Our Column

A clear sighted person is the one who can see his own faults first.

A kindly act toward a needy neighbor is often better than a long prayer in a neighboring church.

A town is as good as its citizens, and as bad as its citizens allow it to be. You're a citizen. Think this over.

If one's good deeds were magnified as one's evil deeds are, what a lot of saints there would be in the world after all

A good deal of money has been going to stock brokers, and the victims are now keeping company with their stock brokers in our penitentiaries.

Monday and Tuesday were slippery days on road and walk, and there were many who went down on a slippery path much against their wish.

The muskrat season opened on Saturday and will continue until April 21. The law for the protection of these fur-bearing aninals is very strict and in addition to there being only a comparatively short open season this year, penalties are provided in the law for any person convicted of breaking or destroying the house, burrow or push-up of a muskrat.

Broke His Wrist

Mr. Russell Kinkaid is carrying his arm in a sling, the result of a tumble while playing hockey on Monday night in a high school contest. His wrist is fractured and he will not be able to use his arm for several weeks.

Bridge At Cornwall

Mr. A. N. Smith, M. P. for Stormont, has introduced in the House of Commons, a bill to incorporate the Cornwall Bridge Company with power to build a bridge across the St Lawrence in all Canadian Territory, at St. Regis. Its southern terminal will be but 500 yards from the American border, and close to a main highway.

Bank Robbers Caught

Two young men, aged 20 and 21 years, held up a bank at Eastview, Ottawa, on Monday morning and got away with over $7600 in cash. Only the teller was in the bank at the time, and the money was taken at the point of a revolver. Yesterday morning the two young men were arrested, and all but about $700 of the money recovered. They were both residents of the city, and one young man, Charlebois, was engaged to be married to a young lady in the city. A sad ending to a silly adventure.

Egg-Grading Station to Be Established Here.

There was not as large an attendance at the public meeting called by the Cloverdale Farmers' Club, held in the town hall on Monday afternoon, as was expected. But the meeting was representative, and the result satisfactory. The small attendance was no doubt due to the very unfavorable weather and also to the funeral held the same afternoon. The outside representatives present were:

J. C. Longchaller, of the Egg and Poultry Dept of the United Farmer's Co-operative Co., Toronto.

Mr. Buker, Eastern representative of the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Mr. C. J. MacDonald, of the U. F. Co-operative of Montreal.

The meeting was presided over by Mr. T. Stobo, Secy-Treas. of the Cloverdale Club, who explained that the purpose of the meeting was to establish an Egg grading station at Winchester

Mr. Longchaller, of Toronto, was the first speaker. He said the Co-operative Co. of Toronto is leading in this business. In the past twenty years the production of eggs had increased immensly. Previous to 1923, eggs were bought and sold on a straight basis. In 1923 a law was passed compelling the grading of eggs, and as a result the consumption of eggs increased one hundred per cent. To preserve and increase this gain, we must produce the best quality of eggs and market them in the best possible condition. It is for this purpose the Co-operative Co. is putting stations where best suited and keep them open all week, and the local producer will receive the same prices as outside markets less transportation, etc., which amounts to about 2 cts. per dozen. Cracked eggs are a source of heavy loss, and might be eliminated by better packing. Surplus eggs are stored until eggs are scarcer, thus stabilizing the market. He pointed out how to go about organization and stated that the surplus earnings are divided among the patrons, dividends from 3c to 5c over prevailing prices.

The returns to the Pool last year was 29c and 32c, or 3½c more than the prevailing price. For every 7c spent there was 10½ cents received, or 75% interest. The Company runs the pool only when there is a chance of getting better prices, which has been from April to June each year. They were endeavoring to get the farmers a fair price for their eggs all the year round, and the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa was helping at this work.

Mr. Buker said there was no argument against grading stations. Conditions have changed in trade, and Co-operatives are the safest and best plan. It cuts down expenses and overhead. Have something to sell, have enough of it, and be willing to sell was his advise. Farming is a business and requires the best salesmanship. There are just two ways of holding people together, said Mr. Buker, one is there religion and the other by signing the dotted line, and agreeing to work in co-operation. A buying Company must be assured of a steady supply.

In a discussion which followed it was pointed out that there should be at least fifty cases a week shipped to make it pay. A pool was sure to work to the advantage of the producers. Eggs were only imported where the local market could not be supplied with home products. There are not enough eggs produced for home consumption. The local prices are dominated largely by the United States.

Many other questions of interest were discussed and many points brought out that were very helpful.

It was finally decided to go ahead with the establishing of a station at Winchester, without making a canvas, and the station is to be ready April 1st. The following were appointed as an advisory committee,: Mrs. H. Stoodley, Mr. T. Stobo, Mr. J. Gibson, Mr. Haldane Cummings. Mrs. J. Cook and Mr Andrew Fawcett.

Lost Valuable Horse

Mr. James Brown, who lives about 3 miles west of Winchester, lost a valuable here on Tuesday morning. Owing to the sleet storm the road was very slippery, Mr. Brown was on his way to Inkerman Station with milk, and when in front of Floyd Riddell's place the horse fell, braking a hind leg. The animal had to be shot. The horse was valued at over $100

Dick Flies Home

The hum of an aeroplane attracted attention late Saturday afternoon last, and a big plane was seen to manoeuvre about the town and finally make a graceful landing in a field just east of the town. It was a moth plane and the pilot was Dick Preston. He is connected with some aeroplane Company of Toronto, and was flying to Montreal to have the plane overhauled in shops there, and he travelled back in another plane. Of course his mother, sister and his brothers, as well as his many other warm friends, were glad to see Dick and to wish him every success in his hazardous occupation. Unfortunately the plane was a one-seated one and Dick could not ask his friends to take a short trip with him.

Derby—Durant

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the Wesleyan Methodist Parsonage at Ottawa on Wednesday, March 19th, 1930, at 3 o'clock, when Emma Mary Durant, only daughter of Mrs. Lillian Shaver of Winchester, and Barton B. Derby, eldest son of Mr. Burnett Derby and the late Mrs Derby of Mountain, were united in holy bonds of matrimony by Rev. W. E. Hamilton of Ottawa.

The bride, who was attended by her cousin, Miss Mabel Deeks, looked charming in a gown of quimper blue crepe back satin with hat and shoes to match. Mr. Oliver Derby, cousin of the groom, acted as groomsman.

Mr. and Mrs. Derby left immediately after the ceremony on the Montreal train for points east. On their return they will reside at the home of the groom.

Johnston and Lee Won

The curling rink has been the scene of many close and exciting contests during the past few months, but the most interesting and closely contested game of the season was played last night between the two expert skips, H. L. Lee and Lorne Kinkaid. It was a battle royal and at the end of 12 ends the score was a tie, neither team having won more than two points at any end. It was a challenge game for the Club pins, and every player was keyed up to the winning point. Fourteen ends had to be played and Mr Lee won out by the narrow margin of two points. The other game was for the Tip-Top Tailors' Cup, donated by their local agent, Mr. A. E. Goodfellow, and Wm. Johnston and W. J. Cass were the skips. This game was also a hard fought one, and Mr. Johnston won out by a margin of three points. The games did not conclude until midnight, after which refreshments were served. The beautiful silver cup was presented to Mr. Johnston and his rink by Rev. Mr. Davies, who complimented them on their good sportsmanship and fine playing.

There were other speakers and the feeling of good-fellowship and sportsmanship was evident all through. Rev. Mr. Davies, the Sec.-Treas., reported that the finances were in good condition and that the Club would come out this year with a balance on the right side. Following are the rinks who played last night.

For Cup—Rev. Waddell, Herb Helmer, B. L. Carr, W. Johnston, Skip 14; and Dr. Meredith, J. C. Empey, J. L. Dixon, W. J. Cass. Skip, 10.

For Pins—W Moffatt, J. E. Singleton, D H Weir, H. L. Lee, Skip, and Rowat Kennedy, L. Mill, J. Gibson, L. Kincade, Skip.

LOCAL AND GENERAL

Earl Balfour, noted English Statesman, died on Tuesday night, aged 81 years.

Mrs. Chambers, wife of F. R. Chambers, Clerk of the town of Morrisburg, died on Saturday last, after a lengthy illness.

Dr. J. W. Robertson, who has often visited Winchester in connection with the interest of Agriculture and the Red Cross movement, died at his home in Ottawa, yesterday, aged 73 years.

Word was received at Winchester this morning of the death at Smiths Falls of Charles Drinkwater, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Drinkwater of Winchester, where Charles was well known in his boyhood days.

Mr. and Mrs. Sandy Hitsman tendered a birthday party, on Tuesday night, in honor of their son William and his friend, Gerald Helmer. The evening was very pleasantly spent in music, games, etc., after which a very dainty lunch was served. There were about twenty friends present and all report a very enjoyable time.

The Township of Oxford lost one of its oldest and most respected citizens last week when death claimed the life of William John Stewart after a brief illness. The late Mr. Stewart was born in the Township of Mountain 82 years ago where he remained until his marriage, after which he moved to the Township of Oxford where he resided until his demise.

Mr. C A. Winters, superintendant of Fairknowe Home, Brockville, is at present in Scotland and will return shortly bringing with him a party of 45 boys from the Orphan Homes of Scotland at Bridge of Weir. These boys will be distributed to farm homes throughout the Province. Full particulars may be obtained by writing direct to Fairknowe Home, Brockville, Ont., or from Robert Revie of Winchester, Ont.

Rev. Dr. Service, Medical Missionary in China, and son of the late Rev. Wm. Service, well known in this section as a Methodist minister, died suddenly after an operation at Kiatung, China last week. Besides his wife (formerly Miss Robina Morgan of Aultsville), Dr. Service is survived by three daughters, Mrs. James E. Graham, Margaret and Frances, and by one son, Charles.

The Presbytery of Brockville met in Cardinal last week for their regular quarterly meeting. The moderator of the presbytery, Rev. J. Burkholder of Morrisburg, presided. The reports showed that for all purposes during the year, $61,569 was raised, and $11,447 of this amount went to missions and benevolent purposes. Rev. Norman A. MacLeod, Ph. D., and Rev. Donald MacOdrum, B. A., of Brockville, with the elders from the congregation of Winchester and Westport were appointed as commissions to the general assembly.

Youth and Age Join In Birthday Celebration

Monday was what the present generation would call a 'Red Letter" day at the Rennick home on Caleb Street, because youth and age joined in celebrating a birthday event. On Monday Mr. Robert Rennick had passed the three score and ten mark, but with a vigor, vitality and enthusiasm that is the result of a well lived, clean life, Mr. Rennick is but a boy in spirit. On the same day his granddaughter, Betty Melvin, celebrated her 12th birthday, and a very happy pair they were. Mr. Rennick received several messages from absent members of his family, congratulations and best wishes. He also received a birthday gift brought here by air route, when his son-in law Dick Preston, landed on Saturday last. Mr. Rennick has a happy and bright disposition, and his many friends wish both him and Betty many happy returns of their birthdays.

