Once people thought the world was flat, later round, and now crooked.

CRUMBS from Graham's Loaf

Here we are at the end of the year and we feel more than a little stooped. Before some one pronounces that word as if spelled "stupid" let us hasten to say it means a kink in the back and it is one of our No. 1 grunt and groan models, replete with symptoms, staggerings, sad murmurings and generally insufferable invalidism.

Over a period of about a hundred years we have been prone to take refuge behind a sore back when the going gets rough. It usually occurs when the wind is from the east, the payments are behind on the Red Monster and the lady half of the whole man is just a little dissatisfied with the weekly dole. About that time too, the child dissolves into a mess of hives, rabies, scabies or something resembling pinkeye and the house is threatened with a solid six weeks of quarantine. Then some dull, spiritless morning when there isn't a chance in the world of getting out for a run with the rabbit dog, we take to the lumbago.

That is the morning the toast is at the other side of the table; like a gentleman we stretch with that well-developed boarding-house reach of ours, making sure one foot is on the floor, when lo! there we are face down in the marmalade, emitting pitiful yelps. Such a gratifying hustle and bustle about the old man ensues, we are always sneakingly grateful the kink arrives in front of a sympathetic audience. One is carefully unearthed from the preserves, gently unsprung from the peculiar crouch of the lumbago victim and eased over to the welcome couch.

Brave as a lion with a tail mangled by a jackal, we spurn the idea of getting medical help. At 7,000% it isn't worth it, we announce to all and sundry and that is what the paper said that company got for their pain pills. No, sirree, Bob! Man and boy for 20 years we have harboured this kink and this time we will lick it by sheer will power. So we head to the office and the staff members resign themselves to putting up with more growls and groans than come from the Pioneer IV as it orbits earth.

One thing about a kink in the back, the sufferer is not alone. It is not long before he has discovered his ailments are only a continuation of most of his friends' quickly-told histories. And the cures are legion, ranging from drinking brews developed by the Druids of Olde England to modern sarsaparilla in an antibiotic coating. Finally in this particular case, the pressure gets too great and we head for the men in white. And as usual we are met at the door by the

Good well for water system

McElheran well test pumped potable flow proves promising

Chesterville councillors are feeling elated these days over the test pumping that is just completed on the McElheran well. The well is 86 feet deep, drilled 8 inches in diameter. Water was found at the 72-foot mark and the drill stopped at 86 feet to allow test pumping.

The water tastes pure and good although final word must come from the Water Resources Commission.

Test pumping was carried out over a continuous 72-hour period. In that time, many thousands of gallons were pumped, the last 24 hours at a rate of 150 gallons per minute. The water level stayed constant at 38 feet and the water remained clear and potable.

The McElheran well, if it tests pure, is adequate for the village system. What is needed now is a standby well and the drill rig is at work again on the Paul Monast property trying to find just that.

The deep well in the park has proven unpalatable and will be filled in. The Mary Street water, low in quantity, is very high in iron and is also unsuitable.

Water in large quantities poured for 72 hours from the McElheran well on Queen Street West last week. Final pumping ran for a steady 24-hour period at 150 gallons per minute and the well laughed at the pump. Level stood at a steady 38 feet, which left a good 50 feet of drill hole for the pump to work in. The water seems to be good tasting along with the abundance. In our photo driller Ramon Casselman at the left and engineer Don Jeffs are looking over the 150-g.p.m. stream.—Record Photo.

New Legion officers

Chesterville Legion members met last week for their annual meeting in Legion Hall. Nominations and elections were held and a new slate of officers was presented to the membership.

The following officers will act for 1960:

Mrs P. G. Hewitt, 67

Monday morning, December 28, the community learned with regret of the passing of Mrs Percy Hewitt in Winchester District Memorial Hospital. She had been ill there for eight weeks before the end came, and was 67 years old.

Mrs Hewitt was the former Ella Mae Morrison, daughter of the late Mr and Mrs Samuel Morrison, of Cassburn district near Vankleek Hill. There she met her husband and in 1912 became the bride of Percy Gordon Hewitt who survives. They later moved to Chesterville.

Three children were born to the union, Mrs Allison Graham (Elsie), Chesterville; Arthur Hewitt, Bancroft, and Mrs Elmer Carley (Beryl), of Wellington. There are several grandchildren.

