Doctors oppose WDMH bed cuts

Yves Cossette
Record Staff

CHESTERVILLE - Doctors have voted overwhelmingly against a proposal to close 16 beds at Winchester District Memorial Hospital as a means of reducing an anticipated $200,000 deficit this year.

Doctors voted against the measure, which they say was proposed by WDMH Executive Director James Egan, at an Oct. 10 medical meeting.

Doctors debated Egan's proposal to close 16 beds from December through April 1991. In a vote held after the debate, doctors voted 22 to 2 against the proposal.

Whether the proposal is accepted will be decided by the hospital's board of directors. If the proposal is accepted, the number of beds at WDMH would be temporarily reduced to 102 from 118.

Dr. Suru Chande, chief surgeon at WDMH, said if the bed closure is carried out the hospital would have to turn away patients.

"Oh absolutely. There's no question about it. I see major problems occuring," he replied when asked if bed closures meant patients being turned away.

Chande criticized the timing of the proposed bed reduction. January through March is traditionally the busiest time at the hospital, because winter illnesses peak then.

"Canadian winters make it very difficult. We have a lot more colds. We have a lot more flus. We also have a lot more falls outside, various breaks of one sort or another. It's just traditionally a busy time," he said.

When first contacted on Monday, Egan denied there was a proposal made to close 16 beds. But when pressed he said he had several proposals to present to the hospital's board of directors. He refused to say what those proposals were.

"It's not ethical for me to talk to the press about something the board has not even discussed yet," he said. The hospital's board of directors met Tuesday night, after The Record's news deadline.

Dr. Henry Prins, WDMH chief of staff, said Egan had proposed to close one ward (16 beds) in the hospital from Dec. 1 to the end of the fiscal year, the end of April 1991, to save a "substantial amount of money."

This year's deficit was brought on primarily by a provincially legislated wage settlement which saw CUPE workers at WDMH receive an eight-per-cent raise. The hospital anticipated a six-per-cent raise and budgeted accordingly, Prins said.

But the eight-per-cent raise increased the deficit by $100,000, Prinz said. He said Egan hopes the closure of 16 beds will save that $100,000.

Prins agreed closing beds between January and April would mean closing the beds during the busiest time of year.

"I have mixed feelings, because I sit on both sides of the fence," he said. "I'm caught in the middle."

Prins sits on the board of directors and is the hospital's chief doctor. Doctors he said are prepared to operate with a deficit, while the board is required by the province to balance its budget.

There were only limited ways to reduce the deficit, he said.

Chande predicted a backlash from the public if the beds are closed.

The hospital is in the midst of a $3-million fundraising campaign to renovate the hospital. Closing beds in the midst of the fundraiser could set it back, he said.

"To try and and antagonize the public at this sort of time would be absolutely the worst thing to do.

"If I came to you looking for a donation a week after I sent your grandmother to be treated elsewhere because I didn't have bed for her here, I don't think you're going to be too pleased," he said.

But Chande also foresees a problem sending patients to other hospitals. Hospitals across Ontario have budget problems and are taking cost-cutting measures, such as bed closures, to save money.

"It doesn't take much brains to figure out that if everybody is doing the same thing and

Victim receives compensation for flooding

CHESTERVILLE - More than 18 months after his home was flooded by a sewage back-up, Queen Street resident Lorne Jordan has received compensation for damages to his home.

Two other residents whose homes were also damaged by the same flood are expected to receive compensation shortly.

Ralph Perry of Nordic Adjusters of Nepean, the adjusting firm which represents the Chesterville Agricultural Society, confirmed Jordan had received his compensation and arrangements are being made to send a compensation check to Paul Monast, who is in Florida

The agricultural society has been blamed for causing the flood by leaving sewage entry points at the Chesterville fairgrounds uncapped..

Queen Street resident Murray Droppo still hasn't been contacted by the adjusting firm about his compensation. But the money will be sent to Droppo, said Perry.

The money hasn't arrived from the agricultural society's insurance company based in Toronto. The cheques are being distributed by the adjusting firm.