The Late William Coughler

The death occurred Sunday morning, March 9th, at his home at Nation Valley, in the person of William Coughler. He was born in Williamsburg in 1853 and came to Nation Valley 39 years ago where he spent the rest of his days. The late William Coughler was in his 78th year and was a member of the Lutheran Church.

He leaves to mourn his loss, his widow, formerly Agnes Beckstead, and is survived by five sons, William of Spencerville; Peter of Mountain Station; Orlan of Winchester, and Albert and Orvil at home; and four daughters, Mrs. Geo. Droppo of Quebec; Mrs. Bertha Fling and Mrs. Mervin Robinson of Nation Valley, and Priscilla at home; also seventeen grandchildren, one brother, Isiah of Winchester Springs; two sisters, Mrs. Samuel Froats and Miss Nancy Coughler of Finch.

The floral tributes was a Pillow from the Family.

The funeral service was held in the late home on Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock, and an impressive service was conducted by Rev. J. A. Waddell, during which Mrs. Willie Harper sang, "Saved by Grace." Interment was made at Maple Ridge Cemetery.

Ireland and the Irish

St. Patrick's night was duly observed by the young people of the United Church on a most interesting session which was held in the Sunday School on Monday evening. In the absent of the President, Mr. Mack Singleton had charge of the session, and at the conclusion of the devotional exercises Mr. H. G. Graham, convenor of the Literary Department, gave the message on "Ireland and the Irish" During the address he paid due tribute to Ireland's patron saint and set forth the humorous as well as the more serious aspects of Irish life. He rehearsed the ray years of Saint Patrick, pointing out that his birth place was at Dunbarton Scotland but at the early age of sixteen was taken captive to Ireland. Finally St. Patrick entered priesthood and wherever he went great blessings attended his mission. Mr. Graham outlined briefly the legend of the driving of the frogs and snakes from the Emerald Isle. He said the Irishman was ubiquitous and had distinguished himself in every field of action. In business, in military affairs, in political, social, literary and religious fields, he had made a distinct and worthwhile contribution to the world. He gave the names of great men and women in support of this contention.

A couple of Irish songs were sung by all present and one of the hymns was by Mrs. Cecil Alexander an Irish hymn writer. The evening was a most enjoyable one, and a hearty expression of appreciation was tendered Mr. Graham for his pleasing exposition of "Ireland and the Irish." It was decided to hold a social evening on Monday, March 31st.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. Wm. McDonald is spending some time with Mr. and Mrs. G. Baldwin, Cass Bridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon L. Flora and daughter Ann, of Ottawa, spent Sunday with the former's mother, Mrs. E. Flora.

Mrs. Joseph Barrigar and Mrs. Geo. Earle were guests of the latter's daughter, Mrs. Harold Droppo of Bethune on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Roughton, Kingston, and Bill Agnew, student at Queen's, spent Sunday in town, guests of the latter's mother, Mrs. J. H. Ross.

Mr. Johnston Morrow, who has been at the head office of the Royal Bank at Montreal, has been transferred to the branch of the Royal Bank at Stittsville, Ont., as Manager. Stittsville is within easy motoring distance of Winchester, and let us hope that Johnston may be a familiar figure on our Bowling Green this summer.

Have Rented Premises

Acting on instructions, Mr. Stobo on Tuesday rented the front half of the A. Sweet Store house on St. Lawrrnce street, to be used by the Farmers Co-operation Co. as Egg Grading Station. This station, it is expected, will be ready for business about the 1st of April. In the meantime Mr. Sweet is putting the building in order and Mr. Stobo is organizing his forces to carry on.

Late Mrs. G. W. Johnston

The unexpected death of Mrs. Rovilla Cummings Johnston of Winchester, who was convalescing after a seige of bronchitis and weakness of heart, occurred shortly after midnight on Friday, March 15, 1930. Mrs. Johnston was in her 71st year, having been born on Dec. 27, 1930, at North Nation Mills, Quebec.

Mrs. Johnston came to Winchester at the age of fifteen, and first resided where Mrs. Bolton now makes her home. Since coming to Winchester, she has been a constant attendant, member and worker in the Baptist Church.

A faithful, loving, devoted, wife and mother, Mrs. Johnston will be greatly missed by her husband. Mr. G. Watson Johnston, after an unbroken companionship of forty-six years; by her daughters, Mrs. E. J. Christie of Winchester, and Mrs. Bush of Hallville, her son, Mr. Wilfred Johnston of Williamsburg; and her brother, Mr. A. W. Cummings of Cumberland, Ontario.

The funeral was conducted in the Baptist Church. Rev. Mr. Turner, and Rev. Mr. Waddell graciously and sympathetically assisted the pastor, Mr. Ostrom, who chose for his text "To die is gain" Phil. 1:21. That beautiful hymn "God will take care of you" was very feelingly sung by Mr. Ostrom, by special request.

The interment was made at the Maple Ridge Cemetery.

The pall-bearers were, Messrs H. L. Hughes, C. B. Timmins, J. E. Lanoue, H. S. Carkner, Hugh McMaster and Albert McIntosh.

The floral tributes were:

Broken Circle—The Family

Sprays—Mr. and Mrs. David Barkley, Brockville; Mr. and Mrs. Gormely, Morrisburg; Dr. and Mrs. A. A. Smith, Cornwall; The Drinkwater Family, Smiths Fall; Miss B. Brown and Mrs. S. F. Filoon, Columet, Que.

Cut Flowers—Dr and Mrs. McKendry, Mrs. Lucy Summers, Mr. and Mrs. Albert McIntosh.

Ormond

On Monday 17th, a party was held in the house of Mr. P. McDonald, under the direction of the Rev. H. O. Lloyd. It was a gathering for the choir of the Ormond Baptist Church and to commemorate St Patrick's Day. A total of 50 were present. The evening was a great success to whom we owe thanks to the hostess, Mrs. McDonald, and Mr. Lloyd. The guests having arrived, a game of "Hunt the ring" was started in one room, "Spinning the plate" in another, and the telling of ghost storie in a third. The game of the evening was "Forfeits" introduced by John Burns and we were all very much amused in the redeeming penalties brought forward by him. Miss Stewart gave a very good selection on the piano. It was discovered that it was Tom Pratt's twenty-first birthday so he was suitably initated in a pail of water. These amusements, with many others, were kept up until 11 p. m. when an excellent supper was served. The evening closed with "Auld Lang Syne" "Goodbye Ladies" and the hearty appreciation of all.

This week has proved very unsatisfactory for those operating sugar bushes, and as yet very little has been taken off.

Mr and Mrs. Harrison McIntosh expect to leave for Main, Sask., on Thursday.

A record attendance at choir practice last Sunday night resulted in twenty-two being present.

Sunday afternoon was the scene of many skaters who gathered together in one of Mr. J. H. Cumming's field, hockey enthusiasts brought their sticks.

The New Durant—"6-14"

THE new Durant 6-14 has such striking APPEARANCE and is so apparently a COMFORTABLE car that it only requires a test of its PERFORMANCE for one to fully realize its true VALUE.

Admiration for its appearance is accounted for by its attractive colors and general design . . . . a low-built car with long, flowing lines and spear-point decorative theme throughout. Large doors, wide seats, deep cushions and a surplus of interior roominess immediately suggest a new standard of riding comfort.

The merits of the new motor are best appreciated when the 6-14 is in actual road performance. After you have seen this new car, ask your dealer to give you a demonstration in order that you may judge its new riding and driving qualities for yourself.

Ninth Installment

SYNOPSIS

Luke Maddison, wealthy banker, marries Margaret Leferre, who leaves him immediately after the ceremony, after he has transferred all of his money to her. She refuses to let him have any of it, to pay immediate obligations, explaining that she married him to get revenge for the suicide of her brother Rex, who was, she believes, ruined by Maddison. Maddison, madly in love, knows that Rex was a wastrel who had forged the banker's name to a large check. He goes out into the London streets to think things over and meets a crook named Lewing for whom he had once done a favor. The Joe Connors gang attacks him, killing Lewing and sending Maddison to the hospital, where he is unconscious for two weeks. On recovery he finds he is known there as "Smith." He decides to keep that name, trusting to his newly-grown beard for disguise. The Connors gang apologizes for their mistake in attacking him by providing a room for "Smith." There he meets Jean Gurlay, who asks him to drive her car for her. He does this and finds himself unwillingly involved in a jewel robbery.

Meantime Margaret, believing that Luke has gone to Spain, discovers that she really loves him and returns to his bankers all the property he had given her, retaining only an income for living expenses. She is about to start for Spain to look for Luke when Danton Morell, an old friend of her brother's calls. Morell is astonished to learn that she has given Luke's money back. While Morell is in her apartment Gunner Haynes calls. Haynes is an American crook who has been doing time for a jewel robbery. He tells her that Luke once did him a favor and asks her if she knows Danty Morell.

Luke, learning that the police are looking for a bearded man who drove the car in which the stolen jewels were taken away, shaves off all but his mustache and learns incidentally from his landlady that Danty Morell is well known in the underworld as a confidence man and crook. Before he recovers from his surprise at this discovery, two men burst in on him. One is Verdi, a member of Connors gang, and the other is Curly Smith, recently arrived from Australia. Curly resents Luke's use of the name of Smith. A fight follows in which Luke throws both men out.

Luke finds out by telephone that his old bachelor apartment is still untenanted, and enters it by the fire escape. The police become suspicious and call on Margaret for the key to the flat. She accompanies a detective to the place. Luke hears her voice outside and locks himself in an inner room. The detectives send Margaret away before they burst in the door and seize Luke. They find a gun and a license in his pockets and immediately suspect him of being concerned in the jewel robbery, although they do not recognize him as Maddison. He manages to escape down the fire ladder and jumps into a passing taxi.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"Paddington," he said, and swung himself deftly inside.

Evidently the driver was in some doubt as to whether he should continue. He went about two blocks and then pulled the car up by the side of the curb.

"Where have you come from?" he asked. "I can't take you, guv'nor. You look as if you were running away from somebody."

"I was," said Luke.

It was not a moment to argue. He threw a two-shilling piece into the man's hand, turned down a narrow street conveniently near, and doubling back, reached the main road. Here he found a taxi moving at leisure, and a driver who did not question his bona fides.

The cab drew up at the entrance of Scotland Yard and Luke went swiftly down the declivity and into the gloomy entrance hall. A police officer on duty challenged him and asked his requirements.

"Mr. Bird's been gone for two hours, sir. I think he's gone into the country. Would you like to see anybody else?"

Groaning inwardly, Luke shook his head.

