproule. Interesting articles from Glad Tidings were read by Mrs. Baldry, Mrs. Carmen McIntosh, Miss Rae and Mrs. R. Barrie. After some business discussion the meeting was brought to a close with the singing of hymn 545 and prayer by Miss Jamieson. Mrs. Hummel served a delightful lunch which was enjoyed by all.

Mrs. D. G. Hutt, Maple Ridge, Passed Away Unexpectedly

It was with very deep regret that this community learned Tuesday morning of the death late the night before of Mrs. D. G. Hutt of Maple Ridge. Mrs. Hutt had attended a church meeting as recently as Saturday afternoon, and was as well at bed time Monday night as she had been recently and there was no thought of death. She had spent the evening with her family as usual, but took a weak turn shortly after going to her room, where her husband found her in considerable distress. Medical assistance was summoned as speedily as possible, the telephone lines being disconnected, but when a doctor arrived she had passed away.

Mrs. Hutt was very highly respected in her immediate community as well as in Chesterville where with her family all have been active in the work of Chesterville United church. Besides her husband, three sons and one daughter mourn her loss, Arthur, of Rochester, Otha and Ora at home and Mrs. Duncan McElheran of Chesterville.

The funeral will be held this afternoon from the family residence, where service will be conducted by Rev. R. E. Newman, with interment in Maple Ridge cemetery.

Chesterville High Wins Over Kingston Collegiate

Chesterville's chances for championship hockey team may be fading one by one, as the Intermediates passed out of the picture and the Juniors had the skids put under them by Renfrew, but the High School team is still going strong in the Eastern Ontario Secondary School Association, and are now up to the finals in the district when they meet the Glebe team of Ottawa in the city next Saturday afternoon.

Last Saturday afternoon in a sudden death game with Kingston Collegiate, winners of the Upper St. Lawrence district, on local ice Chesterville High turned back the city representatives in a nice game when they won 2 to 1. The ice was somewhat soft and at times had considerable water on it, but the youngsters went to it hammer and tongs and fought it out to the last whistle, at which time some of the visitors had been extended to the limit, as they did not seem to stand the soft going as well as he home boys.

Chesterville opened the scoring when "Chuck" Lapierre about the middle of the first frame got his old time centre ice shot working and whizzed one into the Kingston net. The visitors evened the score in the same period when they worked in close one of the few times of the game and their clever centre ice man Blomeley, did the trick. Chesterville pulled out in front in the second when Ronnie Lynch and Jack McAvoy did some nice work, the latter taking the pass and beating Thompson.

The third period with no scoring was all Chesterville, the Collegiate boys hardly ever getting beyond centre ice, while Thompson took care of a rain of pucks on his goal, most of which had lost their steam as a result of the gruelling work on the soft ice.

Just one more city team to turn back, the biggest job of all, and the Eastern Ontario schools crown will be within Chesterville's grasp. Here's hopin'.

The line-up:

Kingston — Goal, Thompson; defence, Langdon and Roberts; centre Blomeley; wings, Webster and Card; subs, McKee, Pyke and Mooers.

Chesterville—Goal, Fyke; defence, Helmer and LaPierre; centre, Lynch; wings, Olsen and McAvoy; subs, Tate McElroy and Marcellus.

Almonte and Montcalms Still Going Strong

Last night in Ottawa the Almonte-Montcalm struggle went into another tie game with a 2 to 2 score, leaving the round still even. Almonte went into the lead in the second period with a counter, which Montcalms evened up in the third session running the game into overtime. The first overtime period was fruitless, but a minute after the start of the second Almonte whipped in another, only to be followed in a minute and ten seconds by Montcalm repeating the trick, where scoring stopped, necessitating another game which will be played on Friday night in Ottawa.

R. O. P. Certificate Received

Mr. Thos. Allen of this place has been forwarded an R. O. P. certificate covering the production of the two-year-old Holstein Heifer, Laura Rooker Hartog. In her lactation period of 282 days on twice-a-day milking, this heifer gave 11,746 lbs. of milk containing 491.25 lbs. of butter. In the month of May last she produced 1735 lbs of milk containing 59 lbs. fat. This heifer was bred by Mr. Allen himself.

Oddfellows At Home

Chesterville Oddfellows were at home Tuesday night to over one hundred members and friends when progressive euchre was enjoyed, followed by dancing.

The spacious floor was filled with the tables at which the euchre was played, the prizes of the evening going to Mrs. Ed Gillard and Mr. Dan McKercher.

Following the card playing a generous repast was served, after which the guests repaired to the lodge room and dancing was enjoyed till about one o'clock to music supplied by Messrs. Eugene McMillan, violin; Hubert Dixon, saxophone; S. Morris, trombone, and Jack Morris, piano. Mr. Delbert Hummel performed the rôle of prompter for the old-time squares.

Mountain Farm Home Burned

A fire which might have been extinquished under normal conditions destroyed the farm house of Willard Bellinger, at Van Camp, between South Mountain and Winchester, at four o'clock Sunday afternoon. The biting east wind blew the little blaze into a fire which consumed the frame dwelling and most of its contents.

The fire originated in the attic. The wind spread the flames rapidly through the upper part of the house. Mr. Bellinger and his family managed to save the greater part of the furniture downstairs, but the rapid spread of the flames prevented them getting out anything on the second floor or attic. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

Iroquois Wins Second Game Of Final Series

Iroquois and Spencerville met for the second time in the finals in the St. Lawrence League last night at the Iroquois Arena, Iroquois winning by 2 to 1, the ice was in fair condition, but in the third period it was soft, preventing fast play, although the play was fast enough at times for the most ardent fan.

In the first period Lowrey scored for Spencerville in seven minutes, the play being fast in this period. In the second period Robinson scored for Iroquois in two minutes, and five minutes later Coleman scored another for Iroquois. This ended the scoring, although both teams worked hard for the remainder of the game.

In the third period Iroquois had only four men on the ice part of the time, yet these four were able to hold their opponents in check and then carried the war into the enemy's territory and time and again nearly scored. As the first game on these finals resulted in a tie, the third game will be played in Spencerville on Friday, as in these finals one team or the other must win two games, goals not counting.

The line-up:

Spencerville—Goal, Leahy; defence, Bush and Cameron; centre, Lowery; wings, Cooper and Robinson; subs, Hitsman and Froats.

Iroquois—Goal, D. Coleman; defence, Robinson and Tailfere; centre, C. Coleman; wings, Dextras and Loughridge; subs, Brouz and James.

Officials—Harry Hooper and Harry Fleming.

A Physical Inventory

DO YOU ever take a physcial inventory of yourself?

It is an excellent way of bringing weak points to your attention; and when you them you can take means to make them strong.

The weak spot physically in great numbers of men and women is in their eyes.

From illness, overwork, careless, or neglect, their eyes are not in the condition they should be.

How about YOUR eyes? Do they feel strained or pain you?

Chesterville Girl Attendant At Fashionable Wedding

The wedding of Miss Nan Sullivan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Sullivan, of Perth, Canada, and Thomas O'Dea, of New York City, took place at seven o'clock Saturday evening in St. Teresa's church, North Tarrytown, with the Rev. Father Donohue officiating. Close friends and relatives of the couple attended.

Miss Sullivan wore a frock of gray chiffon made with long uneven hemline and Eton jacket. Her hat and accessories were also gray, and she wore a corsage of roses and sweet peas. Miss Eileen Flynn, the only attendant, wore flame chiffon, fahioned along the same lines as the bride's gown, with accessories to match. She also wore a corsage of roses and sweet peas. Chris Casserly, of New York City, was best man.

