Hoasic Resident Sleeps While House Burns

Enjoying a nap after his Thanksgiving dinner and blissfully unaware of approaching danger, Wm. Marcellus, aged resident of the Hoasic community, was awakened from his slumbers on Monday afternoon about two o'clock by a neighbour as his house was burning.

John O'Shaughnessy, while working in a nearby field, saw smoke rising from the roof of the Marcellus house. Running first to his home, he told his wife to spread the alarm by way of the 'phone, and then proceeded to investigate. He found the door secured on the inside and, forcing it open, discovered Marcellus asleep on a couch. Rousing the sleeper he informed him of the danger and assisted him to fight the fire which was still confined to the area about the chimney. As no ladder was available, the strong wind soon fanned the blaze beyond control and with the help of neighbours who arrived quickly the contents of the house were removed to safety.

Insurance of $700 was carried, and it is expected that Mr. Marcellus will rebuild at once.

Ontario Bowling Association Replaces The Eastern

After 23 years of successful operation, the Eastern Lawn Bowling Association is no more. From now on lawn bowling in Eastern Ontario will be conducted under the newly formed body known as the Province of Ontario Lawn Bowling Association with a special district, No. 16, replacing the old association.

This decision was reached at a meeting of Eastern Ontario clubs held in the office of J. Howard Carkner, president of the Eastern Association, Ottawa. The majority of the district clubs were represented and it is believed that the change will be a great benefit to the game. The clubs were unanimous in making the decision.

Each club will appoint two representatives to the district council, which will form the executive. The decision puts the game on a sound business basis and the greens in the entire province will, from now on, be of uniform size.

The tournament held in Ottawa annually under the Eastern Association will not be affected by the decision, it was announced. It will be held as usual under the supervision of the district body, and the trophies which in the past have been competed for will again be up for competition. The district will take in practically the same clubs as comprised the Eastern Association, although there is a possibility that Kingston will be in another district.

Chesterville C.G.I.T. Girls Guests of Iroquois Group

On Thursday evening last the Chesterville C. G. I. T. group of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was entertained in Iroquois by the Iroquois group, when 19 members from Chesterville were present.

The early part of the evening was spent in singing group songs and playing games.

Miss McKay, who was the speaker for the evening, addressed the groups on "The Ideals of Canadian Girls In Training."

Miss Helen Seeley delivered two very humorous monologues, after which the groups were entertained with a couple of short dialogues acted out by two of the Iroquois girls.

A dainty lunch was served by the hostesses, and the meeting closed by singing "Taps."

Badly Bruised in Fall Off Roof

Glenn Merkley, of town, received painful injuries yesterday at the noon hour when he fell from the roof of a house at John Darling's in The Boyne district. He had just completed repairs to a chimney and was coming down the roof when he slipped on the wet shingles and fell to the ground.

He was brought into town by his brother and brother-in-law, Messrs. Harold Merkley and Howard Kittle, and given medical attention. No broken bones were found, but Mr. Merkley is suffering from a severely sprained left leg and numerous bruises.

Miss Johanna Carroll Killed When Struck by Truck

Belated particulars of the death of Miss Johanna Carroll, in Chicago, have just been received by her brother, Mr. Ed. Carroll of this place. Miss Carroll was on her way home from work and when changing cars at 12th and Halsted streets was struck by a truck and her neck broken. Other nurses were with her and she was immediately carried into Mother Carbini's Hospital where the last Sacrement was administered. Miss Carroll, on account of feeling tired, had asked leave of absence for a day as she was going off duty and her request had been granted. The funeral was held at Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Church, where very impressive services were held. The Sisters of the order formed a long line from the vestibule of the church to the curb, making a guard of honour through which the mourners and pall bearers passed. The nurses in the Municipal Tuberculosis Service had been excused from duty to attend the funeral, where every seat in the large edifice. ,which seats fifteen hundred was filled with friends from all walks of life.

The solemn high mass was celebrated by two priests of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel and one from St. Thomas of Canterbury Church. The sermon was one that will long be remembered by those present. After speaking of Miss Carroll's high professional work and her ambitions, the priest eulogized her beautiful life as a Catholic, especially her faithfulness in receiving Holy Communion.

United W.M.S. Sets Date For Thankoffering Service

The Women's Missionary Society of the United Church met on Wednesday, October 14th, at 2.30 p.m. in the Sunday School Hall. The devotional service was led by the president, Miss Bertha Merkley. During the business period arrangements were made for the Fall Thankoffering service to be held on Sunday, October 25th, at 7.30 p.m., when Miss Margaret McKellar, M. D., who spent forty years as medical missionary in India will be the speaker.

A letter from Miss Bessie Bentley, missionary in Trinidad, was read.

Mrs. W. N. Fulton sang beautifully a prayer solo: "Holy Spirit, Fill Me Now."

Mrs. M. L. Smith had charge of the study, which was a review of the society during the past year.

The meeting was closed with the Mizpah benediction.

Former Dunbar Man Dies at Rochester

On Monday, October 5th, there passed away at the Highland Hospital in Rochester, N. Y., Mr. Allan Merkley, in his seventy-seventh year, following an operation two days previously. The remains were taken to the home of his son, Cecil, at 23 Morgan street, where Thursday evening a short service was held conducted by Rev. Dr. Scott, pastor of First Methodist Church, when many Rochester friends attended, before they were brought to his late home in Winchester, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Merkley and Mr. and Mrs. A. Potter. The funeral in Winchester was held from his former home to the United Church where Rev. J. A. Waddell conducted the service, interment following in Maple Ridge cemetery when the pall bearers were Messrs. N. Beach, J. D. Stewart, Chas. Summers, Andrew Brown, Mahlon Bailey, and H. Hughes.

Many floral offerings were received from Chesterville and Rochester friends.

The late Mr. Merkley was well and favourably known in the Dunbar district where he lived for many years before going to Winchester where his wife died in 1920. Surviving him are two sons and one daughter, Hubert, Cecil and Evelyn, all of Rochester.

Family Narrowly Escapes As Home Is Burned

Rushing out in their night clothes, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Henry and family of Nuddel Bush, in the second concession of Williamsburg, and about 14 miles south of here, narrowly missed death when their fine frame house was burned to the ground at two o'clock Tuesday morning, the cause of the fire being unknown.

The large house, an exceedingly well built frame structure, was a total loss, together with the entire contens of furnishings and clothing of the family. It is understood some insurance was carried.

Mr. Henry, who is a former resident of The Boyne, suffered the loss of a barn on this farm three years ago.

