United Church W.M.S. Holds 33rd Annual Meeting

The thirty-third Annual Meeting of the Dundas-Grenville Presbyterial of the Woman's Missionary Society of the United Church was held in Merrickville United Church Thursday April 30.

Mrs. J. P. Milne, Mountain, presided throughout the meeting, theme of which was "Strengthen Your Stakes and Lengthen Your Cords". The Worship Services were conducted at each session by Mrs. E. H. Gray, Merrickville and Mrs. W. B. Corkum Kemptville respectively Words of welcome wer egraciously expressed by Mrs. Gray and the business period was conducted by Mrs. Milne.

Mrs. T. Corachan, Mrs. Fee and Mrs. E. Fennell were named as a courtesy committee.

Annual reports indicating a successful year were presented and the year's work was dedicated by Mrs. Hugh Adams.

The allocation for 1959 was announced by Mrs. James Anderson the amount being the same as last year, $14,500. Literature flashes were presented by Mrs. Ken Henderson, literature secretary during morning and afternoon sessions. Greetings were extended from Dundas Grenville Presbytery by Dr. E. H. Gray; from Montreal-Ottawa Conference Branch by the President, Mrs. H. VanAllen, Iroquois; and from Presbytery Woman's Association by Mrs. Earle Comstock, Cardinal.

Askit "Concerning Our Allocation" was given by Mrs. Jas. Anderson and Mrs. C. E. Freake. Mrs. Wm. Johansen conducted a most impressive "In Memoriam" service, with Mrs. Arthur Johnson rendering a beautiful solo. Luncheon was served by the ladies of Merrickville United Church

Mrs. F. M. Cass challenged the members to assist the Rideau Hill Camp committee in securing leadership for the summer camp program. Special mention was made of the United Church Summer School for Women to be held July 6-10, 1959 at La Pointe-aux-Trembles, Que.

Following a musical selection by Merrickville Auxiliary, Miss Cora Smith introduced the guest speaker, Dr. R. S. Collins, Missionary on furlough from Africa, who, in an illustrated address related many interesting experiences of his ministry durples.

OTTAWA REPORTS:

— By Mrs. Jean Casselman —

This week, popular Mike Starr, Ministe rof Labour, won a new round of opplause for his handling of the strike threatened by the C. N. R. firemen on May 1st. After morning, after noon and evening meetings, between the Hon. Mr. Starr and the C.N.R. and Firemen's Union, the Minister wasable to announce that the strike call had been rescinded.

The next day the Prime Minister was able to announce the lifting of United States resrictions on the impor of Canadian oil. He saw this as placing Canada back in her appropriate place as an important and neutral supplier of the North American Market. The further development of the Alberta oilfields depends on markets of course. Many American outlets can be more readily and economically supplied by Western Canada than by Texas. Having these sources readily available is useful to the United States in time of peace, but if war should come would be a most vital necessity. This co-operation from the United States, welcome as it is, did not just happen. Arthur Smith, young Member for Calgary South, is tireless in guarding the interests of Canadian oil. Canadian speakers have mentioned it before to American audiences. We Canadians might learn a valuable lesson here. We should have more confidence, no inferiority complex before the great and powerful U.S.A. If we have a legitimate grievance it must be expressed clearly and loudly. We cannot expect the United States to be thinking first of our interests, but here is a case to prove that we can expect fair play and reasonable treatment if we insist.

Another event of much interest on Parliamen tHill this week was the sale of the Ottawa Journal. Well known as a Conservative newspaper, it states editorially that this will remain unchanged .The new owner, Mr. Vicor Sifton, publisher of the Winnipeg Free Press, is one of a famous newspaper family, admirable for their contribution to Canadian affairs. His father was in the Federal Cabinet and they have lived in Ottawa. They are also well known in the vicinity having long spent theeir summers on the St. Lawrence River at Brockville. There will be n ochang ein policy or editorial staff. Mr. Gratton O'Leary and Mr. I. Norman will remain in control.

After frequent requests from the Opposition, on Thursday, April 30th, the Minister of Defence, the Hon. G. Pearkes, brought down his "White Papeer". In other words, read to Parliament his Department's decisions on defence policy. This was the first "White Paper" produced by the Conservative Government since they came into office in 1957. It showed concern with the threat of missile firing submarines. For the Royal Navy will be built a 22,000 ton tanker, the biggest ship in her historp. The Navy's striking power will thereby be greatly increased. Destroyers will be enabled to stay at seea for much longer periods. If tankers could remain at sea almost indefinitely to replenish destroyers, we might avoid the necessity to guild atomic powered submarines. Since these are frightening ly expensive, at least $50,000,000 for each one, the comparattive cost of tankers at $16,000,000 seems like good business.

Premier Frost has named Thursday, June 11 as Election Day for the Province of Ontario. After several successful terms os premier of governments which even his opponents admit have given good government to this province, Mr. Frost is asking for another mandate from the people.. In our own riding of Grenville-Dundas a candidadte for the Progressive Conservative Party who would be veery hard to defeat in the person of the Hon. F. M. Cass, Minister of Highways.. We have no inkling of Liberal plans to oppose him, nor of plans of the C.C.F., Social Credit or Communist parties.