After the ceremony a buffet supper was served to the immediate relatives and members of the bridal party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cohen of North Broadway.

The couple left for a short wedding trip, after which they will be at home in Marble Hill. Mrs. O'Dea has been engaged as a nurse in the office of Dr. John R. Evers of Tarrytown.

Miss Mary McCarthy played the wedding march and accompanied Mimi Nicholas who sang "O Promise Me."

News and Information For the Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

The International Ploughing Match and Farm Machinery Demonstration will be held near the City of Peterboro, Ontario, on October 13, 14, 15 and 16, 1931.

Report Wes Endorsed

Ontario, through the new marketing council provided for in the Somerset Report, will embark without delay upon sweeping new policies to promote new markets, recapture old ones, and restore to prosperity the fruit and vegetable industry of the province. Announcements of these new policies in a speech by Hon. T. L. Kennedy in Hamilton was followed by an overwhelming vote endorsing the Somerset report by the Association of Fruit Growers of Ontario and the Niagara Fruit Growers' Association in annual convention.

Should Hold Samples

Ontario farmers, according to A. H. Martin of the Crops Branch, are beginning to take a keen interest in the coming World Grain Exhibition which will be held in Regina a year from next summer. Their interest in this big event was indicated by the fact that entries at the Chicago Grain Show from this Province last Fall were nearly double those of previous years. Grain and small seeds from the crop of 1930 can be entered at Regina and Mr. Martin any one who has won a prize at Chicago, the Royal, or any of the Seed Shows this winter to hold over their samples for showing in 1932, because, he says, it is doubtful whether the excellent weather of last Fall which allowed grain and clover seed to mature in perfect shape will be repeated again this year.

500 Flocks Under Inspection

For the season of 1930–31 there are approximately 500 flocks of poultry under inspection in the province under the Ontario policy for approving farm flocks or breeding stations. This involves around 175,000 birds, as compared with 45,000 birds when the policy became operative in 1928–29. The increase reveals a keen desire on the part of flock-owners to improve their laying stock.

The flocks are culled and banded by an inspector and this work is usually done by the first of December. The birds culled out are disposed of and those banded are then blood-tested during December and January. The blood testing is to determine the freedom of young chicks from that costly disease known as pullorum. Flock owners under this policy must maintain a certain standard of sanitation, guard against infectious diseases and use inspected or qualified male birds. This is one of everal policies tending towards improvement of poultry flocks and of the quality of chicks distributed.

Survey of Cattle

Hon. Thomas L. Kennedy has announced his intention to have a survey made of cattle in the province with a view to increasing the production of milk. Creameries and cheese factories will be asked for reports on the quantity of milk handled by them and the number of cattle producing it. In sections in which the production is low, farmers would be aided in acquiring bulls having a better breeding quality, with a view not only of increasing milk production, but of a milk having a higher fat content.

Early Oats Gain Favour

Early oats, such as Alaska and O. A. C. No. 3, have been increasing in popularity throughout the province. In counties where the season is rather short the early oat is producing a higher yield of heavier oats than the later varieties like Banner and O. A. C. No. 72. The earlier varieties mature before being caught by frost rust. Often the yield of later varieties of oats is materially reduced by rust. The acreage of mixed grain throughout Ontario is also increasing, and an early oat fits in better with barley, the two maturing at the same time. Another reason why some farmers are using early oats is to combat sow thistle. They work the ground later than usual in the spring and then sow a quick maturing variety of oats. The percentage of hull in early oats is less as a rule than that of later oats and as the hull has no more feed value than straw, the early oat is of slightly higher feeding value than is the late oat.

Valuable Work for Juniors

Junior Club work in Ontario County received a stimulus in 1930 when a grain club was organized to assist in the Better Seed Campaign as an objective. Registered Seed No. 1 of recommended varieties of grain was distributed and an effort made to get at the truth regarding the value of fertilizer on spring sown cereals. Each boy also received a four-ounce sample of formalin with instructions for treating his grain for smut. The total number enrolled in the grain club was 96 and the average age 19 years. A summary of production costs showed that 45 boys produced 49 bushels of oats per acre at a cost of 41 cents a bushel. Nine boys produced 33½ bushels of barley per acre at a cost of 56 cents per bushel. The average increase in the fertilized plots of oats over the unfertilized was 9.4 bushels per acre, and the average increase of barley was 9.8 bushels per acre. "In all our club work," states Mr. Croskey the local representative, "we require cost records and field notes to be kept with the idea of focusing attention on production costs. The fact that high yields are usually produced at around half the cost of average yields stands out in what data we have collected."

Clean Seed Tour

A campaign has been commenced by I. G. McLoughtry, Waterloo's Agricultural Representative, to improve the high quality of seed grain in Waterloo County. Mr. McLoughtry and J. S. Knapp, of the department, are visiting farms and giving demonstrations. In addition, they will show in each district how fanning mills can be best operated to obtain seeds free from weeds. Every section of the county will be covered in the tour. At a recent test in Toronto, only 20 per cent of 660 Waterloo County seed samples were rejected, and 39 per cent was found to be of the highest quality. It is with a view to further increasing this percentage that the present campaign has been started.

Importance of O. A. C.

The increasingly valuable part played by the O. A. C. and allied institutions in the agricultural life of Ontario was revealed in figures recently furnished by Dr. G. I Christie. He pointed out that there was a combined enrolment of 725 students at this educational centre and that students were in attendance from Bermuda, Cuba, the British Isles, Holland, Japan, Mexico, Newfoundland, South Africa, Switzerland, Trinidad, the United States, the British West Indies, British Guiana, and Australia. One thousand students attended short courses in home economics and agriculture, while the summer school for teachers had an attendance of over 300. Dr. Christie also stated that 15,000 persons had visited the college during the past year, while members of the staff had given demonstrations and lectures all over the province.

Weekly Crop Report

With the advent of better weather, the weekly crop report takes on a more optimistic note. Fall wheat, clovers and grasses seem to be in good condition while live stock is excellent in spite of uneasiness caused by a drop in prices for hogs and cattle. The milk supply, too, is higher than in previous years.

In Brant, farmers are low on hay supplies and many have been forced to makes purchases in this respect. An increasing number of stock in Frontenac are reported to have wintered well, while in Glengarry milk production is normal with good demand for both milk and cream. Grey reports the possibility of another apple warehouse being built by the Georgian Bay Fruit Growers to replace the one recently lost by fire. Ploughing has proceeded apace in Kent with the ground in good condition and good runs of maple syrup have been encountered. A marked increase in the demand for alfalfa seed indicates an increased acreage in Leeds. The sharp drop in livestock prices has affected Middlesex farmers considerably and many have started butchering to keep up the revenue. Alfalfa acreage in Perth will be increased this season while a good supply of other seeds is reported. An increased interest in milk-testing is announced in North Simcoe since the advent of payment by butterfat content. An abundance of cereal grain is noted in Welland although the wheat outlook is somewhat discouraging because of the disappearance of snow, rendering no protection against winter conditions.

