Minister announces jobsOntario funding for Institute

by Shelley Cumberland
Chieftain Staff Reporter

Last Wednesday was an exciting day in Morrisburg as a provincial cabinet minister made her way to town with some pretty exciting news. Frances Lankin, Minister of Economic Development and Trade told the audience at the Operating Engineer's Institute that the Morrisburg training facility would be the recipient of $600,000 in jobsOntario funding.

Local 793 of the International Union of Operating Engineers (IUOE), Morrisburg plans to renovate the training institute to make the facilities more accessible to people with disabilities. The project is expected to cost $1.2 million dollars, and provide between ten and 35 construction jobs in the community.

Ms. Lankin in her opening address spoke of some pretty exciting news for construction workers across the province. Once prohibited, the workers will have access to materials, etc., in the Province of Quebec as the borders open up to trade in this area.

"It's been 20 years coming," she said proudly.

"I'm glad to be a part of the group that opened up those borders."

As she announced the funding designated for the Morrisburg centre, Ms. Lankin, stated, "The small community projects that we do, really do reflect our commitments."

"Economies are really built in communities; there is more than money involved here!"

The Minister went on to say that the training institute is a fine example of labour working with training initiatives, and that it focuses on raising skill levels in the industry.

The funding she stated, will finance renovations and help the facility to keep modern, and will continue to meet needs for years to come.

"We're committed to putting Ontario back to work!" she stated.

The IUOE became a chartered organization in 1919, and for twelve years has provided training within it's realms. Training is provided in the maintenance and operation of cranes, earthmoving and other similar heavy equipment. The Institute was set up in 1982 as a joint partnership between the Union and the construction industry, with support from the provincial government.

The project will involve converting part of a dormitory to 16 semi-private rooms, and making the entrance to the building accessible to people with disabilities.

The jobsOntario funding of $600,000 is being matched by the Union in cash and "in-kind" contributions.

"jobsOntario Community Action helps communities take that very important first step to promote economic renewal and create jobs," said Ms. Lankin. "It brings members of a community together and turns their resources and knowledge into action. This type of grassroots partnership means local jobs and new capabilities for communities like Morrisburg and Cornwall and thousands of Ontarians."

Attention was drawn to another recent partnership between three levels of government, a program that will see each party contribute toward rebuilding the province's infrastructure.

During the same announcement, Ms. Lankin informed the audience gathered in the training facility that $100,000 was awarded to the St. Lawrence River Institute of Environmental Sciences of Cornwall, a non-profit research and community environmental facility. The St. Lawrence Institute is a partnership involving the City of Cornwall, the United Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, the Mohawk people of Akwesasne and the University of Ottawa. It will sponsor trans-disciplinary research on the clean-up and management of large river ecosystems.

Ms. Lankin has made headway in numerous areas since entering the public service in 1976 as a Corrections Officer. The former Minister of Health was appointed to the post of Minister of Economic Development and Trade in February 1993, by Premier Bob Rae in an attempt to renew the financial economics of the province. Ms. Lankin is also the founder of the Ontario Coalition for Better Child Care.

Councillor slams recreation study for creating false hope for people

by Michael Bailey
Chieftain Staff Reporter

Field of dreams? Or a great white elephant? At Morrisburg Council Monday evening, Councillor Schnurr was adamant in his disapproval of the South Dundas Recreation Council Feasibility Study which has been taking place.

The Councillor told those present that in his opinion the feasibility study, prepared by Sesquaig Incorporated, was in actual fact, "No such thing."

"The Oxford English Dictionary defines feasibility as the quality of being feasible, to wit, being possible or practicable. Unfortunately the document does not address the practicality of a recreation core facility in South Dundas," said Councillor Schnurr.

According to the Councillor the only thing the study does, is tell the people of South Dundas, what they want to hear.

Reading from a prepared statement Councillor Schnurr continued his attack of the document.

He told those present that the study gives the residents of South Dundas a false sense of hope regarding a recreation core facility, and encourages us to ignore our present facilities.

"We run a serious risk of losing currently operating structures and programs if we follow such direction," said Schnurr.

Paraphrasing pages 4 to 8 of the document he mentioned that it says "the existing indoor facilities are not adequate to satisfy the demands for programs and facilities" and that the current facilities "are, in almost all cases, not conducive to the renovation and expansion which would make them suitable for adequate recreation programs."

"These statements are pulled out of thin air; there is no preamble to these statements and absolutely no documentation to support such conclusions," said Schnurr.

He noted that Drama groups, dance classes, musical performances, yoga and fitness classes, are cited as possibilities to utilize space in the facility, but seemed rather sceptical as to whether or not these types of groups would actually flourish in such an environment.

"In fact, aerobics classes have been offered in Morrisburg but have not been well subscribed despite a low cost and easy accessibility. A weight-lifting unit exists already in Morrisburg and in Iroquois and neither of these units is used to any significant degree," said Councillor Schnurr.

Phase II of the project, at an estimated additional cost of $6 to 7 million, would see the creation of an eight to twelve lane bowling alley and four to eight sheets of curling ice.

"Do the consultants know that two bonspiels this year alone were cancelled at the (paid for) three rink curling club because of lack of interest? Do the consultants know how difficult it has been for the bowling alley in Ingleside to succeed financially?" Questioned Schnurr.

According to the Councillor, the only three items listed by the consultants which would probably get plenty of use would be the swimming pool, two ice surfaces and the office space.

"I am sure that a nice set of offices for those involved in organizing recreation in South Dundas would be well used; however as every Canadian knows, bureaucracy never pays for itself, it simply keeps on costing more and more," said the Councillor.

On the question of whether or not we can afford a core recreation facility in South Dundas, here more than any where else in the document, Councillor Schnurr questioned the data provided.

"South Dundas demography is important but appears to have been ignored in this document. We are slightly less than 10,000 people. We are rural. Many of us are older, retired, infirm or on fixed incomes," said Schnurr.

"How many of us are able to make use of a recreation facility as proposed? How many can swim, play basketball, lift weigh-

Chieftain tourism guide coming soon!

With warmer weather becoming more prominent each and every day, more people are heading outdoors for the day. It is the time of year that everyone is in the planning stages for this year's holidays. While planning this year, the many varied activities and events in this area should be taken into consideration. As well, people from outside the community will no doubt be looking forward to taking part in the local festivities throughout the region.

In late-May, The Chieftain will once again publish the Tourist Guide, that highlights attractions, festivals, recreation and services along the Seaway from Upper Canada Village through to Prescott, and north on Highway 31 to Williamsburg and Winchester.

Currently these events are being gathered for listing in the publication. If you or your organization is planning an event this summer call the editorial department at the Chieftain with the details. The publication is expected to hit newsstands in early June.

OPP investigate local break in Morrisburg OPP are investigating an incident that left a Morrisburg couple shaken. During the evening of Friday, May 6, 1994, three unknown persons, wearing disguises and wielding a butcher knife, entered the residence of Lorne and Lois Brown of Morrisburg.

Although the OPP did not originally release the names of the victims, their identities were revealed in newspaper articles that are distributed into this local area. The OPP have confirmed this information to be correct.