"The cheques are coming in one at a time, so there's only one cheque left. It just hasn't come through yet," he said. "I (had)

Newsbriefs

Clean fun

WINCHESTER - Area youths will be able to have some good, clean fun Sunday, at a fun day for children sponsored by North Dundas District High School's environmental club. The fun day, to be held in the Winchester Public school gymnasium, will feature an environmental play entitled Professor Noah's Spaceship and there will also be various games and activities. Everyone is welcome.

Break-in

CHESTERVILLE - A home was broken into last Tuesday night in Winchester Township, Lot 18, Concession Two. Winchester OPP said an unknown person made off with an orange-colored lawnmower, 20-inch color Admiral television and $50 in cash. The thief gained entry by forcing his way through the front door. So far there are no suspects and the police were unable to find any trace of vehicles at the scene.

Cracking down

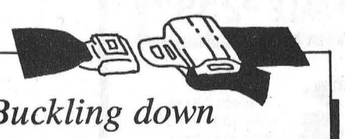
CHESTERVILLE - Winchester OPP is threatening to crack down on youths riding dirt bikes on Chesterville Village streets. OPP Sgt. Jim Irvine said the OPP has received a couple of noise complaints from residents. The youths, believed to be aged 13 to 18, are riding their dirt bikes on village streets to get to and from a field south of the village. Riding dirt bikes in fields is permitted, provided the rider has the owner's permission. To drive them in the streets without a licence plate or driver's permit is illegal. Irvine said the OPP will charge any youths they catch riding their bikes illegally.

Time to change

Readers are reminded to turn their clocks back one hour Saturday at midnight. Why? We're not sure.

Home Improvement

Be sure to look inside for this year's Fall Home Improvement tabloid, included with this week's issue of the Chesterville Record, offering a variety of tips for the home handy-person who wants to get their home in ship-shape over the fall and winter months. The tabloid is a pullout section in the second section of the paper.



Buckling down

WINCHESTER - The Winchester detachment of the OPP checked 333 cars to see if drivers were buckling up this past week. Winchester OPP Sgt. Irvine said only three tickets were handed out. Another ten drivers were given warnings.

Mix-up delays investigation of suspicious vehicle sighting

Greg Kielec
Record Staff

CHESTERVILLE - Local police have laid to rest fears over a reported sighting of a mysterious vehicle at St. Mary's School in Chesterville.

The vehicle was sighted at the school yard Oct. 1 by crossing guard Penny Wheeler, who, concerned for the safety of school children, notified police.

But one mystery remains; how the original complaint made to police became lost in the shuffle and was never acted on.

Police originally thought the mix-up was due to a glitch in the OPP's new central dispatch system put into operation this summer. The system handles OPP calls for the entire Eastern Ontario region made by people using a special 1-800 number.

Wheeler notified police of a suspicious vehicle Oct. 1 through the OPP's new central dispatch system. The complaint was never acted upon.

After doing his own investigation, Winchester OPP Sgt. Jim Irvine has determined it was an error by one of his officers, not a glitch in the system, which caused the suspicious vehicle complaint to be lost in the system for three weeks.

"It ends up it's an error on our part here," he said.

He did not say how the complaint became lost in the system. But he said it was not due to the new communications system.

He said the officer would "be spoken to" and that the incident won't happen again.

A police investigation, initiated after the detachment finally learned a complaint had been filed, has put to rest fears of a suspicious vehicle, warnings about which had travelled by word of mouth as far as North Stormont School in Berwick.

What Wheeler had thought to be a suspicious vehicle was actually the truck of a parent watching their child play at the schoolyard.

"The call itself, there's absolutely nothing to it...all it was was a parent dropping his children off and watching him play before he took off back home," Irvine said.

"So there's absolutely nothing to that and its been passed on to the schools so the parents will be made aware."

Why did it take a second call by Wheeler and a number of calls by The Record to get the issue resolved? Irvine said the answer to that will be kept within the detachment walls.

"I finally got the right date that this thing happened, and time, so I'm just having it checked out to satisfy myself. That will be looked after internally."

Irvine was first contacted by The Record Oct. 15, but knew nothing of the Wheeler complaint. Normally, if a complaint is made, a report is filed by the investigating officer. No such report was report on file at the Winchester OPP detachment.

Phone calls by The Record the following day, Oct. 16, attempting to verify if a complaint was made to the OPP were partially successful. After one phone call to St. Mary's and two to Chesterville Public School, it was learned there was some susbstance to what had up until then been a rumor about a suspicious vehicle.