Attempt is Made To Enter Local Store

An attempt was made to enter Fulton Bros.' store some time during Sunday and the holiday when a trapdoor leading from the river bank was pried partly open and some bricks placed to hold it open.

The trapdoor leads from a room in the storehouse where window glass is kept, down to the river. The would-be burglars were foiled in their attempt by a prop which had been placed on top of the door to a shelf above which allowed the door to be opened but a few inches.

Evidently disturbed in their work, they left in haste and a crowbar and a piece of a hemlock pole were found lying at the bottom of the steps leading to the door and the bricks set to hold the trapdoor up were also left in place. The crowbar was later identified by H. S. McMurray as his and which, he said, had been taken from his garage.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Sweet Celebrate Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Sweet, of Winchester, celebrated their golden wedding Saturday at their home on Main street, Winchester. The occasion was not confined to relatives and friends, as is usual, but the hospitable home was at the disposal of anyone who wished to call and extend congratulations and good wishes.

The reception hours were from 3 to 6 and 8 to 10, and during these intervals more than 300 people called on the happy couple to extend greetings and good wishes. In addition to personal expressions, letters and cards were received from all over Canada and the U. S., also numerous telegrams bearing good wishes and congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Sweet.

The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion, roses and chryanthemums being used in profusion.

Upon entering the drawing room, the guests were received by Mr. and Mrs. Sweet; their only daughter, Mrs. B. L .Carr, and Mrs. Willis Fraser, who was flower girl at the wedding of 50 years ago.

Wears Wedding Dress

Mrs. Sweet was gowned in the same wedding dress worn at the time of her marriage. It was made of plum coloured taffeta, with trimmings of velvet of the same shade. The tight fitting basque had an inset vest of velvet, with real Maltese lace in white, cascaded down the front. The high collar of velvet had a ruching of lace at the top, and lace also peeped out from under the deep pleated velvet cuffs on the sleeves. The back of the basque was pannier, with three-inch edging of pleated velvet. The under-skirt had four rows of narrow box-pleated graduated taffeta frills. The over-skirt in front was box pleated and the bottom was faced with velvet. A narrow panel of pleated velvet hung down each side. The back was shirred and hung in big puffs from the waist to the hem. With this gown a bustle was worn. Originally it had a square train, but this had been cut off and as time passed it was laid away. It was a beautiful gown and Mrs. Sweet looked charming in it on Saturday.

Mr. Sweet also wore the same suit on this occasion as he did on his wedding day. Its style has not changed much, except that the lapels of the coat were short and the coat and vest were bound all around with narrow black braid.

Mrs. Carr wore a brown velvet suit with tinsel blouse. Mrs. J. W. Fraser, of Goderich, the original flower girl, wore a black transparent velvet suit with peach blouse.

The guests of honour were the recipients of many beautiful gifts, among which was, a dinner wagon and trays, and an electric desk set, presented by the citizens of Winchester, accompanied by an appropriate address.

The Women's Institute, of Winchester, made a presentation of a large bouquet of beautiful yellow chrysanthemums, tied with yellow tulle. Other floral gifts were received from many other friends from near and far.

One of the interesting features of the reception was the presentation of a large silver flower basket filled with roses, from the official board of the United Church, accompanied by an address and the presence of the members of the board with their wives, in a body.

Mr. Sweet was born in Hemmingford, Que, a son of Richard Sweet and Eleanor Broder, sister of the late Andrew Broder. He went to Morrisburg in 1868, where for two years he attended the grammar school. Later he entered the general store of his uncle, Andrew Broder, of Winchester. His keen business foresight brought him speedily to the fore and he rose from one responsibility to another, until in 1876 he became partner and finally owner of the business. This business was located in the present store, which was built in 1871, and since 1881 has been carried on under the name of A. Sweet and Company. Mr. Sweet has always taken a keen interest in politics and municipal affairs.

Was in Council

He has served on the township council and was the first reeve of Winchester after it was incorporated into a village. In the general election in 1923, Mr. Sweet was elected member for Dundas in the Ontario Legislature. Over a lon~ term of years he had been president and secretary of the County Conservative Association, and is to-day still an interested supporter of the party. In fraternal circles, Mr. Sweet has always been an outstanding figure. He is past county master of the Orange Association, and a past D. D. G. M. of Eastern District No. 21, of the Masonic Order. He holds a life membership in Henderson Lodge, Winchester; Ottawa Lodge Perfection; Rose Croix Chapter, Moore Consistory, Hamilton, and Karnak Temple of Mystic Shriners, Montreal.

Mr. Sweet is a member of the United Church, and seldom misses attending divine service twice each Sunday. He takes an active part in all church work and has served on the official board of the church continuously since 1884.

Although more than 75 years of age, Mr. Sweet is as active as a man of 40 and takes a keen interest in everything that is advanced for the welfare of the community.

Came From Illinois

Mrs. Sweet, whose maiden name was Mary Ester Boyd, was born in Winnebago County, Illinois, and came to Canada with her parents, Abraham Boyd and Eliza Stackhouse, when a child. For some years she lived in Smiths Falls and in 1876 came to Winchester to reside. It was not long after her arrival in Winchester, where her musical talents and attractive personality at once made her a favourite, that the bright young business man known as Aaron Sweet, sought and won this charming young lady, and on October 11th, 1881, the nuptial knot was tied by Rev. Mr. Wilson, then pastor of the Methodist Church. Mrs. Sweet has always been a prominent figure in women's organizations. She is a life member of the W. M. S. and the Women's Association of the United Church. She is also an active worker in the Ladies' Aid Society, and during the years of the war took a keen interest in the work of the Red Cross Society. Like her husband, she seldom misses attending church on Sunday. Charitable work of all kinds have played a prominet part in the life of this couple, and every effort for the social welfare of the community has discovered in them generous contributions, both of service and money.

Jackie had drawn a caricature of the teacher.

Jackie: "Yes, sir."

Teacher: "Now, I will show that I am an artist in black and blue."

GINGER AND SPICE

By Etta Bitta Pye

THIS is the season when the fragrance of spices seems to especially "belong," beginning with the relish-making and graduating (though very early this year) into the Thanksgiving good things that are traditional.

Too good— and too practical and useful—these dishes, to be restricted to a season. They are the sort of thing that can be served over and over, with added welcome. Do you, by the way, serve fresh, hot gingerbread, sliced and topped with whipped cream (sweetened, of course) as a substitute for pudding?

Gingerbread

1-3 cup fat
½ cup sugar
1 cup molasses
1 egg
3 cups sifted soft-wheat flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ginger
¼ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup milk

Cream together the sugar and fat. Add the molasses and beaten egg. Sift together twice the dry ingredients and add to the first mixture alternately with the milk. Bake in two shallow pans in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 30 to 40 minutes. Serve with cream cheese or whipped cream.