Culprits detained the two elderly occupants of the home and searched the residence. During the incident Mr. Brown received a cut from the knife, and was later taken to Winchester District Memorial Hospital where he was treated and released.

Apparently the culprits were looking for a specific item. After the search they fled with an amount of cash.

"We believe this incident to be isolated however we urge all citizens to maintain proper home security methods such as door locks, window locks and even alarm systems if the resident feels the need," said OPP Sgt. Bremmer of the Morrisburg detachment.

There have been rumours circulating, but Sgt. Bremmer commented that, "We don't believe this incident to be targeted toward seniors," and recommended that seniors along with other residents should take property home security measures.

The incident is under investigation and the Morrisburg OPP request that anyone with information should contact this detachment.

Ms. Lankin learns on the job!

With a little expertise offered by Chick Swarbrick of the Operating Engineer's Institute, The Ontario Minister of Economic Development and Trade learned to operate a crane, at the facility last week, while in Morrisburg to announce jobsOntario funding. $3 million expansion planned for Beavers

by Rebecca van Noppen
Chieftain Staff Reporter

After many months of uncertainty, the Beavers Dental Division of Sybron Canada Ltd. has decided to expand its Morrisburg facility.

The 30,000 square foot, three-million dollar project, announced last week, will double the size of the present building and is expected to provide sufficient space for the next 5 to 10 years.

The management at Beavers feels this is a significant vote of confidence in the employees by the owners Sybron International Corporation.

Beavers Vice-President and General Manager Bob Leroux said the new facility will give them more space and room to do things.

"We've been working on this for a couple of years," he said on Monday. "And last week, we got the O.K."

In the fall of 1993, rumors spread throughout the area that Beavers would be leaving Morrisburg after employees were told plans for expansion were put on hold. At the time, financial controller Don

Cardinal to go ahead with 911

by Shelley Cumberland
Chieftain Staff Reporter

The Village of Cardinal is looking at a start-up date of June 1995 for the introduction of a 911 telephone emergency dispatch system. Council all voted in favour of this motion, feeling that this was the time to get in on the venture.

Under New Business, Reeve Larry Dishaw informed the rest of Council at the last regular meeting that the City of Brockville will go ahead with the 911 emergency system, and are asking various municipalities within the Leeds-Grenville region to jump on the bandwagon too.

This 911 item has cropped up at the Council table a few times for discussion over the past few years, and although Council agreed that this system would be beneficial, cost was always a factor.

Reeve Dishaw said that originally it would mean an extra $6.44 per month would be tacked on each telephone bill in Cardinal. During the time frame of earlier discussions, the cost was felt to be very high, and a more local dispatch centre was thought to be the main contributor to the price tag, as well as other initial start-up expenditures.

In joining with the Brockville system, dispatch would be done either through the Ottawa-Carleton Centre or the Sudbury Centre. These are the only dispatch centres that offer bilingual service and the appropriate emergency services would be contacted in the Cardinal vicinity.

Reeve Dishaw said that the cost factor has been reduced to 32 cents for each access line, per month, as opposed to the original $6.44. A further municipal commitment of 18 cents per capita would be required as well, which works out to #3,240 per year.

Bike rodeo rounds up about 40 local children

by Rebecca van Noppen
Chieftain Staff Reporter

Forty children went away with certificates and prizes in hand after completing Matilda Township's first bike-safety rodeo.

They learned bike-safety tips and took some practical experience home with them, after Saturday morning's rodeo at Matilda Hall.

It couldn't have been a nicer day for members of Matilda's recreation committee and local volunteers to help area children with their cycling skills.

The children had to go through seven different stations and collect points, before collecting prizes which included reflectors, mirrors and horns.

The stations consisted of: the bike shop; seeing and being; chaos corner; demon driveway; crazy crossroads; who's there; and rock dodge-thread the needle.

The stations taught children how to stop at the end of their driveways and look both ways, and how to look over their left shoulders for oncoming cars and keep cycling in a straight line, among other things.

The children received four points automatically for going to the first few stations. At other stations, they were judged and given one-try again point, two-could do better points, three-very good points, or four-excellent points.

"There were only a couple of children that had ones and twos and a couple of threes," recreation committee chairperson Cindy Peters said. "For the most part the volunteers were impressed with their skills."

If the children wanted, they could have a second chance at any of the stations to improve their marks. This way they could practise what they were taught.

Peters said this rodeo was a great idea.

"A lot of them (the children) are biking to school and because they are in a rural area there is a lot of traffic and no bike paths," she said. "We thought it would be a good idea for them to learn safety."

"If it saves one child it is worth it."

Matilda's recreation committee was asked to host the rodeo by Dixon's Corners Public School principal Brooke Leightizer. A package from the Canadian Tire Child Protection Foundation came to the school and he decided to look into this safety program.

The package includes a cycle safe booklet, coupons, measuring tape and a video on safe cycling. All the students at Dixon's watched the video on Friday.

"Cindy Peters and I discussed it," Leightizer said. "It (the package) crossed my desk and I took a look at it. I realized we can't have 190 kids to bring their bikes to school for the rodeo, so I invited the recreation committee to get involved."

"We are encouraging safe cycling and use of helmets."

Leightizer said the maximum number of students riding bikes to school is 20.

"It's not a lot compared to the village of Iroquois," he said. "But most children do have bikes, and it (safety) is still an issue in their lives."

Over the past few years, Peters and Leightizer have not been aware of many student cycling accidents, but they think this program is necessary, none-the-less and is good as a preventitive measure.

"We thought it was something the kids need," Leightizer said. "It's an appropriate, timely activity, particularly because it is at the beginning of the biking season."

Two helmets donated by Prescott Canadian Tire were won by Adam Ryan and Troy White, as door prizes at the rodeo. A helmet donated by the Williamsburg Canadian Tire was awarded to Kelly Vanderbruggen.

The Matilda recreation committee also donated a helmet which was won by Lacey Bradford.

"Hopefully we'll do it again next year, and have a bit more of a turnout," she said.

Organizers hope more parents will come out, so they can receive more information on bike safety, and see what their children can do on bikes.

Bird Notes
by E. G. AVERY

Several "new" birds appear on the list this week. At the top is the first Hummingbird at a feeder that was put up early. It was a male in his spring plumage, like a tiny jewel.

Bluebirds are returning to familiar housing units, an Oriole was heard, but not seen, and a Red-breasted Nuthatch, all seen in the general area of Irena.

Nearly everyone has had a few Evening Grosbeaks; they often stop where there is a bird bath, and have a drink.

At our feeder we have House Finches, several Goldfinches, Willie the Woodpecker, and one day a Chipping Sparrow. Chippings don't often come to feeders, but this one was interested in the seed-ball. They usually feed on weed-seeds along the road-sides, where we saw several on Dundas St. The Chipping Sparrow has an unusual song, which sounds more like an insect.

Warblers have arrived in the Ottawa area, and will be passing through here soon. The most likely ones to stop over are the Yellow, Myrtle (a.k.a. Yellowrump) and American Redstart.