CPS Principal Kirsten Gee confirmed the school was warned by Wheeler of a suspicious vehicle in town. The school's students were then warned to be wary of the described vehicle.

Gee said Wheeler was also to have called the OPP and warn St. Mary's of the suspicious vehicle. But St. Mary's Principal Margaret Benke, when contacted by The Record, said the school had not been contacted by Wheeler and, like the OPP, knew nothing of the suspicious vehicle.

The mix-up had Benke, Gee and Wheeler all baffled last week. Benke insisted, after checking with her staff, that a call was never received from Wheeler. Gee insisted Wheeler contacted her and also was to contact St. Mary's and the OPP. Wheeler insisted she called CPS, St. Mary's and the OPP.

All the time, the OPP insisted it never received a call from Wheeler, downplaying the whole incident as just a rumor perpetuated by over-imaginative kids and over-reacting parents.

Irvine conceded it is "quite possible" police would not have learned of the complaint had it not been for the investigating by The Record.

"As soon as...I was made aware of it, we

Hallowe'en tricksters warned

OPP plans to get tough with vandals

Yves Cossette
Record Staff

CHESTERVILLE - The Winchester detachment of the OPP plans to get tough with vandals for the upcoming Hallowe'en night.

Last year masked vandals went on a ghoulish tear through town smashing windows and signs causing thousands of dollars in damage.

Winchester OPP Sgt. Jim Irvine promised the OPP would be ready for vandals this time around. Details on what the OPP has in store were sketchy, for security reasons.

"The less the young pukes know...(the better)," he said. "We're putting on extra patrols."

Five officers will be on duty Hallowe'en night, He wouldn't say how many would be placed in Chesterville, but he said special attention would be given to Chesterville.

"We've alloted the dog-man to...patrol the area too,' he said. The dog-man comes from the canine unit at the Long Sault detachment and he will be accompanied by a German Shepherd champion ghoul tracker.

Irvine hopes the police presence will deter anyone from destroying property. But he doesn't expect police presence will stop Hallowe'en pranks altogether.

"Soap and eggs and that, are a part of Hallowe'en," he said.

But Irvine said the OPP will arrest anyone caught vandalizing and will have them charged.

Another option for the OPP is to invoke the preventive breach of the peace. The statute allows police to hold people police suspect are planning a crime to prevent it from taking place.

Irvine said the OPP could use the breach of the peace statute to take suspected vandals out of circulation on Hallowe'en night and hold them for a "reasonable length of time", he said

Reeve Jim Cook has been briefed on the OPP's strategy to fight Hallowe'en vandalism.

"(Irvine) has a little different game plan than what we had last year and he's working on it. I think its better than it was last year," he said.

Cook is hoping Hallowe'en will be without the vandalism which occurred last year, but he doesn't expect an end to pranks.

"I'd like to cut it out all together, but there are things because of Hallowe'en's nature, soap on windows and egg throwing, that we're probably going to have to put up with" he said.

If the police action fails to deter Hallowe'en hooligans this time around, the village may have to consider hiring additional police for Hallowe'en. But Cook is hoping that won't be necessary, because it is expensive. he said.

While the OPP readies itself for the hooligan onslaught, the Chesterville recreation department will be hosting a Hallowe'en Party for children.

The party will be held from 6:30 p.m. to 7:45 p.m. Oct. 31. Fun and games await children planning to attend the party. There will be costume judging and surprises.

Candy or cash donations and volunteer supervisors will be accepted by Recreation Director Robin Langille. Candy donators are asked to leave candy wrapped in its orginal cellophane package, and not donate apples.

Party to keep youngsters off village streets

CHESTERVILLE - Friendly adult ghosts, goblins and witches are being sought to help little creatures of the night have good time Hallowe'en night.

The party, an annual affair, relies completely on the generosity of adults donating time, cash and candy to the cause.

Robin Langille, Chesterville's recreation director, has already received donations of candy and the three people have volunteered to supervise the children at the party. But a few more adults to keep the little ghosts and ghouls in line are still needed.

"Probably 10 or 12 (volunteers) would be a really nice figure," Langille said.