1 cup of sour milk may be used instead of the sweet milk. In that case, use 1 scant teaspoon of soda in place of the one-half teaspoon now called for, and use only 2 teaspoons of baking powder.

Spice Cake

¾ cup butter or other fat
1½ cups sugar
3 eggs
3 cups sifted soft-wheat flour or
2 5-8 cups hard-wheat flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon cloves
¾ cup strong coffee infusion
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream the fat and sugar together and add the well-beaten egg yolks. Sift together the dry ingredients and add alternately with the coffee to the first mixture. Add the vanilla and fold in the well-beaten egg whites. Bake in a greased tube pan for 1 hour in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.). Ice with vanilla frosting.

Ginger Snaps

1 cup molasses
½ cup butter
½ teaspoon soda
3¼ cups sifted flour
2 tablespoons sugar
1 to 2 teaspoons ginger
1½ teaspoons salt

Heat the molasses to the boiling point and pour it over the fat. Add the sifted dry ingredients to the molasses and fat. Mix well and make into a long roll as large around as the cookies are to be. Wrap this roll of dough in waxed paper and put in a cold place to chill for several hours or overnight. The dough must be cold enough to cut properly. When ready to bake, cut the roll into very thin slices with a sharp knife, and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until lightly browned. Remove from the pan while hot. Store the snaps in a tightly-covered container so that they will hold their crispness.

First Claim Was Staked By Woman Telegrapher

To a woman goes the distinction of having been the first to stake a claim in the Little Long Lac gold area of Ontario which has been causing such a stir in Canadian mining circles during the past few weeks. According to the natural resources department of the Canadian National Railways, the lady in question was Miss Gertrude Haines, at the time Canadian National telegraph operator at Long Lac station. Miss Haines knew little about geology, but in 1915 a mining engineer coached her in the rudiments of the prospector's science and induced her to file on a vein of quartz which promised gold content. Whether the claims were profitable or not, history does not record, but the honour of having first recognized the mining possibilities of the district undoubtedly belongs to her.

So promising does the Little Long Lac area promise to be that at least 100 claims have been staked there during the past three weeks and at the present moment some 50 prospectors are working in the district.

Judge Reserves Decision On Assessment Test Case

Charges that valuators appointed to value real property for the purpose of equalizing assessment were not disinterested persons, since they were members of the council which appointed them and therefore could not make a fair and just valuation, were made before Mr. Justice McEvoy in Weekly Court, Ottawa, Tuesday, hearing a motion made by W. A. Parisien, a ratepayer of Cornwall, to quash a by-law of the Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry.

For three hours George F. Henderson, K. C., of Ottawa, appeared directly for Mr. Parisien and indirectly for the Town of Cornwall, which really initiated the proceedings, and George Gogo, K. C., of Cornwall, counsel for the counties, argued the right of the counties to appoint members of their own body to do such work.

Mr. Henderson maintained the reeves of Osnabruck township, Mountain township and the village of Lancaster, who were appointed valuators under the by-law which the applicant sought to have quashed, made drastic reductions in the valuations of their municipalities.

For the counties, Mr. Gogo held that the Ontario statutes, which he quoted extensively, gave members of the Counties' Council every right to act as valuators. He further asserted that the valuators, even though they were members of the Counties' Council, had been scrupuously fair in their work. In fact, he said, the Counties' Council had permitted the town of Cornwall to appoint a valuator of its own, Nathan Copeland, through its three representatives on the counties' body.

Summing up, Mr. Justice McEvoy said the whole point was whether the three reeves were eligible to make valuations, having regard for all the conditions and circumstances. He reserved his decision.

HEALTH SERVICE of the Canadian Medical Association

SAFETY THROUGH PROMPT ACTION

IN CANADA, approximately 109,000 deaths occur each year Out of the total number, just over 8,000 are the direct result of tuberculosis In our campaign against this disease, we are encouraged to know that, despite the heavy toll of human lives which tuberculosis continues to take, the number has nevertheless been greatly reduced. Year by year the ravages of tuberculosis are being lessened.

But what of those individuals who make up the present number of victims? Can nothing more be done for them than is being done? We have no specific means of prevention against tuberculosis, nor has there been discovered as yet any specific remedy to cure the disease. Tuberculosis is fought, and fought successfully, through leading a hygienic life.

The person who has developed tuberculosis and who goes to a sanatorium for treatment is not given drugs or other remedies. The treatment consists of rest, fresh air, and proper food. He lives a hygienic life and takes an additional amount of rest. Rest is necessary in order to allow the diseased part to heal.

The power of nature to overcome tuberculosis and bring about a cure is great. The disease is generally a long drawn-out conflict between the germ and the body. The body stands an an excellent chance of winning provided that at an early stage of the disease it is given a fair chance to do so through rest, fresh air, and proper food.

The cases which occur are due, first of all, to exposure to the germs of tuberculosis which come from someone who has the disease, to which is added failure to live a healthy life, giving the germs their chance to multiply and cause trouble.

Most of the deaths which now occur are due to the failure of the individual to secure treatment early. Safety demands prompt action; danger follows delay.

In order that cases may be treated early, it is necessary that they be recognized early. This means that the case must go early to his doctor and be examined. The person who goes to his doctor once a year for a health examination gives the physician the opportunity to discover such diseases as tuberculosis in their early stages, and so secures early treatment.

The person who has a persistent cough, or who has lost weight, or who finds that his ordinary work tires him when it did not do so formerly, should realize that such conditions are suggestive of tuberculosis. They may not be but, if they are, the sooner it is known the better, for then treatment can be started.

If tuberculosis does occur, safety lies in prompt treatment and in nothing else.

Questions concerning health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto will be answered pearsonally by letter.

An early settler does not mean a man who pays his bills promptly the first of the month.

DRINK MORE MILK

HERE are just a few of the reasons why milk is such an important article in the diet of old and young alike.

Milk is the best food in the world.

Women need milk to keep them healthy and to preserve their beauty.

Men need milk to ward off the dangers and decline of middle age.

Milk is the enemy of middle age. It strengthens the nerves and supplies essential vitamins. The food value of one quart of milk is equal to:

Nearly one pound of lean meat,
Nine or ten eggs,
More than one pound of chicken,
Nearly two pounds of fish.

The vitamins supplied in milk are: vitamin A, necessary to the promotion of growth and in bone building; vitamin B, providing against nervous disorders, and vitamin C, necessary for healthy development and for maintaining health.