He came out on to the Thames Embankment at one end of the Yard as Gorton and his Flying Squad came in at the other. Turning left, he walked toward Waterloo Bridge. At Charing Cross Underground he made another attempt to get into touch with the Sparrow. There was a chance that the policeman was wrong and that Bird was still in town. He went to the telephone directory, but there were so many Birds that it was impossible to tell which was which. And then he remembered one of his initials—an unusual "Z" (Mr. Bird's middle name was Zachariah). He scanned the list again and going into the telephone booth, gave a number.

At first he thought his luck was in.

"Yes, this is Mr. Bird's house," said a voice, "but he's out of town. Who is it speaking?"

"It is vitally necessary that I should get in touch with him as soon as possible," said Luke urgently. "Can you tell me where I can find him?"

"Who are you?"

"Will you tell him it's Mr. Maddison speaking? I have been to Scotland Yard . . ."

He felt a sudden draught. The door of the telephone booth was ajar; an unconcerned man was standing near by, and apparently had no interest either in him or his conversation. Luke shut the door again, and then, to his annoyance, found that whoever had spoken for Mr. Bird had hung up her receiver. Still, that was a start. He almost felt a sense of relief as he came out on to the cold Embankment and pursued his way toward Waterloo.

He had not gone twenty yards before two men, walking quickly, overtook him and fell in one at each side.

"Hullo, Smith! Connor wants to see you."

He had never seen the man before. His tone was offensive and peremptory.

"And who may Mr. Connor be?" asked Luke coolly. "My name is not Smith, it is Maddison."

"That's all right, sir," said the other more respectfully, "but Mr. Connor does want to see you pretty badly."

"Where is he?" asked Luke after a moment's thought.

"At the top of Savoy Hill—there goes the Squad."

A car flashed past at that moment; the red light disappeared along the Embankment.

"They call 'em busies and they are busy," said the second man bitterly.

They did not go up Savoy Hill but turned aside, passed one entrance of the Savoy Hotel and up a steep and narrow street. They turned again to the right.

"Where is Connor?"

Luke nodded.

"Yes, Coles—that's his servant."

Connors smiled broadly, and there were grins on the faces of the other two men.

"Pi is his servant all right. You seem to know the whole darn shoot! I'm telling you, Smith, that a man that knows Danty and the Lewing gang, and calls at Scotland Yard to see his friend the Sparrow, isn't a healthy fellow to have around the house."

There was a long pause, and then he added:

"That's why you're not going to be around the house."

He looked up at one of the men thoughtfully.

He did not feel the pain of any blow, but dropped limply to the pavement.

"I'll tell you in a minute, when I've got a light for my fag," said the smaller of the two.

He struck a match, and Luke's eyes instinctively went to it. That is all he remembered. He did not feel the pain of any blow, but dropped limply to the pavement under the impact of a rubber cosh.

His head was splitting when he came to his senses. He was lying on the hard floor of a jolting motor car; he discovered afterward it was a tilting Ford wagon that bore innocuously enough the name of a respectable firm of greengrocers. The two men were squatting by his side; one was smoking, and they were carrying on a conversation in a low voice.

". . . That's what Connor told me," said one. "But then, Connor always thought this nut would put up a squeal."

Luke lay motionless; his head was throbbing, but he felt no other discomfort. Apparently, although he could guess there was a bump as big as an egg on his skull, the blow had not drawn blood.

The car stopped. There was the creak of a gate being opened, and then they went forward again, jolting over uneven ground; presently the car stopped and the engine was shut off.

"Are you awake?" asked a voice.

"I'm awake all right," said Luke.

"Then get out of this. Why was you so foolish, Smith?"

A mild question from a man who, only ten minutes before, had stunned him.

He found himself in a room not only furnished but overfurnished.

Connor was sitting at a table shuffling a pack of cards. He looked up as Luke entered the room.

"Did you have to cosh him?" he asked pleasantly.

The man who held Luke's arm grinned.

"He wouldn't be sensible," he said.

"Sit down." Connor pointed to a horsehair sofa against the wall, and Luke was glad to accept the invitation. "Tried to put up a squeal, did you, Smith?"

There was nothing unfriendly in Connor's tone, but he did not cease shuffling the cards as he spoke.

"I thought you were a man when you did that bust—yes, one of my lads saw you get into that flat, and saw you when you bolted. But you're nothing better than a dirty squealer. Went in the Yard and asked for the Sparrow, did you? Is he a pal of yours?"

"I know him," said Luke.

Mr. Connor nodded pleasantly.

"And then you tried to get him on the phone—what was the squeal about? Don't trouble to tell me: I know. I never trusted you from the first, Smith—I don't trust Australians."

Despite his aching head, Luke could not but smile at this libel.

"I shouldn't think they trust you a great deal, do they?" he asked.

"Not much," said Connor.

He cut the pack into two, shuffling them scientifically, and all the time his eyes were on Luke.

"So you know the Sparrow? That's good. I'll bet you know Danty, too."

Luke started.

"Danty Morell?" he asked.

Why had Danty gone out of his mind? Why had he forgotten that Danty was the confidant of his wife—that his one desire, in seeking freedom from the sinister environment in which he found himself, had been to expose that confidence man?

"Know Danty, too!" Connor's voice was almost admiring. "And Pi Coles?"

"When is high tide?"

"Four o'clock."

Connor nodded. Again his dark eyes fell on Luke.

"You a good swimmer?"

"Fair," said Luke coolly.

"We'll give you a little dip tonight," said Connor. "Put him in the cooler, Harry."

Connor carried on a legitimate if unprofitable business. He was a dealer in certain building material, and barges came regularly but at rare intervals to this wharf and were unloaded. He bought and sold scrap iron, cement, any commodity which offered an immediate profit. The wharf could be, and was, hired for a fee.

A few paces from the door of the sitting room they came to another. Luke could not help wondering whether the little chamber into which he was thrust had been used before for the same purpose. It had no windows, but in other respects was curiously like a prison cell. It might have been employed for the storage of coal, but there was nothing in it now, not even a bed or a stool. In the light of the man's electric torch he saw that the walls were of brick and whitewashed. Then the door slammed on him; he heard a bolt shot, and he was left alone with the unpleasant knowledge that it would be high tide in five hours, and that Mr. Connor, in his amiable way, had planned "a dip" for him.

Margaret found several sheets of notepaper on the floor of Luke's room. She picked up one, read it and gasped. The date had been scrawled in on the top line, and it began:

My dear Hulbert, I am in a most terrible—

It was Luke's writing! It was Luke who had been there that night. She found another sheet covered with smudged writing; this also was addressed to the solicitor, but the three scrawled lines were undecipherable. He had deliberately crossed them out. Evidently he had sat down to write a letter to Hulbert, had made two attempts and then had changed his mind.

It was so like Luke: he could never resist the temptation offered by a sheet of note paper—he must write to somebody, he had often told her.

Luke had been here; Luke was the burglar. But why?

She turned to the detective, and it was on the tip of her tongue to make the revelation when he said something that struck speech from her lips.

"He must have been a pretty bad man, that fellow—one of our men recognized him as the chap who was driving a car this afternoon when Taffanny's was robbed. He gave one of the shop assistants a punch in the jaw—"

"But that's impossible!" she said indignantly. "This man—"

"Ah, you've read about it in the papers—a bearded man. That's right, madam, he's taken his beard off this afternoon. Johnson—that's the officer—saw him driving with a girl around the park."

Again speech died on her lips.

"They got her to-night," said the communicative detective. "Mr. Gorton's pretty certain she'll put up a squeal—I mean to say, she'll tell who her companion was. From all accounts he's a man who's been seen about with her a great deal in the past year or two."

ABSENT-MINDED POSTMAN

Some Peculiar Things Happen When Letters Are Posted.

A red pillar-box may not be an elegant thing, but it has the advantage of being unmistakable, says a writer in the Weekly Telegraph. You can't have things like pillar-boxes made too plain to recognize, for even the simple operation of posting a letter is sometimes bungled.

An old postman who used to work in my office was renowned for his absentmindedness. One evening he left his house with the object of posting a letter for his wife and then calling on a friend. He passed all the pillar-boxes, walked up to his friend's front door, pushed his wife's letter through the slit, gave a vigorous double knock and walked back home again!

If a postman can do such things, the general public can hardly be blamed for erring occasionally. Only a few days ago I was approaching a box to clear it just as a man walked up. He carried a postal packet and a newspaper, but he pushed the latter through the slit and walked off with the packet still in his hand.

Perhaps he was the perpetrator of another bungle at the same box where I found one letter unstamped and another, in the same handwriting, bearing two three-halfpenny stamps.

A novel bungle was reported in the press recently, from Scotland. After carefully affixing stamps to her packages at the post office counter a lady posted her change!

Only postmen realize how many different sorts of pillar-boxes there are and each has its peculiarities. On my round there is an old-fashioned "V.R." pillar-box with a movable flap over the slit. It is a cross-grained old thing, always managing to get filled up with awkward packages on dark, wet evenings, and the lock and tablets are always going wrong.

I got a smile out of it the other evening, although it was at somebody's expense. When I reached it, on my round, an indignant flapper awaited me with a letter in her hand and angrily demanded why the box was closed. She had never seen a pillar-box with a flap before and was dumbfounded when I demonstrated that it swung to and fro to admit letters.

Yes, pillar-boxes need to be made as unmistakable as possible, as an experience brought home to me some time ago showed. The people living in a big house set well back from the road had a box fixed on their drive gate to receive their inward letters, so that we postmen should not have to go up the drive and run the gauntlet past the house dogs, which were large and ferocious.

Numbers of people made the mistake of posting their letters in this private box and it had to be removed to a less conspicuous position.

The worst error of this sort occurred in a small town, where the authorities installed a new style of public waste bin. The bin was painted the same color as the pillar-boxes and many letters were posted in it by absentminded members of the public. Eventually, the postal authorities ordered the bin to be removed to avoid further confusion.

KING CHARLES' LETTERS.

Written When a Fugitive From His Throne and People.

Letters written by Charles II. of England, when a fugitive from his throne and people, to Sir George Cateret, at that time Lieutenant-Governor of Jersey, and to the bailiffs and curates of the island, have been discovered in a secret drawer of an old piece of Jersey furniture at a sale conducted on the death of Madame Humbert, a descendant of Caterets on the maternal side. The existence of the letters had been known, but thirty years ago they disappeared and no trace whatever was found until an antique dealer, conducting the sale, found the secret drawer.

One letter is Charles' farewell to Jersey, and an acknowledgment of the islanders' loyalty to the throne. This was written immediately after the battle of Naseby. Another urges the speeding up of supplies which the islanders consented to give him, and was written from his court at Elizabeth Castle, Jersey, while a third gives instructions and permission for forming a company from among those deriving trade in the premier industry of the island at that time—the manufacture of worsted stockings. The letters, under the will made a year ago by Mme. Humbert, are to be handed over to the possession of the Societe Jersey and will find an honored place in the museum.