The Hallowe'en night party is being billed as an alternative to the door-to-door tradition. The party gives parents who work shifts and are unable to hand out candy or to take their children around trick or treating to still let their children take in the spirit of Hallowe'en.

For the sick and elderly people, the party offers a chance for them to provide candy without having to answer the door to trick or treaters, Langille said.

The party kicks off 6:30 p.m. and runs to 7:45 p.m. Oct. 31. The young ghouls will be able to take part in games, like bobbing for apples or I spy. And there will be a costume judging contest. Prizes will come in the form of treats.

Organizers will only be accepting candy with original cellophane wrapping. They are not taking fruits. The move is to ensure against possible tampering, Langille said.

People wishing to volunteer as supervisors may leave their name and phone number at the town hall at 448-2342.

Local druggist opposes tobacco ban

By Yves Cossette
Record Staff

CHESTERVILLE - A Chesterville pharmacist is opposed to a proposed ban on tobacco sales at pharmacies.

Dale McNaughton, owner of Seaway Valley Pharmacy in Chesterville, said he believes drug stores should have the right to sell tobacco products.

"I believe in freedom of choice. We don't promote (tobacco products), but they are here," he said.

The Ontario College of Pharmacists has asked 2,500 drug stores in Ontario to stop selling cigarettes. If the voluntary ban is ignored, the college has promised to ask the province to legislate a ban.

The college has questioned the professionalism of pharmacists who sell tobacco products while offering health care.

But McNaughton dismissed the charge saying he still offers quality health care service despite cigarette sales.

"I don't see where my selling tobacco in my store has deterred from our image as professionals," he said.

Nor does McNaughton believe a ban would reduce the number of smokers.

"If by my not selling them...it could be guaranteed that one person in town would quit smoking, I'll get rid of them," he said.

But he's not convinced it would deter anyone from smoking. If the pharmacy no longer sells cigarettes, the smoker will simply go to another store, he said.

McNaughton said tobacco sales account for a significant portion of his pharmacy's revenue, but he didn't say how much. The Canadian Cancer Society estimates Ontario pharmacies earn $800-million a year from tobacco sales.

A survey of Ottawa-area pharmacies shows 52 of 130 pharmacies don't sell tobacco.

Noble Villeneuve, MPP for Stormont, Dundas, Glengarry and East Grenville, is also opposed to a legislated ban.

"I would like to see it on a voluntary basis. I believe we're over-legislated now," he said.

Villeneuve agreed pharmacists are facing an ethical dilemma but he felt it should be up to the pharmacist to decide whether to sell cigarettes or not.

"I know pharmacists are supposed to be selling medication to make people well...however cigarettes are a fact of life. They are a legal product," he said.

"A ban on cigarette sales in pharmacies won't deter smokers from buying tobacco products. They'll just go elsewhere," he said.

FROM THE FRONT

expected it last week."

The agricultural society was blamed by Chesterville Village Council and the Ministry of Environment for the flood in March 1989. They said sewer entry points on the fairgrounds were left uncapped permitting rain water to get into the sanitary sewer causing it to back up and to flood the homes of nearby residents.

The society refused to accept responsibility for the flood and blocked an attempt by its insurance company to settle the compensation claims of the victims last December.

Jordan, who picked up his check last week, was satisfied with the compensation he received.

"It just took a long while coming, that's all. It's nice to think that everything is settled," he said.

He wouldn't disclose the amount of compensation received.

Compensation for the flood victims was made possible in August when Basil Dawley, an advisor to local MPP Noble Villeneuve, mediated a deal between the agricultural society, the village and the MOE.

In the deal, the agricultural society agreed to compensate the victims in return for the hook-up of the fairgrounds sewer to the village system.

The fairgrounds sewer was disconnected last December by the MOE to prevent a reoccurrance of the March, 1989 flood. It was reconnected in time for the Chesterville Fair in late August.

Gerry Brugmans, the president of the agricultural society, was also glad the dispute was resolved. But he maintained the agricultural society was not responsible for the sewer flood.

"There's no proof we were to blame. It was nobody's fault. It was an act of God," he said.

started the process of doing our job, which would have been done had I known about it." He added: "The thing is we do know about it now and we probably would have because she would have called again."

As well, police did not have much of a lead to follow from the first complaint. "We didn't have a drivers' licence or anything, we didn't know who it was or the licence number, just a grey half-ton (truck). Well there's all kinds of grey half tons."