Milk is not fattening. Taken by itself, not gulped nor taken with food, it gives health and vitality without adding an ounce to waste tissue.

Drinking milk freely every day is one of the best ways in which to build up and maintain both physical and nervous energy.

The woman who drinks milk looks and feels younger than one of the same age who does not, at the same time by drinking milk she is physically more attractive as it enables her to remain slim and supple.

The man in his forties who drinks milk has a sense of being fit, and clear headed, his mental keenness is greater, his muscles are more elastic and he can do more and better work with less fatigue.

WINTER AUTO DRIVERS SHOULD NOW PREPARE

AT THIS SEASON of the year motorists are advised to have their cars overhauled and prepared for winter driving. Such advice is timely, inasmuch as this marks the close of the heavy driving season and cold weather imposes new burdens on motor cars. There are various adjustments for cold weather driving to which every motorist should give attention, and several of these are listed by Oldsmobile service officials. Due to shorter days and colder weather, considerably more work is imposed on the electrical system of an automobile in winter, therefore, it is wise to have the service men go over all the wire replace any broken wires, or those on which the insulation is worn, and clean and tighten all terminal connections so as to prevent current leaks.

All ight bulbs should be checked and new ones installed where needed. The battery should be checked and kept supplied with distilled water. Battery terminals should be cleaned and greased. If the battery is kept fully charged, there is no danger of its freezing and it should function without trouble.

The cooling system should be thoroughly cleaned and inspected before adding any special anti-freeze compounds. It is advisable to have this work done by a competent service man who is trained and experienced in this work, and who has the proper equipment for doing it. He should tighten all radiator and hose connections, to prevent leaks.

Tires should be carefully inspected to see if the wear is inclined to be to one side of the centre. If this is the case, the tired should be reversed on the rims, to give additional tire mileage. If motorists are likely to drive fast, the best tires should be placed on the front, where there is greatest danger in case of blow-outs.

Other things which should have the attention of the service man are the draining of the differential and transmission and re-filling with winter grade lubricant; cleaning and spacing spark plugs and distributor points, and setting the ignition timing; general tightening of chassis and steering parts; cleaning generator commutator and adjusting charging rate for winter driving; adjusting valve lifters; adjusting and equalizing brakes, and aligning front wheels.

Jack: "You'd never guess how absent-minded Uncle Joe is. Why, what do you think he did yesterday when Auntie sent him to buy a teaset?"

Jill: "I'm sure I don't know."

Jack: "Well, he came back with a settee."

Final Funeral Rites for Dr. G. Johnston at Montreal

Many mourners representative of the business and professional life of the community gathered at Dominion-Douglas Church, Montreal, on Tuesday, to pay a last tribute to Dr. Geo. F. Johnston, who died aboard the Aurania on September 28th on his way to England. He was in his 70th year.

Dr. Johnston, who received an honorary degree from the University of Ohio in recognition of the work he had done as governor of the Wesleyan (now the United) Theological College, was a partner of the financial firm of Johnston, McConnell and Allison at the time of his retirement several years ago.

Rev. Dr. Lloyd Smith, Rev. Dr. S. P. Rose, and Rev. Dr. James Smyth officiated at the service. In a striking eulogy of Dr. Johnston, Dr. Smyth said that in the period of 20 years which he had known him, Dr Johnston's loyalty to his friends was one of his most marked characteristics. "He was a man of indomitable courage and vitality who lived and worked at high tension," he said. "Notwithstanding the many demands made upon him by his wide business associations, he yet maintained his religious interests, and was deeply interested in theological questions and new trends of thought. Although he knew sucess, he was not unacquainted with anxiety and trouble, and sorrow served to enrich his sterling qualities of character and personality.

Dr. Johnston is survived by three sons, Norman, Morgan M. and Charles F. Johnston, and one daughter, Mrs. A. E. Powell, of Cleveland, Ohio, who were the chief mourners at the funeral. Interment was made at Mount Royal Cemetery.

Dundas Teachers Guests Of School for Deaf

The fifty-seventh annual meeting of the Dundas Teachers' Institute was held at the School for the Deaf, Belleville, October 8th and 9th. The teachers were welcomed to this institution by Mr. H. B. Fetterl-- M. A., Superintendent of the Ontario School for the Deaf, former inspector of the county of Dundas.

The opening address was given by Mr. J. R .Coligan, president of the Institute. This address contained many helpful hints on beautifying school grounds, and was accompanied by slides showing improvements of surroundings.

This address was followed by the minutes of the last annual meeting which were read by the secretary Mr. H. Hamilton.

The public speaking contest by the winners of the public speaking contests of rural school fairs, was held. The contestants were: Margaret Christie, North Mountain Consolidated School; Bernice Shaver, of Osnabruck, and Mary Manning, Wales. After the speeches, which had been prepared, were given, the contestants were asked to give impromptu speeches, Mary Manning being the winner of the contests. This public speaking showed the results of the training in oral work in the public schools.

Mr. W. J .Stewart, B. A, B. Paed., I. P .S., gave a few remarks of special interest to the teachers, pointing out the value of public speaking in the public schools.

Miss Hilda Davidson, O. E. A. delegate, gave a report of the proceedings of the annual meeting of the Ontario Educational Association. She gave in clear cut paragraphs the main theme of the outstanding addresses and provided much food for thought to teachers.

Mr. Simpson, B. S. A., presented the medal to the winner of the public speaking contest. At the close of the afternoon session Mr. H. B. Fetterly, M. A., was made an honourary member of the Dundas Teacher's Institute.

The evening session was held in the auditorium of the O. S. D. Mr. H. B. Fetterly, M. A., was chairman for the evening programme. The first number was a dance of the Irish Lilt, those taking part being pupils of the School for the Deaf. This dance showed how children who are deaf can be taught rhythm by sound vibrations. The charming costumes worn by the pupils were made by the sewing classes at the school. This was followed by lessons taught by members of the staff of the O. S. D., thus giving the Dundas teachers an idea of the methods used in teaching deaf children, also the advancement of such pupils. These lessons revealed the wonderful work which is being carried on at this institution.

An interesting illustrated lecture, " A Day in the Land of Sir Walter Scott," was given by Miss M. K. Clifford, M. A., B. Paed., of Ottawa Normal School.

The Forrester Memorial medal was presented to Teddy Weir of the Winchester Public School by Mr. W. J. Stewart, B. A., B. Paed., I. P. S.

At the close of the evening session a social hour with orchestral music was held in the auditorium of the O. S. D.

Friday Morning Session

On Friday morning the class rooms of the O. S. D. were visited.

Miss M. K. Clifford, M, A., B.Paed., gave an address on "Methods and Objective Tests in Grammar." Important factors in the teaching of grammar were stressed which were very valuable to the teachers.