Mrs Hewitt was a full partner with her husband in the pursuit and love of music. During their early married years, the Hewitts played in orchestras throughout the Vankleek Hill district and after coming to Chesterville the interest continued. Mrs Hewitt was a faithful member of Trinity United Church choir for many years which her organist husband led.

Mrs Hewitt had a way with flowers and her interest in books was heightened for a long time while she was librarian of Chesterville Public Library. She had a hearty interest in public affairs and was for some years secretary of Chesterville Women's Institute.

Funeral services were conducted by her minister, Rev E. B. Bugden, at the W. B. Rowe Funeral Home on Wednesday of this week. Interment was made in Maple Ridge Cemetery.

Mrs Robert Woods

Mrs Robert Woods, well-known Winchester resident, died suddenly Sunday shortly after arriving to take part in a hymn festival at Winchester United Church. She was 61.

The former Elva Russell, she was born at Dundalk, Ontario, daughter of the late James Russell and Mary Davidson.

She was the wife of Robert Woods, a well-known Winchester hardware dealer.

Mrs Woods was a graduate of Toronto Normal School and taught in Western Ontario schools. She later received her ATCM from the Toronto Conservatory of Music and taught music and voice at Sarnia and Windsor.

She went to Winchester in 1946 and took an active part in United Church work, particularly in choir and musical activities. She was treasurer of the music committee and accompanist for the Bel Canto chorus.

She was also a member of the Evening Auxiliary of the W.M.S. and a director of the library board.

She is survived by her husband, and a son, Donald, attending the University of Wisconsin at Madison, Wis.

The funeral was held at the Vice and Craig Funeral Home on Tuesday at 2.30 p.m., with Rev A. J. MacDonald officiating. Interment was in Woodlawn Cemetery, Hamilton.

W. John Robinson

The death of W. John Robinson, Dunbar, came as a shock Thursday morning. He had been in failing health for a few months but was not considered seriously ill. Mr Robinson was in his 78th year.

Born in Williamsburg Township, he was the son of the late Isaiah Robinson and his wife, Elizabeth Casselman. The greater part of his life was spent near Wales where he farmed in the Second Concession before moving to Dunbar about 11 years ago.

His wife, the former Nettie Marcellus, predeceased him in 1955.

Survivors include two daughters, Mrs Melvin MacMillan (Olive), Winchester, and Mrs Viola Gallinger, Chesterville; three sons, Fred, Chesterville; Harold, of Ingleside, and Wilfred, Ingleside; 10 grandchildren and two great grandchildren; two sisters, Mrs Arthur Whitteker, Williamsburg, and Mrs Wallace McCormick, Kenmore.

The funeral was held Saturday with Rev Douglas O. Fry, Chesterville, officiating. Burial was in the family plot at Pleasant Valley Cemetery, Osnabruck Township.

Prize Winners--

Christmas Decorations

Chesterville shone like a Christmas box all season. Lights and decorations were out in fine profusion and according to our judges made the job of picking winners in the contest very difficult. At the first of the week, just before Christmas, three judges spent nearly two hours on the streets looking over the entries.

Final choices found two homes tied for first place and the judges felt the award should be split. Residences of Fred Cass and Jack MacMillan therefore split the ten spot. Second prize goes to Jimmy Moran, College Street.

In the business section, the choice was much narrower. The decision found Al's Lunch on top with Giles Gift Shop a close second.

Cheques have been mailed to the winners, and the sponsors, Hough Insurance Agency, Chesterville Dairy, Chesterville Firemen and the "Record" are most grateful for the fine response to the decoration appeal.

Entertainment was provided by Chesterville W.I. while waiting for the old gentleman to arrive. It was provided by the talented Ferguson family, of Avonmore, and Sylvia Bowman, daughter of Mr and Mrs Foster Bowman, of RR 2, Chesterville. —Record Photo.

A woman helping at a rummage sale at Bournemouth, Eng., took off her coat and laid it on a chair. While she was absent another helper sold it for five shillings.

Stormy weather

Weather is always a good topic of conversation and this week we have plenty to talk about.

Snow started in earnest Monday night and at the moment is still snowing. Plows have been busy keeping ahead on the roads and sideroads although it is keeping the township rigs more than busy.