County Solicitor in Renfrew Resigns

Pembroke, Ont., March 10.—The situation in Renfrew County, where W. A. Biggs, former treasurer, is facing defalcation charges involving a sum estimated at over $120,000, developed a new sensation toda· w'th the resignation of W. K. MacGregor, county solicitor. The resignation followed sharp censure by Warden J. M. McIntyre, who charged that the county solicitor had deliberately disregarded instructions to have Biggs placed under arrest. MacGregor had not taken action until 24 hours had elapsed, the warden claimed, and then only after instructions had been twice repeated.

Many Ducks Are Mock

J. F. Reid, M. L. A., for Windsor West, speaking in the Legislature on Tuesday on the wild life of the province, complained of the little people knew of the delicacies to be found in Ontario's lakes and rivers. As an instance of this, he invited members of the Legislature Press Gallery to dinner and fed them muskrat. Every one of them thought it was wild duck.

Jones had occasion to reprimand his wife.

"I think, dear," he began soothingly, "that you fib a little occasionally."

She immediately became indignant.

"Well, I think it's a wife's duty," was her response.

"Wife's duty?" he echoed, wondering what was coming.

"Yes; to speak well of her husband occasionally," was the reply.

—o—

"Have you seen Smith?" asked King.

"No," came the reply from Brown. "Anything wrong?"

"Terrible sight, poor chap. Arm in a sling, face bandaged, and he's got a bad limp," King told him.

"That's bad. Did he do it on his motorcycle?" Brown inquired.

"No; if he could have stayed on his motorcycle it would have been all right."

Albertus (meeting Reginald in Park); "Well, old chap, what are you doing here?"

Reginald :"Just admiring the beauties of Nature."

Albertus: "Aw, I say, have many gone by?"

Lady: "What caused you to become a tramp."

Tramp: "The family doctor, mum. He advised me to take long walks after meals, and I've been walking after 'em ever since."

A conceited youth who was not too conscientious about his work had the temerity to ask his chief for an increase of salary."

"Hm!" commented the big man. "And what are you doing now?"

"Various odd jobs, sir," was the reply.

"Odd jobs?" queried the chief, who knew the lad's true worth. "Then you'd better make a bolt for the door."

—o—

Augustus, nervously: "I—er—I—er—I—er——" Angelina, interrupting: "Well, to err is human!"

—o—

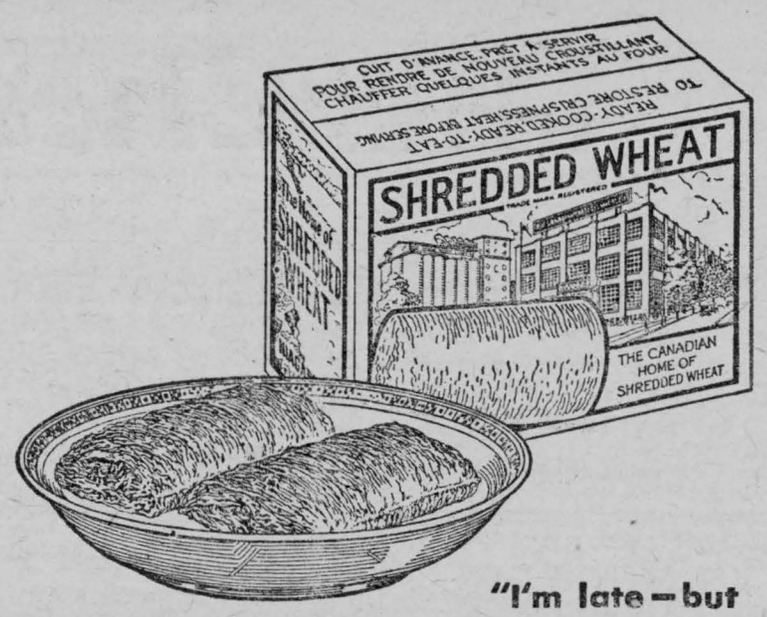
Wife (to husband tinkering with car): "What's causing the trouble, dear?"

Novice: "I don't know exactly, but I think it's the exasperator."

—o—

"My lord," exclaimed one man, addressing a judge some years ago, "you may believe me or not, but I have stated not a word that is false, for I have been wedded to truth from my infancy."

"Yes," was the crushing reply, "but the question is, how long have you been a widower?"



"I'm late—but I have time for Shredded Wheat"

"Oh you don't have to worry about getting to work on time when we have Shredded Wheat in the house.—It's ready cooked, ready to serve—and you'll have plenty to eat. Shredded Wheat is the real energy-food: and whether you prefer it with cream or with hot milk on cold mornings, it's a delicious and satisfying meal."

Gentlemen:

Being the proud possessor of a Philco Baby Grand radio and getting excellent reception, I feel it my duty to advise you of the following performance which I understand from other radio fans, is remarkable.

Last night, at nine forty-five to ten thirty, I enjoyed an instrumental and vocal program coming from Cuba. The call letters, given quite frequently, were C.M.K. and while announcements were in Spanish the station was identified by a few English words— stating that it was a commercial program, broadcast from the Hotel Plaza at Havana.

The above station was accidentally brought in by trying to get Montreal and the far-away concert was heard perfectly with the set turned on to only three-quarters of its volume capacity. There was no interference from Montreal or other stations.

You are entirely at liberty to use this information in impressing others of the satisfaction to be derived in owning one of these efficient little machines.

Yours truly,

With the coming of the warm spring weather most everyone is wearing a smile and the bells have again showed signs of ringing.

Quite a number are on the sick list, th[illegible] again showing up and attacking the weak spots in many, Mr. Ira Barrington and Mr. W. C. Hetherington being indoors for the last three weeks. J. R. McConnell and Miss Nellie Baker, teachers her, are on the sick list, their respective schools being closed for the past few days.

John Gray Smirle, who has been poorly for several years, suffered an attack of rheumatism which terminated in paralysis of the heart and stomach from which he passed away on Friday morning last. Funeral was held on Sunday afternoon at the Presbyterian church and cemetery. He leaves to mourn his loss a widow and eleven children. The deceased was a son of the late Robert Smirle and Eliza Feeley, and was 59 years of age.

The saw mill here has resumed operations and, notwithstanding the deplorable conditions of the roads, logs are coming in from all directions.

Mr. Harry LaSalle has moved to the farm of Mr. Angus Smirle. While we shall miss Harry we wish him success.

The J. P. has been notified that our people are paying for bread that is short in weight. Look, listen, weigh and report.

The stork presented Mr. Middy Bedstone with a boy on Tuesday last which weighed 10 lbs. net, and good weight too. Let us hear who beats this these hard times.

The T. B. testing is now going on in Winchester township, quite a few of the farmers having heavy losses while most of the farms are clear. The opinion now is that this testing should have been done last fall, but, live and learn seems to be the old reliable rule with many yet.

We are pleased to learn that Mr. Ceryl Smirle has secured a position at the Cornwall Silk Factory in the electrical department, he having taken lessons in electrical engineering some time ago. We wish Ceryl success.

Mrs S. Kippen (nee Eva Reveler) is spending a few days at her old home here. We all welcome her back.

Mr. S. Park and daughter Della are spending the week end with Mr. and Mrs. O. K. Steven.

The weather prophets predict a storm and it may come.

Robert John McLaughlin, a former Cannamore boy, and champion cheesemaker of Ontario, died at Belleville on Monday, February 9th. He was a member of the Dairyman's Association, as well as an officer in the Cheesemakers' Association of Eastern Ontario.

The late Mr. McLaughlin was known in all cheese circles and he had won many trophies for his high-grade cheese. He was born in Ireland 54 years ago, and went to Belleville ten years ago. Siince that time his work in his chosen field has attracted great attention.