Not Himself.

An Irish butler, during his master's absence, gave a party below stairs to some friends, and the occasion was a wet one. The butler, indeed, had to be assisted to bed, and while in a somnolent state one humorist blackened his face with boot polish.

In the morning, when the housemaid knocked him up, the butler rose and prepared to shave. When he observed his face in the mirror he shrank back. "Heavens," he muttered, "she's woke the wrong man!"—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Huge Sapphire Is Found.

A sapphire, said to be as large as a teacup and absolutely flawless, has been discovered near Mogok in a mine belonging to some poor Burmese peasants, according to a message from Rangoon.

An expert declares that if the discovery is confirmed, the value of the gem is almost unassessable, and that a millionaire might give anything up to $2,500,000 for it. He added that the stone is the largest found in Burmah since the famous Nah Mauk ruby.

Mammoths' Graveyard Is Sought Along Yukon

Fort Yukon, Alaska.—Seeking antediluvian monsters with hair and skins intact, two scientist-traders have begun a leisurely journey down the frozen Yukon River in the hope of finding the burial place of mammoths in the high bluffs of the stream unapproachable during the season of open water.

East spring frost forces huge bones out of gravel beds along the river. Many valuable finds of ancient ivory were uncovered in the same manner in recent years and marketed by the two traders.

The last well preserved carcass of a mammoth was found near Dawson in 1904 and sold to an Eastern college museum for a large sum. That there are more such remains still intact in the frozen subsoil along the Yukon, where nature may do the excavating, is the opinion of the searchers. They expect to exchange dog sledges for barges early in the spring near the mouth of the Tanana River's confluence with the Yukon.

Famous Hostelry In London Closes

Last Guest Walks Through Door of Hotel Cecil

London.—Thirty-four years ago the stand was filled with carriages and milling throngs. Hundreds of eyes turned toward a magnificent structure. Society called it a "nine days wonder."

The Hotel Cecil was closed.

Yesterday taxicabs, buses and huge trucks rumbled by. Pedestrians hurried to their offices and shops. No one gave the building more than a passing lance. The last guest walked through the doors and stepped into a taxicab.

The HHotel Cecil was closed.

Banquets will be held there until late in April, but the hotel closed today for roomers.

As the famous hostelry passed out of the city's business life, it was recalled that its builder, Jabez Balfour, was not in the jostling crowd that saw it officially opened. He was serving 14 years in prison for fraud charges growing out of his liberator concerns.

The heard-earned pennies of widows along with the savings of workers went into the £8,000,000 that Balfour is said to have squandered into various palaces, of which the Hotel Cecil was to be the site of his offices "as an abiding memorial of my enterprise."

The shareholders soon will receive their first and last payment from the "liberator" concern, when the proceeds from the hotel sale of £1,500,000 to the Shell-Mex concern are distributed.

The Cecil was closed once before to commercial travellers when during the war it was commandered by the Government to house the Air Ministry and the Royal Air Force. It was known then as the Hotel Bolo.

The greatest day the hotel enjoyed, members of the staff say, was when King George ascended the throne. All of its 900 rooms were filled by royal visitors. A detachment of guards patrolled all entrances to guard the millions of dolars worth of jewels brought by the royal visitors.

The Sultan of Perak was there. So amused was he by the opera hat and a cane-umbrella that he took 30 hats and 72 canes back to his country after the ceremony.

A Chinese prince brought his own tea-blenders, hairdressers, cooks and a troupe of entertainers. One of his wrestlers pinned a young London blade to the floor of a theatre after his queue had been pulled.

Then there was the late Major Campbell, retired officer of the Indian army, who insisted on making his own curry in the Cecil cuisine, much to the chargin of M. de Coste, the chef, who felt he had penetrated all the mysteries of that popular dish.

The hotel will be used by the Snell-Mex company to house its many offices.

A Glorious End

Fram, Ship of Polar Explorers, Equipped for Her Last Voyage

Oslo, Norway.—The battered ship Fram, which has carried Norwegian explorers to their conquests during four decades, is being equipped for her last voyage.

The Fram carried Fridjof Nansen toward the North Pole in 1893 and brought him back two years later when he reported having reached latitude 86 degrees 14 minutes, the northernmost point visited by man up to then.

The same Fram, with a few new accoutrements, carried Roald Amundsen south in 1911 and carried him back in triumph as discoverer of the South Pole, to be acclaimed at home.

Now the Fram is to proceed to Trondhjem to take part in an exhibition on the occasion of the 900th anniversary of the introduction of Christianity into Norway. When she returns she will be placed in the Arctic Museum here.

On her final voyage the Fram will be captained by Wisting, the only living man besides Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd who has seen both poles. Wisting was with Amundsen at the South Pole in a dirigible in 1928.

The Fram's crew will be made up of old polar explorers from the Nansen, Amundsen and Sverdrup expeditions.

Minority Problems

Canada, recently, or rather during the past year, has contributed considerably towards the solving of Minority Problems in Europe. Senator Dandurand, her representative on the Council of the League of Nations, has suggested methods of procedure in dealing with the Minorities, which it is hoped will help to iron out some of the difficulties that arise between the minority populations and their sovereign state.

In the Covenant of the League of Nations there is no mention of Minorities and the League as a League was not consulted before this task was assigned to it. This responsibility was laid on it by a series of treaties between the Allied and Associated Powers and various European States.

Most of the States of Continental Europe have always included within their borders a certain number of persons whose race, religion, or language, or all three, differed from that of the State in which they lived. In 1919 the Peace Treaty created new Minority problems throughout Central Europe by its rearrangement of frontiers. Races which had formerly been dominant in a country suddenly found that they belonged to a country now ruled by a race over which they had held power. Bitter feelings followed in many cases and difficult problems as to the best methods of administration arose.

Austria-Hungary was one country seriously affected by the Peace Treaty of Trianon in 1920. For 1024 years the Hungarian nation was contained within boundaries which were destroyed by this Treaty. In 1910 Hungary had an area of about 120,000 square miles with more than 19 million inhabitants; out of this the Treaty of Trianon left her about 35,000 square miles and about eight and one-half million inhabitants. Parts of Hungary were given to Rumania, Czecho-Slovakia, Austria and Jugoslavia (the former Serbia). In Transylvania Roumanians were formerly under Hungarian sovereignty and now Hungarians are under Rumania. Austria's fear and suspicion of certain of the Minorities within her borders was one of the prime causes of the outbreak in 1914. The League's task, therefore, in guaranteeing or attempting to guarantee, fair treatment for all Minorities is neither light nor unimportant.

A typical case is one of the boundary line between Hungary and Czecho-Slovakia which runs through the very centre of the city of Satoraljaujhely, so that a citizen who desires to go from one side of the street to the other must have a passport. Besides these difficulties arising from the course of the boundary line there are the difficulties in connection with religious and linguistic minorities.

Old Hungary had eight universities but under the Treaty of Trianon two of these Universities belong to other countries, Rumania and Czecho-Slovakia. It is natural that feelings between countries who believe that their lands have been unfairly divided, should be strained and it is also natural that an infinite variety of problems to settle should arise. These problems are now brought before the Council of the League of Nations to solve. Several cases, in connection with the problem of German minority SSchools in Upper Silesia were referred to the Permanent Court of International Justice, but the majority of cases are decided zy the Council.

Hungary is only one of many of the countries in Europe, whose boundaries were altered by the Peace Treaties, and who have Minority problems, all perhaps of a slightly different nature, but serious enough to provide considerable ground for thought and work on the part of the Council of the League which endeavors to settle them fairly.

The study of Minorities is an extremely interesting one and any of the readers of this article who wish to pursue the matter further will find literature on the subject at the headquarters office of the League of Nations Society in Canada.

Beaverbrook's Proposal

Sydney Bulletin (Criticizing the "traiff truce" conference, which was barren of results, the Bulletin compares it with the "Empire Crusade.") The idea is some relation to newspaper millionaire Beaverbrook's demented proposition that all the British Dominions shall somehow be tricked into an arrangement for absolute Free Trade within the Empire, so that all the products of the United Kingdom and of some 350,000,000 attached niggers shall enjoy the run of the Australian market, and this Commonwealth shall throw the biggest item of its revenue into the ash-heap, and go broke immediately amid the vituperations of John Bull, its biggest creditor.

Too Much ACID

Many people, two hours after eating, suffer indigestion as they call it. It is usually excess acid. Correct it with an alkali. The best way, the quick, harmless and efficient way, is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained for 50 years the standard with physicians. One spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in stomach acids, and at once. The symptoms disappear in five minutes.

Boy Delivers London Joker In Mail Test

Young Messenger Clings to Human "Letter" in Trip Through City by Omnibus

London—The British Post-office is not infrequently the subject of malignant remarks; but there is one small telegraph boy, at least, who deserves nothing but commendation, for he is proud of his department and a worthy upholder of its good name.

To test the efficiency of the service two men entered into a conspiracy, the outcome of which was that one of them attempted to mail his comrade as a postal packet.

From the first postoffice which they visited the conspirators were directed to another, where such business could be transacted.

Here the unusual "letter" did not unduly excite the phlegmatic officials, who, with complete absence of emotion, handled the matter with quiet efficiency.

Delivery Charge Paid

An official form was filled out with particulars of the addressee, the sender paid over twenty-five cents and the "package" was entrusted to the tender mercies of a small messenger.

The "letter," of course, was supposed to be a complete stranger to London, and also ignorant of any earthly language, so the friends parted with a simple farewell, "Cum Caesar Rhenum transisset," to which the other replied with deep feeling "Amo, Ama, Amat."

The air of finality about these last words so impressed the boy that he grabbed his charge by the arm and steered him into the street.

"Letter" Found Reticent

Here the boy, who was a companionable youth, attempted to make conversation, but the "letter" replied with a non-committal smile. The boy shrugged his shoulders and continued in silence.

The greater part of the journey had to be covered by omnibus. The "letter" attempted to board several vehicles going in the wrong direction, but the youthful servant of the postoffice, with a firm grip on coat sleeve, discouraged these endeavors.

At last they boarded the right conveyance, and after a little difficulty over fare paying the journey proceeded in silence. Then the "letter," as befits a traveller in a strange city, stood up to enjoy the sights of Piccadilly Circus, but the inexorable Mercury forcibly indicated that a sitting position was desirable.

Attempt to Escape Fails

After leaving the omnibus the boy stopped to inquire the way of a taxi-driver and the "letter," grasping his opportunity, disappeared in the crowd of pedestrians

But the lad was not to be thrown off so easily. Doubtless remembering recent postal thefts and losses, he tracked his charge with the relentlessness of a bloodhound, and, having secured once more a firm sleeve-grip, he did not let go until he had made delivery to the addressee in person.