Robins are nesting now, and it is interesting to note the sites they choose. One pair built under a verandah overhang, in a good protected place. Another pair we watched as they opted for a crotch in a tall tree. At first there was no protection at all, but the leaves are coming out now, and the nest will soon be invisible, and safe from the wind and rain.

For most songbirds the nesting time from the time of laying the eggs to hatching is recorded at 12 to 15 days.

Grand opening!

Helmets reduce injuries

The Canadian Standards Association (CSA) warns that across Canada each year, many people especially children are seriously injured in cycling accidents that often result in death. CSA says that the severity of these injuries and the number of fatalities can be dramatically reduced by wearing cycling helmets that are CSA certified.

Canada has an excellent National Standard (CAN/CSA-D113.2-M89 Cycling Helmets) for the certification of cycling helmets and CSA is more stringent than other cycling helmet standards in North America.

Current stats reveal that less than 20 percent of Canadian cyclists actually wear helmets although the Canadian Medical Association reports that 80 percent of bicycle related deaths are the result of head injuries.

Parents that are in the market for cycling helmets for their children, should be aware that CSA certified helmets are designed solely for use by cyclists that are five years of age and older. Therefore, any information on a helmet, or on the packaging, that implies that a helmet has been certified by CSA for ages below five years constitutes a misuse of the CSA Registered Mark.

CSA is currently developing safety requirements for helmets designed for children under five years of age.

Purchasers of cycling helmets are advised that as of October 1, 1995, all cyclists in the Province of Ontario will be required by law to wear a certified cycling helmet. Buyers should be purchasing a helmet that carries the CSA certification mark - it's a respected sign of consumer safety.

CSA is celebrating it's 75th anniversary, and is the largest integrated standards development, testing and certification organization.

A victory for children

It was a landmark victory that will be shared by support receiving single parents throughout Canada. But by ruling in Susan Thibaudeau's favour, the Federal Court of Appeal may have opened up yet another can of worms.

It is a relief to know that child support will now go to the intended recipients, and that it will no longer be the object of some tax grab on the part of the government, capitalizing on monthly payments from a non-custodial parent to their children. But it remains to be seen whether or not the payer will receive the same breaks as in the past, or whether the incentive will be taken away.

A sad fact remains that a very small percentage of non-custodial parents pay anything for their children's upkeep. This tax break, that allowed for the deduction of 100 percent of child support payments, was probably the only incentive there was for the person who had to pay, to actually go ahead and write the cheque.

For those non-custodial parents who have taken their responsibilities seriously, aiding in the support of their children, it must be heartbreaking knowing that one-fourth of the hard-earned money they pay, goes into the government's pocket instead of toward their child's well being. That they, along with the rest of society pay the debt for those who skip out on their payments. It is estimated that 75 percent of divorced dads in Canada don't pay child support.

Of the small number of who actually receive financial help from their former partner, it is estimated that 98 percent of the recipients are female.

Those non-custodial parents who do take their financial responsibilities seriously should be commended. They are taking much of the burden off the taxpayer. The money that non-custodial parents dole out in child support is that much less that Social Services will have to provide in the end.

It remains to be seen if this little tax incentive will remain in place.

A study conducted by the Library of Parliament revealed that in 1990 single parents paid an estimated $337 million in tax on $1.5 billion in support received, while those who paid saved an estimated $574 million.

The federal court has deemed that this is unfair and discriminatory against separated custodial parents, most of whom are women.

Federal lawyers argued that in most divorce settlements that such tax implications are already taken into account and therefore it would not be fair to the payer if this sum were received tax free, and in paying a higher sum it would not be fair to the non-custodial parent if a tax break were not included in the package deal.

It seems that in this courtroom of tax debate, that the real victors have been left in the background. The children. They would be the real winners in this new ruling by the Federal Court of Appeal.

Dr. Mahlon William Locke
A Canadian success story

focus

by P.H.Nicol
Chieftain Staff Reporter

On the surface of it, the story of Mahlon William Locke is a Canadian success story.

A young man is born on a farm near Brinston on St. Valentine's Day in 1880. Eight years later, his father dies and his mother and two younger brothers work hard to keep things going. Five years of struggle later, his mother marries a man named G.W.Collison, a school teacher who moves the family to Kingston while he seeks his degree in medicine at Queen's College; a degree which he obtains in 1898.

The family moves back to Brinston where the step-father takes up his medical practice and young Mahlon attends high school in Kemptville before returning to work on the family farm.

For reasons that he never makes clear, Mahlon decides that he, too, will take up a career in medicine and in 1901, he departs for Queen's College (later Queen's University), graduating after an unremarkable academic career in 1905.

Returning to the Brinston area to practice his profession alongside his step-father, he hits a major stumbling block. Everyone trusts and respects the older man, but they are reluctant to let the younger man look after their ills. It is a disheartening experience for the young doctor, and one which has a major impact on his bank account.

He and a classmate from Queen's then decide to undertake some post-graduate training, and pack their bags and head for Edinburgh, Scotland. There, after six months training and having to rewrite a couple of his exams, he receives the triple degree of Licentiate from the Royal College of Physicians of Edinburgh, the Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh and the Faculty of Physicians and Surgeons of Glasgow.

Armed with these further qualifications, Mahlon returns to Canada in 1908, taking over the practice of Dr. W.C.Whittaker of Williamsburg who subsequently moved to Vancouver.

Had his story ended here, it would have been one of quiet success. A young man overcomes hardship and adversity to become a physician and healer, a respected member of his community.

Little does he know, however, that in a few short years, his fame will spread around the world as thousands flock to his small village of a few hundred seeking a cure that apparently cannot be found anywhere else but in the healing hands of Mahlon Locke.

For the next few years, Mahlon Locke lived the life of a country doctor, delivering babies, setting broken bones and attending to the diverse needs of his patients. And it should be remembered that, even at the height of the fame and fortune that was to come, nothing was allowed to interfere with the needs of his regular patients. It was no rare occasion for him to leave a thousand people standing in line while he went off to administer to someone in the countryside.

The incident that would eventually bring the world to his door occurred in 1910.

The Williamsburg blacksmith, Peter Beckstead, was being steadily crippled from what appeared to be arthritis, so much so that it became doubtful how much longer he could continue his work. Dr. Locke tried a number of approaches with little success until he came to the conclusion that the blacksmith was not suffering from arthritis at all, but from fallen arches.

Locke worked for a time on the blacksmiths feet and had a special shoe designed for him. Within a relatively short period of time, Beckstead was cured and was able to walk and work at his profession with no hint of the crippling that had plagued him earlier.

Others came over the next few years, each with crippling pain, each treated by Mahlon Locke's foot twisting, each leaving to extol his virtues.

But is was newspaperman Fred Coughlin from Watertown, New York, who made Locke famous.

Coughlin was about to undergo surgery for his arthritis when he heard about Dr. Locke from a priest who had been cured by his methods. Putting off the operation, Coughlin went to Williamsburg and was treated successfully. His articles in the Watertown Daily Times praising Dr. Locke and his methods were picked up by the wire services and read the length and breadth of the United States. The rest, as they say, was history.