Wheeler said she thought no action was taken by the local OPP because the complaint likely 'wasn't forwarded to the Winchester detachment. "I had phoned the 1-800 number and they were supposed to get in touch with the Winchester (OPP)."

She could not explain why St. Mary's School had no recollection of her call. "I don't know because I phoned St. Mary's and talked to the secretary, and Mr. Wheeler...the janitor, he was notified too."

GST to make exports more competitive

Yves Cossette
Record Staff

BERWICK - About 40 business people, farmers and consumers were told Thursday night at the Berwick Community Hall the proposed Goods and Services Tax would make Canadian products more competitive overseas.

Ken Riley, an excise audit officer with Revenue Canada Customs and Excise, said the proposed GST would strip away existing federal sales tax which requires manufacturers and retailers to pay a sales tax for goods purchased.

The imposition of the GST would make Canada's exports less expensive abroad, he said.

The proposed tax is the subject of a controversial debate in the Senate, the upper chamber of parliament. Majority Liberal Senators, acting on a massive public consumer backlash against the proposed tax, have delayed the passage of the GST bill with stalling tactics such as reading the names of people on petitions signed against the GST.

The proposed GST will enable manufacturers and retailers to reclaim the GST they have paid from the GST they collect. The bottom line is that businesses won't have to pay any sales tax under the GST.

"You will be paying as you buy and you'll be recovering as you sell," he said.

Riley was one of two federal government officials from Revenue Canada on hand to present a seminar on the GST. The seminar was aimed at briefing business people on how they will have to administer the proposed tax.

Riley stressed the proposed GST was not yet law. But he said Revenue Canada had to be ready for when the proposed tax is scheduled to take effect.

"Our mandate is to be prepared Jan. 1, (1991)," he said.

The seminar was limited to technical details, but that didn't stop one area farmer from questioning the merits of the GST. Bill Van Loon told the two Revenue Canada officers he couldn't see how he would gain from the GST.

"Somewhere along the line its going to cost me money," he said.

Most people attending the seminar stuck to asking questions related to administering the GST.

Ken Riley, an excise audit officer presenting the seminar, stressed at the outset of the meeting that he was not there to answer questions on government policy, but to tell business people how to charge the GST and then deduct any GST they have paid for.

To prepare for the imposition of the GST businesses have to take four steps.

The first step is to register. All businesses with a revenue of more than $30,000 annually must register. For businesses making less than $30,000 registration is an option. If they opt out though, they don't collect the rebate either, Riley said.

The second step, is for a business to determine how frequently it will file a return. Those businesses with an annual revenue intake of more than $6 million must file monthly. Those businesses with revenue between $500,000 to $6 million can file either quarterly or monthly. Businesses making less than $500,000 have the option of filing monthly, quarterly or annually.

For businesses, the key aspect of filing the tax return comes in calculating its refund. Calculating the refund is done by determining the total GST charged. The GST paid on items needed for the business, is then subtracted from the total GST charged.

The difference goes to Revenue Canada, Riley said.

For farmers the procedure is somewhat different. Farmers won't charge the GST. But they can claim a tax refund for GST taxed goods which are purchased for farm use.

Businesses in need of additonal information regarding the implementation of the GST can call the toll free number of 1-800-465-6160.

Reaction to the seminar was mixed. Murray Manley, a Berwick area farmer said he was still confused by some aspects of the GST, but said the meeting was informative.

"I thought it was well presented," he said.

But a Morewood carpenter, Tony Van Gurp, said he wasn't looking forward to the paper work the proposed GST would give him. Anyone with a small business will have to sit down at night and figure out what is taxed under GST and what isn't.

"It's going to be a lot more work for the small businesses," he said.

The seminar was arranged by Revenue Canada. Both Riley and his colleague have toured a host of municipalities in the Valley to help businesses and farmers understand the GST better.

if you have a whole pile of sick people requiring admission you're not going to be able to place them anywhere else," he said.

Ottawa hospitals have traditionally accepted patients from surrounding areas when rural hospitals are unable to provide specialized treatment. Chande said it is likely Ottawa-based hospitals faced with their own winter bed shortages would turn away patients able to be treated at rural hospitals.