"Omnis Gallia" said the man who had been steered safely across London. "Castra posuit" replied the recipient of this strange consignment. Whereupon the dimunitive representative of the Britih postal service, grasping his signed receipt, departed—another job done and an interesting tale to relate to his friends and relatives.

KEEP THEM HAPPY BY KEEPING THEM WELL

It is natural for children to be happy, active, and full of fun. When they are fretful, fussy and disinclined to play you may be sure something is wrong. Almost invariably that something lies in the digestive tract.

It is to meet the need for an absolutely safe corrective of childhood ailments that Baby's Own Tablets have been designed. They gently regulate the stomach and bowels and thus drive out constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and allay teething pains. Concerning them Mrs. W. E. Forsyth, Dover, N.B., writes: "I would not be without Baby's Own Tablets as I know of nothing to equal them for fretful, fussy babies who are troubled with colds or sour stomach."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Economy and Politics

Perth Western Mail: (The Ccullin Government in Australia has abolished, on the ground of economy, the Development and Migration Commission). In the interests of that very economy which the new Government would hug to itself for justification, the continued functioning of the Commission would have meant much to Australia. . . . Whatever its methods, it stood for a very necessary principle in Australian public life, preventing the dissipation of public funds in political ventures whose only relation to development was their description. Its executive death is a calamity—a calamity of peculiar concern to Western Australia, whose spaces clamour for people and production, but whose political "pull" against Eastern States' interests is weak.

DO YOU SUFFER FROM CONSTIPATION?

Countless remedies are advertised for constipation. Many relieve for the moment but they are habit forming and must be continued. Others contain calomel and dangerous mineral drugs, which remain in the system, settle in the joints and cause aches and pains. Some are harsh purgatives which cramp and gripe and leave a depressed after effect.

Avoid lubricating oils which only grease the intestines and encourage nature's machinery to become lazy.

A purely vegetable laxative such as Carter's Little Liver Pills, gently touches the liver, bile starts to flow, the bowels move gently, the intestines are thoroughly cleansed and constipation poisons pass away. The stomach, liver and bowels are now active and the system enjoys a real tonic effect. All druggists 25c and 75c red pkgs.

WAS RUN DOWN AND VERY WEAK

Too Little Blood the Trouble and Tonic Treatment Restored Health

"I am writing to tell you," says Mrs. James A. Haughn, Bridgewater, N.S., "the great health benefit I received through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had become badly run down and very weak; so much so that I could only with difficulty do my housework. I suffered from headaches, and had very little desire for meals. The trouble affected my nerves, and as a result I did not sleep well at night; and would often awake with a choking sensation, and would have to sit up in bed. I was taking treatment, but it did not help me and I was losing courage, when I saw an advertisement of a case which seemed much like my own, which had been relieved by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I decided to give this medicine a trial and got two boxes. Before these were all gone there was an improvement in my appetite, which seemed a hopeful sign. I procured a further supply of the pills and found a steady improvement in my health. I could eat well, sleep soundly at night, and my housework was no longer a task beyond my strength. From my own experience I would advise weak, run-down people to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial, feeling that what they have done for me, they will just as readily do in other similar cases."

If you will send your name and address to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., a little book, "Building Up the Blood," will be mailed you prepaid. This little book contains many useful health hints.

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Opportunity Of a Lifetime

The opportunity of a lifetime is really what is offered in the post-Congress tours which have been arranged to follow the closing session of the Fourth World's Poultry Congress, to be held in Old London, July 22nd to 30th, this year.

The tours have been arranged, one following the other. The first starts July 31, and takes one through the historic, storied and scenic wonderlands of the British Isles. The Shakespeare country, North Wales, Dublin, with its Rocky Road; the Irish Free State, youngest of the British Dominions; Cork and the lovely Lakes of Killarney; the Giant's Causeway and, of course, the Blarney Stone will be on the route. Crossing again to Scotland, Glasgow and the Burns country is viewed; the Trossachs, Edinburgh, the English Lake Country, and Liverpool provide days full of wonder and amazement. This part of the tour returns to London August 10.

Then comes the visit to the continent which begins with a twenty-four hour stay at Brussels. From Brussels the quaint Holland country is visited, then the party proceed to the lovely Rhine Valley country, passing on the way up that river the historic cities of Coblenz, with its cathedral, and Bonn with its world-famous universities, both places which were held by troops of the Canadian Expeditionary Force immediately following the armistice. Frankfort and Munich are also visited, then the party proceeds to Oberammergau for Sunday, where they will be privileged to view the famous Passion Play, which exemplifies what is regarded by most of us as the greatest event of all history. Returning the party are the guests at a government reception at Munich before proceeding to Switzerland for a four-day stay, which will include a visit to Geneva, seat of the League of Nations. From Switzerland the party return to Paris, where another four days will be spent.

The Paris visit may be cut in half and those desiring to do so will be afforded an opportunity of a two-day tour of the battlefields of the Great War. To most of the party this visit to the battlefields will be the climax of what all will regard as truly the opportunity of a lifetime.

A subscriber writes to ask why some people have electricity in their hair? Of course we are not speaking from personal experience, but it may be because such people have something shocking on their mind.

Electricity in the Home

Everything electric is an ad. you often see,
Let us check up on its uses,
Everyone will soon agree
Curls your hair and washes dishes,
Toasts your bread so brown and nice,
Rings the door bell, sends best wishes
In summer time it makes your ice,
Cools the house and cleans the carpets,
In a trice it starts your car,
Turn a switch and as you listen,
Yes, 'tis music from afar.
In the honeymooner's kitchen
Not a moment need they waste,
The percolator on the table
Has the coffee just to taste,
Eggs are cooked. Just press a button,
Hens lay eggs by day or night,
Oh! what a useful little witch
Merry little Kilowatt!
Every job just needs a switch.

First—"Did you read about the man who swallowed the teaspoon?"

Second—"No, what happened to him?"

First—"He can't stir."

The modern wife doesn't know where her husband goes in the evenings, says a critic. She should try staying at home one evening; she might find him there.

It was necessary for taxation purposes to decide which side of the Canadian and United States border a farm, which an old lady had just purchased, actually lay. Surveyors finally announced that the farm was just on the American side of the border. The old lady smiled with relief. "I'm so glad to know that," she said. "I've heard that winters in Canada are terribly severe."

Cheer up and let the dentists do all the looking down in the mouth.

She's a good mother, confides a friend. She never strikes her children except in self-defense.

Jones—"Well, old man, how are you getting along with your poultry raising? Making Expenses?"

Smith—"Not yet; but my hens have taken to eating their own eggs, so I hope they will soon become self-supporting."

People who can't write their names so anyone can read them, will often complain if they are not spelled right in the newspapers.

Something in a Name

It is said that a young lady by the name of Adeline Moore invented the postscript.

A Peril to Egypt

Cairo Sphinx: (Egypt is menaced by vast swarms of locusts in the Sinai Peninsula). At any moment, a strong east wind may drive the swarms of locusts across the narrow strip of desert and sea, but a still more serious situation may arise if the locusts succeed in breeding in Sinai. Indeed, this is more than probable. The hatching of locust eggs requires a certain amount of moisture in the soil. Normally, Sinai is too dry for this to happen, but this year's rains are without precedent, and there is a possibility that the sand will remain moist till the weather becomes warm enough for the locusts to breed. The situation is a grave one that calls for immediate action, but it is difficult to get the authorities to realize the magnitude of a danger that is at present just at their doors. The swarms can be destroyed now if a fleet of cars is employed in sufficient numbers and equipped with flame guns and trained teams.

Liver—in Vancouver

"Three years ago, while in Vancouver, the house physician at the hotel advised me to use Kruschen Salts for a bad liver and constipation. I can say I never have had anything that gave me almost instant relief before, and I therefore got my chemist to order Kruschen for me—I think no less than 40 or 50 families have used it by my persuasion. Most other remedies on the market leave a bad effect in many ways, but I can safely say I haven't been as well in many years as since I have taken Kruschen."—Mrs. C. R. M., Williamsport, Pa., U.S.A.

Original letter on file for inspection.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at drug and department stores in Canada at 75c. a bottle. A bottle contains enough to last for 4 or 5 months—good health for half-a-cent a day.

FREE TRIAL OFFER

If you have never tried Kruschen—try it now at our expense. We have distributed a great many special "GIANT" packages which make it easy for you to prove our claim for yourself. Ask your druggist for the new "GIANT" 75c. package.
This consists of our regular 75c. bottle together with a separate trial bottle—sufficient for about one week. Open the trial bottle first, put it to the test, and then, if not entirely convinced that Kruschen does everything we claim it to do, the regular bottle is still as good as new. Take it back. Your druggist is authorised to return your 75c. immediately and without question. You have tried Kruschen free, at our expense. What could be fairer? Manufactured by E. A BUSINESS PROPOSITION

Every business man wants to increase his business. The question that troubles most of them is "How" and by what means. In the first place, to increase sales you have to offer something the people want, or think they want; and you must place the goods before them in a way that will help them want your goods. How can this be done? You dress your shop window, and make an attractive display in your store. But the window display is small and seen only by those who pass. The shop display is seen only by those who enter the store. Now if you could place before the eyes, or even the imagination, your fine display of goods and attractive prices, of say, several thousand prospective buyers instead of the few who come in personal contact, you would surely increase your business.

Well, you can, at comparatively small cost, place before the eyes of several thousands of intelligent and money-spending citizens of this community, a display of business ability that will bring you more purchasing customers than all the window displays you ever made. No, this is not a mere statement, but a positive fact.

Let us convince you. A short time ago a business man, who had a large stock of a certain commodity, wanted to realize on it, and he wanted cash. He issued a poster in which he gave his list of goods and prices opposite. He also used the columns of the Press. He put on a sale for one week. He turned to public gaze the goods he had in his storehouse, told the people what they were, and at what price they could be had. Did he realize? Well, the Press is not at liberty to tell all it knows, but this we do know, that the venture was a decided success. The people saw in that list something they wanted and that they could get it at a reasonable price, and they got what they wanted. Both customer and business men were satisfied.

The lesson is plain and simple. Present day competition means increasing alertness. If you want trade you will have to go after it. If you know of a better way than through the medium of your local newspaper, use it. But, and we want this to sink in, no man has yet discovered a better medicine, and this fact any business man will attest.