Here in the village, Sydney Morris has done his usual good job and breast-high drifts are piled along the curbs. Sullivan's 'dozer is due to start biting it away as soon as the fall stops.

DEATHS IN COMMUNITY

Many deaths in the community over the holiday cast a spell of sadness in a number of homes.

Mrs Hewitt passed away as did Simeon Droppo on Saturday night, W. John Robinson, of Dunbar, earlier in the week. Mrs Robert Brown, Morewood, succumbed at the first of the week and last Sunday night the passing of Mrs Robert Woods, Winchester, came as a shock. Mrs Howard Fulton was saddened by the death of her mother, Mrs John Foster, Berwick, after only a 10-day illness.

94 years old

We offer our congratulations to Mrs Herman Hummel, one of the oldest residents of the community who will be 94 on New Year's day. Mrs Hummel is at present in the annex of Cornwall General Hospital, having suffered a broken hip some time ago. She is now able to be out of bed each day and is gaining strength.

Her son-in-law, George Crawford, suffering from arthritis, has spent the last three weeks in the Veteran's Pavilion of Ottawa General Hospital. Mrs Crawford and daughter, Ann, spoke to him by phone on Christmas day and found him improved in health.

OPINIONS . . . OURS AND OTHERS

A Happy New Year

For some the year 1959 has been good; for others it has been bad. Happiness has made the life of many gleam with new meaning and sorrow has cast a gloom over others' days. But we think the old year has a lot to recommend it and it is remembered because of its balance of good and bad and ordinary in-between things that make up living.

Chesterville and district in 1959 saw many things started, some finished and some in progress. Out in the countryside, the farmer was generally favoured with reasonable weather. Sun, rain and wind are always the determining factors of the year's economy, and the past year has been a reasonable one. Produce prices have left something to be desired, but the lack of auction sales is usually a good indication things have not been too tough.

Chesterville village has seen some changes. The Nestlé plant completed a big new addition to the building program and now have better facilities than ever to handle their ever increasing production. The village streets underwent a transformation thanks to the Department of Highways. Main Street got its longed-for facelifting and Highway 43 turned to the west over a remodelled Queen.

Village water works came a step nearer with test drilling underway. One good well has been tested out at over 100 gallons a minute and others are planned. By this time next year, it is hoped the system will be in operation.

Illness has plagued some of our homes this year but the greatest fear was the increase of polio in the district. The fears climaxed this fall with the tragic death of a young father from the disease, just at the end of the season. The fear of infection did have immediate effects on the polio immunization program and Chesterville W.I. did a land office business at the adult clinics in October and November.

The world we read about and see on TV screens had just about as rough a time as usual in 1959.

Mr Khrushchev played Russian roulette all year and managed to keep things on a nice tense plane. The year did prove, though, it was time some of the Western democracies pulled up their socks. The old baloney about a dumb Russian not being able to do this or that evaporated in the face of fact. And with the upper reaches of space surging with man-made vehicles, mostly Russian if they are big enough to be seen, some of us on this hemisphere have had to change our opinions. The last half of the year saw more concentrated action and less idle boasting about "sophisticated missiles."

Great Britain has surged back with the resilience of a two-year-old and astonished the world. She was supposed to be an also-ran but even the Tory government proved indestructible and came back for an unprecedented third term. One of the good things in her recovery is the amount of British money that is again flowing into our investment fields and helping our busy program of busting out all over with new production records.

All in all, it has been quite a year, old 1959. A lot of things have been accomplished, some have been overlooked, some left undone. But in just a day, it will be all written off and a new year will start.

So to all of you, from all of us here at the "Record,"

A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

Old Man Sun

The sun that seems to beam benevolently on earth is really an angry, churning mass of gas that affects communications, weather and man's hopes of venturing into space.

Mysterious blemishes known as sunspots break through the sun's surface from below. Tongues of gas, called spicules, surge up and subside. Clouds of vapour, or prominences, swirl and erupt high above the sun's surface.

But no solar phenomenon is more dramatic than a flare—a sudden localized blaze of crimson hydrogen radiation. Like a giant lightning flash, the unpredictable flare bursts out and covers an area measured in hundreds of thousands of square miles. The blaze may take an hour or more to subside. A big one in July, 1959, lasted three hours.