After this address the financial statement and auditors' report were given. The report of the resolutions committee was given by Mr. H. Graham, principal of Winchester Public School. The report of the nominating committee was given by Mr. P. S. Boyd, principal of Chesterville Public School.

The officers of the Dundas Teachers' Institute for 1931-32 are:—

Hon. President—W. J. Stewart, B.. A., B. Paed., I. P. S.
President—Irwin Payne,
Vice-President—Miss Louise Currie
Sec. Treas.—H. Hamilton,
Committee—Lloyd LaPorte, Arnold McMartin, Miss Lenora Merkley.

At noon the Dundas teachers and South Ontario teachers were served a delicious luncheon in the spacious dining hall of the O. S. D., which gave the members of the Dundas Teachers' Institute an opportunity to meet the members of the South Ontario Teachers' Association.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Hospital days were lonely. Of course, her friends did all they could to keep her cheerful — her room was a bower of roses — but how she looked forward to evening when Jack could sit by her and talk of his day at the office.

Then came the news that he must leave town on business. She wondered how she could stand the wait until he came home. But Jack, wise fellow, knew how to bridge the gap. Promptly each evening at nine he called her over Long Distance and told her all the things she wished to hear.

Extravagant? . . . not a bit . . . for night rates are always inexpensive! What could be worth more for what it cost?

THE "GOOD" OLD DAYS

THERE USED TO BE a good many more things to do around home than there are to-day. People can consider they are busy now, and perhaps they are, but what would they do if they had to turn back to conditions as a good many people can remember them.

There used to be a pile of wood in the average back yard, and not far off was a bucksaw. That was in the days of cordwood, and not many men of mature years missed the woodpile in their youth.

The woodpile suggests the woodbox which used to sit beside the stove in the kitchen. That woodbox had to be kept filled and that was a chore for the boys in the house. Then there was the business of keeping a little kindling split for starting the fire in the morning.

When the ashes were taken out where did they go? Very often into a barrel over against the fence, where water was poured through and the run-off taken to make soft soap.

To-day we snap a button and we have lights. There used to be the trip to the store with the coal oil can. When it was filled there was the routine of fastening a small potato on the end of the spout to keep it from spilling. That, in turn, leads to the old task of filling the lamps, and cleaning the chimneys, to say nothing of the fine art of trimming the wicks so there would be something approaching an even flame.

In a good many places it used to be a necessity in the fall to "bank" the house—that is, take the earth and pile it up around the foundation so that the cold would not enter there. More work.

No person ever thought much of going to a store and buying a pair of socks. They were knit right on the premises, and the hand that could not turn a heel or finish off a toe was not considered skilled. The mittens for the boys were made right on the premises, and also the woollen strings that attached the mittens so they wouldn't get separated.

We dare say a good many people can remember the days when all the door mats were made after corn husking took place. The husks were braided and then made into mats. In other days there were busy evenings when the rag mats were made. How many homes in rural sections missed the work of stringing apples so they could be hung up to dry, or else placed on a rack above the kitchen stove? Dried apples constituted a standard dish then.

Of course, people are busy to-day, but we wonder how many of them are as handy as the folk of a couple of generations ago?

BELIEVE IT OR NOT

HERE'S one for Ripley. The head of a large accessory concern in Chicago vouches for the fact that, unbelievable as it may seen, people drive up to some of the breadlines in the Chicago area in their own automobiles. He asserts that in a town adjoining his own there is a breadline of 5,000, and it is not uncommon for men and women to drive up, park their cars, and take their places in line to wait for food. It is unquestioned that the automobile is about the last thing people are willing to relinquish when adversity comes, but the difficulty of obtaining gas and oil would seem to be as great as that of obtaining food. However, it has often been asserted by employment officials that a car is one of the greatest helps in finding jobs.

News and Information For the Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

The Ontario Agricultural College annual auction sale will be held on Thursday, October 22nd. A very choice lot of stock are in this year's offering, which should prove attractive to the buying public.

Plans are going ahead for the 10th annual Royal Winter Fair, termed the Commemorative Show, November 18th to 26th, when the choicest of Canadian field products and livestock will be on display.

The International Ploughing Match is being held near Peterboro this week, October 13th to 16th. A good piece of land was selected a few miles south of the city on the highway running toward Port Hope. As the location was central for several counties, the usual local events were thrown open to residents of Peterboro, Durham, Victoria, and Northumberland. The last three days of the competition are open to the world. This event never fails to draw a great throng of farmers and the present year is no exception.

Injurious to Wire Fence

Many times the advice is given in the fall of the year to "burn out the fence rows" to get rid of harmful weeds and insects. This, no doubt, is a good policy from those standpoints, but it should be kept in mind that it is distinctly harmful to any type of wire fence. Zinc melts at a comparatively low temperature and the heat from the burning grass or weeds is often sufficient to scorch the protective coating and will probably shorten by several seasons the useful life of the fence.

Tobacco Prices Lower

Purchase of the record flue-cured tobacco crop in the Norfolk Elgin-Oxford area began last week. The top price has dropped from 40 to 30 cents a pound this year, with the prices for inferior grades correspondingly low. Owing to the fact that the tobacco is of uniformly high quality, the average price should be at least 25 cents a pound. While the price is a disappointment to growers and will have serious results in some instances, it will have a salutary effect upon the industry, in that it will prevent undue expansion next year. The acreage in this district has climbed from 200 acres in 1926 to 20,000 acres in 1931, The crop this year was estimated at 16 million pounds and the anticipated revenue at four million dollars.

The Hog Market

A review of the hog market situation states that there is no justification for the practice which has been all too general this season of trying to beat the market by selling off lightweight unfinished hogs to gain a few cents per pound at current prices. The principal effect of such practices has been to demoralize the market and force prices much below what they otherwise might be. With Canadian hog prices drastically realigned both to suit domestic conditions and export market prices, the common sense practice at present is to finish hogs up to the proper weight around 200 pounds. This is one effective way in which to develop a steady hog market, to regularize marketings and at the same time to improve quality.

Weekly Crop Report

Crop conditions throughout Ontario continue very satisfactory as far as yield is concerned. Excellent crops of potatoes, roots and corn, both for ensilage and grain, are being harvested. Sugar beets have been moving to market in good condition and tobacco growers were favoured with excellent weather for harvesting their crops. New fall wheat is showing a greater amount of growth of top than usual and will go into the winter in good condition. There is a fairly large yield of small seeds such as Red Clover. In most counties fall ploughing and after harvest cultivation is well advanced. Prices for such crops as potatoes, turnips, grains, and the majority of farm products, as reported by representatives, are very discouraging.