At the height of his fame. Dr. Locke treated up to one thousand patients a day. He did not ask their name, their medical history nor the nature of their complaint. He simply took first one foot and then the other, twisting them in his hands and when done, took his one dollar fee and stuffed the bill in his coat pocket. He used a swivel chair for this operation, and patients lined up like spokes on a wheel with the doctor at the hub. There was no conversation, no bedside manner; just the twisting of the feet and the payment of the fee.

And the fee was always a dollar; never more. Not only did Locke refuse to exploit his fame as he might easily have done, but he would not permit residents of the town from doing so either, at one point insisting that a local hotel restore its regular room rates. It did.

It should be remembered that Mahlon Locke never made any claims about the effectiveness of his cures. Hundreds, perhaps thousands of people claimed to have been cured by his methods and were eager to tell others about their experience, but to this day, no-one knows what Dr. Locke thought of the whole thing. For he never discussed his theories with anyone and kept no records of his patients. He was called a quack by many of his contemporaries but he declined to enter into any sort of debate to defend his methods. When he died of cerebral hemorrhage on

A national priority

Peter Hessel

I promised to tell you what Albina Guarnieri, M.P., federal Parliamentary Secretary for Canadian Heritage, said at a meeting of our local Historical Society.

First off, she told us that we were not alone, but that there are thousands of societies such as ours. She asked us "to take stock of the glory of this land, of the history created by past generations, and of the society they built for us."

She put local heritage into perspective by reminding us that since 1967, "... awareness and appreciation for our cultural heritage has been a priority," and that the federal government recognizes this not only by providing funds for heritage programs, "but also by passing legislation that encourages and assists in the preservation of culture".

That's what we wanted to hear: that culture and heritage are a government priority, and that Parliament will put its money and its efforts where its mouth is.

This is how Albina Guarnieri, M.P. , formulates her thoughts on the subject: "... heritage resources are like the footprints we leave behind as we walk through soft ground or sand; if we wish others to know where we have gone, we cannot allow these footprints to be obliterated accidentally or deliberately."

We don't often hear such language from politicians. This woman knows what is close to our hearts.

"Heritage is not only represented by the written record of events or by the artifacts displayed in museums or galleries." She told us that in addition to the visible and very obvious witnesses of our past, heritage is now recognized as the appreciation of our own history in relation to that of other cultures,

Heritage is also a "growth industry". 20 years ago, perhaps 800 museums existed in Canada; today there are almost 2000. Since 1984, there has been a 23% increase in the number of heritage institutions. The number of volunteers has more than doubled, and the number of visitors has skyrocketed. At the same time, expenses have increased, but unfortunately, funding has not kept up with the demand. Well, even the acknowledgement of that fact may be a key to the solution.

Many people think that the federal government will fund only federal projects in the field of heritage and culture, such as our national museums and parks, the CBC, the National Film Board, etc. But Ms. Guarnieri gave us many examples of the feds putting money into local projects.

Just last February, Ottawa decided to protect 43 railway stations in various parts of the country. The feds are helping to restore and preserve churches, theatres and other buildings, as well as committing funds to the protection of aboriginal burial sites and to the creation of parks. A prime example is the 11,400-acre Rouge River Valley Park, largest "urban park" in North America.

Even in our own small community. We have two recent examples of federal money at work: the complete restoration of the metal roof covering the local museum, and a grant for the purchase of a microfilm reader and a microfiche reader for our local archives. A local "old-growth forest" area is awaiting federal designation as a national heritage site.

Why is heritage important to Canadians? Is heritage just the hobby of a few old fogies obsessed with the past? According to the federal Parliamentary Secretary for Canadian Heritage, it is far more then that. It lies at the root of our nationhood. The preservation of heritage equals the preservation of Canada. Without our heritage, we have nothing worth holding onto.

Says Albina Guarnieri, M.P.: "Our, culture and our heritage are essential to our definition of ourselves as a people."

the bottom line

SOME BEAUTIFUL WEATHER ISN'T IT. It's time to shed those winter clothes and head out into the sun. Even the rain doesn't seem so blue now that the grass is getting greener. That foreign thunder of lawn mowers firing up in the distance somehow seems familiar, and the smell of freshly trimmed grass, well words cannot describe after trudging through the coldest winter in recorded history, that also felt like the longest. Enjoy people while it lasts. But make sure to protect yourself and your skin. Last week after the Dave Stevens Memorial Track Meet at Seaway, there were some awfully red looking faces, and the day wasn't even warm!

It's been a long time since I've seen some of the BIGGER (BIGS) pressers around, and even some of the further away LITTLES. What a feast!

The Oddfellows Club was kept busy at the Williamsburg Yard Sale on Saturday, as members served up hot dogs and hamburgers to hundreds of customers over the lunch hour. George Holmes, Betty Henderson and Tom Henderson kept the food coming. The barbecue was part of a very successful sale, which had many local residents and organizations selling their wares and raising money.

Yard sale draws large crowd

People came looking for bargains and they found them at the Williamsburg Community Association (WCA)'s third annual yard sale.

As in other years, the sale was once again a success, according to local organizers.

The all-day Saturday sale on May 7 starting as early as 7 a.m., wound through the streets, onto people's front-yards and into churches.

Over 20 homes registered with the WCA before the big day. They registered and were included on the map of sales, handed out to hundreds of "yard-salers" who wandered through Williamsburg hunting out the good buys.

"It was well attended," WCA president David Lapier said. "The beautiful weather certainly contributed to a good turnout."

"And a lot of people made some money out of their old stuff."

One couple made close to $180, according to Lapier.

New to this year's sale was the Cake Walk. It went so well, the WCA association raised $245, to go towards community projects.

The association has already purchased and installed several community benches throughout Williamsburg. Presently, it is looking at putting a community bulletin board up at the post office.

Ten chairs were set up on the sidewalk outside a local business, as part of the Cake Walk competition, organized by Audrey Casselman. For a dollar you could buy yourself a seat, and hope that your number of seat would be drawn to win a cake, made by local residents.

The other new activity added to this year's sale was the scavenger hunt, but that did not go as well as expected, according to sale organizers. Only 17 people participated.

The idea behind the hunt was to encourage people, not familiar with Williamsburg, to look at the history and discover what an interesting area it is.

Those who did participate bought a list from the association booth for $2, and answered the questions. The first place winner, April Richmire of Williamsburg, won $17. Crystal Barkley of Williamsburg won $10.60 and Crystal Johnston of Ingleside won $6.80.

Food was also readily available at the sale. Starting at 7 a.m., the Captain's Cove restaurant served up the early bird breakfast. Later in the day, the Oddfellows Club and the Lutheran Church both provided barbecue lunches of hot dogs, hamburgers, sausage and sauerkraut.

Popcorn and candy floss were also on sale this year, but Lapier said the sale didn't go as well as hoped.

There were many people who were fortunate enough to win prizes at the sale.

Gift certificates, compliments of The Pit entitling the winner to two platters, two drinks and two desserts, was awarded to Syd Drennan of Morrisburg.