The closing of beds at WDMH would mean doctors having to spend more time placing patients at other hospitals when they should be caring for their patients, Chande said.

A bed shortage would also mean the cancellation of elective surgery.

Dr. Duane Justus isn't sure if patients would actually be turned away from WDMH if 16 beds were closed.

"But if things are the same as they have been in the past, I think it's going to create a great deal of strain in getting people into hospital at the appropriate times" he said. "There'd be more transfers. We'll manage. We'd have to."

Children's HALLOWEEN PARTY

Wednesday, October 31

Chesterville Community Hall

6:30 p.m. - 7:45 p.m.

On Wednesday, October 31, 1990, the Chesterville Parks and Recreation Department is hosting a Halloween Party for children. The party will be held at the Chesterville Community Hall from 6:30 p.m. to 7:45 p.m. This event is being held to offer local residents an alternative to the door to door tradition.

The night will involve games, costume judging and surprises which will be supervised and enjoyed by all. Some prizes will be awarded and treats for the children will be available. The children must be picked up by 8:00 p.m.

Anyone wishing to donate candy or cash to this party is asked to drop it off at the Town Hall prior to 4:00 p.m. October 31, 1990. If you are supplying candy, please leave candy in its original cellophane package. (No fruit please). When you drop off your donation, you will receive a sign to place in your door stating that you are participating in Chesterville's Halloween Party.

If you would be interested in helping supervise the children please leave your name and phone number at the town hall, 448-2342 and I will get back to you.

Scouting for apples

Robbie Graham, 11, of Chesterville, makes a sale during the Chesterville Scouts fundraising apple sale Friday. Scouts braved the cold weather to sell apples Friday between 4 and 6 pm to raise money for the local movement. The Scouts were also out Saturday selling apples. The apples are purchased for the Scouts by the local branch of the Royal Canadian Legion. The scouts, in turn, provide the Legion with manpower for its annual poppy sale campaign.

Ault Foods testing water conservation

WINCHESTER — Ault Foods Ltd. is conducting a a series of experiments that could result in a substantial reduction in water consumption at its plant here, and provide at least temporary relief to the village's overburdened infrastructure.

Plant technical manager Gary Dean and two European engineering students are currently field-testing equipment that could save the company, and the village, up to 90,000 gallons daily. In an interview last Friday, Dean said he hopes the new system will save "major amounts of water".

When interviewed, Dean and his two student assistants were awaiting delivery of the recently-developed equipment from its German manufacturer. If the equipment proves feasible and cost- effective after two months of trials, Ault will be the first company in North America to use the technology.

To the best of his knowledge, Dean says, only one other plant in the world, in Europe, is using the technology at present.

What the equipment is designed to do, explains Dean, is to recover, cleanse and re-use water that otherwise would be discharged as waste. He hopes that the equipment will significantly improve operations in the plant's cleaning area.

Besides these obvious benefits, time and money could be saved because the recycled water won't need softening, as does village-supplied hard water that is chlorinated at its source.

Dean was purposely vague on details about the new machinery and its manufacturer. Because it represents a new environmental innovation, he would not release any information that might adversely affect its cost.

If the equipment bears up under the Ault evaluation team's scrutiny, Dean feels Ault will no longer need to truck water from Morrisburg during the summer months when local supplies usually decline. He estimates that about four million gallons of water are trucked to the plant annually to offset the summer shortfall.

Benefits from the Ault study will also accrue to other companies operating in Canada and locally. Dean says the equipment is being field-tested for Nestle and Kraft Foods, as well.

"That is good news," said village Reeve Larry Gray when told about the recent development at Ault. He added that he isn't surprised that Ault is investigating water-saving technology.

"Although they (Ault) receive a lot of water (from the village), they weren't great wasters of it," the reeve said Tuesday.

The reeve calculated that 90,000 gals a day is roughly equivalent to the daily production capacity of a well that pumps 70 gals. per minute. With four of the village's six wells on line, and running at maximum capacity, about 350 gals. of water per minute are pumped into the village's system.

Nursery school auction nets $1,000

Yves Cossette
Record Staff

CHESTERVILLE — Bidding took place at a dizzying pace Sunday at Winchester's Henderson Hall as a team of two auctioneers traded turns in selling donated goods for the Happy Face Nursery School in Chesterville.