There are still some merchants in the Shopping Centre, who are careless abou t their responsibilities in making this a showplace for Morrisburg. They put out garbage in loose containers which defiles the Centre and creates an unfavourable impression on tourists and visitors to our area.. Just the slightest bit of cooperation on theeir part would be appreciated.

We would like to join the ranks of those who are extending congratulattions and good wishes to Mr. Ran Wylie, an employee of the Winchester Press who has completed 30 yeears of service with the Winchester Press. A few yeears ago, when the staff of The Press consisted of the late editor Fern Workman, and Mr. Wylie, we receeived an emergency call from Ran Fern was suffering from the mumps, and was confined to his bed.. Ran was in dire straits trying to get The Press to bed, and asked our assistance. Ran and the writer worked all night, and had The Press in the mails on schedule. We hope that this outstanding newspaperman has still another 30 years left, or that failing that, should he retire early, that he has genuine enjoyment and pleasure in his retirement. On the occasion of his 30th anniversary with The Press he was presented with a fly rod, spining reel, and 30 crisp new $1 bills by Mrs. Reg. Workman, wife of the present publisher of The Press. Afterwards, Mrs. Fern Workman, entertained at a luncheon for Mr. and Mrs. Wylie, and members of the staff.

The town of Morrisburg is among those with the lowest number of fires and the lowest loss per fire in the United Counties. We do not always realize how competent is our local Fire Department They are on the job immediately when called, and are an efficient fire-fighting unit.

A small town is where everybody knows what everybody else is doing, and they all buy weekly paper to see how much the editor dares to print.

The appeal for funds for he Salvation Army is now in progress. These people dedicate their lives and their time to helping others. They do not ask if the drunks who come to their door are confirmed alcoholics. They do not ask if the unmarried mothers-to-be are victims of someones savage lust, or of their own folly. They do not ask what is your religion, racial origin, or color. They ask only if you need help. Whatever the circumstances the Army is alway ready to help. It behooves all of us who may be in a more fortunate position at this ime o contributet generously to the appeal of the Army for funds. During he depression of the early thirties, many lawyers, brokers, proffessional men in all ranks were regular attendants in the breadlines. Should another major depression strike, you could be too. The Sally Ann saw them through, helped them out of the rut and heped to rehabilitate them into a more rewarding way of life. Even though you have wasted YOUR life, you can still get a thrill out of helping some one else out. Get on the gravy train and help the Army. If desired donations will be ackowledged in the Morrisburg Leader. In any event, subscribtions are deductible for income tax purposes.

It has been suggested that since Saturday, June 27th will be such a gala day in Morrisburg, graced by a visit from Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth, and since many thousands of people from the outlying area will be presumably in town that week end, that the committee in charge of arrangements could do worse than arrange for an open Saturday night in the old tradition for local stores, and that the evening could be climaxed by a spectacular fireworks display. We too often los esight of the value of these spontaneous demonstrations, and he advertising value that accrues therefrom. We profess that we want to put Morrisburg on the map. Let us quit the platitudinous professing and get on with the job.

ANNE HIRST
Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: My sweetheart was ordered overseas last fall, and wanted us to get married before he left. We bought the ring, and made arrangements with our pastor. Then he called up and said to forget it —he couldn't get enough time off.

"Just two weeks ago I had a letter from abroad, and he wants to break our engagement! (His letters had become more scarce but I didn't worry). I told his family, and they wouldn't believe it. Because my parents had been helping us so generously with our plans, I can't bear them to know this. I wrote him at once, asking if there was another girl. He replied 'No' — but what could I do if there were?

"So it sounds like there is somebody else.

"I simply can't let him go, Anne Hirst, I love him too much. I haven't looked at another man since we got engaged. I would do anything to get him back, but if I admit we're through everybody will make fun of me. Yet should I give him up?

BROKEN-HEARTED"

HE GAVE YOU UP

* I am afraid you must face * the cruel truth: It is not a * question of giving up the * young man, it is he who has * broken the engagement. Tell * your parents and your pastor * immediately; they will be * shocked, but not at you, at * him. They will help you * through.

* Why admit to friends that * you've been jilted? Simply * say you have changed your * mind and would rather not * talk about it.

* Whether there is another * girl involved or not, there is * no getting the lad back. He * had made up his mind. Now * call on your self-respect, and * hold your head high. Look up * boys you used to know and * date them; whether you want * to or not, it will soothe your * hurt feelings and restore your * self-confidence.

* I am sorry. I know how im- * possible it seems to change * your plans for the future you * hoped to spend with him. But * your attitude now will show * what you are, a girl of char- * acter who shows the rest of * her world how a lady behaves * under stress.

"DOES HE LOVE ME?"

"Dear Anne Hirst: I have only one problem: Does the boy I love care for me or not? I am 18 and he is 22, and I want with all my heart to marry him — but he has not asked me. One night he admitted he was the 'nearest to marriage' he'd ever been, but I've heard other boys say things like that and not mean a thing.

"He only sees me once a week, because he goes to night school regularly. His father died last year, and he has a mother and sister to look after. He is bashful but he's the settled type, too. If he is too shy to ask me, how can I let him know how I love him? I don't want to embarrass him — but this suspense is getting me down. (I know this letter is not fit to be printed, but do let me hear something from you.)