A survey conducted by Border Cities Chamber of Commerce throws some interesting light, as an exchange remarks, on the motives that bring American tourists into Canada. Contrary to the general idea, it was found that only four per cent were attracted by fishing and other sports. Liquor, also, which some people imagine is a strong magnet, interested only twelve per cent. of the tourists. The largest proportion of tourists—sixty per cent—came simply to see the country and for the sake of the scenery. The ultimate destination of most of the visitors was as follows: Niagara Falls, 29 per cent.; Toronto, 12 per cent.; Border Cities, 8 per cent.; other old Ontario points, 18 per cent.; Northern Ontario, 12 per cent.; Province of Quebec, 19 per cent.; Maritimes, 2 per cent.

What A Dollar is Worth

Did it ever occur to you what a dollar is worth to a commnnity. Now let us ear mark a dollar bill, and hand it over to Bill Lannin

Bill Lannin pays Pete McGregor that dollar for some carpenter work.

Pete goes to Robinson's store and buys bread, cheese, butter and oranges with the same dollar.

Robinson goes to Sweet's store and buys a shovel he requires.

Sweet goes to Errett's meat shop and buys a roast for dinner.

Errett goes to Goodfellow's and buys a new cap

Goodfellow goes to Flora's and buys a quantity of biscuits and canned goods.

Then Harry Flora goes to Smith's Drug Store and buys some patent medicine.

Smith goes to Keyes' and buys a dollars worth of potatoes.

Keyes in turn paid Barnard for fixing his watch.

Barnard buys some groceries he needs at Utman's

Then Jim takes the same dollar and goes to Duncan's and buys some stationery.

Duncan uses the same dollar to help pay his subscription to the Press.

The editor uses the same dollar to help pay the wages of his help. Then the dollar starts on its round again. Place in your imagination all the good that dollar bought, and then remember that it is still in our midst and making another round, and you will get some idea of what it means to do your trading at home.

Now suppose that same dollar had been put in a letter and sent to a city department store. The sender would receive the goods, but the dollar would have been lost to the community.

Do your trading at home—

Misunderstood

Little Betty's grandmother used the old-fashioned method for measuring a yard by stretching the goods at arm's length, holding one end of it up to her nose.

One day Betty came up to her grand mother with a piece of rope. "Smell this, grandma, and see how long it is," was the startling request.

Do You Wish The World Were Better?

Do you wish the world were better?
Let me tell you what to do;
Set a watch upon your actions,
Keep them always straight and true,
Rid your mind of selfish motives,
Let your thought be clean and high
You can made a little Eden
Of the space you occupy.

Do you wish the world were happy?
Then remember day by day
Just to scatter seeds of kindness
As you pass along the way;
For the pleasure of the many
May be ofttime traced to one,
As the hand that plants an acorn
Shelters armies from the sun.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox

The United Church

(Contributed)

Rev. J. A. Waddell gave an interesting talk to the boys ang girls last Sunday morning on hero-worship also on the injurious effects of smoking cigarettes.

Taking Neh. 2:17 for a text he said "These words are full of challenge losing no force through time. The evils of our civilizations may not be of our making, but we should do our best to see that these evils are removed. The work must begin in our own hearts. Communion with God is the great necessity of the church. We need to be touched with a spirit of real sympathy Let us give ourselves to the the task of fighting the evils about us with faith in our task and in our fellowmen and bring in a purer, holier and better day. We have limitless resources. Have we been impressed with a sense of our responsibility?"

The evening subject was the Bible The pastor told of its world-wide circulation of its its beautiful literature, and of its historical nature. He spoke of its great influence on the lives of those who take it as their guide. It is never old nor out of date, and has the largest circulation of any book in the world. The young and old alike were urged to read and ponder its truths.

The choir, under the leaderhip of Miss Helen Smith, sang "I will praise Thee" and "Rejoice the Lord to King."

Women's Institute

Many and varied were the Irish quotations and jokes given in answer to the roll-call on Tuesday afternoon when the Institute met with the President, Mrs. Suffel, in the chair. Discussion took place about ways of raising money. A concert will be held early in April. arrangements for which were left with the Executive. Mrs. J. W. Ault gave a very interesting paper on: "What a Mother owes to herself." First, she owes herself a healthy body and a sound mind. Mothers should be free from financial worry. She should be thrifty. She must get the best out of life. She must not allow herself to become old fashioned. She must be cheertul and find her reward in true happiness and contentment. Mrs. Dukelow followed with an equaly interesting paper on "What a Mother owes to her Community." Mothers must elevate the morals of our community. They should use their right of franchise Mothers should open their homes for the entertainment of the boys and girls of the community. Mrs. Gemeroy was to have giv en a talk on what Mother owes to her home, but was unable to be present.

Mrs. Flora, in a few well chosen words, moved a vote of thanks to the ladies who gave the excellent papers. This was seconded by Mrs. Boves. The singing of God Save the King closed the meeting.

United Church W. M. S.

The regular meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society was held on the afternoon of March 13th, Mrs. T. O. Keyes presiding. Officers and members present 40, visitors 3.

Mrs. Geo. Earle reported 55 visits, ten sick calls, one stranger visited and two blooming plants presented.

Mrs. Crowder, Secretary of Christian Stewardship, responded with an inspiring tract. Mrs. N. W. Beach quoted Mr. Crother on the economic value of Prohibition, with comments by D. L. McLachlin, Sec. of S. S. and E. Mr. L. Mill reporting for supply work said that the box of clothing for infants and children, books, etc., must be ready for shipment in June. Mrs. Preston, treasurer, gave an encouraging report. Mrs. Keyes announced the meeting of Branch for the Montreal and Ottawa Conference would be held in Winchester May 13-14-15.

Mrs. Eagleson, convener of program, introduced Mrs A. Duncan, whose theme was—Miracles then and now. Wonderful as was the healing of the lame man at the gate, beautiful, through the word of Peter and John, it was nothing compared to the transforming grace in the hearts of men. Conversion is God's perpetual miracle. Through the influence of the Holy Spirit, Kagawa, evangelist of Japan, is asking for one million converts and appears to be getting them. Korea is fast emerging from its old superstitions. So great is the number of inquiries after Christ that the workers are unable to meet the situation. Also, tens of thousands, who by their lives to-day, are exemplifying the Sermon on the Mount in India, are cited as still other miracles.

Having made a comprehensive study of chapter 3 in the Study Book, Mrs. David Bruce recited in review the wonderful work of those great heroes of the Faith, who labored for one thousand years in laving the foundation of Christianity throughout Europe; and noted the contribution of womanhood in the building of the Kingdom. The speaker thought the magnitude of the task before the women of to-day an inspiration to renewed effort for the spread of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Mrs. Casselman conducted the questionnaire. A playlet entitled, "Hanging the Sign," presented by Mrs. Eagleson in the leading role, assisted by six ladies of her group representing foreign countries. An impressive presentation of the great need for medical missionaries.

Ormond News

(Too late for last week)

The first of the tapping of trees about here commenced in Mr. Peter McPhail's bush on Monday. 100 buckets were hung and the sap flowed well.

Mr. J. H. Cumming and family, who moved from east of Ormond to the McIntosh farm the beginning of this month, have things fixed up and the house looking very comfortable.

A Standard Bread truck suffered a blowout north of Ormond on Monday and was held up for several hours until relief came from Ottawa. The driver was a guest of William Armstrong for dinner.

Jake Ross was also heard to use expressive language when he stalled his truck outside Mr P. A. McDonald farm. The cause of the disturbance was a stuck starter but nothing could be done until Tom Pratt arrived on the scene with a horse.

Gordie McDonald spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. McDonald. It was his intention to return with his car, but this was made impossible by a heavy snowstorm during the early hours of Sunday morning.

Isaac Howell, employee of Fred McDonald, departs for Regina to-day. We wish him luck and hope that his return will be one following success.

Fell Dead at Hockey Match

A tragic death occurred at the arena, Iroquois, on Friday evening last, when Mr. John W. Suffel, a well known and much respected citizen of Morrisburg, suddenly passed away while watching an exeiting hockey match between Morrisburg and Cardinal.

Mr. Suffel was born 66 years ago at Inkerman, son of the late William Suffel of Inkerman. During his early years Mr. Suffel was employed as a carpenter in his native town but moved to Morrisburg about 21 years ago where he was appointed lock-master. He was a member of the local lodge, A. F. and A. M. and was associated with the United Church. He was well known and respected in both Inkerman and Morrisburg.

Mr Suffel had been troubled for some time with high blood pressure and had been ailing for several months. Despite this ailment however, he has been working throughout the winter as manager of the arena. Surviving are his wife, formerly Miss Seers of Inkerman and one daughter, Mae Suffel, at home.

Following Mr. Suffell's death the body was taken to the residence of the coroner, Dr. Marcellus of Iroquois and later was removed to Morrisburg in Charles Marsh's funeral car. The funeral took place on Monday afternoon and was very largely attended.

Ford

Here Are Facts!

1. Do you know that no car under $2000., outside of Ford, is putting on Houdaille double acting hydraulic shock absorbers as standard equipment?
2. That no car under $1500. except Ford has shatterproof windshield glass as standard equipment?
3. That Ford is the only car under $1500. with three-quarter floating axle.
4. That Ford is the only car under $1500. with torque tube and radius drive construction.
5. That Ford is the only car under $1500. with five ball and roller bearing transmission.
6. That the new Ford has 25 roller and ball bearing in its Chassis
7. Ford is the only car under $1500. with three-quarter irreversible steering system.
8. That Ford is one of few cars built to-day with five-steel spoke wheels as standard equipment.
9. That Ford is the only car under the higher priced cars with the silent six brake, internal, expanding, all enclosed system.
10. That piston pins in motor are machined to 0002 and are of full floating type.
11. That aluminium alloy pistons are balanced to an accuracy of two grams.
12. That when car is travelling at 50 miles per hour, the revolutions per minute of motor are only 2077.

The Pearl Standard

A story condensed from "The World Traveler" by J. George Frederick to show what the Japanese have done.

You have heard of the panic which would occur if alchemists should discover how to make gold. The "gold standard" would totter. Something of this situation occurred with regard to the "pearl standard," after the Japanese learned how to make "cultured" pearls which none but experts could distinguish. But French courts have decided that cultured pearls are entitled to the name pearl, and so the "pearl standard" is even now in process of adjustment.

It is difficult indeed to find somebody with any real pearl to sell! Few have a bank roll big enough to buy even one or two, to say nothing of a "rope" of them. The true, natural pearl comes from the Indian Ocean, the Persian Gulf, Central America, West Indies, Australia, and the Japanese Islands. Of these the Australian pearl fisheries are the important source. In fact, pearl divers from the Indian Ocean are coming to Australia, and nearly all the Japanese in Australia are in the pearl business.

To-day the Japanese are more or less the decisive factors in the pearl industry, both real and "cultured." They are the most daring, persistent, and scientific divers and the most aggressive merchandisers. The little yellow men, recruited from the seafaring stock of the Japanese shores, have a fatalism mixed up in with their science, which makes an ideal pearl fishing combination. At depths no other divers have attempted they are serene and efficient. They go 30 fathoms deep and more; they call 7 to 20 fathoms "shallow water."