A sweatshirt and cap compliments of Heritage Cable was won by Cecil Keeler of R.R.#1 Brinston. Two prize packages containing a tote bag, hat, ruler, beach ball, and frisbee, compliments of the Williamsburg Garage, was won by Sandra Ostrander of Williamsburg and Mac MacIntosh of Winchester.

One six pound ham, compliments of Whitteker Meats, was awarded to Hilda Elliott of Morrisburg. One box of chicken wings, compliments of Whitteker Meats, was won by Elva Baker of Morrisburg.

A $50 gift certificate compliments of Williamsburg Canadian Tire was presented to Ricky Markell of Iroquois. The 50/50 draw winner of $314 was R. Boucher of Williamsburg.

Little things

They're not supposed to bother you that much once you've reached the age of reason and most adults they don't, but they surface with a vengeance when life has almost run its course and the sense creeps up that the tomb is now a whole lot closer than the womb.

A lot of little things crop up like channel markers with the onset of the age of wisdom: grey streaks on the temples; character lines deeply furrowing the edges of the mouth and most of the brow; the clear impression gained just by looking at one that today's policemen are all too young to be packing guns; conviction born of noontime observations near some schools that three four-letter words loudly employed in a variety of combinations constitutes the sum total of adolescent vocabulary.

Little things.

If anything, the age of wisdom increases sensitivity to some of the subtle influences at work in one's personal world, a world which has felt fairly comfortable and fairly predictable until little things begin to really become irksome, as witness the following.

The exasperating little body bobs which mark the number of times the fingers first caught then dropped the tip of a shoelace that needs tying, or a screwnail loitering in the driveway, or a sock that slipped from the toes just as you started to urge a foot into its limp depths.

Little things like having to park your rump on the wall while huffing and puffing to jam a shoe into the "one-size-fits-all" toe rubber (the kind that's designed to flip right off the tip of a shoe and tumble to the bottom of the cellar stairs when the left knee is just about under the chin and the right hand poised to grab the aft end of the target).

Little things like driving the 31 to or from Ottawa, most of the time trailing some blissful klutz whose cruise control has been factory-preset and welded-in at 77 kilometers per hour downhill and downwind.

Little things like finding out that a three-hour business meeting on a Saturday morning after an hour's drive to the big city followed by a thirty-minute stand-up lunch and an endless afternoon session addressed by somebody all dressed up for the occasion in a barn suit and running shoes, overstresses your gluteus maximus (bun muscles, to the medically savant) about as much as having to squirm through a discombobulated discussion summary delivered by a stand-up comic who clearly was out of the room when those good ideas were created (yours especially).

Little things, like suddenly realizing that some of your worst fears - those you never talk about in town because you fear you may be the only one in town to have them - are secretly shared by a lot of other inhabitants of the age of wisdom, some of whom struggled with you through the same meeting.

Like the fact that an awful lot of people have had it with the Young Offenders Act and student "welfare" and with a complaisant establishment of professional handwringers whose adoration of "children's rights" is robbing our little world of concepts like duty, responsibility, honour, accountability, and victims' as well as society's rights.

Like the fact that in so many other little worlds like our own, a great many thoughtful people are truly concerned that our traditional, caring Canadian society has been grievously damaged by public policies and public figures catering to individual, professional and corporate greed rather than to the preservation of principle, ethics and traditional family values.

Viewed from this point, it seems the little things that bother us as we come to appreciate the full-bodied wine of the wisdom years, are testament mostly to our impatience with inconsistencies of everyday life, those spawned by the incoherence of what passes for "modern" public and social policy.

Of lasting importance is not the accumulated frustration of telltale little things so much as the secure knowledge that none of us is alone in wanting an improved world for the generation coasting along close astern, that the apprehended panic of the graying years is partly an awakening to the urgency of doing whatever is required in the brief time remaining to pass on to eager hands the hard-earned wisdom of these end years, to have done quickly with the apostles of boneheaded egotism, deceit and societal decay.

No big deal, really; not with a couple of elections coming soon to a ballot box near you.

Dr. Robert Jackson has recently released a book entitled M.W.-Locke - The Famous Foot Doctor of Williamsburg, Ontario. Actually, it is something less than a book being a mere sixty pages in length and, as the author says, there is no pretence that this is an in-depth look at the life of Mahlon Locke.

It is, instead, a thumbnail sketch, complete with pictures and reproductions, whose intent is to give the reader just enough information to stimulate his curiosity and cause him to want to find out more about this most enigmatic Canadian hero. And from that point of view, it is a complete success.

Dixon's Corners school comes alive with activity

by Michael Bailey
Chieftain Staff Reporter

Physical activity should be an important part of everyone's day Exercise helps keep the body fit, and mind working clearly.

At Dixon's Corners Public School, Principal Leightizer believes in physical activity and for the last 12 to 15 years, students who have attended the school have looked forward to their May laps.

"For as long as I can remember we have always done this," explained Principal Leightizer.

Beginning in May the students at Dixon's give up 15 minutes of their recess, twice a day, to run, walk or jog laps around a grass track at the back of the school.

"We give the students a card, and when they complete a lap, we give their card a mark and keep track of how many laps they do," said the Principal.

Dixon's uses the fitness program to help out their track team before the big Dundas Meet at the end of May, but students who wish to partake of the inter school competitions on any team must participate in the track running program.

"We use it as a requirement because it shows that the students have some initiative and the ones that have taken on the responsibility of accumulating a certain number of laps are the ones who can compete on our interschool teams."

The laps are postponed if the weather is bad, and the Principal also pointed out that it does not matter how fast the laps are completed, or how many the student can do, only that they participate.

With the first week of laps completed, the students at Dixon's were treated to an afternoon of entertainment last Friday.

The Dixon's Gymnastic team, which did quite well at the meet in North Dundas, performed for the students, as well as the Dixon's music students who will be performing at the Kinsmen Music Festival in Cornwall this week.

Baseball season brings changes

At its meeting on May 5th, the executive of South Dundas Little League voted to change the league name to Upper Canada Little League. The league had expanded beyond the borders of South Dundas with teams from Winchester and Osnabruck.

The new name better reflects the geographic area covered by the league and will avoid confusion with other Little Leagues in the Dundas (outside Hamilton) area.

The position of Player-Agent is a new one this year. The Player-Agent, Ron Delegarde has the responsibility of establishing and maintaining the eligibility of players, the selection of All-Star teams and investigating any problems players may have with coaches, umpires, etc.

Ron is encouraging parents, players and coaches to let him know their concerns so that he can act to resolve them quickly.

The Upper Canada Little League is scheduled to begin play on May 24th. Registrations are about the same as last year, with 836 players in 70 teams. This year two divisions: baseball and softball will be offered. The baseball division is for both boys and girls, while the softball division is for girls.

Upper Canada Little League is a chartered member of Little League Baseball, the largest youth sports program in the world. Besides teaching the skill of baseball, Little League is a leadership development program, teaching youngsters the values that develop admirable qualities of citizenship, discipline, teamwork and physical well-being.

In 1993, the Canadian enrolment was 75,194 and the world wide enrolment was 2.7 million in 78 countries.