GLADYS"

* You cannot know whether * the boy loves you until he * says so. He may care, but * with his responsibilities he * cannot think of marriage for * quite a while, I expect, and * he hesitates to commit him- * self. The surest way to em- * barrass him would be to show * your affection. No matter how * shy a man is, he wants to take * the initiative and he would * resent such a declaration; it * would put him on the spot * and that, of course, you would * shrink from doing.

* Time is your ally. Try to be * patient. Whether the idea ap- * peals or not, I urge you not * to forsake your other friends * but accept dates that are of- * ferred. It will keep you bet- * ter balanced emotionally, and * make you a more interesting * companion to this lad as well.

If your heart is breaking, keep it to yourself. Go through the motions of living, and before long they will have some meaning again. A letter to Anne Hirst can bring you comfort and courage. Address her at Box 1, 123 Eighteenth St., New Toronto, Ont.

Blasting Caps Can Be Dangerous

Few places are more dangerous playgrounds for children than construction sites. That's the advice of police and fire department representatives who have taken time out to visit schools to promote safe play habits.

Children can pick up a handful of trouble at building project sites. Take blasting caps for instance. Blasting caps are essential tools in much construction work but when mishandled by children, who could mistake them for firecrackers or empty rifle cartridges, these innocent-looking cylinders can cause serious injuries.

Officials advise children to stay away from places where building is going on — an organized playground has much safer fun to offer. However, if a stray blasting cap should be found, children are told to keep "hands off".

There are two main types of blasting caps: non-electric for use with safety fuse, and those set off electrically.

The type for use with safety fuse is about 1½ inches long and about the thickness of a pencil. It has one open end and is made of aluminum.

Electric blasting cap shells are made of either copper or aluminum and may vary from one to five inches in length. They have two colored wires attached.

Open flame, shock, friction, undue heat or rough handling can cause detonation of these caps. The police or some other authority who can dispose of the blasting cap safely should be notified immediately one is found.

Modern Etiquette
by Roberta Lee

Q. When someone whom you have just met says, "I am so glad to have met you," isn't a smile in acknowledgement sufficient?

A. No; this would seem to have a condescending air about it. It is much better to accompany the smile with a "thank you."

Q. When a man is in the elevator of an office building, and a woman acquaintance enters, should he remove his hat?

A. He should lift his hat in greeting, but etiquette does not require that he remove his hat in a business elevator.

Q. Does a person really have to give a reason for declining an invitation?

A. This would seem much better than an abrupt "no." If one were merely to say, "No, I can't come," it would indicate a lack of appreciation of the invitation, and even an unwillingness to continue the friendship.

IT'S NOTHIN', DAD — From the looks of things, Clifford Edwards is far more concerned about his 3-year-old daughter's two-storey fall than she is. Two black eyes and a bandaged head aren't enough to prevent little Kathleen from smiling cheerfully. She fell from the window of her home.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM
by Gwendoline P. Clarke

If you are not interested in dogs you hadn't better bother to read my column today. If you are then you will at least tolerate it. You see, one night last week we had unexpected callers — the people from whom we bought our Welsh Corgi—Taffy. And I am sure Taffy knew them —he nearly went wild with excitement. Personally I don't believe a dog ever forgets people he has known for any length of time. Mrs. T. knelt on the floor and watched Taffy as he ran from one of the other. "Isn't he beautiful!" she exclaimed, "and so exactly like his father!" We couldn't help being amused — it always strikes us as funny the attitude dog breeders take towards the dogs they have raised. We like our Taffy but there was sheer adoration in Mrs. T's eyes as she watched him. We know other dog breeders who act the same way. Mrs. M. who raises German Shepherds; Phyllis F. and her Irish setters—all of them prize-winning show dogs. Mrs. T. thought our Taffy should be shown too. Well, he may have all the necessary qualifications but I told her showing him is the last thing I would ever want to do. I just couldn't be bothered. But I told her if she wanted to take on the job it was all right with me. So that's the way we left it. In the meantime Taffy is leading a normal dog's life. He is having a wonderful time now the snow has gone, just chasing around in his pen, trying to get at the cat who teases him by staying on the outside of the fence. He is getting more intelligent all the time. Inside our back door six steps go down to the basement and six steps go up to the kitchen.Taffy always waits to see which way we want him to go— and that depends upon whether he is clean or dirty — that, too, depends on the weather.

Isnt this a grand time for hockey fans? Who would have thought a couple of months ago that the Maple Leafs would climb out of the cellar and make the play-offs? So far they haven't done too well against Montreal — as I write the score is 2-0 in the finals. But you never know — the Leafs might come through yet. It is going to be a wonderfully thrilling series anyway no matter which team you and I hope will win. But for sheer excitement I thought the last game between Toronto and Boston was really tops. Both Partner and I love to watch hockey — I have even been arranging my social activities so as not to conflict with hockey nights. Even so I manage to work in the annual meeting at the W.I., a quilting at the W.A. and a few hours at the Homemaker's Show in Toronto. If you want any special information about anything connected with home building or home furnishings it is a good place to go, otherwise it is pretty much the same one year to another.

Of course the Federal budget was another highlight last week. Naturally no one likes the increase in taxation but I guess most people realize that we can't have social security and the services we demand without paying for them. We expect our township taxes will also be higher as we are expecting water mains to be laid in the not too distant future. Surveying has already been done.