A flare is believed to heat the surrounding atmosphere of the sun to perhaps 2,000,000 degrees Fahrenheit. The solar gases then release a mighty burst of X-rays that race toward the earth at the speed of light to black out radio communications.

A few large flares have also produced streams of fast cosmic ray particles. The high-energy bits of matter present a hazard for manned space flight, some scientists believe.

A day or so after the initial onslaught, slower moving cosmic ray particles hit the earth, causing magnetic storms, northern lights, and further upheavals in the radio-reflecting layers of the atmosphere.

Causes of flares remain unknown, but they seem to be associated with sunspots, which follow an 11-year cycle. Flares are particularly noticeable when a large new group of spots is growing active.

Astronomers are not sure what causes sunspots either. One theory is that they stem from magnetic interference with heated gas as it rises to the sun's surface by convection. Convection currents develop because gas expands and rises as it becomes hotter—like the air above a radiator.

A sunspot has a magnetic field several thousand times stronger than that of the earth. If such a powerful magnetic field were to hinder convection, the blocked heat would be expected to leak around it. Hence the area surrounding a sunspot should be brighter than other portions of the solar surface. Observation shows this to be true thus supporting the theory.

Research on flares and other solar activity has gone into high gear in recent years. A rocket fired 80 miles into the sky by the Naval Research Laboratory on July 1, 1957, marked the beginning of the first major United States project of the recent International Geophysical Year.

Recently a huge plastic balloon carried a 12-inch telescope camera 15 miles above the earth where little atmosphere remains to blur pictures of the sun. The films came down by parachute.

Meanwhile, physicists at California Institute of Technology have manufactured "a piece of the sun"—a peanut-sized tube which turns out materials similar to those in the solar atmosphere. Other scientists have simulated the waves emitted by the sun.

FRENDLEE FARM CHATS

by Lillian Allison

New York City has had a magnetic attraction for me for many years. It has been the one place I wanted to see. I have seen some big cities, of course—Montreal, Toronto, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Miami, Washington—but somehow I was convinced New Cork would be different. I had read so much about it, heard so many songs about it and seen so many pictures of it I knew it would be different.

I had often wished that I could win a trip to New York—but I'm not lucky that way. I had read the ads for Easter tours from Ottawa or Montreal but there seemed always to be some other way to spend the money. So when I found that a plane from Florida to Massena would drop me off at New York for about two dollars extra I decided that was the time to see the big city even if it meant seeing it by myself.

Wasn't I frightened at the prospect of being all alone in such a big place? Of course I was. Now I don't think it showed when I made my reservations at the Travel Agency in DeLand, Fla. I posed as a seasoned, old traveller discussing plane schedules, asking for hotel reservations and reservations for an all-day city tour. I looked quite pleased and confident when the lady handed me my tickets and change and wished me a pleasant trip.

But the night before my plane left Florida I'd have been much happier if someone had cancelled those New York reservations. The joy of anticipation was more than eclipsed by the nightmares of the strange bridges I might have to cross.

The lady at the Travel Agency had told me my plane would arrive at Newark Airport about twenty miles from downtown New York and that I would leave from Idlewild Airport also twenty or thirty miles from downtown. She told me too it would not be possible for me to check my large, heavy suitcase from Daytona to Massena. I would have to take everything with me—two bags, a big camera case and a purse—a load which I couldn't carry across the street. At midnight these looked like very difficult problems.

Of course everything worked out fine. Everywhere I went somebody was waiting to carry the bags (and receive a tip). I never touched them.

And the twenty miles drive to and from Manhattan Island gave me an opportunity to see sights I'd have never seen had I arrived by train half a block from the hotel.

I went by bus from Newark to the Westside Depot and that was quite a drive. We got on one of the speedways not far from the airport. And believe me it was a real thrill to travel in a bus in heavy traffic at fifty or sixty miles an hour. I don't know if they measured the subways before they built the buses or vice versa but most of them are a perfect fit. Sometimes our bus and another bus would travel neck and neck through an underpass and I wouldn't have risked putting my hand between them. How those drivers maneuver those big vehicles through the traffic is more than I'll ever know.