Upper Canada Little League is eligible to participate in the full range of Little League Baseball tournament play starting with the district championships, the provincial championships and then the Canadian Championships.

There are separate tournament streams for each age group league. The Major (ages 11-12) Canadian Championships will be held in Calgary, August 6-13, 1994, with the championship game to be televised on TSN on August 13. The Canadian winner will participate in the Little League World Series, August 22-27 in Williamsport, Pennsylvania.

Locally, Upper Canada Little League will participate in District tournaments from July 16-24. The Junior League (ages 13-14) District tournament will be held in Morrisburg on July 16-24.

Perth will host the Minor League (ages 7-10) Ontario Tournament on July 28 to August 3. Cornwall will host the Senior League (ages 15-16) Canadian Championships on August 5-12.

If you would like more information about Upper Canada Little League or have any questions, please call Stephen Law at 652-2421.

Morrisburg Lions will contribute $100,000

Club president Garry O'Neill announced that the Morrisburg Lions Club has voted in favour of making an initial contribution of $100,000 toward the construction of the Swimming Pool/Fitness Centre as proposed in the preliminary draft of the South Dundas Recreation Council feasibility study.

"This contribution is from existing funds that we set aside a number of years ago for the development of joint recreation facilities in South Dundas. In fact we have significant additional funds set aside for this project and fully expect to raise even more for this worthwhile cause."

Project Committee Co-Chairman Glen Cunningham stated that it is "important that we all realize that we are at the conceptual stage only and that nothing is carved in stone. We recognize that there are still many hurdles to overcome if this project is to go ahead. It is our understanding that if there is positive feedback from the survey, that the feasibility study will be finalized over the next few months. To complete the study, public input will be sought through public meetings at which time all of us will be able to express our individual concerns and wishes."

Project Committee Chairman Del Jones stated that in the many personal conversations he has had with area residents that "The vast majority of people believe that the facility would be good for the area. The four major issues of concern to people include 1) what is to be included; 2) can we afford the construction cost; 3) can we afford the upkeep; and 4) where will it be built. All of these questions can only be answered if the feasibility study process continues. That is why our club is urging the residents of South Dundas to respond positively on the survey and support the "concept" as currently proposed so that the study can be completed and the concerns answered. There are many safeguards in place to help ensure the success of this project, including the need to gain the support of our local, provincial and federal politicians."

A cheque for $100,000 will be presented to the South Dundas Recreation Council if the project is approved by the various levels of government.

The Morrisburg & District Lions Club has over 40 active members who live in the municipalities of Williamsburg and Matilda Townships, Morrisburg and surrounding area.

The Lions Club urges the public to show their support for this project in the South Dundas Recreation Council survey.

SDG & E Grenville Liberal Association elects new executive

The SD and G and East Grenville Provincial Liberal Association held its annual general meeting last Friday night, May 6, 1994 at the Upper Canada Playhouse in Morrisburg.

The highlight of the evening was the elections of a new executive for the upcoming year.

For the past three years, John McAllister, Reeve of Iroquois has served as president of the association, but decided to step down this year, much to the regret of his colleagues on the executive.

"The past three years have been extremely productive for the local riding association," McAllister said in a president's report address to the 40 individuals attending the meeting.

"We had the election of a new leader, fundraising events, policy conferences and executive meetings in every part of the riding, to say the least it has been a very busy three years for this riding association," he said.

Mr. McAllister will continue to serve on the executive as past president. He was presented with a gavel mounted on a plaque as a memento for his years of service by the riding association.

Ruth Abercrombie of Oxford Mills was acclaimed president. Len Sabourin of Monkland will serve as executive vice-president. Dr. Gerry Rosenquist of Morrisburg is treasurer. Brenda Loucks of Iroquois is general secretary and Dwight Spencer of Oxford Mills will serve as membership secretary.

Serving as county vice presidents will be Leona McIntosh of Iroquois for Dundas, Richard Walker of Lancaster for Glengarry and Chuck Ursel of Kemptville for East Grenville.

Directors named to the executive include Sharon Duprau, Carson Payne and Morris Shaver for Stormont. Sandy Boyce, Randy Goodfellow, Rhonda Kelly and Guy de Puyjalon for Dundas.

Diane Bedford, Ernie Lalonde, Frank Periard, Charles Sangster, and Susan Walker are the directors for Glengarry. Irwin Adams, George Dick and Jim Pontbriand for East Grenville.

Denis Sabourin, the past candidate for the SDG and East Grenville Provincial Liberals will continue to serve as public relations director for the riding association.

In accepting the presidency of the riding association, Ruth Abercrombie stated there are a number of goals that will have to be met in the very near future.

She described the goals as "increasing membership in the organization, raising funds for the upcoming provincial election and developing policy from a local perspective for the election."

Mrs. Abercrombie will also serve as the chairperson of the candidate search committee. Individuals interested in information on being a Liberal candidate in the Provincial election can contact her at 258-3032.

The riding association will play host to a Strawberry Social along with the Cornwall, Cornwall Township Provincial Liberal Association on Sunday, June 26, 1994 from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Best Western Parkway Inn, in Cornwall.

Provincial Liberal leader Lyn McLeod will be the guest of honor at the event. Tickets can be obtained from riding association members.

John Cleary, MPP for Cornwall, Cornwall Township, Charlottenburg, attended the Liberal annual general meeting and used the opportunity to comment on the provincial budget brought down by Treasurer Floyd Laughren last Thursday.

Cleary described the document as a "great disappointment, particularly when one realizes the serious cuts made to the Ministry of Agriculture." He went on to say, "this will have a tremendous impact in this area when one considers the important role agriculture plays in the local economy."

Cleary also took time to comment on the "Common Sense Revolution," the premature start of the election campaign launched last week by Conservative leader Mike Harris.

"If one takes the time to read the entire document, one will see that it lacks something, common sense," he said.

Copper's Corner

This week I thought I would explain the Community Policing philosophy to you in an attempt to help us all further our understanding of how Community Policing works and how it can benefit us all.

The Community Policing philosophy became an integral part of the O.P.P.'s desire to provide the best service possible to all the people in Ontario. After looking at various policing models world wide the Ministry of the Solicitor General adopted Community Policing as the policing style of the future for Ontario Provincial Police. The reasons were, it was felt that preventing and reducing crime, and promoting public safety and the public order of our families, our homes and our communities are not only the responsibilities of the police but of each and every one of us. Partnerships between police and local communities have become necessary to share these public safety responsibilities and achieve these goals. This partnership is called "Community Policing".

Community Policing allows everyone in the community, from all walks of life, to get involved. It provides challenging opportunities to help the police in, delivering quality services, addressing the public safety, crime and order priorities, implementing strategies for problem solving, and preventing and reducing crime to improve the quality of life.