According to present indications this is going to be a year of great activity. Tree-cutting is already in progress at Ginger Farm to make room for the cloverleaf. Our lovely trees . . . it is almost heartbreaking to think of them being levelled to the ground. In all the years we were on the farm Partner would never cut down a living tree, no matter how badly we needed firewood. The trees were also protected when hydro wires were first strung along the road. At that time hydro poles were placed well inside our front field instead of on the road allowance so as not to disturb the trees. Now, at last, they have all been sacrificed. The same thing is happening in many places along the Queen E. in preparation for widening the highway, and also along the Dundas.

One thing around here has surprised us very much. We thought when Avro folded up many houses would be for sale and the owners be forced to take a loss. Also that the houses would be hard to sell. Well, there are houses on the market all right but they are selling like hot cakes. Houses that have been for sale for some time have now been sold. Two houses near us had been listed only two weeks when they were sold. We can't understand it but there it is. Well, we have a dog kennel that Taffy won't use maybe we can make a deal on that! Any offers?

Our newest grandson was here today . . . a month old and he was actually smiling. His name by the way is "Cedric Davidson" — the second name is after his maternal grandmother's family. Cedric has gained two pounds in weight already. He is really a lovely baby.

The scene in the film was a tense one, and the audience sat enthralled. Suddenly the hero slapped the heroine in the face

In the silence that followed, a young voice piped up: "Why doesn't she hit back like you do, Mummy?"

Costly Penalty For Cheap Crime

A meal, a few drinks, a wander round the town, then return to camp. That was the innocent intention of three young British soldiers on leave in Kure, Japan, in January, 1954, at the end of the Korean war. But they lost control, got drunk on rum in a dive, became aggressive, and were flung out by two leering Japs.

Inflamed by the liquor and the need to be revenged on someone for the rough handling, they saw a prostitute, and, after arguing the matter, decided to attack and rob her. As she tried to dart off they jumped on her.

Signalman Graham Nicholls found a broken brick in his hand and crashed it down on her head. She dropped in a huddle, moaning, then began shrieking, "M.P.! M.P.! Thieves!" He grabbed money from her bag and the three made off. The other two were William Dreslin, from Dublin, and William McKeraghan, from Glasgow.

It was a senseless crime for a paltry 800 yen—$2.00. And it had grave results. For the Japs now had the right to try and punish British servicemen for crimes committed outside their bases.

Interrogation in barracks focussed on the three men as suspects. Blood-stained trousers were found under Nicholls's bed. He pleaded that he had cut himself in a fall some time previously, and the cut had healed. But there was evidence enough to justify handling the men over to the Japanese police.

Gordon Thomas and Ronald Hutchinson tell the whole dramatic story in "Turn By The Window." The trio were taken, handcuffed, to police H.Q., raked separately with questions in the hope that they would incriminate each other.

"Each one was framed to blacken my case further," Nicholls says. "Wasn't I responsible for attacks on other women in Kure? Hadn't I arranged to stay in Japan to profit out of the local populace? Over and over again the same questions were thrust at me, slowly clogging my mind and making it diffcult to think clearly."

He was even taken from prison to hospital to confront the woman lying in bed, bandaged, looking deathly, with two old people—evidently her parents—sitting by. The old couple began shouting at him, all three screeched at him, "Why you do it, soldier?" she asked at last. And Nicholls could say nothing.

Under pressure of this kind the three decided to plead guilty after appearing before the Chief Procurator, who acted as prosecutor, magistrate and coroner, and allowed for no doubt as to their guilt.

Eventually they were tried by three judges—so forbidding that Nicholls christened them Lofty, Flint-face and Ugly. There was no jury, but they were granted a defence counsel to plead mitigation and sue for leniency.

Nicholls was stunned when, as ringleader, he got a five-year sentence and had to give up his military uniform for a black one. He was now an outcast from the Army, which could do nothing for him.

In Kobe jail he went on hunger-strike against the starvation rations and suffered hardships. Later, in Yokosuka prison, he took part in a mass revolt against the guards, aimed at redressing grievances. His final release came from a parole board. His story makes absorbing reading.

Stopped Short By The Press

There is nothing so commonly used for wrapping articles as a piece of newspaper, and who would think of trying to identify one copy when millions are printed?

Last summer an old man was found dead in Cornwall; he had been battered with a stone wrapped in newspaper. The newspaper was one of the national dailies, and the police made inquiries at the newspaper office because an issue would contain information which might be valuable. The Ruxton case was a classic example.

Dr. Buck Ruxton, who lived at Lancaster, had many quarrels with his wife, and after September 14th, 1935, she disappeared with her maid.

Ruxton said they had gone off on holiday. Later the dismembered remains of parts of two women were found in a ravine near Moffat in Scotland. Some of the remains were wrapped in newspaper, and one of the newspapers was dated September 15, 1935.

The police made inquiries and found that only a limited number of this particular edition had been printed, and it had only been circulated in Lancaster.

"You mean to say— just 3-a-day may send backache away!"