I was very thankful I wasn't driving anyway. Aside from the traffic hazards, one had to know where to go and there was quite a choice of roads. Two, four and six-lane highways went everywhere. Sometimes the road we were on crossed one below it while another super highway went over our heads. There were bridges in every direction.

We didn't cross a bridge over the Hudson, though; we went through the Holland Tunnel. We and a big transport started through together and after a long ride which I thought would never end we made a photo-finish exit at the Manhattan Island end.

I had lost all sense of direction. The sun wasn't shining and I couldn't tell east from north. The driver knew the way, however, and in a few minutes he pulled up at the Westside Depot. Somebody hoisted my bags into a rickety, old cab and seventy cents later I was at the Hotel New Yorker in the heart of New York City. My nightmares of the previous night were over.

Figures show farm people live dangerously

Figures just released on the second quarter of the Ontario Farm Accident Survey reveal that farm people live dangerously. The report which includes only the months of June, July and August shows a total of 82 fatalities, 75 permanent injuries in 2,252 accidents. Medical bills were $166,436 and property damage $1,218,615 for the three-month period.

While traffic accidents and drownings accounted for the greatest number of fatalities, it is interesting to note that 600 accidents or more than one-quarter of the total were the result of falls and stumbles. None of these accidents was fatal. Loss of balance, slippery surfaces, weak floors and steps, cluttered areas and many other causes all contributed to this heavy toll through falls.

Activity associated with field work produced 329 accidents and four fatalities, while motoring resulted in 276 accidents and 20 fatalities. Mowing the lawn now has its dangers for more accidents occurred with power lawn mowers than with either forage harvesters or combines.

Youngsters were most vulnerable to accidents, with these in ages from 1 to 20 having more accidents than older groups. Hardest hit age group was that from 11 to 15 years of age.

These are only a few of the highlights of the figures gathered by more than 5,000 farm accident reporters in Ontario. Dundas County has 92 reporters gathering information on how accidents happen among farm people.

Harold McMenomy, of Inkerman, is county chairman of the Dundas group and Ed Pearson, agricultural representative, is secretary.

Mr Baldwin received his early education at Inkerman and Oak Valley schools. As a young man, he sailed the St. Lawrence and then went to Western Canada and the United States in the mining business, settling in Chicago where he became associated with the Dominion Bridge and Construction Co. In 1912 he married Tessie L. Justine, of Locuston, Ill., who survives. Some time later Mr and Mrs Baldwin returned to Canada and became residents of the Cass Bridge area. In 1949 he retired and moved to Morrisburg.

Wishes All Friends and Patrons

A HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR

THEY FELL BY THE ROADSIDE

ESSEX, JORDAN, DURANT . . . more than 2,400 different cars have been made in North America. Of these, less than thirty still make new appearances each year on Canadian roads.

The reasons for failure were many, but the underlying factor was the inability to make annual profits sufficient for survival and progress.

This is a dramatic example in just one industry of the role of profits in helping a company survive and grow. Without profits, only one road faces any company. It must lay off its employees, close its doors and go out of business.

Whatever the industry, whatever its size, steady profits mean steady jobs.

FRESHEN LAMP SHADES

Many lamp shades can be painted to harmonize or contrast with the colour when changing a room's decor.

To avoid smearing the shade after it's painted, place it on top of a bowl above the table surface before starting to paint. Or, better still, leave it attached to its base on top of newspapers. Paint the inside a light-reflecting white, pale yellow or a delicate pink before painting the outside the desired colour.

CRUMBS—

Drs Justus (unsolicited advertisement, no payola, please!) wreathed in yards of white adhesive tape and offering ribald remarks about the weak backs of some of their friends.

The building of a tape corset is quite a feat and, finally, father is vertical, not very comfortable, but well on the road to recovery. We take away a couple of pocketfuls of new sample nostrums, guaranteed to help something that might be wrong judging from our appearance. As for the back, we have the usual instructions: Get proper rest, go to bed and let Nature have a chance. That is the advice we like, the advice also we rarely take.

Just to prove our independence, that night we helped the hunt club eat a gallon of oysters, after first preparing the gullet with antiseptic and the mind with views of Paris and points east. Home to bed at an early hour. Woke to a bright new day, hardly able to walk and, please, does anyone have a good cure for a sore back?

Happy New Year!