The deceased was a member of the Belleville Lodge of the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons. His ill-health was started when his home burned several months ago, and he was forced to flee to a neighbour's in the night.

Mr. McLaughlin leaves a widow and one daughter, Mrs. W. E. Otto, of Colborne. Also mourning him are five brothers, David at Chesterville, Jacob of Norwood, Henry and James of Ogdensburg, and William of Finch, and one sister, Mrs. Mason Blackfield, living at Aultsville.

Angus: "Sandy, ye ken I'm a thrifty man. What would ye advise me to tak to the golden wedding?"

Sandy (after a little thought); "Mon, I'd tak a goldfish."

Young Man (to daughter of family): "And I can imitate any kind of a bird."

Irate Parent (glancing at clock): "Can you do a homing pigeon?"

Father had his little daughter on his knee.

"What are you going to do when you grow up?" he asked her.

"I'm going to marry an engineer," replied the child.

"And what kind?" he asked. "A civil engineer?"

"Oh," replied the little girl, "it doesn't matter what kind. I'll soon make him civil."

Cub Reporter (to editor who is retiring): "What is your recipe for success?"

Editor: "I attribute my ability to retire with $100,000, after thirty years in the printing field, to close application to duty, pursuing a policy of strict honesty, taking good times with the bad, always practising rigorous economy, and to the recent bequest of $99,999.95, left me by an uncle."

A woman went into a shop and wanted to buy some goods on credit.

The storekeeper called up another merchant, and asked if this woman was reliable in the matter of credit.

The answer was short, sharp and decisive. The other merchant said: "This woman has been married three times. She still owes for two coffins and one wreath."

Dismiss Charge Against Williamsburg Teacher

A charge of assault against Lorne Robinson, teacher of S. S. No. 3, Williamsburg, made by Archie McKoy, of Morrisburg, was dismissed by Magistrate McCormick in police court in Morrisburg on Saturday afternoon. The charge followed Robinson's striking Arthur McKoy, 11, son of Archie McKoy, while reprimanding him in school for poor work. The boy was proven to be disobedient and impudent and the court dismissed the case. A large crowd lined the police offices as the case had created much interests in Morrisburg and vicinity.

Slayer of Young Girl Will Hang June 12

Montreal, March 11.—Albert Nogaret, otherwise Brother Dosithee, convicted of the murder of seven-year-old Simone Caron, heard the sentence of death pronounced on him yesterday afternoon in the Court of King's Bench, when the date of execution was set by Mr. Justice Wilson for Friday, June 12. The jury in bringing in its verdict of guilty of wilful murder, added a rider recommending mercy.

Mr. Justice Charles A. Wilson, wearing the traditional black tricornered hat and black gloves, pronounced the words which sealed the fate of the 48-year-old accused who was formerly in charge of the kitchens of the Acadamie Roussin, Pointe aux Trembles. "The sentence of this court," His Lordship uttered gravely, "is that you, Albert Nogaret, hang by the neck on Friday, June 12, until you are dead, and may God have mercy on your soul."

The convicted man was advised of the verdict by his lawyer, Lucien Gendron, K. C., in the interval between the time the verdict had been rendered and the actual passing of the sentence. Nogaret is very deaf and did not know, before Mr. Gendron told him, what the jury's decision was. He had also been told by his attorney that the verdict would be appealed and probably for that reason he showed no emotion whatsoever when the judge set the date for his execution.

The foreman of the jury, to the formal question of Jules Godin, clerk of the court, answered that the jurors found the accused guilty in the manner and form laid down in the indictment, but recommended him to the clemency of the court. The judge advised the jury that, in view of the veridct of guilty of murder, he would have to pass sentence immediately, but would forward to the proper authorities the recommendation of clemency they had added to the verdict.

It was five o'clock yesterday afternoon, after hearing the address of the judge, that the jurors walked out of the court room to deliberate. One hour later they returned with their verdict. They were immediately released and the court adjourned for a few moments while the judge went to his chambers to don the black hat and gloves. Sheriff Omer Lapierre, K.C., wearing his robes of office, was present when sentence was passed, as were E. A. B. Ladouceur, K. C., Clerk of the Crown, and High Constable Achille Cinq-Mars.

INFANT FEEDING

A great responsibility rests upon each mother because her baby is absolutely dependent upon her. The health of the citizens of the next Canadian generation depends entirely upon the mothers of to-day.

The baby is a very helpless mortal. It is this helplessness that is in many ways so appealing, but, at the same time, it makes great demands upon the mother.

Breast milk is the perfect food for the baby. The breast-fed baby is the best-fed baby. In the breast milk he receives all the different kinds of food he needs, in the correct proportions and in a form which is easy for him to digest.

There is no artificial feeding that is just as good as the natural feeding. The baby who is deprived of his natural food loses something that cannot be replaced, and he has not as good a chance as has his naturally-fed brother.

There is more sickness and a higher percentage of deaths among artificially-fed infants. The reason for this is that the naturally-fed infants have the benefit of breast milk which is free from dirt and disease germs and is easy to digest.

It is cheaper and much more easy to breast-feed than it is to use artificial feedings. It takes time to prepare feedings, the materials used must be paid for and, even then, the feeding is at the best nothing more than a good substitute for the natural food.

In the vast majority of cases a mother weans her baby without knowing that she is doing the wrong thing. She may think that she can not nurse her baby, that the baby is not doing well, and that, consequently, there must either be something wrong with her milk, or that it is of poor quality. She may have listened to some well-meaning but ignorant neighbour who has told her that artificial feeding is best.

The truth is that there are very few women who cannot nurse their babies. No baby should be weaned excepting on the advice of the family doctor. Even a small quantity of breast milk is better for the baby than none at all. There are many ways in which the quantity of milk can be increased, and these should be all tried before the baby is weaned.

The nursing mother should eat plain, wholesome food. She should take milk daily, and fresh fruits and vegetables should form a regular part of her diet.

The foundation of health is laid by a good start in life, and the baby who is breast-fed regularly by a healthy mother is given such a good start.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 14 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

WHAT A HEN WILL EAT

IT may be interesting at a time when new means of marketing incidental farm products is vitally important, to know what an average hen can convert into eggs during the course of a year. There could be no more dependable or authoritive guide in this regard than the average of averages of feed consumption in egg laying contests, determined from the records of six successive years and averaged from every province in the Dominion. These figures show that the average hen will consume 157.4 pounds of feed a year. Of this total 83.6 is grain or meal mixture, and 22.8 per cent green feed. Add to this 41.2 pounds of milk and the farm supply straight from the farm totals 157.6 pounds per bird or over 93 per cent of the feed required. The supplementary feed included 3.3 pounds of beef scrap, 1.9 pounds of grit, 3.4 pounds shell, and 1.2 pounds of charcoal. A flock of 150 hens will convert 8,856 pounds of farm grown feeds into eggs and under ordinary conditions will show 100 per cent profit over cost of feed at current prices, which is in itself a valuable item of income for any farm.—Department of Agriculture. Everyone Can Help

Horticultural Council Launches Campaign to Beautify Canada.

"Beautify our home grounds and make Canada more beautiful" is the slogan which has been adopted by the national committee for the campaign now being conducted by the Canadian Horticultural Council. The more you think it over the more you feel the force and appeal of this slogan. You can do your bit alongside your neighbour and the thousands of others who own homes throughout the Dominion and really make them more attractive, more beautiful and more homelike through the proper planning and planting of trees, shrubs, perennials and flowers.