Sounds good! Logical, too! You see the normal job of the kidneys is to remove excess wastes and acids —so often the cause of backache—from the system. Dodd's Kidney Pills stimulate the kidneys in this function and so may bring you that welcome relief from backache they have many others. Try just 3-a-day. You can depend on Dodd's—in the blue box with the red band. 64

Walked Miles To Find Short Cut

Old John Stow received his new quill pen as usual this year. Every April for more than 300 years the Lord Mayor of London has placed a new pen in the hand of the quaint marble and alabaster monument to this famous historian of London.

It is in the church of St. Andrew Undershaft, off Leadenhall Street, where Stow was buried following his death on April 5th, 1605. His widow erected it as a memorial to her tailor-husband whose passion for antiquarian research made him the world's great authority on London and its history. It shows him writing a book.

This lean man with small bright eyes and a cheerful countenance walked hundreds of miles — he could never afford a horse — for many years collecting and transcribing ancient documents and delving into London't fascinating past.

But his findings, published in "A Survey of London" in 1598, were, in effect, a "short cut" for people who wanted to learn about London during the reign of Queen Elizabeth I.

Some experts think Stow probably knew Shakespeare or at least passed him often in the streets. He certainly knew Ben Jonson, who relates how one day he and Stow met two crippled beggars. Stow asked them what they would take to accept him as one of their order.

At the age of eighty Stow actually received as an acknowledgement of his public services the royal licence to beg for twelve months. He is said to have "set up basins for alms" in the streets of the London he loved, but the citizens gave him very little and he died in poverty.

Slippery Crooks

There's no end to the tricks devised by crooks. Some are simple tricks like that of the woman shoplifter who sneezed into her handkerchief every time she stole an article. Anyone watching her naturally looked at the hand with the handkerchief —— they didn't see that the other hand was thieving.

Another device for distracting attention led to the escape of a man from police custody recently. As prisoners were filling out to a police van in the station yard one of them collapsed in an apparent faint. While the jailer's attention was distracted, another prisoner escaped.

Some Polish crooks crept into a police station one night, removed all the boots they could find and left the police snoring peacefully. Then they carried out a series of burglaries, but when the alarm was given the police took so long to find the footware that the thieves got away.

An English burglar's method was to strew carpet tacks round the beds of his sleeping victims in case anyone woke up and decided to chase him.

Q. How can I make a substitute for a corkscrew?

A. Two safety pins stuck through a cork in a crosswise position will often prove an excellent substitute for the missing corkscrew.

Toad's Tongue Works Fast

While walking from church on the arm of her husband some months ago, the attractive country bride of a Bulgarian farmer gave a little squeak of alarm when a toad suddenly appeared on the path ahead of them.

He quickly reassured her, "Don't worry, my dear," he said. "It's always a sign of good luck to have a toad cross your path on your wedding day."

Three weeks later the bride remembered that toad when she received a letter telling her that a distant relative living in Rumania had left her a legacy of $3500.

A coincidence? Perhaps. But the bride now firmly believes, like many other people living in Central European countries, that toads are luck bringers.

Another odd belief about toads, still cherished in some parts of the world, is that each carries a jewel in its head. It's said that if you place a toad on a vivid red cloth it will spit up the jewel and at once swallow it again. And it's also believed that if a toad is killed to rob it of the jewel . . . "the treasure dissolves like a pearl in vinegar."

Sir Ray Lankester, the eminent scientist, tried to kill this legend fifty years ago by explaining what Shakespeare meant when he wrote that the "ugly and venomous toad" wears a precious jewel in his head.

"The poet was merely referring to the beautiful eyes of the toad, which are like gems in colour and brilliance," he said. "There is no stone or jewel of any kind in the head of any species of toad — common or rare."

The toad's tongue is one of the marvels of nature. It is long, elastic and fitted at the end with a speck of "glue" which is constantly renewed. One naturalist saw a toad catch 300 flies in half an hour and gnats at the rate of thirty a minute.

Making Boots For Elephant

An Englishman who makes mink shoes for poodles is going to make boots for an elephant which is being taken across the Alps this summer in an attempt to prove the route traveled by Hannibal on his historic march more than 2,000 years ago.

Hannibal took with him a whole herd of elephants to carry the equipment and supplies of the army with which he invaded Gaul. But John Hoyte, a Birmingham engineer, is taking just one, in the reverse direction, from Grenoble, France, over mountain tracks rising to 8,000 feet, south of the Mont Cenis Pass, into Italy.

The big problem, until now, has been where to get leather boots made for the elephant to save his feet on the rough mountain tracks.

Wilfrid Hunter, a Doncaster specialty boot and shoe designer and maker, has the answer. For Mr. Hunter makes animal footwear as a hobby.

He has made boots for greyhounds with split pads and for wear on exercise; soft boots for horses engaged on lawn work; protective leather boots for cows with foot injuries; and waterproof boots for sheep with foot ailments.

Poodles need no longer suffer the indignity of being carried almost everywhere because they have such tender feet that their pads become damaged by hard roads or pavements. Mr. Hunter can fit them with shoes in luxurious mink or smart white kid, with soles which will protect their sensitive feet.

WHAT PRICE ONE EGG?

Ever divide your production costs by the number of eggs produced? It's the price you pay to get one egg. Cut those costs with balanced feeding. Follow the XL (EXCEL) feeding programme — for economical egg production. Better feed means higher egg production — lower costs per dozen eggs. And the lower the costs, the greater your profits!