Woman claims equal rights with man in Japan as a pearl diver. Before the Jap girl is 15 she knows all about diving, and the pearly merchant often hires her as an expert before she enters her teens! From February to December she, with the Japanese men, dives 25 to 35 times a day, coming up with as many oysters as she can grab before her breath gives out. She remains at a depth of 30 fathoms for two minutes without ill effects. She brings up about 50 oysters per dive, and there is good-natured competition. A girl of 12 from Shima holds the record with 72 oysters—and they had almost turned away for being too young. The diver has no easy task, for the shell lying on the bottom is generally hard to see, as its back is often covered with various kinds of marine growth and may be in marine grass two or three feet high. The pearl fishers consist of a fleet of "luggers," with a two-masted schooner as a mother ship. The oysters are dumped on the decks, and opened by white men specially appointed for the task.

What is a pearl anyway? The healthy parent oyster lays thousands of eggs a year, but they float on the surface of the sea until they hatch. The tiny bivalve, using a greenish fiber-root sticking out of it, clings to anything it can, and feeds on the microscopic vegetable and animal forms in the water. Shifting about with the tides, it finally clings to the seabed with its byssus root until it grows and anchors itself for life—or until a fierce-looking diver grabs it. Oysters have other enemies, however; turtles crack open their shells, fish attack them and worst of all, borers which gradually, like an auger go through the shell and kill—or if they can't kill, perhaps bring into being a pearl. The parasite borer, or often a worm spewed out by a small fish in the neighborhood of the shell, penetrates to the oyster, irritates the very delicate but hardy oyster substance, and a pearl results! It takes years, of course—years of building layer upon layer of "nacre." Strangely enough, these large oysters from the deep sea are not like the delicate bivalve we order in a restaurant—they are coarse in flavor. The gathering of shells under five inches in diameter is illegal. On deck they are opened with a large-handled knife and thrown away when no pearl is found. In 3000 or 4000 shells only one may be found, and then it may not be very valuable.

Before the Christian era the Chinese tried to propogate pearls, and artificial pearls were first made, though not very successfully, in 1680. The Chinese had hit upon the intimate secret of the pearl—that it was the result of an irritant. They introduced bits of wood or mud into the oyster shell, put the oysters in vats for three or four years, and actually achieved pearls. For centuries they carried this on; but the catch to this easy road to high fortune is that the resulting pearls are dull, flat white, the real pearl being lustrous with a very rare luster. Science in modern days has penetrated deeper into this precious secret. The little borer is partly responsible; he bores through the shell; is met by a secretion as a defense, dies, is oxidized, and the pearl remains as a defense. A French writer put it cleverly, "A pearl which milady loves next her delicate skin is the brilliant sarcophagus of a worm."

Here is where the Japs come in with their "cultured" or "nurtured" pearls. They doped it out that a tiny bit of chemically treated mother-of-pearl (the same substance as is on the lining of the shell) introduced into the oyster shell would form the correct nucleus for growing a real pearl. The experiment produced pearls which did have a very fine luster, and the Japs sold them as natural Oriental pearls throughout the world for a considerable time. When the English pearl expert, H. C. Hopkins, together with a staff succeeded in devising a machine which now absolutely determines the difference between true Oriental pearls and the cultured ones. The basis of this power of detection is the fact that the concentric layers of nacre forming the true pearl have a power of reflecting and transmitting light, which is the true distinguishing mark of the gem. The beautiful pearl appearance is due to an optical phenomenon—the interference of rays of light reflected from microscopic corrugations on the surface of the pearl.

Mr. Hopkins says: "The Japanese pearls have the appearance of yellowish lumps of lard, the true pearls remaining perfectly white. I explain this coloring by the presence of the chemical with which the mother-of-pearl nucleus is treated in order to increase the secretion by the oyster. A very simple test is made with a needle provided with a tiny mirror. This being introduced into the hole bored through the pearl the nucleus will at once be apparent if it is a Japanese cultivated pearl.

"Women often ask if it is possible to distinguish upon the wearer's neck, at a distance of two yards, between a collar of Japanese pearls and one of natural pearls. It is impossible thus to tell false pearls from the genuine, just as it is impossible at a glance to tell an original work of art from a copy." Thus science becomes the only true arbiter of the preciousness of stones!

The popularity of pearls has enormously increased in the last ten years, as the imitation or nurtured or artificial pearls have been put upon the market. The long-suppressed desire of women to own pearls was given an opportunity, and to-day strings of "pearls" are sold in great quantity for a couple of dollars—good enough at least to serve as a tribute to the great esteem in which true pearls are held.

Indian Coastal Shipping

Calcutta Englishman: The Indian attack on British shipping has throughout been viewed seriously because it is the spearhead of an attack which, if not smashed, will some day be applied to every form of British industry in India. The attitude of the sponsors of the Coastal Traffic Reservation Bill is typical of the whole-hog Protectionist with whom nationalist or political considerations general triumph at the expense of economics. The Indian Nationalist of the extreme brand has in fact brought to a fine art the philosophy of "Heads I win; Tails you lose." His ideal is to let men with energy, enterprise, initiative have the honor of carrying through the pioneer stages of industry when all the risks have to be faced; when losses outweigh the profits and the profits are small. Once, however, the enterprise is assured and there are no more risks, but the certainty only of large profits, then is the time for the "sons of the soil" to come in; expropriate the foreign capitalist, or at least make the conditions so onerous that it is not worth while his carrying on.

All-Empire Shops

An all-Empire shop, the first of its kind in Britain, was recently opened in Glasgow.

This is one of the ventures of the Empire Marketing Board, which has done so much to encourage the sale of Empire products. The stock is being changed fortnightly, so that the produce of various Dominions and Colonies will be displayed in turn. Cooking demonstrations and the distribution of Empire recipes are part of the shop's programme.

Another feature is the giving away of free samples of various Empire products, further supplies of which can be obtained from local traders.

If the Glasgow shop is a success, other all-Empire shops may be opened elsewhere, one possibly in London, but at the moment of writing nothing definite has been arranged.

Tuberculosis Lurks In Careless Kiss

Too Many Children Exposed to Risk, Says Doctor

PREVENTION NEEDED

The inveterate habit by which some people insist on kissing children is very injurious, and is one of the chief ways of communicating tuberculosis, Dr. J. H. Elliott, president of the Canadian Tuberculosis Association, said Sunday night in addressing the meeting under the auspices of the Social Hygiene Council at Hygeia Hall, Toronto.

The habit prevalent in some countries of removing footwear on entering the house, held considerable wisdom, he said. The child during the first few years of his life was a floor animal and filth carried in on the shoes from the streets was likely to contain germs of disease which might result in his illness. This was one of the most reasonable explanations of the development of colds, and yet mothers wondered how their children caught so many colds when they could not have got the infections from the children with whom they were playing.

Most children became infected with tuberculosis in childhood, Dr. Elliott said. Therefore, it was advisable for children to avoid the sick room or contact with the patient. The disease could not be inherited, Dr. Elliott stressed.

Cattle Precautions

Of the human and bovine tuberculosis, only the human could be communicated to adults, but the bovine bacillus claimed many victims among babies and adults. Consequently, the Dominion Government was insisting that farmers eradicate tuberculosis from their herds. Already, 130,000 infected cattle had been slaughtered, and there had been a marked lessening in the numbers of cattle with the disease.

Although there had been a distinct reduction in the mortality rate among those under 15 and those over 30 years of age, there was little change during the years between them. Many young people felt that after a day's work in the office, it was necessary to indulge in athletic activities, and many more who worked all day long spent their evenings in attending dances, both of which caused overstrain. Any physical or mental excessive strain was conducive to a weakened condition, a lack of resistance and consequent susceptibility to disease.

A cure for tuberculosis could not be effected by either medicine or a change in climate. A sensible, cheerful patient was far more apt to recover than an ill-natured, erratic one, Dr. Elliott stated, and a patient who spent some time at a sanitorium was more likely to have a chance of recovery. The great mistake in the treatment of the disease was that too few people understood the value of rest.

Many Indigent Patients

There was a crying need for accommodation in the province. At the present time there was need for 1,500 sanatorium or public beds. North and east of Toronto there was but one sanatorium, and that in Ottawa. Ontario's 12 sanatoriums, he stated, were not nearly enough. There had been as many as 78 patients in Toronto at one time during the Winter awaiting admittance because of a lack of beds.

Disease would remain, he said, so long as patients had to be cared for in the home. It was impossible for many patients to pay $10.50 weekly for care and of the patients in sanatoriums at present more than 68 per cent. were indigent.

The disease could not be wiped out entirely, but only by preventive measures, he said. It was mistaken economy to withold funds from the health department. Dr. Elliott estimated that the cost of caring for the patients who died from tuberculosis in Toronto in 1928 was $237,000. That sum spent in preventive measures would go very far, he thought.

Needless Pain!
People are often too patient with pain. Suffering when there is no need to suffer. Shopping with a head that throbs. Working though they ache all over.
And Aspirin would bring them immediate relief!
The best time to take Aspirin is the very moment you first feel the pain. Why postpone relief until the pain has reached its height? Why hesitate to take anything so harmless?
Read the proven directions for checking colds, easing a sore throat; relieving headaches and the pains of neuralgia, neuritis, rheumatism, etc.
You can always count on its quick comfort. But if pain is of frequent recurrence see a doctor as to its cause.

EVERY BELL TELEPHONE IS A LONG DISTANCE STATION

Ready Now For Bigger Business

Long Distance telephone facilities were never so complete — so effective, speedy and far-reaching as they are today.

Our 1929 building programme added about 14,000 miles of talking channels to our lines. The standard of service was improved —is steadily improving.

And it costs less than ever before, because on January 1st reduced rates on calls to points 75 to 800 miles distant became effective—the second reduction within a year.

Why not lay your plans now to take advantage of this speedy, dependable, time-saving service?

The Way of Life

By BRUCE BARTON

Your Legs and Your Brain

THIS is one of the greatest tragedies of modern life. Men are forgetting how to walk.

They travel by taxicabs and street cars; they travel by automobile; they project their personalities over a telephone wire.

But they do not walk.

There is a double loss in this.

A loss in health, first. Most of the diseases of modern men originate in the intestines. Formerly men and women walked enough to keep the stomach muscles firm, the intestines healthfully agitated.

Now men and women even more so—sit all day slumped in. Germs settle down inside them gladly; and Death, his work made easy for him, laughs.

There is another loss, equally great. A loss in mental keenness and mental wealth.

Did you ever take a walk in the country with someone who knows really how to walk?

Someone of the type of the naturalist Linnæus, for instance?