To assist in the practical carrying out of such a campaign on a national basis the Horticultural Council has taken the initiative at considerable expense in having a landscape architect of outstanding reputation and experience with Canadian conditions prepare a book dealing adequately and in an essentially practical manner with the subject of beautifying the home grounds. This book, containing 87 pages, is now available for distribution through the Horticultural Council and through the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa. Not only is it profusely illustrated but many diagrams helpful in planning practical development in ornamental horticulture, are included. In addition, a glossary of trees, shrubs and herbaceous perennials suitable for planting in different parts of Canada is included. All the plants mentioned in the book can be purchased from Canadian sources, at once assuring a greater measure of success in planting and material assistance to the horticultural industry in Canada.

This book may be obtained at a price of twenty-five cents on application to the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, or to the Canadian Horticultural Council. Discount is available for the benefit of schools and societies desirous of purchases copies in quantity.

Each year sees a marked development in an essentially Canadian type of ornamental horticulture and in beautifying your home grounds you are really helping to make Canada more beautiful.

Toronto Husband Kicks Wife to Death in Rage

Toronto, March 11.—Kicking his wife, Fanny, to death in a sudden rage, William Milne, 44, telephoned police here tonight and notified them of his act. He was arrested on a murder charge.

Milne, foreman in the city's roads department, had worked unceasingly for more than eighty hours clearing snow from the city streets. Tonight, according to his statement and that of a roomer, he returned to his home on Ann street. He found his wife, he said, very drunk. In a sudden rage, he struck her and knocked her to the floor. Then he kicked her three times.

When she did not recover, he phoned the police. "I've had trouble with my wife," he said. "Serious trouble. You'd better send someone up here right away. I'll wait till they come."

Police rushed to the house and found the body of the woman on the kitchen floor. They took Milne to the station after he told them of events leading to the tragedy. Mrs. Milne, he declared, had been drunk almost continually since Christmas, and she had frequently quarrelled with him during the four years they have lived here.

Mrs. Milne is a former Whitby girl and is very well known in that district.

Three roomers lived in the house, one of whom was present when Mrs. Milne was killed. "I paid no attention to the argument," he told police. "The first thing I knew of anything serious was when I heard him at the telephone."

A COMMENDABLE MOVEMENT

NO more suitable time than the present could have been chosen for the instituting of a "Beautify Canada" campaign. When many are feeling the effects of depressed business it affords a relief to cultivate some of the ideals and characteristics that proceed from the human heart and mind. The taste for gardens is strong in most of us and becomes more pronounced as time goes on. Capitalizing on this factor, the Canadian Horticultural Council is doing a commendable work in starting off the movement that is planned to sweep over the country from coast to coast.

The Provincial Departments of Agriculture through horticultural societies, garden clubs and other bodies have the machinery for reaching all parts of the rural and urban districts and it behoves every patriotic citizen of Canada to give support to the cause so well expressed in the chosen slogan "Beautify Your Home Grounds and help to make Canada more Beautiful."

A YEAR OF NEW VALUES

THE YEAR OF 1931 will go down in the history of Canadian agriculture as a year of new values, of reconstruction and re-adjustment. The prices of farm products have not only felt the effect of the general depression but have been forced to new low levels through important market changes forcing a huge volume of products on to the domestic market. But feed stuffs are equally low, and other commodities falling in line making the farmer's dollar to-day worth considerably more than a year ago. There is no year in recent times on which to base a comparison of conditions and the change forced on agriculture is so great that in the opinion of market experts the figures of production costs and values of recent years are useless for purposes of comparison. The net returns to farmers during 1931 may prove financially quite as satisfactory as any in recent years.—Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

FEED INFLUENCE ON DEVELOPMENT AND MILK PRODUCTION OF DAIRY CATTLE

IS a superior or inferior cow born or made, is a question that is often asked. To help answer it, an experiment was conducted at the Cap Rouge, Que., experimental station.

Twins were chosen for this project to minimize the chance of error due to breeding. One of them was well fed and weighed 785 pounds just previous to dropping her calf at two years and twenty-two days; the other was scanty fed and weighed 600 pounds just previous to dropping her calf at 2 years and 83 days. It is evident that feeding had an influence on the development of the heifer, in this case, and this is an important point because there generally seems to be rather close relation between weight of dairy cattle and production.

The well fed heifer gave 11,392 pounds of milk and 655 pounds of fat, during the first two lactation periods, whilst the scantily fed heifer only yielded 3,767 pounds of milk and 168 pounds of fat. This is probably an extreme case, but it seems that the most profitable way is to feed well, without pampering: on very good pasture, no concentrate; at other times, all the clover hay they will consume, with silage and roots when available, and a grain allowance of from 2 to 3 pounds per animal, per day, according to age.

A Week in the Legislature

THE problem of whether municipal income taxation should be resumed in the province promises to prove one of the most contentions debates during the present session of the Ontario Legislature. This was shown when amendments were introduced and presented for second reading by Arthur Ellis, Con., Ottawa North, which ask for abolition of the taxation and also that it might be optional to those municipalities desiring it.

Decided opposition arose to the tax being abolished from Toronto, Hamilton and members of other cities, the chief opposition coming from Russell Nesbitt, Con., Bracondale-Toronto, who contended that city would lose $2,500,000 if the tax was removed.

Premier Henry and Attorney-General Price both agreed the question of most importance and urged that when the bills are in committee much consideration should be give to them.

AN offer of the Christian Brotherhood of Canada to build an industrial school for boys at Alfred, 40 miles from Ottawa, in Prescott county, at a cost of $200,000 was accepted by the Cabinet. The school is to be recognized for commitment of Roman Catholic boys and will accommodate 100 boys, who will be given adequate agricultural and vocational training in an effort to rehabilitate those entering the institution. The usual grant is to be given to the school which is to be patterned after the style of the Bowmanville school for boys. The brotherhood will administer the staff.

HON. T. L. KENNEDY, Minister of Agriculture, at a meeting of the Agricultural Committee of the Legislature, was instructed to get in touch with Dominion authorities at Ottawa and impress upon them the need for investigating the cream content of ice cream sold in Ontario; also the necessity for the immediate establishment of some sort of brand for all tubercular tested cattle. Col. Kennedy intimated representatives would be sent to New York state this year to study the dairy situation there. A complete survey of the province will be made so as to provide the departmental records with a check, as regards butter fat production of all dairy herds. This is to be followed by a policy of introducing better bulls to areas with poor grade herds so as to improve the standard of the herd but indirectly the quality of the milk.

TO CONSIDER reformation of the system of electoral registration, A. Russell Nesbitt, Bracondale–Toronto, spoke to his motion asking for a select committee to delve into the question. Ontario's present system of compiling the lists he claimed is antiquated and under which thousands are left off the list. Mr. Nesbitt even favoured the system in force in Australia where compulsory registration is maintained and under which over ninety per cent of the voters actually vote. In the last provincial election it was stated an average of forty per cent voted here. Attorney-General Price favoured some form of revamping the lists, and offered the co-operation of his chief election officer and the Attorney-General's department. Premier Henry observed that the government is at present giving thought to the problem and with the aid of the law officers some plan will be considered before the next session of the house.