Cut Your Costs with XL (EXCEL)

Make your layers pay. Your birds need the added essential nutrients in XL (EXCEL) feeds — the proteins, minerals, vitamins. Cut your costs this way: —

Have us mix — 3 bags your grain —
1 Bag XL (EXCEL) 32% Egg Producer Concentrate.
or 4 bags your grain —
1 Bag XL (EXCEL) 35% Laying Concentrate.

Then — watch egg production go up and costs go down!

If you haven't your own grain — feed XL (EXCEL) Laying Mash.

WHAT CAN I DO FOR YOU?

Your bank manager is easy to meet —and a good man to talk things over with. Not just because he knows a lot about banking, but because he can be counted on to apply that knowledge and experience to your particular need.

To him, banking is more than dollars and cents, more than figures in a ledger. To him, banking is the opportunity to work with people—through bank services to help with your problems, your hopes and plans.

That is what he has been trained to do. That is what he likes to do. You'll find he's a good man to know.

Paid Doctor By Shooting Him!

The Fleagle brothers, Jake and Ralph, were hard up. Their farming gamble hadn't paid off, so there was only one solution: back to their old business — robbery with violence.

Jake had already served a term of imprisonment in Oklahoma and narrowly escaped a much longer one in California for train robbery. This time the brothers decided to tackle a bank robbery.

Their target was the National Bank in the small town of Lamar, in Colorado, not far inside the state boundary with Kansas. Although this bank did not rate armed guards, some of the staff carried revolvers, so the Fleagles decided, regretfully, that they would need help for the raid. They enlisted another pair, named Royston and Abshier, as reckless and callous as themselves.

In a stolen car, the bandits drove up outside the tiny bank. Swiftly they strode inside, posted one man at the door as lookout.

"Reach for the sky!" rasped Jake Fleagle. The bank staff were taken completely by surprise. With a few customers they raised their hands.

Grabbing fistfuls of notes and coins, the bandits rammed them into holdalls. About $350,000 was collected within a few minutes.

It was only as the robbers were leaving that the elderly manager, A. N. Parrish, pluckily pulled out a revolver. He shot Royston in the jaw, but was himself shot dead.

His son, a cashier, fell wounded on his father's body. The bandits then seized as hostages another cashier named Lungren and his assistant, Kessinger, and drove off with them towards Kansas.

Law and order in Lamar in 1928 was still represented by a sheriff and his deputies. The sheriff, without waiting to collect a posse, set off with one man in pursuit.

The fugitives' car was heavily laden and he soon began to overtake it. Some of the raiders got out and opened fire with rifles. Before a bullet disabled the sheriff's car he was within revolver range, and in the fusillade, Lungren, the bank cashier, was killed. His body was thrown out on the road as the gang drove away.

They were making for the Fleagles' farm. Royston's shattered jaw urgently needed attention, and late that night the brothers reached the Kansas town of Dighton, rousing Dr. W. W. Wineinger from his bed with a story of a farm hand injured in a tractor accident.

The doctor was presuaded to accompany them in his own car.

He did not return to Dighton. Two days later his body, bound, blindfolded and riddled with buckshot, was found beneath his car in a gulley. The car was spotted by an aircraft taking part in the search.

A note in the doctor's pocket suggested from its wording that the writer was one Charles Clinton, an unfrocked preacher with an insane hatred of medical men. He was known to Ralph Fleagle, who had, in fact, written the note.

While a hue and cry went out after Clinton, a genuine clue turned up. Wineinger's car had been wiped over with an oily rag, but one clear fingerprint on the rear window remained.

A photograph of the print was sent to the F.B.I. at Washington. In the meantime, another discovery linked the murder of Wineinger with the outrage at Lamar. The body of the bandits' second hostage, Kessinger, was found in a deserted shack not far from the gulley into which the doctor's corpse had been thrown.

Kessinger had also been tied up and shot to death — the fourth man to die because the Fleagle brothers were short of money. In the end, the death roll was to be doubled.

The gang, having divided the loot, had dispersed, and it was still not known who they were. There were then no single fingerprint files at Washington, and to search tens of thousands of forms bearing ten fingerprints was a long process.

Charles Clinton, the ex-preacher, was run to earth, and three other wanted men with him, but though witnesses from Lamar confidently identified all four, they had been far away at the time of the raid.

It was chance that speeded up the investigation, in the form of a batch of fingerprints forwarded to the F.B.I. by the police of Stockton in California.

The offical classifying the batch recognized the print of a single finger belonging to one Holden, arrested for the train robbery already mentioned, but released for want of evidence.

His print was identical with the print left on Dr. Wineinger's car. Reference to the index turned up "Holden's" prints, filed in 1916 after receipt from Oklahoma. They were Jake Fleagle's.

There was now a firm starting-point for the inquiry—the Fleagles' farm. Information gained there and from neighbours, put the police of yet another state, Illinois, on the track of Ralph Fleagle.

Two years had gone by since the raid on the bank at Lamar, but Jake Fleagle, the moving spirit in the robbery, remained at large.

The police of every state in the Union were looking for him. Four states had already figured in the case; it was in a fifth, Missouri, that at long last, in October, 1930, he was run down as he was about to board a train at the town of Branston.

He was made of stouter stuff than his accomplices, and he fought it out in a gun battle until he was killed.