The fundraiser netted the school $1,000 and will serve to build up the school's cash reserves.

Organizer Marion Stanley was pleased with the outcome.

"We had better participation than last year's...it was a good fundraiser for the nursery school," she said.

Although participation was higher than lst year, the profit was about the same. This year's auction had less items to sell than last year's. Goods and gift certificates were donated by 26 area merchants. Stanley blamed the smaller amount of items received on a late start in canvassing businesses. "We should have canvassed the merchants sooner this year," she said.

Bargain hunters were able to find vacuum cleaners, guitars, furniture, toys, and a dryer and sofa. Stanley, who is in charge of fundraising for the nursery school this year, had hoped the sofa and dryer would fetch more money than it did.

"Unfortunately it did go fairly cheap...we still made money, but I still felt bad for the people that donated them, that they didn't go higher," she said.

Stanley believes many people came looking for smaller items like toys. The highest bid of the day was for $50, she said.

The outcome of Sunday's fundraiser leaves the nursery school in a better financial state than what was forecasted by former treasurer Bob Pitruniak. He had forecasted a budget shortfall of $3,500 for this year. But higher fees this year should leave the school with a $400 surplus.

"The nursery school will almost pay for itself this year," she said.

The budget forecast doesn't account for what impact hydro bills and taxes will have on the school's financial situation and a government subsidy for the school's teachers is still in question.

The money made from fundraisers serves as a cushion for future budgetary shortfalls, she said.

Helping this latest fundraiser was the turnout of 20 families who had children attending the nursery school. Stanley said at least another 10 families who didn't have children attending the nursery school came also, as well as a number of people who came and went throughout the afternoon.

The school also got help from the two auctioneers, Hunter McCaig and Harold Ball, who donated their time to sell the items.

Stanley said she was plesed with the calibre of the auctioneers. "The auctioneers were great," she aid.

The nursery school's next fundraiser is a Mini-Merchant Mall scheduled for Nov. 18. It will be held at the Winchester Lions Club Hall from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Organizers are hoping local merchants and crafts people will rent tables to advertise or sell their wares.

The school has also earned $250 from the sale of honey. Nursery school volunteers are selling the honey produced by a Metcalfe area beekeeper.

Dundas county 4-H places well

OTTAWA -- Dundas County 4-Hers should be proud of their showing at this year's Ottawa Winter Fair says the county's Rural Organizational Specialist.

Keith McGriskin says although the members didn't bring home any first-place finishes, a number of them placed very well for such a large show.

McGriskin said everyone did their best, and seemed to enjoy it.

In the dairy heifer class, three local members had strong showings. Jill Hess of Williamsburg took home a second place finish in her division of the junior heifer class.

Craig Smith of Chesterville also placed well with a third in the senior heifer category, while Derek Merkley of Morewood took third place spot in the summer yearling heifer class.

As well, Dundas dairy placed first in the decorated tie-stall competition.

In the horse ring, Tina DeVries of South Mountain placed third in western equitation as well as taking third in the command class.

Also, Jack Nadeauof Iroquois placed second in horse showmanship competition and Angela Berube of Mountain took the fifth spot in the same event.

Wendy Vanlanen of Kemptville placed third in sheep showmanship competition and Angela Berube of Mountain took the fifth spot in the same event.

Other Dundas county 4-H competitors were: Daryl Dion, Mark Dion, Jason Steven and Eric VanDenBroek in beef; Catie Clapp, Tim Clapp, Allan Farlinger, Geoff Hardy, Tracy Henderson, Korrine Hutt, Ian Porteous and Darlene vanWylick in dairy; Linda Magee in horse and Jason Croteau, Marc Dion Craig Mattice, Ginger Tessier, Becky Trivetts and Crystal Workman competing in sheep showing competition.

According to McGriskin 210 entries competed in the dairy heifer classes, 35 in horse, 45 in steer and 40 in sheep. Competitors were from the 11 Eastern Ontario counties as well as from four counties in western Quebec.

Holding on

Four-year-old Brittney Bruining is one of the many new students of the Chesterville District Skating Club. Bruining was not convinced that she could support herself, so she spent a lot of time holding on to the boards during her first lesson Mon., Oct. 12.