The Potato Market

The first gathering of its kind, potato growers from all the commercial producing sections of the province, met in Toronto recently under auspices of the Ontario Growers' Markets' Council to deal with the collapse of potato prices on local markets. "Present prices are not warranted by actual conditions," declared H. L. Craise, chairman. "Reliable reports presented by commercial potato growers show there is a crop of excellent quality potatoes. While there is no surplus over total requirements for this winter, there should be no need to import potatoes this year until our own production has been completely consumed." Mr. Craise also urged consumers to insist on home-grown potatoes in an effort to help Ontario growers who are not realizing sufficient this year on farm produce to make ends meet. One grower pointed out that the present low prices were accounted for by the activities of truckers who have disorganized the market. "This in addition to the scarcity of money has made it possible for growers to be driven into accepting panic prices," stated Mr. Bauer, secretary of the Council. "Growers believe that consumers are willing to pay reasonable prices for potatoes because, even at $1.00 per bag, it is doubtful if any cheaper food can be purchased. These facts, coupled with but a normal crop on the average, lead growers to believe that present quotations of 20 to 30 cents at the farm represent an unnatural situation and one that can be corrected." Widespread publicity with a view to stimulating a keener demand for home-grown potatoes is planned.

When to Apply Lime

A test of the soil should be made to make sure that it requires lime. If the soil proves to be acid then the answer to the question when to apply lime might be "when you have time." Lime is for the benefit of all crops in the rotation, but particularly of benefit to legumes. The best time is possibly just before sowing a grain crop that is seeded down with alfalfa or clovers. Liming land ploughed for fall wheat which is to be seeded with clover in the spring is a convenient and satisfactory practice. Lime is not a fertilizer, but simply neutralizes the acidity of the soil and should be thoroughly worked into the soil during the preparation of a seed bed to become efficient. It is poor business to farm land that is lacking in lime and strongly acid in reaction. The productive power of the soil is reduced when it becomes acid. Correcting this condition with the use of ground limestone increases the efficiency of the manures and fertilizers applied and therefore contributes to the cutting down of costs of crop production.

Proper Ration Needed

A hen may lay a few eggs early in the spring without receiving much feed or attention or she may lay at the end of the season when feed may be picked up in the fields, but the hen has not yet been developed that will lay without the proper ration during the fall and winter months. A good mash is important if the hens are to lay, and it should be before the birds all the time. If any one of the necessary elements required for the making of eggs is absent, production is impaired. Pullets require a little different mash than the old hens and it is a mistake to house them together and have them feed from the same hopper. Home-grown feeds with the addition of some purchased concentrates may be mixed, or a commercial mash may be purchased that will supply the necessary ingredients to the bird. Chickens will pay dividends if properly housed and given the right rations.

The Judge: "This lady says you tried to speak to her at the station."

Salesman: "It was a mistake. I was looking for my friend's sister, whom I had never seen before, but who's been described to me as a handsome blonde with classic features, fine complexion, perfect figure, beautifully dressed, and—"

Witness: "I don't care to prosecute the gentleman. Any one might have made the same mistake.

No, no, Maudie, making a house-to-house canvas does not mean stretching an awning between two houses.

WHAT IS DONE WITH TAXES

THE TORONTO GLOBE prints a letter from Joe Lafrance, to the Town Clerk of Mattawa in which the latter refuses to pay a tax of $9.

"Mister Town Clerk at Mattawa. I receive from you a letter which say I haff to pay $9 for tax. I donna par no tax for this. You say I have 13 mills, but dere is only one mill at mine where I work, and it is not reddy for run anyway. I have got no dog an' if I have a dog I kill him sooner I pay $2. What you do by dis money what you get?"

Joe has, possibly, asked an innocent question that hundreds of other people would like to ask. It does appear remarkable that we are compelled to pay so much money for the mere privilege of living. True, we have many improvements and conveniences in comparison with conditions half a century or less ago, but it is just a question if people are any more happy or contented now than they were then. Our system of taxation is such as to make it impossible for a man to own a home outright for himself and family, because, if he fails to pay the taxes levied against it, the house can be seized by the municipality and sold for the taxes.

Of course municipal government must be kept going, and rightly so, streets and public buildings must be cared for, education must be continued, but it would be pleasing to learn that all these necessary expenditures were reduced to a minimum. But perhaps they are.

"What you do by dis money what you get?"

A THOUSAND DOLLARS

ELIZAZBETH KILBOURN'S departure for town was joyful. She stood in the door of the diningroom and smiled at the bowl of roses on the table, and in the door of the parlour and smiled at everything in the room. When she locked the door she smiled at the porch furnishing, and she stopped three times before she reached the gate to listen to the bees in a feathery honey-locust tree and to admire Mark's flower beds and to look up at the tall oak trees at the back of the house. Elizabeth's walk to the station was punctuated by a gay waving of hands from a dozen porches, and her footsteps were made light by a sense of impending pleasure and triumph. She had a little shopping to do for the house; then she was to meet her cousin Ethel, who was to lunch with her; then she was to make a purchase for herself; then she was to fly home to prepare Mark's dinner.

In the first months of their married life she had often met Mark at luncheon or had gone into town with him in the morning or had met him for the homeward journey, but now she travelled independently. Mark was intensely anxious to succeed, and his business abstraction began when he left the house. He was the youngest clerk in the Broadway Bank, and he had hopes of having some day an important office. The president of the bank, Mr. Eli Baker, was Elizabeth's great-uncle, and Mark believed that he, as well as all Elizabeth's prosperous relatives, was watching him. Thus far, however, he had but once talked with Mr. Baker, who was a powerful and distant divinity to the clerks.

After Elizabeth had finished her buying of brushes and ordering of canned vegetables, she went to the Grantham to meet Ethel.

For once Ethel was on time. She sat in the lounge of the hotel reading, and, though her head was bent and her eyes were fixed on her book, she was the most conspicuous figure there. She was tall and dark, and she had a beautiful imperious head. Rich bright colours were becoming to her, and she wore them constantly. As she rose to meet Elizabeth, every eye was upon her orange sweater and the deep crimson of her hat.

Elizabeth always felt a leap of the heart when they met. Ethel was magnificent, both physically and mentally. Mark was a match for her in cleverness, but she herself could never meet Ethel on an even footing.

"Well, my child," said Ethel, "how are the cows and the chickens?"

"They are all well," answered Elizabeth. Sometimes Ethel's teasing annoyed her but to-day nothing could annov her. "Are you ready for lunch?"

"Ready? I've been waiting for half an hour."