DO YOU RECALL? — Reminiscent of the 1920s is this bead-fringed dress, in a green-and-pink satin print. High-waisted green sash forms a trailing back panel. The dress is offered in a spring collection by a London designer.

Murderers Were Caught By Mud

If enough mud is slung, some of it will stick. Even without being flung it will stick — look how it sticks to a criminal!

A murderer denied that he had ever been in the district where the murder was committed. Yet a tiny piece of mud containing rare earth from that very district was found on his shoe — under the blacking.

In another case, all a murderer's movements were traced back by examining the different layers of damp earth caked on his shoes.

A man who was suspected of having broken into a flour mill had his shoes examined. The mud on the soles was in two layers divided by a white material.

It showed clearly that the man had walked over muddy ground, then over a starch deposit, and again over the muddy ground.

But earth clues are not only found on the feet. A man was murdered in the Ruhr, Germany, and the killer got clean away. Months later and more than 100 miles away a man was questioned because he was thought to have known the victim at one time. He denied all knowedge of this, but the police noticed a small scar on his thumb. This was examined and in it were found minute particles of coal and earth which could have come only from the mining district where the murder was committed.

BLINKING GOOD IDEA

After working late in his office, David Camp locked up his desk and made his way to the main doors. Unfortunately they were barred and bolted from the outside. He attempted to 'phone for assistance, but the line was dead.

Remembering his Morse code, he returned to his office and blinked lights on and off in a succession of SOS calls. His distress signal was spotted by a patrolling policeman, who notified the owner of the building. Camp was released some 15 minutes later.

Did you know that you can make a very delicious Chinese-style Chop Suey at home? It's a very good way to use up the last of a roast of pork and if you don't want to serve it right away, you can store the Chop Suey in your home freezer for a few weeks.

Although this recipe calls for canned mushrooms, you may prefer to use the fresh. If so, simmer them along with the other vegetables and the meat instead of adding them later. For 1 can of stems and pieces or sliced mushrooms, substitute ½ pound of fresh mushrooms and use ½ cup of water in place of the mushroom juice to mix with the cornstarch.

CHOP SUEY

3 tablespoons lard or cooking oil
1½ cups diced cooked pork
2 tablespoons Soy Sauce
3 cups sliced celery
1 cup chopped onions
2 cups chicken bouillon or soup stock
1 can (10-ounce) mushrooms (drain, reserving juice)
1 can (20-ounce) bean sprouts, drained
Salt and pepper
1 tablespoon Soy Sauce
2 tablespoons cornstarch

Heat the lard or cooking oil in skillet; add pork and 2 tablespoons Soy Sauce. Brown meat slightly, then add celery, onions and bouillon. Let simmer about 20 minutes. Add mushrooms and bean sprouts and simmer about 5 minutes more. Mix Soy Sauce, cornstarch and the juice off mushrooms. Pour it into the Chop Suey and reheat, stirring until sauce is thick and clear.

Serve with fluffy boiled rice. Or, let cool, package in freezer cartons and freeze.

EGGS DE LUXE

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup grated cheese
2 English style muffins
4 eggs
4 slices Canadian bacon or boiled ham

Blend butter and flour together. Gradually pour in milk and cook until sauce thickens, stirring constantly. Add salt and grated cheese. Cook until cheese melts. Keep warm over hot water. Poach eggs by sliding them into 1 inch of gently boiling water and cooking 3-4 minutes. Split muffins and put on broiler rack with bacon or ham. Broil 3 minutes on one side; turn and broil 2 minutes on other side. Butter muffins; top each with bacon or ham and pour cheese sauce over them. Serves 4.

UPSIDE-DOWN PEACH CAKE

½ cup butter
¾ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ cup milk
4 fresh peaches, peeled and sliced (or canned peaches)
½ cup brown sugar
1 egg well beaten
1½ cups cake flour
½ teaspoon vanilla
½ teaspoon almond flavouring

Melt ¼ cup butter (½ stick) in an 8-inch-square pan. Sprinkle with brown sugar; arrange peach slices in rows; set aside. Cream remaining butter with sugar; add beaten egg and flavourings. Mix well. Sift dry ingredients and add, alternately with milk. Blend well and pour over peaches. Bake at 375 degrees F. for 45 minutes. Turn out at once on serving plate. Serve either warm or cold with whipped cream. Serves 9.

"Children enjoy these spinach pancakes," writes Mrs. Minnie D. Feldman. "They are good served with cream sauce, grated cheese or bacon. Serve them either as the main dish for a meal or as a vegetable."

SPINACH PANCAKES

1 pound cooked spinach drained and chopped
2 soda crackers
1 egg, slightly beaten
Salt and pepper

Combine ingredients and drop by large spoonfuls in hot shortening, being careful not to burn. ("You may use bread or uncooked cereal in place of crackers or you may add chopped onion or bits of fish or meat," says Mrs. Feldman.)

Keep Fit By Skipping

If you want to be fit — skip. That's what the health experts are saying. Skipping is one of the best possible ways of toning up the system if you di it in moderation, they declare.

Children are skipping more and feeling all the better for it; so are adults. Famous men, including stars of the entertainment world, find skipping beneficial.

Down in Sussex there are more regular adult skippers than there are anywhere else in Britain, especially at Easter time. The village of Alfriston, for instance, has an Easter skipping custom that dates back many years.