Linnæus walked into Oland, and found the lands of the farmers ruined by sand blown from the beaches.

He discovered that the roots of a certain beach grass were long and firm: he taught the farmers to sow that grass along the beach, and so preserved their lands from ruin.

He walked into Thorne, and found that at a certain period in every year the cattle fell sick and died.

It was a curse, the people said—the act of angry spirits.

But Linnæus, examining the pastures, uncovered a noxious weed, and showed the farmers how the work of one laborer for a few days every season would root it out.

In his walks he examined and catalogued 8,000 plants, vegetables, and flowers.

How many plants, vegetables, and flowers do you think you could identify if you were to see them in their native state?

"Few men," said Dr. Johnson, "know how to take a walk."

But those favored few enjoy a glorious and mysterious privilege.

To discover where the violets first bloom in the spring—

To be able to tell directions in the woods, by knowing that large pine trees bear more numerous branches on their southern side—

Or that grass grows on the south side of ant-hills and whortleberries on the north—

There are few pleasures more richly satisfying; none that pay larger dividends in health.

The man who goes into the country once a week is a better citizen than the man who never goes, even though his eyes see nothing more inspiring on his walk than a golf ball.

Flabby legs usually mean flabby brains.

If you would think clearly, speak forcefully, work effectively, get out into the country when you can—and walk.

"EVERYBODY'S SIX"

TODAY'S Chevrolet Six offers two features no other car in the lowest price field can duplicate:— 50-horsepower six-cylinder performance and bodies by Fisher.

▲▲▲ Chevrolet offers six-cylinder performance with low first cost and exceptional economy

It is on these basic points of comparison that the new Chevrolet Six has earned its universal title, "Everybody's Six". At the wheel of your Chevrolet, you can command fast acceleration and breath-taking speed with the smoothness nothing less than a Six can give. Specific engine improvements assure unsurpassed economy. The fully-enclosed, weatherproof four-wheel brakes, and Delco-Lovejoy shock absorbers, front and rear, are typical of the many advancements contributing to finer performance and greater dependability.

In the beauty of its staunch Fisher bodies, the new Chevrolet Six ranks far ahead of its field. Interiors are exceptionally roomy and luxuriously complete in their appointments.

QUEER INVENTIONS.

Freak Inventions That Have Been Patented.

Among freak inventions men have actually gone to the trouble to patent is a torpedo-proof house. This is built on a pivot, and every breeze turns it with its head to the wind. Another freak invention is a "pedal calorifactor," with which one may blow on one's toes as one does on one's fingers to warm them. It is a tube worn under the clothes with a branch leading to each foot and a mouthpiece at the top. Then there is a polisher for false teeth—merely the end of a corn-cob stuck on a stick; a sanitary locket for carrying chewing-gum; a wooden bit for preventing snoring; a noiseless alarm clock that yanks the sleeper's arm instead of ringing; another that starts a mechanism which throws him out of bed; and a machine for counting eggs as they are laid.

Others are a device to be attached to locomotives which, when train robbers attacked them, will squirt steam in their faces; an apparatus for throwing cayenne pepper in the eyes of burglars; a hood which, when placed over a chicken's head, prevents it from seeing upward, and thereby insures its not flying over the fence; goggles for chickens to prevent them from having their eyes pecked out; and an automatic hat-taker-off. This has springs and levers inside the crown of the hat, arranged so that if the wearer should have his hands full when he meets a friend he has but to bend his head forward, when the hat will take itself off with a polite sweep, returning to the head when its wearer moves his head backward.

KING AND PRINCESSES.

Infantas of Spain Are Not Allowed to Drive Auto.

King Alfonso is, of course, an expert driver, and he often tests the courage of the two princesses by his apparently reckless driving, thoroughly enjoying teasing them about this as about all other things, says a writer in Pearson's. Both the Infantas would like to have cars of their own but so far their parents have not granted their wish. Realizing that a car of their own is out of the question, the two girls are, however, always trying to persuade King Alfonso to teach them to drive. "If you are able to drive," he said one day, "I shall have to put extra locks on my garages!"

Speaking of cars, an amusing incident showing how really keen the Infanta Beatrice is on cars, occurred a few years ago. One day the king was called from Madrid to Barcelona, and decided to go by car. The Infanta Beatrice asked to go with him, but the king refused. Soon after the king's departure the infanta was missed in the palace at Madrid and a wild search was made for her. When King Alfonso arrived, dusty after his long drive, he was met with a worried telegram telling him of the disappearance of the Infanta Beatrice. Just as he was about to turn the car round and dash back to Madrid he heard a peal of merry laughter from the back of his big Hispano-Suiza touring car which had been covered by a dust cover — and the tousled head and merry eyes of the missing princess appeared.

Gas-Capturing Work of Plants.

Carbon dioxide, the gas that makes the bubbles in ginger ale and soda water, is the staff of life for green plants, says a Science Service bulletin. They capture it out of the air, where it forms a small percentage of the atmosphere, and by adding water to it turn it into sugar, starch and cellulose. Dr. P. Jaccard of Zurich, Switzerland, and his colleague, R. C. Guting, have measured the fluctuating proportions of this valuable gas in the air in the neighborhood of growing plants.

There is less carbon dioxide in the air surrounding very actively growing plants than there is in the neighborhood of plants that have made their growth. There is less in the warm sunlight than there is in the cool shade. In general, any combination of external factors that encourages intense activity of growth or food making by the plant makes it pull in more carbon dioxide from the surrounding air.

Order of Golden Rose.

One of the rarest orders in the world is that of the Golden Rose, which the Pope has bestowed upon the Queen of Italy. A decoration dating from the twelfth century, and reserved for persons of exalted rank, it comprises a single rose of gold, colored red, and set with pearls and rubies, and is of high intrinsic as well as sentimental value. In pre-Reformation days it was conferred on several British sovereigns — Henry VIII., oddly enough, received it twice —and its most recent recipients have been the Queen of Spain and the Queen of the Belgians.

Ton and a Half Mirror.

A huge mirror which took nearly a year to cool down has been made in the United States for a large reflecting telescope. Weighing more than a ton and a half, it is 60 inches in diameter and 10 inches thick. Discs of glass of this great size are very difficult to get free from defects, and after the molten glass is poured into the mould it has to be kept hot by electric heaters and cooled down over a period of many months.

Python Hatches Eggs.

A python's eggs are about the same size as those of a hen. After laying about a hundred, the female coils herself round them and remains thus until the young are hatched. This takes two months, during which time the snake fasts.

The Star Arcturus.

The star Arcturus, according to astronomers, is more than 100 times as bright as our sun.

Exhibition Hockey

The Russell Rovers, Intermediate Champions for Russell County, played the local Junior Squad at the Arena here on Saturday night. The game resulted in a 6 2 win for Winchester. Bob Hitsman, who was in rare form, netted the puck three times, while Smith scored twice and Cross once. Rombough and Corscadden scored the goals for the visitors.

On Tuesday night the local Junior team journeyed to Spencerville to cross sticks with the Senior team of that village, and came home with a decisive victory tucked under their coats, the score being 9 6 for Winchester. Bob Hitsman was the star again and dented the twine four times for Winchester, while Smith counted twice and Cross, Carkner and Barkley each scored once. The game was wide open and both goalies had plenty to do.

Last night the local team won out over the Vernon Squad 4-1. Scott, Carkner, Smith and Barkley each scored once for Winchester while Steve Stewart got the lone goal for the visitors. Bob. Hitsman was not on the local line-up.

Trees for Schools

Through the thoughtfulness of our local M. L. A., Mr. Geo. H. Challies, the Press has received a booklet issued by the Department of Lands and Forests, entitled "Trees for Schools," and may be secured by sending a request to that Department at Toronto The booklet is well illustrated and full of valuable information as to planting and arranging of trees and shrubs about a country school building. The wonderful transformation made by the well arranged planting of a few trees and shrubs about a school house is clearly shown by the illustrations, and trustees of schools as well as teachers should be in possession of this valuable publication.

The Event of the Season at Inkerman.

The Bachelor's supper and entertainment provided by the men of the United Church of Inkerman, was a success from every viewpoint.

The men did nobly in providing a bountiful supper, the tables were daintly arranged, flowers being provided by one of the boys and roses at that. The men waited upon the tables and washing the dishes as to the manner born, proving that the women of Inkerman and vicinity have their men well trained. An old hand looked after the coffee—it was real coffee and pronounced excellent by the ladies who know. The service was all that could be desired, the boys seeing to it that all were well looked after, especially the ladies, who ponounced the supper one of the best that they had ever attended. In fact some said that it could not be better, and then, to take the joy out of life said, who put on the tablecloths? one happened to have the seam on the wrong side, of course men don't look for seams on a tablecloth, they prefer the food.

Then we had as the speaker for the evening the Rev. T. W Jones of Calvary United Church Montreal, who kept us convulsed with laughter and splendidly entertained as he recounted his trip of last year through the British Isles. The Rev. Mr. Jones is one of the best of our younger ministers and is a brilliant speaker, and for the rest of the evening every one was happy. As he told of the even trip across and the rough voyage back; then the trip of 3600 miles in a little Morris car which cost for four and sometimes six less than a cent a mile, seeing the beauty spots of Ireland, Scotland, Wales and England, showing souvenirs of the places visited. As he told his story one lived over again the old days and became homesick as he recounted experiences here and there. The most delightful part of the trip was the visit to Belfast and the tour around the Armagh coast to old Londonderry with its ruins of walls and castles, reminding one of the siege and the loyalty of the old days, when they fought for religious freedom and liberty. Mr. Jones spoke of the rapid changes that are taking place in these great days, changes hardly believable unless actually seen. how the roads are being widened to cope with the traffic, the main roads leading into London the heart of the empire being wide enough for 20 cars abreast, speed laws eliminated yet perfect order and safety due to the splendid enforcement of law and respect for law in the hearts of the people. He told the story and showed the picture of the Police holding up the traffic of London at the busy corner of Pall Mall to let a duck and 4 ducklings go across the road into Hyde Park, paying a great tribute to the London Police force, the best in the world. The trip to Scotland, Edinboroug with its castle and beautiful streets, Glasgow with its teeming mulitudes of work people, Oxiord with its history of the place where Ridley aud Cranmer were burned, its wonderful colleges, and London with its many places of interest and Westminster Abbey with its never to be forgotten memorials were all touched upon by a master hand and for many it was a matter of keen regret when the speaker hurried on to tell of the new day in the old land and closed his address with the plaque in Westminster Abby to the memory of John and Charles Wesley "The best of all is that God is with us"

One lady was heard to remark "he stopped too soon" and it was a true picture of a perfect evening profitably spent and the men are to congratulated upon their effort.

Mr Jones had over 100 colored slides and provides a real entertaining and profitable evening.