STEPS to combat a new threat against Ontario's export trade with Britain are being taken by Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, who is sending a representative to England to watch the situation in the interests of Ontario's cattle industry. Premier Bennett has already asked Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Canada's High Commissioner in London, to request the British to withold certain new regulations which impose new burdens on steamship companies engaged in transporting cattle. These regulations lay down a new type of fittings with which the ships must be equipped if permitted to carry cattle to Britain.

PREMIER HENRY declined to institute any governmental action in response to a motion of H. C. Nixon, Progressive, Brant, who asked the government to appoint a committee to delve into the allegation that atheism exists and is taught at the University of Toronto. Mr. Nixon referred to an editorial in the "Varsity," the under-graduate paper of the University of Toronto, which, written by a student, alleged atheism exists at the institution. Premer Henry in asking Mr. Nixon to withdraw his motion declared he had every faith in the Board of Governors of the University and its caput to handle the situation. If they fail to do so, Premier Henry intimated the department of education might step in to settle the matter.

A. H. ACRES, Conservative, Carleton, speaking on the debate on the Speech from the Throne, assailed taxation, the Canadian banks, the Western Canada wheat pool and co-operative organizations, the system of higher education and high wages. Mr. Acres devoted his address entirely to agriculture, claiming many conditions could be remedied. The present burden of agriculture, he maintained, was so heavy as to be unbearable, attributing this to the decline of farming in the province. Canadian banks, he claimed, had failed in their duty in not interesting themselves in agriculture with "an ounce of prevention." He urged that under the present system of education those who receive it should pay for it.

Farquhar Oliver, U. F. O., South Grey, also speaking on the debate, claimed that the high cost of insurance for rural applicants added to the general distress, and making farm buildings "very inflamable." He asked a re-adjustment of the rates.

TWO GOOD QUICK-BREADS

WE all like something new in bread-stuffs—whether for simple serving, toasting or making into still more different sandwiches. Here are two of our pet recipes, that we promised ourselves we would pass on speedily to our Record readers.

The first one is for Raisin Bread—or instead of raisins you can use chopped dates; or perhaps for variety you will substitute currants with a few sultana raisins and some thinly shaved candied peels or citron; all are good.

Quick Raisin Bread.

1 cup flour
1½ teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon soda
5 teaspoons baking powder
2 cups whole wheat flour
½ cup white sugar
¾ cup raisins
1 egg
¾ cup milk
½ cup molasses
2 tablespoons melted shortening

Sift the salt, soda and baking powder with the pastry flour. Mix well with the whole wheat flour and the sugar. Add the raisins (which have already been coated with a little of the white flour).

Beat the egg, combine it with the milk, then with the mixed molasses and hot water; add the melted shortening.

Combine this liquid mixture with the well-mixed dry ingredients, mixing quickly and lightly.

Turn into greased loaf pan, let stand 15 minutes, and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees F., about 50 minutes.

If kept in a closed tin, this loaf will remain surprisingly moist.

Nut Bread.

1 cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon soda
¼ cup brown sugar
2 cups whole wheat flour
½ cup molasses
1½ cups milk
1 cup chopped walnuts

Mix the flour, salt, baking powder, soda and brown sugar and sift them. Mix these all well with the whole wheat flour. Add molasses and milk, mix well, add nuts and beat two minutes.

Turn mixture into greased baking powder tins for round bread, or into a greased loaf pan. Let stand 20 minutes, then bake in a slow oven, 300 degrees F.

Jimmy had been ailing for a couple of days . . . but she didn't think it was serious — till this afternoon . . . she called the doctor . . . hospital tomorrow . . . just a minor operation, but it couldn't wait.

Whatever would she do? She must be with Jimmy . . . but there was the baby too. If mother were only there . . . but a letter couldn't reach mother till late tomorrow.

Then she thought of the telephone. In two minutes she was speaking to her mother. Yes, she could catch the evening train — would be there at 8 in the morning.

What a relief! Now she could go about her preparations for the morrow. The telephone had made everything easy. And the cost of the call had been less than a dollar.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY OF CANADA

TOM SCANLAN--SECOND MATE

IN 1774 England declared an embargo on the shipping of Boston, and the custom house was removed to Salem, thereby giving a special impulse to the commerce of that post. In 1775 came the war of the Revolution, and everything afloat and along the coast met changed conditions.

So it happened that the ribs and keel of a vessel begun in a Boston yard in '74 remained as a skeleton for several years. Then her owners, who were for the most part ship carpenters, said, "We'll finish her for a privateer and gather profit by capture." They altered her lines somewhat, made her sharper in the bow and named her the Speedy. But again delays came, and when the war closed the Speedy was still untried and privateering was over. Then at last she was completed, sold to Salem men, for sixteen dollars a ton, and outfittted for a venture to Calcutta.

It was a genuine "venture" to send the little ship so far to a market so little known and to ports where the Stars and Stripes had no traditions of power behind it. But what good guessing, good judgment, and courage could do was done. Tom Scanlan was second mate. He was young for the place, and this was his first deep-water voyage. He eagerly proposed to himself, however, to do his best and to make his way up until he was "Captain" Scanlan.

The Speedy had been out thirty-two days by the log, and they were running down toward the southern limit of the trade winds when one morning there was a call of "Sail ho!" and the lookout made out a vessel ahead of them, a little on the weather bow.

"We've had the whole Atlantic to ourselves for more than a month," observed the captain, "and I'm glad to see somebody. Brace the yards a little, Mr. Scanlan. We'll come up a couple of points and run within hail."

The Speedy came up to the wind till the stranger bore nearly straight ahead, then the captain went forward to the bow to get a better chance to see the other vessel, while Tom went aloft to the lee fore yard to see about a frayed leech line.

The day was fine, and the Speedy, taking the wind now almost abeam, was doing her prettiest. The seas, large enough to curl and break with a frothing of foam, came chasing down from the northeast; the sails were pressed firm and full so that ship no more than swayed gently as she hastened on; schools of flying fish rose at the bow in acknowledgement of her swift pursuit, and at the stern the inrush of water tailed off in the whiteness of her wake for a long distance. Yes, it was a fine day and worth while to turn aside a little to greet a stranger in midsea. But scarcely had the captain come to his lookout when he saw a column of smoke roll up from theship ahead and drift murkily off to leeward.

"I declare for it," he exclaimed, gazing at it, "if she's afire, we are just in the nick of time to do some good. What d'ye make her out, Mr. Scanlan;"

Tom gave attention. "Looks to me like a whaler trying out," he said. "She's hove to, I think, and don't seem to care about making a fair wind on any course."

The captain continued to look. "Yes," he said, "I guess that's so. Well, he will be glad to see us, and we'll change longitudes with him as we go by."

So they ran on, and their impression that the vessel was not on fire seemed confirmed. There were no signs of excitement, and as they came on they could see a man standing by the rail as if to speak to them.

"Captain," called Tom sharply from aloft, "she's no boats for a whaler and no whale alongside."

"Put your helm up," called the captain, turning aft at once. "We won't go too near to any uncertain craft."

The spokes of the wheel turned, and the Speedy veered away as they came up to the other, when suddenly from the stranger a broadside of cannon burst forth, and the balls went hurtling through the sails and rigging of the merchantman. With this sudden assault several things happened all at once, but they must be told one at a time; and some things that were learned afterward might as well be related now.