The ways to be involved vary from community to community and the way the various detachments through the province deliver Community Policing vary also. Consequently in the Iroquois and Morrisburg area because of apparent lack of interest in setting up a joint committee or separate committees, Community Police Officers are assigned to each specific community. These officers attempt to work within the communities to which they are assigned when manpower allows. On top of that, all members attempt to make themselves more available to the public on the whole. Through Community Policing we are attempting to get away from the image that police are only an upper torso, head and two arms who are always behind the wheel of a police car. Hopefully you see us out of the car, maybe walking through the mall (being a whole lot more approachable on foot than at 50 km/h).

Community Policing is also giving people the services within their own community. For example, in Iroquois the village supplies the O.P.P. with its own office right in the plaza. The police, when time and manpower allow, attempt to use the extended services office for the convenience of both the police and the public.

Well that's probably enough for now, but keep in mind that there is quite a lot of potential for the Community Policing philosophy within our communities. Being involved with the police helps to secure safer communities for all Ontarians to enjoy.

Beavers

McDonald assured local residents the rumor wasn't true.

However, the fact remained the manufacturing company of dental burs, needed more space.

Due to strong sales growth over the past few years and in anticipation of continued growth, plans for expansion had been pursued to create more space.

In an August press release, company executives stated that additional equipment would be necessary over the next year in order to meet increasing production demands.

Up until August, Beaver employees thought expansion was going ahead. However, a corporate reorganization in the Sybron Corporation of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, owner of the Canadian manufacturing company, caused executives to investigate other alternatives to solve their space problem.

At the time, Beaver executives would not say what those alternatives were.

"We had to look at all our options and this turned out to be the best deal," Leroux said.

Morrisburg Reeve Gord McGregor said Beavers plans will be beneficial to the local community.

"It is good news for the village that Beaver decided to stay here," he said.

Council passed a bylaw Monday night to close Cook St. and give it to Beavers, to allow for the expansion.

Beavers Dental was established 48 years ago by George Beavers. The company makes tiny drill bits in over 400 different shapes and sizes.

In 1992, they reached record production of 2,220,173 dental burs in September. The company employs 260 people and has an annual payroll of close to $7-million.

ts, or play squash?" Continued the Councillor.

"It has been suggested that 4 squash courts be constructed. How many are in Cornwall and what is their record of usage? Who uses them, and at what cost? Would our hard working farmers routinely play squash in the evening after finishing their chores? Or is squash court usage limited largely to the professional and bureaucratic occupations?"

The document suggests a daily usage of 500 paying customers for 350 days per year. At $2.-50/person/usage this results in an operational loss of $100,000/year covered by municipal taxes.

"The citizens of South Dundas must be told the truth: what will be the real operating costs of the facility on an annual basis?" said Schnurr.

"The document is faulty. It is not a feasibility study. It seems to me that it is, at best, a poor guess as to what might happen if such a facility were constructed," concluded the Councillor.

Schnurr also told council that he found the manner in which the document had been handled by the South Dundas Recreation Council equally disturbing.

He told those present that there has been no critical evaluation of the document and that it has not been discussed at any regular South Dundas Recreation Council meetings.

"Despite this, a statement has been made in the press that construction could begin as early as next year! And a full page advertisement ran in the local papers to boost support for this project."

"Who authorized this?"

"Who authorized the cost for these ads?"

"From where did the information come which was in the ad, since it surely didn't come from the so called Feasibility Study? Why did the authors of the advertisements feel compelled to "boost" the project by providing inaccurate and misleading information? And why was this done just before the survey was sent to the public?"

"Who is running this show?"

Iroquois Councillor Ron Miller, who had been in attendance at the meeting in Morrisburg, explained to Councillor Schnurr (who did not attend the special S.D.R.C. Feasibility Study Meeting) that it had been decided at that point to go ahead with the survey of the South Dundas Residents.

"I did not know the full page ad's were going to appear in the local papers, but at the meeting we did decide to allow the Feasibility Steering Committee to go ahead with their plans," said Mr. Miller.

The Iroquois Councillor also pointed out that the Steering Committee was only responding to the concerns and questions of some of the residents and was meant only as a means of communicating what was going on.

Reeve McGregor, who attended half of the special meeting, told those present that he felt the whole process to be upsetting.

"We were given a draft proposal, but we never had an opportunity to discuss it. Who ever started this should have their fingers wrapped!" Said the Reeve.

Offering a solution to the whole problem Councillor Schnurr suggested the S.D.R.C. send the study back to Sesquaig.

"We tell the consultants that what South Dundas wants and needs is an indoor swimming pool. Period! How much is it going to cost us to build it? What kind of usage will it get? How much is it going to cost the taxpayer to run it? And what will it cost the individual user each time he/she goes for a swim?"

"With the large amount of money thus saved let us direct these funds towards improving our existing facilities and developing new recreation programs in our community."

"Finally, let us ask the Lions and other clubs in our area if they would support this greatly toned down version of the facility. If so, then let's get on with it."

Tire and appliance day at Matilda dump, Saturday

by Rebecca van Noppen
Chieftain Staff Reporter

Saturday, May 14 has been declared "Tire and Appliance Day" at the local dump.

Residents of Iroquois and Matilda Township can take two appliances and/or four tires to the dump, free of charge from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Saturday only.

Matilda council recently made the decision and asked the village of Iroquois to support them. Iroquois agreed.

"It was initiated by Matilda Township," village foreman Bill Ewing said. "We are trying to get people to take it (tires and appliances) in for free, instead of dropping them off at the side of the road."

Ewing and Matilda Township clerk Bill Horner said there are a lot of people in the township that drop their appliances off on the side of the road.

The road crew picks them up and then the township has to pay a company to come in and pick up the appliances.

"We have to incur the costs of having the roads crew pick them up," Horner said. "Then in our situation, we have to pay a company to pick up the units, to collect them and take them away, and that cost is incurred."

In Iroquois there isn't as great a problem with people dumping appliances on road-sides, according to Ewing. The village picks up appliances at an extra cost.

"They pay to have us pick it up," he said. "It costs them to have it picked up according to the bylaw."

There is a $10 charge for appliances and a $3 charge for each tire when taken to the dump. This Saturday, you can take up to four tires and two appliances free of charge.

This is the first time, a "free-day" of this sort has been initiated.

"We're looking at it experimentally," Horner said. "We may have another one in fall, but we don't know yet."

Admittance to the dump will be restricted to holders of Landfill Site Permits that can be obtained from the clerk's office in either Brinston or Iroquois.

"It's a good deal all around," Ewing said. "It helps residents out."

4 - H horse club

by Leslie Weagant
Press Reporter

On May 2, the Dundas 4-H horse club met at Siebenfeld Equestrian Centre in Iroquois at 7:30 p.m. We decided to name our club the "Mouthy Mustangs."

Fred Guse showed us how to take the temperature, pulse rate and respiration of a horse and we had the opportunity to find them ourselves. Fred also had a horse that had to be wormed so he showed us how it was done.

On July 9 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., our Dundas Horse club is having a fundraising car wash at the Dundas Vet Services in Winchester. Each wash is to be paid by donation and we are raising the money for new ribbons and prizes that will be awarded at the 4-H banquet.