Ethel dropped back a little to let Elizabeth lead the way to the diningroom. Elizabeth was married; but in their childhood and youth Ethel had always taken precedence. Even now the waiter glanced at her rather than toward Elizabeth and led them to the corner which her eyes were directed.

"I have a surprise for you," she said when Elizabeth had given the order. "I'm going abroad on Wednesday."

Elizabeth felt a sudden pang. She and Mark talked and dreamed of going abroad and visiting together the places she had visited before she knew Mark. But Mark was tied to the bank. The pang lasted only a second; she would not consider a trip to Europe for an instant if it involved separation from Mark.

"The Davies are going, and Mrs. Davis' sister had to give up the trip at the last minute; so they asked me. They are taking their car, and they have made no plans—the ideal way to travel. I wish you were going."

"It would be nice," said Elizabeth with cheerfulness that left no room for a suspicion that she envied those who were going.

Ethel looked at her wonderingly; there was no one in the world from whom she could not be separated. She felt a sudden pang of emptiness in her life: then she began to talk rapidly. The Davises were the sort of people who were glad to have plans made for them, and she meant to suggest Scotland and the golf tournament for the first objective.

"If they seem bored we can move on."

"They won't be bored with you," said Elizabeth.

Ethel told her news of gayety. Lila Effingham and John Garrett were engaged; Ellen Meyer was going yachting with the older Garretts; Alice Marsh was planning to build a house in the Berkshires.

"Your mind isn't on us!" Ethel said.

"Oh, yes it is," protested Elizabeth. "But I was thinking at that minute of what I'm going to buy."

"What are you going to buy?"

Elizabeth laughed a little excitedly. The purchase represented far more than appeared on the surface. It was pleasant to show Ethel that Mark was prosperous.

"I'm going to buy a ring. A week ago I saw a beauty in Kinnear's window, and to-day I'm going to buy it."

Their lunch finished, the two went down the avenue. They looked into Kinnear's window for a moment before they entered. On a piece of blue velvet had been placed a few pieces of platinum jewellry set with diamonds and sapphires. Elizabeth pointed to a ring that was beautifully modelled and set with a single sapphire.

"There it is! I was dreadfully afraid it would be gone."

"Do you know how much it is?"

"Yes, I asked. Five hundred dollars."

"Have you an account? Charge it to me if you haven't."

"I have the money with me," said Elizabeth. "Mark doesn't like accounts."

The clerk brought the ring from the window and took others from the case.

"It's a beauty," said Ethel. "I'd like to have it myself. Are you going to wear it home?"

"No," said Elizabeth, her eyes shining. "I'm not going to wear it till Mark sees it."

The two cousins stood for a moment on the sidewalk.

"I'm coming in to-morrow to stay at the Grantham till we sail," said Ethel. "Why don't you lunch with me, wearing your jewel? Couldn't Mark get off? We'll lunch down near the bank if that will make it easier."

Elizabeth shook her head.

"Mark couldn't get off, and to-morrow my laundress is coming. I couldn't possibly leave. I hope you'll have a jolly summer. I'll write to you regularly."

At about the time when the two cousins were bidding each other goodbye, Mark Kilbourn at the Broadway Bank felt a hand on his shoulder. He turned to receive a message summoning him to the president's office. He hoped that now both his salary and his position were to be advanced.

He went down the hall to Mr. Baker's door. He found him alone, an alert-looking old man whose manner was pleasant. Mr. Baker bade Mark sit down and asked him at once about Elizabeth.

"I've been thinking of coming to see you some evening," he said.

"I wish you would," said Mark. "Elizabeth would be delighted. We'd like you to take dinner with us."

"If you'll give me potluck."

"We will. Potluck at our house is good."

"I always have a little interview with the employées of the bank at the end of the first year," said Mr. Baker. "By that time we know whether a man is likely to be of permanent value to us. If he is, I like to have the pleasure of telling him so; and if he is not, I always want to explain to him why he has failed and see whether there is a possibility of his adjusting himself to our requirements. You belong in the first class—there has been only commendation for your work. To empolyées of that kind we offer a reward."

Mark's heartbeats quickened. Perhaps he was to be head clerk!

"The reward is this," went on Mr. Baker. "We offer to invest for the employée, in securities which are absolutely safe and that pay an exceedingly high rate of interest, all that he has saved. These securities are those of our bank, which are seldom on the market. We feel that we are thus giving our employées both an excellent opportunity for investment and a share in the bank itself."

Fortunately Mr. Baker seemed to expect no response.

"Now Mr. Garber, who will attend to this matter for you, is out of his office to-day, but on Wednesday he will be glad to see you. I understand that you had no debts when you married, and that with the wedding gifts of her relatives Elizabeth bought a property in Sumner. Elizabeth has, if I'm not mistaken, some income, and you receive a good salary for a young man."

"Yes," said Mark a little faintly.

"You have had probably no repairs this first year, and I suppose Elizabeth has needed few additions to her wardrobe."

"No," said Mark with an effort.

Mr. Baker turned back to his papers.

"The money is not to be borrowed, and it is to represent the exact amount of your savings. Some evening I'll go out with you. That is all for to-day."

"Thank you," said Mark. Automatically he opened the door and walked back to his desk and changed his coat and took up his pen.

"Are you going to stay?" asked the clerk next him in a facetious tone.

"I hope so," said Mark. He still heard Mr. Baker's grave voice, and as he heard he saw written in his own clear hand in his cheque book the balance in three small figures, a two and a one and a two. It might almost as well have been nothing!

Mark saw Elizabeth on the porch as he returned home on Monday evening. As soon as she saw him she ran to the gate to meet him and slipped her hand in his arm.

"You look tired, Mark!"

"Do I?" asked Mark soberly.

"And solemn. But you won't be tired and solemn after you've had dinner and seen what I have to show you."

"Well, let's have dinner," said Mark with an effort at cheerfulness. He did feel solemn. Moreover, he felt afraid, he had begun to think of the future, of the chance of illnes or hard times or obligations that he could not meet.

"You have something serious to tell me," said Elizabeth as they sat down.

"We'll finish dinner first," said Mark.

"You're sure you're not ill?"

"Sure."

"And nothing dreadful has happened?"

"No. Nothing dreadful has happened. What have you been doing?"

"I met Ethel in town." Elizabeth repeated Ethel's interesting news.

"Now what have you to show me?" Mark asked when she paused. He did not speculate about what the object would be; he was too deeply preoccupied.

"You tell me your news first," said Elizabeth. She had removed the salad plates and put the dessert on the table, and she returned to her place. She was a little disturbed. Mark had not noticed the lovely ring on her finger.