Good Friday was known a century ago as Long Lines Day. The skipping in Alfriston goes back to the ancient fertility rites when men and women jumped up and down on the ground to make the crops grow again.

Early on Good Friday these enthusiastic Sussex skippers of to-day walk six miles over the downs from Newhaven to Alfriston carrying a long rope. Outside an inn they start skipping in twos and threes.

When somebody drops out through lack of breath, there's always another villager or visitor to take his place.

Fancy skipping 13,265 times in an hour and five minutes! That was the achievement of a Mr. H. George, of Neath, an April 23rd, 1921. Five years later he set out to beat the one and a half hours record of 15,600 set up by another enthusiastic skipper. He did, too, and achieved 17,727.

Why She Had Her Nose Reshaped

Finishing her afternoon shopping a little earlier than usual, the shapely, blue-eyed housewife decided to make a brief call on her equally attractive married sister.

Jill rang the door-bell of the flat and waited. The ring was answered by her sister Joan's stalwart husband, Bill.

"Darling!" he exclaimed happily, "I managed to get away early from the office and I'm going to take you out to dinner and then on to a show."

And, drawing the astonished girl to him, he hugged her before she could utter a word, kissing her ardently several times.

"What on earth's come over you, Bill?" gasped his sister-in-law, putting her smart little navy-blue and white hat straight. "Where's Joan?"

It was Bill's turn to gasp as he realized that he had mistaken his sister-in-law for his wife. The girls were identical twins and often wore similar clothes.

Joan, who had popped down in the elevator of her New York flat to do some shopping in the store below, came in a few minutes later and grinned good-humouredly when she heard of the rapturous greeting her husband had given her sister.

"But don't let it happen again!" she exclaimed in mock reproof.

Marriage is a lottery — and the man who marries a twin sister sometimes has small chance of winning permanent wedded bliss unless he can distinguish his wife from his sister-in-law.

A German twenty-three-year-old blonde named Harblean Kramer, found her husband kissing her twin sister by mistake, Harblean didn't like the idea of her sister enjoying kisses which were intended for her. She decided that one mistake was enough for a lifetime.

The following day she went to a plastic surgeon and asked him to alter the shape of her nose, making it retroussé.

Now there can be no mistaken identity plea from her husband if she ever catches him kissing her sister again!

Two lovely Californian sisters, Lois and Louise, who were identical twins, lived happily as single girls, but when they turned their thoughts to marriage their troubles began.

They had argued that an ideal matrimonial arrangement would be for them to marry good-looking twin brothers who, like themselves, were exact counterparts of each other.

"Let's make the experiment — it can't go wrong," they decided.

When the news got around, nearly fifty bachelor pairs of twins wrote to the sisters, enclosing their photographs and mentioning their hobbies and other interests. The girls eventually chose Ray and Roy, and the double wedding took place secretly to avoid too much publicity.

The experiment started smoothly enough. "Everything was fine till the boys learned to tell us apart," Louise later revealed. "Until then they were kind of embarrassed because neither was ever sure he hadn't whispered words of love into the wrong ear. But when they discovered I weigh two pounds less than Lois and am a quarter of an inch taller, they began to order us around."

There was such a clash of masculine and feminine wills after that that the two marriages were dissolved and the young wives returned to show business.

Some of the parallels apparent between twins are amazing.

Twin Durham brothers, for instance, who developed a talent for painting often worked on the same picture without consulting each other. The result was always what the other had planned.

A Gloucestershire twin left home some time ago. Shortly afterwards his brother met with an accident, falling and scarring his knee. The absent twin, more than 100 miles away, fell at the same time, incurring an exactly similar scar.

So extraordinary is the affinity between some brothers who are identical twins, that doctors have spent years studying such cases.

"There is a peculiar bond in such twinship — something above and beyond the ordinary tie of brotherhood," one expert stated. "There is an indescribable sympathy and understanding between them."

The life history of 3,000 twins was investigated by a university professor. He found that hands and even fingernails, eyelashes, eyebrows, lips and noses, all tended to be identical "to the point of sharing the minutest irregularities."

He quoted the case of twins who got the same answers in written examinations so regularly that they were accused of cheating. Even when they were given a rigorous test their answers were similar and the wording of sentences identical.

Scientists are puzzled by the fact that so few twins ever become famous. Throughout history, said one, there are only a few isolated instances of twins who lived exceptional lives — though you get outstanding examples in sport like the Bedser (cricket) and Rowe (table tennis) twins. He stressed that this has nothing to do with difference in intelligence because usually there is nothing to choose between the intelligence of average twins and that of other people.

An authority on eugenics, Sir Francis Galton, verified and published the story of twin sisters in Edinburgh who wanted to buy "surprise" birthday gifts for their mother. The girls were anxious to outdo each other, so each girl said nothing to the other as to her choice.

Eventually it was found that the twins had bought china tea services of precisely the same pattern, shape and colour, although they had made the purchases in shops miles apart!

ISSUE 19 — 1959

SUCCESSOR? — Ludwig Erhard, 62, above, might well succeed West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, who will soon step out. Erhard is at present economics minister and vice chancellor. Adenauer, 83, is almost certain to be elected to the less politically sensitive post of president in September.