Two vehicles stolen

Towards the end of last week there were two vehicles stolen north of Morrisburg and there was an attempt made to steal another vehicle. Since that time one of the stolen vehicles has been recovered in the Kingston area, it had been involved in an accident. In both of these instances the keys were in the vehicles and the vehicles were left unlocked. We would like to remind all vehicle owners to lock up your car even at home and don't leave the keys in it. If you can put your car in the garage, make it difficult for the thief, if it involves too much work for them they probably won't even bother trying.

The traffic unit was out last week checking vehicles for possible impaired drivers. As a result, at a R.I.D.E. spot check 60 vehicles were checked. One 12 hr suspension was handed out along with three Highway Traffic Act warnings.

Just desserts!

After ridding the Township of debris and litter, the school population at Dixon's Corners Public School enjoyed a treat of ice cream last Wednesday afternoon. Here, teacher Mrs. Margaret Swerdfeger and Township Clerk Bill Horner do the honours in handing out refreshments to the workers.

Bikin' for stroke

Last Thursday afternoon, a rather unusual bike made a couple of treks around town in Cardinal. This particular crew were from Best Foods, who raised $3,444 for Heart & Stroke. Each rider had to raise at least $50 in pledges to make the team, and Nancy Skakum raised the most by an individual with $319. Casco raised $2,243.45, and Ann Gill was the big money raiser in this company with $252 in pledges.

Local school participates in Pitch-In Week

by Shelley Cumberland
Chieftain Staff Reporter

Last week was Pitch-in Week, and local students went out, got their hands a bit dirty, cleaned up a bit and had some fun. Classes at Iroquois Public and the entire school at Dixon's Corners really went to town with their contributions to their communities!

Principal at Dixon's Corners Public, Brooke Leightizer was extremely happy with what his school did last Wednesday afternoon. And it could be measured in the number of bags heaped up in front of the school! (see front page picture).

"I'm particularly pleased that we were able to get 22 volunteer drivers out," stated Mr. Leightizer. These drivers were able to take approximately 110 kids out past the barriers of the school yard and into the community to do some pitching-in there as well.

"It teaches the kids that this is their community too and they must look after it the way others do."

The entire school at Dixon's took part in the litter campaign, that took place in the park and Brinston and the ball diamond areas, east to Dundela where the church cairn lies as well as over at the rink, and west to Glen Stewart at the monument park and along the roadsides in various areas of the Township.

After all the work was done, everybody relaxed with an ice cream bar, donated by the Township of Matilda.

Special family day at Village

Kids (12 and under) will receive free admission at Upper Canada Village on Sunday, May 22, in honour of Her Majesty, Queen Victoria. As an opening weekend highlight, the Village is planning a royal 1860's birthday celebration.

A full day of festivity and merriment has been prepared, complete with a colourful parade, 1860's games, exciting military demonstrations, and many fun activities for visiting children. Kids will also be in for a treat at The Harvest Barn Restaurant which will offer a special $1.99 "Whipper-Snapper" menu.

In the morning, children will try to impress the superintendent with perfect recitations during the school inspection. The Village's own militia, lead by a red-coated Fort Henry Guardsman, will show its prowess through marches and drills, and musicians will tune up their brass instruments in preparation for the noon program and parade.

At 12 noon, speeches and the ceremonial firing by the Brockville Infantry Company will officially launch the celebrations. Then militia, townsfolk and children will all join in a Village parade. Things will really heat up at 12:30 p.m. when the rowdy Village fire company haul the "Queen" engine to the fairgrounds for a traditional fire engine trial.

Assisted by members from the modern Elizabethtown Township Fire Department in Lyn, Ontario, this show of skills promises to have a wet ending. The Village's Queen engine was first used in Brockville in the 1850s and in Lyn during the 1860s.

During the entire afternoon, there will be lots of opportunities for children and parents to get right into the action. Kids can participate in a variety of 1860s games and races, including a tug-of-war, sack races, and bun and treacle eating contest.

At 2 p.m., the school mistress will be ready and waiting for young visitors to help her plant the new garden right next to the School House.

Parents and children can also play 1860s soldiers in the fairgrounds at 2:45 p.m. The Brockville Infantry Company will be recruiting participants for the "Parent and Child Muster", a new visitor experience at Upper Canada Village.

Upper Canada Village is located 11 km east of Morrisburg off Highway No. 2 (Exit 758 off Highway No. 401). Starting on Saturday, May 21, the Village will be open daily from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. For a summer calendar of events and more information, please call (613) 543-3704.

Singers take to stage

The Seaway Valley Singers have been hard at work over the last four months preparing for this Saturday's spring concert.

The Singers are presenting their second show of the season at the Upper Canada Playhouse on Saturday evening, May 14, 1994 at 8 p.m.

Their first concert was enjoyed by many at the beginning of December 1993, and the Singers promise this concert will be just as enjoyable.

The theme, "From Gilbert and Sullivan to Broadway" includes tunes from a variety of shows presented on Broadway from the late 19th century to the present day.

Gilbert and Sullivan's H.M.S. Pinafore will start the show which will continue through Oklahoma, The Sound of Music, My Fair Lady and West Side Story.

Apart from the chorus numbers, solos will be sung by Margaret Lee, Lori-Ann Cochrane and Peter Cazaly. The accompanist will be Margaret Brown, and the whole presentation will be conducted by music director Michael Goodwin.

The choir, with at least 50 members, was formed over a year ago in January 1993, and has appeared a total of five times in the community since then.

The admission cost for Saturday's performance is $6 per ticket. One dollar from each ticket sold will be donated to the Dundas County Hospice.

Tickets are available at Pier 31 in the Morrisburg Mall and at Berry's Pet Food store on Highway 2.

CCI executive chosen

by Rebecca van Noppen
Chieftain Staff Reporter

The Concerned Citizens of Iroquois (CCI) chose its executive for 1994 at a meeting Monday night.

Guy dePuyjalon is now chairperson and Brenda Loucks is treasurer. Lorraine Fader was chosen several months ago as executive secretary. The rest of the 14-member committee will act as directors.

The next step for the CCI is to apply to become incorporated as a provincial non-profit organization. It was originally formed to oppose the establishment of a soil-decontamination plant in Iroquois.

Enviro Desorption Inc. had tentatively made plans with the village to construct the plant. The CCI opposed the Calgary-based company.

Enviro had met its final application deadline to the Ministry of Environment and Energy (MOEE) on Oct. 26, 1993. They had initially applied to the ministry on March 26, 1993.

Instead of issuing a certificate of approval to the company, the director of approvals recommended that a public hearing be held so all sides of the issue could be heard.

Now, the long-awaited hearing has been put on hold. Enviro has told the ministry it is "not ready to proceed." The Environmental Assessment Board now awaits further word, if, and/or when, the company wants to proceed.

Although the Enviro issue seems at a stand-still, members of the CCI are not hanging up their gloves.

"We are alive and well," Fader said. "If something comes up and it is something viable, we'll take it on."

"But it will have to be very major before we take it on."

Members of the CCI said they have received a lot of support from different levels of government. Fader said they recently received a letter from Deputy Prime Minister Sheila Copps.

The CCI wants everyone to know they are here if the major issues come up.