The strangers were pirates in a brigantine which they had laid hold of, but which proved to be a very slow sailer. Several craft had escaped them, and in hot anger with their luck they were eager to get a better vessel. So, when the Speedy came in sight, they had hove to like a whaler, hoping that she would run down to them; and then they had fired high to cripple her sailing, so that they could board her. None of the balls struck vitally at the spars or rigging; but one of them cut the foot rope on which Tom was standing, and he found himself suddenly thrown into the sea below.

He was a poor swimmer. Both ships were filled with such an uproar of excitement and shouting that no one heeded him as his ship drove on, leaving him struggling in her wake. When, however, the pirate vessel gathered way and swung slowly round after the Speedy she almost ran over him, and osmebody hove him a rope and hauled him on board.

A few more shots were fired, but it was soon seen to be useless; then Tom was sent to the quarter-deck. The pirate captain who there awaited him was not at all Tom's notion of a free-booter. He was not dressed fantastically, nor did he look like pictures of Blackbeard, but was an ordinary sort of man just now in a very bad humour.

"What are you doing here?" he demanded as Tom came up.

The question was disconcerting, for there seemed no namable thing that would satisfy so abrupt a challenge, and the full story of how he came there appeared too long to offer. So Tom stood silent.

The captain grew furioius. "Why don't you speak? I'll make you speak," and, turning away, he went to the break of the deck, calling out, "Lay after here, some of you," in a way that made Tom look for trouble at once. But there was no alacrity in obeying the call, and before anyone reached the place the captain had come to himself again.

"What ship is that?" he said.

"The Speedy," answered Tom.

"Speedy!" growled the pirate. "Everything is speedy to us. It's dog's luck. Where were you bound?"

"To Calcutta."

"Yes, and with plenty of dollars in the money chest," said the captain, seeming to want to make the most of his disappointment. "Well," he continued, "you're the only one in luck here, and it's mighty lucky for you that we're short-handed for sailormen, or you'd go overboard where you came from. Go forward and turn to. Maybe," he muttered as Tom went, "that he'll bring luck aboard with him."

The notion was fortunate for Tom. The pirate captain was superstitious and hungry for a turn in his fortunes. Tom's coming aboard was queer; they had not taken the Speedy, but they had taken Tom, and it happened to strike the pirate as a sign. Besides in all his frowsy gang of fighters there were few real sailors, and such a man was worth while.

As for turning pirate, Tom had his own reservations; but he thought his conscience would allow him to pull and haul, and he went forward as he had been ordered. At the other end of the ship his reception was much more free and easy. He was plied with questions and soon learned some things about the vessel and the cruise he was now on. The vessel was the San Greve, which had come into the hands of the pirates in some atrocious way, and this was their first cruise in her. She proved to be slow partly from her build, partly from the foul on her bottom.

The crew was full of discontent. Indeed, nothing worse in that line could well be imagined than a crowd of villains, gathered in a ship, with a sense of ill luck upon them, and almost no chance to do anything. A storm even would have been a blessing, but as days passed the weather held fair and the temper of the men grew worse. Now and then a distant sail would be seen, but none could be approached.

There was little discipline on the San Greve. The men acted as if they did not care whether they got into trouble with their officers or not. Even from the standpoint of the forecastle of a pirate, their captain was despicable. Mean and crafty and capable of any falseness, he had gained his place; but it was plain that under the strain of ill success the crew would depose him if they could agree among themselves. Tom certainly had not brought luck on board with him. Yet perhaps it was not strange that the captain suspected him less than he did the others and even looked to him as a possible ally in case of trouble.

So it happended that one day when Tom was at the wheel and no one else was on the quarter-deck the captain approached him in a sneaking sort of way.

"What are they talking about in the fo'castle?" he asked with a sneer, and to Tom's look of surprise he went on. "Eh! You are not one of 'em. I know them. Do they want to get rid of me? Do they blame the ill luck on me?" His anger was rising, and he stopped to control his voice "I know 'em. If they've had enough of me, I've had enough of them. I'll show 'em who's smart. You and I can get along fine. I'll tell you what I'm going to do, and you'll see it will be good to stand by the Old Man thick or thin. We're near a little island where ships of our sort put in for fresh water, and cleaning. I'm going to tell 'em we're going in there. It will give 'em something to think of. We will be there in two days or maybe three Then I'll have my run. Then I'll breathe easy. They'll go ashore. They'll want to,— all except those I want to have on the ship, —and then the San Greve will get away and leave 'em there. D'ye see? They deserve to be marooned, every last man of 'em. You'll be one that stands by the captain and the ship; and you'll let me know how things are in the fo-castle; and you'll say to 'em, 'Wait till we get to the island and get the ship clean before we take charge'."

"Then I'll tell you what we'll do. This ship is no good for this business. She's too slow; and, it's a bad business too. We'll go to Martinique and refit and then to the West Coast of Africa for the slave trade. That's honest, safe business, and there's gold in there too. You'll go second mate, maybe mate. I'll make it good for you, and you'll stand by the captain, thick or thin—eh!"

Fortunately, the mate came stumbling up the steps from the main deck, and there was no more to be said. Before the day was done the captain had announced that they were not far from the island, and that they would run in there. The effect was what he had hoped for. It made a diversion and seemed to offer a chance for unhindered plotting. Two days later they lay at anchor in a charminig tiny bay in a little islet on the windward side of the Antilles. Furthermore, the whole precious scheme of getting rid of his superfluous rascals worked; and the San Greve sailed for Martinique relieved of half of her crew and of her piracy at one stroke. She came to anchor again at some distance from the city of Fort de France.

Here the captain was to make his further arrangements for his slaving voyage, but he was distrustful of every one on board and reluctant to leave his vessel. The mate he knew was villainous, and Tom, who was now second mate, he suspected of being still a decent man with some conscience. So he warned each privately against the other, and especially charged the first officer by no means to let Tom leave the ship alive. Then he had the cook throw pieces of pork overboard till the water was alive with sharks, and called Tom to look at them. "Better not fall overboard," he said.

Tom could see nothing but to wait, hoping that something might happen to give him a chance. It was not far from shore. He meditated slipping over the side in the night and swimming away; the still, dark water did not terrify him. Sometimes he would almost determine to try it; and then as he looked slowly, out of the black abyss, would come a gleam of light, and a phosphorescence, swaying as a great fish sways, would pass the ship to sink again in the depths or fade in the distance, and he would turn back sick from the rail.

No one was allowed on any account to come on board, except two men, who were carpenters. They were a necessity for changing the ship's hold for her new purpose. But they were closely watched, and it was the captain's design to keep them till he was ready to sail. Tom tried to appear unconcerned, but he was almost in despair. Then one day a feeling of desperation seized him. To be carried on that horrible voyage was worse than death; and in that mood he saw what he would do.

The captain himself, the carpenters and part of the men were in the hold, hastening the work along with pounding and much noise. Watching his chance, Tom picked up an axe and, quietly slipping away, gained the deck.

The San Greve now had three boats, one having been left at the islet. The long boat, which was on chocks on the main deck, could not be very quickly moved. A quarter boat hung at the davits, and the captain's boat was in the water alongside, for he had just come from a trip ashore.

Tom went quickly to the quarter boat, and, swinging his axe with a great blow, he drove its head through the bottom of the boat. Jerking it out he rushed for the side where the captain's boat lay. With the axe swinging in both his hands no man cared to stand in his way; and when it came down again its edge crossed the painter of the floating boat, and in an instant more he was in her and pulling furiously away.