"Well, we'll have the serious part over; perhaps that is better," said Mark. "I had an interview with Mr. Baker."

"He hasn't dismissed you!"

"No, he complimented me. As a reward for well-doing he offered me a chance to invest in Broadway Bank stock all that I had saved this year. He seemed to think I should have saved a good deal. He had it all reasoned out. But I haven't saved anything. I have two hundred and twelve dollars in the bank, but I couldn't offer them that."

Elizabeth looked at him with round eyes. "How much would you like to offer them?"

"Oh, a thousand dollars, perhaps. But we won't think of the past. Here's a sort of budget I've made out. You go over it, and to-morrow we'll consider it together."

"Will they—will they think less of you? Will it affect your position?"

Mark's brow knitted. He spoke with a sobriety that showed his apprehensions.

"We don't have to cross that bridge yet."

Elizabeth seized the edge of the table with one hand. Her other was in her pocket, shaped to a fist. From a dozen possible questions ,all frightened, and some ashamed, she asked one.

"Did you tell Uncle Baker that we hadn't saved anything?"

"No, I didn't tell him. I'm not supposed to take up so small a matter with him. I'm to report to Mr. Garber Wednesday."

Elizabeth drew her hand out of her pocket. In the pocket she left a small glittering object. She believed that she had been out of her mind.

Tuesday. Elizabeth was on her way to town. She felt no false pride about carrying the ring back to Kinnears; she felt only a dreadful fear that they might refuse to take it back. She thought of offering it to Ethel, but she was afraid Ethel would buy it whether she wanted it or not. Ethel had admired it; she had even said she would like to have it, but that did not mean that she would have bought it of her own free will. Ethel had a dozen beautiful rings and seldom wore any.

The clerk listened in doubtful astonishment.

"You'll have to speak to Mr. Christian. madam. Come this way."

Elizabeth's heart sank as she followed the clerk into an office. There she found herself face to face with a grave gentleman who bade her sit down. When the door was closed she told her story from the beginning, even who she was.

Mr. Christian took the ring from her hand and looked at it sharply.

"You are Eli Baker's grandniece?"

"Yes."

Mr. Christian seemed to be weighing the ring in his hand.

"Does your husband know about this?"

"No."

"Are you going to tell him?"

"I'll have to."

"I mean are you going to tell him if we take it back?"

"Why, yes, I'll have to!"

"Why?"

"If I don't, he'll think I've been economical in order to save, when I've been economical in order to spend beyond my means."

Mr. Christian turned to his desk, wrote a cheque, and handed it over.

"You can have that cashed as you pass the desk."

That evening Mark came home soberly. He tried to be cheerful, since worrying would not mend his situation, but he remembered all the time how he would have felt if he had had a thousand dollars to carry to Mr. Garber the next day. He might save other thousands, but this, the saving of his first earning year, could never be made up. He did not blame Elizabeth; he believed she had done remarkably well for a girl who had been brought up in rich men's houses. She had asked for nothing beyond that which he had given her, and she had kept within that sum.

Again Elizabeth was on the porch, and again she ran to meet him. She ran like a child, and her youth and her delicacy reproached him. She should not have been asked to be a poor man's wife.

"Elizabeth," he said, "last evening you said you had something to show me. I rudely forgot all about it. What was it?"

Elizabeth laughed. "You'll find it."

Mark unfolded his napkin. It was fresh, but it was not quite smooth, and it had an object folded inside it.

"What is this?" he asked in astonishment. "Not money?"

"It is eight hundred dollars," said Elizabeth. "That, plus your two hundred, will make a thousand."

"Oh, my dear!" cried Mark. "Surely you didn't borrow?"

"No," said Elizabeth. "I saved it."

"Saved it? What do you mean?"

"Now hold on to something, Mark," said Elizabeth steadily. "I wanted to see how much I could have. I thought of the money as my money after you gave it to me, not as ours. I didn't realize you were giving me too much. I saved five hundred dollars from the housekeeping funds, and besides I had my own interest, which was three hundred more. Yesterday I went to Kinnear's and spent five hundred for a ring. Ethel went with me. I had it on my hand when you told me that you needed money. To-day I took it back. Now to-morrow you go in and wave the thousand at my Uncle Baker. When he comes to dinner I'm going to give him boiled beef and cabbage and little of that. I'll show him!"

"Oh, Elizabeth!" said Mark. His eyes shone.

"You needn't look at me as though I were a genius of finance," said Elizabeth. "But I can do better next year. It wasn't hard—it was fun. We'll save fifteen hundred." Suddenly she began to cry. "I never thought of money in terms of work until I reckoned up the hours it had taken you to earn that ring. It burned my hand."

Mark rose and went round the table, and as he went he laughed, the laugh of youth and courage and confidence.

"Some day we'll go in and find Mr. Christian and get that ring back," he promised. "Just you see!"

Mark carried his thousand dollars to Mr. Garber, who took it without a word of surprise or pleasure or congratulation or any other warm emotion. He filled out the blank spaces on a thick, handsomely engraved document, and passed it to Mark.

"There, Mr. Kilbourn. The use of the safety deposit vault is free to our employées. See Mr. Richter."

Back at his desk, Mark stood for a moment, pen in hand, before he turned to his books. He had had many happy moments, and he was to have more, but this moment had a happiness of its own, never to be repeated.

WHO SAID CATCH A COLD

"I caught a cold," is about the silliest expression heard to-day. No one tries to catch a cold. The trouble with us is that we do not try very hard to keep a cold from catching us. That is why we meet so many to-day who are complaining about what happened when the weather changed. Only about 17 persons out of each 100 manage to get through a year without suffering from at least a mild cold. Some people suffer several times during the year.

One of the most important things you can do, both to prevent and correct colds, is to keep your body as alkaline as possible. Vegetables, fruits and milk in the diet will do this.

If, however, you feel a cold coming on. take a hot bath and get into a warm bed immediately. Then drink a full glass of hot lemonade. Sweat out those poisons. In the morning squeeze the juice of a lemon into a half glass of water. Stir in a half teaspoon of baking soda and drink it while it bubbles. Repeat this three times a day until your cold has disappeared. Remember, however, that if your cold fails to respond promptly your physician should be interviewed. A little cold is often a dangerous thing.

"We keep down expenses with Shredded Wheat"

"I've found one way of getting better breakfasts for less money. I serve Shredded Wheat. I don't know anything else that gives so much nourishment and costs so little. It's so easy to digest that every one likes it, too—especially when I cover it with fresh fruit. Shredded Wheat is whole wheat, and with milk it contains every food element we need for growth and good health."