In the hold the blows were not noticed. On deck the men were running here and there and crawling down the hatchway; it seemed a long time before the captain appeared. Then there was delay over the boat that Tom had made useless for pursuit, and by the time they began to shoot at him, he was at a pretty safe disance. Indeed, the whole thing had worked so well that Tom afterward came to regard it not as a desperate chance but as a perfectly easy and simple thing to do.

When he reached shore he looked back to see what was being done. The reason was plain. Tom would report her as a pirate, and piratical character was too plain to bear investigation.

"Heaven pity those carpenters!" Tom exclaimed. "What evil thing will she do next?" What the San Greve did do, he never knew. His own case was hard enough still. He sold his boat for his immediate needs; then after a while he made his way to Jamaica, later to Halifax, and finally, partly by small coasting craft and partly afoot, he got home.

Then one day the Speedy herself came once more into Salem harbour. Jim Stiles, who was out fishing in his dory, boarded her. He shook hands with the captain; there was an instant's pause.

"Ye needn't be afraid, captain, to ask, 'How's the folks?'" he said, knowing how things go in a sailor's mind as he comes home after a long absence. "But you're coming in half-mast," and he glanced at the flag that hung mournfully halfway up the halyards in token that of those who had sailed not all had lived to come back. "Who is it?"

"Tom Scanlan," answered the captain.

"Oh!" said Jim with a kind of catch in his voice. "Is that all you've lost?"

"Yes," answered the captain somberly, "and it is enough. He was a good man."

"Where'd you lose him?"

"Overboard; getting down toward the Line. No need of it either. But I can't tell you about it now. He's gone. It will be hard to tell his folks."

Jim suddenly sat down on the square top of a bitt as if his feelings overcame him, and then he unrestrainedly broke out in laughter to the captain's surprise and indignation.

"Haul up your flag," said Jim. "Haul her up as high as ye can get it. Tom's got home ahead of ye. Ye'll meet him up to the wharf!"

SALT

SOME of the world's ancient highways were made by caravans carrying salt. The favourite hunting grounds of the pioneers were near the "licks" where deer and other wild animals made converging paths through the forests to places where salt could be found. Arabian and other Oriental peoples attached a peculiar sacredness to the use of salt; it was neither food no drink, but as a much desired flavour, the craving for which was the result of a physical need, it was to be tasted as the pledge of brotherhood. To eat of another's salt was to establish a lifelong friendship

Salt is a preservative. As something opposed to corruption and decay it had a place in the sacrifices of many lands. "Every sacrifice shall be salted with salt."

More than once Jesus referred to salt in significant language. When He spoke of his disciples as the salt of the earth, He used an expression too fine to be lost out of human speech. Now and then we hear some man or woman of unusual character spoken of as "the salt of the earth." No one needs to have that allusion explained, But when Jesus said to his disciples, "Have salt in yourselves." that was a little different. For salt, in the use man makes of it, is something applied from without.

The command is worth thinking about. It has to do with that quality which scientific people speak of as "resident force." As applied to character, it means possessing within oneself the qualities which give permanence and preservation.

Too many people are dependent on other people for their entertainment, their opinions. No one can shut his life wholly away from others, and no one wants to do it, but it is lamentable that so many people have almost no resources of their own. The person who cannot be happy for an hour with no companionship but his own mind or memory and the enjoyment of what is about him is a very poor and dependent person An important part of anyone's training should be the providing of such resources as shall make one self-reliant and able to face life with courage and hope.

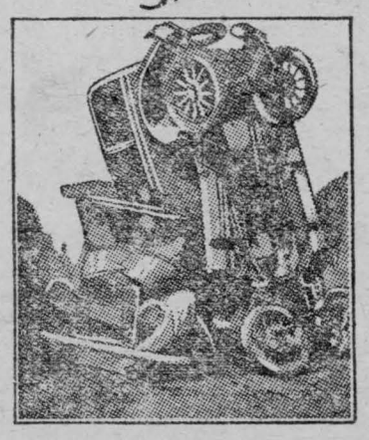
AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE

DRIVE in SAFETY



with an Automobile Insurance Policy to protect you against the hazards of Fire, Theft, Collision, Property Damage and Public Liability.

Every Automobile Owner in Ontario should know about the new Financial Responsibility Law effective since September 1st. The new law makes necessary the abi lity to pay for damage.

In its general application, it requires that the motorist responsible for damage to person or property of others MUST PAY either personally or through insurance OR BE BARRED FROM THE ROAD.

The sensible thing to do is to carry Automobile Liability and Property Damage Insurance. It is better to have this insurance and not need it, than to need it and not have it.

THE MILLIONAIRE

I ONLY have one pair of pants,
While Jones has more than fifty;
Suppose I had two pairs of pants?
Would I be dressed more nifty?
But if I had two pairs of pants,
I'd have no place to wear them;
I'd have to find some pantsless chap,
And with my brother share them.

I only have one lonely vest
And that's both worn and seedy;
Suppose I had another vest,
Thank God, I'm not that needy.
But if I owned that other vest,
I'd worry where I'd place it,
Until I found some vestless chap,
Then round his shirt I'd lace it.

I only have one old sack coat,
Style wouldn't call it snappy.
Suppose I had two old sack coats,
Would I be doubly happy?
But if I owned two old sack coats,
Like rich folks I would grumble;
I'd have to find some coatless chap
To keep my spirit humble.

I only have one old gray cap,
But friend was never truer;
Suppose I had two old gray caps,
Would skies smile any bluer?
But if I had two old gray caps,
I could not rest a minute,
Until I found a capless chap,
And pushed his head right in it.

I only have this suit of clothes,
I'll grant that not too many;
Some dav I know I'll meet a chap,
Who isn't wearing any;
Then I'm dead sure my only clothes,
Will not be mine much longer;
And I must walk like Adam did,
When moral bonds were stronger.

United Ladies' Aid Have Colourful Tea

A general invitation to an Orange Tea by a committee of the Ladies' Aid of Chesterville United might possibly have stirred thoughts of the "Glorious Twelfth," but the name was in keeping with the decorations rathan in commemoration of any event Saturday afternoon when Mrs. C. W. Casselman's home was a bower of beauty with the predominating colour orange, which was also carried to the brand of tea served. Mrs. Lyle Marcellus and Mrs. Miles Merkley were in charge of the tea tables, Mrs. J. Helmer and Mrs. Chas. Munro looked after the home-cooking table, while Mrs. Newman received the guests and Mrs. Sim Bogart took charge of the finances. The attendance was large and the amount realized most satisfactory.

IN MEMORIAM

Carruthers—In fond and loving memory of our dear daughter, Mrs. Frank Carruthers, who departed this life March 10th, 1926.
Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear;
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thought to reach.
Sweet to remember her who once was here,
And who, though absent, is just as dear.
—Parents.

IN MEMORIAM

Boyd—In loving memory of a devoted husband and father, William E. Boyd, who passed away March 12th, 1926.
"Though the years pass by, the memory of one we loved remains fresh in our hearts."
Mrs. Marjory J. Boyd, Brinston,
Perley S. Boyd, Chesterville.

IN MEMORIAM

Meldrum—In loving memory of my husband, William J. Meldrum, who departed this life March 12th, 1929.
A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
God in His wisdom has recalled
The boon His love had given,
And though the body slumbers here
The soul is safe in Heaven.
Dear is the grave where my husband is laid,
Flowers may wither, leaves fade and die,
Some may forget you, but never will I.
Sadly missed by Wife and Family.
